1 Interlinear citations are to the reports of the National Reporter System and to the official United States Supreme Court Reports in those cases in which the proceeding, or proceedings, as the case may be, have been there reported. Such cases do not include the decisions of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, nor, in all cases, some of the other proceedings set forth in the above table, and described or reported in the Commission's Decisions and the Commission publications entitled "Statutes and Decisions—1914-1929," and "Statutes and Decisions—1930-1938," which also include cases here involved, for their respective periods.

Said publications also include Clayton Act cases bearing on those sections of said Act administered by the Commission during the aforesaid period, but in which Commission was not a party. "S. & D." refers to earlier publication, reference to later being "1938 S. & D." For "Memorandum of Court Action on Miscellaneous Interlocutory Motions" during the period covered by the second compilation, namely, 1930-1938, see said compilation at page 485 et seq.

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of watches and other merchandise to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of other or similar articles in commerce among the various States and in said District; in soliciting the sale of and selling his said watches—

(a) Furnished various push cards or punch cards, together with plans for merchandising his products, which involved operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, and distribution to purchasing public of literature and instructions for operation of cards in distribution of his said watches and suggestions for use of said plan in selling such merchandise and allotting premiums and prizes to operators of such cards under scheme by which selection from list of feminine names displayed of name corresponding to that concealed under card's master seal entitled person making such selection to watch, and under which amount of money paid for chance was dependent upon number disclosed by punching disk below feminine name selected; and

Supplied thereby to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries through the sale of his merchandise by persons to whom he furnished such push cards and who made use thereof in selling and distributing merchandise in question in accordance with such sales plan, under which watches in question were sold and distributed to purchasing public wholly by lot or chance and amount which each customer was required to pay was similarly determined, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws; and

(b) Represented and implied, through use of trade name employed by him and including word "Manufacturing," that he was the manufacturer of the product which he sold, facts being he was at no time manufacturer of products sold by him;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers of his product into belief that he was the manufacturer thereof and that by buying direct from the manufacturer middle man's profits would be saved, and with result that many competitors who are unwilling to employ in sale and distribution of watches and other merchandise any similar method or plan involving gift enterprise, game of chance, or lottery scheme and refrain therefrom and from representing themselves as the manufacturer of their product were placed at a disadvantage in competition with him, and purchasers of watches which he sold and distributed were deceived by an erroneous belief that he was the manufacturer thereof and were attracted by element of chance involved in the sale and distribution of such products by use of push cards furnished by him, and thereby induced to purchase his said products in preference to similar watches offered and sold by his competitors who do not furnish such push cards or similar devices for use in the sale of their products and from whom as a result thereof trade was unfairly diverted.

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas, trial examiner.

Mr. Clark Nichols for the Commission.

Nash & Donnelly, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Frank E. Gairing, an individual, trading as Gair Manufacturing Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Frank E. Gairing, is an individual doing business under the trade name and style of Gair Manufacturing Co., with his principal place of business located at 1446 Summerdale Avenue, Chicago, Ill. He is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of watches and other merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, said products, when sold, to be transported from Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is in competi-
Complaint

With other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing his merchandise in commerce, furnishes and has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involves the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, by which said merchandise is distributed to the ultimate consumer thereof wholly by lot or chance. The method and sales plan adopted and used by respondent was and is substantially as follows:

Respondent distributes, and has distributed, to the purchasing public in commerce, certain literature and instructions including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, illustrations of his said products, and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to operators of said punch cards. One of respondent's push cards bears 32 girls' names. Beneath each name is a hidden number which shows the amount the persons selecting this particular name is to pay for participating in this opportunity. The hidden numbers range from 1 to 52, but the customers pay only 1 cent to 29 cents, according to the number shown under the name punched. For instance, if a customer punches 1, he pays 1 cent; if 21 is punched, he pays 21 cents; if 28 is punched, he pays 28 cents; but if 30, 31, or any number over 29 is punched, he only pays 29 cents.

HOW TO OBTAIN YOUR WRIST WATCH FREE OR BIG CASH COMMISSIONS

Rare indeed is the occasion that offers you the opportunity to secure such a valuable gift, absolutely without cost.

The enclosed sales card consists of 32 girls' names. Beneath each name is a hidden number which shows the amount the person selecting that particular name is to pay for participating in this opportunity.

These hidden numbers range from Number 1 to Number 52, but your customers pay only 1¢ to 29¢, according to the number shown under the name punched. For instance, if the customer punches 1 he pays 1¢. If 21 is punched, he donates 21¢. If 28 is punched, he donates 28¢, but if 30, 31, 32 or any number over 29 is punched, he only pays 29¢. Nothing Higher Than 29¢.

* * * 29¢ is the maximum cost for any punch.

There are actually only 28 sales to make as Four of the numbers are Free. These free numbers make the sales cards a very attractive and fast-selling proposition, as you will find that most folks who are lucky enough to punch free numbers will always take more chances.
When all names have been punched and collections made, you then remove the large seal and disclose the winner. The person who punched the corresponding name is awarded choice on One Wrist Watch as shown and described herewith.

To compensate you for your efforts in disposing of the card, we award you, absolutely Free, your choice of one wrist watch as shown and described herewith.

When payment is received for all the numbers sold on the card, the amount collected will be $7.64. Keep 14¢ to cover your postage expense, and send us a Postal or Express Money Order for $7.50.

Upon receipt of your order with the $7.50 remittance, we will at once send you Two Wrist Watches, one of which you will deliver to the holder of the name under the large seal. The other watch is Yours.

Or if you would rather have cash instead of a Wrist Watch simply send us $4.23 and we will send you One Wrist Watch which is to be given to your customer entitled to it, and you can keep the balance of the money in payment for your efforts.

Isn't this an easy way to obtain one of these beautiful wrist watches? Or a nice big cash commission? Nothing hard about this ... nothing complicated. You merely show the wrist watch or the illustration to your friends, neighbors, co-workers in the office or shop, etc., and explain to them how they may obtain one of these valuable wrist watches for the small sum of 1¢ to 29¢.

In order to secure the services of agents, and customers, the respondent inserts advertisements in publications having a circulation in the different States of the United States other than Illinois, and also in the District of Columbia, which advertisements read as follows:

GIVEN TO YOU

Let us tell you how to obtain one of these gorgeous, Guaranteed Wrist Watches absolutely FREE OF ALL COST • • • or How to Earn Some Money.

Write today. A postal will do.

GAIR MANUFACTURING COMPANY

1916 Sunnyside Chicago, Ill.

Sales of respondent's product by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above described plan or instructions, and its business is aided by the use of the above advertising. The fact as to whether the customer pays nothing or a sum of money ranging from 1 cent to 29 cents for an article of merchandise, and the fact as to whether the customer or purchaser receives nothing or an article of merchandise, and the fact as to which article of merchandise the purchaser is to receive, are determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes, and has furnished, various types of push cards accompanied by said order blanks, instructions and other printed matter, for use in the sale and distribution of his merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. All of said push cards are similar to the push cards hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes the said push cards, use the same in purchasing, selling and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and which is in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to secure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any methods involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or methods employed by respondent in the sale or distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to that offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade to the respondent from his said competitors not using the same or equivalent method.

Par. 5. The literature and printed matter used by the respondent in connection with the sale of his products in commerce, features the trade name "Gair Manufacturing Co." By the use of said name the respondent represents and implies that he is the manufacturer of the products sold by him.

Par. 6. The respondent during all the time above mentioned and referred to was not a manufacturer of the products he offered for sale, and the statements and representations above mentioned, that he was a manufacturer of the products he offered for sale, had the capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead dealers and members of the public who purchased his products for use or consump-
Findings

The respondent, Frank E. Gairing, is an individual trading under the name Gair Manufacturing Co., with his principal place of business located at Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of watches and other merchandise. Respondent causes his products, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and for more than 3 years last past has maintained, a course of trade in his products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of his business the respondent is in substantial competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar articles of merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. Respondent, in the course of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, in soliciting the sale of and selling his watches, has furnished various devices described as "push cards" or "punch cards," together with plans for merchandising his product, which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, by which said watches were to be distributed to the consuming public wholly by lot or chance. The usual method or plan adopted by said respondent was to distribute to the purchasing public, literature and instructions for the operation of said cards in the distribution of his products, and suggestions for using said plan in selling merchandise and allotting premiums or prizes to operators of said push cards. Respondent's push cards contain 32 small, partially perforated disks, over each of which is printed a feminine name; concealed within each disk is a number which is not disclosed until the disk is punched or separated from the card, and which determines the amount of money to be paid by the person punching the disk below the feminine name selected.

To illustrate: If the figure disclosed is No. 1, only 1 cent is to be paid for the punch; if it is 21, then 21 cents must be paid, and so on; but under no circumstance is more than 29 cents to be paid for a punch. There is also a master seal on the face of the card, which conceals one of the feminine names printed above said disks, and which is not to be broken or removed until all the disks have been punched. The purchaser who has punched the disk under the name which appears also under the master seal when broken, receives a watch which is offered as a prize. On the reverse of the card is a list of the feminine names appearing above the disks on the face of the card, with a line opposite each feminine name for recording the name of the customer who had punched the disk indicated.

The Commission finds that said watches were sold and distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and that the amount which each customer was required to pay was determined wholly by lot or chance.

Par. 3. The Commission finds that the persons to whom the respondent furnish his push cards use such cards in selling and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with such sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise. The Commission further finds that the use by the respondent of such methods in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

Par. 4. The Commission finds that the use of the name "Gair Manufacturing Co." by said respondent in the conduct of his said business, represented and implied that respondent was the manufacturer of the products sold by him, and the Commission finds that respondent was not the manufacturer of the products offered for sale and sold by him, during any of the times herein mentioned and referred to; that the representation made and conveyed by use of the name Gair Manufacturing Co. had the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers of respondent's products into the belief that respondent was the manufacturer of the products offered for sale and sold by him, and that by buying direct from the manufacturer, the middleman's profit would be saved.

Par. 5. There are among the competitors of respondent many who are unwilling to employ in the sale and distribution of watches, or other merchandise, any similar method or plan which involves a gift enterprise, game of chance, or lottery scheme, and who refrain from such practice, and from representing themselves as the manufacturers of their products, when they are not such in fact, and as a result they are placed at a disadvantage in competition with respondent. Purchasers of watches sold and distributed by the respondent were and are deceived by the erroneous belief that respondent is the manufacturer of his said products, and were attracted by the element of chance involved in the sale and distribution of said watches by the use of the push cards furnished by respondent, and thereby induced to purchase said watches sold by respondent in preference to similar watches offered for sale and sold by respondent's competitors who do not furnish such push cards or similar devices for use in the sale of their products, and as a result trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from his said competitors.

Order

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Frank E. Gairing, individually and trading as Gair Manufacturing Co., or trading under any other name, or names, his agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of watches and other merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such merchandise, or any other merchandise, to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Mailing, shipping or transporting to agents or to distributors, or to members of the public punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices are so prepared or printed that said devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing said merchandise or any other merchandise to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

4. Using the word "manufacturing," or any other word of similar import or meaning in his trade name, or representing through any other means or device, or in any manner, that the products sold and distributed by respondent are made or manufactured by him, unless and until the respondent actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls a manufacturing plant or factory wherein said products are manufactured by him.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

MEYER R. EISENBRACK, TRADING AS MARHAR SALES COMPANY

Docket 3773. Complaint, Apr. 26, 1939—Decision, June 5, 1940

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of blankets, bedspreads and other articles of merchandise to churches, fraternal organizations, clubs, and other purchasers, in other States, for resale and distribution to the purchasing public in competition with others engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia—

Sold his aforesaid products to purchasers as above set forth along with sales plan or method for resale thereof to purchasing public through use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme in such sale and distribution of such purchases, and under which various club plans, as advertised by him, along with his said goods, through printed cards, circulars, samples, and by personal solicitation, members of particular club, as determined by weekly drawings, were singly relieved or failed to be relieved of further weekly dues undertaken, in accordance with chance selection in such weekly drawings of money or number of particular member; and

Supplied thereby to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with such sales plan under which amount paid by ultimate purchaser for article was determined wholly by lot or chance, and involving game of chance, or sale of a chance to procure an article at price much less than normal retail price thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt any method involving game of chance or sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method or sales plan contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by said sales plan or method employed by him in sale and distribution of merchandise and element of chance therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell his said products in preference to those offered and sold by said competitors who do not use same or equivalent method, and with effect, through use of such method and because of said game of chance, of diverting unfairly trade to him from his competitors aforesaid who do not use same or equivalent method; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.

Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr., for the Commission.

Mr. Leonard J. Schwartz, of Philadelphia, Pa., for respondent.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Meyer R. Eisenbrock, individually and trading as Marhar Sales Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Par. 1. Respondent Meyer R. Eisenbrock is an individual trading as Marhar Sales Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 1322 West Girard Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of blankets, bedspreads, and other articles of merchandise to churches, fraternal organizations, clubs, and others for resale and distribution to the purchasing public. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from his said place of business in Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof located in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his said business respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold his said merchandise to said purchasers, along with a sales plan or method by which the said merchandise is to be, and is, resold to the purchasing public. Said plan or method involves the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme in the sale and distribution of said merchandise to the ultimate purchasers thereof. Respondent has advertised his said merchandise and his said sales plan or method by means of printed cards, circulars, samples of said merchandise, and by personal solicitation. The sales plan or method as suggested and advertised by respondent is substantially as follows:

The sales plan or method is described as the "Club Plan." Each club has a fixed number of members, usually either 30, 50, 60, 80, 100 or 125. Each member of a club pays a fixed amount each week, usually 25 cents, for a period not to exceed a given number of weeks, usually 22 weeks. At the end of the first week a drawing is held and the member whose name or number is drawn receives one of the articles of merchandise being distributed, for the payment of one week’s dues, and such winner or member then is dropped from the club. Each succeeding week the same procedure is followed and thus one member receives an article of merchandise being distributed for the payment of 1 week’s dues, another for 2 weeks’ dues, another for 3 weeks’ dues, and so on to the end of the fixed period. At that time all remaining members receive one of the articles of merchandise, but such members have paid the face value of such merchandise. Thus, the amount which an ultimate purchaser pays for an article of merchandise is determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes and has furnished various “Club Plans” for use in the sale and distribution of his merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said “Club Plans” is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent sells his said articles of merchandise expose for sale and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan or method. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and is in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance, or the sale of a chance, to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance, or the sale of a chance to win something by a chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise, and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade to the respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method. As a result thereof injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on April 26, 1939, issued, and on April 27, 1939, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Meyer R. Eisenbrock, an individual trading as Marhar Sales Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer the Commission by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent Meyer R. Eisenbrock, otherwise known as Meyer Eisenbrock, is an individual trading as Marhar Sales Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 1322 West Girard Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa. Respondent was for more than 1 year prior to December 1937, engaged in the sale and distribution of blankets, bedspreads, and other articles of merchandise to churches, fraternal organizations, clubs, and others for resale and distribution to the purchasing public. Respondent caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof located in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There was for more than 1 year prior to December 1937, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent was in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sold his said merchandise to said purchasers, along with a sales plan or method by which the said merchandise was resold to the purchasing public. Said plan or method involved the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme in the sale and distribution of said merchandise to the ultimate purchasers thereof. Respondent has advertised his said merchandise and his said sales plan or method by means of printed cards, circulars, samples of said merchandise, and by personal solicitation. The sales plan or method as suggested and advertised by respondent was substantially as follows:

The sales plan or method is described as the "Club Plan." Each club has a fixed number of members, usually either 30, 50, 60, 80, 100, or 125. Each member of a club pays a fixed amount each week, usually 25 cents, for a period not to exceed a given number of weeks, usually 22 weeks. At the end of the first week a drawing is held and the member whose name or number is drawn receives one of the articles of merchandise being distributed, for the payment of 1 week's dues, and such winner or member then is dropped from the club. Each succeeding week the same procedure is followed and thus one member receives an article of merchandise being distributed for the payment of 1 week's dues, another for 2 weeks' dues, another for 3 weeks' dues, and so on to the end of the fixed period. At that time all remaining members receive one of the articles of merchandise, but such members have paid the face value of such merchandise. Thus, the amount which an ultimate purchaser pays for an article of merchandise is determined wholly by lot or chance.
Conclusion

Respondent furnished various “Club Plans” for use in the sale and distribution of his merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said “Club Plans” was the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent sold his said articles of merchandise exposed for sale and sold the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan or method. While respondent did not directly participate in such resale, or in the profits therefrom, he thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States; and is in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance, or the sale of a chance, to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance, or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons were attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise, and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell respondent’s merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, had a tendency and capacity to and did unfairly divert trade to the respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method. As a result thereof injury has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Meyer R. Eisenbrock, otherwise known as Meyer Eisenbrock, individually and trading as Marhar Sales Co., or trading under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of blankets, bedspreads, or any other merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others any merchandise, together with a sales plan or method involving the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme by which said merchandise is to be, or may be, sold to the purchasing public.

2. Selling, or otherwise disposing of, any merchandise by the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon him of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

Docket 3422. Complaint, May 13, 1938—Decision, June 6, 1940

Where an individual engaged in offer and sale of bedspreads, blankets, silverware, and other various articles to purchasers in various States of the United States—

Furnished various devices and plans of merchandising, which involved operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes through which his merchandise was distributed to ultimate consumer by lot or chance wholly, and included distribution to purchasing public of certain advertising literature embracing push cards, order blanks, depictions of merchandise and explanation of his plan or method of selling same and allotting it as premiums or prizes to operators of said push cards under plan, among others, in accordance with which person securing by chance certain numbers as disclosed through separation of card's discs received specified articles, and person selecting from list of girls' names displayed on card name corresponding to that concealed under card's master seal received article, and under which amount paid for chance was dependent upon numbers selected as disclosed under card's tabs, and value of various articles was greater than cost of any single number and under which person selecting name or numbers other than those above indicated received nothing for his money, and made use of various other assortments, along with push cards for sale and distribution thereof by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, similar in principle of operation to that above described and varying therefrom in detail only; and

Supplied thereby to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with aforesaid sales plan or method by persons to whom he furnished said devices and who used same in selling and distributing his said products in accordance with such plans or methods, involving a game of chance or sale of a chance to procure articles without cost or at prices much less than normal retail prices thereof contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal statutes, and in competition with many who were and are unwilling to adopt and use said or any method involving element of chance or sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy, and have refrained therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by his said method or sales plans and by element of chance involved in sale and distribution of his said merchandise as above described, and were thereby induced to buy and sell his products in preference to those offered and sold by his said competitors who do not use such or equivalent methods, and with effect, through use of said methods and because of said game of chance, of unfairly diverting trade and custom to him from his said competitors who are unwilling to and do not use same or equivalent methods as unlawful; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

 Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas, trial examiner.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Nash & Donnelly, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Belmont Sales Co., a corporation, and Robert C. Bundy, individually and trading as Jackson Sales Co. and as an officer of Belmont Sales Co., and Mildred Bundy, individually and as an officer of Belmont Sales Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Belmont Sales Co. is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 53 West Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill. Respondents Robert C. Bundy, and Mildred Bundy are president and secretary respectively, of the corporate respondent. Robert C. Bundy is also individually trading under the name of Jackson Sales Co. All of said respondents have their principal offices at the same address as said respondent corporation. Respondents also operate a shipping department at 422 South Dearborn Street, in said city and State. The individual respondents direct and control the sales policies and business activities of the corporate respondent, and all of said respondents act together and in cooperation with each other in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged. Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been engaged in offering for sale, and selling bedspreads, blankets, silverware, cosmetics, quilts, toilet sets, shirts, princess slips, clocks, roller skates, manicure sets, pocketbooks, and other articles of novelty merchandise, to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said merchandise, when sold, to be shipped or transported from their said places of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade in such merchandise so sold and distributed by respondents in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of their business, respondents are in competition with other corporations and individuals, and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like and similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing their merchandise, have furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, by which said merchandise is distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The method and sales plan adopted and used by respondents were and are substantially as follows: Respondents cause and have caused to be distributed to the purchasing public, in commerce as herein described, certain advertising literature, including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, advertisements containing illustrations of merchandise, catalogs, and circulars explaining respondents' plan of selling such merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to operators of the push cards.

One of said push cards has a number of partially perforated discs, and when a push is made and the disk removed from the card a number is disclosed. There are as many separate numbers as there are disks on the card, but the numbers are varied or assorted and are not arranged in numerical sequence. The numbers printed within said disks are effectively concealed from the purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the disk separated from the card. The price varies, depending upon the number obtained. For numbers from 1 to 29 the purchaser pays the amount of the number in cents, and for all numbers over 29 the purchaser pays 29 cents, with the exception of numbers 1, 16 and 44, which said numbers are received without cost by the persons selecting the same. Directly below each disk there is printed a girl's name, and the card has a space prepared for recording the name of each purchaser of a push from the card opposite the corresponding girl's name. The card also has a master seal which, when removed, exposes a girl's name corresponding to one of the names appearing directly below said disks. The persons selecting numbers 1, 16, and 44 are entitled to and receive, without cost, specified articles of merchandise, and the purchaser selecting the name corresponding to the name under the master seal is entitled to and receives an article of merchandise. The name under the master seal is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until after all of said numbers have been pushed and the master seal removed from the card. Persons selecting names other than the name appearing under the master seal or numbers other than numbers 1, 16, and 44 receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of pushing a number from said card. Each of said articles of merchandise is of greater value than the cost of any single push from said card.

The fact as to whether a purchaser receives an article of merchandise or nothing for the amount of money paid, and which of said articles of merchandise the purchaser is to receive, if any, or whether a person shall receive an article of merchandise without cost, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondents sell and distribute various assortments of merchandise, and furnish various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plan or method varies in detail, but the above described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondents furnish said devices use same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondents' merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said method in the sale of their merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States, and which is in violation of criminal statutes.

Par. 4. The sale or distribution of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise without cost or at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make or sell merchandise in competition with respondents as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method, or any method involving the element of chance, or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and said competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondents' said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale and distribution of said merchandise in the manner above alleged, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade and custom to respondents from their said competitors and to exclude from the novelty merchandise trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful. As a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 13th day of May 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint on the respondents, Belmont Sales Co., a corporation; Robert C. Bundy, individually and trading as Jackson Sales Company, and as an officer of Belmont Sales Co., and on Mildred Bundy, individually and as an officer of Belmont Sales Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, respondents having filed no answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by D. C. Daniel, attorney for the Commission, before Miles J. Furnas, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, which testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. No testimony was introduced on behalf of said respondents other than a letter from the Secretary of State of the State of Illinois, dated December 6, 1938, in which letter it is stated that said corporate respondent filed articles of dissolution on January 4, 1938.

Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the testimony and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint. No brief was filed by or on behalf of respondents, and oral argument was waived by counsel for respondents. The Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Belmont Sales Co., was a corporation, organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 53 West Jackson Boulevard, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, but was dissolved on January 6, 1938, and had ceased doing business some time prior thereto. Respondents Robert C. Bundy and Mildred Bundy were, respectively, president and secretary of said corporate respondent. Respondent Robert C. Bundy was also individually trading under the name Jackson Sales Co. All of said respondents had their principal office at the same address as said respondent corporation.

There is not sufficient evidence in the record to support the allegations of the complaint against respondent Mildred Bundy, individually and as an officer of the corporate respondent, or Robert C. Bundy as an officer of said corporation. In view thereof, the findings as to the facts hereinafter will refer only to the acts and practices of Robert C. Bundy individually and trading as Jackson Sales Co.

Paragraph 2. Respondent Robert C. Bundy, for more than 1 year last past, has been engaged in offering for sale and selling bedspreads, blankets, silverware, cosmetics, quilts, toilet sets, shirts, princess slips, clocks, roller skates, manicure sets, pocketbooks, and other articles of novelty merchandise to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States. Respondent has caused said merchandise, when sold, to be shipped or transported from his said place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various other States of the United States. There has been, for more than 1 year last past, a course of trade in said merchandise by respondent in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business respondent was and is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like and similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Par. 3. Respondent Robert C. Bundy, in the course and conduct of his business, furnishes and has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery schemes, by which said merchandise was and is distributed to the ultimate consumer thereof wholly by lot or chance. Respondent causes and has caused to be distributed to the purchasing public, as aforesaid, certain advertising literature, including among other things push cards, order blanks, advertisements containing illustrations of said merchandise and explaining respondent's plans or methods of selling such merchandise and of allotting premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards. One of said push cards had a number of partially perforated disks, and when a purchase was made, one of said disks was separated or removed from the card and a number was disclosed. There were as many separate numbers as there were disks on the card, but the numbers were varied or assorted and were not arranged in numerical sequence. The numbers printed in said disks were effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection was made and the disk separated from the card. The prices varied, depending on the number revealed when the disk had been punched. For the number 1 to 29 the purchaser paid the amount of the number in cents, and for all numbers over 29 the purchaser paid 29 cents, with the exception of numbers 1, 16, and 44, which said numbers were received without cost by the persons who selected the same. Directly below each disk was printed a girl's name, and the card had a space prepared for recording the name of each purchaser opposite the corresponding girl's name. Said push card also had a master seal which, when removed, disclosed a girl's name corresponding to one of the names that appeared directly below said disks. The persons selecting numbers 1, 16, and 44 were entitled to and did receive without cost specified articles of merchandise, and the person who selected the name which corresponded to the name of the master seal was entitled to and did receive an article of merchandise. The name under the master seal was effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until after all of said numbers had been pushed and the master seal removed from the card. Persons who selected names other than the name which appeared under the master seal and numbers other than 1, 16, and 44 received nothing for their money. Each of said articles of merchandise was of greater value than the cost of any single number pushed from said card. The facts as to whether a purchaser received an article of merchandise or nothing for the amount of money paid; which of said articles of merchandise the purchaser did receive, if any; and whether a person received an article of merchandise without cost, were thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Said respondent sold and distributed various assortments of merchandise and furnished various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. All of said cards were and are operated on the same principle as the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

Par. 4. The persons to whom respondent has furnished or supplied said devices have used the same in selling and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans or methods. Respondent thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others, the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise, in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove set forth. The use by the respondent of said methods in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and is in violation of criminal statutes.

Par. 5. The sale or distribution of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise without cost, or at prices much less than the normal retail prices thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute and have sold and distributed merchandise in competition with respondent, as above described, were and are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any method involving the element of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method which is contrary to public policy, and said competitors have refrained therefrom. Many persons were attracted by respondent's said methods or sales plans and by the element of chance involved in the sale and distribution of said merchandise in the manner above described, and were thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent, because of said game of chance has the tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade and custom to said respondent from said competitors who are unwilling to, and who do not, use the same or equivalent methods, because the same are unlawful. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been and is being done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among various States of the United States.
CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Robert C. Bundy, individually and trading as Jackson Sales Co., or trading under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of bedspreads, blankets, silverware, cosmetics, quilts, toilet sets, shirts, princess slips, clocks, roller skates, manicure sets, pocketbooks, or any other merchandise, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling and distributing said articles of merchandise or any other merchandise to the general public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Mailing, shipping or transporting to his agents or distributors, or to members of the public, push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices so prepared and printed that sales of said merchandise or any other merchandise are to be made or may be made by the use thereof to the general public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices.
It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That the case growing out of the complaint herein insofar as it relates to Belmont Sales Co., corporate respondent, and Mildred Bundy, individually and as an officer of said corporate respondent be, and the same hereby is, closed without prejudice because said corporate respondent has been dissolved and the evidence is not sufficient to sustain the allegations of the complaint relating to respondent Mildred Bundy.
IN THE MATTER OF

HERB JUICE-PHENOL COMPANY, INC., TRADING AS POW-O-LIN LABORATORIES

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4067. Complaint, Mar. 20, 1940—Decision, June 6, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of its "Pow-O-Lin" meddicinal preparation, for treatment of certain ailments, to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia; in advertisements of its said product, which it disseminated and caused to be disseminated, through the mails and by various other means in commerce and otherwise, and including advertisements in newspapers and periodicals and radio continu­ ties, and circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature in which were reproduced, among other things, testimonials or purported testimonials—

Represented directly and indirectly that “constipation and faulty elimination” are characterized by, and associated with, following among other symptoms, namely, biliousness, indigestion, gas pains, headaches, dizziness, pains in back and chest, stiffness of the joints, swollen feet and ankles, nervousness, insomnia, loss of appetite and lack of energy, and that said preparation possessed beneficial therapeutic properties with respect to curing or remedy­ ing and competently treating constipation and “faulty elimination,” and with respect to removing or overcoming symptoms hereinabove set forth, by reason of its use serving to eliminate tendency toward constipation;

Facts being its said product possessed no therapeutic properties in excess of those of a cathartic or laxative, and served no purpose other than to assist in the temporary evacuation of the intestinal tract, symptoms set out are not generally or usually characteristic or typical of any particular type or group of disorders and are not necessarily due to, and do not generally persist because of, constipation or “faulty elimination,” use of said prepara­tion would not serve as a remedy or cure for or eliminate or in any way affect any tendency to constipation, had no beneficial value in overcoming or removing specific symptoms set forth or in treating such symptoms other than to extent such symptoms might be temporarily relieved by evacuation of intestinal tract when due to, or persisting because of, constipation, and in those cases in which said symptoms are due to causes other than constipation, preparation in question would be of no value in treatment thereof;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false advertisements were true and with result, as consequence of such belief thus engendered, that substantial portion of purchasing public had been and were induced to buy its said preparation;

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Maurice C. Pearce for the Commission.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Herb Juice-Penol Co., Inc., a corporation, doing business under the trade name of Pow-O-Lin Laboratories, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Herb Juice-Penol Co., Inc., doing business under the trade name of Pow-O-Lin Laboratories, is a corporation duly chartered, organized, and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Virginia, with its principal office and place of business located in the city of Danville, State of Virginia.

Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of a certain medicinal preparation designated "Pow-O-Lin," recommended as a treatment for certain ailments of the human body.

Respondent causes said medicinal preparation, when sold, to be transported from respondent's place of business in the State of Virginia to the purchasers thereof located in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said preparation, by United States mails and by various other means in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said preparation; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said preparation, by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparation in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, by radio continuities and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

No one can deny the fact that this marvelous vegetable preparation (Pow-O-Lin) is all that is claimed for it—that it will relieve bilious attacks, indigestion, stomach gas pains, headaches, dizzy spells and a tired let-down miserable condition brought on by constipation.

All Richmond heralds Pow-O-Lin as a blessing to suffering humanity—by the hundreds, people who have never been relieved by any medicine or treatment are finding Pow-O-Lin a boon, a reliable and trustworthy remedy for ills due to faulty elimination and the temporary clogging of the intestinal tract.

If you'll try this splendid medicine so many of your neighbors recommend, you'll find it the most pleasant, prompt and efficient medicine you ever used for the relief of faulty elimination and resulting ills!

For about a year I hardly knew a well day, suffered continually with headaches, pains in back and chest, was very nervous, feet and ankles often badly swollen and I was always nervous, due to faulty elimination. Some time ago I went all to pieces and was hardly able to be up. * * * Pow-O-Lin * * * has simply done wonders for me. I have a wonderful appetite, food agrees with me. No more gas pains or headaches, bowels act regular. I rest well at night and I am relieved of the trouble with my feet and ankles swelling.

If your days and nights are miserable, you can't eat, your food sours and ferments causing gas, you can't sleep, you get up in the morning feeling as though you have had no rest at all,—this condition is very often brought on by nerve pressure on the walls of the intestines, because of improper elimination,—Pow-O-Lin must bring relief * * *.

* * * They allow a temporarily clogged intestinal tract to bring on agonizing, miserable sufferings and discomforts such as indigestion, gas pains, dull, throbbing headaches, nervousness, biliousness and dizzy spells. * * * This pleasant-tasting vegetable medicine (Pow-O-Lin), extracted from roots and herbs, absolutely must bring the relief you need. * * *.

Are you the same person you were six months or a year ago, or has biliousness, nervousness, stiffness of the joints, made a different person of you? Are you tired and let down even though you have just gotten out of bed? Do you feel like working or do you have to use all your energy just to get out of bed * * *.

If that is the way you feel then why don't you try Pow-O-Lin?

PAR. 3. Through the use of the statements hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the remedial, curative and therapeutic properties of its preparation, the respondent has represented and does now represent, directly, and indirectly, that constipation and "faulty elimination" are characterized by and associated with the following, among other, symptoms: biliousness, indigestion, gas pains, headaches, dizziness, pains in the back and chest, stiffness of the joints, swollen feet and ankles, nervousness, insomnia, loss of appetite, and lack of energy; and that said preparation possesses beneficial therapeutic properties with respect to curing or remedying and competently treating constipation and “faulty elimination” and with respect to removing or overcoming the symptoms hereinabove set forth by reason of its use serving to eliminate tendency toward constipation.

Par. 4. The aforesaid representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In fact, respondent’s preparation possesses no therapeutic properties in excess of those of a cathartic or laxative and serves no purpose other than to assist in the temporary evacuation of the intestinal tract. The symptoms set out in paragraph 3 are not generally or usually characteristic or typical of any particular type or group of disorders and such symptoms are not necessarily due to, and do not generally persist because of, constipation or “faulty elimination.” The use of said preparation will not serve as a remedy or cure for or eliminate or in any way affect any tendency to constipation. It has no beneficial value in overcoming or removing the specific symptoms herein set forth or in treating such symptoms other than to the extent such symptoms may be temporarily relieved by the evacuation of the intestinal tract when they are due to, or persist because of, constipation, when such symptoms are due to causes other than constipation, said preparation will be of no value in the treatment thereof.

Par. 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading advertisements with respect to its said medicinal preparation disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false advertisements are true. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief, engendered as herein set forth, a substantial portion of the purchasing public, have been and are induced to purchase respondent’s medicinal preparation.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent Herb Juice-Penal Co., Inc., doing business under the trade name of Pow-O-Lin Laboratories, is a corporation duly chartered, organized, and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Virginia, with its principal office and place of business located in the city of Danville, State of Virginia.

Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of a certain medicinal preparation designated "Pow-O-Lin," recommended as a treatment for certain ailments of the human body.

Respondent causes said medicinal preparation, when sold, to be transported from respondent's place of business in the State of Virginia to the purchasers thereof located in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said preparation, by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said preparation; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said preparation, by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparation in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, by radio continuities and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

No one can deny the fact that this marvelous vegetable preparation (Pow-O-Lin) is all that is claimed for it—that it will relieve bilious attacks, indigestion, stomach gas pains, headaches, dizzy spells and a tired let-down miserable condition brought on by constipation.

Some time ago I went all to pieces and was hardly able to be up. * * * Pow-O-Lin * * * has simply done wonders for me. I have a wonderful appetite, food agrees with me. No more gas pains or headaches, bowels act regular. I rest well at night and I am relieved of the trouble with my feet and ankles swelling.

If your days and nights are miserable—you can't eat,—your food sours and ferments causing gas,—you can't sleep,—you get up in the morning feeling as though you have had no rest at all,—this condition is very often brought on by nerve pressure on the walls of the intestines, because of improper elimination,—Pow-O-Lin must bring relief * * *.

* * * They allow a temporarily clogged intestinal tract to bring on agonizing, miserable sufferings and discomforts such as indigestion, gas pains, dull, throbbing headaches, nervousness, biliousness and dizzy spells. * * * This pleasant-tasting vegetable medicine (Pow-O-Lin), extracted from roots and herbs, absolutely must bring the relief you need * * *.

Are you the same person you were six months or a year ago, or has biliousness, nervousness, stiffness of the joints, made a different person of you? Are you tired and let down even though you have just gotten out of bed? Do you feel like working or do you have to use all your energy just to get out of bed * * *. If that is the way you feel then why don't you try Pow-O-Lin!

Par. 3. Through the use of the statements hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the remedial, curative, and therapeutic properties of its preparation, the respondent has represented and does now represent, directly and indirectly, that constipation and "faulty elimination" are characterized by and associated with the following, among other, symptoms; biliousness, indigestion, gas pains, headaches, dizziness, pains in the back and chest, stiffness of the joints, swollen feet and ankles, nervousness, insomnia, loss of appetite and lack of energy; and that said preparation possesses beneficial therapeutic properties with respect to curing or remedying and competently treating constipation and "faulty elimination" and with respect to removing or overcoming the symptoms hereinabove set forth by reason of its use serving to eliminate tendency toward constipation.

Par. 4. The aforesaid representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In fact, respondent's preparation possesses no therapeutic properties in excess of those of a cathartic or laxative and serves no purpose other than to assist in the temporary evacuation of the intestinal tract. The symptoms set out in paragraph 3 are not generally or usually characteristic or typical of any particular type or group of disorders and such symptoms are not necessarily due to, and do not generally persist because of, constipation or "faulty elimination." The use of said preparation will not serve as a remedy or cure for or eliminate or in any way affect any tendency to constipation. It has no beneficial value in overcoming or removing the specific symptoms herein set forth or in treating such symptoms other than to the extent such symptoms may be temporarily relieved by the evacuation of the intestinal tract when they are due to, or persist because of, constipation. When such symptoms are due to causes other than constipation, said preparation will be of no value in the treatment thereof.

Par. 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading advertisements with respect to its said medicinal preparation disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false advertisements are true. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief, engendered as herein set forth, a substantial portion of the purchasing public, have been and are induced to purchase respondent's medicinal preparation.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Herb Juice-Penol Co., Inc., a corporation, trading as Pow-O-Lin Laboratories, or trading under any other name or names, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of respondent’s medicinal preparation now designated by the name “Pow-O-Lin” or any other medicinal preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar therapeutic properties, whether sold under the same name or any other name or names, or disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said medicinal preparation, which advertisements represent directly or by implication:

1. That respondent’s preparation is a cure or remedy for biliousness, indigestion, gas pains, headaches, dizziness, pains in the back or chest, stiffness of the joints, swollen feet or ankles, nervousness, insomnia, loss of appetite, or lack of energy.

2. That respondent’s preparation is a competent or effective treatment for such symptoms as biliousness, indigestion, gas pains, headaches, dizziness, pains in the back or chest, stiffness of the joints, swollen feet or ankles, nervousness, insomnia, loss of appetite, or lack of energy, in excess of temporarily relieving such symptoms when they are due to, or persist because of, constipation.

3. That respondent’s preparation is a cure or remedy for constipation or that the use of said preparation will serve to eliminate or affect the tendency to constipation.

4. That respondent’s preparation constitutes a competent or effective treatment for constipation in excess of assisting in the temporary evacuation of the intestinal tract.

5. That respondent’s preparation possesses any therapeutic properties beyond those of a cathartic or laxative.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

HYGIENIC CORPORATION OF AMERICA, HYGIENIC COMPANY OF AMERICA, MERRILL-SAUNDERS COMPANY, LTD., AND HAROLD L. DEBAR, TRADING AS AMERICAN HEALTH ASSOCIATION OF WASHINGTON, D. C., WOMEN'S ADVISORY BUREAU, ETC.

Docket 3303. Complaint, Jan. 17, 1938—Decision, June 8, 1940

Where a corporation and two subsidiaries thereof, and an individual, who was principal stockholder of all three and directed and controlled their business activities and sales policies, and did business under the names of American Health Association of Washington, D. C., Women's Advisory Bureau, Women's Co-Operative Service, Protex-U-Hygienic Service, American Bureau of Hygiene, and Surete Laboratories, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia, of certain medicinal preparations and appliances which they recommended for so-called feminine hygiene and for use in the treatment of diseases and ailments peculiar to women and for use in preventing pregnancy, and which they designated generally as "Protex-U" and "Surete," and which consisted substantially of douche powder, ointment, jelly, syringe, applicator, and vaginal diaphragm, and were sold in sets and separately, and, as thus engaged, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of products designed and intended for legitimate hygienic use by women and for use in the treatment and prevention of diseases peculiar to women, in commerce among the various States and in said District; and acting in conjunction and cooperation with each other in carrying on the acts and practices below set forth;

In advertising their said products through newspapers and other periodicals, and booklets, pamphlets, circulars, and other advertising material distributed among prospective purchasers, and also through set of six booklets entitled "The Happy Family Series," and booklets entitled "New Knowledge for Women" and "Feminine Secrets," dealing directly or by implication with prevention of conception—

(a) Represented, directly and by implication, that their said various products constituted competent and effective preventives of conception, facts being they did not constitute competent and effective preventives of conception;

(b) Represented, as aforesaid, that their said products possessed substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of ailments and diseases peculiar to women, particularly delayed menstruation, and destroyed bacteria and were competent and effective prophylactics, facts being such products possessed no therapeutic value in the treatment of delayed menstruation or any other ailments or diseases peculiar to women, did not serve to destroy bacteria, and were not effective or competent prophylactics; and

(c) Represented, as aforesaid, that their said appliances, and particularly that designated vaginal diaphragm, would fit all female anatomies, and that
Syllabus

Appliance designated "Health Shield" (vaginal syringe) might be used with safety by all women, facts being none of their said appliances would fit all such anatomies, and last-named appliance, known generally by physicians as a "ballooning douche" and regarded by them as possessing dangerous potentialities, in that use thereof results in the forcing of bacteria from the vagina into the uterus, could not be used with safety; and

Where said corporations and individual, in advertising in newspapers and other periodicals for solicitors and in their dealings with prospective solicitors, and in offer and sale thereafter of their said products through such solicitors and through advertisements thereof, as the case might be—

(d) Made use of words "Nurse-Membership Application" and "American Health Association, Washington, D. C.,” in blank forms which they sent in response to inquiry from prospective solicitor, for use of such prospective solicitor in addressing an application to aforesaid "association" for "Nurse Membership and appointment as Visiting Nurse in the American Health Association," with further provision, in such application, that "It is understood that I shall be employed in work tending to elevate the healthful conditions and hygienic standards of our nation. I pledge myself to fully cooperate with the association in its aims of more healthful living through public education and to this end I will devote a definite portion of my time to this cause";

(e) Made use of terms and legends "Certificate of Membership" and "American Health Association, Visiting Nurse Division" on cards which it issued to solicitors and which certified that solicitor was enrolled as a "Nurse Member, Class A, in the American Health Association and has been appointed Visiting Nurse while engaged in Health Extension Activities * * *," and made use also of badges of identification reading "American Health Association—Visiting Nurse Division—Washington, D. C.,” which they issued to their solicitors as above described, and who, upon receiving such cards and badges, undertook sale of their said products through house-to-house solicitation and exhibition, in their contacts and solicitation, of such cards and badges and use of circulars, pamphlets, and other advertising material supplied as aforesaid; and

(f) Represented, and led prospective purchasers to believe, that their business activities were conducted under the auspices or with the approval of the public health service, and that their products had the approval of such service, and that the American Health Association was a benevolent, non-profit organization engaged in promoting the public health, and that their solicitors were nurses and qualified to advise women with respect to matters of health and sex hygiene, through their advertising literature and through their solicitors, and through such typical statements as "* * * Why, it was only a few years ago that our Congress was appropriating millions to educate our farmers how to raise and care for their cattle, sheep and hogs, * * *. Finally Congress woke up to the tremendous need and the fact that the family and home were more important than animals and recently enacted legislation authorizing the educating and assisting of wives, mothers, and prospective mothers. In full sympathy with this splendid, if belated, movement the American Health Association is carrying on this special campaign to bring the vital sex truths regarding herself to every wife and mother as soon as possible," and "But, what troubles me most is the fact that the need throughout the entire country is so great, so huge, so tremendous, that it is impossible for the American Health Association, as for any other benevolent nonprofit organization, to equip enough of us nurses who are just as needy but who are living on a farm, in a small town or even in a larger city where no staff of visiting nurses has yet been organized. To those women we have to bring this message, which we two are privileged to talk over in person, by mail to the best of our ability • • • .”;

Facts being their said representations were false in their entirety, neither said corporations’ activities nor their products were sponsored or approved by any public health service, there was, in fact, no such organization as their said “American Health Association,” which was merely fictitious name used by them as one of their trade names, their business was in no sense a benevolent or nonprofit enterprise, but was conducted solely as a commercial enterprise and for their profit, and their solicitors were not nurses nor qualified to advise women as to matters of health or sex hygiene, but were merely saleswomen, without training or experience as nurses;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into mistaken and erroneous belief that their said false and misleading statements and representations were true, and into purchase of substantial quantities of their products, and with result, as consequence of such mistaken and erroneous belief, that trade was diverted unfairly to them from their competitors; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas and Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiners.

Mr. William L. Taggart for the Commission.

Mr. A. P. Covello, of Los Angeles, Calif., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled “An act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Hygienic Corporation of America, Hygienic Co. of America, Merrill-Saunders Co., Ltd., corporations, and Harold L. DeBar, individually and trading as American Health Association of Washington, D. C., Women’s Advisory Bureau, Women’s Co-operative Service, Protex-U-Hygienic Service, American Bureau of Hygiene, and Surete Laboratories, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Hygienic Corporation of America is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of California.
Respondent Hygienic Co. of America is a Delaware corporation and markets products known as "Protex-U."

Respondent Merrill-Saunders Co. is a Delaware corporation and markets products known as "Surete" and "Surete Laboratories."

The Hygienic Co. of America and the Merrill-Saunders Co. are operated as subsidiaries of the Hygienic Corporation of America and respondent Hygienic Corporation of America also uses the names of these two corporations, as well as other names, as trade names for the carrying on of portions of its business activities. The principal place of business of these respondents is 5256-58 South Hoover St., Los Angeles, Calif.

Respondent Harold L. DeBar is an individual trading under the names American Health Association of Washington, D. C., Women's Advisory Bureau, Women's Co-operative Service, Protex-U-Hygienic Service, American Bureau of Hygiene, Surete Laboratories and Surete Products at 5256-58 South Hoover Street, Los Angeles, Calif. He is the principal stockholder of the aforesaid corporate respondents and directs and controls the business activities and sales policies of the corporate respondents Hygienic Corporation of America and its subsidiaries, the Hygienic Co. of America and the Merrill-Saunders Co.

The respondents are all engaged in a general combination and confederation for the purpose of manufacturing, advertising, distributing, and selling certain products and preparations hereafter named to the public or to customers in the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia and in carrying out the acts and practices herein charged.

The respondents have been, and are now engaged in the business of manufacturing, advertising, distributing, and selling certain medical preparations and appliances for so-called feminine hygiene use and for use in preventing pregnancy and diseases common to the female anatomy. The respondents cause these products, when sold, to be transported from their aforesaid places of business in the State of California or from some other point to the purchasers thereof located at points in various States other than the States from which said shipments of said products originate and in the District of Columbia, and maintain a course of trade and commerce in said products so distributed and sold by them in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

In the course and conduct of said business, respondents have been, and are, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms, individuals, and partnerships engaged in the distribution and sale of similar products and other products intended and designed for similar use by women, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. The products marketed by respondents, and sold to customers in commerce, as herein set out, are variously known and described as “Protex-U” and “Surete.” An assortment of said products consists of douche powder, ointment, jelly, syringe (called health shield), applicator and vaginal diaphragm (called medicator) and are sold in sets and otherwise.

PAR. 3. In the operation of their business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said products by the members of the public, the respondents have made use of various means and ways of advertising said products, among which are the distribution of booklets, pamphlets, show window displays, and circulars bearing the names of various ones of the aforesaid respondents and in some instances all of them. Some of the advertising literature describes and makes certain representations as to the efficacy of the products of respondents.

PAR. 4. For the purpose of selling and distributing their products, respondents publish and cause to be published as a part of their combination, as herein described, six booklets entitled “Happy Family Series,” and named as follows:
1. The Ten Commandments of Happy Marriage
2. How to Hold Your Husband’s Love
3. How to Remain Your Husband’s Pal
4. How to Beat the Divorce Court
5. How to Win Back a Husband, and
6. The Woman Desired.

These pamphlets are purported to be published by the Educational Publishing Corporation; and other pamphlets entitled “New Knowledge for Women,” copyrighted by American Health Association, Washington, D. C., “Feminine Secrets” and a circular entitled “The Protex-U System” are distributed with said pamphlets.

In referring to their products in their aforesaid pamphlets and other advertising, as aforesaid, such statements as the following are made:

sists the organs to regain their normal position and causes that tired depressed feeling to disappear. The after-rest adds to the permanency of the treatment. As a result, you will arise feeling like a young woman in the full bloom of youth.

"* * * Frequent douches are very essential in every married woman's life to keep the numerous creases and wrinkles of the vaginal passage clean and healthy. * * * It absolutely assures every part of the vaginal lining being contacted by the douche. Germs cannot get away from it. * * * Protex-U Health Shield * * * Prevents Delayed Menstruation. If for any reason women appreciate Protex-U more than for any other, it is because of its ability to hold a hot douche or "hot pack" around the womb, which is extremely helpful in preventing delayed menstruation. * * * it eliminates the uncertainties of the usual douche, is nonpoisonous and absolutely harmless to the most sensitive body membrane. * * * wonderful germicide "Gly-quinol" * * * Germ life cannot thrive in its presence * * * So effective, so safe, so reliable has it proved itself that within a few short years it has become known * * * There is nothing else like it. It works where other preparations fail. * * * It also has the peculiar property of drawing infected secretions from the mucous membrane. * * *"

The Three Point Scientific Method. The Protex-U System is based on the well-known "Three Point Scientific Method of Marriage Hygiene." This requires:

1. An effective antiseptic, effectively applied before exposure to prevent infection (pathogenic).

2. A vaginal syringe (Health Shield) far more effective than the ordinary in cleansing and preventing many menstrual disorders.

3. A douche powder that promotes healing and is not an irritant or merely a perfume carrier. These requirements are fully met in the Protex-U Ointment, Protex-U Health Shield and Protex-U Douche Powder, the following illustrations and simple directions fully explain their use.

Using the Protex-U Medicator. The use of a medicator (vaginal diaphragm) and antiseptic ointment is the method outstandingly approved by physicians and Marriage Hygiene Clinics. First, it is necessary to obtain the correct size, which is easily done by the following table:

In classifying oneself as to "under average," "average," or "over average," disregard the amount of flesh and consider bony frame alone. Note.—A woman does not need a large size because she is fleshy.

In said statements, together with other similar statements not herein set out with respect to their products and in their general advertising, respondents directly and through implication represent that their products form safe, competent, and effective preventatives against conception; that the use of said products is a guarantee against pregnancy that said products are composed, in whole or in part, of agents which are fully effective, among other things, in insuring health and youth to wives and mothers; that said products keep the body perfectly clean and sanitary and the mind free from worry and anxiety, and keep the bloom of youth in the user; that use of said products prevents disease, insures health and strength, causes the rapid elimination of bacteria, including leucorrhea (whites) and disagreeable discharges, and acts as a preventative of female irregularities; and that said products are effective as prophylactics and heal the delicate membranes and tissues in the vaginal tract; and form competent and effective treatments for subnormal or unhealthful conditions of the uterus and vagina, venereal diseases, nervousness, pain and discomfort, burning sensation, and mental depression.

Par. 5. In truth and in fact said products do not form or constitute safe and competent remedies against conception and are not a guarantee against pregnancy. Said products do not contain ingredients or medicinal agents which are fully effective, among other things, to insure health and youth to wives and mothers. They do not keep the body perfectly clean and sanitary; or the mind free from worry and anxiety. Said products are not effective as preventatives against disease; are not effective to keep the bloom of youth, or to insure health and strength; and will not cause the rapid elimination of bacteria, including leucorrhea (whites) or disagreeable discharge; neither are they preventatives of female irregularities generally. They do not act as prophylactics or heal the delicate membranes or tissues of the vaginal tract; and are not competent and effective treatments for subnormal or unhealthful conditions of the uterus or vagina, venereal diseases, nervousness, pain or discomfort, burning sensations, and mental depression.

Par. 6. Statements and representations such as the following are made under the name of the American Health Association:

" Why, it was only a few years ago that our Congress was appropriating millions to educate our farmers how to raise and care for their cattle, sheep and hogs, but spending practically nothing on the more important task of educating us wives and mothers—human beings, mind you, on how to take care of ourselves and our families. Finally Congress woke up to the tremendous need and the fact that the family and the home were more important than animals and recently enacted legislation authorizing the educating and assisting of wives, mothers and prospective mothers. In full sympathy with this splendid, if belated, movement the American Health Association is carrying on this special campaign to bring the vital sex truths regarding herself to every wife and mother as soon as possible.

But, what troubles me most is the fact that the need throughout the entire country is so great, so huge, so tremendous, that it is impossible for the American Health Association, as for any other benevolent non-profit organization, to equip enough of us nurses to reach the millions and millions of wives who are just as needy but who are living on a farm, in a small town or even in a larger city where no staff of visiting nurses has yet been organized. To those women we have to bring this message, which we two are privileged to talk over in person, by mail to the best of our ability * * *
The solicitors who are employed by the respondents in calling upon prospective purchasers for the purpose of making the claims herein set out in said advertising, and selling the products herein named, exhibit to them a visiting nurse's button and certificate of membership, together with the following paper called:

NURSE-Membership Application

American Health Association,
Suite 402 Baltic Bldg., Washington, D.C.

Date _______ Feb. ___ 24 _______ 192 ______

I hereby apply for nurse-membership and appointment as visiting nurse in the American Health Association.

It is understood that I am now employed in work tending to elevate the healthful conditions and hygienic standards of our nation. I pledge myself to fully cooperate with the association in its aims of more healthful living through public education and to this end will devote a definite portion of my time to this cause.

Vouched for by ____________________________

I am enclosing 30 cents (stamps accepted) to pay the expense of issuing Certificate of Membership and Visiting Nurses Button. It is understood that there are no initiation or membership fees.

In said statements, and in other statements not herein set out, respondents represent, directly and through implication, that their products have been put to a successful scientific test by the American Health Association, an independent nonprofit organization devoted to scientific research; that they are a part of, or in some manner connected with the American Public Health Association, whose object is to protect and promote public and personal health and whose membership consists of several prominent officials of the United States and State Public Health Services; that they are a part of the United States Public Health Service; that the United States Government has appropriated money for their work; that they are organized and do business under the educational laws of the District of Columbia, and are licensed to train and school nurses and that their representatives are trained and schooled in accordance with the educational laws of the District of Columbia and are trained nurses.

Par. 7. In truth and in fact the American Health Association of Washington, D.C., does not actually exist but is a fictitious name used by respondents to further the fraudulent sale of their products by their solicitors. No such association or organization known as the American Health Association is in any manner connected with the Public Health Service of the United States; nor is it a part of or connected in any manner with the American Public Health Association of the United States. Further, no such organization has ever been organized or chartered to do business such as training and schooling of nurses under the educational laws of the District of Columbia. None of the respondents are connected in any way with the Public Health Service of the United States, nor the American Public Health Association.

Such articles and drugs, named herein, when manufactured, advertised, and distributed are then and there misrepresented in that the statements, designs, and devices regarding the therapeutic, curative, and other benefits and effects thereof borne on the directions slip, circulars, and in the advertising, as aforesaid, are false and fraudulent and the same are applied to said articles knowingly and in reckless and wanton disregard of their truth or falsity.

There are among the respondents' competitors in commerce, as herein set out, those who do not in any way misrepresent the character and nature of their respective businesses and who do not misrepresent in any way the nature, character, and efficacy of their respective products, and do not make use of any of the misleading representations herein set out or others similar thereto.

Par. 8. The aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations used by the respondents, in offering for sale and selling their various products as herein described, in commerce as herein set out, have had, and do now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken beliefs that said representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' various products on account of said erroneous and mistaken beliefs induced as aforesaid. As a result thereof trade is unfairly diverted to respondents from competitors of respondents who do not, in the sale and distribution of their respective products, make use of the same or similar misrepresentations. In consequence thereof injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

Par. 9. The methods, acts and practices of respondents herein set forth are all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of section 5 of an act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.
Findings

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on January 17, 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint upon respondents, Hygienic Corporation of America, Hygienic Co. of America, Merrill-Saunders Co., Ltd.; corporations, and Harold L. DeBar, individually and trading as American Health Association of Washington, D. C., Women's Advisory Bureau, Women's Co-operative Service, Protex-U-Hygienic Service, American Bureau of Hygiene, and Surete Laboratories, charging respondents with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by William L. Taggart, an attorney for the Commission, before Arthur F. Thomas and Randolph Preston, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it (no evidence being offered by the respondents) and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, the testimony and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed on behalf of the respondents, and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent Hygienic Corporation of America is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of California. Respondents Hygienic Co. of America and Merrill-Saunders Co., Ltd., are corporations organized under the laws of the State of Delaware. The Hygienic Co. of America and the Merrill-Saunders Co. are operated as subsidiaries of the Hygienic Corporation of America, and the Hygienic Corporation of America uses the names of these two corporations, as well as other names, as trade names for the carrying on of its business activities.

Respondent Harold L. DeBar is an individual trading under the names of American Health Association of Washington, D. C., Women's Advisory Bureau, Women's Co-operative Service, Protex-U-Hygienic Service, American Bureau of Hygiene, and Surete Laboratories. He is the principal stockholder of all of the corporate respondents and directs and controls the business activities and sales policies of the corporate respondents.

All of the respondents have their office and principal place of business at 5256-5258 South Hoover Street, Los Angeles, Calif. All have acted in conjunction and cooperation with each other in carrying on the acts and practices herein set forth.

Par. 2. The respondents are now and for more than 4 years last past have been engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of certain medicinal preparations and appliances recommended by respondents for so-called feminine hygiene and for use in the treatment of diseases and ailments peculiar to women and for use in preventing pregnancy. The products are designated generally by respondents as "Protex-U" and "Surete," and consist substantially of douche powder, ointment, jelly, syringe, applicator, and vaginal diaphragm. They are sold in sets and separately.

The respondents cause their products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of California to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain and for more than 4 years last past have maintained a course of trade in their products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. The respondents have been and are now in substantial competition with other corporations and individuals and with firms and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of products designed and intended for legitimate hygienic use by women and for use in the treatment and prevention of diseases peculiar to women, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of their business, and for the purpose of promoting the sale of their products, the respondents have made use of various means of advertising their products, among which are advertisements inserted in newspapers and other periodicals, and booklets, pamphlets, circulars, and other advertising material distributed among prospective purchasers. As a further part of their advertising campaign and in order to create interest among prospective purchasers, the respondents distribute a set of six booklets entitled "The Happy Family Series," also booklets entitled "New Knowledge for Women" and "Feminine Secrets." All of these booklets deal directly or by implication, with the prevention of conception.
Among and typical of the representations made by respondents in their advertising material are the following:

The Three Point Scientific Method. The Protex-U System is based on the well-known "Three Point Scientific Method of Marriage Hygiene." This requires:

1. An effective antiseptic, effectively applied before exposure to prevent infection (pathogenic).

2. A vaginal syringe (Health Shield) far more effective than the ordinary in cleansing and preventing many menstrual disorders.

3. A douche powder that promotes healing and is not an irritant or merely a perfume carrier. These requirements are fully met in the Protex-U-Ointment, Protex-U-Health Shield and Protex-U-Douche Powder, the following illustrations and simple directions fully explain their use.

Using the Protex-U-Medicator. The use of a medicator (vaginal diaphragm) and antiseptic ointment is the method outstandingly approved by physicians and Marriage Hygiene Clinics. First, it is necessary to obtain the correct size, which is easily done by the following table:

In classifying one's self as to "under average," "average," or "over average," disregard the amount of flesh and consider bony frame alone. Note: A woman does not need a large size because she is fleshy.

"Surete Antiseptic Ointment"—"* * * Germ life is positively arrested by its presence. * * * A VALUABLE AID IN PREVENTING DELAYED MENSTRUATION. * * * Preserve the Body Beautiful Thru Feminine Hygiene * * * BY use of the Protex-U-System * * * every woman is assured that she is fortified against all conditions * * * The Health Shield assures absolute cleanliness and also relief from congestion, delayed or painful menstruation. and effective preventives of conception; that they possess substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of ailments and diseases peculiar to women, particularly delayed menstruation; that they destroy bacteria and are competent and effective prophylactics; that respondents' appliances, particularly the appliance designated vaginal diaphragm, will fit all female anatomies; that the appliance designated "Health Shield" (vaginal syringe) may be used with safety by all women.

Par. 6. The Commission finds that there is no basis in fact for the foregoing representations and that such representations are false, deceptive and misleading. Respondents' products do not constitute competent or effective preventives of conception. They possess no therapeutic value in the treatment of delayed menstruation or any other ailments or diseases peculiar to women. They do not serve to destroy bacteria nor are they competent or effective prophylactics. The appliance designated vaginal diaphragm or any other of respondents' appliances will not fit all female anatomies. The appliance designated "Health Shield" (vaginal syringe) cannot be used with safety. This appliance is known generally by physicians as a "ballooning douche" and is regarded by physicians as possessing dangerous potentialities, in that its use results in the forcing of bacteria from the vagina into the uterus.

Par. 7. Much of the respondents' selling activity is through solicitors or saleswomen who call on prospective purchasers. In order to obtain such solicitors the respondents advertise in newspapers and other periodicals, and upon receiving inquiries from prospective solicitors the respondents send to such persons a blank form designated "Nurse-Membership Application." Such application is addressed to the "American Health Association, Washington, D. C." and by means of this application the prospective solicitors apply for "Nurse Membership and appointment as Visiting Nurse in the American Health Association." The application further provides that—"It is understood that I shall be employed in work tending to elevate the healthful conditions and hygienic standards of our nation. I pledge myself to fully cooperate with the association in its aims of more healthful living through public education and to this end I will devote a definite portion of my time to this cause."

The respondents, upon receiving such application, issue to the solicitor a card designated "Certificate of Membership" in the "American Health Association, Visiting Nurse Division." This card certifies that the solicitor is enrolled as a "Nurse Member, Class A, in the American Health Association and has been appointed Visiting Nurse while engaged in Health Extension Activities * * *." The respondents also issue to their solicitors badges of identification reading “American Health Association—Visiting Nurse Division—Washington, D. C.” Upon receiving the identification card and badge the solicitors undertake the work of selling respondents’ products by making house to house calls on prospective purchasers. In contacting prospective purchasers and soliciting sales the solicitors exhibit the card and badge, and use circulars, pamphlets and other advertising material supplied by the respondents.

Par. 8. The respondents, both in their advertising literature and by means of solicitors, make other representations with respect to their business activities and products. Of such representations the following are typical:

• • • Why, it was only a few years ago that our Congress was appropriating millions to educate our farmers how to raise and care for their cattle, sheep and hogs, but spending practically nothing on the more important task of educating us wives and mothers—human beings, mind you, on how to take care of ourselves and our families. Finally Congress woke up to the tremendous need and the fact that the family and home were more important than animals and recently enacted legislation authorizing the educating and assisting of wives and mothers and prospective mothers. In full sympathy with this splendid, if belated, movement the American Health Association is carrying on this special campaign to bring the vital sex truths regarding herself to every wife and mother as soon as possible.

But, what troubles me most is the fact that the need throughout the entire country is so great, so huge, so tremendous, that it is impossible for the American Health Association, as for any other benevolent non-profit organization, to equip enough of us nurses who are just as needy but who are living on a farm, in a small town or even in a larger city where no staff of visiting nurses has yet been organized. To those women we have to bring this message, which we are privileged to talk over in person, by mail to the best of our ability • • •.

Through the use of these representations and others of a similar nature, the respondents lead prospective purchasers to believe that respondents’ business activities are conducted under the auspices or with the approval of the public health service, and that respondents’ products have the approval of the public health service; that the American Health Association is a benevolent, nonprofit organization engaged in promoting the public health; that respondents’ solicitors are nurses and are qualified to advise women with respect to matters of health and of sex hygiene.

Par. 9. The Commission finds that these representations are false in their entirety. Neither respondents’ activities nor their products are sponsored or approved by any public health service. There is, in fact, no such organization as respondents’ “American Health Association.” This name is merely a fictitious name used by the respondents as one of their trade names. Respondents’ business is in no sense a benevolent or nonprofit enterprise, but is a business conducted solely as a commercial enterprise and for the profit of respondents. The respondents' solicitors are not nurses and are not qualified to advise women as to matters of health or sex hygiene. They are merely saleswomen and have no training or experience as nurses.

Par. 10. The use by the respondents of the false and misleading statements and representations herein set forth, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that such representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' products. As a result thereof trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors and in consequence substantial injury has been done and is being done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of the respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before Arthur F. Thomas and Randolph Preston, examiners of the Commission therefor duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint (no evidence having been offered by the respondents) and brief filed herein by William L. Taggart, attorney for the Commission (no brief having been filed on behalf of the respondents and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Hygienic Corporation of America, a corporation; Hygienic Co. of America, a corporation; Merrill-Saunders Co., Ltd., a corporation; and Harold L. DeBar, individually, and trading as American Health Association of Washington, D. C., Women's Advisory Bureau, Women's Co-operative Service, Protex-U-Hygienic Service, American Bureau of Hygiene and Surete Laboratories; or trading under any other name or names; their respective officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of respondents' so-called feminine hygiene preparations and appliances now designated as "Protex-U" and "Surete" and consisting substantially douche powder, ointment, jelly, syringe, applicator, and vaginal diaphragm, whether sold together or separately, or any other preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, or any other appliance possessing substantially similar characteristics, whether sold under the same name or under any other name or names, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that any of said preparations or appliances, whether used alone or in conjunction with any other of said preparations or appliances, will prevent conception.

2. Representing that any of said preparations or appliances, whether used alone or in connection with any other of said pre-arations or appliances, possess any therapeutic value in the treatment of delayed menstruation or any other ailment or disease peculiar to women.

3. Representing that any of said preparations or appliances destroy bacteria or are competent or effective prophylactics.

4. Representing that respondents' appliances will fit all female anatomies.

5. Representing, through failure to reveal that the use of the appliance designated by respondents as "Health Shield" (vaginal syringe) is not wholly safe, or through any other means or device, or in any other manner, that such appliance may be used with safety or without injurious effects.

6. Representing that the respondents or their business activities are connected in any way with any public health service, or that any of the respondents' products are approved by any public health service.

7. Using the name "American Health Association" or "American Health Association of Washington, D. C. " or any other name of similar import or meaning to designate or describe the respondents or their business.

8. Using the word "Nurse" or "Visiting Nurse" or "Nurse Membership" or any other term of similar import or meaning to designate or describe respondents' solicitors or saleswomen, or otherwise representing that respondents' solicitors or saleswomen are nurses.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

NATIONAL SURE-FIT QUILTING COMPANY, INC.

Docket 3728. Complaint, Mar. 1, 1939.—Decision, June 10, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of bed quilts, comforters and related quilt products and in sale and distribution thereof to various purchasers and retailers in various States and in the District of Columbia, and including among aforesaid products a certain comforter, which, made by it under patent process, was composed of 95 percent cotton and of 5 percent down, included between two cotton bats—

Made use in advertising, offering and selling its said comforter of its registered trade mark "Villadown," which, as advertised by it generally and by local distributors in several States, was featured in large display type, with small lettering setting forth 95 percent cotton composition and 5 percent down, and notwithstanding fact said comforter was not one filled entirely with down, or undercoating of waterfowl as understood by industry and substantial portion of purchasing public when used in the bedding industry;

With effect, through its said practice of using or permitting use by local distributors of said word "Villadown," in advertising, describing or representing article in question, in larger lettering or type or in any wise different than lettering or type used in descriptive words showing and describing real content or consistency of article, i.e., 95 percent cotton and 5 percent down, of misleading and deceiving substantial number of retailers and members of public into erroneous and mistaken belief that said article was manufactured from down, without intermixture of cotton in proportion as aforesaid, and into purchase of a substantial number of said comforters because of such erroneous and mistaken belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Robert S. Hall, trial examiner.

Mr. Randolph W. Brench, for the Commission.

Mr. Louis Schumacher, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that National Sure-Fit Quilting Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, National Sure-Fit Quilting Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York with its principal office and place of business located at 40-20 Twenty-second Street, Long Island City, N. Y.

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing bed quilts, comforters and related quilted products, including a certain comforter to which it has given the name of "Villadown." Respondent sells its "Villadown" comforters to various jobbers and retail dealers in such articles situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia and causes them, when sold by it, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said comforters among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the bedding trade and in the feather and down industry, "down" is and for a long time has been generally understood to refer to the undercoating of the waterfowl consisting of light and fluffy filaments grown from one quill point but without any quill shaft, and a "down" or "down-filled" article is and for a long time has been generally understood to be one containing not less than 90 percent pure down, and for many years past has had, and still has, in the mind of the consuming public, a definite and specific meaning, to wit: fluffy and soft portions of coats of birds other than feathers. Comforters filled wholly with "down" have for many years held, and still hold, great public esteem because they combine buoyancy and lightness with great warmth in a manner not possessed by other fillers. In the mind of the consuming public a "down" article means one filled so far as manufacturing conditions permit exclusively with "down."

Par. 4. Respondent has caused the word "Villadown" to be registered as a trade-mark and has used the same with the design of identifying its article to the trade and to the public and of establishing and preserving such good-will and popularity as the article may acquire from its public acceptance. For such good-will to be engendered, the name "Villadown" in connection with the articles, must be brought to the attention of the purchasing public, and in order for those who distribute them either at wholesale or at retail to take advantage of the existence of such good-will, the articles are normally advertised, offered and sold by them under the aforesaid trade-mark or name "Villadown."

Par. 5. The designation by respondent of its comforters as "Villadown" and the representations and statements of respondent and its customers that such articles were "Villadown" Comforters have served as representations to prospective purchasers that the filler was composed substantially of "down."

Par. 6. The aforesaid representations are grossly exaggerated, misleading and untrue. In truth and in fact, respondent's "Villadown" comforters are manufactured by a process of combining two layers of cotton with one layer of "down" over which is sewn a covering of some fabric appropriate for the purpose and the whole stitched or quilted in the manner usual in such articles for the prevention of shifting or matting of the filler. The filler is composed of approximately 95 percent of cotton and 5 percent of "down." The nature of the filler is not apparent from an inspection or examination of the exterior and the quantity of down is insufficient to impart to the comforter any qualities not possessed by one filled entirely with cotton.

Par. 7. The use of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading representations with respect to the said "Villadown" comforters has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false representations are true, and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial numbers of the said comforters.

Par. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on March 3, 1939, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent National Sure-Fit Quilting Co., Inc., a corporation, charging respondent with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On March 22, 1939, the respondent filed an answer in the proceeding. Thereafter, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Randolph W. Branch, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Louis Schumacher, attorney for the respondent, before Robert S. Hall, an Examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs, in support of the complaint, and in opposition thereto, oral argument not having been requested; and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts, and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, National Sure-Fit Quilting Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, and existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 40-20 Twenty-second Street, Long Island City, N.Y.

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing bed quilts, comforters, and related quilted products, including a certain comforter to which it has given the name of "Villadown." Respondent sells its "Villadown" comforters to various jobbers and retail dealers situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes them, when sold by it, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said comforters in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. Respondent has caused the word "Villadown" to be registered as a trade-mark and has used the same with the design of identifying its article to the trade and to the public and of establishing and preserving such good will and popularity as the article may acquire from its public acceptance. For such good will to be engendered, the name "Villadown" in connection with the articles, must be brought to the attention of the purchasing public, and in order for those who distribute them either at wholesale or at retail to take advantage of the existence of such good will, the articles are normally advertised, offered and sold by them under the aforesaid trade-mark or name "Villadown."

Par. 4. Respondent's product "Villadown" is a comforter, the filler of which is composed of 95 percent cotton and 5 percent down; the cover of the comforter has a weight of from 1¾ to 2 pounds. In its construction two cotton bats, each weighing about 2 pounds, are used, between which the 5 percent, or approximately 4 ounces of down is placed. The cotton bats are each 1 1/4 to 1 1/2 inches in thickness. The comforter as a finished product is approximately 6 feet by 7 feet. The respondent's article, "Villadown" is manufactured by a patented process of respondent, and has been on the market since 1937. The article is advertised generally by the respondent, and by local distributors in several States, by featuring the word "Villadown" in large display type, and the real composition thereof, to wit, 95 percent cotton, and 5 percent down, in small lettering.

Par. 5. The word "down" as used in the bedding industry is understood by the industry and a substantial portion of the purchasing public to mean, and is, the undercoating of the waterfowl. There is a substantial portion of the purchasing public which believes the word "Villadown" when used in advertising, or as descriptive of comforters, to mean a pure down comforter, or one filled entirely with down.

Par. 6. The practice of respondent of using or permitting the use by local distributors of the word "Villadown" in advertising, describing, or representing the article, in larger lettering or type, or in any wise different from the lettering or type used in the descriptive words showing and disclosing the real content or consistency of the article, to wit, 95 percent cotton, and 5 percent down, as above set forth, has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial number of retail dealers and members of the public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said article is manufactured from "down," without the intermixture of cotton in the proportion of 95 percent cotton, with only 5 percent down, and into the purchase of a substantial number of said comforters because of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Robert S. Hall, an examiner of the Commission, duly designated by it in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto and briefs filed herein, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, National Sure-Fit Quilting Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of comforters or similar products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Using the term Villadown or any other term which includes the word "down" or any colorable simulation thereof or using any other term of similar import or meaning, to describe or designate any quilt, comforter, or other similar product, the filler of which is not composed wholly of "down," the light fluffy undercoating of the waterfowl, provided that if said term is used to describe a filler composed in part of down and in part of materials other than down such term must be immediately accompanied by a word or words of equal size or conspicuousness designating the substance, fiber or material of which said filler is composed with designation of each constituent fiber or material thereof in the order of its predominance by weight beginning with the largest single constituent.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF UNITED FACTORIES, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3797. Complaint, May 31, 1939—Decision, June 10, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of its so-called automotive engine reconditioner or "Micaseal" to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia, in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of preparations designed for similar uses in commerce among the various States and in said District; in advertisements of its said product in newspapers, periodicals, circulars, and other printed matter circulated and distributed among prospective purchasers in various States and in said District, and in continuities broadcast from radio stations of extra-State audience—

(a) Represented, directly and by implication, that use of its said preparation would effect substantial economies in operation of an automobile through lessening gasoline and oil consumption, and that, put into the motor through the spark plug openings, it filled scores and scratches on cylinder walls and formed a cushion seal which increased compression, checked excessive carbon formation, added speed, power, and smoothness to operation of old motors, and, in fact, reconditioned a motor at a saving of 95 percent over ordinary mechanical methods of reboring cylinders and refitting pistons therein, facts being preparation in question was not essentially different in chemical composition from various other substances or products or preparations or "engine improvers," scientific principle of which was based on action of vermiculite in the expanded or unexpanded form, and in all of which, claims for products were based upon action of expended vermiculite as in said "Micaseal," and said product would not effect substantial economies or accomplish other results above claimed for it, and use thereof in automobile engine would not produce equivalent of mechanical reconditioning job, nor any of the beneficial results produced by such reconditioning nor improve motor performance, as claimed by it; and

(b) Represented that nationally known laboratories had made impartial tests of said "Micaseal" and had certified to the truth and accuracy of its aforesaid representations through such statements as "Tested and Approved by these Laboratories: Kansas City Testing Laboratories, Inc. * * * Automotive Test Laboratories of America * * * Nationally known laboratories put Micaseal to rigid test * * * The Kansas City Testing Laboratory is known in the United States and abroad for its honesty and reliability—and for the carefully conservative statements it makes in its findings * * * We went to a laboratory that would give us only the impartial truth, which was what we wanted, so that our representatives would know the facts about Micaseal," etc., facts being no nationally known laboratory had made an impartial test of said product or issued a certificate certifying to the truth and accuracy of the representations made by it with respect thereto as hereinbefore indicated;
With effect through use of such false and misleading statements and representations in describing its product as above set forth, of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations were true and with result, as consequence of such belief, that number of consuming public purchased substantial volume of its said product, and trade was thereby diverted unfairly to it from competitors engaged in sale and distribution of preparations designed for similar use and who do not misrepresent the same or their effectiveness:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, trial examiner.

Mr. R. A. McOuat for the Commission.

Borders, Warrick & Hazard, of Kansas City, Mo., for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that United Factories, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, United Factories, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Missouri with its office and principal place of business at 1302 McGee Street, Kansas City, Mo.

Respondent is now, and has been for more than 2 years last past, engaged in the business of selling and distributing a preparation known as Micaseal, designated and described by the respondent as a reconditioner of automotive engines. During the times herein mentioned respondent has caused said preparation, when sold or ordered, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Missouri to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Missouri, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign nations. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said preparation among and between various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and with foreign nations.
Complaint 31 F. T. C.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the business of selling and distributing preparations designed for similar usage in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and with foreign nations. Among said competitors in said commerce are many who do not in any manner misrepresent their said preparations or the effectiveness in use thereof.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of Micaseal, respondent has caused statements and representations relative to the effectiveness in use of said preparation to be inserted in advertisements in newspapers, periodicals, circulars and other printed matter circulated and distributed among prospective purchasers located in the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign nations, and in continuities broadcast from radio stations which have power to and do convey the programs emanating therefrom to the listeners thereto located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in said advertisements so distributed and broadcast as aforesaid are the following:

New Way to Recondition Auto Engines for 95% Less.
No Reboring or New Rings; Saves Gas, Oil—Increases Power; Costs Less than Spark Plugs.

Tested and Approved by These Laboratories: Kansas City Testing Laboratories, Inc.

Automotive Test Laboratories of America.

Nationally known laboratories put Micaseal to rigid test. The Kansas City Testing Laboratory is known in the United States and abroad for its honesty and reliability—and for the carefully conservative statements it makes in its findings. We went to a laboratory that would give us only the impartial truth, which was what we wanted, so that our representatives would know the facts about Micaseal. Micaseal is not an experiment. It has made good both by the most exacting technical laboratory test and the motorists themselves. Users of Micaseal are protected by our iron-clad guarantee.

This paste-like substance when put into the motors through the spark plug openings, spreads and works itself around leaky pistons and rings, has an affinity for metal, and is not affected by heat of the motor.

While filling up the scores, scratches and scars in cylinder walls and leaky pistons and rings, it literally forms a mirror surfaced mineral plating and a cushion seal which increases compression, adds speed, pep, power and smoothness to the operation of old motors, saves oil and gas and does it at a fraction of the cost of new rings and new bore reconditioning.
Stop excessive oil pumping and gasoline waste of old motors with worn pistons and rings by simply removing spark plugs and injecting Micaseal, a new discovery, into the motor through spark plug openings. Here is the result:

1. Compression is increased;
2. Checks excessive oil pumping;
3. Gasoline mileage increased;
4. Checks excessive carbon formation;
5. New pep and power.

The aforesaid statements and representations, together with others of similar import and meaning not herein set out, purport to be descriptive of respondent's preparation and its effectiveness in use. In the manner and by the means aforesaid the respondent represents directly and by implication that the use of said preparation will effect substantial economies in the operation of an automobile through the lessening of the gasoline and oil consumption of the automobile motor; that Micaseal when put into motors through the spark plug openings fills scores and scratches on cylinder walls and forms a cushion seal which increases compression, checks excessive carbon formation, adds speed, power, and smoothness to the operation of old motors, and in fact reconditions a motor at a saving of 95 percent over the ordinary mechanical methods of reboring the cylinders and refitting the pistons in an automobile engine; that nationally known laboratories have made impartial tests of Micaseal and have certified as to the truth and accuracy of the above representations. Respondent represents, in effect, that the use of said preparation in an automobile engine produces the equivalent of a mechanical reconditioning job.

Par. 4. In truth and in fact the statements and representations disseminated by respondent as aforesaid are deceptive, misleading, exaggerated and untrue. The use of this preparation will not effect substantial economies in the operation of an automobile by decreasing the gasoline and oil consumption of a motor. It does not cause the formation of a cushion seal which increases compression. Respondent's preparation does not check excessive carbon formation. Its use does not add speed, power, and smoothness to the operation of old motors. It does not recondition a motor, nor refit the pistons in the cylinders in an automobile engine. The use of said preparation in an automobile engine does not produce the equivalent of a mechanical reconditioning job nor does its use produce any of the beneficial results produced by a mechanical reconditioning of an automobile engine. No nationally known laboratory has made an impartial test of Micaseal, nor given a certificate as to the truth and accuracy of the above representations.
PAR. 5. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, has, and had, the tendency and capacity to and does, and did, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public, situated in various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign nations, into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid statements and representations are and were true and into purchasing substantial quantities of respondent's preparation because of said erroneous and mistaken belief. As a direct result thereof trade in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and with foreign nations has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its said competitors engaged in selling and distributing preparations designed for similar usages who do not misrepresent their preparations or their effectiveness in use. In consequence thereof, substantial injury has been done by the respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and with foreign nations.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 31, 1939, issued and thereafter served its complaint upon the respondent, United Factories, Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Respondent filed an answer, and thereafter, beginning August 11, 1939, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by R. A. McOuat, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Borders, Warrick & Hazard, attorneys for respondent, before A. F. Thomas, a trial examiner for the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, which testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission, on said complaint, the answer thereto, briefs in support of said complaint, and in opposition thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that the proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent United Factories, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Missouri having its office and principal place of business located in Kansas City, Mo., and is, and has been for more than 2 years last past, engaged in the business of the sale and distribution of a preparation known as "Micaseal," described by respondent as a "reconditioner of automotive engines." During the times herein mentioned, respondent has caused said preparation, or product, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Missouri, to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of Missouri, and in the District of Columbia. The respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said preparation among and between various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent is now, and has been, in competition with other persons engaged in the business of selling and distributing preparations designed for similar uses in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its preparation "Micaseal," respondent has caused statements and representations relative to the effectiveness in use of said preparation to be inserted in advertisements in newspapers, periodicals, circulars, and other printed matter, circulated and distributed among prospective purchasers located in various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia, and in continuities broadcast from radio stations which have power to and do convey the programs emanating therefrom to the listeners thereto located in various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in said advertisements so distributed and broadcast, as aforesaid, are the following:

- New way to reconditioning auto engines for 95% less.
- No reboring or New Rings; Saves Gas, Oil—Increases Power; Costs Less than Spark Plugs.
- Tested and Approved by These Laboratories: Kansas City Testing Laboratories, Inc.
- Automotive Test Laboratories of America.
Nationally known laboratories put Micaseal to rigid test * * * The Kansas City Testing Laboratory is known in the United States and abroad for its honesty and reliability—and for the carefully conservative statements it makes in its findings. * * * We went to a laboratory that would give us only the impartial truth, which was what we wanted, so that our representatives would know the facts about Micaseal. Micaseal is not an experiment. It has made good both by the most exacting technical laboratory test and the motorists themselves. Users of Micaseal are protected by our iron-clad guarantee.

This paste-like substance when put into the motors through the spark plug openings, spreads and works itself around leaky pistons and rings, has an affinity for metal, and is not affected by heat of the motor.

While filling up the scores, scratches and scars in cylinder walls and leaky pistons and rings, it literally forms a mirror surfaced mineral plating and a cushion seal which increases compression, adds speed, pep, power and smoothness to the operation of old motors, saves oil and gas and does it at a fraction of the cost of new rings and new bore reconditioning.

Stop excessive oil pumping and gasoline waste of old motors with worn pistons and rings by simply removing spark plugs and injecting Micaseal, a new discovery, into the motor through spark plug openings. Here is the result:
1. Compression is increased;
2. Checks excessive oil pumping;
3. Gasoline mileage increased;
4. Checks excessive carbon formation;
5. New pep and power.

The aforesaid statements and representations, together with others of similar import and meaning not herein set out, purport to be descriptive of respondent's preparation and its effectiveness in use. In the manner and by the means aforesaid, the respondent represents directly and by implication that the use of said preparation will effect substantial economies in the operation of an automobile through the lessening of the gasoline and oil consumption of the automobile motor; that "Micaseal," when put into motors through the spark plug openings, fills scores and scratches on cylinder walls and forms a cushion seal which increases compression, checks excessive carbon formation, adds speed, power, and smoothness to the operation of old motors, and in fact reconditions a motor at a saving of 95 percent over the ordinary mechanical methods of reboring the cylinders and refitting the pistons in an automobile engine; that nationally known laboratories have made impartial tests of "Micaseal" and have certified as to the truth and accuracy of the above representations. Respondent represents, in effect, that the use of said preparation in an automobile engine produces the equivalent of a mechanical reconditioning job.

Par. 3. "Micaseal" is a mixture or preparation of mineral and vegetable oils in which is incorporated finely divided dry, expanded vermiculite. Vermiculite is a mica which possesses the property of expanding to many times its initial volume when it is heated, and when it has been so treated it is known as “expanded” or “exfoliated” vermiculite. In “Micaseal” the vermiculite is presented in the expanded form; in other similar products the vermiculite is presented in its original unexpanded form, and is introduced into the engine in the unexpanded form in the hope that it will find its way into small crevices and the heat of the engine will cause it to expand in place. There is no essential difference in the chemical composition of these various substances or products or preparations or “engine improvers,” the scientific principle of which is based on the action of vermiculite in the expanded or unexpanded form. In all cases the claims made for the products are based upon the action of expanded vermiculite.

Par. 4. The statements and representations disseminated by respondent as herein set forth, are deceptive, misleading, exaggerated, and untrue. The use of this preparation will not effect substantial economies in the operation of an automobile by decreasing the gasoline and oil consumption of a motor. It does not cause the formation of a cushion seal which increases pressure. It does not check excessive carbon formation. Its use does not add speed, power and smoothness to the operation of old motors. It does not recondition a motor nor refit the pistons in the cylinders in an automobile engine. The use of said preparation in an automobile engine does not produce the equivalent of a mechanical reconditioning job, nor does its use produce any of the beneficial results produced by the mechanical reconditioning of an automobile engine. “Micaseal” will not improve the performance of the motor engine in the manner represented by respondent in its advertising as hereinabove quoted.

Par. 5. No nationally-known laboratory has made an impartial test of “Micaseal” or has issued a certificate which certifies to the truth and accuracy of the foregoing representations made by respondent.

Par. 6. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent in describing its products, as hereinabove set out, were, and are, calculated to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations are true. As a result of this erroneous belief, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent’s said product with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors engaged in selling and distributing preparations designed for similar use, who do not misrepresent their preparations or their effectiveness in use.
CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, United Factories, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its preparations known as Micaseal, or any other preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the name or under any other name in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that the use of respondent's preparation will decrease the oil or gas consumption of a motor, increase engine compression or check excessive oil pumping.
2. Representing that the use of respondent's preparation will check excessive carbon formation or add speed, power, or smoothness to the operation of old motors.
3. Representing that the use of respondent's preparation will recondition a motor or produce results equal to or comparable with a mechanical reconditioning of an automobile engine.
4. Representing that nationally known laboratories have made impartial tests of Micaseal and have certified that Micaseal has merit when used in an automobile engine.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

C. I. LEVIN AND EDWARD JOHNSON, TRADING AS MIDWEST MERCHANDISE COMPANY

Docket 4058. Complaint, Mar. 12, 1910—Decision, June 10, 1910

Where two individuals engaged in sale and distribution of knives, watches, radios, cameras, and various other articles of merchandise to dealer purchasers in various States and in the District of Columbia, in competition with others engaged in the sale and distribution of like and similar merchandise in commerce as aforesaid—

Sold and distributed to dealers certain assortments of said merchandise which were so packed and assembled as to involve use of game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when such merchandise was sold and distributed to the consumer thereof, and which included (1) replica of "Ferdinand the Bull" together with punchboard for use in sale and distribution of said replica, and number of packages of cigarettes, supplied by dealer, under plan by which person punching certain numbers received in return for 2 cents paid said replica or cigarettes, value of which was in excess of amount paid for chance, and others receive nothing, and (2) other assortments, together with various punchboards and push card devices for use in sale and distribution of merchandise in question by means of game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme involving sales plan and method similar to that described and varying therefrom in detail only; and

Supplied thereby to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting chasers by whom they were exposed and sold to purchasing public in accordance with such sales plans or methods by retail dealers who purchased or secured said assortments, together with said punchboards or push cards, either directly or indirectly, and exposed said devices and merchandise to purchasing public and sold and distributed same in accordance with such sales plans or methods as above described, involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure article of merchandise at price much less than normal retail price thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said or any method involving game of chance or sale of chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With tendency and capacity to induce a substantial number of purchasing public to buy their said merchandise in preference to similar merchandise offered by competitors, and with result that many dealers and ultimate purchasers of merchandise similar to that distributed by them were attracted by their said sales plans or methods, and by element of chance involved in sale thereof as above described, and were thereby induced to purchase said merchandise from them in preference to similar products.

offered and sold by competitors who do not use same or similar methods, and with capacity and tendency, because of said game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, to divert unfairly to them trade in commerce from the said competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods, and to deprive purchasing public of free competition in such merchandise:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Lewis C. Russell, trial examiner.
Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.
Mr. H. R. Brandt, of Kansas City, Mo., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that C. I. Levin and Edward Johnson, individually, and trading under the name of Midwest Merchandise Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondents C. I. Levin and Edward Johnson are individuals trading under the name of Midwest Merchandise Co., with their principal office and place of business located at 1006 Broadway, Kansas City, Mo. Respondents are now and for more than 1 year last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of knives, watches, radios, cameras, clocks, lamps, and various other articles of merchandise to dealers located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause, and have caused, their said merchandise, when sold, to be shipped or transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of Missouri to purchasers thereof in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, a course of trade by said respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of their business respondents are and have been in competition with other partnerships and individuals and with corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to dealers certain assortments of said merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when said merchandise is sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

One of said assortments consists of a replica of "Ferdinand the Bull" together with a device commonly known as a punchboard. To this assortment the retail dealer who purchases same adds a number of packages of cigarettes. Said punchboard has printed on the top thereof various instructions or legends showing the method or sales plan by which said merchandise is to be sold or distributed to the purchasing or consuming public. Sales are 2 cents each and said punchboard has a number of sealed tubes in which have been inserted slips of paper with numbers appearing thereon. Each purchaser is entitled to punch one of said slips from said board. The said numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the slip of paper punched or removed from said board. The person who punches a certain specified number is entitled to and receives the replica of "Ferdinand the Bull." Purchasers who punch other specified numbers are entitled to and receive a specified number of packages of cigarettes. Persons obtaining numbers not so specified receive nothing for their money. Said replica of "Ferdinand the Bull" and said packages of cigarettes are each worth more than the amount to be paid therefor. Said replica and said packages of cigarettes are thus sold and distributed to the consuming or purchasing public wholly by lot or chance. Respondents sell and distribute various assortments of said merchandise and furnish or sell various punchboard and push-card devices for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, but the sales plans or methods involved in the sale and distribution of all of said assortments of merchandise are similar to the sales plan or method hereinabove set out, varying only in detail.

Par. 3. Retail dealers who purchase or procure respondents' said assortments of merchandise, together with said punchboards or push cards, either directly or indirectly, expose said devices and merchandise to the purchasing public and sell and distribute such merchandise in accordance with the above-described sales plan or methods. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries, gift enterprises, or games of chance in the sale of said merchandise in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove set forth. Such sales plans or methods have the tendency and capacity to induce the consuming or purchasing public to purchase respondents' said merchandise in preference to similar merchandise offered for sale and sold by their competitors.

Par. 4. The sale of said merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. The use by respondents of said sales plans or methods in the sale of their merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws. The use by respondents of said sales plans or methods has the tendency and capacity to unfairly hinder competition. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents as above described are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any methods involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of merchandise similar to that distributed by respondents are attracted by respondents' said sales plans or methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described and are thereby induced to purchase said merchandise from respondents in preference to similar merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or similar methods. The use of said methods by respondents has the capacity and tendency, because of said game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, to unfairly divert to respondents trade and custom from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods and has the tendency and capacity to deprive the purchasing public of free competition in said merchandise.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on March 12, 1940, issued, and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents C. I. Levin and Edward Johnson, individually and trading as Midwest Merchandise Company, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer the Commission by order entered herein granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondents C. I. Levin and Edward Johnson are individuals trading under the name of Midwest Merchandise Company, with their principal office and place of business located at 1006 Broadway, Kansas City, Mo. Respondents are now and for more than 1 year last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of knives, watches, radios, cameras, clocks, lamps, and various other articles of merchandise to dealers located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause, and have caused, their said merchandise, when sold, to be shipped or transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of Missouri to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, a course of trade by said respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of their business respondents are and have been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Par. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to dealers certain assortments of said merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when said merchandise is sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

One of said assortments consists of a replica of "Ferdinand the Bull" together with a device commonly known as a punchboard. To this assortment the retail dealer who purchases same adds a number of packages of cigarettes. Said punchboard has printed on the top thereof various instructions or legends showing the method or sales plan by which said merchandise is to be sold or distributed to the purchasing or consuming public. Sales are 2 cents each and said punchboard has a number of sealed tubes in which have been inserted slips of paper with numbers appearing thereon. Each purchaser is entitled to punch one of said slips from said board. The said numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the slip of paper punched or removed from said board. The person who punches a certain specified number is entitled to and receives the replica of "Ferdinand the Bull." Purchasers who punch other specified numbers are entitled to and receive a specified number of packages of cigarettes. Persons obtaining numbers not so specified receive nothing for their money. Said replica of "Ferdinand the Bull" and said packages of cigarettes are each worth more than the amount to be paid therefor. Said replica and said packages of cigarettes are thus sold and distributed to the consuming or purchasing public wholly by lot or chance. Respondents sell and distribute various assortments of said merchandise and furnish or sell various punchboard and push card devices for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, but the sales plans or methods involved in the sale and distribution of all of said assortments of merchandise are similar to the sales plan or method hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

Par. 3. Retail dealers who purchase or procure respondents' said assortments of merchandise, together with said punchboards or push cards, either directly or indirectly, expose said devices and merchandise to the purchasing public and sell and distribute such merchandise in accordance with the above described sales plans or methods. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries, gift enterprises, or games of chance in the sale of said merchandise in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove described. Such sales plans or methods have the tendency and capacity to induce the consuming or purchasing public to purchase respondents' said merchandise in preference to similar merchandise offered for sale and sold by their competitors.

Par. 4. The sale of said merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. The use by respondents of said sales plans or methods in the sale of their merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws. The use by respondents of said sales plans or methods has the tendency and capacity to unfairly hinder competition. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents as above described are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any methods involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 5. Many dealers in, and ultimate purchasers of, merchandise similar to that distributed by respondents are attracted by respondents' said sales plans or methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described and are thereby induced to purchase said merchandise from respondents in preference to similar merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or similar methods. The use of said methods by respondents has the capacity and tendency, because of said game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, to unfairly divert to respondents trade and custom from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods and has the tendency and capacity to deprive the purchasing public of free competition in said merchandise.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, C. I. Levin and Edward Johnson, individually and trading under the name of Midwest Merchandise Co., or trading under any other name, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of knives, watches, radios, cameras, clocks, lamps, or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing said merchandise or any other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of said merchandise or other merchandise are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others assortments of any merchandise, together with push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, either with assortments of said merchandise or any other merchandise, or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise or any other merchandise to the public.

4. Selling or otherwise distributing any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

E. T. JAMES, JR., TRADING UNDER THE NAME OF UNITED CANDY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4060. Complaint, Mar. 12, 1940—Decision, June 10, 1940

Where an individual engaged in manufacture of candy and in sale and distribution of assortments thereof, which were so packed and assembled as to involve use of a lottery scheme, when sold and distributed to consumers thereof, and included (1) number of candy bars, value of each of which was in excess of a cent, and push card for use in sale and distribution of said assortment to purchasing public, under a plan in accordance with which chance selection of certain numbers determined whether customer paid 1 cent, 2 cents, 3 cents, 4 cents, or 5 cents for candy bar, and (2) various other assortments involving lot or chance feature and sales plans or methods for distribution thereof similar to that above described and varying therefrom in detail only—

Sold such assortments, along with said push cards, to dealers or retailer purchasers by whom they were exposed and sold to purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, under which amount to be paid by each customer for a bar of candy was determined wholly by lot or chance, and involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure candy bars at prices much less than normal retail price thereof, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products in accordance with sales plans or methods above set forth, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in competition with many who are unwilling to offer or sell their products so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to purchasing public so as to involve game of chance or any other method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With result that many dealers in and ultimate consumers of candy were attracted by his said method and manner of packing same and by element of chance involved in sale thereof as above set forth, and were thereby induced to purchase such candy so packed and sold by him, in preference to that offered and sold by his competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods, and with tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert unfairly to himself, trade from his competitors who do not use such or equivalent methods, exclude from candy trade or competitors who are unwilling to and do not use such methods, as unlawful, lessen competition in said trade and create a monopoly thereof in said individual and in such other distributors of candy as use same or equivalent methods, and deprive purchasing public of benefit of free competition, and to eliminate from said trade all actual, and to exclude therefrom, all potential, competitors who do not adopt and use same or equivalent methods:
Complaint 31 F. T. C.

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.
McDougle & Erwin, of Charlotte, N. Car., for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that E. T. James, Jr., individually and trading under the name of United Candy Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent, E. T. James, Jr., is an individual doing business under the trade name of United Candy Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 1507 West Trade Street, Charlotte, N. C. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to dealers. Respondent causes and has caused his products when sold to be shipped or transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of North Carolina to purchasers thereof located in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective places of business. There is now and for more than 1 year last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers various assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof. One of said assortments is sold and distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner: This assortment consists of a number of bars of candy, together with a device called a push card. The card contains a number of partially perforated disks with the word "push" appearing on the face of each of said disks and printed within each of said disks is either 1 cent, 2 cents, 3 cents, 4 cents, or 5 cents. Each purchaser is entitled to punch one number from said card. Each purchaser is entitled to and receives one bar of candy and pays therefor the amount indicated within the disk removed from said card. All of said bars are worth more than 1 cent. The said amounts are effectively concealed from the purchasers and prospective purchasers until a push or selection has been made and the selected disk removed or separated from the card. Thus the amount to be paid by each customer for a bar of candy is determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent manufactures, sells, and distributes various assortments of candy, involving a lot or chance feature, and such assortments and the sales plans or methods by which said assortments are distributed are similar to the one hereinabove described varying only in detail.

Par. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's assortments of candy directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans or methods. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove set forth. Said sales plans or methods have a tendency and capacity to induce purchasers of said candy to purchase respondent's candy in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by his competitors.

Par. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure bars of candy at prices much less than the normal retail prices thereof. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of his candy and the sale of such candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws. The use by respondent of said methods has a tendency unduly to hinder competition or to create a monopoly in that the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not use and adopt the same or equivalent methods involving the same or equivalent elements of chance or lottery. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with respondent as above alleged are unwilling to offer for sale or to sell their products so packed and assembled as above described or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance or any other method which is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom.
Par. 5 Many dealers in, and ultimate consumers of, candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent has a tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance to unfairly divert to respondent trade from his competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from the candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful; to lessen competition in the candy trade; to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and in such other distributors of candy as use the same or equivalent methods and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition. The use of said methods by respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use the same or equivalent methods.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on March 12, 1940 issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, E. T. James, Jr., individually and trading under the name of United Candy Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer the Commission by order entered herein granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission.
Findings

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, E. T. James, Jr., is an individual doing business under the trade name of United Candy Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 1507 West Trade Street, Charlotte, N. C. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to dealers. Respondent causes and has caused his products when sold to be shipped or transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of North Carolina to purchasers thereof located in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective places of business. There is now and for more than 1 year last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers various assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof. One of said assortments is sold and distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner: This assortment consists of a number of bars of candy, together with a device called a push card. The card contains a number of partially perforated disks with the word "push" appearing on the face of each of said disks and printed within each of said disks is either 1 cent, 2 cents, 3 cents, 4 cents or 5 cents. Each purchaser is entitled to punch one number from said card. Each purchaser is entitled to and receives one bar of candy and pays therefor the amount indicated within the disk removed from said card. All of said bars are worth more than one cent. The said amounts are effectively concealed from the purchasers and prospective purchasers until a push or selection has been made and the selected disk removed or separated from the card. Thus the amount to be paid by each customer for a bar of candy is determined wholly by lot or chance.

Par. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's assortments of candy directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans, or methods. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove set forth. Said sales plans or methods have a tendency and capacity to induce purchasers of said candy to purchase respondent's candy in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by his competitors.

Par. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure bars of candy at prices much less than the normal retail prices thereof. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of his candy and the sale of such candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws. The use by respondent of said methods has a tendency unduly to hinder competition or to create a monopoly in that the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not use and adopt the same or equivalent methods involving the same or equivalent elements of chance or lottery. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with respondent as above described are unwilling to offer for sale or to sell their products so packed and assembled as above described or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance or any other method which is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 5. Many dealers in, and ultimate consumers of, candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent has a tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to unfairly divert to respondent trade from his competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from the candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful; to lessen competition in the candy trade; to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and in such other distributors of candy as use the same or equivalent methods and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition. The use of said methods by respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use the same or equivalent methods.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, E. T. James, Jr., individually and trading under the name of United Candy Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing candy or any other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of said candy or other merchandise to the public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.
Order 31 F. T. C.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others assortments of candy or other merchandise together with push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said candy or any other merchandise to the public.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices either with assortments of candy or other merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such candy or other merchandise to the public.

4. Selling or otherwise distributing any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon him of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
Syllabus

IN THE MATTER OF

R. L. JACKSON, TRADING AS CAPITAL CITY CANDY COMPANY

Docket 4092. Complaint, Apr. 17, 1940—Decision, June 10, 1940

Where an individual engaged in manufacture of candy and in sale and distribution of certain assortments thereof which were so packed and assembled as to involve use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to consumers thereof and included (1) assortments together with pushcards for use in sale and distribution to purchasing or consuming public of a number of candy bars of uniform size and shape, under a plan in accordance with which customer or purchaser paid 1 cent, 2 cents, 3 cents, 4 cents, and 5 cents in accordance with particular number secured by chance, and purchaser making last push in each of two sections into which card was divided received two of said bars, and included assortments (2) together with various other pushcards for use in sale and distribution thereof by means of game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme and similar to that above described and varying therefrom in detail only—

Sold said assortments along with such pushcards to wholesalers, jobbers, and retailers, by whom, as direct or indirect purchasers thereof, they were exposed and sold to purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of, other means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products, in accordance with such plan as above set forth, involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure candy bars at prices much less than normal retail prices thereof or additional bars without additional cost, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said, or any, method involving game of chance or sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by his said sales plan or method employed in sale and distribution of his candy and in element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell his said product in preference to that of competitors who do not use same or equivalent method, and with result through use of said method and because of said game of chance of diverting unfairly trade in commerce to himself from his competitors aforesaid who do not use such methods:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr., for the Commission

McElreath, Scott, Duckworth & DuVall, of Atlanta, Ga., for respondent.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that R. L. Jackson, an individual trading as Capital City Candy Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent R. L. Jackson is an individual trading as Capital City Candy Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 506-508 Decatur Street, Southeast, in the city of Atlanta, Ga. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, said products when sold to be transported from his place of business in the city of Atlanta, Ga., to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, a course of trade by respondent in said candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is, and has been, in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment is composed of 42 bars of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a device commonly called a push card. The said push card has 40 partially perforated disks, on the face of which is printed the word "Push." Concealed within the said disks are numbers ranging from 1 to 5, inclusive. When the disks are pushed or separated from the card a number is disclosed. Purchasers punching numbers 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 pay 1¢, 2¢, 3¢, 4¢ and 5¢, respectively. The card is also divided into two sections, and the purchaser making the last push in each section receives two of said bars of candy. The numbers are effectively concealed.
from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the disks are pushed or separated from the card. The prices of said bars of candy are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent furnishes, and has furnished, various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of his candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such cards are similar to the one herein described and vary only in detail.

Par. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said candy, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of his candy and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure bars of candy at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof or additional bars of candy without additional cost. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his candy and in the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

merce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on April 17, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent R. L. Jackson, individually and trading as Capital City Candy Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On May 8, 1940, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts.
Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, R. L. Jackson is an individual trading as Capital City Candy Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 500-508 Decatur Street, Southeast, in the city of Atlanta, Ga. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, said products when sold to be transported from his place of business in the city of Atlanta, Ga., to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, a course of trade by respondent in said candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is, and has been, in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Findings

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment is composed of 42 bars of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a device commonly called a push card. The said push card has 40 partially perforated disks, on the face of which is printed the word "Push." Concealed within the said disks are numbers ranging from 1 to 5, inclusive. When the disks are pushed or separated from the card a number is disclosed. Purchasers punching numbers 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 pay 1¢, 2¢, 3¢, 4¢ and 5¢, respectively. The card is also divided into two sections, and the purchaser making the last push in each section receives two of said bars of candy. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the disks are pushed or separated from the card. The prices of said bars of candy are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent furnishes, and has furnished, various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of his candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such cards are similar to the one herein described and vary only in detail.

Par. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said candy, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove found. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of his candy and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure bars of candy at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof or additional bars of candy without additional cost. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his candy and in the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, R. L. Jackson, individually and trading as Capital City Candy Co., or trading under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing candy, or any other merchandise, so packed and assembled that sales of such candy, or other merchandise, to the general public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a lottery scheme, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others assortments of candy, or other merchandise, together with push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such candy, or other merchandise, to the general public.
3. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices, either with assortments of candy, or other merchandise, or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such candy, or other merchandise, to the general public;

4. Selling, or otherwise disposing of, any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
Where two individuals engaged, as case might be, under certain trade names, or otherwise, in sale and distribution to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia of a drug preparation advertised as "MAN'S PEP TONIC" and "MAN'S TONIC," and sold as "U. S. SPECIAL TABLETS," and another advertised as "MAN'S PEP TONIC" (Double Str. Capsule) and "MAN'S TONIC" (Double Str. Capsule), and sold as "SEXTOGEN CAPSULES FOR MEN OR WOMEN"; in advertisements of their said products which they disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails and through insertion in newspapers of general circulation, and by other means in commerce, and otherwise, and which were intended and likely to induce purchase of their said products in commerce—

(a) Represented, directly and by implication, among other things, that their said preparations were safe, competent, and scientific tonics and aphrodisiacs, and strengthened and rejuvenated the glands and sexual organs of man or woman, and that they possessed therapeutic value in the treatment of debility; facts being said products were practically without value as tonics in view of very small amounts therein contained of drugs possessed of tonic properties, and said products possessed no value for strengthening or rejuvenating glands or organs above referred to, or any therapeutic value in treatment of debility;

(b) Failed to reveal in said advertisements of their said products designated as "MAN'S PEP TONIC" or "MAN'S TONIC" and sold as "U. S. SPECIAL TABLETS" facts material in light of representations therein or material with respect to consequences which might result from use of commodity in question under conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, in that such product contained dangerous drugs extract of nux vomica, which, even in small doses, is dangerous to man, and yohimbine hydrochloride, very powerful drug and dangerous one, not officially recognized by United States Pharmacopoeia, the national formulary, and one which, affecting particularly mucous membranes of certain organs and having similar effect upon other epithelial structures of urogenital tract, may, in large doses, produce psychic disturbances and vertigo, together with cerebral congestion; and

(c) Failed to reveal in said advertisements of its product advertised as "MAN'S PEP TONIC" (Double Str. Capsule) and as "MAN'S TONIC" (Double Str. Capsule) and sold as "SEXTOGEN CAPSULES FOR MEN AND WOMEN" facts material in the light of its said representations or material with respect to consequences which might result from the use of said comodity under conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual in that said product above referred to contained,
Complaint

In addition to dangerous drugs extract of nux vomica and extract of yohim­bine, as above described, dangerous drug extract of thyroid which, taken in excess of the body's needs, may produce, among other things, headaches, muscular and articular pains, nausea, vomiting, vertigo, and other symptoms or ailments and may result, among other things, in permanent injury to tissues and organic functions and the entire body mechanism and in irreparable injury to heart muscles and premature death;

With effect, through use by them of such false and misleading statements, claims, representations, and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid with respect to their said products, of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false state­ments, etc., were true, and that their said preparations constituted effective, safe, and scientific tonics and aphrodisiacs, and effective, safe, and scientific treatments for strengthening and rejuvenating the glands and sexual organs of man or woman, and possessed therapeutic values in the treatment of debility, and to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase by the public of their said preparations:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. A. E. Lipscomb for the Commission.

Mr. Felix L. O'Neill, of Denver, Colo., for respondents.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Edwin L. Leisenring, an individual, trading as U. S. Drug & Sales Co., U. S. Drug Laboratories, and U. S. Drug Co., and Gordon Leisenring, an individual, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be to the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

U. S. Drug Co., 1534 Lawrence St.
By the use of the statements and representations heretofore set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of respondents' preparations and their effectiveness, respondents have represented, directly and by implication, among other things, that said preparations are safe, competent and reliable tonics; that said preparations are effective, safe and scientific aphrodisiacs; that said preparations are effective, safe and scientific treatments for strengthening and rejuvenating the glands and sexual organs of man or woman; and that said preparations possess therapeutic value in the treatment of debility.

Par. 3. The aforesaid statements and representations used and disseminated by the respondents in the manner above described are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue.

In truth and in fact said preparations are practically without value as tonics, as the drugs contained therein which possess tonic properties are present only in very small amounts and are not present in such amounts as to give said preparations any value as tonics. Said preparations possess no value for the strengthening or rejuvenating of the glands or the sexual organs of man or woman. Said preparations do not possess any therapeutic value in the treatment of debility.

Furthermore, said statements and representations concerning said drug preparations advertised as "MAN'S PEP TONIC" and as "MAN'S TONIC" and sold as "U. S. SPECIAL TABLETS" constitute false advertisements in that they fail to reveal the fact that said preparation contains the dangerous drugs, extract nux vomica and yohimbine hydrochloride, and fail to reveal facts material in the light of such representations or material with respect to consequences which may result from the use of said commodity under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions which are customary or usual.

The drug, extract of nux vomica, is a dangerous drug the active ingredient of which is the poisonous alkaloid strychnine. Said drug is, even when taken in small doses, dangerous to many users. Mild toxic symptoms following the use of said drug include nervous irritability and insomnia, whereas convulsions may result from a more severe intoxication.

The drug yohimbine hydrochloride is a dangerous drug not officially recognized by the United States Pharmacopoeia or The National Formulary. Its action depends upon intense vasodilation, or congestion affecting particularly the mucous membrane of the sexual organs and it would also have a similar effect upon other epithelial structures of the urogenital tract, including those of the kidney, prostate, and bladder. Said drug is a very powerful drug and in large doses yohimbine hydrochloride may produce psychic disturbances and vertigo, together with cerebral congestion.

Furthermore, said statements and representations concerning said drug preparation advertised as “MAN'S PEP TONIC” (Double Str. Capsule) and as “MAN'S TONIC” (Double Str. Capsule) and sold as “SEXTOGEN CAPSULES FOR MEN AND WOMEN” are misleading and deceptive in that they fail to reveal the fact that said preparation contains the dangerous drugs, extract nux vomica, yohimbine, and extract of thyroid, and fail to reveal facts material in the light of such representations or material with respect to consequences which may result from the use of said commodity under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions which are customary or usual.

In addition to the dangerous drugs, extract of nux vomica and extract of yohimbine described above, said preparation, “SEXTOGEN CAPSULES FOR MEN AND WOMEN,” contains the dangerous drug extract of thyroid. Extract of thyroid is a dangerous drug which, when taken in excess of the body's need, may produce headaches, muscular and articular pains, nausea, vomiting, vertigo, insomnia, physical exhaustion, tremor and tachycardia, and may result in a thyroid toxicosis, permanent injury to tissues, organic functions and the entire body mechanism, irreparable injury to the heart muscle with auricular fibrillation and premature death.

Par. 4. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, claims, representations, and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to respondents' said preparations, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, claims, representations, and advertisements are true and that said preparations are effective, safe, and scientific tonics; that said preparations are effective, safe, and scientific aphrodisiacs; that said preparations are effective, safe, and scientific treatments for strengthening and rejuvenating the glands and sexual organs of man or woman, and that said preparations possess therapeutic values in the treatment of debility, and to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase by the public or respondents' said preparations.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts or practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on March 8, 1940, issued, and on March 11, 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Edwin L. Leisenring, an individual, trading as U. S. Drug & Sales Co., U. S. Drug Laboratories, and U. S. Drug Co., and Gordon Leisenring, an individual, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On April 4, 1940, the respondents filed their answer, in which they admitted all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Edwin L. Leisenring is an individual with his office and principal place of business located at 1534 Lawrence Street, Denver, Colo.

Respondent Gordon Leisenring is an individual with his office and principal place of business located at 1534 Lawrence Street, Denver, Colo.

Par. 2. Respondents are now, and for several years past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of various medicinal preparations, including among others, a drug preparation advertised as "MAN'S PEP TONIC" and as "MAN'S TONIC," and sold as "U. S. SPECIAL TABLETS"; and a drug preparation advertised as "MAN'S PEP TONIC" (Double Str. Capsule) and as "MAN'S TONIC" (Double Str. Capsule), and sold as "SEXTOGEN CAPSULES FOR MEN OR WOMEN." Respondents cause said preparations when sold by them, to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of Colorado to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain and at all times herein mentioned have maintained, a course of trade in said preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements Concerning their said preparations, by United States mails, and by insertion in newspapers having a general circulation, all of which are distributed in commerce among the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said preparations, and have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their preparations, by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said preparations in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements, claims, and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, are the following:

"Man's Pep Tonic"

"Man's Tonic"

New improved formula with gland substance. Ext. Passion Flower, Damiana and other ingredients. Used by thousands, $1 box, 3 for $2.50. Double str. capsules, $2; 3 for $5. Postpaid. Plain wrap. Write or call U. S. Drug Co., 1534 Lawrence St."

"Man's Tonic"

New improved formula with gland substance. Iron, damiana and other tonic ingredients. Also for women, $1 box, 3 for $2.50. Double str. capsules, $2; 3 for $5. Postpaid. Plain wrap. Write or call. U. S. Drug Co., 1534 Lawrence St."

Par. 4. By the use of the statements and representations heretofore set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein all of which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of respondents' preparations and their effectiveness, respondents have represented, directly and by implication, among other things, that said preparations are safe, competent, and reliable tonics; that said preparations are effective, safe and scientific aphrodisiacs; that said preparations are effective, safe, and scientific treatments for strengthening and rejuvenating the glands and sexual organs of man or woman; and that said preparations possess therapeutic value in the treatment of debility.

Par. 5. The aforesaid statements and representations used and disseminated by the respondents in the manner above described are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue.
Findings

In truth and in fact said preparations are practically without value as tonics, as the drugs contained therein which possess tonic properties are present only in very small amounts and are not present in such amounts as to give said preparations any value as tonics. Said preparations possess no value for the strengthening or rejuvenating of the glands or the sexual organs of man or woman. Said preparations do not possess any therapeutic value in the treatment of debility.

Furthermore, said statements and representations concerning said drug preparation advertised as “MAN’S PEP TONIC” and as “MAN’S TONIC” and sold as “U. S. SPECIAL TABLETS” constitute false advertisements in that they fail to reveal the fact that said preparation contains the dangerous drugs, extract nux vomica, and yohimbine hydrochloride, and fail to reveal facts material in the light of such representations or material with respect to consequences which may result from the use of said commodity under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

The drug, extract of nux vomica, is a dangerous drug the active ingredient of which is the poisonous alkaloid strychnine. Said drug is, even when taken in small doses, dangerous to many users. Mild toxic symptoms following the use of said drug include nervous irritability and insomnia, whereas convulsions may result from a more severe intoxication.

The drug yohimbine hydrochloride is a dangerous drug not officially recognized by the United States Pharmacopoeia of The National Formulary. Its action depends upon intense vasodilation, or congestion affecting particularly the mucous membrane of the sexual organs and it would also have a similar effect upon other epithelial structures of the urogenital tract, including those of the kidney, prostate, and bladder. Said drug is a very powerful drug and in large doses yohimbine hydrochloride may produce psychic disturbances and vertigo, together with cerebral congestion.

Furthermore, said statements and representations concerning said drug preparation advertised as “MAN’S PEP TONIC” (Double Str. Capsule) and as “MAN’S TONIC” (Double Str. Capsule) and sold as “SEXTOGEN CAPSULES FOR MEN AND WOMEN” are misleading and deceptive in that they fail to reveal the fact that said preparation contains the dangerous drugs, extract nux vomica, yohimbine, and extract of thyroid, and fail to reveal facts material in the light of such representations or material with respect to consequences which may result from the use of said commodity under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.
In addition to the dangerous drugs, extract of nux vomica and extract of yohimbine described above, said preparation, "SEXTOGEN CAPSULES FOR MEN AND WOMEN," contains the dangerous drug extract of thyroid. Extract of thyroid is a dangerous drug which, when taken in excess of the body's need, may produce headaches, muscular and articular pains, nausea, vomiting, vertigo, insomnia, physical exhaustion, tremor and tachycardia, and may result in a thyroid toxicosis, permanent injury to tissues, organic functions and the entire body mechanism, irreparable injury to the heart muscle with auricular fibrillation and premature death.

Par. 6. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, claims, representations, and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to respondents' said preparations, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, claims, representations, and advertisements are true and that said preparations are effective, safe and scientific tonics; that said preparations are effective, safe, and scientific aphrodisiacs; that said preparations are effective, safe, and scientific treatments for strengthening and rejuvenating the glands and sexual organs of man or woman, and that said preparations possess therapeutic values in the treatment of debility, and to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase by the public of respondent's said preparations.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Edwin L. Leisenring, an individual, trading as U. S. Drug & Sales Co., U. S. Drug Laboratories, and U. S. Drug Co., or trading under any other name or names, and Gordon Leisenring, an individual, their respective agents, representatives and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of their medicinal preparations advertised as "Man's Pep Tonic" and as "Man's Tonic" and sold under the name "U. S. Special Tablets" or of their medicinal preparation advertised as "Man's Pep Tonic" (Double Str. Capsule) and as "Man's Tonic" (Double Str. Capsule) and sold under the name "Sextogen Capsules for Men and Women," or of any other medicinal preparations composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent, directly or through inference, that said preparations are safe, competent or reliable tonics; that said preparations are effective, safe, or scientific aphrodisiacs; that said preparations are safe or scientific treatments for strengthening or rejuvenating the glands or sexual organs of men or women; or that said preparations possess any value in the treatment of debility; or which advertisements fail to reveal that the use of said preparations may result in serious and irreparable injury to the health of the user.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 10 days after service upon them of this order file with the Commission an interim report in writing stating whether they intend to comply with this order and, if so, the manner and form in which they intend to comply; and that within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, said respondents shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

WILLIAM C. EVANS, TRADING AS EVANS CANDY HOUSE

Docket 4102. Complaint, Apr. 23, 1940—Decision, June 11, 1940

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of candy including assortments thereof which were so packed and assembled as to involve use of game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof, and included (1) a number of candy bars, together with push card for use in sale and distribution of said bars under a plan by which customer purchaser paid 1 cent, 2 cents, 3 cents, 4 cents, or 5 cents for bar, retail value of which was greater than many of the prices to be paid therefor, in accordance with number secured by chance from disk of card, and (2) various other assortments for distribution to consumers by methods involving lottery or chance features, similar to that hereinafore described and varying therefrom in detail only—

Sold to dealers such assortments and boards involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure candy bars at prices much less than normal retail prices thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws and in competition with many who are unwilling to offer and sell candy so packed and assembled as above described or candy arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With result that many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy were attracted by his said method and manner of packing same and by element of chance involved in sale thereof as above described, and were thereby induced to purchase said product, thus packed and sold by him, in preference to candy offered and sold by his said competitors, who do not use such or equivalent methods, and with tendency and capacity, through use of said method and because of such game of chance, to divert unfairly to himself, trade from his said competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods, exclude from candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and do not use such methods because unlawful, lessen competition in said trade and create monopoly thereof in him and such other distributions of candy as do use same or equivalent methods, and deprive purchasing public of benefit of free competition in trade in question, and to eliminate from said trade all actual, and exclude therefrom all potential, competitors who do not adopt and use said or equivalent methods:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.
Mr. C. D. Stewart, of Atlanta, Ga., for respondent.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said Act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that William C. Evans, individually and trading as Evans Candy House, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent William C. Evans is an individual trading under the name of Evans Candy House with his principal office and place of business located at 309 Marietta Street, Atlanta, Ga. Respondent is now, and for more than one year last past, has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of candy to dealers. Respondent causes, and has caused, his products when sold to be shipped or transported from his aforesaid principal place of business in the State of Georgia to purchasers thereof in various other States of the United States at their respective points of location. There is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in such candy in commerce between and among various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent is, and has been, in competition with other individuals and partnerships, and with corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells, and has sold, to dealers certain assortments of said candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when said candy is sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments consists of a number of bars of candy together with a device commonly called a push card. The said bars of candy are sold and distributed to the consumers thereof by means of said push cards in substantially the following manner:

Said push card contains a number of partially perforated disks with the word "Push" appearing on the face of each of said disks. Printed within each of said disks is either the number 1, 2, 3, 4, or 5. Each purchaser selects and removes one of said disks from the card, pays in cents the amount of the number contained in said disk, and receives a bar of said candy. Each of said bars of candy has a retail value greater than many of the prices to be paid therefor. The said numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the disks have been selected and removed from said card. The amounts to be paid for said bars of candy are thus determined wholly by lot or chance. The respondent sells and distributes various assortments of candy to be distributed to the consumers thereof by methods involving lot or chance features, but such assortments and the methods of sale thereof are similar to the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

Par. 3. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure bars of candy at prices much less than the normal retail prices thereof. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of candy and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws. The use by respondent of said methods has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or to create a monopoly in this, to wit: that the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same or equivalent methods involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale and sell candy so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 4. Many dealers in, and ultimate purchasers of, candy are attracted by respondent’s said methods and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent has a tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to unfairly divert to respondent trade from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to, and who do not, use the same or equivalent or similar methods because the same are unlawful, to lessen competition in said candy trade, to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or equivalent methods and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said methods by respondent has a tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said methods or equivalent methods.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on April 23, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent William C. Evans, individually and trading as Evans Candy House, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On May 17, 1940, the respondent filed his answer in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPHS 1. Respondent William C. Evans is an individual trading under the name of Evans Candy House with his principal office and place of business located at 309 Marietta Street, Atlanta, Ga. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of candy to dealers. Respondent causes, and has caused his products when sold to be shipped or transported from his aforesaid principal place of business in the State of Georgia to purchasers thereof in various other States of the United States at their respective points of location. There is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in such candy in commerce between and among various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent is, and has been, in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells, and has sold, to dealers certain assortments of said candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when said candy is sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments consists of a number of bars of candy together with a device commonly called a push card. The said bars of candy are sold and distributed to the consumers thereof by means of said push cards in substantially the following manner:

Said push card contains a number of partially perforated disks with the word “Push” appearing on the face of each of said disks. Printed within each of said disks is either the number 1, 2, 3, 4, or 5. Each purchaser selects and removes one of said disks from the card, pays in cents the amount of the number contained in said disks, and receives a bar of said candy. Each of said bars of candy has a retail value greater than many of the prices to be paid therefor. The said numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the disks have been selected and removed from said card. The amounts to be paid for said bars of candy are thus determined wholly by lot or chance. The respondent sells and distributes various assortments of candy to be distributed to the consumers thereof by methods involving lot or chance features, but such assortments and the methods of sale thereof are similar to the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure bars of candy at prices much less than the normal retail prices thereof. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of candy and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws. The use by respondent of said methods has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or to create a monopoly in this, to wit: that the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same or equivalent methods involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent, as above described, are unwilling to offer for sale and sell candy so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 4. Many dealers in, and ultimate purchasers of, candy are attracted by respondent’s said methods and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent has a tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to unfairly divert to respondent trade from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to, and who do not, use the same or equivalent or similar methods because the same are unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade; to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or equivalent methods; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said methods by respondent has a tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said methods or equivalent methods.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of the fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
It is ordered, That the respondent William C. Evans, individually and trading as Evans Candy House, or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing candy or any other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of said candy or other merchandise are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise,

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others assortments of candy or other merchandise together with push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said candy or any other merchandise to the public,

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices either with assortments of candy or other merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such candy or other merchandise to the public,

4. Selling or otherwise distributing any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon him of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
Where an individual engaged in manufacture of candy and in sale and distribution of certain assortments thereof, which were so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers, and included assortments of one dozen boxes of candy together with push or punch card for use of retailer in disposing thereof in accordance with said card's explanatory legend, under which amount paid by purchaser for box secured ranged from 1 cent to 47 cents or from 1 cent to 39 cents, depending on number secured by chance from card and on particular scheme employed;

Sold such assortments along with said push or punch cards to brokers, wholesalers, jobbers, department stores, and retail dealers, by whom, as direct or indirect purchasers, such assortments were exposed and sold to public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan involving game of chance or sale of a chance to secure box of candy at much less than normal retail price thereof, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his product in accordance with sales plan above set forth, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of its criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to offer and sell candy so packed and assembled as above described or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and refrained therefrom;

With result that many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy were attracted by his said method or manner of packing same and by element of chance involved in sale thereof as above described, and were thereby induced to purchase such candy so packed and sold by him in preference to that offered and sold by his competitors who do not use same or equivalent or similar method, and with tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to him trade and custom from his competitors who do not use any such method, to exclude from candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and do not use any such method because unlawful, to lessen competition in trade in question and create monopoly thereof in him, and such other distributors of candy as do use same or equivalent or similar method, and to deprive purchasing public of benefit of free competition in trade in question, and to eliminate from said trade all actual, and to exclude therefrom all potential, competitors who do not adopt and use said or equivalent or similar method:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. Charles P. Vicini and Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiners.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Warren Watkins, individually and trading as Square Deal Candy Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Warren Watkins, is an individual trading under the name of Square Deal Candy Co., with its principal office and place of business located at 768 Merchant Street, Los Angeles, Calif. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to dealers. Respondent causes and has caused his products, when sold, to be transported from his principal place of business in the city of Los Angeles, Calif., to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of California and in the District of Columbia at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments consists of a number of boxes of candy and a device commonly called a push card. Said boxes of candy are distributed to the purchasing public by means of a push card in the following manner: The push card contains a number of partially perforated disks. Within each of said disks is printed a number. The card bears statements informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that each purchaser will receive a box of candy. The prices of sales vary from 1 cent to 39 cents. The purchaser pays in cents the amount of the number pushed. Said boxes of candy are worth more than many of the prices to be paid therefor, but are received by the purchasers thereof for the sums indicated by the pushes from said card. Said numbers are effectively concealed from the purchasers and prospective purchasers until a purchase has been made and the disk separated from the push card. Whether or not a purchaser receives a box of candy of a value greatly in excess of the amount to be paid therefor is determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent manufactures, sells, and distributes various assortments of candy involving the lot or chance feature, but such assortments and the method of sale and distribution thereof are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

Par. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's candy directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting a lottery in the sale of his products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. Said sales plan has a tendency and capacity to induce purchasers of said candy to purchase respondent's candy in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by his competitors.

Par. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a box of candy at a price much less than the normal retail value thereof. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candy and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and which is in violation of criminal laws. The use by respondent of said method has a tendency unduly to hinder competition and to create a monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or equivalent or similar methods involving the same or equivalent elements of chance or lottery. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale and sell their products so packaged and assembled for sale as above alleged or otherwise arranged or packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to unfairly divert to respondent trade and custom from his competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, to exclude from the candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful, to lessen competition in the candy trade, to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and in such other distributors of candy as use the same or similar or equivalent methods, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use the same or equivalent methods.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 6, 1938, issued, and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent Warren Watkins, an individual, trading as the Square Deal Candy Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, no answer having been filed by the respondent, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by DeWitt T. Puckett, Esq., and Reuben J. Martin, Esq., attorneys for the Commission, before C. P. Vicini and John J. Keenan, trial examiners of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it. The respondent appeared in his own behalf. The said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, testimony, and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint, respondent not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Warren Watkins, doing business individually and as Square Deal Candy Co., with offices and principal place of business located at 768 Merchant Street, Los Angeles, Calif., has been for more than 4 years last past engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of candy to brokers, wholesalers, jobbers, department stores, etc.

Respondent causes, and has caused, his products, when sold to be shipped or transported from his aforementioned principal place of business in California to purchasers thereof in the State of California and in Arizona and in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is in competition with other individuals, and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in Paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to brokers, wholesalers, jobbers, department stores, etc., certain assortments of pound boxes of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. The said assortments are sold and distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner:

A push or punch card is packed with each dozen boxes of candy for use of the retail dealer in disposing of said candy. The said punch or push cards contain the following representations:

EVERY PUNCH WINS
1¢ TO 47¢
PAY WHAT YOU PUNCH
FROM 1¢ TO 47¢

NUMBERS OVER 47 PAY ONLY 47¢

EVERY PLAY RECEIVES
A FULL LB. BOX OF CHOCOLATES

REMEMBER
YOUR VALENTINE WITH A BRIGHT RED CANDY HEART

PAY WHAT YOU PULL
FROM 1¢ TO 39¢
NOTHING HIGHER

EVERY NUMBER GETS A HEART
The punch or push cards contain a number of partly perforated discs and on the face of each disc is printed the word "push." Within each of said discs is printed a number; said numbers run from 1 to 39, and 1 to 47, and indicate in cents the price to be paid by the consumer or the person pushing the disc. The said numbers printed within the said discs are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a push has been made and the disc separated or removed from said card. The fact as to whether a customer pays 1 cent or any price up to 39 cents, or 1 cent or any price up to 47 cents, is determined wholly by lot or chance.

Par. 3. Retail dealers who purchase these assortments of respondent directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. The respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. Said sales plan has the tendency and capacity to induce purchasers of candy to purchase respondent's product in preference to the candy offered for sale and sold by his competitors.

Par. 4. The sale of the said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to secure a box of candy at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his candy, and the sale of the candy by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of its criminal laws. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his products has the tendency unduly to hinder competition and to create a monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with respondent, as above found, are unwilling to offer for sale and sell candy so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 5. Many dealers in, and ultimate purchasers of, candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy
Offered for sale and sold by his competitors, who do not use the same or an equivalent or similar method. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from his competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent or similar method, to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent or similar method because the same is unlawful, to lessen competition in said candy trade, to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent or similar method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by respondent in the sale of his products has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use the said method or an equivalent or similar method.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Warren Watkins, individually and trading as Square Deal Candy Co., as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission (no answer having been filed by the respondent), testimony and other evidence taken before C. P. Vicini and John J. Keenan, trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint (respondent having offered no proof in opposition to the allegations of said complaint) brief filed by counsel for the Commission (respondent having filed no brief and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Warren Watkins, individually and trading as Square Deal Candy Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing candy or any other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of said candy or other merchandise are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others assortments of candy or other merchandise together with push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said candy or any other merchandise to the public.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices either with assortments of candy or other merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such candy or other merchandise to the public.

4. Selling or otherwise distributing any merchandise by means of a game or chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon him of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that General American Sales Corporation, a corporation, and David C. Baskin, Arnold Simon, and Faye Simon, individuals, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, General American Sales Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois with its principal office and place of business located at 32 West Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent David C. Baskin, an individual, is principal stockholder, President and a director of the corporate respondent. Respondents Arnold Simon and Faye Simon are individuals and are directors and officers of the corporate respondent. Respondents David C. Baskin, Arnold Simon, and Faye Simon formulate, control, and direct the practices and policies of the corporate respondent. All of the individual respondents have their offices at the same address as corporate respondent. Said respondents act together and in cooperation with each other in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged. Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of electric razors, cameras, radios, pencils, pen and pencil sets, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business aforesaid to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade by said respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are and have been in competition with other corporations and individuals, and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof respondents, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing their merchandise in commerce, as commerce is hereinabove described, furnish and have furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The method or sales plan adopted and used by respondents was and is substantially as follows:

Respondents distribute and have distributed to the purchasing public in commerce, as commerce is hereinabove described, certain literature and instructions including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, illustrations of their said products, and circulars explaining respondents plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards. One of respondents' push cards bears 63 feminine names with ruled columns on the reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 63 small partially perforated disks and on the face of each of said disks is printed one of the feminine names appearing alphabetically on the reverse side of the card. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. Such number indicates the amount to be paid by the person selecting the feminine name appearing under said disk. The push card also has a large master seal and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the reverse side of said card. The purchaser receiving the chance bearing the name corresponding to the name appearing under the master seal receives the merchandise offered as a prize. The name concealed under the master seal is not disclosed until after all chances have been sold. The push card bears legends or instructions as follows:

NAME UNDER SEAL RECEIVES

Numbers 31-41-51
Each receives a guaranteed

EVERSHARP PENCIL

Nos. 1 to 25 pay 1 to 25
Nos. over 25 pay only 25

The winner
Do not remove seal until all sold

Write your name opposite name you select on reverse side.

Numbers 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 are free

Sales of respondents' products by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above-described legends and instructions. Said prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legends and instructions. The said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lottery or chance.

Respondents furnish and have furnished various push cards, accompanied by said order blanks, instructions, and other printed matter, for use in the sale and distribution of their merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said push cards is the same as the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondents furnish the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondents' merchandise, in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said sales plan or method in the sale of their merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.
Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Thereafter, on the 10th day of April 1939, Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of said Commission, was designated and appointed to take testimony and receive evidence in said proceeding, which said testimony was reduced to writing and filed in the office of the Commission, together with numerous items of documentary evidence received as exhibits. No testimony was introduced on behalf of respondents.
Findings

Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the testimony and other evidence adduced at the hearing and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent General American Sales Corporation is an Illinois corporation, organized and doing business under the laws of said State, with its principal office and place of business located at 32 West Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondents David C. Baskin, Arnold Simon, and Faye Simon are respectively president, secretary, and treasurer of the corporate respondent; all of said respondents have their principal office and place of business at the same address as the respondent corporation.

There is not sufficient evidence in the record to support the allegations of the complaint as against Arnold Simon and Faye Simon, individually and as officers of the corporate respondent. In view of this, the findings of fact hereinafter set out will refer only to the acts and practices of the respondents General American Sales Corporation and David C. Baskin. The respondent David C. Baskin, an individual, is president, general manager, and director, and owner of 98 shares of the hundred shares of stock of the General American Sales Corporation outstanding and is in charge of the active management of the corporate respondent. The respondents General American Sales Corporation and David C. Baskin act together and in cooperation with each other in doing the acts and things herein found.

Paragraph 2. Respondents, for more than 1 year last past have been engaged in the business of offering for sale and selling electric razors, cameras, radios, pencils, pencil sets, and other articles of merchandise, in commerce, to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States. Respondents have caused said merchandise, when sold, to be shipped or transported from their said place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers, at their respective points of location, in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois, and there has been, for more than 1 year last past, a course of trade in said merchandise by respondents, in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of their business respondents are in competition with individuals, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. Respondents, General American Sales Corporation and David C. Baskin, in the course and conduct of their business, furnish and have furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, by which said merchandise was and is distributed to the ultimate consumer thereof wholly by lot or chance. Respondents cause and have caused to be distributed to the purchasing public, as aforesaid, certain advertising literature, including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, and advertisements which contain illustrations of said merchandise and explain respondents' plan or method of selling and distributing such merchandise and allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards. One of said push cards contains 63 partially perforated disks, and when a punch or push is made on any one of said disks it is separated from the card, disclosing a number. There are as many different numbers as there are disks on the cards, but these numbers are varied or assorted and are not arranged in numerical sequence, and they are effectively concealed within said disks from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection is made and a disk pushed or separated from the card. The charge for making a punch varies and depends upon the number revealed when the disk is punched. On the disks with numbers from 1 to 25, the purchaser pays for each disk pushed, the amount of the number thus disclosed, in cents. For all numbers over 25 only 25 cents is paid for each, and for the numbers 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, and 16, the pushes are made without cost to the persons making them. Directly below each disk is printed a girl's name, each differing from the others; on the reverse of said push card is a list of all the feminine names printed below the disks, and opposite each name in said list is a space prepared for recording the name of the purchaser following the girl's name corresponding to the one under the disk punched. Said push card also has a master seal which, when removed, exposes a girl's name corresponding to one of the names appearing below said disks. The persons whose pushes disclosed the numbers 31, 41, and 51 are entitled to and do receive without additional cost, a guaranteed Eversharp Pencil, and the person who has selected the name which corresponds to the name hidden within the master seal is entitled to receive, and does receive, without additional cost, the capital prize such as a Spartus Candid Camera. The name under the master seal is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until all the disks have been pushed and their numbers revealed; then the master seal is removed from the card and the winning name disclosed. Persons who have selected names other than the name which appears under the master seal, and who obtained numbers other than the numbers 31, 41, and 51, receive nothing for the money they have paid. Each of said articles of merchandise is of greater value than the cost of pushing any one disk on said card. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives any article of merchandise, or anything, for the amount of money paid, or which of said articles of merchandise, if any, the purchaser does receive, or whether the purchaser receives an article of merchandise without cost, are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Said respondents sell and distribute various assortments of merchandise and furnish various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of their said merchandise by means of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes.

PAR. 4. The persons to whom respondents have furnished or supplied such devices have used the same in selling or distributing respondents’ merchandise in accordance with said sales plan or method. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale and distribution of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan or method as hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said method in the sale and distribution of their merchandise, and the distribution of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of such method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal statutes.

PAR. 5. The sale or distribution of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance, or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise without cost, or at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, partnerships, and corporations sell and distribute merchandise in commerce, in competition with respondents, as above described, who are unwilling to adopt such method or any method involving the element of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method which is contrary to public policy, and said competitors have refrained therefrom.

The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade and custom to said respondents from said competitors who are unwilling to use, and who do not use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, General American Sales Corporation and David C. Baskin, as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent General American Sales Corporation, a corporation, its officers, and the respondent David C. Baskin, individually and as president and director of General American Sales Corporation, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of electric razors, cameras, radios, pencils, pen and pencil sets, and other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others any merchandise together with punch boards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices, which said punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such merchandise to the public.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices, either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing any merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That the respondents General American Sales Corporation and David C. Baskin shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That this proceeding be, and the same hereby is, closed as to the respondents Arnold Simon and Faye Simon without prejudice to the right of the Commission to reopen the same and resume proceedings in the case in accordance with the Commission's regular procedure should future facts so warrant.
In the Matter of

LENOIR WOODFINISHING COMPANY, INC., AND ARTHUR G. SPENCER, TRADING AS LENOIR SOLVENT COMPANY

MODIFIED CEASE AND DESIST ORDER

Docket 4048. Order, June 18, 1940

Order modifying prior order to cease and desist, made as of April 17, 1940, 30 F. T. C. 1027, 1032, in certain respects, so as to require respondent company, its officers, etc., and respondent individual, in his individual capacity and trading as hereinafter set forth, and their representatives, etc., in connection with offer of paints, etc., in commerce, to cease and desist from giving sums of money or other things of value to officials or employees of respondents' customers or prospective customers, without their knowledge or consent, as inducements to purchase or recommend respondents' said materials, or as payments for having done so, as in order below specifically set forth.

Mr. Gerard A. Rault for the Commission.
Mr. Don A. Walser, of Lexington, N. C., for respondents.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the motion of the Commission’s Chief Counsel that the order to cease and desist issued herein on April 17, 1940 be modified in certain respects specifically detailed in said motion, and it appearing that on May 23, 1940, the Commission ordered the respondents herein, within 10 days from the service upon them of a copy of said motion, to show cause why the order to cease and desist heretofore entered should not be modified as specified in said motion, and it further appearing that a copy of said order to show cause and said motion was served on the respondents herein on May 25 and 27, 1940, respectively, and it further appearing that respondents have failed to show cause within the 10-day period provided for why the motion of the Commission’s Chief Counsel should not be granted, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises;

It is ordered, That the respondents, Lenoir Woodfinishing Co., Inc., its officers, and Arthur G. Spencer, individually and trading as Lenoir Solvent Co., and their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of their paints, varnishes, stains, thinners, sealers, and other wood finishing products, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do cease and desist from giving, or offering to give, sums of money, or other things of value to officials or employees of respondents' customers, or prospective customers, without the knowledge or consent of said customers, for the purpose of inducing said officials or employees to purchase respondents' wood finishing materials for use by their employers or to recommend the purchase of the same by their employers, or as payments to said officials or employees for having induced the purchase or recommended the use of respondents' products by their employers.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall within 60 days after service upon them of this modified order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this modified order.
IN THE MATTER OF

MARVIN ALAN KOOLISH, TRADING AS CROWN DISTRIBUTING COMPANY AND CROWN SALES COMPANY

Docket 4041. Complaint, Feb. 28, 1940—Decision, June 18, 1940

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of radios, cameras, pen and pencil sets, and other articles of merchandise to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of like and similar articles of merchandise in commerce as aforesaid; in soliciting sale of and in selling and distributing his merchandise—

Furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involved operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes in sale and distribution to ultimate consumers of products in question, and distribution to purchasing public of certain literature and instructions including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, illustrations of his said merchandise, and circulars explaining his plan of selling same and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to operators of such push cards and to purchasing and consuming public, through use (1) of push cards under plan and in accordance with card's explanatory legend by which customer or purchaser selecting by chance from list of feminine names displayed on card name corresponding to that concealed under card's master seal, received specified candid camera, with roll of film, or article of merchandise being thus disposed of, and person securing by chance from numbers concealed in disks under said feminine names certain number received pen and pencil combination, and amount paid for such chances was dependent upon numbers secured by chance as announced, or through use of (2) various other push cards accompanied by order blanks, instructions and other printed matter for use in sale and distribution of merchandise by means of game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme and sales plan or method similar to that hereinabove described and varying therefrom in detail only; and

Supplied thereby to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with sales plan hereinabove set forth by persons to whom he furnished said push cards for use in purchasing, selling, and distributing his said products and who made use thereof in so doing in accordance with said plan, under which fact as to whether purchaser received article of merchandise or nothing for amount of money paid, and which of said articles of merchandise, if any, purchaser was to receive was thus determined wholly by lot or chance, and involving game of chance, or sale of a chance, to procure one of said articles at a price much less than normal retail price thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said or any method involving a game of chance or a sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;
With result that many persons were attracted by said sales plan or method employed by him in sale and distribution of his merchandise and by element of chance involved therein and were thereby induced to buy and sell same in preference to that offered and sold by said competitors who do not use such or equivalent method, and with result, through use of such method and because of said game of chance, of diverting unfairly trade in commerce to him from his competitors aforesaid who do not use such or equivalent method:

_Held_, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

_Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr._ for the Commission.

_Nash & Donnelly_, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Marvin Alan Koolish, individually and trading as Crown Distributing Co. and Crown Sales Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Marvin Alan Koolish is an individual trading as Crown Distributing Co. and the Crown Sales Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 8742 Holloway Drive, Los Angeles, Calif. The respondent is now and for more than 10 months last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of radios, cameras, pen and pencil sets, and other articles of merchandise. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of California to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various States of the United States other than California and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 10 months last past a course of trade by respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing his merchandise, furnishes and has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumer thereof. The method or sales plan adopted and used by respondent is substantially as follows:

Respondent distributes and has distributed to operators and the purchasing public certain literature and instructions, including among other things push cards, order blanks, illustrations of his said merchandise and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards and to the purchasing and consuming public. One of respondent's push cards bears 15 feminine names with ruled columns on the reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 15 partially perforated disks on the face of which is printed the word "push." Each of such disks is set over one of the aforementioned feminine names. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed only when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal, and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the face of said card. The person selecting the feminine name corresponding to the one under the master seal receives a camera. The person selecting a certain designated number set out in the legend at the top of said card also receives a pen and pencil set. The push card bears a legend or instructions as follows:

WITH ROLL OF FILM

No. 19 Receives a Pen & Pencil Combination
No. 1 pays 1¢; No. 19 pays 19¢;
No. 27 pays 27¢; No. 29 pays 29¢;
All others pay 29¢. NONE HIGHER.

Sales of respondent's merchandise by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above-described legend or instructions. Said prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above-described legend or instructions. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives an article of merchandise or nothing for the amount of money paid, and which of said articles of merchandise the purchaser is to receive, if any, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes and has furnished various other push cards accompanied by order blanks, instructions and other printed matter for use in the sale and distribution of his merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said other push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes, and has furnished, the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure one of the said articles of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Findings

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on February 28, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Marvin Alan Koolish, individually and trading as Crown Distributing Co. and Crown Sales Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On May 20, 1940, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegation of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent Marvin Alan Koolish is an individual trading as Crown Distributing Co. and Crown Sales Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 8742 Holloway Drive, Los Angeles, Calif. The respondent is now and for more than 10 months last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of radios, cameras, pen and pencil sets, and other articles of merchandise. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of California to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various States of the United States other than California and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 10 months last past a course of trade by respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing his merchandise, furnishes and has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumer thereof. The method or sales plan adopted and used by respondent is substantially as follows:

Respondent distributes and has distributed to operators and the purchasing public certain literature and instructions, including among other things push cards, order blanks, illustrations of his said merchandise, and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards and to the purchasing and consuming public. One of respondent's push cards bears 15 feminine names with ruled columns on the reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 15 partially perforated disks on the face of which is printed the word "push." Each of such disks is set over one of the aforesaid feminine names. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed only when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal, and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the face of said card. The person selecting the feminine name corresponding to the one under the master seal receives a camera. The person selecting a certain designated number set out in the legend at the top of said card also receives a pen and pencil set. The push card bears a legend or instructions as follows:

No. 19 Receives a Pen & Pencil Combination
No. 1 pays 1¢; No. 19 pays 19¢;
No. 27 pays 27¢; No. 29 pays 29¢;
All others pay 29¢. NONE HIGHER.

Sales of respondent's merchandise by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above-described legend or instructions. Said prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above-described legend or instructions.
fact as to whether a purchaser receives an article of merchandise or nothing for the amount of money paid, and which of said articles of merchandise the purchaser is to receive, if any, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes and has furnished various other push cards accompanied by order blanks, instructions and other printed matter for use in the sale and distribution of his merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said other push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes, and has furnished, the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of others, the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure one of the said articles of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.
CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Marvin Alan Koolish, individually and trading as Crown Distributing Co. and Crown Sales Co., or trading under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of radios, cameras, and pen and pencil sets, or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others any merchandise together with punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such merchandise to the public.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices, either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

FRANK SPORS, TRADING AS SPORS COMPANY

Docket 3165. Complaint, June 29, 1937—Decision, June 19, 1940

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of drugs, cosmetics, foods, and other merchandise, including household notions and other novelties, to dealers, specialty salesmen, house-to-house peddlers and others in various other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of similar merchandise in commerce, as aforesaid, and, as thus engaged, in soliciting through advertisements in various periodicals and specialty magazines prospective agents and salesmen to apply for copies of his catalog, and in forwarding to those requesting it such copies, containing descriptions and prices of some four thousand items sold by him, and also in sending therewith leaflets and circulars describing other items—

(a) Represented that he manufactured or imported all or a major portion of the products sold by him through use of legend “Wholesale Importers and Manufacturers,” set forth without further qualification on his catalogs and in some of the other advertising material above referred to, and that his business was larger than was the fact, through depiction on said catalogs of what purported to be building housing his said business;

Facts being that major portion of articles sold by him was purchased in domestic open market, and volume of business in certain items which he did make constituted not more than 15 percent of his total volume of business, nearly all of his items were of domestic rather than foreign origin, and structure which housed his business was building with only basement and first floor rather than two stories depicted in advertising material referred to, and his concern or business was not a manufacturing or importing one, and one doing large volume of business, and one for dealing with which, as such, there is preference on part of substantial portion of purchasing public as offering, in their belief, lower prices, superior quality, and other advantages; and

(b) Sold and distributed various devices, assortments, and plans of merchandising which involved operation of gift enterprises, gaming devices, or lottery schemes in sale and distribution of merchandise to ultimate consumers and included various pull cards, punchboards, push cards, and sale boards for use in sale and delivery to purchasing public, in accordance with method suggested, of specified articles of merchandise wholly by lot or chance and, among others, assortments of number of articles, together with push cards, for use in sale and distribution of said articles and in accordance with card’s explanatory legend, by which those securing by chance, for 2 cents paid, or nothing, depending on number punched, received a table lighter and certain other numbers became entitled to Scotty Dog Novelty, and last punch on card also received such a lighter, and which included also various other assortments, together with which it supplied such boards and devices for use in sale thereof and involving sales plans or methods similar to that above described and varying therefrom in detail only; and—

Supplied thereby to and placed in hands of others means of conducting lotteries in sale of his merchandise in accordance with such sales plans or methods above described by retailers and peddlers who, as direct or indirect purchasers of his said products, sold same to purchasing public in accordance with such plans or methods involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure article of merchandise at price much less than normal retail price thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt in sale of their goods such or any methods contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With effect of causing substantial portion of purchasing public to buy his merchandise in preference to that of his competitors and with result that substantial trade was diverted to him from competitors in commerce;

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, trial examiner.

Mr. Merle P. Lyon for the Commission.

Mr. Edwin C. Kraus and Mr. George T. Havel, of Le Center, Minn., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Frank Spors, an individual, trading as Spors Co., has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as “commerce” is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Frank Spors, is an individual having his principal office and place of business in the city of Le Center, State of Minnesota. He has been for more than 1 year last past engaged in the sale and distribution of cosmetics, perfumes, manicure sets, mercurochrome, shaving creams, thread, tape measures, can openers, egg beaters, knife sharpeners, and general line of drug sundries and household notions to retail dealers and peddlers purchasing for resale, and also to the public direct. In the course and conduct of his business he offers said products for sale and sells the same in commerce between the State of Minnesota and the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia.
Complaint

PAR. 2. When said products are sold respondent transports or causes them to be transported from his place of business in the State of Minnesota to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of Minnesota and in the District of Columbia.

There has been for more than 1 year last past and there still is a constant current of trade and commerce in said products so sold by respondent between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in substantial competition with other individuals and firms, partnerships, and corporations, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of like and similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. Respondent in soliciting the sale and in the selling of his products and for the purpose of creating a demand on the part of the consuming public, has advertised his products through the media of newspaper and magazine advertisements, catalogs, price lists, and other printed matter, all of which are published, issued, and circulated through the United States mails to his customers and prospective customers in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. In the aforesaid ways and by the aforesaid means respondent makes, and has made, to the general public false and misleading statements with reference to the commodities offered for sale by him. Many articles and items of merchandise listed in said catalogs, price lists, and in newspaper and magazine advertisements, are described as possessing retail values and prices greatly in excess of the actual selling prices of respondent to retailers or other purchasers, and greatly in excess of the actual retail values or prices thereof. A number of the said items and articles of merchandise described in the aforesaid advertisements, catalogs, and price lists have retail prices stamped or printed on the labels attached thereto or on the containers in which they are offered for sale and sold to the public.

PAR. 6. Representative of such statements and representations referred to in paragraph 5, made by the respondent on the containers regarding the selling price and value of the commodities offered for sale by him are the following:

"William A. Woodbury Milk of Magnesia Dental Cream—Selling Price 50¢" whereas this article is sold to purchasers for use and to peddlers and retailers purchasing for resale for 13¢ per unit.
"Super-pure Palm and Olive Oil Shaving Cream—Selling Price 25¢," whereas this article is sold to purchasers for use and to peddlers and retailers purchasing for resale for 8¢ per unit.

"Pine Tar Soap—Selling Price per package 15¢," whereas this article is sold to purchasers for use and to peddlers and retailers purchasing for resale for 8¢ per package.

"Cedo Pad—Selling Price 10¢," whereas this article is sold to purchasers for use and to peddlers and retailers purchasing for resale for 4¢ per unit.

"Zipper Billfold—Selling Price 95¢," whereas this article is sold to purchasers for use and to peddlers and retailers purchasing for resale for 45¢ per unit.

"Lever Style Self Filling Fountain Pen—Selling Price 50¢," whereas this article is sold to purchasers for use and to peddlers and retailers purchasing for resale for 26¢ per unit.

"Baby Calculator—Selling Price 98¢," whereas this article is sold to purchasers for use and to peddlers and retailers purchasing for resale for 49¢ per unit.

"Utility Cake Turner—Selling Price 15¢," whereas this article is sold to purchasers for use and to peddlers and retailers purchasing for resale for 7¢ per unit.

"New Dunbar Duplex Razor and Blade Set—Selling Price 25¢," whereas this article is sold to purchasers for use and to peddlers and retailers purchasing for resale for 9¢ per unit.

"Prophyson Tooth Brushes—Selling Price 15¢," whereas this article is sold to purchasers for use and to peddlers and retailers purchasing for resale for 7¢ per unit.

"The Little Scientist Microscope Set—Selling Price 95¢," whereas this article is sold to purchasers for use and to peddlers and retailers purchasing for resale for 39¢ per unit.

"Deluxe Two-way Stretch Combination Girdle and Brassiere—Selling Price $1.25," whereas this article is sold to purchasers for use and to peddlers and retailers purchasing for resale for 79¢.

"Mother of Pearl Cross—Selling Price 50¢," whereas this article is sold to purchasers for use and to peddlers and retailers purchasing for resale for 39¢.

"Ear Drops Made of Imitation Pearls—Selling Price 10¢," whereas this article is sold to purchasers for use and to peddlers and retailers purchasing for resale for 5¢.

"Baby Pearl Necklaces—Selling Price 10¢," whereas this article is sold to purchasers for use and to peddlers and retailers purchasing for resale for 5¢.

"Three-Strand Imitation Pearl Necklaces—Selling Price 60¢," whereas this article is sold to purchasers for use and to peddlers and retailers purchasing for resale for 25¢.

"Imitation Vanilla Flavor—Selling Price 75¢," whereas this article is sold to purchasers for use and to peddlers and retailers purchasing for resale for 19¢.

Par. 7. Said catalogs of respondent contain representations relative to several hundred other articles of various kinds and descriptions where fictitious retail prices are imprinted upon the labels or cartons thereof.

Par. 8. Over a period of many years manufacturers in many trades have adopted and followed the custom of marking or stamping on the article or item of manufacture or on the container thereof the retail price at which the said manufacturers suggest that the retailer should sell the item or article to the ultimate consumer.

This suggested retail price so stamped or marked is intended to represent the cost of the manufacture of the article, plus a reasonable profit for the manufacturer and the retailer and, consequently, to represent the approximate retail sale value of the item. The public generally understands this custom and has been led to, and does, place its confidence in the price markings so stamped and the representations so made as to the quality of the product to the extent that it purchases a substantial volume of merchandise in reliance on this aforesaid custom.

Par. 9. For many years a substantial portion of the consuming public has had, and has expressed, a marked preference for cosmetics, perfumes, manicure sets, mercurochrome, shaving creams, thread, tape measures, can openers, egg beaters, knife sharpeners, and general line of drug sundries and household notions which are composed of superior ingredients or materials, and which are produced by the manufacturer thereof with the intent and design of selling said products for prices in excess of the general and usual range of prices for similar products, or for products made of inferior ingredients or materials. Said manufacturers, following the custom herein detailed, have marked or stamped the suggested retail price on said products as indicating the superior quality and character of the product and its higher value.

Par. 10. Whenever a genuinely superior product so stamped or marked with the retail price thereon is offered for sale at a substantially reduced price, the general purchasing public is led to believe, and does believe, that in purchasing said product it is securing a bargain not ordinarily obtainable in the usual course of trade. The purchasing public has a preference for purchasing genuinely superior products sold at less than the customary retail price thereof over ordinary products sold for their regular price, which is lower than the normal retail value of the superior product in the customary course of trade.

Par. 11. The retail prices so stamped or printed as aforesaid upon respondent's products are greatly in excess of the actual selling price of the said items or articles of merchandise by the retailer to the consuming public, and are in excess of their true and actual values. The retail prices so stamped or printed as aforesaid are false and fictitious and in no sense represent either the true value or the true selling price of the articles so price marked.
PAR. 12. The respondent in soliciting the sale and in the selling of his products, and for the purpose of creating a demand on the part of the consuming public for such products, now causes, and for more than 1 year last past has caused, himself to be represented through his letterheads, circulars, order blanks, and general business stationery, and by pictorial representations of his place of business as an importer and manufacturer of the goods, wares, and merchandise herein set out.

PAR. 13. The respondent further represents, through the use of an exaggerated pictorial representation of his place of business appearing in his catalogs as well as pictorial representations of the alleged various departments of his place of business, that his business is larger and more extensive than is actually the fact.

PAR. 14. A substantial portion of the purchasing public has shown a marked preference for dealing with and purchasing items of merchandise from manufacturers and importers and those who operate on a large scale and do a large volume of business, believing that superior quality, lower prices, and other advantages can be secured by dealing with such manufacturers and importers.

PAR. 15. In truth and in fact, the respondent is not a manufacturer, importer, or a large scale operator.

PAR. 16. The false and misleading advertising and representations hereinabove set out, together with the false and fictitious price markings herein set out on the part of the respondent in the hands of the aforesaid peddlers and retailers buying for resale, an instrument and a means whereby said peddlers and retailers may commit a fraud upon a substantial portion of the consuming public by enabling such dealers to represent, and offer for sale, and sell, the various wares and merchandise herein referred to as genuinely superior products produced by the manufacturers thereof, with the intent and purpose of selling the said products in the usual course of trade to the general consuming public at and for the retail price stamped on the products or their containers.

PAR. 17. There are among the competitors of the respondent in commerce as herein defined manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who truthfully advertise and represent the nature, merit, value and price of their respective products. There are also among the competitors of respondent manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who do not advertise or represent through fictitious price marks affixed to said merchandise which greatly exceed the actual intended retail sale value or retail sale price of the merchandise offered for sale that said merchandise has a value or price greater than it actually possesses.
PAR. 18. There are also among the competitors of the respondent distributors of like and similar products who do not advertise or represent themselves to be manufacturers and importers, or that they are large scale operators.

PAR. 19. In the course and conduct of his business as hereinbefore described, the respondent in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing his merchandise, has furnished and does furnish various devices and plans of merchandising which involve or which are designed to involve the operation of gift enterprises, gaming devices, or lottery schemes in the sale and distribution of such merchandise to the ultimate consumer thereof. Said devices or plans of merchandising consist of various pull cards, punchboards, push cards, and sales boards, the use of which in connection with the sale and delivery to the purchasing public by the method or plan suggested by respondent, involves the sale or distribution of specified articles of merchandise wholly by lot or chance.

The assortment consists of a number of Scotty Dog novelties together with two cigarette table lighters and one 200-sale push card. Sales by means of said card are 2 cents each, and when a push or selection has been made a number is disclosed. There are 200 pushes and the numbers run from 1 to 200, but are not arranged in numerical sequence. The card bears legends or statements as follows:

ONLY 2C

A CHANCE

NO. 95 RECEIVES $1.00

TABLE LIGHTER

Nos. 1 to 10 Pay Nothing

Nos. 20-30-40-50-60-70-80-90-100
120-130-140-150-170-180-190

Receive a Scotty Dog Novelty

---

Last punch on card receives

The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the number separated from the card. The merchandise is distributed to the consuming public in accordance with the legends printed on said card.
The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one of the articles of merchandise or nothing other than the privilege of punching a number from said card for the price of 2 cents is thus determined wholly by lot or chance. The fact as to whether a person pays 2 cents for a chance or receives the same free of charge is also determined wholly by lot or chance. The normal retail value of the merchandise does not exceed the total cost of all the chances on said card, but each of the articles of merchandise is worth more than 2 cents or the price of a single punch.

The purchasing public are thus persuaded and induced into purchasing a push from said card in the hope of obtaining one of the articles of merchandise for the price of 2 cents.

The various pull cards, punch boards, push cards, and sales boards furnished by the respondent with various assortments of merchandise involve the same plan or principle as that described immediately above, but vary in detail and vary in the assortments of merchandise distributed.

Par. 20. The retailers and peddlers to whom respondent sells his merchandise resell the same to the purchasing public. The respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the plan of operation hereinabove set forth. The said plan of operation has the tendency and capacity of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said merchandise in preference to like or similar merchandise offered for sale and sold by his competitors.

Par. 21. The sale and distribution of merchandise to the purchasing public as above alleged involve a game of chance, or the sale of chance, to procure such articles of merchandise in the manner alleged.

The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of his merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of such methods, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to the established public policy of the United States Government.

Par. 22. Many individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent as above alleged are unwilling to offer for sale, or to sell, merchandise by any method involving a game of chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain from so doing.

Par. 23. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of merchandise as distributed by respondent are attracted by respondent's said methods or sales plans and by the element of chance involved in the sale.
or purchase thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said merchandise of respondent in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

The use of said methods or sales plans by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to and does divert to respondent trade from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from said trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful; to lessen competition in said trade and to tend to create a monopoly of said trade in respondent, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said trade.

As a result thereof, injury has been, and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 24. The effect of the foregoing false and misleading representations and acts of the respondent in selling and offering for sale such items of merchandise as hereinabove referred to is to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public in the several States of the United States by inducing them to mistakenly and erroneously believe that:

1. The various items of merchandise described in respondent's catalogs and other advertising media were and are of superior value and were and are sold and distributed by respondent with the intent and purpose that said products should be sold at retail prices closely approximating the prices stamped thereon.
2. The said products, because of the price marks affixed or stamped thereon, are composed of superior ingredients and are products which ordinarily retail in the usual course of trade for prices closely approximating the prices stamped on the merchandise.
3. The respondent is a manufacturer.
4. The respondent is an importer.
5. The respondent is a large-scale operator and distributor.

Par. 25. The foregoing false and misleading statements and representations on the part of respondent have induced and still induce a substantial number of retailers and peddlers as well as consumer purchasers of said products to buy the products offered for sale, sold, and distributed by respondent on account of the aforesaid erroneous and mistaken beliefs. As a result thereof trade has been unfairly diverted from competitors of respondent engaged in similar businesses who do not engage in similar practices. As a consequence thereof substantial injury has been and is being done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 26. The aforementioned methods, acts, and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of section 5 of an act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on June 29, 1937, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent Frank Spors, trading as Spors Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Respondent entered an appearance and filed an answer to the complaint, and thereafter, beginning on May 31, 1938, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by George Foulkes and R. A. McOuat, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Edwin C. Kraus and George F. Havel, attorneys for the respondent, before A. F. Thomas, trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, which testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Frank Spors, is an individual trading under the name of Spors Co. and having his principal place of business located in Le Center, Minn. He is now and for many years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of drugs, cosmetics, foods, and other merchandise, including household notions and other novelties, to dealers, specialty salesmen, house-to-house peddlers, and others. Respondent causes his said merchandisse, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Minnesota to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in his said merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

The respondent has been and is in substantial competition with other individuals, and with corporations and firms also engaged in the sale and distribution of similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, and for the purpose of creating a demand for his product and inducing the purchase thereof, the respondent causes advertisements to be inserted in various periodicals and specialty magazines, in which advertisements the respondent solicits prospective agents and salesmen to apply for a copy of his catalogue. To those requesting it, the respondent forwards a copy of his catalogue, which contains descriptions and prices of approximately 4,000 items of merchandise sold by the respondent. Along with the catalogue the respondent sends leaflets and circulars describing other items in the respondent's stock. Respondent's catalogues and some of the other advertising material bear, in connection with respondent's trade name and in large and conspicuous type, the legend "Wholesale Importers and Manufacturers." Such catalogues carry also a picture of what purported to be the building in which respondent's business is housed, the building being portrayed as a two-story building of large dimensions.

Par. 3. The Commission finds that the use by the respondent of the legend, "Wholesale Importers and Manufacturers" in connection with his trade name, and without any accompanying words to limit the application of such legend, serves as a representation to the public that respondent manufacturers or imports all or a major portion of the products sold by him.

The major portion of the articles sold by respondent is purchased by him in the domestic open market and is not manufactured by him. Respondent does, however, manufacture a cement and a few novelty items, including cigar lighters and stocking darters. He also mixes certain extracts and fruit nectars. Respondent's volume of business in the items manufactured by him constitutes not more than 15 percent, of his total volume of business. Nearly all of respondent's items of merchandise are of domestic rather than foreign origin, the only items imported being certain novelty items and a small quantity of reproduction pearls.

Par. 4. The Commission further finds that the pictorial representation of respondent's purported place of business as a two-story building of large dimensions serves as a representation to the public that respondent's business is much larger than is the fact. The structure which houses respondent's business is, in fact, a building 105 feet by 105 feet and having only a basement and first floor, rather than the two stories depicted in respondent's advertising material.

Par. 5. There is a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for dealing with business concerns which manufacture or import their products and which do a large volume of business, such portion of the public believing that by dealing with such concerns lower prices, superior quality and other advantages may be obtained. In judging the volume of business done by a concern, the public is influenced by the size of the building in which the concern is housed.

Par. 6. Among the many items offered for sale by respondent and described in said catalogue, are various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of gift enterprises, gaming devices, or lottery schemes in the sale and distribution of merchandise to the ultimate consumer thereof. Said devices or plans of merchandising consist of various pull cards, punchboards, push cards, and sale boards, the use of which in connection with the sale and delivery to the purchasing public, by the method or plan suggested by respondent, involves the sale or distribution of specified articles of merchandise wholly by lot or chance. One of respondent's assortments consists of a number of articles of merchandise, together with a device commonly known as a push card. This card contains a number of partially perforated discs, under each of which is concealed a number. The card bears legends or instructions as follows:

Findings

The said numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a number has been pushed or removed from said card. The said articles of merchandise are distributed to the purchasers who select the above designated numbers in accordance with the above-described sales plan. Persons who do not select the numbers so designated receive nothing for their money. Each of said articles of merchandise has a greater retail value than 2 cents, the amount of a sale on said card. The facts as to whether a purchaser pays 2 cents or nothing for the number selected and what article of merchandise, if any, the purchaser is to receive, with the exception of the last number punched on said card, are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent sells and distributes various assortments of said merchandise and furnishes and supplies various punchboard and push card devices for use in the sale of such assortments, but the sales plans or methods used in connection with all of said devices are similar to the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

Par. 7. Retail dealers and peddlers who purchase respondent's said merchandise, either directly or indirectly, sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the above-described sales plans or methods. The sale and distribution of said merchandise by said sales plans or methods involve a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. The respondent in so selling and distributing said merchandise thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove described. The use by respondent of said sales plans or methods in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said sales plans or methods, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and violation of criminal laws. Many of respondent's competitors are unwilling to adopt, in the sale of their merchandise, such methods or any methods which are contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Par. 8. The use by the respondent of the acts and practices herein set forth has the tendency and capacity to, and does, cause a substantial portion of the purchasing public to purchase respondent's merchandise in preference to the merchandise of his competitors. As a result, substantial trade has been diverted by respondent from competitors engaged in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Frank Spors, individually and trading as Spors Co., or trading under any other name or names, his agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of food, drugs, cosmetics, and other merchandise, including household notions and other novelties, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the term "Wholesale Importers and Manufacturers" or any other term of similar import or meaning, to describe the character of respondent's business operations, except in connection with such items of merchandise as are actually manufactured or directly imported by respondent.

2. Representing that all of the items of merchandise offered for sale by respondent are imported or manufactured by him, or that any designated item of merchandise offered for sale by the respondent is imported or manufactured by the respondent, when such item of merchandise has not been in fact so imported or manufactured by the respondent.

3. Representing, by means of pictorial representations or otherwise, that respondent's place of business is higher, larger or more spacious than is the fact.
4. Selling and distributing any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such merchandise to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

5. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, any merchandise together with punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices which said punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such merchandise to the public.

6. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices either with assortments of any merchandise, or separately, which said punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

7. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

ZONITE PRODUCTS CORPORATION

Docket 3363. Complaint, Mar. 22, 1938—Decision, June 19, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of its “Larvex” liquid moth repellent for spraying clothing, upholstered furniture, rugs, and other non-washable fabrics, along with its “Larvex” powder which, mixed with water as directed, it recommended as rinse for blankets, sweaters, bathing suits, woolens, and other washable fabrics, and in sale to purchasers in all parts of the United States, including manufacturers and wholesale and retail dealers, for their own use and for resale to public by such wholesale and retail dealers, of said preparations, designed to protect articles aforesaid from the ravages of the worms or larvae of flying and other pests and to prevent damage occasioned thereby, and in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution to purchasers in various States of various preparations for use in prevention of damage to fabrics and garments by moths and other insects, and including among its competitors manufacturers, compounders, and distributors of like and similar products or those designed and intended for similar usage, who do not unfairly disparage competitive goods or articles—

Unfairly disparaged many competitors and their respective products through representing that moth balls, cedar oil, tar, and various other products containing pyrethrum, naphthalene, or paradichlorobenzene fail to give adequate protection against moth damage, and by means of such statements in advertisements of its said “Larvex” in magazines and other forms of printed matter circulated and distributed among the trade and public in the several States as, “If you, too, want sure protection against moth damage, don’t take chances with moth balls, chests, and other makeshift ways. Too much is at stake.” and “WHY OTHER METHODS FAIL. It is not enough to try with insecticides, bug-killers, moth balls, cedar chests, and tar bags with obnoxious odors, to drive away or kill the flying moth. When you see the flying moth it is too late—she has already laid eggs in your woolen things—and old-fashioned methods don’t battle the hungry moth-worms which hatch from the eggs”; facts being there are many competitive products, as aforesaid referred to, on the market, such as moth balls, cedar oil, tar, and various other competitive products containing pyrethrum, naphthalene, or paradichlorobenzene, which when properly used, will protect fabrics and other articles against moth damage caused by moth worms and larvae;

With capacity and tendency through such statements and representation in its advertisements as above set forth to deceive and mislead manufacturers of fabrics and other articles, dealers therein and members of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such disparaging statements and representations made by it were true, and that competitive products referred to as above set forth were of no value in protecting fabrics and other articles against moth damage caused by moth worms or larvae, and to cause prospective purchasers of such competitive products, because of belief thus engendered, to decline to purchase same and to buy instead its said products, and with result that trade was thereby diverted unfairly to it and dealers in its products from those competitors who do not make statements disparaging products made, sold and distributed by their competitors; to injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were to the prejudice and injury of the public, and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. John W. Addison and Mr. Miles J. Furnas, trial examiners.

Mr. Joseph C. Fehr for the Commission.

Mr. Horace G. Hitchcock of Chadbourne, Wallace, Parke & Whiteside, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Zonite Products Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Zonite Products Corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, having its principal office and place of business located at 405 Lexington Avenue, in the city of New York, in the State of New York. Respondent is now, and for several years has been, through its Larvex Division, engaged in the business of manufacturing a liquid moth repellent designated as "Larvex" for spraying on clothing, upholstered furniture, carpets, rugs, blankets, draperies and other articles together with a powder designated as "Larvex," which, when mixed with water, is recommended as a rinse for said articles after they have been sprayed with the liquid. Said preparations are designed to protect such articles from the ravages of the flying and other moths and to prevent damage occasioned thereby.

Par. 2. During all the times above mentioned and referred to, the respondent has sold its liquid and powdered "Larvex" to purchasers located in various States of the United States other than New York including manufacturers, members of the public and wholesale and retail dealers for their own use, and also for resale to the public by said wholesale and retail dealers. The respondent has caused "Larvex," both liquid and powdered, when so sold by it, to be transported from its plant or place of business in New York, or from the State of origin of the shipment, to purchasers located in said other States, and has maintained a course of trade in said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. During all the times above mentioned and for many years prior thereto, other corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals, hereinafter referred to as sellers, have been engaged in the sale and distribution of various preparations, some in liquid and others in powder form, for use in the prevention of the ravages of moths and other insects, to purchasers located in the various States of the United States other than the State of the seller or the State of origin of the shipment. The sellers, respectively, have caused the said preparations when so sold by them, to be transported from the State of the seller, or from the State of origin of the shipment, to purchasers located in said other States.

Par. 4. During all the times above mentioned and referred to, the respondent, in the sale of its said liquid and powdered preparations is, and has been in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with the other corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals, referred to in paragraph 3 hereof, as sellers.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of its business, as above set forth, the respondent, during all the times above mentioned and referred to, has caused and now causes advertisements pertaining to its product "Larvex" to be published in magazines and other forms of printed matter circulated and distributed amongst the trade and the public in the several States of the United States.

In such advertisements respondent represents through such statements as "One spraying mothproofs a whole year" and "One spraying guards it a whole year" and others similar thereto that one application of respondent's moth repellent to clothing, upholstered furniture, carpets, rugs, blankets, draperies and other articles is sufficient to protect said articles from damage due to moths for a period of approximately one year without further applications of said preparation.

These claims are true only insofar as they are applied to non-washable fabrics treated with the liquid or spraying form of "Larvex." It is necessary that washable fabrics be treated with the powdered or rinsing form of "Larvex" after each washing in order to secure the protection claimed. The directions, in small type, on and inside the containers of respondent's product, explain the limitations of "Larvex," but do not adequately convey to the prospective purchaser of said preparations the limitations thereof. Such explanation as to the limitations of said preparations does not appear in respondent's general advertising in magazines and other printed matter. Respondent's statements and representations thus give rise to the impression and belief on the part of purchasers and prospective purchasers that, regardless of conditions, an article treated with the liquid or spraying form of "Larvex" is mothproof for one year. In truth and in fact the washing of articles after spraying, as directed, destroys the effectiveness of the liquid "Larvex" as a one-year mothproof.
ZONITE PRODUCTS CORP.

Complaint

Par. 6. The respondent makes and has made to the trade and the public other unfair, misleading and deceptive statements and representations with reference to the value and merits of its product, "Larvex," a portion of which is as follows:

If you, too, want sure protection against moth damage, don't take chances with moth balls, chests, and other makeshift ways. Too much is at stake.

WHY OTHER METHODS FAIL

It is not enough to try with insecticides, bug-killers, mothballs, cedar chests, and tar-bags with obnoxious odors, to drive away or kill the flying moth. When you see the flying moth it is too late—she has already laid eggs in your woolen things—and old-fashioned methods don't baffle the hungry moth-worms which hatch from the eggs.

The respondent caused and now causes the above statements and other similar statements and representations also to be made to members of the public by others, such as dealers, manufacturers and users of "Larvex."

The aforesaid statements and representations of the respondent unfairly disparage a number of competitive products on the market which, if properly used, will protect fabrics and other articles against moth damage. Further, said statements and representations are misleading and deceptive insofar as they serve to represent or imply that "Larvex" in either liquid or powdered form is not an insecticide and that it is noninjurious. In truth and in fact respondent's product, "Larvex," in powdered form contains a high percentage of sodium silica fluoride and aluminum fluoride which is of sufficient strength to cause a skin rash when the article treated with said powdered "Larvex" contacts the human body. In truth and in fact respondent's product in both liquid and powdered forms is an insecticide.
Par. 7. There are among the competitors of the respondent in commerce as herein set out, manufacturers, compounders, and distributors of like and similar products, or other products designed and intended for similar usage, who truthfully advertise and represent the nature, merit, and value of their respective products, who do not advertise and otherwise represent that such products have merit or value which they do not have and who do not unfairly disparage the competitive products of others.

Par. 8. The statements and representations made by the respondent in its advertisements as above set forth had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead manufacturers of fabrics and other articles, dealers therein and members of the public, purchasing such article or purchasing respondent’s preparations, into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations so made and caused to be made by the respondent were and are true, and into the purchase of respondent’s “Larvex,” in both liquid and powdered forms, in reliance upon such belief. As a result thereof trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent and dealers in its products from those competitors who do not misrepresent their respective products. As a consequence thereof injury has been done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 9. The above and foregoing acts, practices and representations of the respondent have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondent’s competitors as aforesaid, and have been, and are, unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes.”

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on March 22, 1938, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Zonite Products Corporation, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent’s answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the said complaint were introduced by Joseph C. Fehr, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Horace G. Hitchcock, attorney for the respondent, before John W. Addison and Miles J. Furnas, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Par. 1. Respondent, Zonite Products Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business located in the Chrysler Building in New York City, N. Y. Its manufacturing plant is located in the city of New Brunswick, N. J. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, through its Larvex Division, engaged in the business of manufacturing a liquid moth repellent, designated as “Larvex,” for spraying on clothing, upholstered furniture, rugs and other nonwashable fabrics, together with a powder also designated as “Larvex,” which, when mixed with water as directed, is recommended as a rinse for blankets, sweaters, bathing suits, woolens, and other washable fabrics. Said preparations are designed to protect such articles from the ravages of the worms or larvae of flying and other moths and to prevent damage occasioned thereby.

Par. 2. During all the times referred to herein the respondent has sold and shipped its liquid and powdered “Larvex” to purchasers located in all parts of the United States, including manufacturers and wholesale and retail dealers, for their own use, and also for resale to the public by said wholesale and retail dealers. Respondent has maintained a course of trade in said product, in both its liquid and powdered forms, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. During all the times mentioned herein and for many years prior thereto, other corporations, firms, partnerships and individuals, hereinafter referred to as sellers, have been engaged in the sale and distribution to purchasers located in the various States of the United States other than the State of the seller or the State of origin of the shipment, of various preparations for use in the prevention of damage to fabrics and garments by moths and other insects. The sellers thereof, respectively, have caused the said preparations when so sold by them, to be transported from the State of the seller, or from the State of origin of the shipment, to purchasers located in said other States.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent is now and has been during all times mentioned herein in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with the other corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals, referred to in paragraph 3 hereof, as sellers.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of its business, as above set forth, the respondent, during all the times above mentioned and referred to, has caused and now causes advertisements pertaining to its product "Larvex" to be published in magazines and in other forms of printed matter circulated and distributed among the trade and the public in the several States of the United States. In such advertisements respondent, among other statements, has made the following representations:

If you, too, want sure protection against moth damage, don't take chances with moth balls, chests, and other makeshift ways. Too much is at stake.

It is not enough to try with insecticides, bug-killers, moth balls, cedar chests, and tarbags with obnoxious odors, to drive away or kill the flying moth. When you see the flying moth it is too late—she has already laid eggs in your woolen things—and old-fashioned methods don't baffle the hungry moth-worms which hatch from the eggs.

By means of the aforesaid statements and representations the respondent represents that moth balls, cedar oil, tar and various other competitive products containing pyrethrum, naphthalene or para­ dichlorobenzenes fail to give adequate protection against moth damage and thereby unfairly disparages many of respondent's competitors and their respective products. The Commission finds that such representations are false, misleading and deceptive, for there are many such competitive products on the market such as moth balls, cedar oil, tar and various other competitive products containing pyrethrum, naphthalene, or paradichlorobenzenes, which, when properly used, will protect fabrics and other articles against moth damage caused by moth worms and larvae.

PAR. 6. There are among the competitors of the respondent in commerce as herein set out, manufacturers, compounders and distributors of like and similar products, or other products designed and intended for similar usage, who do not unfairly disparage competitive products.
PAR. 7. The statements and representations made by the respondent in its advertisements as above set forth have had the capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead manufacturers of fabrics and other articles, dealers therein, and members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said disparaging statements and representations so made by the respondent are true, and that the competitive products referred to in Paragraph Five hereof are of no value in protecting fabrics and other articles against moth damage caused by moth worms or larvae; and the capacity and tendency to cause prospective purchasers of said competitive products, because of the belief so engendered, to decline to purchase such competitive products and to purchase instead respondent's products. As a result thereof, trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent and dealers in its products from those competitors who do not use statements disparaging the products made, sold and distributed by their competitors. As a consequence thereof, injury has been done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Zonite Products Corporation, a corporation, as herein found, are to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Zonite Products Corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its product now sold and distributed under the name "Larvex" or any other product, whether sold under that name... or some other name, sold as a moth repellent or mothproofing agent in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing that moth balls, cedar oil, tar, and other competitive products containing pyrethrum, naphthalene or paradichlorobenzene will not protect fabrics and garments from damage by moth worms or larvae.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture of its “Gardner’s Food Herbs” medicinal preparation, and in sale and distribution thereof to dealer and consumer purchasers in various other States, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution, among the various States, of various medicinal preparations designed for treatment of same ailments and diseases—

(a) Represented, through advertisements disseminated among prospective purchasers by the mails and in periodicals of interstate circulation and by radio broadcasts and through circulars, leaflets, and other advertising literature that use of its preparation would rid the body of excess acid or hyperacidity and of acidosis, and thereby serve as a cure or remedy and competent and effective treatment for numerous ailments and diseases of the body, including rheumatism, kidney disorders, stomach ulcers, indigestion, constipation, liver disorders, stomach disorders, acid or sour stomach, gas, heartburn, colitis, dizziness, abnormal kidney functions, buckache, swelling of the ankles, soreness in the region of the kidneys, soreness and stiffness in the cords and muscles of the neck, hives, skin rashes, heart pains, shortness of breath, and high and low blood pressure and sleeplessness;

Facts being that its said product would not serve to correct or affect to any material extent condition known as hyperacidity or excess acid or condition known as acidosis, and it was not a cure or remedy for and had no substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of rheumatism and the various other ailments and conditions above enumerated, and possessed no therapeutic value except insofar as small peppermint contained therein might have slight tendency to aid digestion;

With effect of causing members of purchasing public to believe that its said preparation possessed therapeutic properties and qualities, which it did not in fact possess, and with result, as consequence of such erroneous and mistaken belief, that such public was induced to and did purchase substantial quantities of its said product and trade was thereby diverted unfairly to it from its competitors; to their substantial injury:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiner.

Mr. William L. Pack and Mr. DeWitt T. Puckett for the Commission.
Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Gardner Remedies, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 2. The respondent is now and has been for more than four years last past engaged in the business of compounding, selling, and distributing a medicinal or pharmaceutical preparation designated as "Gardner's Food Herbs." Respondent sells said preparation to members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and causes said preparation, when sold by it, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Washington to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States in the United States other than the State of Washington. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said preparation among and between various States of the United States.

Paragraph 3. Respondent is engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States with other corporations and with partnerships, firms, and individuals selling and distributing medicinal and other preparations and products designed and intended for, and used in, the treatment of the ailments and conditions of the human body for which respondent recommends the use of its said preparation. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not in any manner misrepresent their said preparations and products, or the therapeutic properties thereof, and who do not make any other false statements in connection with the sale and distribution of their said preparations and products.

Paragraph 4. In the course and conduct of its said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said preparation, respondent has caused false advertisements, containing representations and claims with respect to the properties of said preparation and the results that may be expected to be obtained from the use thereof, to be disseminated in commerce, as defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, through the use of advertisements in newspapers and other publications having a circulation throughout the various States of the United States, through bulletins distributed among prospective purchasers of said preparation, and through continuities broadcast from radio stations which have power to, and do, convey the programs emanating therefrom to the listeners thereof located in various States of the United States and through other means. Among and typical of the representations contained in said false advertisements so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

And as nearly 95% of all organic troubles are caused by excess acid, you can see how necessary it is to rid the system of it. But this does not complete the treatment. It is necessary to prevent the return of this condition. And that is just what GARDNER'S FOOD HERBS do.

As we know, excess acid is the cause of about 90% of all our organic ailments, and rheumatism is one that is a direct result of excess acid. Now it is only reasonable, to get lasting results, we must first rid ourselves of the excess acid in the bloodstream and then continue to keep the blood free from the return of this trouble. This is just what GARDNER'S FOOD HERBS do. They first gently stimulate the kidneys to throw off all the excess acid that the bloodstream is carrying, and then by reducing the dose, it builds the kidneys back to normal, thereby insuring lasting results.

We do not treat rheumatism; just as in the case of stomach ulcers we do not treat the stomach. We treat the cause of the trouble. That is why we get such wonderful results.

The usual treatment for ulcers of the stomach is * * * * The only way to really rid yourself of this ailment is to eliminate the cause, and in this case it is too much acid in the bloodstream. This can now be done by taking GARDNER'S FOOD HERBS * * * * All they do is eliminate the acid, the only way possible by means of the kidneys. After this they gradually help the kidneys to build back to normal.

During the winter, one of the most complained of ailments is rheumatism * * * Usually rheumatism is not the only ailment people suffer with, but indigestion, gas and constipation. How would you like to rid yourselves of these troublesome and painful ailments? * * * * Today you can. It is no longer necessary to suffer. GARDNER'S FOOD HERBS will clear up the cause of the trouble, giving Nature a chance to heal the ailments.

Facts You Should Know About GARDNER'S FOOD HERBS: "Nature's Way." How they have relieved sufferers from Stomach, Liver and Kidney Troubles, including acid or sour stomach, stomach ulcers, indigestion, gas, heartburn, constipation, colitis, dizziness, abnormal kidney functions, backache, swelling of ankles, soreness in the region of the kidneys, severe soreness and stiffness in the cords and muscles of the neck, hives, skin rashes, heart pains, and shortness of breath, high and low blood pressure, sleeplessness and rheumatism. A Natural Way to Remove Hyperacidity.

PAR. 5. Through the use of the statements and representations hereabove set forth and others similar thereto not herein set out, all of which purport to be descriptive of respondent's preparation and its effectiveness in the treatment of ailments and conditions of the human body and the cause of such ailments and conditions, respondent has represented, directly and by implication, among other things, that from 90 to 95 percent of all the organic ailments of the human body are caused by a condition of excess acid in the human system; that the use of said preparation will cure, and is of substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of, excess acid in the human system, including hyperacidity and acidosis; that the use of said preparation will eliminate excess acid from the blood stream; that the use of said preparation will cure, and is of substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of, stomach ulcers; and that said preparation is a competent and effective remedy or treatment for, or will cure, stomach, liver and kidney troubles, including acid or sour stomach, indigestion, gas, heartburn, constipation, colitis, dizziness, abnormal kidney functions, backache, swelling of the ankles, soreness in the region of the kidneys, severe soreness and stiffness in the cords and muscles of the neck, hives, skin rashes, heart pains, shortness of the breath, high and low blood pressure, sleeplessness, and rheumatism.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representations, used and disseminated by the respondent in the manner above described, are grossly exaggerated, misleading and untrue and constitute false advertisements. In truth and in fact 90 to 95 percent of the organic ailments of the human body are not caused by a condition of excess acid in the human system. Various organic ailments may give rise to acidosis, but such ailments are not caused by excess acid. The use of said preparation will not cure and has no substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of a condition of excess acid, including hyperacidity and acidosis. The use of said preparation will not eliminate excess acid from the blood stream.

The use of said preparation will not cure, nor has it any substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of, stomach ulcers. Said preparation is not a competent and effective remedy or treatment for, nor will it cure or be of substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of, stomach, liver and kidney troubles, including acid or sour stomach, indigestion, gas, heartburn, constipation, colitis, dizziness, abnormal kidney functions, backache, swelling of the ankles, soreness in the region of the kidneys, severe soreness and stiffness in the cords and muscles of the neck, hives, skin rashes, heart pains, shortness of the breath, high and low blood pressure, sleeplessness and rheumatism, or any other ailment, disease, or condition which may be present in, or afflict, the human body.

Respondent's claims as to the therapeutic value or efficacy of said preparation are grossly exaggerated, false and deceptive, and greatly exceed any claims as to the therapeutic value and efficacy of said preparation which might truthfully be made.

PAR. 7. The use of the aforesaid false advertisements, disseminated in the manner above described, induces, or is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of a drug.

PAR. 8. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements, representations and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to said preparation, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true, and that respondent's said preparation possesses the properties claimed and represented and will accomplish the results indicated, and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said preparation.

As a result trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise the effectiveness in use of their respective preparations and products as described in paragraph 3. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 19th day of September 1938, issued, and thereafter served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Gardner Remedies, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of an answer thereto by respondent, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by DeWitt T. Puckett, Esquire, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by the respondent, who appeared in person, before John J. Keenan, examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it. Said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and brief on behalf of the Commission in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed on behalf of the respondent, and oral argument not having been requested). The Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Gardner Remedies, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Washington, with its office and principal place of business located at 2633 50th Avenue, S. W., Seattle, Wash. It is now, and since 1931, has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation designated as “Gardner’s Food Herbs.” Respondent sells and distributes its product both to dealers and to consumers.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of its business respondent causes and has caused its product, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Washington, to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States. Respondent maintains, and since 1931 has maintained, a course of trade in its said medicinal preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Paragraph 3. Respondent is now, and at all times mentioned herein has been, engaged in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, of various medicinal preparations designed for the treatment of the same ailments and diseases of the human body as those for which respondent’s preparation is recommended.

Paragraph 4. In the course and conduct of its business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its preparation, the respondent is disseminating and has disseminated advertisements among prospective purchasers by the United States mails, by insertion in periodicals having interstate circulation, by radio broadcasts, and by means of circulars, leaflets and other advertising literature. Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in such advertisements are the following:

And as nearly 93% of all organic troubles are caused by excess acid, you can see how necessary it is to rid the system of it.
But this does not complete the treatment. It is necessary to prevent the return of this condition. And that is just what GARDNER'S FOOD HERBS do.

As we know, excess acid is the cause of about 90% of all our organic ailments, and rheumatism is one that is a direct result of excess acid. Now it is only reasonable, to get lasting results, we must first rid ourselves of the excess acid in the bloodstream and then continue to keep the blood free from the return of this trouble. This is just what GARDNER'S FOOD HERBS do. They first gently stimulate the kidneys to throw off all of the excess acid that the bloodstream is carrying, and then by reducing the dose, it builds the kidneys back to normal, thereby insuring lasting results.

We do not treat rheumatism; just as in the case of stomach ulcers we do not treat the stomach. We treat the cause of the trouble. That is why we get such wonderful results.

The usual treatment for ulcers of the stomach is   The only way to really rid yourself of this ailment is to eliminate the cause, and in this case it is too much acid in the bloodstream. This can now be done by taking GARDNER'S FOOD HERBS   All they do is to eliminate the acid, the only way possible by means of the kidneys. GARDNER'S FOOD HERBS will clear up the cause of the trouble, giving Nature a chance to heal the ailments.

Facts You Should Know About GARDNER'S FOOD HERBS. "Nature's Way". How they have relieved sufferers from Stomach, Liver and Kidney Troubles, including acid or sour stomach, stomach ulcers, indigestion, gas, heartburn, constipation, colitis, dizziness, abnormal kidney functions, backache, swelling of ankles, soreness in the region of the kidneys, severe soreness and stiffness in the cords and muscles of the neck, hives, skin rashes, heart pains and shortness of breath high and low blood pressure, sleeplessness and rheumatism. A Natural Way to Remove Hyperacidity.

Par. 5. Through the use of the foregoing statements and representations, and others of similar import, the respondent represents and has represented that nearly all ailments and diseases of the human body are due to the presence of excess acid in the system, that the use of respondent's preparation will rid the body of excess acid or hyperacidity, as well as acidosis, and thereby will serve as a cure or remedy and a competent and effective treatment for numerous ailments and diseases of the body, including rheumatism, kidney disorders, stomach ulcers, indigestion, constipation, liver disorders, stomach disorders, acid or sour stomach, gas, heartburn, colitis, dizziness, abnormal kidney functions, backache, swelling of the ankles, soreness in the region of the kidneys, soreness and stiffness in the cords and muscles of the neck, hives, skin rashes, heart pains, shortness of breath, high and low blood pressure, and sleeplessness.
Par. 6. The Commission finds that respondent’s product is an herbal preparation, the ingredients of which are “ledum glandulosum”, an herb found principally in the State of Oregon, 87½ percent; alfalfa, 10 percent; and peppermint, 2½ percent. The preparation is intended to be taken somewhat like tea. A teaspoonful is placed in a pint of boiling water and the user then takes three tablespoonfuls of the liquid in a half glass of warm water before each meal and at bedtime.

The Commission further finds that respondent’s preparation possesses no substantial therapeutic value. Its use will not serve to correct or affect to any material extent the condition known as hyper-acidity or excess acid, nor the condition known as acidosis. The preparation is not a cure or remedy for, nor has it any substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of, rheumatism, kidney disorders, liver disorders, stomach disorders, stomach ulcers, indigestion, constipation, acid or sour stomach, gas, heartburn, colitis, dizziness, abnormal kidney functions, backache, swelling of the ankles, soreness in the region of the kidneys, soreness or stiffness in the cords or muscles of the neck, hives, skin rashes, heart pains, shortness of breath, high or low blood pressure, or sleeplessness. The preparation possesses no therapeutic value except in so far as the small peppermint content might have a slight tendency to aid digestion.

Par. 7. The Commission finds that the statements and representations used by the respondent with respect to its preparation as herein set forth are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading. The use by the respondent of such statements and representations has the tendency and capacity to, and has, caused members of the purchasing public to believe that the respondent’s preparation possesses therapeutic properties and qualities which it does not in fact possess. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief, the purchasing public has been induced to, and has, purchased substantial quantities of respondent’s preparation and thereby trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors. In consequence thereof, substantial injury has been done and is being done by the respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Gardner Remedies, Inc., a corporation, its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of its medicinal preparation designated "Gardner's Food Herbs," or any other medicinal preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails, or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent, directly or through inference, that said preparation is a cure or remedy for, or that it possesses any substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of, hyperacidity or excess acid, acidosis, rheumatism, kidney disorders, liver disorders, stomach disorders, stomach ulcers, indigestion, constipation, acid or sour stomach, gas, heartburn, colitis, dizziness, abnormal kidney functions, backache, swelling of the ankles, soreness in the region of the kidneys, soreness or stiffness in the cords or muscles of the neck, hives, skin rashes, heart pains, shortness of breath, high or low blood pressure, or sleeplessness,

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF
WESTMINSTER TIRE CORPORATION

Docket 3786. Complaint, May 9, 1939—Decision, June 19, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of pneumatic automobile and truck tires to purchasing distributors, jobbers, and dealers in State of origin and in various other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of such tires in commerce as aforesaid, and including among its competitors some who sell and distribute such products but do not inaccurately set forth number of plies contained therein, and tire designations of which, in hands of unscrupulous or uninformed retail dealers, do not provide means and instrumentality to mislead purchasing public—

Caused to be placed, affixed, or molded on or into the side walls of its said tires, which were of four-ply bead-to-bead construction, with double breaker strips, white sidewalls, extra material and tread stock, and had a net weight considerably in excess of the corresponding weight of first line four-ply tires marketed by other manufacturers and distributors, and upon the tire wrappings encasing said tires, in addition to its name and size and type of tire, the designation "V-7" and, because of unusual character of construction, made no express declaration as to four-ply construction of such "V-7" tires and did not disclose further, in absence of specific inquiry, four-ply construction thereof to jobber, distributor and other dealer-purchasers, by whom likewise in resale thereof no express declaration was made as to said four-ply construction, and, in absence of inquiry, no such advice given to prospective purchasers;

Facts being there was custom and usage in industry, followed by number of manufacturers of pneumatic automobile and truck tires, and well known to public, of marketing such tires with words and figures or phrases so as conspicuously and accurately to indicate number of plies existing in construction of tires concerned, public was accustomed, in purchasing tires, to place full credence in manufacturer's representations as to manner and quality of construction and number of plies therein contained as indicated by marks, brands, words, letters, figures, insignia, or phrases appearing on wrappings and sidewalls of such tires, and tires herein concerned were, as aforesaid, four-ply and not 7;

With tendency and capacity, through such inaccurate marking or branding in use of said designation "V-7", and especially in hands of unscrupulous or uninformed retail dealers, to induce portion of purchasing public to believe tires thus designated and marked contained 7 plies, and with effect of thereby placing in hands of such unscrupulous or uninformed retailers means and instrumentality whereby they might mislead purchasing public into erroneous belief that said "V-7" tires actually contained 7 plies, and with result, as consequence of such erroneous and mistaken belief, that number of public purchased substantial volume of said tires, and trade was thereby diverted unfairly to it from its competitors engaged in sale and distribution of such products:
Complaint

Heard, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.

Mr. Curtis C. Shears for the Commission.

Levien, Singer & Neuburger, of New York City, for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Westminster Tire Corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Westminster Tire Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 601 West Twenty-sixth Street, New York, N. Y. Respondent is now, and for a number of years last past has been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing numerous brands of pneumatic motor vehicle tires and tubes to automobile dealers and wholesale and retail tire dealers throughout the United States. Respondent causes, and has caused, its said tires when sold to be transported from its place of business in New York, N. Y., and from the factories in which said products are made, to purchasing distributors, jobbers, and dealers hereinafter referred to as dealers, located in the State of New York, and in the various other States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia, at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade in said tires by said respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent has been and is now in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the sale and distribution of tires in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent has caused to be placed, affixed or molded on or into the side walls of said tires, conspicuous permanent marks, brands or insignia in the form and shape of shields, said shields depicting in their centers certain words, letters, figures, or phrases which purport to be representative and indicative of the number of plies contained and existing in the structure of the tires whereon they appear, and representative, descriptive and indicative of the manner of construction and of the actual number of plies contained and existing in respondent's said products.

Respondent, directly or by inference, through the means and methods herein set out and by other means and methods of similar import and effect, represents that its pneumatic automobile and truck tires are made and constructed of the actual number of plies as indicated by the words, letters, figures, phrases or insignia as depicted and shown on the side walls of said tires.

The manner and quality of construction and the number of plies contained are substantial factors considered in the choice for purchase of pneumatic automobile and truck tires. It is a known fact regarding tires of identical or similar quality of material and workmanship that the manufacturer, retail dealer, and purchasing public have long been accustomed to offer and accept as indicative of greater value the tire containing the larger number of plies in its structure.

There is a custom and usage in the rubber tire industry, followed by a number of manufacturers of pneumatic automobile and truck tires, of marking such tires with words and figures or phrases so as to conspicuously and truthfully indicate the number of plies existing in the construction of such tires.

This custom and usage is well known to the public and the public is accustomed in the purchase of tires to place full credence in the manufacturer's representations as to the manner and quality of construction and the number of plies therein contained as indicated by the marks, brands, words, letters, figures, insignia, or phrases appearing on the wrappings and side walls of said tires.

Respondent does not generally make known to said dealers nor to the general public that the words, letters, figures, phrases, or insignia as depicted and shown on the side walls of respondent's tires are not the actual number of plies contained and existing in certain of its pneumatic motor vehicle tires nor that said representations are false, misleading, and untrue.

Par. 3. Many of respondent's tires, represented or indicated, directly or by inference, as being made and constructed of a specific number of plies, as described in paragraph 2 hereof, do not contain the actual specific number of plies as therein indicated by the words.

Certain brands of tires of respondent are not truthfully marked and branded. The number of plies contained and existing in the structure of these tires are not as represented or indicated, directly or by inference, by respondent, but are of a substantially lesser number than as indicated by the words, letters, figures, phrases, or insignia depicted on the wrappings and shields appearing on said tires.

One example of a brand of tires so marked and branded which is sold and distributed directly or indirectly to the purchasing public is a special brand of Westminster custom built, V-type white wall passenger car tires distinguished by a V-7 medallion which is molded into the side wall of said tires at the time of curing, or cemented to the side wall of said tires, hereinafter referred to as V-7 tires. Said V-7 tires are of 4-ply bead-to-bead construction with double breaker strips, white side walls, extra material, and tread stock, giving them a net weight considerably in excess of the corresponding weight of the first line 4-ply tires marketed by other manufacturers. Respondent does not disclose, in the absence of specific inquiry by said dealers who purchase said V-7 tires from respondent, that the V-7 tires are of 4-ply construction. Said dealers who purchase said V-7 tires, when reselling same directly or indirectly to the purchasing public, make no express declaration as to the ply construction of said V-7 tires and, in the absence of inquiry regarding same, prospective purchasers are not advised that said V-7 tires are actually of 4-ply construction. The use by respondent of said V-7 medallion on said V-7 tires, in the absence of any other declaration as to the ply construction of the same constitutes a misbranding and has the tendency and capacity to mislead, confuse, and deceive prospective purchasers as to the actual ply construction of the said V-7 tires.

Par. 4. Wholesale and retail tire dealers and automobile dealers who purchase respondent's tires, directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others, by virtue of the resale of said tires to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan or method set forth in paragraphs 2 and 3 hereof, a means and instrumentality whereby the public may be misled and deceived. In that the sale of said tires to the purchasing public, in the manner above alleged, involves a misbranding, said misbranding has had and now has a tendency and capacity to and does mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers of said tires into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations, indications or inferences, as set out in paragraphs 2 and 3 hereof, are true and induces them to purchase said tires on account thereof to their injury. Thereby trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from competitors engaged in the sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of tires of the same general kind as those offered by respondent.

Par. 5. In that the sale of said tires to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a misbranding, many of said dealers, as defined and described in paragraph 1 hereof, who sell or distribute tires in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said sales plan or method, or any method involving a brand or mark which has a tendency and capacity to mislead prospective purchasers as to the actual ply construction of said tires or any other methods involving a misbranding, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many of said dealers are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its tires, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent’s said tires in preference to tires offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent, because of said misbranding, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respond-ent’s competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 9th day of May 1939, issued, and on the 10th day of May 1939, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent, Westminster Tire Corporation, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Thereafter, on the 11th day of April 1940, a stipulation was read into the record whereby it was stipulated and agreed that said statement of facts entered into the record by Levien, Singer and Neuberger, Esqrs., 70 Pine Street, New York, N. Y., attorneys for respondent, by Herbert M. Singer, Esq., of counsel, and Curtis C. Shears, trial attorney for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto, and the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and stipulation in the record, said stipulation having been approved and accepted, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Par. 1. Respondent, Westminster Tire Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 601 West Twenty-sixth Street, New York, N. Y.

Par. 2. Respondent is now and has been engaged in the sale of pneumatic automobile and truck tires, and causes said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in New York, N. Y., and from the factories in which said products are made to the purchasing distributors, jobbers and dealers (hereinafter called dealers), located in the State of New York, and in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in the said pneumatic automobile and truck tires, sold and distributed by it in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. Respondent in the course and conduct of its business is in active and substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of pneumatic automobile and truck tires in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. Respondent in the course and conduct of its business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said pneumatic automobile and truck tires, has made many representations concerning the character and quality of said products, by means of letters, blotters, signs, and price lists circulated generally among dealers and by means of tire wrappings, markings, insignia, and brands appearing on tires distributed to dealers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 6. Respondent has caused to be placed, affixed, or molded on or into the side walls of said tires and upon the tire wrappings encasing said tires, the designation "V-7" in addition to the respondent's name and the size and type of tire.

PAR. 7. The said "V-7" tires are of four-ply bead-to-bead construction with double breaker strips, white side walls, extra material and tread stock, given them a net weight considerably in excess of the corresponding weight of the first line four-ply tires marketed by other manufacturers and distributors. Respondent because of the unusual character of construction had made no express declaration as to the ply construction of said "V-7" tires and therefore has not disclosed, in absence of specific inquiry by said dealers who purchase said "V-7" tires from respondent, that the "V-7" tires are of four-ply construction. Said dealers who purchase said "V-7" tires, when reselling the same directly or indirectly to the purchasing public, have made no express declaration as to ply construction of said "V-7" tires and, in absence of inquiry regarding the same, prospective purchasers have not been advised that said "V-7" tires are actually of four-ply construction.

PAR. 8. There is a custom and usage in the rubber tire industry, followed by a number of manufacturers of pneumatic automobile and truck tires, of marking such tires with words and figures or phrases so as to conspicuously and accurately indicate the number of plies existing in the construction of such tires. This custom and usage is well known to the public, and the public is accustomed in the purchase of tires to place full credence in the manufacturer's representations as to the manner and quality of construction and the number of plies therein contained as indicated by the marks, brands, words, letters, figures, insignia, or phrases appearing on the wrappings and side walls of said tires.

PAR. 9. The "V-7" tires of the respondent have not been accurately marked or branded in that the designation "V-7" has a tendency and capacity especially in the hands of unscrupulous or uninformed retail dealers to induce a portion of the purchasing public to believe that the tires so designated and marked contain seven plies when in fact said tires actually contain a lesser number of plies, and thus the respondent's acts and practices as herein detailed serve to place in the hands of such unscrupulous or uninformed retail dealers a means and instrumentality whereby said dealers may mislead the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that the respondent's "V-7" tires actually contain seven plies.

Par. 10. There are among the respondent's competitors some who sell and distribute pneumatic automobile and truck tires but do not inaccurately set forth the number of plies contained in their respective products and whose tire designations in the hands of unscrupulous or uninformed retail dealers do not provide a means and instrumentality to mislead the purchasing public.

Par. 11. The designation "V-7" placed upon the wrapper and side walls of the respondent's tires has had a tendency and capacity especially in the hands of unscrupulous or uninformed retail dealers to induce a portion of the purchasing public to believe that the tires so designated contain seven plies. As a result of this erroneous and mistaken belief a number of the public have purchased a substantial volume of said tires with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors who are likewise engaged in selling and distributing pneumatic automobile and truck tires.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and a stipulation as to the facts entered into the record herein between counsel for the respondent and counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
It is ordered, That the respondent, Westminster Tire Corporation, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of pneumatic automobile and truck tires in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist:

1. From representing, directly or indirectly, by means of letters, words, figures, markings, insignia, or brands appearing in price lists, or on tire wrappings, or on tires, or in any other way, that the automobile and truck tires sold by the respondent contain more plies in their construction than they actually contain.

2. From representing, directly or indirectly, that the construction of respondent's tires or the materials therein contained are other than the actual construction and materials contained in said tires.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF THE KENDALL COMPANY, DOING BUSINESS UNDER THE TRADE NAME OF BAUER & BLACK

- COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 20, 1914

Docket 3894. Complaint, Sept. 16, 1939—Decision, June 19, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of its Velure vanishing lotion or, as formerly designated, "Velure Lotion," and in sale and distribution thereof to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution in commerce among the States and in said District of preparations designed and used for same general purpose, and including among such competitors many who sell and distribute hand lotion and other products designed, intended and sold to soften and beautify the skin and who do not in any way misrepresent quality or effectiveness of their respective products; in advertisements of its said preparation which it disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails, through newspapers and periodicals of general circulation, and through circulars and other printed or written matter distributed in commerce among the various States and through broadcasts from radio stations or extra-State audience and otherwise, and which were intended and likely to induce purchase of its said product—

(a) Represented, directly and by implication, that its said preparation was a new and scientific discovery, which, applied to hands, acted more quickly in softening and beautifying skin than did various other hand lotions and other products sold by its competitors, in competition therewith, and that it was more economical and effective in use than competitive hand lotions; and

(b) Represented that product in question conserved and supplemented the natural oils of the skin and that it had a bleaching and whitening effect thereon, and made hands shades lighter;

Facts being, none of the ingredients of which it consisted, essentially, had any substantial therapeutic value and all were commonly found in competitive hand lotions, it was not a new or scientific discovery, did not, applied to hands, act more quickly or achieve beneficial results more rapidly than other competitive products, and, although absorption of its glycerine and alcohol by skin might take place, it did not penetrate skin, and was not more economical or effective than competitive products, and would not accomplish results otherwise claimed therefor;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that all of such statements and representations were true, and that said product possessed properties represented and would accomplish results claimed, and that, as direct consequence of such beliefs induced by its said statements and representations, number of purchasing public bought substantial volume of its said preparation, and trade was thereby diverted unfairly to it from its competitors engaged in sale and distribution of hand lotions and similar products designed, intended and sold for use in the softening and beautifying

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Kendall Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Massachusetts, having his office and principal place of business in the city of Boston, State of Massachusetts. Respondent also does business under the trade name Bauer & Black, having its office and principal place of business, doing business as Bauer & Black, at 2500 South Dearborn Street, city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of a cosmetic preparation now designated “Velure Vanishing Lotion” and formerly designated “Velure Lotion.”

Par. 2. Respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes and has caused said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its factory in the State of Illinois, or from the State of origin of the shipment thereof, to purchasers of said preparation at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of origin of the shipment thereof, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been during all the times herein mentioned, a course of trade in said preparation by respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is now, and has been during all the times mentioned herein, in substantial competition with other corporations and with persons, firms, and partnerships also engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of cosmetic preparations designed and used for the same general purposes as respondent's said preparation.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said preparation, by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States; and by continuities broadcast from radio stations which have sufficient power to, and do, convey the programs emanating therefrom to listeners located in various States of the United States other than the State in which said broadcasts originate, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparation; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said preparation, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly, or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparation in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among, typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Remarkable new hand lotion developed by scientists especially for women who do their own housework.

- Makes hands feel naturally soft rather than artificially smooth.
- It leaves no annoying stickiness or artificial coating when properly used.
- Sinks right into the tiny crevices of the skin and disappears.
- It has a sure, quick, self-penetrating action—sinks into skin crevices automatically.

You'll like the way Velure gets quick results. Like the way it requires no tedious rubbing. Like the way it vanishes—leaves no sticky or clammy after feeling, and no gummy film to stain your gloves or your clothes, nor does it dull finger-nail polish.

- Makes hands shades whiter, softer, smoother in a hurry.
- A hand lotion specially created by scientists for women with active hands.
  "Red hands" become shades lighter.
- This new Bauer & Black vanishing lotion goes to work faster.
- And now Bauer & Black scientists bring you a new fast-acting lotion.
- Works to help nature keep hands soft, smooth and lovely.
- Velure helps nature maintain soft, smooth hands for you.
Velure is also amazingly economical. A concentrated lotion, it goes 2½ times as far as thick, old-fashioned lotions.

In addition, certain ingredients in Velure help to conserve natural, skin-softening oils.

Velure supplements the natural oils of the skin and helps the skin to become naturally smooth and supple.

That's right where Velure is different—for Velure is definitely non-alkaline—one of the few lotions that can make that claim.

A fast-acting vanishing lotion different from all thick, heavy gummy lotions.

PAR. 5. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations and others of similar import or meaning not herein set out, all of which purport to be descriptive of respondent's preparation and its effectiveness in softening and beautifying the skin, the respondent has falsely represented, directly or by implication, among other things, (1) that said preparation is a new and scientific discovery which when applied to the hands, acts more quickly in softening and beautifying the skin than the various other hand lotions and other products which are sold by respondent's competitors in competition with said preparation, (2) that said preparation penetrates the skin and leaves no artificial coating or stickiness on the skin, (3) that said preparation conserves and supplements the natural oils of the skin, (4) that said preparation has a bleaching or whitening effect on the skin and makes hands shades lighter, and (5) that said preparation is more economical and effective in use than competitive hand lotions.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representations, used and disseminated by the respondent in the manner above described, are grossly exaggerated, misleading and untrue, and constitute false advertisements. The true facts are that said preparation does not have any of the qualities or achieve any of the results claimed and represented as hereinabove described. Said preparation consists essentially of alcohol with a trace of brucine, glycerine, mucilage, perfume, coloring matter, and water. None of these ingredients have any substantial therapeutic value, and all of them are commonly found in competitive hand lotions. Said preparation is not a new or scientific discovery. Said preparation, when applied to the hands, does not act more quickly or achieve beneficial results more rapidly than other competitive products. Said preparation does not penetrate the skin, although there may be some absorption of the glycerine and alcohol by the skin. The use of said preparation leaves an artificial coating or stickiness on the skin. Said preparation does not conserve or supplement the natural oils of the skin. Said preparation does not have any bleaching or whitening effect on the skin and does not make hands shades whiter or lighter. Said preparation is no more economical or effective in use than competitive hand lotions.
Par. 7. There are among respondent's competitors many who sell and distribute hand lotions and other products designed, intended, and sold for the purpose of softening and beautifying the skin who do not in any way misrepresent the qualities or effectiveness of their respective products.

Par. 8. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, and did, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that all of said statements and representations are true, and that said product possesses the properties represented and will accomplish the results claimed. As a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the statements and representations of the respondent, as hereinabove detailed, a number of the purchasing public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's said preparation, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from its competitors also engaged in the business of selling and distributing hand lotions and similar products designed, intended and sold for use in the softening and beautifying of the skin, and who truthfully represent the effectiveness and qualities of their respective products. As a result thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Massachusetts having its office and principal place of business in the city of Boston, State of Massachusetts. Respondent also does business under the trade name of Bauer & Black, having its office and principal place of business, doing business as Bauer & Black, at 2500 South Dearborn Street, city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of a cosmetic preparation now designated "Velure Vanishing Lotion" and formerly designated "Velure Lotion."

Par. 2. Respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes and has caused said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its factory in the State of Illinois, or from the State of origin of the shipment thereof, to purchasers of said preparation at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of origin of the shipment thereof, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been during all the times herein mentioned, a course of trade in said preparation by respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, respondent is now, and has been during all the times mentioned herein, in substantial competition with other corporations and with persons, firms, and partnerships also engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of cosmetic preparations designed and used for the same general purposes as respondent's said preparation.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said preparation, by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States; and by continuities broadcast from radio stations which have sufficient power to, and do, convey the programs emanating therefrom to listeners located in various States of the United States other than the State in which said broadcasts originate, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparation; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said preparation, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparation in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among, and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

- A fast-acting vanishing lotion different from all thick, heavy gummy lotions.

out, all of which purport to be descriptive of respondent’s preparation and its effectiveness in softening and beautifying the skin, the respondent, has falsely represented, directly or by implication, among other things, (1) that said preparation is a new and scientific discovery which when applied to the hands, acts more quickly in softening and beautifying the skin than the various other hand lotions and other products which are sold by respondent’s competitors in competition with said preparation, (2) that said preparation penetrates the skin and leaves no artificial coating or stickiness on the skin, (3) that said preparation conserves and supplements the natural oils of the skin, (4) that said preparation has a bleaching or whitening effect on the skin and makes hands shades lighter, and (5) that said preparation is more economical and effective in use than competitive hand lotions.

Par. 6. The aforesaid representations, used and disseminated by the respondent in the manner above described, are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue, and constitute false advertisements. The true facts are that said preparation does not have any of the qualities or achieve any of the results claimed and represented as hereinabove described. Said preparation consists essentially of alcohol with a trace of brucine, glycerine, mucilage, perfume, coloring matter, and water. None of these ingredients have any substantial therapeutic value, and all of them are commonly found in competitive hand lotions. Said preparation is not a new or scientific discovery. Said preparation does not have any bleaching or whitening effect on the skin and does not make hands shades whiter or lighter. Said preparation is no more economical or effective in use than competitive hand lotions.

Par. 7. There are among respondent’s competitors many who sell and distribute hand lotions and other products designed, intended and sold for the purpose of softening and beautifying the skin who do not in any way misrepresent the qualities or effectiveness of their respective products.

Par. 8. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, and did, mislead and deceive a sub-substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that all of said statements and representations are true, and that said product possesses the properties represented and will accomplish the results claimed. As a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the statements and representations of the respondents, as hereinabove detailed, a number of the purchasing public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's said preparation, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from its competitors also engaged in the business of selling and distributing hand lotions and similar products designed, intended and sold for use in the softening and beautifying of the skin, and who truthfully represent the effectiveness and qualities of their respective products. As a result thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found have been, and are, all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, The Kendall Co., a corporation, doing business under the trade name of Bauer & Black, or doing business under any other trade name or names, its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of its cosmetic preparation designated "Velme Vanishing Lotion," formerly designated "Velure Lotion," or any other cosmetic preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails, or (b) by any means in commerce; as “commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent, directly or through inference, that said preparation is a new or scientific discovery; that said preparation, when applied to the hands, acts more quickly in softening and beautifying the skin or achieves beneficial results more rapidly than other competitive products; that said preparation penetrates the skin and leaves no artificial coating or stickiness on the skin; that said preparation conserves or supplements the natural oils of the skin; that said preparation has a bleaching or whitening effect on the skin, or makes hands shades whiter or lighter; that said preparation is more economical or effective in use than competitive hand lotions.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after the service upon it, of this order file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

HENRY BERGMAN

Docket 4026. Complaint, Feb. 3, 1940—Decision, June 19, 1940

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution to purchasers in various States and in the District of Columbia, of instruments for locating gold and silver, of booklet designated "Jacob's Rod," of so-called "crystal balls" for use, allegedly, in telling fortunes, of metal disks designated by him "Universal Good Luck Coins," and of list of names and addresses of parties or concerns from whom or which devices used in searching for treasures or minerals could be obtained; in advertisements of his said products in circulars, pamphlets, newspapers, and magazines distributed and circulated among prospective purchasers throughout the United States—

(a) Represented and implied to purchasing public through statements made, as aforesaid, that his instrument for locating gold and silver would enable person using same to locate said metals and hidden treasures, and that various testimonials published and disseminated by him in said advertisements in said connection were true and that persons giving same had actually located said metals or hidden treasures through use of his instrument, and, further, that through use of his said list of names and addresses of concerns selling devices used in searching for treasures or minerals a person would be able to pick particular device suitable for such person's needs, and that information contained in said booklet was valuable to anyone interested in locating lost, buried or hidden treasure, gold, silver, lead, or other ores;

(b) Represented, as aforesaid, that his said booklet entitled "Jacob's Rod" imparted information which would enable person to ascertain his psychic powers, make his own goldometer and locate gold, silver, and hidden treasure, and that such booklet was rare and that directions given therein were practiced by Jacob of old, and many other ancient patriarchs, and that it was offered by him at a very special price of $1; and

(c) Represented, as aforesaid, that his so-called fortune telling crystal ball foretold future and answered all questions concerning a person's past, present, and future, and that his "Universal Good Luck Coins" possessed mysterious powers and would bring good luck to those carrying one;

Facts being various testimonials published and disseminated by him, as aforesaid, were not from people who had located gold, silver, or hidden treasure with his instrument, booklet "Jacob's Rod" was not rare and there was no basis in fact for statement that directions given therein were practiced by Jacob of old or any other ancient patriarch's, price thereof of $1 was not a special one, but regular price at which he sold it, and supply thereof was not limited, and list of names and addresses sold by him, as aforesaid, was worthless, none of the devices thus procurable being suitable or effective for purpose represented, or accomplishing any results claimed therefor and his statements and representations in other respects, as above set forth, were false, misleading, and deceptive;
With effect, through use of said various false and misleading representations and implications, as above set forth, of misleading and deceiving substantial number of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations and implications were true, and with result, as consequence of such belief that many members of purchasing public bought substantial volume of his said product:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Charles S. Cox for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Henry Bergman, an individual, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Henry Bergman, is an individual with his principal place of business located in Springfield, Mo. He resides at 2004 Milton Avenue, Springfield, Mo. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 3 years last past, engaged in the sale and distribution of instruments intended for locating gold and silver, and the sale and distribution of a booklet designated "Jacob's Rod." For more than 6 months last past, respondent has also been engaged in the sale and distribution of "crystal balls," allegedly for use in telling fortunes, metal disks which he calls "Universal Good Luck Coins" and a list of names and addresses of parties or concerns from which devices used in searching for treasures or minerals can be obtained. Respondent sells his said products to members of the purchasing public situated in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes said products when sold by him to be transported from his place of business in the State of Missouri, to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than the State of Missouri and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
HENRY BERGMAN

Complaint

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business in said commerce, as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said products, the respondent has caused various statements and representations relating to said products to be inserted in advertisements in circulars, pamphlets, newspapers, and magazines distributed and circulated among prospective purchasers throughout the United States generally. Among and typical of the representations made by the respondent, as aforesaid, concerning his so-called gold and silver locater are the following:

Among and typical of the representations made by respondent through the publication of testimonials concerning his gold and silver locater are the following:

It works perfect (100%) for me. I'm sitting on top of the world, so to speak.

I have been informed of you by F-K • • • that you have the best instruments for locating buried treasures and hidden treasures.

• • • I tried it on a gold watch chain and ring. It worked in a circle over it. I have some nuggets and gold ore. I thought it was gold.

Those gold nuggets and ore, the locating instrument works something fine. The only way I can stop it is to put the cut-off on it. Then it will stop. I have taken it out to my farm once. I found a nugget and some quartz.
Received the gold finder and have tried it out. It works good for me. A friend took me yesterday up to Gold Creek to see if it would point out a place where he knew there was gold. It located it exactly, swinging in a circle over the place and at the same time a little sideways toward quartz deposit.

I have got one of your mineral rods and it works very well. The gold instrument I received from you last November I have had great success with it. I got one of your Gold and Silver Locating Instruments and it works fine for me. I have tested the instrument thoroughly and know it will work.

Among and typical of the representations made by respondent, as aforesaid, in connection with his booklet entitled, "Jacob's Rod," are the following:

HIDDEN TREASURES located by your own Goldometer on your own farms, mines, or old homestead.—Don't sell until you have investigated by this wonderful Psychic Power in yourself.

This very rare old book tells how to find all kind of Minerals, Water, Coal, Iron Ores, Lost and Hidden Treasures, etc., which could no doubt be found by studying and following the directions given in this Rare Old Book, the same which have been practiced by Jacob and many other ancient patriarchs.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We have obtained a quantity of these books in paper binding, which we can furnish at $1.00 each postpaid. This is a great chance for those who want the book, but don't feel like paying $2.00 for the cloth binding.

Among and typical of the representations made by the respondent, as aforesaid, in connection with his so-called Fortune Telling Crystal Ball are the following:

Amaze and astound your friends with uncanny revelations. Let the Crystal Ball tell you about yourself, your sweetheart, friends and enemies. Ask it any of the 180 questions of interest to you. Will you be successful in money, love, games or business?

It answers all questions put to it. So simple that anyone may use it. Many professional Fortune Tellers swear by it.

Among and typical of the representations made by the respondent, as aforesaid, in connection with his so-called "Universal Good Luck Coins" are the following:

UNIVERSAL LUCK COINS.—It is believed by many that this wonderful LUCK TOKEN has a Mysterious and Attracting Power. It will amaze you. Many people carry it as a GOOD LUCK BRINGER and believe it will help them in everything they undertake. Looks Like Gold; Wears Like Iron; Everlasting Metal.

The best method of searching for buried treasures and ores that I know without any investment.
The above information is of great value on all treasure seeking or prospecting trips.
All for 50¢ Postpaid.

Par. 3. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations and others of similar import and meaning not herein set out, respondent represents and implies to the purchasing public that his instrument for locating gold and silver will enable a person using the same to locate gold, silver, and hidden treasures and that the various testimonials published and disseminated as aforesaid are true, and that the persons giving such testimonials have actually located gold, silver, or hidden treasure by using respondent's said instrument.
In the manner aforesaid, respondent represents that his booklet entitled "Jacob's Rod" imparts information which will enable a person to ascertain his psychic powers, make his own goldometer and locate gold, silver, and hidden treasure, that said booklet is rare and that the directions given therein were practiced by Jacob of old and many other ancient patriarchs, and that said booklet is being offered for sale by the respondent at a very special price of $1.
In the manner aforesaid, respondent represents that his so-called Fortune Telling Crystal Ball foretells the future and answers all questions concerning a person's past, present, and future.
In the manner aforesaid, respondent represents that his "Universal Good Luck Coins" are possessed of mysterious powers and will bring good luck to persons carrying one of said coins.
In the manner aforesaid, the respondent represents that through the use of his list of names and addresses of concerns selling devices used in searching for treasures or minerals a person will be able to pick the particular device suitable for his needs and that the information contained in said booklet is valuable to any person interested in locating lost, buried, or hidden treasure, gold, silver, lead, or other ores.

Par. 4. In truth and in fact the aforesaid representations and implications used and disseminated by the respondent, as aforesaid, are false, misleading, and deceptive, for the use of respondent's said gold, silver, and treasure locating instrument will not enable one to locate gold, silver, or hidden treasure, and said instrument has no value in searching for gold, silver, or hidden treasure. The various testimonials published and disseminated by respondent, as aforesaid, are not from persons who have located gold, silver, or hidden treasure with respondent's said instrument. The reading of respondent's booklet entitled "Jacob's Rod" will not enable the reader to ascertain his psychic powers or make his own goldometer, or enable him to locate hidden treasure. Said booklet is not rare and there is no basis in fact for the statement that the directions given therein were practiced by Jacob of old or any other ancient patriarchs. The price of $1 at which respondent offers said booklet to the purchasing public, is not a special price, but is the regular price at which respondent sells this booklet. The supply of copies of the booklet is not limited. Respondent's fortune telling crystal balls do not foretell the future or answer questions concerning a person's past, present, or future. Respondent's "Universal Good Luck Coins" do not possess any power and will not bring good luck in any undertaking to a person carrying one of said coins. The following of the seven rules of success furnished with said good luck coins will not bring to the purchaser thereof fame and fortune. Respondent's list of names and addresses of concerns from which devices used in searching for gold, silver, and buried treasure can be obtained is worthless for none of the devices procured from any of the concerns listed is suitable or effective for the purposes represented by the respondent and will not locate gold, silver, or hidden treasure.

Par. 5. The use of each and all of the false and misleading representations and implications made and used by the respondent, as aforesaid, has had and now has the tendency and capacity to and does mislead and deceive a substantial number of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations and implications are true. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief many members of the purchasing public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's said products.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on February 8, 1940, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Henry Bergman, an individual, charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On March 21, 1940, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Henry Bergman, his representatives, agents, or employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of any instrument or device for locating gold and silver, a booklet known as "Jacob's Rod," so-called fortune telling balls known as "Crystal Balls," metal disks known as "Universal Good Luck Coins," and a list of names and addresses of parties or concerns from which devices used in searching for treasures or minerals can be obtained, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. That the respondent's gold, silver and treasure locating instrument has any value in searching for gold, silver or hidden treasure or that said instrument or any other instrument will enable one to locate gold, silver, or hidden treasure.

2. By testimonials, or in any other manner, that persons have located gold, silver or hidden treasure by using the respondent's said instrument.

3. That a person reading the booklet known as "Jacob's Rod," sold by respondent, will be enabled thereby to ascertain his psychic powers, make his own goldometer, or locate hidden treasure.

4. There is any basis, in fact, for the statement that the directions given in the booklet known as "Jacob's Rod" were practiced by Jacob of old or any other ancient patriarch; that the booklet known as "Jacob's Rod" is rare or that the price of $1 is any other than the regular price at which respondent sells the same or that the supply of the copies thereof is limited.

5. That the so-called fortune-telling ball known as "Fortune Telling Crystal Ball," or any other device, foretells the future, or answers questions concerning a person's past, present, or future.

6. That the metal disks known as "Universal Good Luck Coins" possess power that assures success in any undertaking to the person carrying one of said coins.

7. That a person following "The Seven Rules of Success" furnished by respondent will attain fame and fortune.

8. That the respondent's list of names and addresses from which devices used in searching for gold, silver and buried treasure may be obtained has any value, or that devices which can be procured from any of such concerns are suitable and effective for locating gold, silver, or hidden treasure.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

NORMAN D. LOUGHLIN, L. E. RUPPE, BERNAL H. DYAS, RUTH C. HEMSTREET, VOLNEY T. JAMES, AND PAGE H. LAMOREAUX, TRADING AS RULO COMPANY; AND RULO CORPORATION

Docket 3761. Complaint, Apr. 14, 1939—Decision, June 22, 1940

Where three individuals and a corporation which succeeded to business theretofore conducted by them and of which they were officers or directors, and sales policies, advertisements and other activities of which, with respect to acts and practices below set forth, they directed and controlled, engaged in sale and distribution of their "Rulo Automatic Injector" for attachment to automotive engines and of their "Rulo Energy Fluid" for use in said devices; in advertisements of their said devices in newspapers, and circulars or printed matter distributed in commerce, and in continuities broadcast from radio stations of extra-state audience—

(a) Represented, directly and by implication, that use of said device and fluid would effect substantial economy in the operation of an automobile through lessening gasoline and oil consumption and would effect a saving of from 20 percent to 55 percent in the gasoline used, and 10 percent of the gasoline used in the operation of every car driven 1,500 miles or more a month;

(b) Represented that use thereof would substantially increase the power and compression of the motor and would remove carbon therefrom and prevent its formation thereof, and would substantially lessen engine friction and attendant engine wear; and

(c) Represented that use thereof would eliminate necessity of grinding valves and prevent them from sticking and seat valves and prevent motor from knocking, and that through use of said device and fluid, first-grade or Ethyl gasoline performance could be obtained with third grade gasoline, and that such use would prolong life of motor and cause it to operate more smoothly and with less heat, and would prolong the life and seal rings of motor, and stop or lessen oil pumping thereby;

Facts being use thereof would not save any substantial amount in cost of gasoline and oil consumed by any car driven any distance for any length of time, and would not accomplish any such savings as above represented, such use would not bring about same performance with third grade gasoline as that obtained from first-grade or Ethyl gas, and would not otherwise bring about various results and improvements claimed therefor as above set out; and

(d) Represented that said Rulo Energy Fluid was a synthetic product scientifically made from a secret formula, and that use thereof removed hard carbon, and that said fluid was a perfect heat resistant lubricant, and that through use thereof perfect lubrication in the upper cylinder was assured even when motor was cold when starting, and that use thereof stopped motor wear;
Facts being it was not made from a secret formula and was not a perfect heat resistant lubricant, but was a lubricating oil to which had been added small quantity of colloidal graphite, addition of which does not enhance value of lubricating oil for use in automotive engines, and it would not accomplish results claimed for it as above set forth;

With effect of misleading and deceiving members of purchasing public in various States into erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations were true and, by reason of such belief, into purchasing substantial quantities of their said device and lubricant, and with direct result, as a consequence thereof, that trade in commerce among the various states was diverted unfairly to said individuals and corporation from their competitors engaged in sale and distribution of devices and lubricants designed for similar usage; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

HeId, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiner.

Mr. R. A. McCouat and Mr. DeWitt T. Puckett for the Commission.

Mr. Nathan M. Dicker, of Los Angeles, Calif., for L. E. Ruppe.

Hervey & Hervey, of Los Angeles, Calif., for Bernal H. Dyas.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Norman D. Loughlin, L. E. Ruppe, Bernal H. Dyas, Ruth C. Hemstreet, Volney T. James, and Page H. Lamoreaux, individually and trading as Rulo Co., and Rulo Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said Act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Norman D. Loughlin, L. E. Ruppe, Bernal H. Dyas, Ruth C. Hemstreet, Volney T. James, and Page H. Lamoreaux, are individuals and for more than one year prior to April, 1936, traded as the Rulo Co. and had their office and principal place of business in the city of Los Angeles, State of California. Respondent, Rulo Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California and having its office and principal place of business at 3636 Beverly Blvd., in the city of Los Angeles, State of California.

Respondents, Norman D. Loughlin, L. E. Ruppe, Bernal H. Dyas, Ruth C. Hemstreet, Volney T. James, and Page H. Lamoreaux, trading as Rulo Company, were prior to April 1936, and the Rulo
Complaint

Corporation is now, and has been since April 1936, engaged in the business of selling and distributing a device known as "Rulo Automatic Injector," designed to be attached to automobile motors, and a fluid known as "Rulo Energy Fluid" designed for use in said device. During the times herein mentioned respondents have caused said device and fluid, when sold or ordered, to be transported from the State of California to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of California. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said device and fluid among and between various States of the United States. Respondents, Lamoreaux, Hemstreet, and Dyas, are the directors, and respondents, Lamoreaux, Hemstreet, and James are the officers of respondent, Rulo Corporation, and direct and control the sales policies, advertisements and other activities of the said corporation with respect to the acts and practices herein described.

Par. 2. Respondent, Rulo Corporation, is now, and all respondents have been during the times mentioned herein, in competition with other corporations and individuals and with firms and partnerships, engaged in the business of selling and distributing devices and fluids designed for similar uses in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said device and fluid respondents have caused statements and representations relative to the effectiveness in use of said device and fluid to be inserted in advertisements in newspapers, periodicals, circulars and other printed matter, all of which are and were distributed in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and in continuities broadcast from radio stations which have power to and do convey the programs emanating therefrom to the listeners thereto located in various States of the United States other than the State from which said broadcasts originated. Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in said advertisements so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

Motorists! The amazing RULO Gas-Saver is guaranteed to Save you up to 45% on gasoline! Eliminate any need for valve-grinding! Decrease oil consumption! Give you near-Ethyl performance on third-grade gasoline! Increase compression-power! Keep a new motor NEW, and make an OLD motor run like new!
When your motor starts singing this song you don’t have to ask “Who’s there?.” It is hard carbon.

My Rulo Automatic Injector will stop this knocking. In fact, it will take the hard carbon out of your motor and keep it out forever.

Prolongs the life of motor rings. Increases the mileage on lubricating oil. Rulo eliminates seventy-five percent motor wear. Guaranteed to stop your oil pumping.

This is what you obtain by installing a Rulo—this is what we guarantee—that by letting us install this NATIONALY RECOGNIZED Rulo device in your car, you will secure a 20% SAVING IN GASOLINE!—or money cheerfully refunded without ANY red tape!

Call today and have a Rulo put on your car—$9.50 completely installed. If, like the average motorist, you drive 1500 miles each month, it is actually possible for you to save $10 each and every month with a Rulo.

Rulo is patented. It is a carburetor-type device—maintains a constant indestructible film of colloidal graphite (Rulo fluid) in the combustion chamber of your motor—eliminates need of expensive “valve grinds”—gives your motor more pep and compression—reduces wear and tear—prolongs the life of your motor—enables you to use cheaper gasoline and still get “top” performance—is absolutely harmless to all internal combustion engines—Do not confuse Rulo with so-called “gas-savers”!

The aforesaid statements and representations, together with others of similar import and meaning not herein set out but disseminated as aforesaid, purport to be descriptive of respondent's device and fluid and their effectiveness in use. In the manner and by the means aforesaid the respondents represent directly and by implication that the use of said device and fluid will effect substantial economies in the operation of an automobile through lessening the gasoline and oil consumption of the automobile motor; that the use of such device and fluid will effect a saving of from 20 to 55 percent in the gasoline used in the operation of an automobile and will save 10 percent of the gasoline used in the operation of every car driven 1,500 or over miles per month; that the use of such device and fluid will substantially increase the motor power and compression pressure of the automobile motor; will remove carbon from the motor and prevent the formation of carbon therein; will substantially lessen engine friction and attendant engine wear; eliminate the necessity of grinding the valves; prevent valves from sticking and seat valves; prevent the motor from knocking; that by the use of such device and fluid first structure or ethyl gasoline performance can be obtained with third structure gasoline; that the use of such device and fluid will prolong the life of the motor; will cause the motor to operate smoother and with less heat; will prolong the life and seal the rings of the motor and will stop or lessen oil pumping by the motor.

Respondents also represent that the Rulo Energy Fluid is a synthetic product scientifically made from a secret formula; that the use of such fluid removes hard carbon; that such fluid is a perfect heat resistant lubricant; that by the use of such fluid perfect lubrication in the upper cylinder is assured even when the motor is cold when started; and that the use of such fluid stops motor wear.

Par. 4. In truth and in fact the statements and representations by respondents disseminated as aforesaid are deceptive, misleading, exaggerated, and untrue. In truth and in fact the use of such device and fluid will not effect economies in the use of an automobile through lessening the gasoline and oil consumption of the motor. The use of such device and fluid will not save from 20 to 55 percent of the gasoline used in the operation of an automobile motor and will not save 10 percent of the gasoline used in the operation of any car driven 1,500 or over miles per month. In truth and in fact the use of such device and fluid does not save any amount in the cost of gasoline and oil consumed by any car driven any distance for any length of time. The use of such device and fluid will not increase the motor power and the compression power of an automobile motor; will not remove carbon from the motor or prevent the formation of carbon therein; will not lessen engine friction or attendant engine wear; will not eliminate the necessity of grinding the valves; will not prevent valves from sticking; will not seat valves, and will not prevent the motor from knocking. First structure or ethyl gasoline performance cannot be obtained from third structure gasoline by the use of such device and fluid. The use of such device and fluid will not prolong the life of motors or cause motors to operate smoother or with less heat; will not prolong the life or seal the rings of the motor, and will not stop or lessen oil pumping by the motor.

The Rulo Energy Fluid is not made from a secret formula, and it is not a perfect heat resistant lubricant. The use of such fluid does not stop motor wear or remove carbon from the motor. The use of such fluid does not assure perfect lubrication in the upper cylinder of the motor at any time. Rulo Energy Fluid is a lubricating oil to which a small quantity of colloidal graphite is added. The addition of colloidal graphite does not enhance the value of lubricating oil for use in automobile engines.

Par. 5. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, has, and had, the tendency and capacity to, and does, and did, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public, situated in various States of the United States, into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid statements and representations are and were true and into purchasing substantial quantities of respondents’ device and lubricant because of said erroneous and mistaken belief. As a direct result thereof trade in commerce among and between various States of the United States has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their said competitors engaged in selling and distributing devices and lubricants designed for similar usages. In consequence thereof substantial injury has been done by the respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents’ competitors and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce and unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On July 26, 1939, after the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent L. E. Ruppe's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by D. T. Puckett, Esq., attorney for the Federal Trade Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Nathan M. Dicker, 416 West Eighth Street, Los Angeles, Calif., attorney for respondent L. E. Ruppe, before John J. Keenan, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. On September 25, 1939, respondent Bernal H. Dyas filed an answer stating that he has no connection with or interest in the Rulo Company or Rulo Corporation, and had not for a period of over two years, and that he knows nothing concerning the material allegations of fact set forth in the complaint and that he waives all intervening procedure, and further hearing as to said facts, and states that the Federal Trade Commission may make such disposition of the matter as it deems fit, and further states that the Federal Trade Commission may make its order that Rulo Company, Rulo Corporation and respondent Dyas cease and desist from doing any of the matters or things set forth in the complaint as in violation of law. On September 25, 1939, the respondents Norman D. Loughlin, Volney T. James, and on October 2, 1939, respondents Page H. Lamoreaux and the Rulo Corporation, filed separate answers admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which answers were duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the separate answers thereto, testimony and other evidence, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. From the year 1935 to January 1938, respondents Norman D. Loughlin, Volney T. James, and Page H. Lamoreaux traded as the Rulo Co., and had their office and principal place of business in the city of Los Angeles, State of California.

Respondent Rulo Corporation is a corporation organized and has done business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California, with its office and principal place of business at 309 South Western Street and various other locations in the city of Los Angeles, Calif.
Respondents Norman D. Loughlin, Volney T. James, and Page H. Lamoreaux, trading as Rulo Co., were, prior to April, 1936, and the Rulo Corporation has been, since April 1936, engaged in the business of selling and distributing a device known as "Rulo Automatic Injector," designed to be attached to automobile engines, and a fluid known as "Rulo Energy Fluid," designed for use in said device. During the times herein mentioned respondents have caused said device and fluid when sold or ordered to be transported from the State of California to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of California. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said device and fluid among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent Lamoreaux was director, and the respondents Lamoreaux and James were officers of the respondent Rulo Corporation, and directed and controlled the sales policies, advertisements and other activities of said corporation with respect to the acts and practices herein described.

Respondents L. E. Ruppe and Barnal H. Dyas did not participate in any way in the manufacture, marketing, or advertising of the products sold and distributed by the other respondents.

Respondent Ruth C. Hemstreet was an employee of the corporate respondent, and at the instance, request and instructions of respondent Lamoreaux, acted as an officer of said corporation. Said respondent Hemstreet, while acting as an officer of respondent Rulo Corporation, did not at any time take any part in the manufacture, sale, distribution, or advertising of any of its products except in carrying out the instructions of the respondent Page H. Lamoreaux.

None of the respondents has been engaged in the marketing, sale and distribution of "Rulo Automatic Injector" or "Rulo Energy Fluid" since January 1, 1938.

Par. 2. Respondents Lamoreaux, James, Loughlin, and Rulo Corporation had been, prior to January 1, 1938, in competition with other corporations and individuals, and with firms and partnerships engaged in the business of selling and distributing devices and fluids designed for similar uses, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said device and fluid, respondents Loughlin, James, Lamoreaux, and Rulo Corporation have caused statements and representations relative to the effectiveness in use of said device and fluid to be inserted in advertisements in newspapers, periodicals, circulars, and other printed matter, all of which were distributed in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and in continuities broadcast from radio stations which have power to and do convey the programs emanating therefrom to the listeners thereto located in various States of the United States other than the States from which said broadcasts originated. Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in said advertisements so used and distributed as aforesaid are the following:

The aforesaid statements and representations, together with others of similar import and meaning not herein set out but disseminated as aforesaid, purport to be descriptive of respondents' device and fluid and their effectiveness in use. In the manner and by the means aforesaid the respondents represent directly and by implication that the use of said device and fluid will effect substantial economies in the operation of an automobile through lessening the gasoline and oil consumption of the automobile motor; that the use of such device and fluid will effect a saving of from 20 percent to 55 percent in the gasoline used in the operation of an automobile and will save 10 percent of the gasoline used in the operation of every car driven 1,500 or more miles per month; that the use of such device and fluid will substantially increase the power and compression of the automobile motor; will remove carbon from the motor and prevent the formation of carbon therein; will substantially lessen engine friction and attendant engine wear; eliminate the necessity of grinding the valves; prevent valves from sticking and seat valves; prevent the motor from knocking; that by the use of such device and fluid first grade or ethyl gasoline performance can be obtained with third grade gasoline; that the use of such device and fluid will prolong the life of the motor; will cause the motor to operate smoother and with less heat; will prolong the life and seal the rings of the motor and will stop or lessen oil pumping by the motor.

Said respondents also represent that the Rulo Energy Fluid is a synthetic product scientifically made from a secret formula; that the use of such fluid removes hard carbon; that such fluid is a perfect heat-resistant lubricant; that by the use of such fluid perfect lubrication in the upper cylinder is assured even when the motor is cold when started; and that the use of such fluid stops motor wear.

Par. 4. The representations set forth in paragraph 3 hereof which said respondents make with respect to the effectiveness of respondents' device and fluid when used are deceptive, misleading, exaggerated and untrue. In truth and in fact, the use of such device and fluid will not effect economies in the operation of an automobile through lessening of the gasoline and oil consumption of the motor. The use of such device and fluid will not save from 20 percent to 55 percent of the gasoline used in the operation of an automobile motor and will not save 10 percent of the gasoline used in the operation of any car driven 1,500 or more miles per month. In truth and in fact, the use of such device and fluid does not save any substantial amount in the cost of gasoline and oil consumed by any car driven any distance for any length of time. The use of such device and fluid will not increase the power or compression of an automobile motor; will not remove carbon from the motor or prevent the formation of carbon therein; will not substantially lessen engine friction or engine wear; will not eliminate the necessity of grinding the valves; will not prevent valves from sticking; will not seat valves, and will not prevent the motor from knocking. First grade or ethyl gasoline performance cannot be obtained from third grade gasoline by the use of such device and fluid. The use of such device and fluid will not prolong the life of motors or cause motors to operate smoother or with less heat; will not prolong the life or seal the rings of the motor, and will not stop or lessen oil pumping by the motor.

The Rulo Energy Fluid is not made from a secret formula, and it is not a perfect heat-resistant lubricant. The use of such fluid does not stop motor wear or remove carbon from the motor. The use of such fluid does not assure perfect lubrication in the upper cylinder of the motor at any time. Rulo Energy Fluid is a lubricating oil to which a small quantity of colloidal graphite is added. The addition of colloidal graphite does not enhance the value of lubricating oil for use in automobile engines.

Par. 5. The use by the said respondents of the aforesaid statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, has, and had, the tendency and capacity to, and does, and did, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid statements and representations are and were true and into purchasing substantial quantities of respondents' device and lubricant because of said erroneous and mistaken belief. As a direct result thereof, trade in commerce among and between various States of the United States has been diverted unfairly to the respondents, Norman D. Loughlin, Volney T. James, and Page H. Lamoreaux, trading as Rulo Co. and Rulo Corporation, a corporation, from their said competitors engaged in selling and distributing devices and lubricants designed for similar usages. In consequence thereof, substantial injury has been done by the respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, Norman D. Loughlin, Volney T. James, and Page H. Lamoreaux, trading as Rulo Co., and Rulo Corporation, a corporation, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent L. E. Ruppe, testimony and other evidence taken before John J. Keenan, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the answers of respondents Norman D. Loughlin, Volney T. James, and Page H. Lamoreaux, individually and trading as Rulo Co., and the answer of the Rulo Corporation, in which answers said respondents admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in the complaint and state that each respondent waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that the respondents L. E. Ruppe, Bernal H. Dyas, and Ruth C. Hemstreet have not violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and that the said respondents Norman D. Loughlin, Volney T. James, and Page H. Lamoreaux, individually and trading as Rulo Co., and Rulo Corporation, a corporation, have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondents Norman D. Loughlin, Volney T. James, and Page H. Lamoreaux, individually and trading as Rulo Co., and Rulo Corporation, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce between and among the States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of the automotive device known as "Rulo Automatic Injector" and the automotive lubricant known as "Rulo Energy Fluid," whether, sold under those names or under any other name or names, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or by inference, that

1. The use of said device and fluid will effect substantial economies in the operation of an automobile through the lessening of gasoline and oil consumption of the automobile motor.

2. The use of such device and fluid will effect any substantial saving of gasoline used in the operation of an automobile.

3. The use of such device and fluid will substantially increase the power and compression of the automobile motor.

4. The use of such device and fluid will remove carbon from the motor and prevent the formation of carbon therein.

5. The use of such device and fluid, or either of them, will substantially lessen engine friction and attendant engine wear.

6. The use of such device and fluid will eliminate the necessity of grinding the valves, prevent valves from sticking, and seat valves.

7. The use of such device and fluid will prevent the motor from knocking.

8. By the use of such device and fluid first grade or ethyl gasoline performance can be obtained with gasoline of a lower grade.

9. The use of such device and fluid will prolong the life of the motor, will cause the motor to operate smoother and with less heat, will prolong the life and seal the rings of the motor and will stop or lessen oil pumping by the motor.

10. "Rulo Energy Fluid" is scientifically made from a secret formula.

11. The use of such fluid removes hard carbon.

12. Said fluid is a perfect heat-resistant lubricant.

13. By the use of such fluid perfect lubrication in the upper cylinder is assured even when the motor is cold when started.

It is further ordered, That the respondents Norman D. Loughlin, Volney T. James, and Page H. Lamoreaux, individually and trading as Rulo Co., and Rulo Corporation shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they, and each of them, have complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That the complaint herein be, and the same hereby is, dismissed as to the respondents L. E. Ruppe, Bernal H. Dyas, and Ruth C. Hemstreet.
IN THE MATTER OF

PETER SANDERS, HARRY SANDERS AND SAMUEL SANDERS, DOING BUSINESS AS THE PERFECT RECONDITION SPARK PLUG COMPANY, AND SAMUEL SANDERS, DOING BUSINESS AS ACE AUTO SUPPLY COMPANY

Docket 3392. Complaint, Jan. 24, 1939—Decision, June 25, 1940

Where three individuals engaged in sale of used and discarded spark plugs, for use in automotive gasoline engines, to dealers and wagon peddlers in various parts of the United States and in foreign countries for resale, and, as thus engaged, in transporting their said products to such purchasers in other States, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries as aforesaid, and in competition as above set forth with others engaged in manufacture and sale of spark plugs to dealers purchasing for resale and to members of public purchasing for use in various States and in said District of Columbia and foreign countries, and including among such competitors two manufacturers who respectively sold their products under identifying trade names, brands, or marks, "Champion" and "AC," placed as identifying marks on the exposed portion of the insulators of their said products and on cartons or containers in which packaged when offered and sold to purchasing public, and who had expended large sums in advertising their said respective trade-marks and spark plugs made thereunder, which were well known by large majority of motoring public and served to identify such plugs thus marked with two manufacturers aforesaid, and business in which "AC" and "Champion" spark plugs, sold to substantial extent by manufacturers thereof and by dealers therein in commerce in the various States and in said District and foreign countries, constituted a very substantial portion of the entire spark plug business in the United States;

In carrying on their aforesaid business of selling used and discarded spark plugs, consisting, substantially, almost entirely of such plugs originally made and sold by 2 manufacturers above referred to under brand names AC and Champion, as above set forth, in course of which said individuals made a practice of (1) obtaining such discarded spark plugs as junk and at small cost from garages, service stations, and other places where they had been abandoned by their owners as worthless; (2) of treating and refurbishing same by cleaning, sandblasting, filing, buffing, adjusting points, and painting metal shells with black paint; and (3) packing such plugs 10 to a box with cover bearing inscription "PERFECT RECONDITIONED REGISTERED"; and (4) selling, as hereinbefore set forth, such plugs, which, after having been treated and refurbished as aforesaid, had appearance of new and unused Champion and AC spark plugs, respectively, to small garages, dealers, and wagon peddlers for resale to public—

1 Amended and supplemental
Syllabus

Sold and distributed said spark plugs, which, thus treated and refurbished, and individually wrapped in plain waxed paper with no identification or marking of any kind, bore no individually identifying marking to indicate said individuals' connection therewith, or used, second-hand, refurbished character thereof, but continued to carry brand names "Champion" and "AC," placed thereon originally by manufacturers thereof, and which brand names on porcelain ends thereof, when installed in motor by mechanic or some other person at garage or service station where purchase is made, as is custom in great majority of cases in which such plugs are sold to car owners, afforded, in such instances, no opportunity to see box from which plug is removed or to see plug until after installation, and constituted only visible part of said product;

Notwithstanding fact said refurbished, discarded Champion and AC spark plugs, due to use and wear to which they had been previously subjected, were inferior in functional qualities to new spark plugs from which they were practically indistinguishable in appearance, and did not comply with blueprints and specifications of the original manufacturers, who, in response to the exacting and meticulous technical requirements of different models of the various automotive manufacturers, made and supplied very large number of types of such products, varying often only in very minor but essential respects, and recommended, in the interest of proper and adequate motor performance, periodic installation of new plugs of proper type for particular year and model of car involved;

With result that acts and practices of said individuals in selling such discarded, treated, and refurbished spark plugs, with said brand names and identifying marks of original manufacturers, and wholesale selling prices, which were about one-third of new products, and cleaning of which corresponded to service readily available to owners at service stations at a charge of 5 cents per plug (but additional treatment of which by said individuals in restoring appearance of newness altered the three highly important functional dimensions thereof), with their appearance of new plugs and possibilities of greater profits, afforded incentives to dealer to substitute said individuals' spark plugs for new ones, and with tendency and capacity, through such acts and practices, to deceive members of purchasing public into mistaken and erroneous belief that said plugs were new and unused, in same merchantable condition as when first sold and distributed, and backed by the guarantee of respective manufacturers, and with effect, as a consequence and direct result thereof, that trade and commerce among said States and in said District and foreign countries was diverted unfairly to said individuals from competitors engaged in sale of new and unused spark plugs, and also from those selling used plugs who may truthfully represent the quality and character thereof; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. John W. Addison, Mr. Miles J. Furnas, and Mr. John L. Hornor, trial examiners.

Mr. Joseph C. Fehr for the Commission.

Mr. John Wilson Hood, of New York City, for respondents.
AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT

Whereas, The Federal Trade Commission did heretofore, to wit, on April 29, 1938, issue its complaint herein, charging that respondents herein were and have been using unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act;

Whereas, The Commission has reason to believe that the respondents herein are engaged in unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices other than and in addition to those in relation to which the Commission issued its said original complaint and it appears to said Commission that a further proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest;

Now therefore, Acting in the public interest, pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission issues its amended and supplemental complaint charging that Peter Sanders, Harry Sanders, and Samuel Sanders, individuals, doing business as The Perfect Recondition Spark Plug Co., and Samuel Sanders, an individual, doing business as Ace Auto Supply Co., have been and now are using unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in said act, and states its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPHS 1. The respondents, Peter Sanders, Harry Sanders, and Samuel Sanders, are individuals doing business as The Perfect Reconditioned Spark Plug Co., sometimes also referred to as The Perfect Reconditioned Spark Plug Co., with their principal office and place of business located at 1133-39 Bedford Avenue, in the Borough of Brooklyn, in the city of New York, in the State of New York. The aforementioned respondent, Samuel Sanders, also does business as the Ace Auto Supply Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 161 B Avenue in the city of New York, in the State of New York.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their businesses, said respondents have been for a period of more than 1 year last past, and are now, engaged in the sale of used and reconditioned spark plugs for use in gasoline engines. Respondents have sold and still sell said spark plugs to dealers located in various parts of the United States and foreign countries who purchase for resale. Respondents have caused and now cause said spark plugs, when so sold by them, to be transported from their respective places of business in the State of New York to said purchasers located in States other than the State of New York, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries.
Par. 3. During all the times above mentioned, other individuals, partnerships, firms, and corporations have been, and are now, engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling spark plugs to dealers who purchase for resale and to members of the public who purchase for use, residing in various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia and in foreign countries. Said manufacturers and sellers, respectively, have caused and now cause said spark plugs, when so sold by them, to be transported from their respective places of business to purchasers thereof located in States other than the State of origin of said shipments, in the District of Columbia and in foreign countries.

The respondents, during all the times above mentioned and referred to have been, and still are, in competition in the sale of spark plugs in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with such other individuals, partnerships, firms, and corporations manufacturing, selling, and distributing spark plugs.

Par. 4. Among the manufacturers and sellers of spark plugs referred to in paragraph 3 hereof are certain manufacturers who are, and have been, making and selling spark plugs, respectively, under the brands or trade names "Champion" and "A-C" in such commerce. Such spark plugs are respectively marked and branded with the names "Champion" and "A-C." The spark plugs made and sold under the brand and trade names "Champion" and "A-C" are well and favorably known among the trade and the public generally as being of superior quality and as being in constant demand by users of spark plugs.

During all of the times above mentioned, the spark plugs manufactured, branded and sold under the trade names "Champion" and "A-C" have to a substantial extent been sold by the manufacturers thereof and by dealers therein in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. The business of the sale of such spark plugs branded as "Champion" and "A-C" spark plugs, respectively, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, has constituted a very substantial portion of the entire spark plug business.

Par. 5. Substantially all of the spark plugs sold by respondents are spark plugs which were manufactured and sold by the manufacturers under the brand names "Champion" and "A-C." Such spark plugs, carrying the aforesaid brand names, have been used by members of the public until they became worn out by use or became defective and unserviceable for further use. The respondents make a practice of obtaining said worn out or defective and unserviceable spark plugs at small cost from garages, service stations, truck operators, and similar sources of supply. Respondents then repair or recondition such spark plugs for sale and use as herein detailed. When so repaired and reconditioned, such spark plugs have the appearance of new and unused "Champion" and "A-C" spark plugs, respectively. Respondent sell said used and reconditioned spark plugs with the brand names "Champion" and "A-C," appearing thereon without disclosing the purchasers thereof that said spark plugs are used, or defective spark plugs which have been repaired and reconditioned. The sale and distribution of said used and reconditioned spark plugs constitute the greater part of respondents' business in the sale of spark plugs.

The spark plugs thus sold and distributed by respondents were not and are not individually identified by suitable marking so as to indicate the used, second-hand, refurbished character thereof, but continue to have on their face the brand names "Champion" and "A-C," which said brand names were originally placed on said spark plugs by the manufacturers thereof. Said plugs are individually wrapped in plain waxed paper which carries no identification or mark to disclose the used or reconditioned nature thereof.

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein described place in the hands of retailers buying for resale an instrument and means whereby said retailers are enabled to represent and offer for sale and sell respondents' said reconditioned spark plugs as being new "Champion" or "A-C" spark plugs and thus commit a fraud upon a substantial portion of the purchasing public.

Par. 6. The acts and practices of respondents in selling spark plugs bearing the brand names "Champion" and "A-C" which they have reconditioned and repaired without disclosing on the face of said spark plugs that said spark plugs were worn out or otherwise defective spark plugs repaired or reconditioned by the respondents, have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive dealers in spark plugs and members of the purchasing public, in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, into the mistaken and erroneous belief that said spark plugs so sold by the respondents were, and are, new and unused spark plugs and are in the same merchantable condition as when manufactured and first sold and distributed by the respective manufacturers thereof, and into the purchase of such spark plugs in and on account of said mistaken and erroneous belief induced as aforesaid. As a result thereof, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from competitors engaged in the sale of new and unused "Champion" and "A-C" spark plugs and other spark plugs who truthfully represent the character and quality of said spark plugs and also from competitors who sell used and reconditioned spark plugs who truthfully represent the quality and character thereof. In consequence thereof, injury has been done and is being done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on April 29, 1938, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents Peter Sanders, Harry Sanders, and Samuel Sanders, and on January 24, 1939, issued and subsequently served its amended and supplemental complaint upon said respondents, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the filing of answers to said complaint and said amended and supplemental complaint by the respondents, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint and said amended and supplemental complaint were introduced by Joseph C. Fehr, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of said complaint and said amended and supplemental complaint by John Wilson Hood, attorney for the respondents, before John W. Addison, Miles J. Furnas, and John L. Hornor, trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it. Said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and said amended and supplemental complaint and the answers thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and the amended and supplemental complaint and in opposition thereto, and upon oral argument; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
Findings

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondents Peter Sanders and Harry Sanders are individuals doing business as The Perfect Recondition Spark Plug Co., sometimes also referred to as The Perfect Reconditioned Spark Plug Co., with their principal office and place of business located at 1133-39 Bedford Avenue, in the Borough of Brooklyn, in the city and State of New York; and respondent Samuel Sanders is an individual doing business as the Ace Auto Supply Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 161 B Avenue in the city and State of New York.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of their businesses, said respondents have been, for a period of more than 1 year last past, and now are, engaged in the sale of used and discarded spark plugs for use in gasoline engines of automobiles. Respondents have sold and still sell said spark plugs to dealers and wagon peddlers located in various parts of the United States and in foreign countries who purchase for resale. Respondents have caused and now cause said spark plugs, when so sold by them, to be transported from their respective places of business in the State of New York to said purchasers located in States other than the State of New York, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries.

Par. 3. During all of the times above mentioned, other individuals, partnerships, firms, and corporations have been, and now are, engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling spark plugs to dealers who purchase for resale and to members of the public who purchase for use, residing in various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia and in foreign countries. Said manufacturers and sellers, respectively, have caused and now cause said spark plugs, when so sold by them, to be transported from their respective places of business to purchasers thereof located in States other than the State of origin of said shipments, in the District of Columbia and in foreign countries.

The respondents, during all of the times above mentioned, have been, and still are, in competition in the sale of spark plugs in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia and in foreign countries with such other individuals, partnerships, firms, and corporations, manufacturing, selling, and distributing spark plugs.

Par. 4. Among the manufacturers and sellers of spark plugs referred to in paragraph 3 hereof are the Champion Spark Plug Co., a corporation, which manufactures and sells spark plugs under the brand or trade name "Champion," and the AC Spark Plug Co., a corporation, which manufactures and sells spark plugs under the brand or trade name “AC.” These brand or trade names and identifying marks are placed on the exposed portion of the insulators of the products of each of these companies and on the cartons or containers in which the respective products are packaged when offered for sale and sold to the purchasing public. Said trade-marks “AC” and “Champion” are well known by a large majority of the motoring public and serve to identify the spark plugs so marked with the two said corporations. Large sums of money have been expended by the two said corporations in advertising their respective trade marks “AC” and “Champion” and the spark plugs made and sold under those marks.

During all of the times above mentioned, the spark plugs so manufactured and branded under the trade-marks “AC” and “Champion” have been sold to a substantial extent by the manufacturers thereof and by dealers therein in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries. The business of selling such spark plugs branded as “AC” and “Champion” spark plugs, respectively, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia and in foreign countries, has constituted a very substantial portion of the entire spark plug business in the United States.

PAR. 5. Substantially all of the spark plugs sold by the respondents are used and discarded spark plugs which originally were manufactured and sold by the aforesaid corporations under the brand names “AC” and “Champion.” Such spark plugs, carrying the aforesaid brand or trade names and identifying marks of said manufacturers, have been used by members of the public operating motor vehicles and have been discarded by them as worn-out or defective and unserviceable for further use before they are acquired by the respondents, who make a practice of obtaining such discarded spark plugs as junk and at small cost from garages, service stations, and other places where they have been abandoned by their owners as worthless. Respondents then treat and refurbish such spark plugs by cleaning, sandblasting, filing, buffing, adjusting the points and painting the metal shells with black paint. They then pack 10 of such plugs in a box, the cover of which bears the inscription “PERFECT RECONDITIONED REGISTERED” and sell the same to small garages, dealers, and wagon peddlers for resale to the public. When so treated and refurbished, such spark plugs have the appearance of new and unused “Champion” and “AC” spark plugs, respectively.

PAR. 6. The spark plugs thus sold and distributed by respondents were not and are not individually identified by any marking so as to indicate respondents’ connection therewith or the used, second-hand, refurbished character thereof, but continue to carry the brand names “Champion” and “AC” which were originally placed thereon by the manufacturers thereof. Said plugs are individually wrapped in plain waxed paper which carries no identification or marking of any kind.

Par. 7. In the great majority of cases, when spark plugs are sold to car owners they are installed in the motor by a mechanic or some other person at the garage or service station where the purchase is made. In such instances the car owner is not afforded any opportunity to see the box from which the spark plug is removed and often does not see the spark plug until after it has been installed in the motor of his car. When so installed, the only visible part of the spark plug is the upper part of the metal shell and the white ceramic insulator which bears the brand name of the manufacturer.

Par. 8. In and during the process of manufacture, the firing end of the core of a “Champion” spark plug has been carefully worked out with a view to controlling the proper heat range of the plug and to shield the center electrode to a proper distance with respect to the end of the shell and the side electrode so that each spark may occur in proper position, the purpose of the spark plug being to ignite the compressed gas at the proper time and at a predetermined position within the cylinder of the engine. The spark plug is simultaneously subjected to many complex reactions under operation in an engine with temperature ranges from 1,200° to 1,500°. Explosion pressures are approximately 400 pounds per square inch and under detonation reach a 2,000-pound pressure. Chemical reaction is also encountered due to the various constituents of gasoline. Electrolytic reaction also accounts for much erosion of the center and side electrodes. The mechanical scouring action of gas at high temperatures and pressure have an erosive effect on the tip of the insulator, often changing its shape. The location of the spark in the cylinder of the motor is very important and this is determined by the location of the gap, different types of Champion plugs for different types or models of cars varying from each other in the position of the spark gap with relation to the gas stream within the cylinder. The spark plug manufacturer works very closely with the car manufacturers to insure that the plug will produce the spark at the right place, and car manufacturers often return plugs which have been sent to them with the wrong gap setting. It is very essential that not even one plug in a set leak an undue amount, since the leaky plug will get unduly hot and will often result in fusing the electrodes, causing serious harm to the engine. Car manufacturers invariably recom mend that new plugs be installed once each year or after approximately 10,000 miles of operation because from tests in their engineering division they know that the performance of a car can be jeopardized by old plugs. The Champion Spark Plug Co., in order to insure the accuracy of its spark plugs for various types of motor vehicles, causes an inspection and a reinspection to be made of all the spark plugs manufactured by it and causes special tests to be made by its engineering division of approximately 10 percent of its total production.

Par. 9. Sixty so-called reconditioned "Champion" spark plugs purchased from respondents were given complete tests. There were 10 each of the following types: C-4, C-7, No. 7, C-15, J-5, and J-8. The C-4, the C-7, the No. 7, the C-15, the J-5 and the J-8 spark plugs were all obsolete. The box bearing the type No. C-4 contained 2 plugs which were of different type numbers. The box bearing the type No. J-5 contained 3 plugs which were of different type numbers. Of the 60 plugs there were 27 in which the relation of the side wire to the center wire was wrong. In connection with the center wires of the 60 plugs tested, 29 were slightly burned, 21 badly burned and 4 were satisfactory. Of the 60 plugs tested, 38 of the side wires had been either filed, burned, or bent so that they would not pass the inspection requirements of the Champion Spark Plug Co. for either a new or reconditioned plug and in 22 of the plugs the side wires were satisfactory. The gap spacing of the 60 plugs tested showed 36 to be improperly spaced and the semipetticoat of the core of the 60 plugs tested showed 49 badly damaged and in none of the 60 plugs was this feature in its original condition. The test showed that each had had more than 10,000 miles of service.

Discarded "Champion" and "AC" spark plugs refurbished and resold by respondents, due to the use and wear to which they have been previously subjected, are inferior in functional qualities to new spark plugs from which they are practically indistinguishable in appearance.

Par. 10. The reconditioned spark plugs sold by respondents do not comply with the blueprints and specifications of the original manufacturers thereof and are not considered by them to be a satisfactory product. Neither Champion Spark Plug Co. nor AC Spark Plug Co., nor any other spark plug manufacturer, engages in the practice of collecting, cleaning, and selling discarded spark plugs. The damage and wear which result from use of a spark plug are to the firing end of the plug, which is located within the cylinder of the motor. In addition to the wear which occurs to the firing end of a spark plug through use, the respondents remove additional material by their sandblasting and filing operations, which treatments alter the three important functional dimensions of the plug, which the manufacturers undertake to hold to very close limits in order to secure proper performance. These three dimensions are the distances from tip of insulator to end of center wire; from tip of insulator to end of shell; and from end of shell to end of center wire. Slight variations in one or more of these dimensions may make a spark plug incapable of rendering efficient service in the motors for which it is recommended by the manufacturer and result in waste of fuel and improper performance of the engine.

Because of the various requirements of different automobile engines over 70 types of spark plugs are supplied by 1 manufacturer. In some instances the differences in functional dimensions between various types of new Champion and AC plugs are less than the differences in functional dimensions between a used spark plug sold by respondents and a new one of the same type made by the same manufacturer. Spark plugs refurbished by respondents in which the functional dimensions have been altered to any material extent no longer correctly represent the type designation given them by the original manufacturer.

Par. 11. The wholesale selling prices of used spark plugs refurbished by respondents are approximately one-third those of corresponding new spark plugs. Sales of respondents' plugs to car owners at the usual retail selling prices of new plugs would result in several times as much profit to the seller as the sale of a corresponding new plug. Sales of respondents' plugs at retail prices substantially lower than those of corresponding new plugs would still result in much greater profit to the seller. The appearance of respondents' spark plugs together with the possibilities of greater profits are incentives to the dealer to substitute respondents' spark plugs for new ones.

Par. 12. Spark plug cleaning services are generally available to motorists throughout the United States. A large percentage of garages and service stations have spark plug cleaning machines which clean the firing end of the spark plug by sandblasting and such establishments also clean and adjust the points. A charge of 5 cents per plug is made for this service. The treatments thus available to motorists at garages and service stations before spark plugs are abandoned by their owners are substantially equivalent to those which respondents give to discarded, unserviceable, and worn out spark plugs, except for the additional steps performed by them having to do with restoring the appearance of newness.
PAR. 13. The acts and practices of respondents in selling discarded spark plugs treated and refurbished by them and bearing the brand names and other identifying marks of the original manufacturers have had and now have the tendency and capacity to deceive members of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that said spark plugs are new and unused spark plugs, in the same merchantable condition as when manufactured and first sold and distributed, and backed by the reputation and guarantee of the respective manufacturers thereof. As a direct result thereof, trade and commerce among and between the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from competitors engaged in the sale of new and unused spark plugs and also from competitors selling used spark plugs who may truthfully represent the quality and character thereof. In consequence thereof, injury has been done and is being done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein found, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint and the amended and supplemental complaint of the Commission, the answers of respondents Peter Sanders and Harry Sanders, individuals, doing business as The Perfect Recondition Spark Plug Co., and Samuel Sanders, an individual, doing business as Ace Auto Supply Co., testimony and other evidence, in support of the allegations of said complaint and said amended and supplemental complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral argument by Joseph C. Fehr, counsel for the Commission, and by John Wilson Hood, counsel for the respondents, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Peter Sanders and Harry Sanders, individuals, doing business as The Perfect Recondition Spark Plug Co., and Samuel Sanders, an individual, doing business as Ace Auto Supply Co., their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of spark plugs in interstate or foreign commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Offering for sale, selling, or delivering to others for sale to the public, any spark plug which has been used and thereafter reconditioned in any manner unless the word "used" or "second-hand" or "reconditioned," or some other word or words of similar import and meaning, have been permanently stamped or fixed on each of such spark plugs in a color in contrast to the surface to which the word is applied and of a size and in such location as to be clearly legible to the purchasers thereof after the same shall have been installed, and unless there has been plainly printed or marked on the boxes, cartons, or other containers in which such spark plugs are sold or offered for sale a notice that said spark plugs are used, second-hand, or reconditioned.

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of its "Retonga" medicinal preparation as treatment for stomach disorders and various other ailments, to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia; in advertisements of its said product which it disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals of general circulation, and in circulars and other printed or written matter distributed in commerce among the States, and by other means in commerce, and which were intended or likely to induce purchase of said preparation, and in false advertisements which it also disseminated through the same means and through use of purported testimonial letters published in local newspapers in form of news items reciting various beneficial results claimed to have been obtained by parties in such testimonial letters, and through which it represented that its said product would cure, eliminate or alleviate various symptoms which were, in fact, indicative of diseases and disorders for which its preparation had no curative or therapeutic value—

(a) Represented, through use of statements in such advertisements that its said "Retonga" was an alterative medicine and powerful stomachic, and cure or remedy for, or competent treatment of, nervousness, night rising, indigestion, headaches, sluggishness, pains, toxic poisoning, constipation, dizziness, muscular aches and pains, insomnia, biliousness, undernourishment, loss of weight, lack of strength, weak kidneys, and other long standing disorders, and was beneficial and effective in treatment of various diseases of which aforesaid disorders were symptoms, and relieved body of toxic poisons and cleansed system and renewed, restored and built up strength and appetite and body, and restored health and increased weight;

Facts being it was not a remedy or cure for nervousness and various other ailments or conditions above set forth, and would be of benefit in treatment of such conditions or symptoms only insofar as certain of them might be due to constipation or lack of appetite, it did not possess any therapeutic or beneficial value in treatment of diseases or disorders of which foregoing conditions might be symptoms, in excess of extent to which use of a mild laxative and gastric tonic might temporarily relieve symptoms due to constipation or lack of appetite, had no therapeutic value in treatment of former in excess of providing temporary relief therefrom, therapeutic properties thereof did not exceed those of a mild laxative and gastric tonic or stomachic, and it had no therapeutic value in healing, curing, or relieving functional or organic systemic disorders in excess of providing such relief as might be accomplished by administration of such a preparation as above indicated, and would not accomplish, except as aforesaid noted, various results claimed therefor as above set forth;
Complaint

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements, representations and advertisements were true, and that said preparation was a cure or remedy for various disorders for which it had little or no therapeutic value, and of inducing purchase by such public of its said drug containing medicinal preparation:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr. for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Retonga Medicine Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Retonga Medicine Co., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Georgia, with its main office located at 161 Spring Street NW., in the city of Atlanta, State of Georgia. Respondent, during the year last past, has been and still is engaged in the sale and distribution of a certain medicinal preparation containing drugs known as "Retonga," which is offered for sale and sold as a treatment for stomach disorders and various ailments of the human body. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent causes said medicinal preparation when sold to be transported from its place of business in the State of Georgia to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States other than the State of Georgia, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said products, by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product, and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

The theory upon which Retonga was founded was first thought of by a German pharmaceutical chemist of many year's experience who was employed by one of the largest medicine companies in America • • • It took several years for these experiments but finally Retonga reached the stage of perfection sought by its originator.

Retonga contains seven different herbs, each one of which has a different effect on the human system.

It is a powerful stomachic and alterative medicine. Retonga gives you a keen appetite for good, wholesome, nourishing food and stimulates natural digestive processes.

Farmers, mechanics, merchants and men and women in every walk of life tell how Retonga relieved them of long suffering from nervousness, night risings, sour indigestion, headaches, sluggishness, and pains from toxic poisons with constipation.

Reports from men and women who were weakened and tired, suffering from food fermentation, headaches, dizziness, and muscular pains from sluggish bowels, say this new roots, herbs, and barks medicine has brought them rapid and lasting relief.

Retonga is inexpensive and brings lasting results.

Nearly all users of Retonga who send in statements of their experiences say that their troubles have been stubborn and of long standing, ranging from a few months' duration to many years, and although they have tried many medicines, Retonga is the only one that has brought them real relief.

Retonga, the remarkable new strengthening and up-building herbal medicine which is sweeping the country with sensational success, • • •

The very first bottle of Retonga is guaranteed to bring a decided improvement in your poor, weakened, tired-out ailing condition or every cent of the small cost will be refunded without question.

Unlimited Guarantee

No matter how long-standing and stubborn your weakened, worn-out condition may be, or how many times you have tried and failed to find relief from stubborn nervous, indigestion, muscular pains and achy joints, loss of weight from under-nourishment, lack of strength, and similar harassing complaints due to a let-down fagged-out condition, Retonga is guaranteed to bring you gratifying improvement or you can return your very first bottle and get your money back without question.

Retonga has established a remarkable record everywhere for quickly overcoming long-standing cases of nervous indigestion, sluggish bowels, lack of strength and other distressing disorders.

Every day Retonga is thanked by scores of grateful men and women for ridding them of acid indigestion, weakened, worn-out condition and building up their strength.

In addition to the foregoing advertisements, the respondent disseminates false advertisements in the same manner as set out above by means of purported testimonial letters which the respondent publishes in local newspapers in the form of news items reciting the various beneficial results claimed to have been obtained by the parties in such testimonial letters. In this manner the respondent represents that its preparation will cure, eliminate or alleviate various symptoms which are in fact indicative of diseases and disorders for which respondent's preparation has no curative or therapeutic value. Typical of such advertising disseminated as aforesaid is the following:

I Didn't Dare Eat Such Things as Meat or Beans Before I Got Retonga.

"It's the Finest Medicine I Ever Saw", Declares Link Belt Employee. Eats anything He wants Now; Other Troubles Disappeared, Too. Tells Experience.

Colds are often dangerous and the changeable weather of spring is a season of colds. Keep yourself strengthened and built up. A weakened, run-down condition, sluggish elimination, poor digestion and acid wastes in the system lower resistance, make colds easier to catch and hang on longer. Every day Retonga is thanked by scores of grateful men and women for ridding them of acid indigestion, weakened, worn-out condition and building up their strength. Mr. William D. Brunnemer, 38 North Bell View Place, Indianapolis, a member of Waverly Masonic Lodge, and for 14 years a popular and valued employee of the Link Belt Company, one of the world's best-known concerns, gave Retonga a thorough test in his own case and says:

"I was in such bad shape I was afraid to eat for I almost smothered from sour indigestion and gas after every meal. I didn't dare touch meat, beans or greasy foods for they seemed like poison to my system. At night I had to get up practically every hour to relieve my kidneys and my passages burned and were cloudy and had a strong odor. Stubborn constipation added to my troubles and for years I had to take a laxative as regularly as I went to bed. My feet would swell and burn like coals of fire and I had pains between my shoulders and in my arms that felt as sharp as a knife. I felt so tired out and draggy it was an effort to move, and I hardly know what I would have done if I hadn't got hold of Retonga when I did.

"Retonga fixed me up so fine I now eat anything without a sign of indigestion; I don't need laxatives any more and every pain and ache is gone. Instead of getting up seven or eight times every night, I seldom get up at all, and the burning and cloudiness and odor have disappeared. I feel sure being built up again

Par. 3. Through the use of the statements hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, all of which purpose to be descriptive of the remedial, curative, or therapeutic properties of respondent's preparation, respondent has represented and does now represent, directly and indirectly, that its preparation Retonga: (a) is an alterative medicine and powerful stomachic; (b) is a cure or remedy for, or a competent treatment of, nervousness, night rising, indigestion, headaches, sluggishness, pains, toxic poisoning, constipation, dizziness, muscular aches and pains, insomnia, biliousness, undernourishment, loss of weight, lack of strength, weak kidneys, and other long-standing disorders, and that said preparation is beneficial and effective in the treatment of the various diseases of which these disorders are symptoms; (c) relieves the body of toxic poisons and cleanses the system; (d) renews, restores, and builds up the strength and appetite, restores the health, builds up the body, and increases weight.

The aforesaid representations and claims used and disseminated by the respondent as hereinabove described are grossly exaggerated, misleading and untrue. In truth and in fact Retonga is not an alterative medicine or powerful stomachic, and its therapeutic properties are limited to little more than those of a laxative. It is not a remedy or cure for nervousness, night risings, indigestions, headaches, sluggishness, pains, toxic poisoning, constipation, dizziness, muscular aches and pains, insomnia, biliousness, undernourishment, loss of weight, lack of strength, weak kidneys, or other long-standing disorders or a competent treatment therefor, and is not beneficial or effective in the treatment of various diseases of which such disorders are symptoms. Its use does not relieve the body of toxic poisons or cleanse the system. It does not renew, restore or build up the strength, appetite or health. It does not build up the body or increase weight.

Par. 4. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements, representations and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid with respect to said medicinal preparation has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true, and that said preparation is a cure or remedy for various disorders for which it has little or no therapeutic value, and induces the purchase by the public of respondent’s medicinal preparation containing drugs.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on November 14, 1939, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent, Retonga Medicine Co., charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On November 29, 1939, the respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondent and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

Findings as to the Facts

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Retonga Medicine Co., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Georgia, with its main office located at 161 Spring Street, NW., in the city of Atlanta, State of Georgia. Respondent is now and during the year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of a certain medicinal preparation, composed of drugs and known as “Retonga,” which is offered for sale and sold as a treatment for stomach disorders.
Findings

and various ailments of the human body. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent causes said medicinal preparation when sold to be transported from its place of business in the State of Georgia to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States other than the State of Georgia, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product, by United States mail, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product, and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

The theory upon which Retonga was founded was first thought of by a German pharmaceutical chemist of many years' experience who was employed by one of the largest medicine companies in America. • • • It took several years for these experiments but finally Retonga reached the state of perfection sought by its originator.

Retonga contains seven different herbs, each one of which has a different effect on the human system.

It is a powerful stomachic and alterative medicine. Retonga gives you a keen appetite for good, wholesome, nourishing food and stimulates natural digestive processes.

Farmers, mechanics, merchants and men and women in every walk of life tell how Retonga relieved them of long suffering from nervousness, night risings, sour indigestion, headaches, sluggishness, and pains from toxic poisons with constipation.

Reports from men and women who were weakened and tired, suffering from food fermentation, headaches, dizziness, and muscular pains from sluggish bowels say this new roots, herbs, and barks medicine has brought them rapid and lasting relief.

Retonga is inexpensive and brings lasting results.
Nearly all users of Retonga who send in statements of their experiences say that their troubles have been stubborn and of long standing, ranging from a few months' duration to many years, and although they have tried many medicines, Retonga is the only one that has brought them real relief.

Retonga, the remarkable new strengthening and up-building herbal medicine which is sweeping the country with sensational success, * * *

The very first bottle of Retonga is guaranteed to bring a decided improvement in your poor, weakened, tired-out ailing condition or every cent of the small cost will be refunded without question.

Unlimited Guarantee

No matter how long-standing and stubborn your weakened, worn-out condition may be, or how many times you have tried and failed to find relief from stubborn nervous indigestion, muscular pains and achy joints, loss of weight from under-nourishment, lack of strength, and similar harassing complaints due to a let-down, fagged-out condition, Retonga is guaranteed to bring you gratifying improvement or you can return your very first bottle and get your money back without question.

Retonga has established a remarkable record everywhere for quickly overcoming long-standing cases of nervous indigestion, sluggish bowels, lack of strength and other distressing disorders.

Every day Retonga is thanked by scores of grateful men and women for ridding them of acid indigestion, weakened, worn-out condition and building up their strength.

In addition to the foregoing advertisements, the respondent disseminates false advertisements in the same manner as set out above by means of purported testimonial letters which the respondent publishes in local newspapers in the form of news items reciting the various beneficial results claimed to have been obtained by the parties in such testimonial letters. PAR. 3. Through the use of the statements hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the remedial, curative, or therapeutic properties of respondent's preparation, respondent has represented and does now represent, directly and indirectly, that its preparation Retonga is an alterative medicine and powerful stomachic; is a cure or remedy for, or a competent treatment of, nervousness, night rising, indigestion, headaches, sluggishness, pains, toxic poisoning, constipation, dizziness, muscular aches and pains, insomnia, biliousness, undernourishment, loss of weight, lack of strength, weak kidneys, and other long-standing disorders, and that said preparation is beneficial and effective in the treatment of the various diseases of which these disorders are symptoms; relieves the body of toxic poisons and cleanses the system; renews, restores, and builds up the strength and appetite, restores the health, builds up the body and increases weight.

The therapeutic properties of "Retonga" do not exceed those of a mild laxative and gastric tonic or stomachic. The preparation "Retonga" is not a remedy or cure for nervousness, night rising, indigestion, headaches, sluggishness, pains, toxic poisoning, dizziness, muscular aches and pains, insomnia, biliousness, undernourishment, loss of weight, lack of strength, weak kidneys, and such preparation would be of benefit in the treatment of such conditions or symptoms only insofar as certain of them might be due to constipation or lack of appetite. Such preparation does not possess any therapeutic or beneficial value in the treatment of the diseases and disorders of which the foregoing conditions may be symptoms in excess of the extent to which the use of a mild laxative and gastric tonic may temporarily relieve symptoms due to constipation or lack of appetite. Said preparation has no therapeutic value in the treatment of constipation in excess of providing temporary relief therefrom. It does not relieve the body of toxic poisons or cleanse the system or have any beneficial effect on kidney or bladder disorders. The use of such preparation does not renew or restore the strength or health of the user and its therapeutic properties with respect to building health or strength are limited to supplying a stomachic or gastric tonic which stimulates the appetite and may indirectly increase weight by reason of an increase in food intake. Said preparation has no therapeutic value in healing, curing or relieving functional or organic systemic disorders in excess of providing such relief as may be accomplished by the administration of a mild laxative or stomachic.

The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements, representations and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid with respect to said medicinal preparation has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true, and that said preparation is a cure or remedy for various disorders for which it has little or no therapeutic value, and induces the purchase by the public of respondent’s medicinal preparation containing drugs.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, and the stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondent herein and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, which provides among other things that without further evidence or other intervening procedure the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Order

It is ordered, That the respondent Retonga Medicine Co., a corporation, its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its medicinal preparation advertised as “Retonga” or any other medicinal preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails, or (b) by any means in commerce as “commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent directly or through inference, (1) that said preparation is a cure or remedy for diseases or disorders characterized by such symptoms or conditions as nervousness, indigestion, headaches, sluggishness, pains, toxic poisoning, dizziness, muscular aches and pains, insomnia, biliousness, undernourishment, loss of weight, or lack of strength, or possesses any remedial or curative value in connection with the treatment of such diseases, disorders, symptoms or conditions; (2) that said preparation possesses any value in the treatment of such symptoms and conditions as nervousness, indigestion, headaches, sluggishness, pains, toxic poisoning, dizziness, muscular aches, and pains, insomnia, biliousness, undernourishment, loss of weight, or lack of strength in excess of the temporary relief furnished by a mild laxative or gastric tonic when such symptoms or conditions are due to or caused by constipation or lack of appetite; (3) that said preparation has therapeutic value in the treatment of constipation in excess of providing temporary relief therefrom; (4) that said preparation relieves the body of toxic poisons or cleanses the system; (5) that said preparation has any beneficial effect or therapeutic value in the treatment of kidney or bladder disorders; (6) that said preparation renews or restores the strength or health or has any therapeutic properties with respect to building health or strength in excess of stimulating the appetite.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

MICHAEL S. CHIOLAK, TRADING AS TONE COMPANY

Docket 4009. Complaint, Jan. 30, 1940—Decision, June 25, 1940

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of his Silver Label Formula No. 6 and Gold Label Formula No. 8 medicinal preparations, or Tone Periodic Compound, to purchasers in other States and in the District of Columbia; in advertisements of his said preparations which he disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails, insertions in periodicals of general circulation and in circulars and other printed or written matter distributed in commerce among the States, and by other means in commerce and otherwise, and which were intended and likely to induce purchase of his said products—

(a) Represented that said preparations were cures or remedies for delayed menstruation and competent and effective treatments therefor, and that they were safe and harmless, facts being they were not such cures or remedies and did not constitute competent or effective treatments for said condition, and were not safe and harmless in that they contained ergotin, aloes, extract black hellebore, and extract cotton root bark, which were present in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, and might result in gastro-intestinal disturbances such as catharsis, nausea and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, inflammation and congestion of the uterus and adnexa, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage, and, in those cases where used to interfere with normal course of pregnancy, might result in uterine infection, causing condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning, and use thereof, as aforesaid, might also produce very severe circulatory condition tending to produce abortion in some instances, often with violent poisonous effects upon human system, and severe toxic conditions and, in some instances, a gangrenous condition in lower limbs or other serious or irreparable injury to health; and

(b) Failed to reveal in said advertisements that use of said preparations under the conditions prescribed therein or under such conditions as are customary or usual, might result in serious or irreparable injury to health;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false, deceptive and misleading statements, representations and advertisements were true, and of inducing substantial portion of said public, because of such belief, to purchase his said medicinal preparations:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, trial examiner.

Mr. William L. Taggart for the Commission.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Michael S. Chiolak, trading as Tone Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof, would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Michael S. Chiolak, is an individual trading as Tone Co., with his office and principal place of business at 64 West Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill., from which address he transacts business under the above trade name.

Par. 2. The respondent is now, and for more than one year past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of certain medicinal preparations designated as Silver Label Formula No. 6 and Gold Label Formula No. 8, both of which are also known as Tone Periodic Compound.

In the course and conduct of his business the respondent causes said medicinal preparations when sold to be transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

At all times mentioned herein, the respondent has maintained a course of trade in said medicinal preparations sold and distributed by him in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of the aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisement concerning his said medicinal preparations by United States mails, by insertions in periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said medicinal preparations; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning his said medicinal preparations, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said medicinal

Among and typical of the false representations contained in the advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Tone Periodic Compound Silver Label Formula No. 6. Tone Company, 64 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

PAR. 4. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein the respondent represents, directly or by implication, that his medicinal preparations designated as Silver Label Formula No. 6 and Gold Label Formula No. 8, both of which are also known as Tone Periodic Compound, are cures or remedies for delayed menstruation and are competent and effective treatments therefor and that said preparations are safe and harmless.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, the medicinal preparations sold and distributed by the respondent, as aforesaid, designated as Silver Label Formula No. 6 and Gold Label Formula No. 8, both of which are also known as Tone Periodic Compound, and are not cures or remedies for delayed menstruation and do not constitute competent or effective treatments therefor. Furthermore, said preparations are not safe and harmless, in that they contain ergotin, aloes, extract black hellebore and extract cotton root bark.

The aforesaid drugs are present in said medicinal preparations in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Such use of said medicinal preparations may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances such as catharsis, nausea and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, inflammation and congestion of the uterus and adnexa, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage, and in those cases where these preparations are used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy, their use may result in uterine infection with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures, and to the bloodstream, causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

The use of said preparations as aforesaid may also produce a very severe circulatory condition by the constriction of the blood vessels and contraction of the involuntary muscles, tending to produce abortion in some instances often with violent poisonous effects upon the human system. Such use as aforesaid may also produce severe toxic conditions such as hemorrhagic diarrhea, and in some instances producing a gangrenous condition in the lower limbs or other serious or irreparable injury to health.

In addition to the representations hereinabove set forth, the respondent has also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in the manner above set forth in that said advertisements so disseminated fail to reveal that the use of Silver Label Formula No. 6 and Gold Label Formula No. 8, both of which are also known as Tone Periodic Compound, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to health.

Par. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to his preparations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and induces a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent’s medicinal preparations.

Par. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on January 30, 1940, issued, and on February 1, 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Michael S. Chiolak, an individual, trading as Tone Co., charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act. On June 5, 1940, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

respondent represents, directly or by implication, that his medicinal preparations designated as Silver Label Formula No. 6 and Gold Label Formula No. 8, both of which are also known as Tone Periodic Compound, are cures or remedies for delayed menstruation and are competent and effective treatments therefor and that said preparations are safe and harmless.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, the medicinal preparations sold and distributed by the respondent, as aforesaid, designated as Silver Label Formula No. 6, and Gold Label Formula No. 8, both of which are also known as Tone Periodic Compound, are not cures or remedies for delayed menstruation and do not constitute competent or effective treatments therefor. Furthermore, said preparations are not safe and harmless, in that they contain ergotin, aloes, extract black hellebore, and extract cotton root bark.

The aforesaid drugs are present in said medicinal preparations in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Such use of said medicinal preparations may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances such as catharsis, nausea and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, inflammation and congestion of the uterus and adnexa, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage; and in those cases where these preparations are used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy, their use may result in uterine infection with extension of other pelvic and abdominal structures, and to the bloodstream, causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

The use of said preparations as aforesaid may also produce a very severe circulatory condition by the constriction of the blood vessels and contraction of the involuntary muscles, tending to produce abortion in some instances, often with violent poisonous effects upon the human system. Such use as aforesaid may also produce severe toxic conditions such as hemorrhagic diarrhea, and in some instances producing a gangrenous condition in the lower limbs or other serious or irreparable injury to health.

In addition to the representations hereinabove set forth, the respondent has also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in the manner above set forth in that said advertisements so disseminated fail to reveal that the use of Silver Label Formula No. 6 and Gold Label Formula No. 8, both of which are also known as Tone Periodic Compound, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious or irreparable injury to health.
PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations with respect to his preparations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and advertisements are true, and induces a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's medicinal preparations.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Michael S. Chiolak, an individual trading as Tone Co., or trading under any other name or names, his agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of his medicinal preparations designated as Silver Label Formula No. 6 and Gold Label Formula No. 8, both of which are known and sold under the name of Tone Periodic Compound, or of any other medicinal preparations composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails, or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent, directly or through inference, that said preparations are cures or remedies for delayed menstruation or constitute competent or effective treatments therefor; that said preparations are safe or harmless; or which advertisements fail to reveal that the use of said preparations may result in serious and irreparable injury to the health of the user.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 10 days after service upon him of this order file with the Commission an interim report in writing stating whether he intends to comply with this order, and, if so, the manner and form in which he intends to comply; and that within 60 days after the service upon him of this order, said respondent shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

JACK PUZES, TRADING AS THE NOVELTY HOME FURNISHER

Docket 4023. Complaint, Feb. 7, 1940—Decision, June 25, 1940

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of clocks, coffee makers, silverware, cameras, lamps, and other articles of merchandise to purchasers in the various other States and in the District of Columbia, in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce as aforesaid; in soliciting sale of and selling and distributing his said products—

Furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involved operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes for sale and distribution of products in question to ultimate consumers wholly by lot or chance, and distribution to purchasing public of certain literature and instructions, including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, illustrations of goods, and circulars explaining his plan of selling merchandise and allotting it as premiums or prizes to operators of such cards and to purchasing and consuming public through the use of (1) push cards under plan in accordance with which purchaser selecting by chance from list of feminine names displayed on card name corresponding with that concealed under card's master seal received premium or prize, and under which, as above described, retail value of articles of merchandise being sold and distributed was greater than amount paid by purchasers for privilege of making punch, and through use of (2) other push cards accompanied by such order blanks, instructions and other printed matter for use in sale and distribution of his goods through means of game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, and in accordance with sales plan or method in case of all similar to that herein described and varying therefrom in detail only; and

Supplied thereby to and placed in hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise, in accordance with sales plan above set forth, by persons to whom he furnished and who used such push cards in purchasing, selling, and distributing said products in accordance with such plan, under which articles, retail value of which was greater than amount paid therefor by purchasers, were distributed to purchasing and consuming public wholly by lot or chance, and involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure article of merchandise at price much less than normal retail price thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use any or said method involving game of chance or sale of a chance to secure something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by said sales plan or method employed by him in sale and distribution of his merchandise and element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell his said products in preference to those offered and sold by his competitors aforesaid, who do not use same or equivalent method, and with effect through use of such method by him and because of said game of chance, of unfairly diverting trade in commerce to himself from his said competitors who do not use same or equivalent method:

_Held_, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before _Mr. Miles J. Furnas_, trial examiner.

_Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr.,_ for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Jack Puzes, an individual trading as _The Novelty Home Furnisher_, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Jack Puzes, is an individual trading as _The Novelty Home Furnisher_. His principal office and place of business is located at 53 West Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of clocks, coffee makers, silverware, cameras, lamps, and other articles of merchandise. Respondent causes, and has caused, said merchandise when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various States of the United States other than Illinois and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, a course of trade by respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is, and has been, in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing his merchandise, furnishes and has furnished, various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The method or sales plan adopted and used by respondent is substantially as follows:

Respondent distributes and has distributed to the purchasing public certain literature and instructions, including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, illustrations of the said merchandise, and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards and to the purchasing and consuming public. One of respondent's push cards bears a number of small partially perforated disks on the face of which is printed the word "push." Below each of said disks is printed a feminine name with ruled columns on the reverse side of said push card for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Concealed within each of said disks is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The said numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing below the said disks. The person selecting the feminine name corresponding to the one under the master seal receives a premium or prize. The retail value of the articles of merchandise sold and distributed by means of the said push card is greater than the amount paid by purchasers for the privilege of making a punch on said card. The said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing and consuming public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes and has furnished, various push cards accompanied by said order blanks, instructions, and other printed matter for use in the sale and distribution of his merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift, enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes, and has furnished, the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise, in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent’s merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on February 7, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Jack Puzes, individually and trading as The Novelty Home Furnisher, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Thereafter the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. The proceeding regularly came on for the final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Jack Puzes, is an individual trading as The Novelty Home Furnisher. His principal office and place of business is located at 53 West Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of clocks, coffee makers, silverware, cameras, lamps, and other articles of merchandise. Respondent causes, and has caused, said merchandise when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various States of the United States other than Illinois and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, a course of trade by respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is, and has been, in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing his merchandise, furnishes and has furnished, various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The method or sales plan adopted and used by respondent is substantially as follows:

Respondent distributes and has distributed to the purchasing public certain literature and instructions, including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, illustrations of the said merchandise and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling merchandise and of alleviating it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards and to the purchasing and consuming public. One of respondent's push cards bears a number of small partially perforated disks on the face of which is printed the word "push." Below each of said disks is printed a feminine name with ruled columns on the reverse side of said push card for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Concealed within each of said disks is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The said numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing below the said disks. The person selecting the feminine name corresponding to the one under the master seal receives a premium or prize. The retail value of the articles of merchandise sold and distributed by means of the said push card is greater than the amount paid by purchasers for the privilege of making a punch on said card. The said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing and consuming public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes and has furnished, various push cards accompanied by said order blanks, instructions, and other printed matter for use in the sale and distribution of his merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes, and has furnished, the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise, in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Jack Puzes, an individual, trading as The Novelty Home Furnisher, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of clocks, coffee makers, silverware, cameras, lamps, or any other articles of merchandise, in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such merchandise to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.
2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others any merchandise together with punchboards, push or pull cards, or any other lottery devices, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing any merchandise to the public.

4. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Charles L. Klapp, trading as The Cardinal Co. and as The Cardinal Company, of St. Louis, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Charles L. Klapp, is an individual trading as The Cardinal Co. and as The Cardinal Company, of St. Louis, with his office and principal place of business at 406 Market Street, St. Louis, Mo., from which address he transacts business under the above trade names.

PAR. 2. The respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of certain medicinal preparations, consisting of two formulae known as FEMALADE.

In the course and conduct of his business the respondent causes said medicinal preparations when sold to be transported from his place of business in the State of Missouri to purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

At all times mentioned herein, respondent has maintained a course of trade in said medicinal preparations sold and distributed by him in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of the aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning his said medicinal preparations by United States mails, by insertions in newspapers and periodicals, having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said medicinal preparations; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning his said medicinal preparations, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said medicinal preparations in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false representations contained in the advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

WOMEN DELAYED

"FEMALADE WILL NOT FAIL YOU"

THE CARDINAL Co., 406 Market St.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI

Free literature and booklet Feminine Hygiene.

PAR. 4. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents that his medicinal preparations, consisting of a tablet formula and a liquid formula, known and designated as FEMALADE, are cures or remedies for delayed menstruation and competent and effective treatments therefor, and will accomplish the desired results without fail.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, the medicinal preparation sold and distributed by the respondent as aforesaid known as FEMALADE and consisting of the tablet formula, is not a cure or remedy for delayed menstruation and does not constitute a competent or effective treatment therefor. Said preparation will not accomplish the results claimed by the respondent. Furthermore, said preparation is not safe and harmless in that said preparation contains aloes, extract cotton root bark, extract black hellebore, oil savin, and extract ergot.
The aforesaid drugs are present in said medicinal preparation in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Such use of said medicinal preparation may result in gastrointestinal disturbances such as catharsis, nausea and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, inflammation and congestion of the uterus and adnexa, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage, and in those cases where this preparation is used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy, it may result in uterine infection with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures, and to the blood stream, causing a condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

The use of said preparation as aforesaid may also produce a very severe circulatory condition by the constriction of the blood vessels and contraction of the involuntary muscles tending to produce abortion in some instances, often with violent poisonous effects upon the human system. Such use as aforesaid may also produce severe toxic conditions, such as hemorrhagic diarrhea and in some instances producing a gangrenous condition in the lower limbs or other serious or irreparable injury to health.

In addition to the representations hereinabove set forth, the respondent has also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in the manner above set forth in that said advertisements so disseminated fail to reveal that the use of FEMALADE tablets, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

PAR. 6. The said medicinal preparation sold and distributed by the respondent as aforesaid known as FEMALADE and consisting of the liquid formula, contains powdered hydrastis, powdered viburnum opulus, powdered viburnum prunifolium, blue cohosh, with the addition of ovarian substance and pituitary extract desiccated "for obstinate cases" in quantities insufficient to be of any therapeutic or curative value, if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Said preparation will not accomplish the results claimed by the respondent and is not a cure or a remedy for delayed menstruation and does not constitute a competent or an effective treatment therefor.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to his preparations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and advertisements are true and induce a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's medicinal preparations.

Par. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 26, 1939, issued, and on August 28, 1939, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Charles L. Klapp, an individual trading as The Cardinal Co. and as The Cardinal Company of St. Louis, charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Charles L. Klapp, is an individual trading as The Cardinal Co. and as The Cardinal Company of St. Louis, with his office and principal place of business at 406 Market Street, St. Louis, Mo., from which address he transacts business under the above trade names.

Par. 2. The respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of certain medicinal preparations, consisting of two formulae known as FEMALADE.

In the course and conduct of his business the respondent causes said medicinal preparations when sold to be transported from his place of business in the said State of Missouri to purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

At all times mentioned herein, respondent has maintained a course of trade in said medicinal preparations sold and distributed by him in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of the aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning his said medicinal preparations by United States mails, by insertions in newspapers and periodicals, having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said medicinal preparations; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said medicinal preparations, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said medicinal preparations in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false representations contained in the advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Findings

Par. 4. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents that his medicinal preparations, consisting of a tablet formula and a liquid formula, known and designated as FEMALADE, are cures or remedies for delayed menstruation and competent and effective treatments therefor, and will accomplish the desired results without fail.

Par. 5. In truth and in fact, the medicinal preparation sold and distributed by the respondent as aforesaid known as FEMALADE and consisting of the tablet formula, is not a cure or remedy for delayed menstruation and does not constitute a competent or effective treatment therefor. Said preparation will not accomplish the results claimed by the respondent. Furthermore, said preparation is not safe and harmless in that said preparation contains aloes, extract cotton root bark, extract black hellebore, oil savin and extract ergot.

The aforesaid drugs are present in said medicinal preparation in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Such use of said medicinal preparation may result in gastrointestinal disturbances such as catharsis, nausea and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, inflammation and congestion of the uterus and adnexa, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage, and in those cases where this preparation is used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy, it may result in uterine infection with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures, and to the blood stream, causing a condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

The use of said preparation as aforesaid may also produce a very severe circulatory condition by the constriction of the blood vessels and contraction of the involuntary muscles tending to produce abortion in some instances, often with violent poisonous effects upon the human system. Such use as aforesaid may also produce severe toxic conditions, such as hemorrhagic diarrhea and in some instances producing a gangrenous condition in the lower limbs or other serious or irreparable injury to health.

In addition to the representations hereinabove set forth, the respondent has also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in the manner above set forth in that said advertisements so disseminated fail to reveal that the use of FEMALADE tablets, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

Par. 6. The said medicinal preparation sold and distributed by the respondent as aforesaid known as FEMALADE and consisting of the liquid formula, contains powdered hydrastis, powdered viburnum opulus, powdered viburnum prunifolium, blue cohosh, with the addition of ovarian substance and pituitary extract desiccated "for obstinate cases" in quantities insufficient to be of any therapeutic or curative value, if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Said preparation will not accomplish the results claimed by the respondent and is not a cure or a remedy for delayed menstruation and does not constitute a competent or an effective treatment therefor.

Par. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to his preparations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and advertisements are true and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's medicinal preparations.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Charles L. Klapp, an individual trading as The Cardinal Co. and as the Cardinal Company of St. Louis or trading under any other name or names, his agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of his medicinal preparations designated "Femalade Tablets" and "Femalade Liquid," or any other medicinal preparations composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar prop-
Order

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent, directly or through inference, that said preparations are cures or remedies for delayed menstruation or constitute competent or effective treatments therefor; or which advertisements with respect to said preparation "Femalade Tablets" fail to reveal that the use of said preparation may result in serious and irreparable injury to the health of the user.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 10 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing, stating whether he intends to comply with this order and, if so, the manner and form in which he intends to comply; and that within 60 days after the service upon him of this order, said respondent shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF

JOHNS-MANVILLE CORPORATION AND JOHNS-MANVILLE SALES CORPORATION

Docket 3899. Complaint, Sept. 26, 1939—Decision, June 26, 1940

Where a corporation and sales subsidiary thereof engaged, as case might be, in manufacture, and in sale, of various lines of building and insulating materials, including certain low temperature insulating product sold under registered trade-mark "Rock Cork," to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia, in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution, in commerce as aforesaid, of low temperature insulating materials; in advertisements and advertising matter relating to said "Rock Cork" in magazines, newspapers, circulars, pamphlets, booklets, catalogs, leaflets, and other printed and illustrated material, widely circulated and distributed by them among prospective purchasers of their said insulating material—

Represented that said product was composed entirely of mineral matter, through such statements as "Make Sure Of Lasting Insulating Efficiency with this MINERAL INSULATION! • • • is entirely mineral, rotproof, vermin-proof • • •," "The reason for their long life is the fact that • • • is entirely mineral in composition • • • The efficient Insulation material that cannot rot or decay. Mineral—Not Vegetable Composition," facts being said product was not, and for some time last past had not been, composed entirely of mineral matter, but was, and had for some time, been composed of approximately 88 percent mineral matter and 12 percent vegetable matter, and vegetable fiber was not that vegetable matter known to public as, and properly designated, "cork";

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasers and prospective purchasers of said product into erroneous and mistaken belief that it was entirely of mineral composition, and of inducing such purchasers and prospective purchasers to buy said "Rock Cork" on account of such belief, and of unfairly diverting thereby trade in commerce to them from their competitors, who do not use misrepresentations with respect to their low temperature insulating materials:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Mr. Curtis C. Shears for the Commission.

Mr. William E. Lamb, of Washington, D. C., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

poration and Johns-Manville Sales Corporation, corporations, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Johns-Manville Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 22 East Fortieth Street, in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondent is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the business of manufacturing various lines of building and insulating materials including a certain low temperature insulating material sold under the registered trade mark "Rock Cork." Johns-Manville

Sales Corporation is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York with its principal office and place of business located at 22 East Fortieth Street, in the city of New York, State of New York, and is a wholly owned subsidiary of respondent Johns-Manville Corporation. It is engaged in the sale and distribution of said Rock Cork in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the conduct of their businesses, as aforesaid, respondents cause and have caused said Rock Cork when sold to be transported from its place of manufacture in Indiana to purchasers thereof in various other States in the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective places of business. There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade in said Rock Cork by said respondents in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said businesses respondents are in competition with other corporations and with partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of low temperature insulation materials.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of their businesses, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents, in soliciting the sale and selling of said Rock Cork and as an incident to and means of inducing and procuring the sale of said Rock Cork, are now causing, and for some time last past have caused advertisements and advertising matter relating to said Rock Cork to be inserted and displayed in magazines, newspapers, circulars, pamphlets, booklets, catalogs, leaflets, and other printed and illustrated material (all of which is hereinafter designated and referred to as "advertising matter") circulated or distributed among prospective purchasers of said Rock Cork for the aforesaid purposes. Respondents are now and have been distributing said advertising matter widely in commerce.

Par. 3. Respondents, in advertising or causing said advertising matter to be published, distributed, displayed, or exposed, as aforesaid, in commerce, have made false and misleading representations in and through said advertising matter to the effect that said Rock Cork when manufactured is made and constructed entirely of mineral matter or with words used in connection or conjunction with the word Rock Cork or with words, phrases, statements or representations descriptive of said Rock Cork which import or imply or tend to convey the belief to purchasers and prospective purchasers that Rock Cork is an entirely mineral product. Among and typical of said representations used and caused to be used by said respondents are the following:

Make Sure of Lasting Insulating Efficiency with this MINERAL INSULATION

The explanation is simple. J-M Rock Cork is entirely mineral, rot-proof, verminproof, highly resistant to moisture.

30 YEARS OLD and still going strong * * * This MINERAL INSULATION.

* * * * *

The reason for their long life is the fact that J-M Rock Cork is entirely mineral in Composition. Rot-proof and highly resistant to moisture, its low conductivity is practically unaffected by time.

J-M ROCK CORK—a real investment. The efficient insulation material that cannot rot or decay.

Mineral—Not Vegetable Composition

A product of the recognized leader in the insulating field, Rock Cork is one of the most efficient insulating materials known. As a milk tank insulation, it is superior to other materials in that it is of material, not vegetable composition and therefore cannot rot or decay.

In truth and in fact the statements and representations set forth herein and other statements to the effect either stated or implied that Rock Cork is entirely mineral are false and misleading when in truth and in fact the product so advertised, designated, represented, and sold is not and for some time last past has not been composed entirely of mineral matter but contains, and for some time last past has contained approximately 88 percent mineral and 12 percent vegetable matter. The vegetable matter is not the vegetable product known to the public as and properly designated cork. The mineral matter is "rock wool" and an asphaltum binder.

Paragraph 4. The use by respondents of the foregoing advertisements, statements, and representations, and others similar thereto, in advertising, soliciting, and offering for sale and selling of said Rock Cork as herein set out has had the tendency and capacity to, and did in fact, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the said Rock Cork is of entirely mineral composition and has induced them to purchase said Rock Cork on account of said erroneous and mistaken belief. Thereby trade has been unfairly diverted to said respondents from competitors who do not make use of similar misrepresentations with respect to their low temperature insulating materials and who are engaged in the sale of said materials in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

As a result of respondents' said practices, as herein set out, substantial injury has been done by said respondents to competitors engaged in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 5. The above alleged acts and practices of respondents are each and all to the injury and prejudice of the public and to competitors of respondents and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on September 26, 1939, issued, and on September 27, 1939, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Johns-Manville Corporation and Johns-Manville Sales Corporation, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, respondents filed an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts which answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission on October 23, 1939. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and said admission answer; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Johns-Manville Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 22 East Fortieth Street, in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondent is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the business of manufacturing various lines of building and insulating materials including a certain low temperature insulating product sold under the registered trade mark "Rock Cork," Johns-Manville Sales Corporation is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware with its principal office and place of business located at 22 East Fortieth Street, in the city of New York, State of New York, and is a wholly owned subsidiary of respondent Johns-Manville Corporation. It is engaged in the sale and distribution of said "Rock Cork" in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the conduct of their businesses, as aforesaid, respondents cause and have caused said product, "Rock Cork," when sold to be transported from its place of manufacture in Indiana to purchasers thereof in various other States in the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective places of business. There is now and has been for some time last past, a course of trade in said "Rock Cork" by said respondents in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said businesses respondents are in competition with other corporations and with partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of low temperature insulation materials.

PAR. 2. Respondents in the course and conduct of their businesses, in soliciting the sale and selling of said "Rock Cork" and as an incident to and means of inducing and procuring the sale of "Rock Cork" for a considerable period of time prior to the issuance of the complaint herein, caused advertisements and advertising matter relating to said "Rock Cork" to be inserted and displayed in magazines, newspapers, circulars, pamphlets, booklets, catalogs, leaflets, and other printed and illustrated material, which were circulated and distributed by respondents among prospective purchasers of said "Rock Cork" widely in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Typical of these advertisements are the following:

- Make Sure of Lasting Insulating Efficiency 'with this MINERAL INSULATION!

The explanation is simple. J-M Rock Cork is entirely mineral, rotproof, verminproof, highly resistant to moisture.

- 30 YEARS OLD AND STILL GOING STRONG . . . THIS MINERAL INSULATION.

The reason for their long life is the fact that J-M Rock Cork is entirely mineral in composition. Rot-proof and highly resistant to moisture, its low conductivity is practically unaffected by time.

- J-M ROCK CORK—a real investment. The efficient insulation material that cannot rot or decay.

A product of the recognized leader in the insulating field, Rock Cork is one of the most efficient insulating materials known. As a milk tank insulation, it is superior to other materials in that it is of mineral not vegetable composition and therefore cannot rot or decay.

PAR. 3. Through said advertisements and advertising matter so used and distributed by the respondents in advertising said insulating products, respondents represent that said product is composed entirely of mineral matter, when in truth and in fact said products is not, and for some time last past has not been, composed entirely of mineral matter but is, and for some time last past has been, composed of approximately 88 percent mineral matter and 12 percent vegetable matter. The vegetable fiber is not the vegetable matter known to the public as and properly designated cork. The mineral fiber is “Rock Wool” and an asphaltum binder.

PAR. 4. The use by respondents of the foregoing advertisements, statements, and representations, and others similar thereto, in advertising, soliciting, and offering for sale and selling of said “Rock Cork” as herein set out has the tendency and capacity to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the said “Rock Cork” is entirely of mineral composition and has induced them to purchase said “Rock Cork” on account of said erroneous and mistaken belief. Thereby trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia has been unfairly diverted to said respondents from their competitors, who do not use misrepresentations with respect to their low temperature insulating materials.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission on the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Johns-Manville Corporation and Johns-Mansville Sales Corporation, their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of insulating material now known as "Rock Cork," whether sold under that name or any other name, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Using the terms "entirely mineral," "mineral composition," "mineral in composition," "mineral—not vegetable," or any other words of similar import and meaning to describe or in any way refer to a product which is not in fact entirely mineral in composition.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

MORTON COHEN, TRADING AS LEE-MOORE & CO. AND ADWELL SALES CO.

Docket 3938. Complaint, Nov. 2, 1939—Decision, June 26, 1940

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of radios, knives, cigar lighters, fountain pens, cameras, pipes, watches, and various other articles of merchandise to purchasers in various States and in the District of Columbia, in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce as aforesaid—

(a) Sold to wholesalers, jobbers and retailers certain assortments of merchandise which were so packed or assembled as to involve use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to consumers and included:

1. Assortment consisting of two pen and pencil sets, three knives, two pipes, two cigar lighters, and watch and punchboard for use in sale and distribution of said articles under a plan and in accordance with said board's explanatory legend by which numbers secured by chance for five cents each by customer-purchasers determined which, if any, of said various articles, purchaser received, and under which person purchasing last number on board received the watch and person failing to qualify by obtaining one of lucky numbers or punching last number received nothing for his money other than privilege of punching number, and included:

2. Various other assortments of merchandise, along with punchboards involving lot or chance feature similar to that above described and varying therefrom in detail only; and

With result that many persons were attracted by his said sales plan or method employed in sale and distribution of his merchandise and element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell his said products in preference to those offered and sold by his said competitors who do not use such or equivalent method, and with effect, through use of such method and because of said game of chance, of diverting unfairly trade in commerce to himself from his competitors aforesaid who do not use such or equivalent method;
(b) Represented in advertising for agents to sell his merchandise in various magazines and periodicals circulated among the United States and in said District, that $100 weekly was the usual and customary amount that would be earned by agents through sale of said merchandise, facts being his salesmen do not in ordinary and usual course of business earn such an amount or any other amount closely approximating it, and usual and customary earnings thereof in due course of normal business are substantially less than such amount;

With effect of causing members of public and prospective salesmen and distributors to have erroneous and mistaken belief that such false and misleading statement and representation was true, and causing prospective agents and distributors, because of such belief, to undertake sale of and sell his said products; and

(c) Sold and distributed to dealers many kinds of push cards and punchboards which were so prepared and arranged as to involve game of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when used in making sales of their merchandise to consuming public, and involved same chance or lottery feature, varying in detail only, and plans or schemes under which and in accordance mostly with legends placed thereon by him or, in other cases, placed thereon by dealers in blank spaces provided therefor and in accordance with particular plan provided, prices of sales varied and certain specified numbers entitled purchasers to articles of merchandise at prices which were much less than normal retail price thereof, and under which those who did not receive one of lucky numbers received nothing for their money other than privilege of making push or punch from said card or board;

With result that—

(1) Many who sold or distributed candy, cigars, and other articles of merchandise in commerce as aforesaid bought said push card and punchboard devices and packed and assembled assortments comprised of various articles of such merchandise, together with such cards and boards, and retail dealer buyers of such assortments, either as direct or indirect purchasers, and retailers who made up their own assortments, exposed same to purchasing public and sold or distributed such articles of merchandise through use of said push cards or punchboards and in accordance with sales plan as above described, involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure articles in question at prices much less than normal retail price thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws; and

(2) Many dealers in and ultimate consumers of such products were induced to deal with or purchase same from dealers selling or distributing such merchandise by means of or together with said push cards and punchboards and because of lottery feature involved therein and inherent thereto, in competition with many who sold or distributed like or similar articles in commerce and who, faced with alternative of descending to use of said cards and boards or other similar devices which they were under a powerful moral compulsion not to use in connection with sale and distribution of their products, or suffering loss of substantial trade, did not sell and distribute their said merchandise by means of such cards, boards or similar devices, because of element of chance or lottery features therein involved and because practices in question were contrary to public policy of United States, and refrained from supplying to or placing in hands of others such cards, boards or any other similar devices for use in connection with the sale and distribution of the merchandise of such competitors to general public by lot or chance, and with consequence that substantial trade was unfairly diverted to him and to those using his said push card and punchboard devices from others engaged in commerce and who did not sell or use such or any other lottery devices; and

(3) He supplied thereby to and placed in the hands of others through such sale or distribution of said push cards and punchboards (1) means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in the sale or distribution of their merchandise with its teaching and encouragement of gambling among members of public, through the conducting by retailers of such lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises, all to the injury of the public, as aforesaid, and therein and thereby (2) means of and instrumentalities for engaging in unfair methods of competition and unfair acts and practices:

Held, (1) That such acts and practices in selling and distributing assortments of merchandise, together with push cards and punchboard devices, and in advertising falsely as to earning capacity of salesmen of said individual, as above set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of public, and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein; and

(2) That acts and practices of said individual in selling and distributing said push card and punchboard devices, separate and apart from any other merchandise, to dealers for use in sale and distribution of their products, under circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of public and constituted unfair acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr. for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Morton Cohen, an individual, trading as Lee-Moore & Co., and Adwell Sales Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Morton Cohen is an individual trading as Lee-Moore & Co. and Adwell Sales Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 180 West Adams Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of radios, knives, cigar lighters, fountain pens, cameras, pipes, watches, candy, blankets, rings, fishing tackles, and other articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Respondent causes, and has caused, said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade by respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is, and has been, in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers and retail dealers, certain assortments of merchandise so packed or assembled, as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent and is as follows:

This assortment consists of two pen and pencil sets, three knives, two pipes, two cigar lighters, and a watch, together with the device commonly called a punchboard. Said merchandise is sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner: Sales are 5 cents each and when a punch is made from the board, a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with one and continue to the number of punches there are on the board but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears the statement or statements informing prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a fountain pen set, a knife, a cigar lighter, a pipe, a package of cigarettes, and that the last sale receives the watch. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the lucky numbers, or by punching the last number on the board, receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The articles of merchandise above mentioned are worth more than 5 cents each and the purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for one of the articles of merchandise, or the last punch on the board, receives the same for the price of 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. These said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.
Respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, various assortments of merchandise along with punchboards involving a lot or chance feature but such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said merchandise, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure one of the said articles of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent, who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent advertises in various magazines and periodicals having a circulation between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, for agents to sell his merchandise and represents to such prospective salesmen that $100 weekly is the usual and customary commission that will be earned by them through the sale of respondent's merchandise. Said advertising is as follows:

In fact respondent's salesmen do not in the ordinary and usual course of business, earn $100 weekly or earn any other amount of money closely approximating $100 weekly. The usual and customary earnings of such salesmen in due course of normal business are substantially less than $100 weekly.

Par. 6. The use by respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading statement and representation has the capacity and tendency to, and does cause members of the public and prospective salesmen and distributors to have the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid false and misleading statement and representation is true and causes prospective agents and distributors to undertake the sale of and to sell said merchandise because of said erroneous and mistaken belief.

Paragraph 1. Respondent Morton Cohen is an individual trading as Lee-Moore & Co. and Adwell Sales Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 180 West Adams Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of devices commonly known as push cards and punchboards to dealers in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent causes and has caused said devices, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in various States of the United States, other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade by said respondent in such push cards and punchboard devices in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, to dealers push cards and punchboards so prepared and arranged as to involve games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when used in making sales of their merchandise to the consuming public. Respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, many kinds of said push cards and punchboards but all of said push cards and punchboards involve the same chance or lottery features, when used in connection with the sale or distribution of merchandise and vary only in detail. The majority of said push cards and punchboards have printed on the faces thereof certain legends or instructions that explain the manner in which said devices are to be used or may be used in the sale or distribution of various specified articles of merchandise. The prices of the sales on said push cards and punchboards vary in accordance with the individual device. Each purchaser is entitled to one punch or push from the device, for the amount of money paid, and when a push or punch is made a disc or printed slip is separated and a number is disclosed. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the push or punch completed. Certain specified numbers entitle purchasers to articles of merchandise. Persions securing lucky or winning numbers receive articles of merchandise at prices which are much less than the normal retail price of said articles of merchandise. Persons not obtaining one of the lucky or winning numbers receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of making a push or punch from said card or board. The articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the consuming or purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Dealers purchasing punchboards or push cards without said printed instructions or legends thereon place printed instructions or legends on the faces of said push cards or punchboards on the blank space provided therefor. The legends or instructions placed on the faces of said devices by said dealers and used in conjunction therewith involve the same chance or lottery features as those legends or instructions placed or printed on the faces of push card or punchboard devices by respondent, as hereinabove described.

Par. 3. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy, cigarettes, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia have purchased respondent's said push cards and punchboard devices and have packed and assembled assortments comprised of various articles of said merchandise, together with said push cards and punchboard devices. Retail dealers who have purchased such assortments, either directly or indirectly, or retail dealers who have purchased said devices direct from respondent and made up their own assortments, have exposed the same to the purchasing public and have sold or distributed said articles of mer-merchandise by means of said push cards or punchboards in accordance with the sales plan as described in paragraph 2 hereof. Many dealers in, and ultimate consumers of, said merchandise have been induced to deal with or purchase said merchandise from dealers selling or distributing the same by means of or together with respondent's said push cards and punchboards because of the lottery feature involved therein and inherent thereto. Said persons, firms, and corporations have many competitors who sell or distribute like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said competitors are faced with the alternative of descending to the use of said push card and punchboard devices or other similar devices which they are under a powerful moral compulsion not to use in connection with the sale or distribution of their merchandise or to suffer the loss of substantial trade. Said competitors do not sell and distribute their said merchandise by means of push card or punchboard devices or similar devices because of the element of chance or lottery feature involved therein and because such practices are contrary to public policy of the Government of the United States and such competitors refrain from supplying to or placing in the hands of others such push card or punchboard devices or any other similar devices to be used in connection with the sale and distribution of the merchandise of such competitors to the general public by lot or chance. As a result thereof substantial trade has been unfairly diverted to said persons, firms, and corporations from said competitors in said commerce, who do not sell or use such devices.

Par. 4. The sale of said merchandise to the purchasing public through the use of, or by means of, said devices in the manner above alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure said articles of merchandise at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. The use of said sales plan or method in the sale of merchandise and the sale of merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws, and constitutes unfair methods of competition and unfair acts and practices within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

The sale or distribution of said push cards and punchboards by respondent, as hereinabove alleged, supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in the sale and distribution of their merchandise. The conducting of said lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises by retail dealers teaches and encourages gambling among members of the public, all to the injury of the public. The respondent thus supplies to said persons, firms and corporations the means of, and instrumentalities for, engaging in unfair methods of competition and unfair acts and practices within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as hereinabove alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on November 2, 1939, issued, and on November 3, 1939, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Morton Cohen, individually and trading as Lee-Moore and Co. and Adwell Sales Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's request for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute in lieu thereof an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Morton Cohen, is an individual trading as Lee-Moore & Co. and Adwell Sales Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 180 West Adams Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of radios, knives, cigar lighters, fountain pens, cameras, pipes, watches, candy, blankets, rings, fishing tackle, and other articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade by respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is, and has been, in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers, certain assortments of merchandise so packed or assembled, as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent and is as follows:

This assortment consists of two pen and pencil sets, three knives, two pipes, two cigar lighters, and a watch, together with the device commonly called a punchboard. Said merchandise is sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner: Sales are 5 cents each and when a punch is made from the board, a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of punches there are on the board but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears the statement or statements informing prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a fountain pen set, a knife, a cigar lighter, a pipe, a package of cigarettes, and that the last sale receives the watch. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the lucky numbers, or by punching the last number on the board, receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The articles of merchandise above mentioned are worth more than 5 cents each and the purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for one of the articles of merchandise, or the last punch on the board, receives the same for the price of 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. These said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, various assortments of merchandise along with punchboards involving a lot or chance feature but such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

Par. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said merchandise, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure one of the said articles of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent, who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent advertises in various magazines and periodicals having a circulation between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, for agents to sell his merchandise and represents to such prospective salesmen that $100 weekly is the usual and customary commission that will be earned by them through the sale of respondent's merchandise. Said advertising is as follows:

In fact respondent’s salesmen do not in the ordinary and usual course of business earn $100 weekly or earn any other amount of money closely approximating $100 weekly. The usual and customary earnings of such salesmen in due course of normal business are substantially less than $100 weekly.

Par. 6. The use by respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading statement and representation has the capacity and tendency to, and does cause members of the public and prospective salesmen and distributors to have the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid false and misleading statement and representation is true and causes prospective agents and distributors to undertake the sale of and to sell said merchandise because of said erroneous and mistaken belief.

Par. 7. In the course of his business, respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of devices commonly known as push cards and punchboards to dealers in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent causes and has caused said devices, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in various States of the United States, other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade by said respondent in such push card and punchboard devices in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 8. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 7 hereof, respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, to dealers push cards and punchboards so prepared and arranged as to involve games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when used in making sales of their merchandise to the consuming public. Respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, many kinds of said push cards and punchboards but all of said push cards and punchboards involve the same chance or lottery features, when used in connection with the sale or distribution of merchandise and vary only in detail. The majority of said push cards and punchboards have printed on the faces thereof certain legends or instructions that explain the manner in which said devices are to be used or may be used in the sale or distribution of various specified articles of merchandise. The prices of the sales on said push cards and punchboards vary in accordance with the individual device. Each purchaser is entitled to one punch or push from the device, for the amount of money paid, and when a push or punch is made a disc or printed slip is separated and a number is disclosed. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the push or punch completed. Certain specified numbers entitle purchasers to articles of merchandise. Persons securing lucky or winning numbers receive articles of merchandise at prices which are much less than the normal retail price of said articles of merchandise. Persons not obtaining one of the lucky or winning numbers receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of making a push or punch from said card or board. The articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the consuming or purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Dealers purchasing punchboards or push cards without said printed instructions or legends thereon place printed instructions or legends on the faces of said push cards or punchboards on the blank space provided therefor. The legends or instructions placed on the faces of said devices by said dealers and used in conjunction therewith involve the same chance or lottery features as those legends or instructions placed or printed on the faces of push card or punchboard devices by respondent, as hereinabove described.

Par. 9. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy, cigarettes, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia have purchased respondent's said push cards and punchboard devices and have packed and assembled assortments comprised of various articles of said merchandise, together with said push card and punchboard devices. Retail dealers who have purchased such assortments, either directly, or indirectly, and retail dealers who have purchased said devices direct from respondent and made up their own assortments, have exposed the same to the purchasing public and have sold or distributed said articles of merchandise by means of said push cards or punchboards in accordance with the sales plan as described in paragraph 8 hereof. Many dealers in, and ultimate consumers of, said merchandise have been induced to deal with or purchase said merchandise from dealers selling or distributing the same by means of or together with respondent's said push cards and punchboards because of the lottery feature involved therein and inherent thereto. Said persons, firms, and corporations have many competitors who sell or distribute like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said competitors are faced with the alternative of descending to the use of said push card and punchboard devices or other similar devices which they are under a powerful moral compulsion not to use in connection with the sale or distribution of their merchandise or to suffer the loss of substantial trade. Said competitors do not sell and distribute their said merchandise by means of push card or punchboard devices or similar devices because of the element of chance or lottery features involved therein and because such practices are contrary to public policy of the Government of the United States and such competitors refrain from supplying to or placing in the hands of others such push cards or punchboard devices or any other similar devices to be used in connection with the sale and distribution of the merchandise of such competitors to the general public by lot or chance. As a result thereof substantial trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent and to persons, firms, and corporations using respondent’s push card and punchboard device from other persons, firms and corporations engaged in commerce among and between the various States of the United States who do not sell or use such lottery devices or any other lottery device.

PAR. 10. The sale of said merchandise to the purchasing public through the use of, and by means of, said devices in the manner above found, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure said articles of merchandise at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. The use of said sales plan or method in the sale of merchandise and the sale of merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

The sale or distribution of said push cards and punchboards by respondent, as hereinabove found, supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in the sale and distribution of their merchandise. The conducting of said lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises by retail dealers teaches and encourages gambling among members of the public, all to the injury of the public. The respondent thus supplies to said persons, firms, and corporations the means of, and instrumentalities for, engaging in unfair methods of competition and unfair acts and practices within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent in selling and distributing his said assortments of merchandise, together with push card and punchboard devices, and in falsely advertising as to the earning capacity of his salesmen, as hereinabove found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and the aforesaid acts and practices of respondent in selling and distributing said push card and punch board devices separate and apart from any other merchandise to dealers for use in the sale and distribution of said dealers' merchandise, as hereinabove found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Order

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Morton Cohen, individually and trading as Lee-Moore and Co. and as Adwell Sales Co., or under any other trade name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of radios, knives, cigar lighters, fountain pens, cameras, pipes, watches, candy, blankets, rings, fishing tackle, or any other articles of merchandise, in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such merchandise to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others any merchandise together with punchboards, push or pull cards, or any other lottery devices, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.
3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing any merchandise to the public.

4. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

5. Representing any specified sum of money as possible earnings or profits of salesmen or agents for any stated period which is not a true representation of the net earnings or profits which have been made for such stated period of time by a substantial number of respondent's active salesmen or agents in the ordinary course of business under normal conditions and circumstances.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of radios, clocks, fishing tackle, pen and pencil sets, billfolds, and other articles of merchandise to wholesale, jobber, and retailer purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia, in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce as aforesaid—

Sold certain assortments of merchandise which were so packed or assembled as to involve use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof, and included (1), as illustrative, 12 billfolds, together with punchboards for use in sale and distribution of said products to purchasing and consuming public under a plan and in accordance with said board's explanatory legend, by which purchasers or customers secured, for 5 cents paid and in accordance with success or failure in selecting by chance lucky numbers, 1 of said folds, value of which was worth more than 5 cents, and failing to make such selection, secured nothing other than privilege of punching number, and included (2) various other assortments of merchandise, along with punchboards involving lot or chance feature similar to that above described and varying therefrom in detail only; and

Supplied thereby to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in sale of his merchandise in accordance with sales plan above set forth by retailers who, as direct or indirect purchasers of his said merchandise, exposed and sold same to purchasing public in accordance with said sales plan involving distribution of said billfolds to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance, and game of chance or sale of a chance in the sale of said products to purchasing public to procure article of merchandise at price much less than normal retail price thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said or any method involving game of chance or sale of a chance to secure something by chance or any method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by said sales plan or method employed by him in sale and distribution of his merchandise and element of chance involved therein and were thereby induced to buy and sell his said products in preference to those offered for sale and sold by his competitors aforesaid who do not use same or equivalent method, and with effect, through use of such method and because of said game of chance, of diverting unfairly trade in commerce to him from his said competitors who do not use such or equivalent method:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr. for the Commission.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Sam Guttman, an individual trading as Standard Sales Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Sam Guttman is an individual trading as Standard Sales Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 2363 Milwaukee Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of radios, clocks, watches, fishing tackle, cameras, pen and pencil sets, billfolds, wood statuettes, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise when sold to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various States of the United States other than Illinois and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade by said respondent in said merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his said business respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers and retail dealers certain assortments of merchandise so packed or assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent and is as follows:

This assortment consists of 12 billfolds, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Said billfolds are sold and distributed to the purchasing and consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner: Sales are 5 cents each and when a punch is made from the board, a number is disclosed. The board bears the statement or statements informing prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a billfold or money prize. Persons who do not qualify by obtaining one of the lucky numbers receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The billfolds are worth more than 5 cents each and the purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for 1 of the billfolds receives the same for the price of 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The said billfolds are thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, various assortments of merchandise along with punchboards involving a lot or chance feature but such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent’s said merchandise, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure one of the said articles of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent’s merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Para. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on January 4, 1940, issued and on January 5, 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Sam Guttman, an individual, trading as Standard Sales Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent’s answer the Commission by order entered herein granted respondent’s request for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Sam Guttman, is an individual trading as Standard Sales Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 2363 Milwaukee Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of radios, clocks, watches, fishing tackle, cameras, pen and pencil sets, billfolds, wood statuettes, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise when sold to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various States of the United States other than Illinois and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade by said respondent in said merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his said business respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of merchandise so packed or assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent and is as follows:

This assortment consists of 12 billfolds, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Said billfolds are sold and distributed to the purchasing and consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner: Sales are 5 cents each and when a punch is made from the board, a number is disclosed. The board bears the statement or statements informing prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a billfold or money prize. Persons who do not qualify by obtaining 1 of the lucky numbers receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The billfolds are worth more than 5 cents each and the purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for one of the billfolds receives the same for the price of 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The said billfolds are thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, various assortments of merchandise along with punchboards involving a lot or chance feature but such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

Par. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said merchandise, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan, herein­ above set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure one of the said articles of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
It is ordered, That the respondent, Sam Guttman, an individual, trading as Standard Sales Co., his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of radios, clocks, watches, fishing tackle, cameras, pen and pencil sets, billfolds, wood statuettes, or any other articles of merchandise, in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such merchandise to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others any merchandise together with punchboards, push or pull cards, or any other lottery devices, which said punchboards, push and pull cards, or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing any merchandise to the public.

4. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF AURINE COMPANY, INC.

Docket 3993. Complaint, Jan. 12, 1940—Decision, June 26, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of its "Ourine" medicinal preparation, to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia; in advertisements of its said product which it disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails, by insertions in newspapers and periodicals of general circulation, and in circulars and other printed or written matter, and by other means in commerce, and which were intended and likely to induce purchase of its said preparation—

(a) Represented, directly or by implication, that its said "Ourine" constituted a cure or remedy for deafness and had therapeutic value in treatment thereof and was a competent and effective treatment for deafness and for ringing and buzzing head noises due to hardened or congealed wax in the ear, through such statements as "Deafened Man Hears Again. "I heard the minister read scripture for the first time in years," and "Deafened Boy Hears Radio," etc., facts being said preparation was not a cure or remedy, or a competent or effective treatment for deafness, and had no therapeutic value in treatment thereof, and also was not such a treatment for deafness or partial deafness or ringing or buzzing head noises due to wax as aforesaid, and, while use thereof might soften accumulation of wax in ear without use of instrument or surgery, conditions which might result from such an accumulation, and including temporary deafness and ringing or buzzing head noises, would not be materially benefited or relieved; and

(b) Represented that it refunded purchase price for said preparation to its customers who were not satisfied with results obtained from use thereof, facts being it had not in all cases made refunds to such purchasers;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations were true, and into purchase of substantial quantities of said preparation because of such belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Edward E. Reardon, trial examiner.
Mr. Charles S. Cox for the Commission.
Mr. Frank E. Gettleman, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Aurine Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Aurine Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois and having its principal office and place of business at 3635 West Cermak Road, Chicago, Ill.

The respondent is now, and has been for more than 3 years last past, engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation designated "Aurine," in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois, to purchasers at their respective points of location in various States of the United States, other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

P.r. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said preparation by United States mails, by insertions in newspapers and periodicals, having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and by other means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparation, and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said preparation, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparation in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Deafened Man Hears Again. "I heard the minister read scripture for the first time in years," • • • If you are deafened, bothered by ringing, buzzing head noises, or some temporary septic condition, due to hardened or coagulated wax (cerumen), try the treatment that many sufferers say has enabled them to hear well again—that is, Ourine, a Vienna specialist’s prescription. * * * Money refunded if not satisfied.

Deafened Boy Heats Radio. "My boy hears everything on the radio", * * *

"Before he used Ourine, he could not hear the radio."

Deafened Woman Heats Clock Tick. "I was deafened. Now I can hear the clock tick," * * *

Par. 3. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations and others of similar import or meaning not herein set out, the respondent represents, directly or by implication, that its said medicinal preparation designated "Ourine" is a cure or remedy for deafness and has therapeutic value in the treatment of deafness, that said preparation is a competent and effective treatment for deafness, ringing and buzzing head noises due to hardened or coagulated wax in the ear, and that respondent refunds the purchase price for said preparation to its customers who are not satisfied with the results obtained from the use thereof.

Par. 4. The aforesaid statements and representations by respondent are false and misleading and constitute false advertisements. Deafness may be caused by either a central or systemic or a local disorder or condition. The said preparation “Ourine” is not a cure or remedy or a competent or effective treatment for deafness. It has no therapeutic value in the treatment of deafness. Said preparation is not a competent or effective treatment for deafness or partial deafness, ringing or buzzing head noises due to hardened or coagulated wax in the ear. The use of said preparation may soften accumulations of wax in the ear but without the use of an instrument to extract the wax, the conditions which may result from an accumulation of wax, to wit, temporary deafness, ringing or buzzing head noises, will not be materially benefited or relieved. Respondent does not uniformly make refunds to purchasers not satisfied with the results obtained.

Par. 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to its preparation, dissemination as aforesaid, has had and now has a capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of said preparation because of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 12th day of January 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent, Aurine Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On February 2, 1940, the respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, at a hearing in this matter at Chicago, Ill., on April 12, 1940, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts as dictated into the record between counsel for the Federal Trade Commission and counsel for respondent, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto, and that said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon (including inferences which it may draw from such stipulated facts) and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved and accepted, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDING AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Aurine Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois and having its principal office and place of business at 3635 West Cermak Road, Chicago, Ill.

The respondent is now, and has been for more than 3 years last past, engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation designated "Aurine," in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.
PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of the aforesaid business the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of advertisements concerning the said preparation by United States mail, by insertions in newspapers and periodicals, having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparation, and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of advertisements concerning its said preparation, by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparation in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Deafened Man Hears Again. "I heard the minister read scripture for the first time in years," * * * If you are deafened, bothered by ringing, buzzing head noises, or some temporary septic condition, due to hardened or coagulated wax (cerumen), try the treatment that many sufferers say has enabled them to hear well again—that is, Ourine, a Vienna Specialist's prescription. * * *
Money refunded if not satisfied.
Deafened Boy hears radio. "My boy hears everything on the radio", * * *
"Before he used Ourine, he could not hear the radio."
Deafened Woman Hears Clock Tick. "I was deafened. Now I can hear the clock tick," * * * Helps 88 year Old Deafened Man Hear. "My husband was 88 years old and very hard of hearing. He is getting so he can hear a clock tick." * * *

PAR. 3. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations and others of similar import or meaning not herein set out, the respondent represents, directly or by implication, that its said medicinal preparation designated "Ourine" is a cure or remedy for deafness and has therapeutic value in the treatment of deafness, that said preparation is a competent and effective treatment for deafness, ringing and buzzing head noises due to hardened or coagulated wax in the ear, and that respondent refunds the purchase price for said preparation to its customers who are not satisfied with the results obtained from the use thereof.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid statements and representations by respondent are misleading and have a capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive. Deafness may be caused by either a central or systemic or a local disorder or condition. The said preparation "Ourine" is not a cure or remedy or a competent or effective treatment for deafness and has no therapeutic value in the treatment of deafness. Said preparation is not a competent or effective treatment for deafness or partial deafness, ringing or buzzing head noises due to hardened or coagulated wax in the ear. Although the use of said preparation may soften accumulation of wax in the ear, without the use of an instrument or syringe to remove the wax, the conditions which may result from an accumulation of wax, to wit: temporary deafness, ringing or buzzing head noises, will not be materially benefited or relieved. Respondent has not in all cases made refunds to purchasers not satisfied with the results obtained.

Par. 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing statements and representations with respect to its preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has a capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of said preparation because of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondent herein and counsel, for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Aurine Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its medicinal preparation designated "Ourine" or any other medicinal preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent, directly or through inference, that said preparation is a cure or remedy or a competent or effective treatment for deafness or partial deafness; that said preparation possesses any therapeutic value in excess of such aid as it may render in softening coagulated wax in the ear; that respondent makes refunds to dissatisfied purchasers of said preparation, when respondent does not in fact establish and maintain a definite policy and practice of making such refunds.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after the service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

D. VICTOR WALLACE, TRADING AS PARAMOUNT INSTITUTE

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4999. Complaint, Feb. 1, 1940—Decision, June 26, 1940

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution, in commerce among the various States, of correspondence course of study through the mails to prepare students for various civil service examinations for positions under the United States Government—

(a) Represented, through use of advertising folder employed in personal solicitation and solicitation by his agents of prospective students, that under normal and ordinary conditions and circumstances most persons desiring to obtain civil service status by examination must have special coaching of the kind offered by him, and that he was in constant touch with the United States Civil Service Commission and its examiners and had advance and inside information concerning civil service examinations, and that he was a specialist in matters relating to the civil service of the United States Government and had a background of civil service experience therein, facts being, under conditions and circumstances referred to, persons wishing to pass such examination and qualified by prior general education and experience for particular positions desired do not require such coaching, very small percentage of those passing such examinations have had such coaching for examinations passed, his instruction is not of kind to prepare students for positions sought and is of little value to them unless otherwise qualified by prior education and experience, and, except as casual correspondent, he was not constantly or otherwise in touch with said commission or its examiners and had no advance information concerning its examinations, and was not such a specialist and had not had background of experience claimed as hereinabove set forth;

(b) Represented, as aforesaid, that commission referred to holds examinations for all types of positions at frequent intervals from year to year, and especially for those for which he offers instruction, and that civil service employees are never discharged or deprived of their various positions with the Government except for misconduct or gross inefficiency, and that such employees, if efficient, are certain to obtain promotion in position and advancement in salary, and that persons passing civil service examinations with high rating are certain of obtaining position with the Government and of doing so within a short time after passing such examination, facts being there are many types of positions, including some of those with respect to which he offers instruction, for which examinations are held only at infrequent intervals, with many years elapsing between them sometimes, many employees are discharged for reasons other than those above set forth, including such matters as insufficient appropriations, efficient employees of said character are not certain to obtain promotion as above set forth, and persons passing such an examination with high rating are not certain of obtaining position at early date or at all;
(c) Represented, as aforesaid, that persons between ages of 23 and 45 might become inspectors of customs if otherwise qualified, and that appointments to position of immigrant inspector were ordinarily given to those who had passed civil service examinations appropriate for such position, facts being age limits for customs inspectors were not as given, and appointments to position of immigrant inspector were, and had been for number of years, made on other tests and qualifications than passing of civil service examination, and such examinations for such position had not been given for more than 6 years, and positions in question had been filled by appointment and by promotion within departments;

(d) Represented, as aforesaid, that persons who passed such examination as post office clerks and city mail carriers were eligible for appointment to regular positions paying $1,700 a year, with increases of $100 a year for 5 years, without first serving as substitutes, and that employees of said department entered upon their duties in such positions at salaries of $1,700, $1,800, $1,900, and $2,600, facts being postal clerk and mail carrier salaries first above indicated were paid only after such employees had served as substitutes and, in many instances, for a number of years, appointments to positions in department in question being made at salary of $1,700 only after employee has served as substitute and no appointments being made at higher salaries referred to, which are result of promotion;

(e) Represented, as aforesaid, that some employees of the United States Government working in civil service positions are allowed 30 days annual leave and no employee is required to work more than 8 hours a day, facts being some employees are required to work in excess of said amount, and 26, and not 30, days is maximum annual leave granted to such employees;

(f) Made use of trade name including word “Institute” for conduct of his said business, and implied and represented thereby to prospective students that he conducted an institution of learning with staff of competent, experienced and qualified educators, and that his school was a large and extensive institution offering training and instruction in philosophy, art, science, and other learned subjects, facts being he offered only one course of study and instruction which was substantially same, regardless of civil service examination for which students wished to prepare, his said school was not a large or extensive institution and he had as only employee, a stenographer, in addition to limited number of salesmen employed in past as above set forth, he did not offer, in conduct of his said school, training or instruction in philosophy, art, science, or other learned subjects, neither he nor any of his employees was a competent, experienced, or qualified educator or teacher, and no basic or thorough or complete instruction was given in any subject of learning, his said school was not an institution of learning in any accurate sense, and method of instruction consisted in mere mailing out of previously prepared mimeographed or printed sheets and the grading of papers by a key or prepared answer sheets;

(g) Represented and implied, through statement “Operated in strict compliance with the Laws and Regulations of the Federal Trade Commission” in advertising folders above referred to and circulated to prospective students, that the methods used in sale of said courses of study and instruction, and representations made in connection therewith, were all in conformity to the Federal Trade Commission Act and the decisions of the courts and the orders of the Federal Trade Commission thereunder, and that such methods and representations made in connection therewith conformed to the trade practice rules of the Commission relating to line of business of which his said school was a part, and also that Commission had approved his methods and representations used in connection therewith, and that he had permission of Commission to use said statement in promoting sale of said course of study and instruction, facts being such methods and representations used by him in conduct of his said business as above set forth, were not in conformity with said act or decisions of courts and orders of Commission thereunder, nor in conformity with said trade practice rules, and Commission had not approved his methods or representations used in connection with his business, and he did not have its permission to use said or any other statement in connection with promotion of sale of his said course of study and instruction; and

(h) Represented to prospective purchasers that the price of $40.50 cash, or $50.50 on deferred payments, at which his said course was and had been offered, was a special price for the course, and that the regular one therefor had been $125, and made many of such "special" offers to recent high school graduates, to whom it was further represented that such "special" price was being offered to them because of high scholastic standing or because of some other means of determining their selection as recipients of such "special offer," facts being regular and usual prices were amounts first stated and, with few exceptions, all people enrolled in his said school contracted for the course at not to exceed such prices, higher price mentioned was purely fictitious and no student was then required to contract for such course at said price, and only a few had been enrolled at said price during entire time in which he conducted his business, and prices referred to, actually given, were not because of high scholarship or other merit or special selection, but were given to all who could be induced to contract for course, regardless of such qualifications or selection;

With tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers of his said course of study and instruction into erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations, as above set forth, were true, and to induce them to purchase his said course of study and instruction on account of such belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.

Mr. Donovan R. Divet for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that D. Victor Wallace, an individual, trading as Paramount Institute, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:
Complaint

Paragraph 1. The respondent, D. Victor Wallace, is an individual trading as Paramount Institute and having his office and principal place of business at 1095 Market Street, San Francisco, Calif.

Par. 2. Said respondent, D. Victor Wallace, is now and for more than 3 years last past has been engaged, under the name and style of Paramount Institute, in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, of a course of study and instruction intended for preparing students thereof for examinations for various civil service positions under the United States Government, which said course of study and instruction is pursued by correspondence through the medium of the United States mails. Respondent, in the course and conduct of said business, caused and does now cause said course of study and instruction to be transported from his said place of business in California to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of California.

Par. 3. Respondent, in the course and conduct of said business as aforesaid, through personal solicitation and through the solicitation of agents employed by him for that purpose, has made and does make many misleading representations concerning his said course of study and instruction to prospective students located in various States of the United States. As a part of said solicitation, whether made by respondent or his said agents, respondent has distributed and does distribute to said prospective students in various States of the United States a certain advertising folder or pamphlet designed and intended to induce said prospective students to purchase his said course of study and instruction, which said folder or pamphlet contains misleading representations and statements concerning said course of study and instruction, concerning respondent's said business, and concerning the civil service of the Government of the United States. Among and typical of said representations and statements are the following:

1. Examinations are held at frequent intervals from year to year.
2. Regardless of outside conditions, the Civil Service employee's position is absolutely sure and certain. Downright inefficiency or gross misconduct are the only things that can bring about his discharge.
3. Under the Civil Service system, efficiency soon makes its presence felt and attracts the attention of the men "higher up." Promotion in position and advancement in salary are the inevitable results.
4. To pass a Civil Service examination, one should be coached along the proper lines.
5. A high rating means an early appointment.
6. Our coaching courses are kept parallel with recent examinations and are at all times up-to-date, giving the student just what is required, and in the manner it is presented by the examiners.
7. Our students are notified by us just as soon as an examination is announced, as we are in constant touch with the Civil Service Commission.

8. Inspector of Customs—Age limits 23 to 45. Starting salary $175.00 per month.

9. Immigrant Inspector—Age limits 21 to 45. Starting salary $175.00 per month. Applicants must be in good health and free from color blindness or other serious defects.

10. Post Office Clerk—City Mail Carrier . . . Salaries for clerks and carriers, $1,700 a year the first year ($141.83 a month), with increases of $100 a year for five years.

11. The United States Government is liberal with its employees. In the Post Office Department under which come such desirable positions as clerk, carrier, railway postal clerk, etc., appointments are made at $1,700, $1,800, $1,900, and $2,000 with opportunities for promotion to salaries of $4,900 or more.

12. Vacation allowances are liberal, 30 full working days with pay being given in some branches of the service; and, in addition, 30 days' sick leave, if needed; * * *

13. Congenial hours are the lot of the government employees, nowhere more than eight hours a day being required.

Par. 4. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations and others of similar import and meaning not herein set out the respondent represents:

1. That the Civil Service Commission holds examinations for all types of positions at frequent intervals from year to year, and especially for those for which respondent offers instruction.

2. That Civil Service employees are never discharged or deprived of their various positions with the Government of the United States except for misconduct or gross inefficiency.

3. That efficient Civil Service employees of the Government of the United States are certain to obtain promotion in position and advancement in salary.

4. That under normal and ordinary conditions and circumstances most persons desirous of obtaining a Civil Service status by examination must have special coaching for said examination of the kind offered by respondent.

5. That persons passing a Civil Service examination with a high rating are certain of obtaining a position with the Government of the United States and are certain of obtaining such a position within a short time after passing said examination.

6. That respondent in the conduct of his said business is in constant touch with said Civil Service Commission and its examiners, and has advance and inside information concerning Civil Service examinations.

7. That persons between the ages of 23 and 45 years may become inspectors of customs if otherwise qualified.

8. That appointments to the position of Immigrant Inspector with the United States Government are ordinarily given to persons who have passed Civil Service examinations appropriate for that position.

9. That persons who pass a Civil Service examination as Post Office clerks and city mail carriers are eligible for appointment to regular positions paying $1,700 a year with increases of $100 a year for 5 years without first serving as substitutes.
10. That employees of the Post Office Department enter upon their duties in such positions at salaries of $1,700, $1,800, $1,900, and $2,600.

11. That some employees of the United States Government working in Civil positions are allowed 30 days annual leave.

12. That no employees of the United States Government are required to work more than eight hours a day.

13. That respondent is a specialist in matters relating to the Civil Service of the Government of the United States, and that he has a background of Civil Service experience in the United States Government.

Par. 5. In truth and in fact there are many types of positions, including some of those in regard to which respondent offers instruction, for which civil service examinations are held only at infrequent intervals, many years sometimes elapsing between such examinations; many civil service employees are discharged for reasons other than inefficiency or misconduct, as for example, insufficient appropriations; efficient civil service employees of the United States Government are not certain to obtain promotion in position or advancement in salary; under normal and ordinary conditions and circumstances persons wishing to pass civil service examinations, and who are qualified by prior general education and experience for the particular positions desired, do not require special coaching of the kind offered by respondent; a very small percentage of persons passing civil service examinations have had such special coaching for the examinations passed; the instruction offered by respondent is not of the kind to prepare students for the positions sought and it is of little value to them unless they are otherwise qualified by prior education and experience; persons passing a civil service examination with a high rating are not certain of obtaining a position at an early date or at all; the respondent is not constantly or otherwise in touch with the Civil Service Commission or its examiners, except as a casual correspondent, and has no advance information concerning civil service examinations; the age limits for inspectors of customs are 21 and 36 years; appointments to the position of immigrant inspector are and have been for a number of years made on other tests and qualifications than the passing of a civil service examination; civil service examinations for the position of immigration inspector have not been given for more than 6 years, and such positions have been filled by appointment and by promotion within the department; the salaries indicated by respondent for post office clerks and city mail carriers are those which are paid only after said employees have served as substitutes, in many instances for a number of years; appointments to positions in the Post Office Department are made at a salary of $1,700 only after the employee has served as a substitute, and no appointments are made at salaries of $1,800, $1,900, or $2,600, such salaries being the result of promotion; 26 days is the maximum annual leave granted to civil service employees of the United States Government; some employees of the Government of the United States are required to work more than 8 hours a day; respondent is not a specialist in matters relating to the civil service of the United States and has not had a background of civil service experience in the United States Government.

Par. 6. The name, Paramount Institute, under which respondent conducts his said business, is misleading in that it implies and serves as a representation to prospective students that respondent conducts an institution of learning with a staff of competent, experienced and qualified educators and that his school is a large and extensive institution offering training and instruction in philosophy, art, science, and other learned subjects. In truth and in fact respondent offers only one course of study and instruction which is substantially the same regardless of the civil service examination for which his said students wish to prepare; respondent's said school is not a large or extensive institution. Respondent has only one employee, a stenographer, in addition to a limited number of salesmen employed in the past as heretofore alleged; respondent in the conduct of his said school does not offer training or instruction in philosophy, art, science, or other learned subjects. Neither respondent nor any of his employees is a competent, experienced or qualified educator or teacher. No basic or thorough or complete instruction is given in any subject of learning. Respondent's school is not an institution of learning in any accurate sense. The method of instruction consists in the mere mailing out of previously prepared mimeographed or printed sheets and the grading of papers by means of a key or prepared answer sheets.

Par. 7. In the course and conduct of his said business as aforesaid, respondent, in the advertising folder circulated to prospective students as previously referred to, has made and now makes the following statement and representation:

Operated in strict compliance with the Laws and Regulations of the Federal Trade Commission.

Through said statement respondent represents or implies that the method used in the sale of said course of study and instruction and the representations made in connection therewith are all in conformity to the Federal Trade Commission Act and the decisions of the courts and the orders of the Federal Trade Commission thereunder, and that such methods and representations made in connection therewith conform to the Trade Practice Rules of the Federal Trade Commission relating to the line of business of which respondent's said school is a part.
Through said statement it is further represented or implied that the Federal Trade Commission has approved respondent’s methods and the representations used in connection therewith and that the respondent has permission of the Federal Trade Commission to use said statement in promoting the sale of said course of study and instruction.

In truth and in fact the methods and representations used by respondent in the conduct of said business as specified herein are not in conformity to the Federal Trade Commission Act or the decisions of the courts and the orders of said Commission thereunder nor are they in conformity to the Trade Practice Rules of the line of business of which respondent’s school is a part. The Federal Trade Commission has not approved respondent’s methods or the representations used in connection with such business, and respondent does not have the Commission’s permission to use said statement or any other statement in connection with the promotion of the sale of his said course of study and instruction.

Par. 8. In the course and conduct of his said business as aforesaid, respondent has represented and now represents to prospective purchasers of his said course of study and instruction that the price at which said course is and has been offered to wit, $49.50 cash or $59.50 on deferred payments is a special price for the course and that the regular price thereof has been $125. Many of such special price offers have been made to recent high school graduates to whom the further representation has been made that said special price has been offered to them because of high scholarship standing or because of some other means of determining their selection as recipients of such special offer.

In truth and in fact, the regular and usual price of respondent’s said course of study and instruction is and has been $49.50 cash or $59.50 on deferred payments. With but few exceptions, all persons who have enrolled for instruction in respondent’s said school have contracted for the course at not to exceed $49.50 cash or $59.50 on the deferred payment plan. The price of $125 for said course is purely fictitious and no student is now required to contract for the course at that price. During the entire time respondent has conducted said business only a few students have been enrolled at that price. Said price of $49.50 cash or $59.50 on the deferred-payment plan is not given nor has it been given because of high scholarship or other mark of merit or because of special selection, but has been given to all who could be induced to contract for the course regardless of such special qualifications or selection.

Par. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices used by respondent in connection with the offering for sale and sale of his said course of study and instruction has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations, as herein alleged, are true, and to induce them to purchase respondent's said course of study and instruction on account thereof.

PAR. 10. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 1st day of February 1940, issued and on the 16th day of April 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent D. Victor Wallace, an individual trading as Paramount Institute, charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, in violation of the provisions of said act. On May 29, 1940, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, D. Victor Wallace, is an individual trading as Paramount Institute and having his office and principal place of business at 1095 Market Street, San Francisco, Calif.

PAR. 2. Said respondent, D. Victor Wallace, is now and for more than 3 years last past has been engaged, under the name and style of Paramount Institute, in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States of a course of study and instruction intended for preparing students thereof for examinations for various civil service positions under the United States Government, which said course of study and instruction is pursued by correspondence through the medium of the United States mails. Respondent, in the course and conduct of said business, caused and does now cause said course of study and instruction to be transported from his said place of business in California to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of California.
Findings

Par. 3. Respondent, in the course and conduct of said business as aforesaid, through personal solicitation and through the solicitation of agents employed by him for that purpose, has made and does make many misleading representations concerning his said course of study and instruction to prospective students located in various States of the United States. As a part of said solicitation, whether made by respondent or his said agents, respondent has distributed and does distribute to said prospective students in various States of the United States a certain advertising folder or pamphlet designed and intended to induce said prospective students to purchase his said course of study and instruction, which said folder or pamphlet contains misleading representations and statements concerning said course of study and instruction, concerning respondent's said business, and concerning the civil service of the Government of the United States. Among and typical of said representations and statements are the following:

1. Examinations are held at frequent intervals from year to year.
2. Regardless of outside conditions, the Civil Service employee's position is absolutely sure and certain. Downright inefficiency or gross misconduct are the only things that can bring about his discharge.
3. Under the Civil Service system, efficiency soon makes its presence felt and attracts the attention of the men "higher up." Promotion in position and advancement in salary are the inevitable results.
4. To pass a Civil Service examination, one should be coached along the proper lines.
5. A high rating means an early appointment.
6. Our coaching courses are kept parallel with recent examinations and are at all times up-to-date, giving the student just what is required, and in the manner it is presented by the examiners.
7. Our students are notified by us just as soon as an examination is announced, as we are in constant touch with the Civil Service Commission.
8. Inspector of Customs—Age limits 23 to 45. Starting salary $175.00 per month.
9. Immigrant Inspector—Age limits 21 to 45. Starting salary $175.00 per month. Applicants must be in good health and free from color blindness or other serious defects.
10. Post Office Clerk—City Mail Carrier * * * Salaries for clerks and carriers, $1,700 a year the first year ($141.83 a month), with increases of $100 a year for five years.
11. The United States Government is liberal with its employees. In the Post Office Department under which come such desirable positions as clerk, carrier, railway postal clerk, etc., appointments are made at $1,700, $1,800, $1,900, and $2,600 with opportunities for promotion to salaries of $4,900 or more.
12. Vacation allowances are liberal, 30 full working days with pay being given in some branches of the service; and, in addition, 30 days' sick leave, if needed; * * *
13. Congenial hours are the lot of the government employees, nowhere more than eight hours a day being required.
Par. 4. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations and others of similar import and meaning not herein set out, the respondent represents:

1. That the Civil Service Commission holds examinations for all types of positions at frequent intervals from year to year, and especially for those for which respondent offers instruction.

2. That Civil Service employees are never discharged or deprived of their various positions with the Government of the United States except for misconduct or gross inefficiency.

3. That efficient Civil Service employees of the Government of the United States are certain to obtain promotion in position and advancement in salary.

4. That under normal and ordinary conditions and circumstances most persons desirous of obtaining a Civil Service status by examination must have special coaching for said examination of the kind offered by respondent.

5. That persons passing a Civil Service examination with a high rating are certain of obtaining a position with the Government of the United States and are certain of obtaining such a position within a short time after passing said examination.

6. That respondent in the conduct of his said business is in constant touch with said Civil Service Commission and its examiners, and has advance and inside information concerning Civil Service examinations.

7. That persons between the ages of 23 and 45 years may become inspectors of customs if otherwise qualified.

8. That appointments to the position of Immigrant Inspector with the United States Government are ordinarily given to persons who have passed Civil Service examinations appropriate for that position.

9. That persons who pass a Civil Service examination as Post Office clerks and city mail carriers are eligible for appointment to regular positions paying $1,700 a year with increases of $100 a year for five years without first serving as substitutes.

10. That employees of the Post Office Department enter upon their duties in such positions at salaries of $1,700, $1,800, $1,900, and $2,000.

11. That some employees of the United States Government working in Civil Service positions are allowed 30 days annual leave.

12. That no employees of the United States Government are required to work more than eight hours a day.

13. That respondent is a specialist in matters relating to the Civil Service of the Government of the United States, and that he has a background of Civil Service experience in the United States Government.

Par. 5. In truth and in fact there are many types of positions, including some of those in regard to which respondent offers instruction, for which civil service examinations are held only at infrequent intervals, many years sometimes elapsing between such examinations; many civil service employees are discharged for reasons other than inefficiency or misconduct as, for example, insufficient appropriations; efficient civil service employees of the United States Government are not certain to obtain promotion in position or advancement in salary;
under normal and ordinary conditions and circumstances persons wishing to pass civil service examinations, and who are qualified by prior general education and experience for the particular positions desired, do not require special coaching of the kind offered by respondent; a very small percentage of persons passing civil service examinations have had such special coaching for the examinations passed; the instruction offered by respondent is not of the kind to prepare students for the positions sought and it is of little value to them unless they are otherwise qualified by prior education and experience; persons passing a civil service examination with a high rating are not certain of obtaining a position at an early date or at all; the respondent is not constantly or otherwise in touch with the Civil Service Commission or its examiners, except as a casual correspondent, and has no advance information concerning civil service examinations; the age limits for inspectors of customs are 21 and 36 years; appointments to the position of immigrant inspector are and have been for a number of years made on other tests and qualifications than the passing of a civil service examination; civil service examinations for the position of immigration inspector have not been given for more than 6 years, and such positions have been filled by appointment and by promotion within the departments; the salaries indicated by respondent for post office clerks and city mail carriers are those which are paid only after said employees have served as substitutes, in many instances for a number of years; appointments to positions in the Post Office Department are made at a salary of $1,700 only after the employee has served as a substitute, and no appointments are made at salaries of $1,800, $1,900, or $2,600, such salaries being the result of promotion; 26 days is the maximum annual leave granted to civil service employees of the United States Government; some employees of the Government of the United States are required to work more than 8 hours a day; respondent is not a specialist in matters relating to the civil service of the United States and has not had a background of civil service experience in the United States Government.

Par. 6. The name, Paramount Institute, under which respondent conducts his said business, is misleading in that it implies and serves as a representation to prospective students that respondent conducts an institution of learning with a staff of competent, experienced and qualified educators and that his school is a large and extensive institution offering training and instruction in philosophy, art, science, and other learned subjects. In truth and in fact respondent offers only one course of study and instruction which is substantially the same regardless of the civil service examination for which his said students wish to prepare; respondent's said school is not a large or extensive institution. Respondent has only one employee, a stenographer, in addition to a limited number of salesmen employed in the past as heretofore alleged; respondent in the conduct of his said school does not offer training or instruction in philosophy, art, science, or other learned subjects. Neither respondent nor any of his employees is a competent, experienced or qualified educator or teacher. No basic or thorough or complete instruction is given in any subject of learning. Respondent's school is not an institution of learning in any accurate sense. The method of instruction consists in the mere mailing out of previously prepared mimeographed or printed sheets and the grading of papers by means of a key or prepared answer sheets.

Par. 7. In the course and conduct of his said business as aforesaid, respondent, in the advertising folder circulated to prospective students as previously referred to, has made and now makes the following statement and representation:

Operated in strict compliance with the Laws and Regulations of the Federal Trade Commission.

Through said statement respondent represents or implies that the method used in the sale of said course of study and instruction and the representations made in connection therewith are all in conformity to the Federal Trade Commission Act and the decisions of the Courts and the orders of the Federal Trade Commission thereunder, and that such methods and representations made in connection therewith conform to the Trade Practice Rules of the Federal Trade Commission relating to the line of business of which respondent's said school is a part. Through said statement it is further represented or implied that the Federal Trade Commission has approved respondent's methods and the representations used in connection therewith and that the respondent has permission of the Federal Trade Commission to use said statement in promoting the sale of said course of study and instruction.

In truth and in fact the methods and representations used by respondent in the conduct of said business as specified herein are not in conformity to the Federal Trade Commission Act or the decisions of the Courts and the orders of said Commission thereunder nor are they in conformity to the Trade Practice Rules of the line of business of which respondent's school is a part. The Federal Trade Commission has not approved respondent's methods or the representations used in connection with such business, and respondent does not have the Commission's permission to use said statement or any other statement.

Par. 8. In the course and conduct of his said business as aforesaid, respondent has represented and now represents to prospective purchasers of his said course of study and instruction that the price at which said course is and has been offered, to wit, $49.50 cash or $59.50 on deferred payments is a special price for the course and that the regular price thereof has been $125. Many of such special price offers have been made to recent high school graduates to whom the further representation has been made that said special price has been offered to them because of high scholarship standing or because of some other means of determining their selection as recipients of such special offer.

In truth and in fact, the regular and usual price of respondent's said course of study and instruction is and has been $49.50 or $59.50 on deferred payments. With but few exceptions, all persons who have enrolled for instruction in respondent's said school have contracted for the course at not to exceed $49.50 cash or $59.50 on the deferred payment plan. The price of $125 for said course is purely fictitious and no student is now required to contract for the course at that price. During the entire time respondent has conducted said business only a few students have been enrolled at that price. Said price of $49.50 cash or $59.50 on the deferred payment plan is not given nor has it been given because of high scholarship or other mark of merit or because of special selection, but has been given to all who could be induced to contract for the course regardless of such special qualifications or selection.

Par. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices used by respondent in connection with the offering for sale and sale of his said course of study and instruction has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations, as herein alleged, are true, and to induce them to purchase respondent's said course of study and instruction on account thereof.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent, D. Victor Wallace, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of courses of study and instruction intended for preparing students thereof for examinations for various civil service positions under the United States Government, and in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of any other course or courses of instruction in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that success in a civil service examination requires special coaching.

2. Representing that respondent has any opportunity for contact, not available to any member of the public, with the United States Civil Service Commission or its employees, or that respondent has advance or "inside" information concerning civil service examinations, or that respondent offers any preparation for civil service examinations other than a coaching service.

3. Representing that respondent is a specialist in matters relating to the civil service of the United States Government, or that he has special qualifications in relation to the civil service or examinations therefor.

4. Representing that respondent's general business or sales methods have the approval of the Federal Trade Commission or are in conformity with any rules or regulations issued by such Commission.

5. Representing that the price regularly and customarily charged for respondent's courses of study and instruction is a special or reduced price, or is anything other than the regular price for such courses.

6. Representing that respondent's courses of study are being offered to a particular prospect at a special or reduced price because of the prospect's high scholastic standing or for any other purported reason when such price is in fact the regular and customary price for such courses.
7. Representing that persons who pass the civil service examination for post office clerks or city mail carriers are eligible for appointment without previously serving as substitutes for a period of time.

8. Misrepresenting the frequency with which, or the time at which, the United States Civil Service Commission holds, or will hold, examinations.

9. Misrepresenting the prospects for obtaining a position under civil service after having passed an examination, or the salary at which appointees enter into their positions, or the age limits for employees in civil service positions, or the prospects for promotion or advancement in salary of civil service employees, or the permanency of civil service positions.

10. Misrepresenting the number or classification of positions in the United States Government service which are ordinarily filled through civil service examinations.

11. Misrepresenting the number of working hours required of employees of the Government or the length of the period of annual leave granted such employees.

12. Using the term "Institute" as part of the trade or corporate name under which respondent's business of selling courses of instruction is conducted, or using the term "Institute" to in any way describe or refer to respondent's business.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

GREAT BUCKEYE CANDIES, INC.

Docket 4015. Complaint, Feb. 5, 1940—Decision, June 26, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of candy and in sale and distribution of certain assortments thereof which were so packed and assembled as to involve use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers, and included (1) number of penny candy, all day suckers, upon sticks of some of which, embedded in said pieces of candy, appeared word "Bullet," for sale and distribution to such penny purchasers under a plan by which chance purchaser securing stick with word "Bullet" thereon was entitled to and received an additional piece of candy without additional cost, and (2) various other assortments which were so packed and assembled that sales thereof were to be made to purchasing public by means of game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme and under sales plan or method substantially similar to that above described and varying therefrom in detail only—

Sold said assortments to dealers and to retailers by whom, as direct or indirect purchasers thereof, such assortments were exposed and sold to purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, under which additional pieces of candy worth one cent each were distributed to purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and involving aforesaid game of chance or sale of a chance to procure additional piece of candy without additional cost, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its candy in accordance with sales plan or method above set forth, contrary to the established policy of the United States Government, and in violation of criminal laws, and in competition with many who are willing to adopt and use said or any method involving use of a game of chance or sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by its said method and by element of chance involved in sale of said merchandise as above described and were thereby induced to buy and sell its said product in preference to that offered and sold by its said competitors, who do not use same or equivalent method, and with effect, through use of such method and because of said game of chance, of diverting unfairly trade in commerce to it from its competitors aforesaid who do not use such or equivalent sales plan or method; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Great Buckeye Candies, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Great Buckeye Candies, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Ohio with its principal office and place of business located at 567 East South Street, Akron, Ohio. Respondent is now and for more than one year last past has been engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to dealers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. It causes and has caused said candy, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers thereof in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now and for more than one year last past has been a course of trade by said respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof respondent sells and has sold to dealers certain assortments of said candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when said candy is sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is sold and distributed to the purchasing public in substantially the following manner:

This assortment consists of a number of pieces of candy commonly known as all-day suckers. Each of said pieces of candy has imbedded therein a wooden stick or handle. On some of said sticks there appears the word “Bullet” and the ends of said sticks on which such word appears are imbedded in said pieces of candy. Sales are one cent each, and each purchaser is entitled to and receives one piece of candy. Each purchaser who secures a piece of candy containing a stick with the word "Bullet" thereon is entitled to and receives an additional piece of candy without additional cost. The word "Bullet" is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the piece of candy purchased has been consumed or removed from said stick. Each of said pieces of candy is worth one cent. The additional pieces of candy are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes various assortments of candy so packed and assembled that the sales of such candy are to be made to the purchasing public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method employed in connection with each of said assortments is substantially the same as the sales plan or method hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said candy directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its candy in accordance with the sales plan or method hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of its candy and the sale of such candy by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an additional piece of candy without additional cost. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with the respondent as above alleged are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving the use of a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by a chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of said merchandise in the manner above alleged, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by the respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent sales plan or method. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on February 5, 1940, issued, and thereafter served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Great Buckeye Candies, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Great Buckeye Candies, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Ohio, with its principal office and place of business located at 567 East South Street, Akron, Ohio. Respondent is now and for more than one year last past has been engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to dealers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. It causes and has caused said candy, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers thereof in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now and for more than one year last past has been a course of trade by said respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof respondent sells and has sold to dealers certain assortments of said candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when said candy is sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is sold and distributed to the purchasing public in substantially the following manner:

This assortment consists of a number of pieces of candy commonly known as all day suckers. Each of said pieces of candy has imbedded therein a wooden stick or handle. On some of said sticks there appears the word "Bullet" and the ends of said sticks on which such word appears are imbedded in said pieces of candy. Sales are one cent each, and each purchaser is entitled to and receives one piece of candy. Each purchaser who secures a piece of candy containing a stick with the word "Bullet" thereon is entitled to and receives an additional piece of candy without additional cost. The word "Bullet" is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the piece of candy purchased has been consumed or removed from said stick. Each of said pieces of candy is worth one cent. The additional pieces of said candy are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes various assortments of candy so packed and assembled that the sales of such candy are to be made to the purchasing public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method employed in connection with each of said assortments is substantially the same as the sales plan or method hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said candy directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its candy in accordance with the sales plan or method hereinabove described. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of its candy and the sale of such candy by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an additional piece of candy without additional cost. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving the use of a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by a chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent’s said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of said merchandise in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent’s merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by the respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent sales plan or method. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein described, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent’s competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and the substitute answer of respondent, in which substitute answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
It is ordered, That the respondent, Great Buckeye Candies, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing assortments of any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of said merchandise to the general public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others assortments of any merchandise, either together with lottery devices or separately, which said lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing said merchandise to the general public.

3. Selling or otherwise distributing any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

WILLIAM W. KELSO, TRADING AS NORTHWESTERN PRODUCTS COMPANY AND NORTHWESTERN HEALTH CLINIC

Docket 4066. Complaint, Mar. 18, 1940—Decision, June 26, 1940

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of medicinal preparation designated "Periodic Relief Pills" and recommended as remedy for delayed menstruation, to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia; in advertisements of his said product which he disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails, by insertions in newspapers and periodicals of general circulation, and in circulars and other printed or written matter distributed among and between the various States, and by other means in commerce, and which were intended and likely to induce purchase of said product—

(a) Represented, directly and indirectly, that said preparation was a cure or remedy for delayed menstruation and constituted a competent and effective treatment therefor, and possessed therapeutic value with respect thereto, and that it was safe and harmless, facts being it was not a cure or remedy for such condition, did not constitute competent or effective treatment therefor or possess any therapeutic value with respect thereto, and said preparation was not safe and harmless, in that it contained extract cotton root bark, extract black hellebore, aloes, oil savin, and ergotin in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if taken under conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, and use thereof might result in gastro-intestinal disturbances, and, where used to interfere with normal course of pregnancy, might result in uterine infection and even lead to condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning, and use thereof might produce severe circulatory condition, often with poisonous effects upon the human system, and tending to cause abortion in some instances, and might result in severe toxic conditions leading possibly either to loss of limbs or other serious and irreparable injury to health; and

(b) Failed to reveal, in advertisements disseminated by him as aforesaid, that the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual might result in serious or irreparable injury to health of user;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false and misleading representations were true, and into purchase of substantial quantity of his said product:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. William L. Taggart for the Commission.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that William W. Kelso, individually, and trading as Northwestern Products Co., and as Northwestern Health Clinic, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, William W. Kelso, is an individual trading as Northwestern Products Co., and Northwestern Health Clinic, with his office and principal place of business located at 611½ Union Street, Seattle, Wash. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation designated "Periodic Relief Pills," recommended as a remedy for delayed menstruation.

In the course and conduct of his business the respondent causes his said preparation, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Washington to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in his said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product by United States mails, by insertions in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said product; and has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning said product by various means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said product in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to said product, are the following:

LADIES WITH DELAYED PERIODS: Don't worry or be uncertain when Nature fails you. You can obtain in the privacy of your home our Time-Tried “PERIODIC RELIEF PILLS.” Harmless, Reliable and Efficient. Women report the pill form more CONVENIENT TO TAKE with no pain or ill after effects. Relieves most unnatural, stubborn Delayed periods immediately with no interference with Home or Social duties. Special Treatment, $2.00 Postpaid, in plain sealed wrapper. THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR SAFETY. Order today and be convinced. NORTHWESTERN PRODUCTS COMPANY, P. O. BOX 674, SEATTLE, WASH.

PAR. 3. Through the use of the representations hereinabove set forth, and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the remedial, curative, and therapeutic properties of his said preparation, respondent has represented, and does now represent, directly and indirectly, that said preparation is a cure or remedy for delayed menstruation; that said preparation constitutes a competent and effective treatment for delayed menstruation and possesses therapeutic value with respect thereto, and that said preparation is safe and harmless.

PAR. 4. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation is not a cure or remedy for delayed menstruation, nor does it constitute a competent or effective treatment therefor or possess any therapeutic value with respect thereto. Moreover, said preparation is not safe and harmless, in that it contains extract cotton root bark, extract black hellebore, aloe, oil savin, and ergotin in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if taken under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

The use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances such as catharsis, nausea, and vomiting with pelvic congestion, congestion of the uterus leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage, and in those cases where said preparation is used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy may result in uterine infection with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures, and even to the blood stream, causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

The use of said preparation may also produce a severe circulatory condition by the constriction of the blood vessels and contraction of the involuntary muscles, often with poisonous effects upon the human system, and tending to cause abortion in some instances, and may result in severe toxic conditions such as hemorrhagic diarrhea, and in some instances producing a gangrenous condition in the lower limbs, resulting possibly either in loss of limbs or in other serious and irreparable injury to health.

PAR. 5. In addition to the representations herein set forth the respondent is also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in that said advertisements fail to reveal that the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in serious or irreparable injury to the health of the user.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading representations with respect to his said product has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false and misleading representations are true, and into the purchase of a substantial quantity of respondent's product.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on March 18, 1940, issued, and on March 23, 1940, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon William W. Kelso, individually, and trading as Northwestern Products Co., and as Northwestern Health Clinic, charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On April 15, 1940, the respondent filed his answer in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, William W. Kelso, is an individual trading as Northwestern Products Co., and Northwestern Health Clinic, with his office and principal place of business located at 611½
Union Street, Seattle, Wash. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation designated "Periodic Relief Pills," recommended as a remedy for delayed menstruation.

In the course and conduct of his business the respondent causes his said preparation, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Washington to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in his said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product by United States mails, by insertions in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said product; and has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning said product by various means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said product in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to said product, are the following:

LADIES WITH DELAYED PERIODS: Don't worry or be uncertain when Nature fails you. You can obtain in the privacy of your home our Time-Tried "PERIODIC RELIEF PILLS." Harmless, Reliable and Efficient. Women report the pill form more convenient to take with no pain or ill after effects. Relieves most unnatural, stubborn Delayed periods immediately with no interference with Home or Social duties. Special Treatment, $2.00 Postpaid, in plain sealed wrapper. THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR SAFETY. Order today and be convinced.

NORTHWESTERN PRODUCTS COMPANY, P. O. BOX 674, SEATTLE, WASH.

Par. 3. Through the use of the representations hereinabove set forth, and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the remedial, curative, and therapeutic properties of his said preparation, respondent has represented, and does now represent, directly and indirectly, that said preparation is a cure or remedy for delayed menstruation; that said preparation constitutes a competent and effective treatment for delayed menstruation and possesses therapeutic value with respect thereto, and that said preparation is safe and harmless.

Par. 4. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation is not a cure or remedy for delayed menstruation, nor does it constitute a competent or effective treatment therefor or possess any therapeutic value with respect thereto. Moreover, said preparation is not safe and harmless, in that it contains extract cotton root bark, extract black hellebore, aloes, oil savin, and ergotin in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if taken under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

The use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances such as catharsis, nausea, and vomiting with pelvic congestion, congestion of the uterus leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage, and in those cases where said preparation is used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy may result in uterine infection with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures, and even to the blood stream, causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

The use of said preparation may also produce a severe circulatory condition by the constriction of the blood vessels and contraction of the involuntary muscles, often with poisonous effects upon the human system and tending to cause abortion in some instances, and may result in severe toxic conditions such as hemorrhagic diarrhea, and in some instances producing a gangrenous condition in the lower limbs, resulting possibly either in loss of limbs or in other serious and irreparable injury to health.

Par. 5. In addition to the representations herein set forth the respondent is also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in that said advertisements fail to reveal that the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in serious or irreparable injury to the health of the user.

Par. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading representations with respect to his said product has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false and misleading representations are true, and into the purchase of a substantial quantity of respondent's product.
CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, William W. Kelso, individually and trading as Northwestern Products Co. and as Northwestern Health Clinic, or trading under any other name or names, his agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of his medicinal preparation designated "Periodic Relief Pills," or any other medicinal preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 10 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing, stating whether he intends to comply with this order and, if so, the manner and form in which he intends to comply; and that within 60 days after the service upon him of this order said respondent shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

Docket 4077. Complaint, Mar. 30, 1940—Decision, June 26, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of its "Birthstone Rings" jewelry, to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia; in advertising circulars, letters, newspaper advertisements, and otherwise—

Represented that the stones contained in the rings sold by it as lucky birthstone rings were the real, or certain precious or semiprecious, stones, as understood by common acceptance, from word "birthstone," as identified with each month, and including such stones as garnet, amethyst, jasper or bloodstone (aquamarine), diamond or sapphire, emerald, agate, turquoise, carnelian, chrysolite, beryl, topaz, and ruby, through such statements, in advertisements referred to, as "YOUR BIRTHSTONE IS YOUR LUCKY CHARM," and "Garnet, for January, Amethyst for February, Aquamarine for March, and so all through the year, each month has its special birthstone," facts being representations and implications disseminated by it as above set forth were false and stones in the rings sold by it as "Lucky Birthstone Rings" were not the stones they were represented as being, but imitations thereof;

With effect, through use of aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as above set forth, of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representations were true, and of inducing substantial portion of said public, because of such belief, to purchase its said products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Jesse D. Kash for the Commission.

Swiger, King & Chambers, of New York City, for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Popular Publications, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect, as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Popular Publications, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business respondent is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, engaged in the sale and distribution of certain jewelry designated "birthstone rings."

By common acceptance, a certain precious stone or semi-precious stone (in some cases alternative stones), is identified with each month of the year as the birthstone of that month, such stones being garnet, amethyst, jasper or bloodstone (aquamarine), diamond or sapphire, emerald, agate, turquoise, carnelian, chrysolite, beryl, topaz, and ruby. Respondent causes its jewelry, when sold by it to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said jewelry among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said birthstone rings, respondent by means of advertising circulars, letters, newspaper advertisements, and by other means, has made false and misleading representations concerning its said product.

Among and typical of the representations contained in said false advertisements so used and disseminated as aforesaid, are the following:

YOUR BIRTHSTONE IS YOUR LUCKY CHARM.
Garnet for January, Amethyst for February, Aquamarine for March, and so all through the year, each month has its special birthstone.

PAR. 5. Through the use of the representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondent represents that the stones contained in the rings sold by it as lucky birthstone rings are respectively the real stones named in paragraph 2 hereof.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representations and implications used and disseminated by the respondent in the matter above described are false. In truth and in fact the stones in the rings sold by the respondent as "Lucky Birthstone Rings" are not the stones they are represented to be but are imitations of same.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representa-
Findings

Paragraph 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, engaged in the sale and distribution of certain jewelry designated "Birthstone Rings."

By common acceptance a certain precious stone or semiprecious stone (in some cases alternative stones), is identified with each month of the year as the birthstone of that month, such stones being garnet, amethyst, jasper or bloodstone (aquamarine), diamond or sapphire, emerald, agate, turquoise, carnelian, chrysolite, beryl, topaz, and ruby.

Respondent causes its jewelry when sold by it to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
PAR. 3. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said jewelry among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said birthstone rings, respondent, by means of advertising circulars, letters, newspaper advertisements, and by other means, has made false and misleading representations concerning its said product. Among and typical of the representations contained in said false advertisements so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

YOUR BIRTHSTONE IS YOUR LUCKY CHARM
Garnet for January, Amethyst for February, Aquamarine for March, and so all through the year, each month has its special birthstone.

PAR. 5. Through the use of the representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondent represents that the stones contained in the rings sold by it as lucky birthstone rings are respectively the real stones named in paragraph 2 hereof.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representations and implications used and disseminated by the respondent in the manner above described are false. In truth and in fact the stones in the rings sold by the respondent as “Lucky Birthstone Rings” are not the stones they are represented to be but are imitations of same.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations disseminated, as aforesaid, has had and now has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representations are true and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent’s said products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein set forth are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

*It is ordered, That the respondent, Popular Publications, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of rings in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Representing, directly or by implication that the rings offered for sale and sold by respondent are set with precious or semiprecious stones identified as the birthstones for the respective months of the year.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

OAK LANE CANDY COMPANY

Docket 4099. Complaint, Apr. 23, 1940—Decision, June 26, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of certain assortments of candy and peanuts, which were so packed and assembled as to involve use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers, and included (1) number of pieces of candy and push card for use in sale and distribution thereof under a plan in accordance with which chance selection of certain numbers from card entitled penny purchaser to 20, 10, 5, 3, or 2 pieces of candy as case might be, and under which last purchaser in each of first 3 sections into which card was divided was entitled to and received 5 pieces, and purchaser pushing last number on card was entitled and received 15 pieces, and those securing other numbers were entitled to and received 1 piece only, and (2) various other assortments of said product, together with punchboards and push cards and involving methods or sales plans like or similar to that above described and varying therefrom in detail only—

Sold said assortments to dealers, and to retailers, by whom as direct and indirect purchasers thereof, they were exposed and sold to purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, under which persons selecting many of the numbers designated, as above indicated, received pieces of candy which had retail values greatly in excess of amounts to be paid therefor, and under which such additional pieces were distributed to persons selecting such designated numbers wholly by lot or chance, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with sales plans or methods as above set forth, contrary to the established public policy of the United States Government, and in violation of criminal law, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said or any sales plans or methods involving game of chance or sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other sales plan or method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With result that many dealers in, and ultimate purchasers of, said products were attracted by its said sales plan or method and manner of packing such products and by element of chance involved in sale thereof as above described and were thereby induced to purchase said products so packed and sold by it in preference to like or similar ones offered or sold by said competitors, who do not use same or equivalent methods, and with result, through use of such methods and because of said game of chance, of diverting unfairly trade to it from its said competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods, to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:
Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.
Mr. Martin B. Ebbert, of York, Pa., for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Oak Lane Candy Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Oak Lane Candy Co., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania with its principal office and place of business located at Pine and Oak Lane Streets, York, Pa. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and peanuts to dealers. Respondent causes and has caused its said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof in various other States of the United States at their respective points of location. There is now, and for more than one year last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in such products in commerce between and among various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of its business respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in Paragraph 1 hereof respondent sells and has sold to dealers certain assortments of said candy and peanuts so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when said products are sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.
One of said assortments consists of a number of pieces of candy together with a device commonly called a push card. Such assortment is sold and distributed to the purchasing public in substantially the following manner: Said push card is divided into 4 sections and each section contains a number of partially perforated discs, within each of which there is a number. Sales are 1 cent each. The card bears legends informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that the person pushing a designated number is entitled to, and receives 20 pieces of candy; persons pushing other designated numbers are entitled to, and receive 10 pieces of candy; persons pushing other designated numbers are entitled to, and receive 5 pieces of candy; persons pushing other designated numbers are entitled to, and receive 3 pieces of candy; persons pushing other designated numbers are entitled to, and receive 2 pieces of candy. The purchaser of each of the remaining numbers is entitled to, and receives 1 piece of candy; the last purchaser in each of the first three of said sections is entitled to, and receives 5 pieces of candy; and the purchaser pushing the last number on said card is entitled to, and receives 15 pieces of candy. Persons selecting said designated numbers receives pieces of said candy which have retail values greatly in excess of the amounts to be paid therefor. The said numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the said disks have been selected and removed from said card. The said additional pieces of candy distributed to the persons selecting said designated numbers are thus distributed to the purchasers thereof wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent sells and distributes various assortments of said products together with punchboards and push cards but the methods or plans used in the sale and distribution of each of said assortments, is like or similar to the one hereinabove described varying only in detail.

Par. 3. Retailers who purchase respondent's said products directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of others, the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plans or methods in the sale of its products and the sale of said products by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said sales plans or methods, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal law.

Par. 4. The sale of said products to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or a sale of a chance to procure said products at prices much less than the normal retail prices thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute products in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said sales plans or methods or any sales plans or methods involving a game of chance or a sale of a chance to win something by a chance, or any other sales plans or methods that are contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many dealers in, and ultimate purchasers of, said products are attracted by respondent's sales plans or methods and the manner of packing said products and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof, in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said products so packed and sold by respondent, in preference to like or similar products offered for sale or sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does unfairly divert trade to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof, substantial injury is being, and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on April 23, 1940, issued, and thereafter served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Oak Lane Candy Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's request for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
Findings

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Oak Lane Candy Co., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania with its principal office and place of business located at Pine and Oak Lane Streets, York, Pa. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and peanuts to dealers. Respondent causes and has caused its said products when sold to be shipped or transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof in various States of the United States at their respective points of location. There is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in such products in commerce between and among various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers certain assortments of said candy and peanuts so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when said products are sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments consists of a number of pieces of candy together with a device commonly called a push card. Such assortment is sold and distributed to the purchasing public in substantially the following manner: Said push card is divided into four sections and each section contains a number of partially perforated disks, within each of which there is a number. Sales are 1 cent each. The card bears legends informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that the person pushing a designated number is entitled to, and receives, 20 pieces of candy; persons pushing other designated numbers are entitled to, and receive 10 pieces of candy; persons pushing other designated numbers are entitled to, and receive, 5 pieces of candy; persons pushing other designated numbers are entitled to, and receive, 3 pieces of candy; persons pushing other designated numbers are entitled to, and receive, 2 pieces of candy. The purchaser of each of the remaining numbers is entitled to, and receives, 1 piece of candy; the last purchaser in each of the first three of said sections is entitled to, and receives 5 pieces of candy; and the purchaser pushing the last number on said card is entitled to, and receives, 15 pieces of candy. Persons selecting many of said designated numbers receive pieces of said candy which have retail values greatly in excess of the amounts to be paid therefor. The said numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the said discs have been selected and removed from said card. The said additional pieces of candy distributed to the persons selecting said designated numbers are thus distributed to the purchasers thereof wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent sells and distributes various assortments of said products, together with punchboards and push cards, but the methods or plans used in the sale and distribution of each of said assortments, is like or similar to the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

Par. 3. Retailers who purchase respondent's said products directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plans or methods in the sale of its products and the sale of said products by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said sales plans or methods, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal law.

Par. 4. The sale of said products to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or a sale of a chance to procure said products at prices much less than the normal retail prices thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute products in competition with the respondent, as above described, are unwilling to adopt and use said sales plans or methods or any sales plans or methods involving a game of chance or a sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other sales plans or methods that are contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many dealers in, and ultimate purchasers of, said products are attracted by respondent's sales plans or methods and the manner of packing said products and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof, in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said products so packed and sold by respondent, in preference to like or similar products offered for sale or sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof, substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among various States of the United States.
The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein described are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the substitute answer of respondent, in which substitute answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusions that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Oak Lane Candy Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy and peanuts or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales thereof to the general public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others packages or assortments of any merchandise, together with push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing said merchandise to the general public.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices either with assortments of said candy and peanuts or any other merchandise, or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such candy and peanuts or other merchandise to the general public.

4. Selling or otherwise distributing any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

GROVE LABORATORIES, INC.

Docket 3445. Complaint, May 24, 1938—Decision, June 29, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of its Pazo Ointment, as treatment for hemorrhoids, and of its Dr. Porter’s Antiseptic Healing Oil, for variety of skin disorders, to purchasers in other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of similar medicinal preparations in commerce among the various States and in said District; in advertising its said products in newspapers and magazines, and pamphlets, circulars and otherwise—

(a) Represented or implied that said ointment would cure hemorrhoids in all cases, through statement “Effective treatment today for piles is to be had in Pazo Ointment”;

Facts being treatment by any ointment such as said product cannot be effective in all cases or, at least, as a rule, rather than the exception, and cannot be efficacious except in being helpful in relieving symptoms through aid in alleviating pain by virtue of phenol contained therein, and through having generally soothing effect, many prescriptions found in prescription books generally recognized and used by medical profession in treatment of said condition or ailment contain same or similar ingredients as those found in its said ointment, and including, as an important one, phenol, which, together with other medication, will relieve mild conditions of hemorrhoids without necessity of resort to surgery, only effective treatment in many instances, or to other severe measures, and its said ointment constituted no more than a treatment for alleviation of minor rectal irritations accompanying piles, therapeutic value of which was limited to affording palliative relief in cases of simple hemorrhoids; and

(b) Represented that its said Antiseptic Healing Oil constituted an effective or standard treatment for skin diseases caused by infection, and an effective agent in the treatment of dandruff, falling hair, or diseases peculiar to the scalp, and that it would promote growth of hair and prevent baldness, and destroy parasites usually associated with dandruff and other diseases of scalp, through such statements, among others, as “Most scalp troubles involve a parasite of some kind—a living organism that causes infection with resulting itch, scales, crust, thin and falling hair. Here, at last, is a treatment that not only destroys the parasite but helps repair the damage done. • • • it works wonders in correcting scalp and skin troubles. Stops itch almost instantly. Softens and removes crust. Cleanses and stimulates the whole scalp, making it white and wholesome and promoting growth of new hair • • •,” and such statements as “• • • not only destroys the parasites that cause many skin troubles but, at the same time, helps heal the sore and damaged skin” and “• • • an oil, which, of course, is not drying and an oil which is both antiseptic and an aid to healing. • • • not only checks bacterial growth but at the same time increases the superficial blood supply to the local tissues and thereby promotes the natural healing process”;
Facts being said oil would not be an effective treatment for sore, scaly scalp, bald patches, thin and falling hair, or for scalp troubles generally, statement that "Most scalp troubles involve a parasite of some kind" or that preparation is effective against parasites on the scalp, skin or feet is not in accord with medical knowledge, and fact of its being an antiseptic does not indicate that it is of any value against any type of parasitic organism, except some types of bacteria, itching in many instances is usually symptom of scabies, for which it is not effective treatment, skin troubles generally, and including foot sores, leg sores, boils, rash, broken-out skin, ringworm, eczema, and other similar disorders described in its advertisements, will not in all cases respond to treatment with said oil, and, while ingredients contained in said oil, including large proportion of linseed oil, will aid in alleviating itching of scalp and of normal skin conditions, they will not destroy parasites, and preparation in question would not promote growth of hair nor purify nor cleanse scalp; With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations above set forth were true, and of inducing portion of said public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase its said medicinal preparations, and with result that trade was diverted unfairly to it from its competitors who are likewise engaged in sale and distribution in commerce of similar preparations or other preparations intended for similar usage: Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. William L. Pencke for the Commission.

Small & Small, of St. Louis, Mo., and Davies, Richberg, Beebe, Busick & Richardson, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Grove Laboratories, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Grove Laboratories, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business at 2630 Pine Street, in the city of St. Louis, State of Missouri.

Par. 2. Said respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of certain medicinal preparations in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia. Said preparations are known as Pazo Ointment and Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil and represented to be remedies for hemorrhoids and a variety of skin diseases. Respondent causes said products, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in the State of Missouri to purchasers thereof located in a State or States of the United States other than the State of Missouri and in the District of Columbia.

There is now, and has been at all times herein mentioned, a course of trade in said medicinal products so sold and distributed by the respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with individuals, partnerships and firms engaged in the sale and distribution of similar medicinal preparations in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. The respondent, Grove Laboratories, Inc., in connection with the sale and distribution of said medicinal products, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase thereof, makes certain representations as to their medicinal value and therapeutic effects in newspaper and magazine advertisements, pamphlets, circulars and otherwise, of which the following are typical examples:

Piles can take various forms—internal or external, itching or painful, bleeding or non-bleeding—but whatever form they take, they are a cause of misery and a danger.

Itching Sore Scaly

SCALP

Dry Bald Patches Crust
Most scalp troubles involve a parasite of some kind—a living organism that causes infection with resulting itch, scales, crust, thin and falling hair. Here, at last, is a treatment that not only destroys the parasite but helps repair the damage done. It is Dr. Porter’s Antiseptic Healing Oil and it works wonders in correcting scalp and skin troubles. Stops itch almost instantly. Softens and removes crust. Cleanses and stimulates the whole scalp, making it white and wholesome and promoting growth of new hair. * * *

Itching Smarting Cracked SKIN
Broken Out Peeling Scabby

For skin troubles—itch, cracking, smarting and scaling—there is nothing like Dr. Porter’s Antiseptic Healing Oil. There may be fancier preparations but nothing that will do the work like this famous oil. It not only destroys the parasites that cause many skin troubles but, at the same time, helps heal the sore and damaged skin.

The most stubborn cases of itching and scaling skin that defy every other treatment usually yield to Dr. Porter’s Antiseptic Healing Oil. Try it on your itching or broken out skin and see how effective it is. * * *

In Dr. Porter’s Antiseptic Healing Oil you have an oil, which, of course is not drying and an oil which is BOTH antiseptic and an aid to healing. In other words, it not only checks bacterial growth but at the same time increases the superficial blood supply to the local tissues and thereby promotes the natural healing process.

BURNS AND SCALDS

One of the first things you must do in case of a burn or scald is exclude the air. Dr. Porter’s Antiseptic Healing Oil forms an oily film over the burned parts which keeps out the air. At the same time, it helps to keep the parts clean, relieves the pain and assists Nature in the healing process.

IVY AND OAK POISONING

Dr. Porter’s Antiseptic Healing Oil soothes and aids healing of the irritated surfaces. The surface exposed to Poison Ivy or Poison Oak should be washed with strong soap. If the irritation has not actually become manifest it should be washed with laundry soap or gasoline before applying Dr. Porter’s Antiseptic Healing Oil.

MINOR IRRITATION OF THE THROAT

Apply Dr. Porter’s Antiseptic Healing Oil with atomizer or swab. It will help in healing the irritated membranes.

ITCHING OF SKIN IRRITATIONS

For itching due to eczema, psoriasis and skin irritations, Dr. Porter’s Antiseptic Healing Oil is an ideal palliative. As an inhibitory antiseptic, it tends to check bacterial growth. As a soothing preparation it temporarily relieves pain and itching.

Par. 5. All of said statements, together with similar statements appearing in respondent’s advertising literature, purport to be descriptive of respondent’s products and their efficacy in use and to represent that said Pazo Ointment (1) is an effective and scientific remedy in the treatment of hemorrhoids regardless of their pathology, (2) its use insures instant relief from pain and (3) it is the best preparation on the market; said Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil (1) is an effective agent in the treatment of dandruff, falling hair and diseases peculiar to the scalp, (2) is of value in destroying and inhibiting parasitic organisms and (3) is a remedy for a variety of infections of the skin.

Par. 6. In truth and in fact, said statements and representations were and are false and misleading in that said Pazo Ointment is not an effective remedy in the treatment of all forms of hemorrhoids; it will not prevent or remove the cause of hemorrhoids, and hence will not give immediate and lasting relief in all cases; it is not the best preparation on the market, and does not constitute a scientific formula of proven efficacy. While said ointment may give temporary relief in some instances, it is not an effective treatment of piles. In truth and in fact, said Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil will not destroy parasites and is at most a mild antiseptic; it cannot be considered a standard treatment for the variety of skin diseases specifically named in respondent's representations, since the pathological conditions resulting in said skin disorders arise from different causes and require different treatments. It will not promote the growth of hair nor prevent baldness, nor will it cure any of the number of affections of the scalp set forth in the various representations made by respondent. Due to the carbolic acid contained in said ointment, it does not constitute a safe surgical dressing for household use.

Par. 7. In the course and conduct of its business as hereinbefore described, respondent is, and has been, in competition with corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the sale and shipment in commerce among and between the several States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia, of other medicinal preparations, which said competitors do not misrepresent the extent of the beneficial or therapeutic effects of their said competitive preparations.

Par. 8. The aforesaid misleading and deceptive statements and representations hereinabove set forth made by respondent in selling said medicinal preparations have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive the purchasing public into buying said Pazo Ointment and Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil, in the erroneous beliefs that such representations are true and that the use of said preparations will accomplish the results set out or indicated in said advertisements and statements. As a result of the aforesaid representations by the respondent with respect to said preparations, trade has been diverted unfairly to it from its said competitors, whose ability to compete successfully with respondent has been, and is, lessened and injured by the methods of the respondent hereinbefore set forth.

Par. 9. The aforementioned methods, acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 24th day of May 1938, issued, and on the 27th day of May 1938, served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent, Grove Laboratories, Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On August 4, 1938, the respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondent, and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

Findings as to the Facts

Paragraph 1. Grove Laboratories, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal place of business apart from its office in Delaware at 2630 Pine Street, in the city of St. Louis, State of Missouri.

PAR. 7. Hemorrhoids, commonly called “piles,” are frequently classified into a number of varieties depending upon their clinical manifestations and symptoms. They are very generally classified as follows:

1. Simple or uncomplicated—Those which exhibit varicosities of the hemorrhoidal veins, with or without pain or discomfort and usually without hemorrhage.

2. Ulcerated piles—Those in which the mucous membrane or surface epithelium has been eroded, leaving a raw granulating surface, with the usual subjective symptoms.

3. Prolapsed piles—Hemorrhoids of the internal variety which have protruded through the sphincter—anal orifice—and characterized by marked swelling and great turgescence, etc.
Findings

4. Bleeding piles—Those in which there is ulceration or erosion of the mucous membrane where hemorrhage has occurred; or any variety with hemorrhage as the outstanding clinical feature.

5. Prolapsed fibrotic piles—Hemorrhoids which have become thrombotic and completely or partially organized by fibrous tissue with or without the production of secondary varicosities and the attending clinical symptoms.

6. Thrombotic piles—Those which have become obstructed by the formation of blood clots in the veins, usually accompanied by considerable inflammation, erosion and ulceration with secondary infection.

7. Infected hemorrhoids—Those in which infection has occurred. They may be of any of the above varieties and are usually accompanied by considerable exaggeration of the clinical symptoms.

Par. 8. The representations made, in the advertisements offering said Pazo Ointment for sale to the purchasing public are misleading and deceptive because the claims made in said advertisements go beyond claims which may reasonably be made or which are justified by the facts.

The statement, “Effective treatment today for piles is to be had in Pazo Ointment,” is misleading and deceptive because the words “Effective treatment” imply a cure of the disease in all cases. Treatment by any ointment such as respondent’s product cannot be effective in all cases, or at least as a rule rather than the exception. It cannot be efficacious except in being helpful in relieving the symptoms, in that the phenol contained in said product will aid in alleviating pain; and the preparation generally will have a soothing effect. It is no more than a treatment for the alleviation of minor rectal irritations accompanying piles and the therapeutic value of respondent’s preparation is limited to affording palliative relief in cases of simple hemorrhoids. The words “Effective treatment,” however, imply that a cure will be accomplished. This is not true, because in many instances, surgery will be the only effective treatment in cases of hemorrhoids.

Par. 9. Said Dr. Porter’s Antiseptic Healing Oil will not be an effective treatment for sore, scaly scalp, bald patches, thin and falling hair, or for scalp troubles generally. The statement that “Most scalp troubles involve a parasite of some kind” or that the preparation is effective against parasites on the scalp, skin, or feet is not in accord with medical knowledge. The fact that Dr. Porter’s Antiseptic Healing Oil is an antiseptic does not indicate that it is of any value against any type of parasitic organism except some types of bacteria. Itching in many instances is usually a symptom of scabies and said preparation is not an effective treatment therefor.

Generally, skin troubles, foot sores, leg sores, boils, rash, broken-out skin, ringworm, eczema, and other similar disorders described in respondent's advertisements will not in all cases respond to treatment with said Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil.

Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil will not promote the growth of hair nor purify nor cleanse the scalp.

Par. 10. Depending upon the severity and progress of the local manifestations, hemorrhoids are treated (1) by the use of soothing ointments, and/or astringent lotions, with general care for the patient, such as keeping him in bed, applications of cold water, etc., (2) by nonsurgical measures such as injection therapy, electocoagulation, cautery, (3) by surgery, i. e. ligation and excision, and (4) by the application of radium.

Purely medical treatment, as distinguished from the other treatments mentioned herein, usually consists in the use of ointments and/or astringent lotions, with confinement in bed in severe cases and similar measures. The use of mild laxatives is sometimes prescribed to prevent the irritation of the swollen and inflamed parts by the passage of hard fecal matter.

Many prescriptions are found in prescription books generally recognized and used by the medical profession in the treatment of hemorrhoids. In varying proportions these prescriptions contain the same or similar ingredients as those found in respondent's preparation. Most of these are standard drugs which have been in use for many years. Among them are zinc oxide, menthol, phenol, belladonna, iodoform, opium extract, and others. All of them are contained in suitable vehicles, such as lanolin, vaseline, and petrolatum. All of these prescriptions will afford antiseptic, antipruritic, anesthetic, or analgesic effects.

As has heretofore been noted, phenol is an important ingredient because of its soothing effect and thereby alleviating pain, and it, together with other medication, will relieve mild conditions of hemorrhoids without the necessity of having to resort to surgery or other severe measures.

Par. 11. The respondent's preparation, Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil, contains phenol, camphor, cottonseed oil, and a large proportion of linseed oil. These ingredients will aid in alleviating the itching of the scalp in abnormal skin conditions, but will not destroy parasites. Linseed oil is known to be a remedy which has been used for a long period of time as a soothing agent which will promote healing processes.

Par. 12. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to its preparations disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a sub-substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true and induce a portion of the purchasing public because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase respondent's medicinal preparations. As a result trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors who are likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of similar preparations or other preparations intended for similar usage.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Grove Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its various medicinal preparations now designated as Pazo Ointment and Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil, or any other preparations composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar therapeutic properties, whether sold under those names or under any other name or names, in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that respondent's preparation, Pazo Ointment, is a cure or remedy for hemorrhoids, or has any therapeutic value in the treatment thereof in excess of affording palliative relief in cases of simple hemorrhoids,
2. Representing that respondent’s preparation, Dr. Porter’s Anti-septic Healing Oil—

(a) is an effective or standard treatment for skin diseases caused by infection, or

(b) is an effective agent in the treatment of dandruff, falling hair or diseases peculiar to the scalp, or

(c) will promote the growth of hair or prevent baldness, or

(d) will destroy parasites usually associated with dandruff and other diseases of the scalp.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF MONTICELLO DRUG COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3555. Complaint, June 13, 1938—Decision, June 29, 1949

Where a corporation engaged in making its "666" medicinal preparations for fevers, common colds, and malaria, and including its preparation known as "666," and also other products similarly designated, including its "666 Liquid," "666 Tablets," "666 Salve," and "666 Nose Drops," and in sale and distribution thereof to purchasers in various other States, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution in both foreign commerce and that among the States and in the District of Columbia, of preparations for use in connection with treatment of said ailments and conditions, and including many who make, sell, and distribute, preparations designed and intended as aids or treatment for same or similar conditions, and do not in any way misrepresent the effectiveness of their respective products; in advertisements of its said preparation in newspapers having interstate circulation and through radio broadcasts:
(a) Represented directly or by inference that its said preparations would check or cure colds and constituted the only complete treatment therefor and one which could not be improved on and would cure malaria and that millions of users thereof had obtained permanent relief from and been cured of colds thereby; and
(b) Represented that said preparations were the speediest remedies known for colds, malaria, chills and fever, or bilious fever, due to malaria, and that they would check colds and fever the first day used and malaria in 3 days, and that they were commonly prescribed by doctors;

Facts being they were not commonly thus prescribed and did not constitute cures or complete remedies for colds or for malaria and, while containing quinine which will, if administered in the proper doses, generally alleviate symptoms of malaria, such as chills and fever, they did not constitute cure therefor, there is no single preparation in common use generally recognized as specific for colds nor standard preparation or treatment used therefore by doctors, fever is not a disease but symptom of many and various ailments, and should not be treated as an ailment or disease, and claims and representations made as above set forth were otherwise false, grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that all said representations were true and with direct result, as consequence of such belief, that number of consuming public purchased substantial volume of its preparations, and trade was thereby diverted unfairly to it from competitors, also engaged in manufacturing, selling, and distributing preparations and treatments for colds, malaria and fever, and who truthfully advertise their respective products, and the effectiveness and therapeutic value thereof; to the injury of competition in commerce:
Complaint

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Edward E. Reardon and Mr. John W. Addison, trial examiners.

Mr. R. P. Bellinger and Mr. Charles S. Cox for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Monticello Drug Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is now using unfair methods of competition in commerce as “commerce” is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Monticello Drug Co., is a corporation created by and existing under the laws of the State of Florida, with its principal office and place of business at Riverside Viaduct, in the city of Jacksonville, State of Florida, with other plants in New York, Louisiana, and the Republic of Mexico. Respondent is now, and has been for some time last past, engaged in the business of making, selling and distributing in commerce, as herein set out, certain preparations known as “666,” intended by respondent as a treatment and cure for fevers, common colds, and malaria.

Paragraph 2. Respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes said preparations, when sold, to be transported from its office and place of business in the State of Florida to purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State of Florida. Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said preparations, sold and distributed by it in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia and in foreign countries.

Paragraph 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with firms and individuals likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing in commerce, both foreign and among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, preparations for use in connection with treatment for fever, common colds, and malaria.
In the course and conduct of said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said preparations, respondent has made, by means of advertisements inserted in newspapers having an interstate circulation and by means of radio broadcasts, representations concerning said preparations and the results obtained from their use. Among said representations made by respondent are the following:

(a) 666 checks colds and fever first day.
(b) For years this famous cold treatment has offered relief to millions of persons.
(c) Because the products are doctor's prescriptions • • • you can be certain of complete treatment.
(d) Early treatment will stop the common cold.
(e) Remember, for the only complete cold treatment, always ask for the three sixes—Six Sixty Six.
(f) Combined treatment: There are two methods for treating Colds—internal and external treatments. Each have their merits and 666 offers both. The use of 666 Liquid or 666 Tablets with 666 Salve or 666 Nose drops makes a complete treatment which cannot be improved upon.

All of said statements together with similar statements appearing in respondent's advertising literature, purport to be descriptive of respondent's preparations and of their effectiveness in use. In all of its advertising literature and through other means respondent, directly or by inference, through such statements and representations as herein set out, and through other statements of similar import and effect, represents: that its preparations are commonly prescribed by doctors; that millions of users of said preparations have obtained permanent relief from colds; that is, have been cured of colds by the use of said preparations; that treatment with respondent preparations will stop the common cold; that these preparations constitute the only complete treatment for colds and that this treatment cannot be improved upon; that treatment with said preparations is the speediest remedy known for malaria, colds, and fever; that said preparations will check colds and fever the first day they are used and will check malaria in 3 days.

Par. 4. The representations made by the respondent with respect to the nature and effect of its preparations when used are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact respondent's preparations are not commonly prescribed by doctors, nor have millions of users obtained permanent relief and been cured of colds by the use of these preparations. These preparations do not constitute a complete treatment for colds and can be improved upon. Treatment with these preparations is not the speediest remedy known for malaria, colds, and fever. Said preparations will not check colds and fever the first day used, nor will they check malaria in 3 days.

The true facts are that no single preparation in common use today is generally recognized as a specific for colds and no standard prescription or treatment is used by doctors for colds. Fever is now recognized to be not a disease but a symptom of many and various ailments and should not be treated as an ailment or a disease. Respondent's preparations do not contain the specifics for malaria in sufficient quantities to obtain the results claimed by respondent for said preparations.

Par. 5. There are among respondent's competitors many who make, sell, and distribute preparations designed and intended as aids or treatments for the same or similar conditions, who do not in any way misrepresent the effectiveness of their respective products.

Par. 6. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent in describing its preparations, and their effectiveness when used, as hereinabove set out, was and is calculated to, and has had and now has a tendency and capacity to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that all of said representations are true. As a direct result of this erroneous and mistaken belief, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's preparations with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of making, selling, and distributing preparations for the treatment of fevers, colds, and malaria, who truthfully advertise their respective preparations and the effectiveness thereof when used. As a result thereof, injury has been done, and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on June 13, 1938, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Monticello Drug Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto were introduced before examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and a stipulation as to the facts was entered into and dictated into the record herein, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer, stipulation as to the facts, testimony, and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Par. 1. Respondent, Monticello Drug Co., is a corporation created by and existing under the laws of the State of Florida, with its principal office and place of business at Riverside Viaduct, in the city of Jacksonville, State of Florida, with other plants in New York, Louisiana, and the Republic of Mexico. Respondent is now, and has been for 10 years last past, engaged in the business of making, selling, and distributing in commerce, as herein set out, certain medicinal preparations known as "666," intended by respondent as a treatment for fevers, common colds, and malaria.

Par. 2. Respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes and has caused said preparations when sold to be transported from its place of business in the State of Florida to purchasers thereof located at various points in the States of the United States other than the State of Florida. Respondent also ships said preparations from its various plants in the States of New York, Louisiana, and in the Republic of Mexico to purchasers located in the States of the United States other than the point of shipment. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said preparations sold and distributed by it in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries. Among the preparations manufactured, sold, and distributed by respondent and known as the preparation "666" are "666 Liquid," "666 Tablets," "666 Salve," and "666 Nose Drops."

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with firms and individuals also engaged in the business of selling and distributing in commerce, both foreign and among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, preparations for use in connection with treatment for fever, common colds, and malaria.

In the course and conduct of said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said preparations, respondent has made, by means of advertisements inserted in newspapers having an interstate circulation and by means of radio broadcasts, representations concerning said preparations and the results obtained from their use. Among said representations made by respondent are the following:

(a) 666 checks colds and fever first day.
(b) For years this famous cold treatment has offered relief to millions of persons.
(c) Because the products are doctor's prescriptions • • • you can be certain of complete treatment.
(d) Early treatment will stop the common cold.
(e) Remember, for the only complete cold treatment, always ask for the three siren—Six Sixty Six.
(f) COMBINED TREATMENT: There are two methods for treating Colds—internal and external treatments. Each have their merits and 666 offers both. The use of 666 Liquid or 666 Tablets with 666 Salve or 666 Nose Drops makes a complete treatment which cannot be improved upon.
(g) MALARIA: 666 Liquid and Tablets is a Doctor's prescription and is the speediest remedy known for Malaria, Chills and Fever, and Bilious Fever due to Malaria.

666 will check Malaria in 3 days when taken according to directions.

All of said statements together with similar statements appearing in respondent's advertising literature, purport to be descriptive of respondent's preparations and of their effectiveness in use. In all of its advertising literature and through other means respondent, directly or by inference, through such statements and representations as herein set out, and through other statements of similar import and effect, represents: That its preparations are commonly prescribed by doctors; that millions of users of said preparations have obtained permanent relief from colds; that is, have been cured of colds by the use of said preparations; that treatment with respondent's preparations will stop the common cold; that these preparations constitute the only complete treatment for colds and that this treatment cannot be improved upon; that treatment with said preparations is the speediest remedy known for malaria; colds and fever; that said preparations will check colds and fever the first day they are used and will check malaria in 3 days.

Par. 4. The representations made by the respondent with respect to the nature and effect of its preparations when used are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact respondent's preparations are not commonly prescribed by doctors; they are not cures for nor do they constitute a complete remedy or cure for colds; they are not a cure for malaria, and they are not the speediest remedy known for malaria, colds, and fever. Said preparations will not check colds the first day used, nor will they if used in the early or late treatment thereof, check, stop, or cure the common cold. The use of one of respondent's preparations, either singly or in conjunction with one or more of the others, does not constitute a complete treatment for colds which cannot be improved upon.

In truth and in fact there is no single preparation in common use today which is generally recognized as a specific for colds, and no standard preparation or treatment is used by doctors for colds. Fever is now recognized to be, not a disease, but a symptom of many and various ailments, and should not be treated as an ailment or disease.

The respondent's products "666" contain quinine which will, if administered in the proper doses, generally alleviate the symptoms of malaria such as chills and fever but respondent's products do not constitute a cure for malaria.

Par. 5. There are among respondent's competitors many who make, sell, and distribute preparations designed and intended as aids or treatments for the same or similar conditions, who do not in any way misrepresent the effectiveness of their respective products.

Par. 6. The foregoing misleading and untrue statements and representations made by the respondent in describing its preparations and their effectiveness when used, as hereinabove set out, has a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that all of said representations are true. As a direct result of this erroneous and mistaken belief a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's preparations, with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors also engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling and distributing preparations for the treatment of colds, malaria, and fever who truthfully advertise their respective preparations and the effectiveness and therapeutic value thereof when used. As a result thereof, injury has been done, and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, and a stipulation as to certain facts read into the record herein, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Monticello Drug Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its various medicinal preparations designated and known as "666," in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or indirectly:

1. That said preparations will check, cure or stop the common, or any other, cold.

2. That said preparations constitute a complete treatment for colds, whether taken or administered singly or in conjunction with each other.

3. That said preparations will cure malaria.

4. That said preparations are the speediest remedies known for colds, malaria, chills and fever, or bilious fever due to malaria.

5. That said preparations are commonly prescribed by doctors.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

BETTY WELLS FOWLER, TRADING AS BETTY WELLS COSMETIC COMPANY

Docket 3533. Complaint, Aug. 17, 1938—Decision, June 29, 1940

Where an individual engaged in compounding, under name "Tissuefane," cosmetic preparation consisting essentially of water, alcohol, gum, perfume, small amount of benzoate of soda, and coal-tar dye, and in compounding, under name "Tissuefane Preparatory Oil," preparation consisting essentially of a pure scented olive oil, and in sale and distribution of said preparations to purchasers in various other States, in substantial competition with others also engaged in sale and distribution of similar products designed and intended for similar usage, in commerce also among the various States and in the District of Columbia; in advertising her said products in newspapers and other publications, pamphlets, magazines, etc., having general circulation and reaching members of purchasing public in various States—

(a) Represented that said "Tissuefane" would nourish skin and build tissue and strengthen facial muscles and remove lines, pimples, or crow's-feet and blackheads, facts being it would have no effect on blackheads in excess of removing superficial dirt on surface thereof, and it would not, by its effect upon circulation of blood supply or otherwise, render firmer or strengthen or nourish skin, muscles, or tissues, or build tissue, and would not accomplish, otherwise, results claimed therefor as above set forth;

(b) Represented that said preparation would rejuvenate, preserve, and stimulate or beautify skin, and reduce and clean pores, and increase circulation and supply of blood, facts being effect upon circulation of blood at place of application was transitory and had no physiological significance, it would not beautify, revitalize, or rejuvenate user or her skin, and neither stimulated pores nor reduced their size nor cleansed same, in excess of removing superficial dirt from openings thereof;

(c) Represented that said product was made wholly of fruit and vegetable products and was an innovation in the cosmetic field and constituted a bleaching agent and skin tonic and was healing to skin and possessed beneficial value in treatment of acne, facts being it was not composed entirely as aforesaid set out, did not constitute an unparalleled innovation in cosmetic world, had no bleaching qualities, was not a skin tonic in any sense that permanent beneficial results may be obtained from its persistent use, and was not healing nor helpful nor beneficial in treatment of acne, and would not erase years from appearance of user; and

(d) Represented that her said "Tissuefane Preparatory Oil" would nourish or feed skin and pores and make skin soft and prevent or remove wrinkles or lines from face, facts being it did not remove wrinkles or lines other than that very fine lines due solely to dryness of skin might be temporarily removed by its use, any softness which it might impart to skin was temporary only, and it would not nourish or feed same or tissues;
With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representations, as above set forth were true, and that her said preparations would accomplish results indicated, and to erase substantial portion of such public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of her said products, and with result that trade was diverted unfairly to her from competitors in commerce who truthfully advertise effectiveness in use of their respective preparations:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiner.

Mr. Randolph W. Branch and Mr. DeWitt T. Puckett for the Commission.

Betty Wells Fowler, pro se.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Betty Wells Fowler, an individual, trading and doing business under the name and style of Betty Wells Cosmetic Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Betty Wells Fowler, is an individual, trading and doing business under the name and style of Betty Wells Cosmetic Co., with her office and principal place of business located in the town of Capitola, county of Santa Cruz, State of California.

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, engaged in the business of distributing and selling certain cosmetics known as "Tissuefane" and "Tissuefane Preparatory Oil."

Respondent causes the said cosmetics when sold to be transported from her place of business in the State of California to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of California.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of her said business respondent is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, in substantial competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of cosmetics in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.
Complaint

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of her said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of the said cosmetics, respondent has made and caused to be made, by means of radio broadcasts, advertising circulars and folders, and advertisements inserted in newspapers circulated generally throughout the United States representations concerning the character and nature of said cosmetics and their effectiveness in use. Typical of the said representations so made as to "Tissuefane" are the following:

Tissuefane firms and strengthens the skin through the process of arousing the circulation. It definitely removes lines and crow's feet, eliminates large pores, and has a tendency to bleach.

Its action is triple fold—stimulating, beautifying, and permanently rejuvenating.

Permanent scientific benefit derived from its persistent use.

Find your face simply wiped clean of weariness—drooping tired lines—and instead of looking even your years, you will find a young glowing countenance confronting you.

A real beneficial bracing skin tonic.

I would say it was bad for pimples.

It is made entirely of fruit and vegetable products carefully blended and was perfected nearly twenty years ago by a well-known chemist.

Tissuefane is an unparalleled innovation in the cosmetic world. It protects beauty, builds youthful tissue and contour, banishes aging lines, and strengthens facial muscles. If used absolutely as directed, it will work miracles in your appearance.

Tissuefane is the result of years of scientific research.

The use of Tissuefane is triple fold: first—its principal work is to increase the blood supply so necessary for preservation of fresh, healthy skins; second—it stimulates and refines the pores, definitely removes blackheads, and also gently bleaches unsightly spots, such as freckles, and lastly, is a marvelous help for one of the worst destroyers of feminine beauty, sagging cheek muscles and flabby chins.

Enforced circulation firms those tired or lazy muscles.

Tissuefane treatment has an effect equal to several hours rest and brings a blood supply immediately to the surface of the skin equal to the ordinary supply of several days—actually feeding the skin in a highly scientific way. In addition to being an aid to beauty it is very healing to a skin irritated by roughness or pimples—even in aggravated cases of acne great benefit is obtained, owing to the thorough manner in which it speeds up blood circulation.

The re-vitalizing, rejuvenating and scientific action of Tissuefane.

You will find crow's feet disappearing with this renewed circulation.

Tissuefane will bring both positive results and lasting satisfaction, whether it be used to retain your fresh glowing beauty, or to bring back the charm of a beautiful, soft, attractive skin.

Tissuefane is always at hand as the magic helper to "pick you up"—mentally, as well as physically, no matter how tired you feel or how weary looking you become.

Erases years from your appearance.
Typical of the said representations so made as to "Tissuefane Preparatory Oil" are the following:

Too much cannot be said for this delightful soothing, nourishing vegetable oil. The pores drink it in like thirsty plants do the gentle raindrops.

A treatment that erases years from your appearance. For dry skins, particularly, a carefully blended Vegetable Oil lubricates and softens the texture of your skin until it becomes petal-soft.

Aside from feeding the pores and keeping the skin soft and pliable during the Tissuefane treatment, it is of inestimable value in eradicating the fine lines which form around the eyes.

This delicately fragrant, carefully blended Vegetable Oil triply refined is absorbed almost immediately as you will discover and the most persistent little skin creases, for that is what wrinkles really are, simply smooth away.

For those whose skins have a rather undernourished appearance this delightful Oil is like food.

All of said statements, together with similar statements made in the respondent's radio broadcasts and advertising literature, purport to be descriptive of respondent's products and their effectiveness in use. By said statements respondent directly or impliedly represents that "Tissuefane Preparatory Oil": softens, nourishes, and lubricates the skin; is absorbed by and feeds the pores of the skin; eradicates fine lines from around the eyes and smooths away wrinkles, and erases years from the appearance. Respondent in like manner represents that "Tissuefane": is composed entirely of fruit and vegetable products; is an unparalleled and scientific innovation in the cosmetic world; arouses and enforces the circulation and increases the blood supply to the portions of the body where it is applied; strengthens the facial muscles, helps sagging cheek muscles and flabby chins, builds youthful tissue and contour, and removes lines of age and weariness, blackheads, pimples and crow's-feet from the face; firms, stimulates, refines, and preserves the skin; is healing to the skin and beneficial to acne; stimulates, cleans, and reduces the pores; is a gentle bleaching agent, and is beautifying, rejuvenating, and revitalizing to the skin; erases years from the appearance of the user, and will produce a glowing, youthful complexion; produces positive results and scientific and permanent benefits.

Par. 5. The representations made by the respondent with respect to the nature and effect of her products, when used, are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, "Tissuefane Preparatory Oil" does not nourish, soften, or lubricate the skin. It is neither absorbed by nor feeds the pores. Said preparation neither eradicates fine lines from around the eyes nor smooths away wrinkles, nor erases years from the appearance. "Tissuefane" is not composed entirely of fruit and vegetable products. It is not an unparalleled nor scientific innovation in the cosmetic world. It has no effect on the circulation of the blood, the muscles of the face or cheek, or flabby chins. It does not build tissue or contour, youthful or otherwise, nor remove lines due to age or fatigue, blackheads, pimples, or crow's-feet. It does not firm, stimulate, refine, or preserve the skin. It neither stimulates, cleans, nor reduces the pores; it is not healing to the skin nor beneficial to acne. It is not a bleaching agent. It gives no permanent or scientific stimulation, protection, beautification, rejuvenation, revitalization, or improvement to the skin or complexion.

The true facts are that respondent's cosmetics are of value only in that they provide a pleasant lubricant for massaging the face, which massage may be directly beneficial to the skin, have a cooling and mildly astringent effect, leave a slight oily residue somewhat comforting to a dry skin, and give to the skin a transitory feeling of smoothness and improvement.

Par. 6. There are, among respondent's aforesaid competitors, many who manufacture, distribute, and sell cosmetics who do not in any way misrepresent the quality or character of their respective products, or their effectiveness when used.

Par. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent in the description of her products and their effectiveness when used, as hereinabove set out, were and are calculated to have, have had and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true. As a direct result of this erroneous and mistaken belief, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's preparations, with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling cosmetics, and who truthfully advertise their respective products and the effectiveness thereof when used. As a result thereof, injury has been done and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

Par. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 17, 1938, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the said respondent, Betty Wells Fowler, charging her with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On the 6th day of September 1938, the respondent filed her answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the said complaint were introduced by DeWitt T. Puckett, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Betty Wells Fowler, pro se, before John J. Keenan, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, testimony and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

Findings as to the Facts

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Betty Wells Fowler, is an individual trading under the name and style of Betty Wells Cosmetic Co., with her office and principal place of business located at Capitola, Santa Cruz County, Calif. Respondent was for more than 1 year prior to the issuance of the complaint herein, engaged in the business of compounding, distributing, and selling cosmetic preparations known and designated as "Tissuefane" and "Tissuefane Preparatory Oil."

"Tissuefane" consists essentially of water, alcohol, gum, perfume, a small amount of benzoate of soda, and a coal-tar dye. "Tissuefane Preparatory Oil" is a pure scented olive oil.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of her business as aforesaid, respondent caused said products, when sold, to be transported from her place of business in California to purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State from which the said shipments were made. Respondent maintained a course of trade in said products in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of her business, respondent has been in substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations and firms also engaged in the business of selling and distributing similar preparations, or other preparations or products designed... and intended for similar usage, in commerce among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and operation of her business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of her said products, respondent caused various statements and representations relative to said products to be inserted in advertisements in newspapers and in other publications, pamphlets, magazines, etc., having a general circulation which reached members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States. Among and typical of said statements and representations are the following:

Tissuefane firms and strengthens the skin through the process of arousing the circulation. It definitely removes lines and crow's feet, eliminates large pores, and has a tendency to bleach.

Its action is triplefold—stimulating, beautifying, and permanently rejuvenating.

Permanent scientific benefit derived from its persistent use.

Find your face simply wiped clean of weariness—drooping tired lines—and instead of looking even your years, you will find a young glowing countenance confronting you.

A real beneficial bracing skin tonic.

I would say it was bad for pimples.

It is made entirely of fruit and vegetable products carefully blended and was perfected nearly twenty years ago by a well-known chemist.

Tissuefane is an unparalleled innovation in the cosmetic world. It protects beauty, builds youthful tissue and contour, banishes aging lines, and strengthens facial muscles. If used absolutely as directed, it will work miracles in your appearance.

It helps remove tired lines and weary looks.

Tissuefane is the result of years of scientific research.

The use of Tissuefane is triple fold: first—its principal work is to increase the blood supply so necessary for preservation of fresh, healthy skins; second—it stimulates and refines the pores, definitely removes blackheads, and also gently bleaches unsightly spots, such as freckles, and lastly, is a marvelous help for one of the worst destroyers of feminine beauty, sagging cheek muscles and flabby chins.

Enforced circulation firms those tired or lazy muscles.

Tissuefane treatment has an effect equal to several hours rest and brings a blood supply immediately to the surface of the skin equal to the ordinary supply of several days—actually feeding the skin in a highly scientific way. In addition to being an aid to beauty it is very healing to a skin irritated by roughness or pimples—even in aggravated cases of acne great benefit is obtained, owing to the thorough manner in which it speeds up blood circulation.

The re-vitalizing, rejuvenating and scientific action of Tissuefane.

You will find crow's feet disappearing with this renewed circulation.

Tissuefane will bring both positive results and lasting satisfaction, whether it be used to retain your fresh glowing beauty, or to bring back the charm of a beautiful, soft, attractive skin.

Tissuefane is always at hand as the magic helper to “pick you up” mentally, as well as physically, no matter how tired you feel or how weary looking you become.

Erases years from your appearance.
Typical of the said representations so made as to “Tissuefane Preparatory Oil” are the following:

Too much cannot be said for this delightful soothing, nourishing vegetable oil. The pores drink it in like thirsty plants do the gentle raindrops.

A treatment that erases years from your appearance. For dry skins, particularly, a carefully blended Vegetable Oil lubricates and softens the texture of your skin until it becomes petal-soft.

Aside from feeding the pores and keeping the skin soft and pliable during the Tissuefane treatment, it is of inestimable value in eradicating the fine lines which form around the eyes.

This delicately fragrant, carefully blended Vegetable Oil triply refined is absorbed almost immediately as you will discover and the most persistent little skin creases, for that is what wrinkles really are, simply smooth away.

For those whose skins have a rather under-nourished appearance this delightful Oil is like food.

Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations and others of similar import or meaning not herein set out, respondent has represented, directly or by implication, that: “Tissuefane Preparatory Oil” softens, nourishes, and lubricates the skin; is absorbed by and feeds the pores of the skin; eradicates fine lines from around the eyes and smooths away wrinkles, and erases years from the appearance of the user; that “Tissuefane” is composed entirely of fruit and vegetable products; is an unparalleled and scientific innovation in the cosmetic world; arouses and enforces the circulation and increases the blood supply to the portions of the body where it is applied; strengthens the facial muscles, helps sagging cheek muscles and flabby chins; builds youthful tissue and contour; removes lines of age and weariness, blackheads, pimples, and crow’s-feet from the face; firms, stimulates, refines, and preserves the skin; is healing to the skin and beneficial to acne; stimulates, cleans, and reduces the pores; is a gentle bleaching agent, and is beautifying, rejuvenating, and revitalizing to the skin, erases years from the appearance of the user; will produce a glowing youthful complexion; produces positive results and scientific and permanent benefits.

Par. 5. The aforesaid statements and representations by the respondent with respect to the therapeutic and other properties of her said products and the results obtained from the use thereof are exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact respondent’s preparation “Tissuefane” is not composed entirely of fruit and vegetable products nor is it an unparalleled innovation in the cosmetic world. Its effect upon the circulation of the blood at the place of application is transitory and has no physiological significance. Neither by its effect upon the circulation of the blood supply or otherwise will it render firmer or strengthen or nourish the skin, muscles, or tissues, nor will it build tissue. It will not beautify, revitalize, or rejuvenate the user or her skin. No scientific or permanent benefit will result from its use. It will not remove lines, blackheads, pimples, or crow’s-feet from the face and any “glow” which it may impart due to its irritant character is of short duration. It is not a skin tonic in any sense that permanent beneficial results will be obtained from its persistent use. It is not healing nor is it helpful or beneficial in the treatment of acne. It neither stimulates the pores nor reduces their size. It has no bleaching qualities. It will not erase years from the appearance of the user.

Respondent's product “Tissuefane Preparatory Oil” will not nourish or feed the skin or tissues. It does not remove wrinkles or lines except that very fine lines due solely to dryness of the skin may be temporarily removed by its use. Any softness which it may impart to the skin is but temporary.

Par. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading statements and representations disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to the said preparations, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representations are true and that respondent’s said preparations will accomplish the results indicated and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent’s said preparations. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from her competitors in commerce among and between the various States of the United States who truthfully advertise the effectiveness in use of their respective preparations.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Betty Wells Fowler, individually and trading under the name of Betty Wells Cosmetic Co., or under any other name or names, her representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of cosmetic preparations heretofore designated by the names of “Tissuefane” and “Tissuefane Preparatory Oil,” or any other preparations composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar qualities, whether sold under those names or any other names, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

(a) That the preparation designated “Tissuefane”
   (1) Will nourish the skin, build tissue or strengthen facial muscles;
   (2) Will remove blackheads or have any effect thereon in excess of removing the superficial dirt on the surface thereof;
   (3) Will remove lines, pimples or crow’s-feet;
   (4) Will rejuvenate, preserve, stimulate, or beautify the skin except to the extent that said preparation may temporarily stimulate the skin;
   (5) Will reduce the pores or will clean the pores in excess of removing superficial dirt from the pore openings;
   (6) Will increase the circulation and supply of blood or have any effect thereon in excess of slightly and temporarily stimulating the blood in those portions of the body to which it is applied;
   (7) Is made wholly of fruit and vegetable products or is an innovation in the cosmetics field;
   (8) Is a bleaching agent;
   (9) Is a skin tonic, or is healing to the skin or possesses any beneficial value in the treatment of acne.

(b) That the preparation designated “Tissuefane Preparatory Oil”
   (10) Will nourish or feed the skin or pores;
   (11) Will make the skin soft other than temporarily;
   (12) Will prevent or remove wrinkles or lines from the face other than such lines as may be caused solely by dryness of the skin.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon her of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which she has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

DAN M. THOMPSON, DOING BUSINESS AS DANSON LABORATORIES AND THOMPSON LABORATORIES

Docket 5752. Complaint, Mar. 31, 1939—Decision, June 29, 1940

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of his Danson Formula, medicinal preparation, advertised and sold as cure for alcoholism or drunkenness, to purchasers in 10 or 12 States other than State of Illinois, or place of business, and including Minnesota, Missouri, and Ohio, in which he circulated his advertising and labels as below set forth—

(a) Represented through advertisements in various newspapers and other publications, and through circulars sent through the mails and circular letters, that his said Danson Formula constituted a remedy or cure for alcoholism and that it was a competent and effective treatment for said condition or drunkenness, and counteracted desire for alcoholic stimulation and relieved craving therefor;

Facts being his said product, active drug ingredient of which was a sedative, was not a remedy or cure for either acute or chronic alcoholism, requiring separate treatments and also, in some cases, different treatments in cases of same type, and it would not relieve craving for such stimulation or counteract desire therefor, or have any value as a competent or effective treatment for alcoholism in excess of its value as a sedative for quieting nerves; and

(b) Represented through use of word “Laboratories,” as included by him in his trade names and displayed on labels attached to his product, that he conducted a laboratory in connection with his said business;

Facts being he did not own or operate a laboratory or use any laboratory equipment in connection with the business in question;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations were true, and into purchase of substantial quantity of said product;

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan and Mr. Lewis C. Russell, trial examiners. Mr. DeWitt T. Puckett for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Dan M. Thompson, an individual doing business as Danson Laboratories and Thompson Laboratories, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a Complaint proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Dan M. Thompson, is an individual doing business as Danson Laboratories and Thompson Laboratories at 32 North State Street, Chicago, Ill. He is engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation called "Danson Formula," an alleged cure for alcoholism or drunkenness, said medicinal preparation constituting a drug within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Respondent now causes, and for more than 1 year last past has caused, his said medicinal preparation, when sold by him, to be shipped from his said place of business in Chicago, Ill., to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States, other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a course of trade in said medicinal preparation so sold and distributed by respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning his said product, by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said product; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning his said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Liquor Habit.—A new home treatment; harmless, tasteless; given secretly in coffee, tea, etc.; send for FREE BOOKLET. Danson Lab., 32 N. State St., Chicago.

For Alcoholism
Findings

DANSON FORMULA relieves the craving by counteracting the desire for alcoholic stimulation and the principle (sic) idea is to get the system thoroughly inoculated with this preparation. • • •

DANSON FORMULA
THOMPSON LABORATORIES
CHICAGO, ILL.

Through the use of the statements hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondent has represented and does now represent that his said medicinal preparation is an adequate remedy or cure for alcoholism or drunkenness; that it is a competent and effective treatment for alcoholism or drunkenness; that said medicinal preparation relieves the craving for alcoholic stimulation by counteracting the desire therefor; and that respondent conducts a laboratory.

PAR. 3. In truth and in fact, respondent's said preparation, Danson Formula, is not an adequate remedy or cure for alcoholism or drunkenness, nor is it a competent and effective treatment therefor. It does not relieve the craving for alcoholic stimulation by counteracting the desire therefor. The respondent does not own, operate, or control a laboratory.

PAR. 4. The use by respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's said Danson Formula as a result of such an erroneous belief.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on March 31, 1939, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Dan M. Thompson, an individual doing business as Danson Laboratories and as Thompson Laboratories, charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the Filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by DeWitt T. Puckett, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by the respondent, who appeared in his own behalf, before John J. Keenan and Lewis C. Russell, trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.
Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence and brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed by respondent and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Dan M. Thompson, an individual was for several years immediately preceding the month of August 1939, engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation designated and sold under the trade name “Danson Formula.” He advertised and sold said product as a cure for alcoholism or drunkenness.
Respondent's place of business was at 32 North State Street, Chicago, Ill.

In the course and conduct of the aforesaid business, respondent sold and shipped his said product from his aforesaid place of business in Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof in 10 or 12 States other than the State of origin, including the States of Minnesota, Missouri, and Ohio, in all of which States respondent circulated his advertising and labels hereinafter mentioned.

Paragraph 2. During the time mentioned above and in the course of his aforesaid business, respondent caused to be published and disseminated through the Minneapolis Tribune, the St. Louis Neighborhood News, a Grand Rapids, Mich., paper, and other publications, certain advertisements of which the following are typical:

Liquor Habit—A new home treatment; harmless, tasteless; given secretly in coffee, tea, etc.; send for free booklet Danson Lab., 32 N. State St., Chicago.

Respondent also sent through the United States mails to prospective purchasers, circulars and circular letters containing representations of which the following are typical:

Danson Formula
The Tried Treatment
For Alcoholism
Findings

DANSON FORMULA relieves the craving by counteracting the desire for alcoholic stimulation and the principle (sic) idea is to get the system thoroughly inoculated with this preparation * * *.

Respondent also represented on his labels attached to the product the following:

DANSON FORMULA
CHICAGO, ILL.
* * *

By the use of the above representations, respondent represented that "Danson Formula" is a remedy or cure for alcoholism; that said preparation is a competent and effective treatment for alcoholism or drunkenness; that said preparation counteracts the desire for alcoholic stimulation; that said preparation relieves the craving for alcoholic stimulation; and that respondent conducts a laboratory in connection with his aforesaid business.

PAR. 3. The quantitative formula for respondent's product is:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Ingredient</th>
<th>Amount</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Ammonium bromide (U. S. P.)</td>
<td>8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ammonium carbonate (U. S. P.)</td>
<td>¼</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Glycerine</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Distilled water</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

The recommended dosage is 20 drops three times a day, or 30 drops twice a day.

PAR. 4. Alcoholism may be defined as a condition resulting from excessive use of alcohol. If taken in moderation, alcohol is burned by the body and acts as a fuel for energy. If the use of alcohol exceeds the body's need for fuel, alcoholism results.

There are two types of alcoholism, viz, acute and chronic. Acute alcoholism results from excessive use of alcohol for a comparatively short period of time and may be described as a temporary condition, whereas chronic alcoholism results from an excessive and regular use of alcohol for a considerable period of time and may be described as a more or less permanent condition. The treatment for acute alcoholism is not the same as the treatment for chronic alcoholism nor should all cases of either type be treated the same way. Acute alcoholism is usually treated by giving the patient a blood sugar intravenously and by administration of a sedative drug, if necessary, to quiet the patient's nerves. Chronic alcoholism is usually treated by psychiatric methods, such as an attempt to solve the problem which causes the patient to desire drink or the effects produced thereby. Sedative drugs are also used in some cases of chronic alcoholism to quiet the patient's nerves.
PAR. 5. The active ingredient contained in respondent's product is ammonium bromide, which is a sedative drug. Sedative drugs containing bromides are sometimes used in the treatment of alcoholism as an adjunct for the purpose of quieting the patient's nerves. The Commission finds that respondent's product is not a remedy or cure for either type of alcoholism nor will it relieve the craving for alcoholic stimulation or counteract the desire therefor, or have any value as a competent and effective treatment for alcoholism in excess of its value as a sedative for quieting the nerves. The respondent does not own or operate a laboratory nor does he use any laboratory equipment in connection with his business.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing deceptive and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's product as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Dan M. Thompson, trading as Danson Laboratories and as Thompson Laboratories, or trading under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of his medicinal preparation designated "Danson Formula," or any other medicinal preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent, directly or through inference, that said preparation is a cure or remedy for alcoholism or the liquor habit, that said preparation has any value as a competent and effective treatment for alcoholism in excess of its value as a nerve sedative, or that said preparation will counteract the desire for liquor, or relieve the craving for alcoholic stimulation.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisements contain any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Dan M. Thompson, his representatives, agents, and employees, as aforesaid, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of said preparation, or any other similar preparation, as hereinabove referred to, in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word "Laboratories" or any other word of similar import or meaning in any trade or corporate name or in any other manner to describe or refer to respondent's business.

2. Representing in any manner that respondent owns or operates a laboratory.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IRVING NAPP, TRADING AS NAPP'S LONGLIFE HOSIERY

Docket 3875. Complaint, Aug. 25, 1939—Decision, June 29, 1940

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of women's hosiery through personal demonstration and solicitation to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia—

(a) Represented that his said hosiery was run-proof and snag-proof, directly and through purported demonstrations, and that it would outwear all other hosiery on the market;

Facts being hosiery sold by him was neither run-proof nor snag-proof, and did not outwear other hosiery as aforesaid, but was of inferior quality as compared thereto, and demonstration made by him was not proper test, but trick or demonstration to confuse customer and cause him to believe that such hosiery would not be subject to runs or snags, through procedure employed by him of using nail file or other sharp, pointed instrument to scratch threads and punch holes in hosiery and separate threads, so as to appear snagged, or to have run, and manipulating same thereafter so as to bring hosiery back to its original condition; and

(b) Represented that said hosiery was guaranteed to be satisfactory to purchasers, and guaranteed for 6 months against runs or holes, that he would deliver to purchaser free of charge new pairs if runs or holes appeared therein within said period from date of purchase, and that prompt adjustment would be made by him in any case where hosiery was not satisfactory or as represented;

Facts being there were instances in which after acceptance of partial and even full payment, he converted money to his own use, failed and neglected and refused to ship hosiery sold, and made no refund to customers, so that they received nothing whatsoever from him, and other instances in which he shipped and delivered to customers hosiery inferior in quality or different in color or size from that ordered, and he did not fill his guarantee to purchasers, when advised that product had been found unsatisfactory and notified that runs or holes had developed within period aforesaid, with request for new hosiery free of charge, but neglected and refused to deliver to purchasers, in accordance with guarantee, such new product and, in many cases, he did not make prompt adjustment when notified that product was not satisfactory and did not wear as represented and guaranteed, and in cases in which adjustment was made, he replaced initial hosiery with other product of inferior quality or differing in color or size;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial number of members of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false and misleading demonstrations, statements and representations, including those with respect to purported snag-proof, run-proof character of hosiery, constituting, by reason of serious item of expense involved in such defects, special attraction to women, were true, and into purchase of substantial quantities of his hosiery because of such erroneous and mistaken belief:
Complaint

Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr., for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Irving Napp, an individual, trading as Napp’s Longlife Hosiery, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Irving Napp, is an individual doing business under the name of Napp’s Longlife Hosiery, and having his residence and principal place of business located at 107 West Seventy-fifth Street in the city of New York in the State of New York. During the past year, and for some time prior thereto, the respondent has been engaged in the sale and distribution of hosiery from his said place of business through the solicitation of orders for such hosiery from persons living in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent fills or pretends to fill such orders by transporting, or causing to be transported, said hosiery from his said place of business in New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent, at all times mentioned herein, has maintained a course of trade in commerce in said hosiery among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business and in furtherance of the sale of said hosiery, the respondent has made various false and misleading statements and representations relative to said hosiery, among and typical of which are the following:

(a) That his hosiery is run-proof and snag-proof.
(b) That respondent guarantees said hosiery to be satisfactory to the purchasers thereof.
(c) That respondent’s hosiery is guaranteed for 6 months against runs or holes and that respondent will deliver to the purchasers, free of charge, new pairs of hosiery, if runs or holes occur in said hosiery within 6 months from the date of purchase.
(d) That prompt adjustment will be made by respondent in any case where the hosiery is not satisfactory or does not wear as represented.

(e) That respondent’s hosiery will outwear all other hosiery on the market.

Par. 3. In truth and in fact, respondent’s said hosiery is not run-proof or snag-proof. Respondent does not guarantee said hosiery to be satisfactory to the purchasers thereof. Respondent’s hosiery is not guaranteed for 6 months against runs or holes and respondent does not deliver or cause to be delivered to purchasers of said hosiery a new pair of hose, free of charge, if runs or holes occur in said hosiery within 6 months from the date of purchase thereof. In many cases runs and holes have developed in said hosiery after a short period of use thereof and respondent has failed and refused to make any adjustment with the purchasers of said hosiery. Respondent’s hosiery will not outwear all other hosiery on the market. Respondent’s hosiery is inferior to various other brands of hosiery on the market.

The respondent has further represented to prospective purchasers, by means of a misleading demonstration consisting of pushing a sharp instrument through the hosiery, that sharp objects will not damage or cause his hosiery to run, and has further represented that only run-proof hosiery would withstand such test. In truth and in fact such manipulation is not a true test, of the wearing qualities of said hosiery or as to whether or not said hosiery is run-proof.

Par. 4. Respondent, in addition to the use of the above and foregoing false and misleading representations and statements, and others similar thereto, in offering for sale and selling his hosiery, has used the following methods and practices, to wit:

He has filled certain orders received by him with hosiery which was of different size, color, or quality, or different in all of such respects from hosiery ordered, and in certain instances he has failed and refused to furnish hosiery after receiving orders with deposits and has failed and refused to return said deposits. He has failed and refused in many instances to adjust or correct orders which were improperly filled by him, and has failed and refused to refund money or furnish new hosiery in accordance with the terms of his purported guarantee and representations.

Par. 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to his said hosiery, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such false statements and representations are true, and into the purchase of respondent’s hosiery because of said erroneous and mistaken belief.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on August 25, 1939, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Irving Napp, an individual, doing business under the trade name Napp's Longlife Hosiery, charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act. After the issuance of said complaint, respondent not having filed answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by John W. Brookfield, Jr., attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Irving Napp, the respondent, before John L. Hornor, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, testimony, and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint, (respondent not having filed brief, and oral argument not having been requested) and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Irving Napp, is an individual doing business under the trade name Napp's Longlife Hosiery, having his office and principal place of business at 107 West Seventy-fifth Street, New York, N. Y. Respondent, for more than 1 year prior to March 1939, was engaged in the business of the sale and distribution of women's hosiery through personal demonstration and solicitation, causing said hosiery, when sold, to be transported from the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States, other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintained a course of trade in said hosiery in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid and in the furtherance of the sale of such hosiery, respondent personally solicited prospective customers and made physical demonstrations, using a sharp nail file or other sharp instrument to prove that this hosiery was absolutely run-proof and snag-proof, thereby having wearing qualities not to be found in other hosiery. Respondent also personally made statements and representations relative to the quality and wearing qualities of said hosiery and also made certain guarantees. Among and typical of said statements, representations and guarantees so made were the following:

(a) That respondent's hosiery was run-proof and snag-proof.

(b) That respondent guaranteed said hosiery to be satisfactory to the purchasers thereof.

(c) That respondent’s hosiery was guaranteed for 6 months against runs or holes and that respondent would deliver to the purchaser, free of charge, new pairs of hosiery, if runs or holes occurred in said hosiery within 6 months from the date of purchase.

(d) That prompt adjustment would be made by respondent in any case where the hosiery was not satisfactory or did not wear as represented.

(e) That respondent’s hosiery would outwear all other hosiery on the market.

Par. 3. Respondent used a nail file or other sharp pointed instrument to scratch threads, to punch holes in the hosiery and separate the threads, causing the hosiery to appear to be snagged or have a “run” in it. Then he would manipulate the hosiery so as to bring it back to its original condition. This demonstration was not a proper test to indicate or prove that the hosiery was run-proof or snag-proof, but was a trick demonstration to confuse the customer and cause the customer to believe this hosiery would not be subject to “runs” or snagging.

Par. 4. Snags in hosiery usually start “runs.” “Snags” and “runs” destroy the life and usefulness of women’s hosiery, creating such a serious item of expense that women are especially attracted to hosiery which may give longer wear, due to being resistant to snags or “runs.”

Par. 5. In instances, after demonstration and solicitation, respondent secured orders, accepted partial payment, and even payment in full on such order, converted the money to his own use, and failed, neglected, and refused to ship the hosiery so sold. Respondent made no refund to the customer in such instances and the customer received nothing whatsoever from respondent. In other instances, respondent shipped and delivered to the customer hosiery inferior in quality or different in color or size from the hosiery ordered by the customer.

Par. 6. The hosiery sold by respondent was not run-proof or snag-proof, nor would it outwear all other hosiery on the market; but was of inferior quality as compared with other hosiery on the market.

Par. 7. Respondent did not fulfill his guarantee to the purchasers of his hosiery when notified by the customer that such hosiery had been found unsatisfactory. Respondent, when notified by the customer that “runs” or holes had developed in his hosiery within 6 months from the date of the purchase, and request was made that new hosiery be supplied free of charge, neglected and refused to deliver to the purchaser, free of charge, new hosiery in accordance with his guarantee. Respondent in many cases did not make prompt adjustment when notified that the hosiery was not satisfactory to the customer or did not wear as represented and guaranteed by him, and, in those instances where respondent did make adjustment, the initial hosiery was replaced with hosiery of inferior quality or hosiery of a different color or size.

Par. 8. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading demonstrations, statements, and representations, had the capacity and tendency to, and did, mislead and deceive a substantial number of members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid false and misleading demonstrations, statements, and representations were true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent’s hosiery because of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

ent and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Irving Napp, an individual trading as Napp's Longlife Hosiery, or trading under any other name or names, his agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of hosiery in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or by means of purported demonstrations, that respondent's hosiery is snag-proof or run-proof.

2. Representing that respondent's hosiery is guaranteed to be satisfactory to the purchaser, or that respondent will make prompt adjustment or refund for any hosiery which is not satisfactory to the user or which does not wear as represented, when respondent has not in fact established, and does not in fact maintain a definite policy and practice of fulfilling such guarantee and making such adjustment or refund.

3. Representing that respondent's hosiery is guaranteed against runs or holes for any specified period of time, or that respondent will supply new hosiery to the purchaser without cost if runs or holes develop within such specified period, when respondent has not in fact established, and does not in fact maintain a definite policy and practice of fulfilling such guarantee and supplying such new hosiery.

4. Representing that respondent's hosiery is of a grade or quality different from or superior to its true grade or quality, or that such hosiery will outwear all other competitive hosiery.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

ROY FELLOM, DOING BUSINESS UNDER THE NAME AND STYLE OF FELLOM PUBLISHING COMPANY

Docket 3960. Complaint, Dec. 1, 1939—Decision, June 29, 1940

Where an individual engaged under trade name in publication of his Pacific Road Builder and Engineering Review periodical, and in sale and distribution thereof to purchasers in various other States, and in deriving main source of income from conduct of his said business of publication and sale of such magazine, devoted to subject matters of interest to contractors, road builders, engineers, and buyers of construction equipment, from sale of advertising space to manufacturers and others having for sale equipment, materials, and commodities which might be of interest to subscribers and recipients of magazine involved, and in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution in commerce in the various States and the District of Columbia of periodicals devoted to the same general subject matter, and of interest to the same general class of readers, and circulated in the same general territory, and who also similarly derived main source of income from their respective businesses—

(a) Represented in advertising matter distributed by mails or otherwise to advertisers and prospective advertisers in said magazine, located in various States, that it was circulated only to equipment buyers and had no circulation to nonbuyers, and that survey had been made of such equipment buyers in 11 States in which said magazine was principally circulated, and that in said States it was circulated to 93 percent of such buyers, and that it circulated also to 93 percent of heavy construction equipment buyers based on number thereof, and to 98 percent thereof based on volume of purchases in said 11 States;

Facts being, circulation of said periodical was not restricted exclusively to buyers of equipment, but portion of subscribers and other recipients consisted of those who were not such buyers and no accurate and dependable survey had been made by or for him as basis for figures given by him regarding its coverage of equipment buyers, and his magazine was not circulated to 93 percent of such buyers in said 11 States in which principally circulated, or to 93 percent of heavy construction buyers based on number thereof, nor to 98 percent thereof based on volume of purchases aforesaid; and

(b) Furnished figures and material in regard to volume of circulation of his said magazine for publication and distribution to prospective advertisers, and authorized publication and distribution thereof for information of such advertisers and to induce them to place advertisements in his said magazine, and among such representations set forth that such magazine had a total average monthly net paid circulation of 5,129 and a total average monthly distribution of 6,289 for the last 6 months of 1937, and a total average monthly net paid circulation of 4,583 and a total average monthly distribution of 5,625 for the first 6 months of 1938;
Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Roy Fellom, an individual, doing business under the name and style of Fellom Publishing Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Roy Fellom, is an individual doing business under the name and style of Fellom Publishing Co., with his office and principal place of business at 637 New Call Building in the city of San Francisco, State of California. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 4 years last past, engaged, under said name and style of Fellom Publishing Co., in the publication of a magazine, designated as Pacific Road Builder and Engineering Review, and in the sale and distribution of the same in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. Respondent, in the course and conduct of said business during the time aforesaid, caused and does now cause its said magazine to be transported from his said place of business in California to, into, and through States of the United States other than California to the purchasers thereof in such other States. Said magazine is devoted to subject matters of interest to contractors, road builders, engineers, and buyers of construction equipment.

Par. 2. During the time above mentioned, other individuals, firms, and corporations in various States of the United States have been and are engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of magazines devoted to the same general subject matter as that of respondent and of interest to the same general class of readers and circulated in the same general territory as that covered by the circulation of respondent's said magazine.

Par. 3. The main source of income of respondent in the conduct of said business as well as that of his said competitors is derived from the sale of advertising space to manufacturers and others having for sale equipment, materials and commodities which are or may be of interest to the subscribers and recipients of the magazine involved. In connection with the insertion of the advertisements heretofore referred to in respondent's said magazine as well as in those of respondent's competitors, the advertisers contracting for space for the same transport in commerce from their respective States of location to respondent and its competitors located in other States of the United States, cuts, electrotypes, stereotypes, mats, and textual copy for use in making up and publishing such advertisements. Such movement of commerce is materially affected by the methods, acts, and practices of respondent as hereinafter set out.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, the respondent has made various misleading representations in advertising matter distributed by mail or otherwise to advertisers and prospective advertisers in said magazine located in various States of the United States in which it is represented that respondent's said magazine is circulated only to equipment buyers and has no circulation to nonbuyers; that a survey had been made of the equipment buyers in the eleven States in which said magazine is principally circulated; that said magazine is circulated to 93 percent of equipment buyers in said eleven States; and that said magazine circulated to 93 percent of heavy construction equipment buyers based on the number of such buyers and to 98 percent thereof based on volume of purchases in said eleven States. Among such representations so made are the following:

A circulation coverage limited to equipment buyers—a circulation with no waste to nonbuyers. This is exactly what you need for best advertising results!

A survey shows—
Coverage of equipment buyers in the Eleven Western States comprising contractors (road and public works), State, Federal and county road officials, rock, gravel and cement plants:

By Pacific Road Builder & Engineering Review—93%

You reach in Pacific Road Builder & Engineering Review practically all the equipment buyers in the Eleven Western States.

Breakdown by Purchasing Power in Heavy Construction Pacific Road Builder & Engineering Review Reaches:
By Quantity—93% of Equipment Buyers.
By Volume—98% of Equipment Buying.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, respondent has furnished the material and figures in regard to the volume of circulation of his said magazine for publication and distribution to prospective advertisers and authorized the publication and distribution thereof for the information of such prospective advertisers and for the purpose of inducing them to place advertisements in his said magazine. The figures so furnished and authorized to be published as aforesaid have been and are misleading in that they overstate the volume of circulation of said magazine and give an erroneous idea of the value of the same as an advertising medium based on possible results and also of the correctness of the prices charged for advertising space therein based on the extent of such circulation. Among such representations so made by respondent are statements that said magazine had a total average monthly net paid circulation of 5,129 and a total average monthly distribution of 6,289 for the last 6 months of 1937, and a total average monthly net paid circulation of 4,583 and a total average monthly distribution of 5,625 for the first 6 months of 1938.

Par. 6. In truth and in fact, the circulation of respondent's said magazine is not restricted exclusively to buyers of equipment; a portion of the subscribers and other recipients of respondent's said magazine consists of those who are not buyers of equipment; no accurate and dependable survey had been made by or for respondent as the basis for the figures given in regard to coverage of equipment buyers as quoted in paragraph 4 herein; respondent's magazine is not circulated to 93 percent of the equipment buyers in the 11 States in which it is principally circulated; said magazine is not circulated to 93 percent of heavy construction buyers based on the number of such buyers or to 98 percent thereof based on volume of purchases in said 11 States; and the average monthly paid circulation and average monthly distribution of respondent's magazine during the last 6 months of 1937 and the first 6 months of 1938 was much less than given in respondent's authorized statements as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof. All of the statements and representations made by respondent as hereinabove alleged are in fact inaccurate and greatly exaggerated.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices used by respondent in connection with the offering for sale and sale of advertising space in his said magazine have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations, as herein alleged, are true, and to induce them to purchase the advertising space in respondent's said publication on account thereof. Thereby trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from competitors engaged in the sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of advertising space in magazines and other publications circulated in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There are among the competitors of respondents those who in the sale of advertising space in magazines and other publications do not similarly or in any manner misrepresent the volume or character of their circulation or matter pertaining thereto. As a result of respondent's said practices, as herein set forth, substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 1st day of December 1939, issued and on the 5th day of December 1939, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Roy Fellom, doing business under the name and style of Fellom Publishing Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations. of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Roy Fellom, is an individual doing business under the name and style of Fellom Publishing Co. with his office and principal place of business at 637 New Call Building, in the city of San Francisco, State of California. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 4 years last past, engaged, under said name and style of Fellom Publishing Co., in the publication of a magazine, designated as Pacific Road Builder and Engineering Review, and in the sale and distribution of the same in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. Respondent, in the course and conduct of said business during the time aforesaid, caused, and does now cause, his said magazine to be transported from his said place of business in California to, into and through States of the United States other than California to the purchasers thereof in such other States. Said magazine is devoted to subject matters of interest to contractors, road builders, engineers, and buyers of construction equipment.

PAR. 2. During the time above mentioned, other individuals, firms and corporations in various States of the United States have been, and are now, engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of magazines devoted to the same general subject matter as that of respondent and of interest to the same general class of readers and circulated in the same general territory as that covered by the circulation of respondent's said magazine.

PAR. 3. The main source of income of respondent in the conduct of said business, as well as that of his said competitors, is derived from the sale of advertising space to manufacturers and others having for sale equipment, materials, and commodities which are or may be of interest to the subscribers and recipients of the magazine involved. Such movement of commerce is materially affected by the methods, acts, and practices of respondent as hereinafter set out.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, the respondent has made various misleading representations in advertising matter distributed by mail or otherwise to advertisers and prospective advertisers in said magazine located in various States of the United States in which said magazine is circulated only to equipment buyers and has no circulation to nonbuyers; that a survey had been made of the equipment buyers in the 11 States in which said magazine is principally circulated; that said magazine is circulated to 93 percent of equipment buyers in said 11 States; and that said magazine circulated to 93 percent of heavy construction equipment buyers based on the number of such buyers and to 98 percent thereof based on volume of purchases in said 11 States. Among such representations so made are the following:

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, respondent has furnished the material and figures in regard to the volume of circulation of his said magazine for publication and distribution to prospective advertisers and authorized the publication and distribution thereof for the information of such prospective advertisers and for the purpose of inducing them to place advertisements in his said magazine. The figures so furnished and authorized to be published as aforesaid have been and are misleading in that they overstate the volume of circulation of said magazine and give an erroneous idea of the value of the same as an advertising medium based on possible results and also of the correctness of the prices charged for advertising space therein based on the extent of such circulation. monthly distribution of 6,289 for the last 6 months of 1937, and a total average monthly net paid circulation of 4,583 and a total average monthly distribution of 5,625 for the first 6 months of 1938.

Par. 6. In truth and in fact, the circulation of respondent's said magazine is not restricted exclusively to buyers of equipment; a portion of the subscribers and other recipients of respondent's said magazine consists of those who are not buyers of equipment; no accurate and dependable survey had been made by or for respondent as the basis for the figures given in regard to coverage of equipment buyers as quoted in paragraph 4 herein; respondent's magazine is not circulated to 93 percent of the equipment buyers in the 11 States in which it is principally circulated; said magazine is not circulated to 93 percent of heavy construction buyers based on the number of such buyers or to 98 percent thereof based on volume of purchases in said 11 States; and the average monthly paid circulation and average monthly distribution of respondent's magazine during the last 6 months of 1937 and the first 6 months of 1938 were much less than given in respondent's authorized statements as set forth in paragraph 5 hereof. All of the statements and representations made by respondent as hereinabove alleged are in fact inaccurate and greatly exaggerated.

Par. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices used by respondent in connection with the offering for sale and sale of advertising space in his said magazine have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations, as herein found, are true, and to induce them to purchase the advertising space in respondent's said publication on account thereof. Thereby trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from competitors engaged in the sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of advertising space in magazines and other publications circulated in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There are among the competitors of respondent those who in the sale of advertising space in magazines and other publications do not similarly or in any manner misrepresent the volume or character of their circulation or matters pertaining thereto. As a result of respondent's said practices, as herein set forth, substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Conclusion

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and
ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the said facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Roy Fellom, individually or doing business under the name and style of the Fellom Publishing Co., or any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale and sale of advertising space in the magazine now designated “Pacific Road Builder and Engineering Review,” whether published under that name, or any other name, and in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of said magazine in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing directly or by implication:

1. That said magazine is circulated only among equipment buyers and has no substantial circulation among nonbuyers of equipment.

2. That a survey has been made of the equipment buyers in the area in which said magazine is principally circulated unless an accurate and dependable survey of such buyers has in fact been made by some qualified agency.

3. That advertisers in said magazine reach, through the medium of said magazine, substantially all of the road building and other heavy equipment buyers located in the area in which the magazine is principally circulated.

4. That said magazine is circulated among 93 percent of the equipment buyers located in the area in which it is principally circulated or among 98 percent of such buyers based on volume purchases or among any percentage or number of such buyers greater than the percentage or number among which it is actually circulated.

5. That the average monthly net paid circulation or average monthly distribution of said magazine is greater in number than the actual net paid circulation or the average monthly distribution.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

GEORGE W. HAYLINGS, TRADING AS NATIONAL FOLIO SERVICE

Docket 4008. Complaint, Feb. 1, 1940—Decision, June 29, 1940

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of books and pamphlets, containing so-called treatises purporting to disclose and portray unusual business opportunities, to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia; in advertising his said treatises through advertisements disseminated through newspapers and other periodicals, and through letters and circulars sent through the mails to prospective purchasers—

(a) Represented directly and by inference that his so-called treatises presented business opportunities which possessed exceptional merit and offered prospects of high earnings and profits with expenditure of little or no effort, and that operation of businesses concerned involved no peddling or canvassing, and that the plans were original and new and in many cases included valuable formulas which had been acquired by him at great expenses and which he owned exclusively;

Facts being many plans set forth were without any substantial merit, and earnings and profits which he represented as obtainable from operation of businesses concerned were far in excess of any amounts which had been or might be earned therefrom, and many of his said plans did require peddling and house to house canvassing, and plans referred to by him were in many cases neither original nor new and did not include formulas which had any substantial value or which were owned exclusively by him; and

(b) Represented that he was able to grant purchasers of such treatises exclusive rights to operate businesses concerned within certain territories, and that such treatises were offered for sale for a limited time only, and that he issued at regular intervals supplements thereto;

Facts being he was unable to grant purchasers any rights with respect to operation of such businesses in any specific territories, the time within which such plans might be obtained from him were not limited, but they were subject to purchase at any time, and he did not issue any supplements as set forth above;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representations were true, and of inducing substantial portion of such public, because of such belief, to purchase a substantial number of such books and pamphlets:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Lynn C. Paulson for the Commission.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that George W. Haylings, an individual, trading and doing business under the name and style of National Folio Service, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPh 1. The said respondent, George W. Haylings, is an individual trading and doing business under the name and style of National Folio Service, with his office and principal place of business at 1071 West Thirtieth Street, Los Angeles, Calif.

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of books and pamphlets containing so-called treatises purporting to disclose and portray unusual business opportunities.

Respondent causes said books and pamphlets, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of California to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said books and pamphlets in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his said treatises, the respondent has made and now makes false and misleading representations with respect to his said treatises, such representations being disseminated by means of advertisements inserted in newspapers and other periodicals, and by means of letters and circulars sent through the United States mails to prospective purchasers of such treatises. Among and typical of such representations are the following:

$50,000.00—no canvassing • • • in orders—reports Mr. S. D. (full time and Exceptional). Smaller possibilities half days. Unusual Business Plan (Treatise 11-B) afternoons free for life's pleasures. And—from a heretofore "hidden source" that will surprise, fascinate and Delight you!—there are few business worries—no long waits for the money—no long hours of unpleasant working—no similar competition—no office or store overhead—and no equipment needed in such a service of this kind—a service needed badly in this modern age.

Par. 4. Through the use of the foregoing representations and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, respondent represents, directly and by inference, that his so-called treatises present business opportunities which possess exceptional merit and which offer prospects of high earnings and profits, with the expenditure of little or no effort; that the operation of such businesses involves no peddling or canvassing; that such plans are original and new and in many cases include valuable formulas which have been acquired by respondent at great expense and which are owned exclusively by respondent; that respondent is able to grant to purchasers of such treatises exclusive rights to operate such businesses within certain territories; that such treatises are offered for sale for a limited time only; that the respondent issues at regular intervals supplements to said treatises.

Par. 5. The aforesaid representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, many of the plans set forth in respondent's treatises are without any substantial merit. The earnings and profits which respondent represents may be obtained from the operation of such businesses are far in excess of any amounts which have been or may be earned therefrom. Many of such plans do require peddling and house-to-house canvassing. Such plans are in many cases neither original nor new, nor do they include formulas which have any substantial value or which are owned exclusively by respondent. The respondent is unable to grant to purchasers any rights with respect to the operation of such businesses in any specific territories. The time within which such plans may be obtained from respondent is not limited, but such plans are subject to purchase at any time. The respondent does not issue any supplements to such treatises.

Par. 6. The use by respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representations are true, and induces a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase a substantial number of respondent's books and pamphlets.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on February 1, 1940, issued, and thereafter served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, George W. Haylings, trading as National Folio Service, charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On March 25, 1940, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The said respondent, George W. Haylings, is an individual trading and doing business under the name and style of National Folio Service, with his office and principal place of business at 1071 West Thirtieth Street, Los Angeles, Calif.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of books and pamphlets containing so-called treatises purporting to disclose and portray unusual business opportunities.

Respondent causes said books and pamphlets, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of California to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said books and pamphlets in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Findings

Paragraph 3. In the course and conduct of his said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his said treatises, the respondent has made and now makes false and misleading representations with respect to his said treatises, such representations being disseminated by means of advertisements inserted in newspapers and other periodicals and by means of letters and circulars sent through the United States mails to prospective purchasers of such treatises. Among and typical of such representations are the following:

$50,000.00—No CANVASSING • • • in orders—reports Mr. S. D. (full time and Exceptional). Smaller possibilities half days. Unusual Business Plan (Treatise 11-B). AFTERNOONS FREE for life's pleasures. Drive into the country or go to the movies afternoons.

Paragraph 4. Through the use of the foregoing representations and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, respondent represents and has represented, directly and by inference, that his so-called treatises present business opportunities which possess exceptional merit and which offer prospects of high earnings and profits, with the expenditure of little or no effort; that the operation of such businesses involves no peddling or canvassing; that such plans are original and new and in many cases include valuable formulas which have been acquired by respondent at great expense and which are owned exclusively by respondent; that respondent is able to grant purchasers of such treatises exclusive rights to operate such businesses within certain territories; that such treatises are offered for sale for a limited time only; that the respondent issues at regular intervals supplements to said treatises.
PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. Many of the plans set forth in respondent's treatises are without any substantial merit. The earnings and profits which respondent represents may be obtained from the operation of such businesses are far in excess of any amounts which have been or may be earned therefrom. Many of such plans do require peddling and house-to-house canvassing. Such plans are in many cases neither original nor new, nor do they include formulas which have any substantial value or which are owned exclusively by respondent. The respondent is unable to grant to purchasers any rights with respect to the operation of such businesses in any specific territories. The time within which such plans may be obtained from respondent is not limited, but such plans are subject to purchase at any time. The respondent does not issue any supplements to such treatises.

PAR. 6. The use by respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representations are true, and induces, and has induced, a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase a substantial number of respondent's books and pamphlets.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, George W. Haylings, trading as National Folio Service, or trading under any other name or names, his agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of books or pamphlets containing treatises with respect to purported business opportunities, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing as earnings or profits from the operation of the businesses described in said treatises, any amounts in excess of those which have in fact been regularly and customarily earned by persons operating such businesses under normal conditions.

2. Representing that the businesses described in said treatises involve no peddling or house-to-house canvassing, when in fact such businesses do require such activities.

3. Representing as original or new any plan or business which is not such in fact.

4. Representing that the formulas involved in the plans or business described in said treatises possess any substantial value, or that such formulas are owned exclusively by respondent.

5. Representing that respondent is able to grant to purchasers of said treatises or business plans any rights with respect to the operation of such businesses in any specific territory.

6. Representing that the period of time within which said treatises or business plans may be obtained from respondent is limited.

7. Representing that respondent issues any supplements to said treatises.

AL VIOLA PRODUCTS 403

Complaint

IN THE Matter OF

GAREY CARR, TRADING AS AL VIOLA PRODUCTS

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4045. Complaint, Mar. 2, 1940—Decision, June 29, 1940

Where an individual engaged in manufacture of his Al Viola Dental Plate Tightener and Reliner for tightening such plates, and sale and distribution thereof to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia; in advertisements of his said product which he disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails, insertion in newspapers and periodicals of general circulation, and in circulars, and other printed or written matter distributed in commerce among the various States, and through other means in commerce and otherwise, and which were intended and likely to induce purchase of his said product—

Represented that his said dental plate tightener and reliner constituted a competent and effective method of tightening dental plates and that use thereof was certain to result in a perfect fit of such plates, and that it might be applied effectively by anyone, and that no expert assistance was required in use thereof, through such statements, among others, as "You can tighten and renew your present plates in a few minutes time in your own home" and "A simple fool-proof method with guaranteed results on any type of dental plate";

Facts being said device or product did not constitute in usual and ordinary case competent or effective method of tightening such plates and use thereof would not result in an improved fit, but satisfactory results therefrom could be obtained only in exceptional and unusual cases where condition of mouth was favorable to use of such method, and in which exceptional cases, also, product had to be applied by one qualified by training to perform such work, and results obtained would be only temporary in their nature;

With tendency and capacity to and effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and claims were true, and into purchase of substantial quantities of his said product:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Jesse D. Kash for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Garvey Carr, an individual trading as Al Viola Products, and hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Garey Carr is an individual, trading and doing business as Al Viola Products, with his principal place of business located at 1225 Keniston Avenue, Los Angeles, Calif.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, respondent, Garey Carr, is and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of a preparation for tightening dental plates designated as "Al Viola Dental Plate Tightener and Reliner."

Respondent causes said product, when sold by him, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of California to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said product; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning his said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said product in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

You can tighten and renew your own plates in a few minutes time in your own home.

One application of AL VIOLA is guaranteed to produce a perfect, tight-fitting plate.

A simple fool proof method with guaranteed results on any type of dental plate.

Guarantees a tight-fitting plate in a few minutes at home. No adhesive needed.
By the use of the representations and statements above set out and of similar statements used by respondent but not set out herein, respondent represents that his said product constitutes a competent and effective method of tightening dental plates, and that the use of such product is certain to result in a perfect fit of such plates; that such product may be applied effectively by any person, and that no expert assistance is required in the use of such product.

Par. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. Respondent's product does not constitute, in the usual and ordinary case, a competent or effective method for the tightening of dental plates, nor will the use of such product result in an improved fit of such plates. In truth and in fact, satisfactory results from the application of respondent's product can be obtained only in exceptional and unusual cases where the condition of the mouth is favorable to the use of such a method. Even in such exceptional cases such product must be applied by one qualified by training to perform such work, and the results obtained will be only temporary in their nature.

Par. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and claims with respect to his product, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and claims are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's product.

Par. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on March 2, 1940, issued, and on March 8, 1940, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Garey Carr, an individual trading as Al Viola Products, charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On June 10, 1940, the respondent filed his answer in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Garey Carr, is an individual trading and doing business as Al Viola Products, with his principal place of business located at 1225 Keniston Avenue, Los Angeles, Calif.

Paragraph 2. The respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of a preparation for tightening dental plates designated as "Al Viola Dental Plate Tightener and Reliner."

Respondent causes said product, when sold by him, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of California to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 4. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said product; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said product in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated aforesaid are the following:

You can tighten and renew your present plates in a few minutes time in your own home.

One application of AL VIOLA is guaranteed to produce a perfect, tight-fitting plate. A simple fool-proof method with guaranteed results on any type of dental plate. Guarantees a tight-fitting plate in a few minutes at home. No adhesive needed.
By the use of the representations and statements above set out and of similar statements used by respondent but not set out herein, respondent represents that his said product constitutes a competent and effective method of tightening dental plates, and that the use of such product is certain to result in a perfect fit of such plates; that such product may be applied effectively by any person, and that no expert assistance is required in the use of such product.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. Respondent's product does not constitute, in the usual and ordinary case, a competent or effective method for the tightening of dental plates, nor will the use of such product result in an improved fit of such plates. In truth and in fact, satisfactory results from the application of respondent's product can be obtained only in exceptional and unusual cases where the condition of the mouth is favorable to the use of such a method. Even in such exceptional cases such product must be applied by one qualified by training to perform such work, and the results obtained will be only temporary in their nature.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations and claims with respect to his product, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and claims are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's product.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Garey Carr, an individual, trading as Al Viola Products, or trading under any other name or names, his agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of his preparation designated "Al Viola Dental Plate Tightener and Reliner," or of any other preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name or names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

 1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement
 (a) by means of the United States mails or (b) by any other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent, directly or through inference, that, except in unusual and exceptional cases where the condition of the mouth is favorable to the use of such method, the use of said preparation constitutes a competent or effective method for tightening dental plates, or supplies an improved fit for such plates or accomplishes satisfactory results; or that said preparation may be applied effectively by anyone other than an expert; or that the satisfactory use of said preparation requires no expert assistance.

 2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisements contain any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

 It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

THE MURINE COMPANY, INC.

Docket 4076. Complaint, Mar. 30, 1940—Decision, June 29, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of its Murine medicinal preparation, and in sale and distribution thereof to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia; in advertisements of its said product which it disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails and through various other means in commerce, and otherwise, and including advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, by radio continuities, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, and which were intended and likely to induce purchase of its said preparation—

Represented that said Murine was a cure or remedy for eyestrain and constituted a competent and effective treatment therefor, and that use thereof would prevent or ward off eyestrain due to driving, attendance at movies, reading, sewing, or other excessive use of the eyes, and would prevent irritation of eyes due to exposure to dust, sun, or light glare, through such statements, among others, as "Quick relief from eyestrain due to dust, sun, light glare, driving, movies, reading, etc.," "Millions Know This Relief For Eye Strain. Here's safe, easy way to end discomfort of tired eyes," and "Sewing and reading hold no terrors for the eyes of those who use Murine ... helps to ward off eyestrain";

Facts being said product was not a cure or remedy for eyestrain caused by excessive use of eyes, nor a competent or effective treatment therefor, and in those cases in which such strain is due to uncorrected defects in focusing of eyes, instillation of said products or one of substantially similar properties into eyes thus afflicted would not provide cure or remedy therefor or competent treatment, or possess any therapeutic value with respect thereto in excess of furnishing refreshment to eyes and relief from irritation and discomfort of eye associated with such eye strains, would not prevent such strain due to driving, movies, reading, sewing, or other excessive use of eyes nor prevent irritation caused by exposure to dust, sun, or light glare as distinguished from eyestrain, and it possessed no therapeutic value with respect to such irritations in excess of furnishing refreshment to eyes and relief therefrom;

With capacity and tendency to and with effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and to induce portions of said public, because of such belief, to purchase its said preparation:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Robert Mathis, Jr., for the Commission.

Rogers, Hoge & Hills, of New York City, for respondent.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that The Murine Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 2. Respondent is now and has been for several years last past engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing a medicinal preparation containing drugs, known and designated as "Murine." Respondent causes said preparation when sold to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said product by United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said products; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, by radio continuities, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

1. Quick relief from eyestrain due to dust, sun, light glare, driving, movies, reading, etc.

2. Millions Know This Relief For Eye Strain. Here's safe, easy way to end discomfort of tired eyes. Do your eyes smart and burn? Feel tired, uncomfortable? Then you should try the safe modern Murine way to cleanse and refresh them.

3. Close work, reading and sewing put a heavy strain on your eyes but Murine quickly relieves that tired smarting feeling your eyes so often have when you have been using them steadily for hours.

4. Driving an automobile puts a heavy strain on your eyes. • • • Murine makes short work of the irritation resulting from this cause.

5. Sewing and reading hold no terrors for the eyes of those who use Murine for an application of this famous lotion helps to ward off eyestrain.

6. Do you, too, suffer from eyestrain after driving? So did I until I found Murine's amazing relief.

Par 4. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations and others of similar import and meaning not specifically set out herein, the respondent has represented directly and by implication that respondent's preparation "Murine" is a cure or remedy for eyestrain caused by excessive use of the eyes and constitutes a competent and effective treatment therefor; that said preparation will prevent eyestrain due to dust, sun, light glare, driving, movies, reading, sewing, and other excessive uses of the eyes, and will quickly relieve and eliminate the irritation and eyestrain caused thereby.

Par 5. The aforesaid representations and claims used and disseminated by the respondent as hereinabove described are grossly exaggerated, misleading and untrue. In truth and in fact respondent's preparation "Murine" is not a cure or remedy for eyestrain caused by excessive use of the eyes and is not a competent or effective treatment therefor. Eyestrain is due to or caused by excessive use of the eyes or eye muscles or by uncorrected defects in the focusing of the eyes. After the eye muscles have been strained by excessive use or from uncorrected defects in the focusing of the eyes, the instillation of respondent's preparation or one of substantially similar therapeutic properties into the conjunctival sac of eyes so afflicted will have no effect other than that of affording a sensation of refreshment to such eyes. Respondent's preparation will not prevent eyestrain due to dust, sun, light glare, driving, movies, reading, sewing, and other excessive uses of the eyes, and will not relieve or eliminate the irritations caused by such eyestrain in excess of affording a temporary sensation of refreshment to the eyes.
PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and deceptive statements and representations with respect to its preparation disseminated as aforesaid has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and to induce a portion of the purchasing public because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase respondent's preparation containing drugs.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 30th day of March 1940, issued, and on the 1st day of April 1940, served its complaint upon respondent, The Murine Company, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On the 5th day of April 1940, respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts, signed and executed by the respondent's counsel, Rogers, Hoge and Hills, and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of arguments or the filing of briefs. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, The Murine Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its general offices and principal place of business located at 660-678 North Wabash Avenue, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.
Findings

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and has been for several years last past engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing a medicinal preparation containing drugs, known and designated as "Murine." Respondent causes said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing the dissemination of, advertisements concerning its said product by United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, advertisements concerning its said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, by radio continuities, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

1. Quick relief from eyestrain due to dust, sun, light glare, driving, movies, reading, etc.

2. Millions Know This Relief For Eye Strain. Here's safe, easy way to end discomfort of tired eyes. Do your eyes smart and burn? Feel tired, uncomfortable? Then you should try the safe modern Murine way to cleanse and refresh them.

3. Sewing and reading hold no terrors for the eyes of those who use Murine for an application of this famous lotion helps to ward off eyestrain.

4. Do you, too, suffer from eyestrain after driving? So did I until I found Murine's amazing relief.

PAR. 4. The foregoing statements, representations and advertisements and others of similar import have the capacity and tendency to cause purchasers to mistakenly believe that respondent's preparation Murine is a cure or remedy for eyestrain caused by excessive use of the eyes and that said product constitutes a competent and effective treatment therefor; that said preparation will prevent irritation of the eyes due to dust, sun and light glare and prevent eyestrain due to driving, movies, reading, sewing, and other excessive uses of the eyes.

Par. 5. Respondent’s preparation Murine is not a cure or remedy for eyestrain caused by excessive use of the eyes and is not a competent or effective treatment therefor. Eyestrain is due to or caused by excessive use of the eyes or eye muscles or by uncorrected defects in the focusing of the eyes. True eyestrain may be due to such actions, among others, as driving, attendance at movies, reading, or sewing. After the eye muscles have been strained by excessive use or by uncorrected defects in the focusing of the eyes, the instillation of respondent’s preparation or one of substantially similar properties into the conjunctival sac of the eyes so afflicted will not provide a cure or remedy for such eyestrain or provide a competent treatment therefor, or possess any therapeutic value with respect to eyestrain in excess of furnishing refreshment to the eyes and furnishing relief from irritation and discomforts of the eyes associated with such eyestrain. Respondent’s preparation will not prevent eyestrain due to driving, movies, reading, sewing, or other excessive uses of the eyes. Exposure to dust, sun, or light glare may cause irritation to the eyes as distinguished from eyestrain. Respondent’s preparation will not prevent irritation caused by such exposure or possess therapeutic value with respect to such irritation in excess of furnishing refreshment to the eyes and furnishing relief from such irritation.

Par. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing statements and representations with respect to its preparation disseminated as aforesaid has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and to induce a portion of the purchasing public because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase respondent’s preparation containing drugs.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondent herein and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon, and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent The Murine Co., Inc., its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of their medicinal preparation advertised as "Murine" or any other medicinal preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisements by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent directly or through inference.

(a) That respondent's preparation "Murine" is a cure or remedy for eyestrain, or that it constitutes a competent or effective treatment therefor or possesses any therapeutic value with respect to eyestrain in excess of furnishing relief from irritation and discomforts of the eyes incident thereto.

(b) That the use of respondent's preparation will prevent or ward off eyestrain due to driving, attendance at movies, reading, sewing, or other excessive uses of the eyes.

(c) That the use of respondent's preparation will prevent irritation of the eyes due to exposure to dust, sun, or light glare, or possess any therapeutic value with respect to irritation of the eyes in excess of furnishing relief therefrom.

2. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said medicinal preparation in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements contain any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
In the Matter of

George D. Moorman and Roy C. Stockbridge, Individually and Trading as Mayos Products Company and as M. P. Company

Complaint, Findings, and Order in regard to the Alleged Violation of Sec. 5 of an Act of Congress Approved Sept. 26, 1914

Docket 4147. Complaint, May 31, 1939—Decision, June 29, 1940

Where two individuals engaged in sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation designated and described as "Mayos Periodic Compound," to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia; in advertisements thereof which they disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails, and by various other means in commerce, and which were intended and likely to induce purchase of their said product—

(a) Represented, directly and by implication, that their said medicinal preparation was a cure or remedy for delayed, scanty, irregular and painful menstruation, and constituted competent and effective treatment therefor, and that it was entirely safe and harmless and might be used without danger of ill effects upon health of user, facts being their said preparation was not a cure or remedy for such conditions as above set forth, and did not constitute competent or effective treatment for any of said ailments, and it was not safe or harmless, in that it contained ergotin, aloes, extract cotton root bark, extract black hellebore, and oil of savin in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if taken under conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, and use thereof might result in gastro-intestinal disturbances, with pelvic congestion and other conditions, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage, and in those cases where used to interfere with normal course of pregnancy, such use might result in uterine infection with extension to other parts of the body and to the blood stream, causing condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning, and might also produce very severe circulatory condition, tending to produce abortion in some instances, often with violent poisonous effects upon system, and also produce severe toxic conditions, and, in some instances lead to gangrenous condition in lower limbs or other serious or irreparable injury to health; and

(b) Failed to reveal, in their said advertisements, disseminated as above set forth, that use of said medicinal preparation, under conditions prescribed in such advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, might result in serious and irreparable injury to health;

With effect, through use of aforesaid false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as above set forth, of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and advertisements were true, and of inducing portion of said public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase their said medicinal preparation;

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. William L. Taggart for the Commission.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that George D. Moorman and Roy C. Stockbridge, individually, and trading as Mayos Products Co. and as M. P. Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondents (George D. Moorman, residing at 1833 West Larchmont Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and Roy C. Stockbridge, residing at 5623 North Wayne Avenue, Chicago, Ill., are individuals, doing business under the trade names of Mayos Products Co. and M. P. Co., with their office and principal place of business at 1833 West Larchmont Avenue, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

Paragraph 2. Respondents are now, and for more than one year last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation designated and described as Mayos Periodic Compound. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their said business during the time aforesaid, have caused, and do now cause, their said medicinal preparation, when sold by them, to be transported from their said place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

At all times mentioned herein, respondents have maintained a course of trade in said medicinal preparation sold and distributed by them in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated, and are now disseminating, and have caused, and are now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said medicinal preparation by United States mails, and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said medicinal preparation; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused, and are now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said medicinal preparation, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said medicinal preparation in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Among and typical of the false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

IF UNNATURALLY OR FUNCTIONALLY DELAYED

LADIES—DON'T WORRY

ABOUT WHAT TO DO!

Two Dollars brings glorious IMMEDIATE, Painless relief, safest way known to unnaturally late or functionally delayed periods. Pure, quick acting, reliable medical formula tablets—xxx Strength—easy to take and absolutely GUARANTEED to give results or money back. Magic-like results in most cases and no delay from work. Convenient, no one need know. Used by thousands, highly recommended, no need to pay more. Rushed to you in sealed, plain package, no letter necessary. C. O. D. plus postage if desired. Send $2 with order and we pay postage. Valuable, private information enclosed free. Don't delay! Send today.

If you are troubled with painful, scanty, irregular, unnaturally or functionally delayed periods, this product should help to correct such irregularity. This famous formula has been used with success by some doctors and nurses for many years throughout the country. It usually will relieve the most obstinate cases of unnatural or functionally delayed periods without pain or inconvenience from work. We believe that there is no more successful product available from any source whatsoever.

Women, however, do not all respond the same after the use of this product. Some find that only a few tablets will do the necessary work, while others find it necessary to use two or even three packages to obtain relief. If you are one of the latter, please do not delay in ordering the other additional packages so as to keep the results of each package close together.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and other and similar statements and representations not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the remedial, curative, and therapeutic properties of respondents' said preparation, respondents, directly and by implication, represent that said preparation is a cure or remedy for delayed, scanty, irregular, and painful menstruation and is a competent and effective treatment for such ailments; that said preparation is entirely safe and harmless and may be used without danger of ill effects upon the health of the user.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondents' preparation is not a cure or remedy for delayed, scanty, irregular, or painful menstruation, nor does it constitute a competent or effective treatment for any of said ailments. Said preparation is not safe or harmless, as it contains ergotin, aloes, extract cotton root bark, extract black hellebore, and oil of savin in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if taken under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Such use of said medicinal preparation may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances such as catharsis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, inflammation and congestion of the uterus and adnexa, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage, and in those cases where said preparation is used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy, its use may result in uterine infection with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures, and to the blood stream, causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

The use of said preparation as aforesaid may also produce a very severe circulatory condition by the constriction of the blood vessels and contraction of the involuntary muscles, tending to produce abortion in some instances, often with violent poisonous effects upon the human system. Such use as aforesaid may also produce severe toxic conditions, such as hemorrhagic diarrhea and in some instances producing a gangrenous condition in the lower limbs or other serious or irreparable injury to health.

PAR. 6. In addition to the representations hereinafore set forth, the respondents have also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in the manner above set forth, in that said advertisements so disseminated fail to reveal that the use of said preparation, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to their said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' medicinal preparation.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 31, 1940, issued, and on June 3, 1940, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents George D. Moorman and Roy C. Stockbridge, individually and trading as Mayos Products Co. and as M. P. Co., charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On June 14, 1940, the respondents filed their answer, in which answer they admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondents, George D. Moorman, residing at 1833 West Larchmont Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and Roy C. Stockbridge, residing at 5623 North Wayne Avenue, Chicago, Ill., are individuals, doing business under the trade names of Mayos Products Co. and M. P. Such use as aforesaid may also produce severe toxic conditions, such as hemorrhagic diarrhea and in some instances producing a gangrenous condition in the lower limbs or other serious or irreparable injury to health.

Par. 6. In addition to the representations hereinabove set forth, the respondents have also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in the manner above set forth, in that said advertisements so disseminated fail to reveal that the use of said preparation, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

Par. 7. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to their said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' medicinal preparation.

Conclusion

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, George D. Moorman and Roy C. Stockbridge, individually, and trading as Mayos Products Co. and as M. P. Co., or trading under any other name or names, their agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of their medicinal preparation designated "Mayos Periodic Compound," or of any other medicinal preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name or names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails, or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent, directly or through inference, that said preparation is a cure or remedy or a competent or effective treatment for delayed, scanty, irregular, or painful menstruation; that said preparation is safe or harmless, or which advertisements fail to reveal that the use of said preparation may result in serious and irreparable injury to the health of the user.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisements contain any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof, or which fail to reveal that the use of said preparation may result in serious and irreparable injury to the health of the user.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 10 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing stating whether they intend to comply with this order, and, if so, the manner and form in which they intend to comply; and that within 60 days after the service upon them of this order said respondents shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and advertisements were true, and that said preparation was a safe, competent, and effective treatment for delayed menstruation, and with further effect of inducing, directly or indirectly, purchase by such public of said preparation:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. R. P. Bellinger for the Commission.

Robinson & Stump, of Clarksburg, W. Va., and Mr. David D. Blumenstein, of Pittsburgh, Pa., for respondent.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that May's Cut Rate Drug Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, May's Cut Rate Drug Co., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of West Virginia, with its principal office and place of business located at 109 South Fourth Street, Clarksburg, W. Va.

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various medicinal preparations. Among the various preparations sold and distributed by the respondent is a drug preparation advertised as "Mayco" and as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods," also designated as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Double Strength" and as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Triple Strength."

Respondent causes its said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of West Virginia to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product, by United States mails, and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product; and respondent has also disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said product by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers, and by circulars and other advertising literature, are the following:

GENUINE
ENGLISH CROWN FEMALE CAPSULES
for DELAYED PERIODS
MAY'S CUT RATE DRUG CO.
109 S. 4th St.

Par. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinbefore set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent has represented, directly and by implication, that its preparation designated "Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods," also designated "Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Double Strength" and as "Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Triple Strength," is a competent and effective treatment for delayed menstruation and that said preparation is safe and harmless.

Par. 5. The foregoing statements and representations used and disseminated by the respondent as herein above set forth are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation is not a competent or effective treatment for delayed menstruation. Moreover, said preparation is not safe or harmless, in that it contains the drugs apiol green, ergotin, oil of savin, and aloin in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Such use of said preparation may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances such as catharsis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, congestion of the uterus, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage, and in those cases where said preparation is used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy such use may result in uterine infection, with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures, and even to the blood stream, causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

Such use of said preparation may also produce a severe circulatory condition by the constriction of the blood vessels and contraction of the involuntary muscles, often with poisonous effects upon the human system and tending to cause abortion in some instances, and may result in severe toxic conditions such as hemorrhagic diarrhea and in some instances producing a gangrenous condition in the lower limbs, resulting possibly either in loss of limbs or in other serious and irreparable injury to health.

Said advertisements are also false in that they fail to reveal that the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

Par. 6. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations with respect to its said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and that such preparation is a safe, competent and effective treatment for delayed menstruation, and to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase by the public of the respondent's said preparation.

Par. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on June 4, 1940, issued, and on June 5, 1940, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, May's Cut Rate Drug Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On June 21, 1940, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion, drawn therefrom.

Findings as to the Facts

Paragraph 1. Respondent, May's Cut Rate Drug Co., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of West Virginia, with its principal office and place of business located at 109 South Fourth Street, Clarksburg, W. Va.
Findings

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various medicinal preparations. Among the various preparations sold and distributed by the respondent prior to January 16, 1940, was a drug preparation advertised as "Mayco" and as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods," also designated as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules, Double Strength," and as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules, Triple Strength."

Respondent caused its said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of West Virginia to purchasers thereof, located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintained, and at all times mentioned herein, prior to January 16, 1940, did maintain, a course of trade in its said preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and has caused the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product, by United States mails, and by various other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product; and respondent has also disseminated and has caused the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinafter set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers, and by circulars and other advertising literature, were the following:

ENGLISH CROWN

for

MAY'S CUT RATE DRUG CO.

109 S. 4th St.
Findings

Par. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations herein set forth, and others similar thereto, not specifically set out herein, the respondent has represented, directly and by implication, that its preparation, designated "Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods," also designated "Mayco English Crown Female Capsules, Double Strength," and as "Mayco English Crown Female Capsules, Triple Strength," is a competent and effective treatment for delayed menstruation, and that said preparation is safe and harmless.

Par. 5. The foregoing statements and representations used and disseminated by the respondent as hereinabove set forth are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation is not a competent or effective treatment for delayed menstruation. Moreover, said preparation is not safe or harmless, in that it contains the drugs apiol green, ergotin, oil of savin, and aloin in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Such use of said preparation may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances such as catharsis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, congestion of the uterus, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage, and in those cases where said preparation is used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy, such use may result in uterine infection, with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures and even to the blood stream, causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

Such use of said preparation may also produce a severe circulatory condition by the constriction of the blood vessels and contraction of the involuntary muscles, often with poisonous effects upon the human system and tending to cause abortion in some instances, and may result in severe toxic conditions such as hemorrhagic diarrhea and in some instances, producing a gangrenous condition in the lower limbs, resulting possibly either in loss of limbs or in other serious and irreparable injury to health.

Said advertisements are also false in that they fail to reveal that the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

Par. 6. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations with respect to its said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and that such preparation is a safe, competent, and effective treatment for delayed menstruation and to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase by the public of the respondent's said preparation.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, were and are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, May's Cut Rate Drug Co., a corporation, its officers, agents, representatives, servants, employees, and assigns, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its medicinal preparation designated and advertised as "Mayco," and as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods," and also designated as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules, Double Strength," and as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules, Triple Strength," or of any other medicinal preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other name or names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails, or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or by implication, that said preparation is a safe, competent, and effective preparation for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation; that said preparation is a cure or remedy for delayed menstruation; or which advertisement fails to reveal that the use of said preparation may result in serious and irreparable injury to the health of the user.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisement contains any representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof, or which fails to reveal that the use of said preparation may result in serious and irreparable injury to the health of the user.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 10 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing, stating whether it intends to comply with this order, and, if so, the manner and form in which it intends to comply; and that within 60 days after service upon it of this order, said respondent shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Complaint

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that May’s Cut Rate Drug Co. of Charleston, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent May’s Cut Rate Drug Co. of Charleston is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of West Virginia, with its principal office and place of business located at 911 Quarrier Street, Charleston, W. Va.

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various medicinal preparations. Among the various preparations sold and distributed by respondent is a drug preparation advertised as “Mayco” and as “Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods” also designated as “Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Double Strength,” and as “Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Triple Strength.”

Respondent causes its said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of West Virginia to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product, by United States mails, and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product; and respondent has also disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers, and by circulars and other advertising literature, are the following:

Par. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinbefore set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent has represented, directly and by implication, that its preparation designated "Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods," also designated "Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Double Strength" and as "Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Triple Strength," is a competent and effective treatment for delayed menstruation, and that said preparation is safe and harmless.

Par. 5. The foregoing statements and representations used and disseminated by the respondent as hereinabove set forth are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation is not a competent or effective treatment for delayed menstruation. Moreover, said preparation is not safe or harmless, in that it contains the drugs apiol green, ergotin, oil of savin, and aloin in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Such use of said preparation may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances, such as catharsis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, congestion of the uterus, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage, and in those cases where said preparation is used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy such use may result in uterine infection, with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures and even to the blood stream, causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

Such use of said preparation may also produce a severe circulatory condition by the constriction of the blood vessels and contraction of the involuntary muscles, often with poisonous effects upon the human system, and tending to cause abortion in some instances, and may result in severe toxic conditions such as hemorrhagic diarrhea and in some instances producing a gangrenous condition in the lower limbs, resulting possibly either in loss of limbs or in other serious and irreparable injury to health.

Said advertisements are also false in that they fail to reveal that the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations with respect to its said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and that such preparation is a safe, competent, and effective treatment for delayed menstruation, and to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase by the public of the respondent's said preparation.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on June 4, 1940, issued and on June 5, 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, May's Cut Rate Drug Co., of Charleston, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On June 24, 1940, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent May's Cut Rate Drug Co. of Charleston is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of West Virginia, with its principal office and place of business located at 911 Quarrier Street, Charleston, W. Va.
Findings

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various medicinal preparations. Among the various preparations sold and distributed by the respondent is a drug preparation advertised as "Mayco" and as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods," also designated as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Double Strength," and as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Triple Strength."

Respondent causes its said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of West Virginia to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product, by United States mails, and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product; and respondent has also disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers, and by circulars and other advertising literature, are the following:

Par. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinbefore set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent has represented, directly and by implication, that its preparation designated "Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods," also designated "Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Double Strength," and as "Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Triple Strength," is a competent and effective treatment for delayed menstruation, and that said preparation is safe and harmless.

Par. 5. The foregoing statements and representations used and disseminated by the respondent as hereinabove set forth are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation is not a competent or effective treatment for delayed menstruation. Moreover, said preparation is not safe or harmless, in that it contains the drugs apiol green, ergotin, oil of savin, and aloin in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Such use of said preparation may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances such as catharsis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, congestion of the uterus, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage, and in those cases where said preparation is used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy such use may result in uterine infection, with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures and even to the blood stream, causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

Such use of said preparation may also produce a severe circulatory condition by the constriction of the blood vessels and contraction of the involuntary muscles, often with poisonous effects upon the human system and tending to cause abortion in some instances, and may result in severe toxic conditions such as hemorrhagic diarrhea and in some instances producing a gangrenous condition in the lower limbs, resulting possibly either in loss of limbs or in other serious and irreparable injury to health.

Said advertisements are also false in that they fail to reveal that the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

Par. 6. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations with respect to its said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and that such preparation is a safe, competent, and effective treatment for delayed menstruation, and to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase by the public of the respondent’s said preparation.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact as set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, May’s Cut Rate Drug Co. of Charleston, a corporation, its officers, agents, representatives, servants, employees, and assigns, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of its medicinal preparation designated and advertised as "Mayco," and as “Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods,” and also designated as “Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules, Double Strength,” and as “Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules, Triple Strength,” or of any other medicinal preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other name or names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails, or (b) by any means in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or by implication, that said preparation is a safe, competent, and effective preparation for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation; that said preparation is a cure or remedy for delayed menstruation; or which advertisement fails to reveal that the use of said preparation may result in serious and irreparable injury to the health of the user.
Order

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisement contains any representations prohibited in Paragraph 1 hereof, or which fails to reveal that the use of said preparation may result in serious and irreparable injury to the health of the user.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 10 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing, stating whether it intends to comply with this order and, if so, the manner and form in which it intends to comply; and that within 60 days after service upon it of this order, said respondent shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

PITTSBURGH CUT RATE DRUG CO.

Complaint

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Pittsburgh Cut Rate Drug Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Pittsburgh Cut Rate Drug Co., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business located at 329 Fifth Avenue, McKeesport, Pa.

Paragraph 2. Respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various medicinal preparations. Among the various preparations sold and distributed by the respondent is a drug preparation advertised as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods," also designated "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Double Strength," and as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Triple Strength."

Respondent causes its said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product, by United States mails, and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product; and respondent has also disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers, and by circulars and other advertising literature, are the following:

GENUINE
ENGLISH CROWN
for DELAYED PERIODS
DOUBLE STRENGTH $5.
PITTSBURGH CUT RATE DRUG COMPANY,
THE SUPER CUT RATE,
329 FIFTH AVENUE

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinbefore set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent has represented, directly and by implication, that its preparation designated "Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods," also designated "Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Double Strength," and as "Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Triple Strength" is a competent and effective treatment for delayed menstruation, and that said preparation is safe and harmless.

PAR. 5. The foregoing statements and representations used and disseminated by the respondent as hereinabove set forth are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation is not a competent or effective treatment for delayed menstruation. Moreover, said preparation is not safe or harmless, in that it contains the drugs apiol green, ergotin, oil of savin, and aloin in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Such use of said preparation may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances such as catharsis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, congestion of the uterus, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage, and in those cases where said preparation is used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy such use may result in uterine infection, with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures and even to the blood stream, causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

Such use of said preparation may also produce a severe circulatory condition by the constriction of the blood vessels and contraction of the involuntary muscles, often with poisonous effects upon the human system and tending to cause abortion in some instances, and may result in severe toxic conditions such as hemorrhagic diarrhea and in some instances producing a gangrenous condition in the lower limbs, resulting possibly either in loss of limbs or in other serious and irreparable injury to health.

Said advertisements are also false in that they fail to reveal that the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

Par. 6. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations with respect to its said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and that such preparation is a safe, competent, and effective treatment for delayed menstruation, and to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase by the public of the respondent's said preparation.

Par. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on June 4, 1940, issued and on June 5, 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Pittsburgh Cut Rate Drug Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On June 24, 1940, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Pittsburgh Cut Rate Drug Co., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business located at 329 Fifth Avenue, McKeesport, Pa.
Findings 31 F. T. C.

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various medicinal preparations. Among the various preparations sold and distributed by the respondent is a drug preparation advertised as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods," also designated "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Double Strength," and as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Triple Strength."

Respondent causes its said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the States of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product, by United States mails, and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product; and respondent has also disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said product by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers, and by circulars and other advertising literature, are the following:

GENUINE
ENGLISH CROWN
for DELAYED PERIODS
DOUBLE STRENGTH $5.
PITTSBURGH CUT RATE DRUG COMPANY,
THE SUPER CUT RATE,
329 FIFTH AVENUE
Findings

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinbefore set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent has represented, directly and by implication, that its preparation designated “Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods,” also designated “Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Double Strength,” and as “Mayco English Crown Female Capsules Triple Strength” is a competent and effective treatment for delayed menstruation, and that said preparation is safe and harmless.

PAR. 5. The foregoing statements and representations used and disseminated by the respondent as hereinabove set forth are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent’s preparation is not a competent or effective treatment for delayed menstruation. Moreover, said preparation is not safe or harmless, in that it contains the drugs apiol green, ergotin, oil of savin, and aloin in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Such use of said preparation may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances such as catharsis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, congestion of the uterus, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage, and in those cases where said preparation is used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy such use may result in uterine infection, with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures and even to the blood stream, causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

Such use of said preparation may also produce a severe circulatory condition by the constriction of the blood vessels and contraction of the involuntary muscles, often with poisonous effects upon the human system and tending to cause abortion in some instances, and may result in severe toxic conditions such as hemorrhagic diarrhea and in some instances producing a gangrenous condition in the lower limbs, resulting possibly either in loss of limbs or in other serious and irreparable injury to health.

Said advertisements are also false in that they fail to reveal that the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations with respect to its said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and that such preparation is a safe, competent, and effective treatment for delayed menstruation, and to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase by the public of the respondent's said preparation.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Pittsburgh Cut Rate Drug Co., a corporation, its officers, agents, representatives, servants, employees, and assigns, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of its medicinal preparation designated and advertised as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules for Delayed Periods," and also designated as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules, Double Strength," and as "Genuine Mayco English Crown Female Capsules, Triple Strength," or of any other medicinal preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other name or names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails, or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or by implication, that said preparation is a safe, competent, and effective preparation for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation; that said preparation is a cure or remedy for delayed menstruation; or which advertisement fails to reveal that the use of said preparation may result in serious and irreparable injury to the health of the user.
2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisement contains any representations prohibited in Paragraph 1 hereof, or which fails to reveal that the use of said preparation may result in serious and irreparable injury to the health of the user.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 10 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing, stating whether it intends to comply with this order and, if so, the manner and form in which it intends to comply; and that within 60 days after service upon it of this order, said respondent shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF
J. E. BERNARD & COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3534. Complaint, Aug. 12, 1938—Decision, July 8, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in purchase, chiefly, of used and discarded spark plugs which were originally made and sold by manufacturers thereof under well-known and widely advertised brand names and trade marks "Champion" and "AC," and which had been refurbished under process so as to give them appearance of new and unused "Champion" and "AC" spark plugs, respectively, and in sale and distribution of such refurbished and processed plugs, for use in automotive gasoline engines, to dealers in foreign countries, and in competition, as thus engaged, with those engaged in manufacture and sale of such products to dealers purchasing for resale and to members of the public purchasing for use, in the various States, the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries, principally non-English speaking, including Brazil, British India, and others in which it made sales as above set forth of its said reconditioned products, cleaning of which was substantially equivalent to that available to car owners generally through garages and service stations at charge of 5 cents a plug before abandonment of product—

Sold such spark plugs, which were originally obtained by its vendors, as discarded products and junk and at small cost, from garages, service stations and other places where they had been abandoned by owners as worthless, and which, as above set forth, were thereafter treated and refurbished by process giving them, as above described, appearance of new plugs, and which, in some instances, continued to carry aforesaid brand names originally placed thereon by manufacturers thereof, displayed, under common practice of installation for owner by mechanic or other garage or service station employee on only visible remaining part of product; with no individual marking on individual plugs to indicate its connecton therewith or used character thereof, to dealers in foreign countries, as above described, and in which purchasers who did not understand English were compelled to rely solely on appearance of plug itself and trade mark or brand name appearing thereon;

Facts being process employed resulted in important impairment of functional quality of product, some of plugs were obsolete and often did not contain type indicated in accordance with manufacturers' practice of making such products in very large numbers of types adapted to different makes and models of cars for which made and sold, and were not of type or in condition to render satisfactory or adequate service in accordance with manufacturers' further practice of subjecting to rigid tests various plugs made by them for different makes and models and recommending discarding thereof after certain specified use, and said reconditioned products did not compare with blue prints and specifications of original manufacturers thereof and were not considered by them as a satisfactory product;

With tendency and capacity, through sale of such discarded and much less costly refurbished spark plugs, with their greater profit incentive to dealer for substitution for new product, to deceive purchasers into erroneous and mistaken belief that said plugs were new and unused, and in same mercantile condition as when first sold to distributor by manufacturer and backed by reputation and guarantee thereof, and with result, as direct consequence, that trade in commerce with foreign countries was diverted unfairly to it from competitors in such commerce engaged in sale of new and unused plugs and from those selling used plugs who truthfully represent character and quality thereof; to injury of competitors in commerce aforesaid:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Joseph C. Fehr for the Commission.
Mr. John Wilson Hood, of New York City, for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that J. E. Bernard & Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, J. E. Bernard & Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business located at 27 Pearl Street, in the city of New York, in the State of New York.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, said respondent has been for a period of more than 1 year last past, and is now engaged in the sale of used and reconditioned spark plugs for use in gasoline engines. Respondent has sold and still sells such spark plugs to dealers located in various parts of the United States and in foreign countries who purchase for resale. Respondent has caused and now causes said spark plugs, when so sold by it, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to said purchasers located in States other than the State of New York, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries.

Par. 3. The respondent, during all the times above mentioned and referred to has been, and still is, in competition in the sale of spark plugs in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries with other corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals manufacturing, selling, and distributing spark plugs.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION DECISIONS

31 F. T. C.

Par. 4. Among the manufacturers and sellers of spark plugs referred to in paragraph 3 hereof are certain manufacturers who are, and have been, making and selling spark plugs, respectively, under the brands or trade names "Champion" and "AC" in such commerce. Such spark plugs are respectively marked and branded with the names "Champion" and "AC." The spark plugs made and sold under the brand and trade names "Champion" and "AC" are well and favorably known among the trade and the public generally as being of superior quality and as being in constant demand by users of spark plugs.

During all of the times above mentioned, the spark plugs manufactured, branded, and sold under the trade names "Champion" and "AC" have to a substantial extent been sold by the manufacturers thereof and by dealers therein in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries. The business of the sale of such spark plugs branded as "Champion" and "AC" spark plugs, respectively, in such commerce has constituted a very substantial portion of the entire spark plug business.

Par. 5. Substantially all of the spark plugs sold by respondent are spark plugs which were manufactured and sold by the manufacturers under the brand names "Champion" and "AC." Such spark plugs, carrying the aforesaid brand names, have been used by members of the public until they became worn out by use or became defective and unserviceable for further use. The respondent purchases said used and reconditioned spark plugs from another concern. Said concern obtains said used, worn out, or defective spark plugs at small cost from garages, service stations, truck operators, and similar sources of supply and after repairing and reconditioning them sells them to respondent and other dealers for resale. Said spark plugs when thus sold by respondent have the appearance of new and unused "Champion" or "AC" spark plugs. Respondent sells said used and reconditioned plugs thus obtained, with the brand names "Champion" and "AC" appearing thereon, without disclosing to purchasers thereof that said spark plugs are used, worn out, or defective spark plugs which have been repaired or reconditioned. The sale and distribution of said used and reconditioned spark plugs constitute the greater part of respondent's business in the sale of spark plugs.

The spark plugs thus sold and distributed by respondent were not and are not individually identified by suitable marking so as to indicate the used, second-hand, refurnished character thereof. Said spark plugs are individually wrapped in plain white, waxed paper which carries no identification or mark to disclose the used or reconditioned nature thereof. Certain of said spark plugs so wrapped are placed in individual cartons on the face of which appears the words “Cooper Processed” printed in heavy conspicuous type and superimposed upon the word “RECONDITIONED” printed in light, less distinguishable type so as to make the word “RECONDITIONED” almost illegible. At one end of the carton appear the words “Make Champion.” Certain other of said spark plugs are merely wrapped in plain paper and placed in flat cardboard containers which carry on one side a label reading “Perfect Reconditioned Registered” along with the size and number so packed.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid misleading and deceptive statements and representations and their implications on the part of the respondent place in the hands of retailers buying for resale an instrument and means whereby said retailers may commit a fraud upon a substantial portion of the purchasing public enabling such dealers to represent and offer for sale and sell respondent’s said reconditioned spark plugs as being new “Champion” or “AC” spark plugs made by the manufacturer thereof with the intent and purpose of selling the said spark plugs in the usual course of trade to the general purchasing public at less than the retail price new “Champion” or “AC” spark plugs are usually sold for.

PAR. 7. The acts and practices of respondent in selling spark plugs bearing the brand names “Champion” and “AC” which have been reconditioned and repaired without disclosing that said spark plugs were and are worn out or otherwise defective spark plugs repaired or reconditioned by another concern have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive dealers in spark plugs, and members of the purchasing public in the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries using spark plugs, into the mistaken and erroneous belief that the spark plugs so sold by respondent were and are new and unused spark plugs and are in the same merchantable condition as when manufactured and first sold and distributed by the respective manufacturers thereof, and into the purchase of such spark plugs from respondent in and on account of said mistaken and erroneous belief induced as aforesaid. As a result thereof, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from competitors engaged in the sale of new and unused “Champion” and “AC” spark plugs and other spark plugs who truthfully represent the character and quality of said spark plugs and also from competitors who sell used and reconditioned spark plugs and who truthfully represent the quality and character thereof. In consequence thereof, injury has been done and is being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries.

Par. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 12, 1938, issued its complaint against respondent and caused such complaint to be served as required by law, in which it was charged that said respondent was and had been using unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto making certain admissions, the taking of testimony and other evidence herein was waived by stipulation entered into on December 12, 1939, between W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, and John Wilson Hood, attorney for respondent herein, and thereafter duly approved by the Commission and filed in the office of the Commission, whereby it was agreed that the facts in this proceeding, except as to the identity of parties, are the same as the facts in the proceeding by the Commission styled "In the Matter of Peter Sanders, Harry Sanders, and Samuel Sanders, individuals, doing business as The Perfect Recondition Spark Plug Co., and Samuel Sanders, an individual, doing business as Ace Auto Supply Co., Docket No. 3392"; that the testimony and evidence in support of and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint, as amended, in said Docket No. 3392, and appearing in the stenographic record of the testimony herein, be made testimony and evidence in support of and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint in this proceeding, with the same force and effect as if such testimony and evidence had been given and such agreements and stipulations as to the facts had been entered into originally in this proceeding; that all testimony, evidence, agreements, and stipulations as to the facts in said Docket No. 3392 relative to the operations of the respondent herein and relative to the relations existing between the respondents in said Docket No. 3392 and the respondent herein be adopted and accepted as the facts herein, and that such briefs as may be filed in support of the allegations of the complaint as amended in said Docket No. 3392, and in opposition thereto, and such oral arguments as may be made in support of the allegations of the complaint, as amended, and in opposition thereto in said Docket
Findings

No. 3392, shall be applicable also to this proceeding, separate oral argument and separate briefs herein being expressly waived.

The Commission having considered the record and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, J. E. Bernard & Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business located at 27 Pearl Street in the city of New York, in the State of New York.

Par. 2. Said respondent was, for more than 1 year prior to on or about January 1, 1938, engaged in the sale and distribution of used and discarded spark plugs for use in gasoline engines of automobiles, which plugs have been refurbished in the manner set forth in paragraph 5 hereof. Respondent has sold such spark plugs to dealers located in various foreign countries and has shipped them or caused them to be shipped to residents of foreign countries who purchase for resale. Respondent has caused and now causes said spark plugs, when so sold by it, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to said purchasers located in foreign countries.

Par. 3. During all of the times above mentioned, various individuals, partnerships, firms, and corporations domiciled in the United States have been and now are, engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling spark plugs to dealers who purchase for resale and to members of the public who purchase for use, residing in various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries, including those countries wherein respondent has made sales. Said manufacturers and sellers, respectively, have caused and now cause said spark plugs, when so sold by them, to be transported from their respective places of business to purchasers thereof located in States other than the State of origin of said shipments, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries.

Respondent, during all of the times above mentioned, has been in competition in the sale of spark plugs in commerce in foreign countries with such individuals, partnerships, firms, and corporations, manufacturing, selling and distributing spark plugs.

Par. 4. Among the manufacturers and sellers of spark plugs referred to in paragraph 3 hereof, are certain manufacturers who have been and are making and selling spark plugs in commerce under the brands or trade names "Champion" and "AC." Spark plugs manufactured and sold by AC Spark Plug Co. are identified by the trade-mark "AC" and those manufactured and sold by Champion Spark Plug Co. are identified by the trade-mark "Champion." Such marks are printed on the cartons and containers and are also displayed on the exposed portion of the insulators of the spark plugs themselves. Said trade-marks "AC" and "Champion" are well known by a large majority of the motoring public and serve to identify the spark plugs so marked with the two said corporations. Large sums of money have been expended by the two said corporations in advertising their respective trade-marks "AC" and "Champion" and the spark plugs made and sold under those marks.

During all of the times above mentioned, the spark plugs so manufactured, branded and sold under the trade-marks "AC" and "Champion" have been sold to a substantial extent by the manufacturers thereof and by dealers therein in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia and in practically all foreign countries. The business of selling such spark plugs branded as "Champion" and "AC" spark plugs, respectively, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia and in foreign countries, has constituted a very substantial portion of the entire spark plug business.

Par. 5. Substantially all of the spark plugs sold by respondent are used and discarded spark plugs which originally were manufactured and sold by the manufacturers under the brand names "Champion" and "AC." Such spark plugs, carrying the aforesaid brand names and other identifying markings of such original manufacturers have been used by members of the public and discarded by them as worn out or defective and unserviceable for further use before they are acquired by the so-called spark plug reconditioner from whom respondent purchases them. The used and refurbished spark plugs dealt in by respondent were purchased by it from Peter Sanders, Harry Sanders, and Samuel Sanders, doing business as The Perfect Recondition Spark Plug Co. These persons make a practice of obtaining such discarded spark plugs as junk and at small cost from garages, service stations, and other places where they have been abandoned by their owners as worthless. Such discarded spark plugs were then treated and refurbished by cleaning, sandblasting, filing, buffing, adjusting the points, and painting the metal shells with black paint. After such treatment the spark plugs were purchased by respondent and sold by it to dealers in foreign countries. When so treated and refurbished and sold by respondent, such spark plugs had the appearance of new and unused Champion and AC spark plugs, respectively.
PAR. 6. The spark plugs thus sold and distributed by respondent were not individually identified by any marking thereon so as to indicate respondent's connection therewith or the used, second-hand, refurbished character thereof, and in some instances continued to carry the brand names "Champion" and "AC" which were originally placed thereon by the manufacturers thereof. In other instances the said brand names were removed at the request of respondent and such spark plugs were sold without any marking appearing thereon.

PAR. 7. Spark plugs reconditioned for respondent were sold by it principally in non-English speaking countries, including Brazil, British India, Colombia, Ecuador, Java, Latvia, Peru, New Zealand, and the Straits Settlements. In such countries purchasers of spark plugs who do not understand English are compelled to rely solely on the appearance of the plug itself and on the trade-mark or brand name appearing thereon. It does not appear that cartons or containers for respondent's refurbished spark plugs were printed in any language other than English.

PAR. 8. In the great majority of cases, when spark plugs are sold to car owners they are installed in the motor by a mechanic or some other person at the garage or service station where the purchase is made. In such instances the car owner is not afforded any opportunity to see the box from which the spark plug is removed and often does not see the spark plug until after it has been installed in the motor of his car. When so installed, the only visible part of the spark plug is the upper part of the metal shell and the white ceramic insulator which bears the brand name of the manufacturer.

PAR. 9. In and during the process of manufacture, the firing end of the core of a "Champion" spark plug has been carefully worked out with a view to controlling the proper heat range of the plug and to shield the center electrode to a proper distance with respect to the end of the shell and the side electrode so that each spark may occur in proper position, the purpose of the spark plug being to ignite the compressed gas at the proper time and at a predetermined position within the cylinder of the engine. The spark plug is simultaneously subjected to many complex reactions under operation in an engine with temperature ranges from 1,200° to 1,500°. Explosion pressures are approximately 400 pounds per square inch and under detonation reach a 2,000 pound pressure. Chemical reaction is also encountered due to the various constituents of gasoline. Electrolytic reaction also accounts for much erosion of the center and side electrodes. The mechanical scouring action of gas at high temperatures and pressure have an erosive effect on the tip of the insulator, often changing its shape.
Findings

The location of the spark in the cylinder of the motor is very important and this is determined by the location of the gap, different types of Champion plugs for different types or models of cars varying from each other in the position of the spark gap with relation to the gas stream within the cylinder. The spark plug manufacturer works very closely with the car manufacturers to insure that the plugs will produce the spark at the right place, and car manufacturers often return plugs which have been sent to them with the wrong gap setting. It is very essential that not even one plug in a set leak an undue amount, since the leaky plug will get unduly hot and will often result in fusing the electrodes, causing serious harm to the engine. Car manufacturers invariably recommend that new plugs be installed once each year or after approximately 10,000 miles of operation because from tests in their engineering division they know that the performance of a car can be jeopardized by old plugs. The Champion Spark Plug Co., in order to insure the accuracy of its spark plugs for various types of motor vehicles, causes an inspection and reinspection to be made of all the spark plugs manufactured by it and causes special tests to be made by its engineering division of approximately 10 percent of its total production.

PAR. 10. Sixty so-called reconditioned "Champion" spark plugs purchased from The Perfect Recondition Spark Plug Co., respondent's supplier, were given complete tests. There were 10 each of the following types: C-4, C-7, No. 7, C-15, J-5, and J-8. The C-4, the C-7, the No. 7, the C-15, the J-5, and the J-8 spark plugs were all obsolete. The box bearing the type No. C-4 contained two plugs which were of different type numbers. The box bearing the type No. J-5 contained three plugs which were of different type numbers. Of the 60 plugs there were 27 in which the relation of the side wire to the center was wrong. In connection with the center wires of the 60 plugs tested, 29 were slightly burned, 21 badly burned, and 4 were satisfactory. Of the 60 plugs tested 38 of the side wires had been either filed, burnt, or bent so that they would not pass the inspection requirements of the Champion Spark Plug Co. for either a new or repaired plug and in 22 of the plugs the side wires were satisfactory. The gap spacing of the 60 plugs tested showed 36 to be improperly spaced and the semi-petticoat of the core of the 60 plugs tested showed 49 badly damaged and in none of the 60 plugs was this feature in its original condition. The test showed that each had had more than 10,000 miles of service.

Discarded Champion and AC spark plugs, refurbished and resold by respondent, due to the use and wear to which they have been previously subjected, are inferior in functional qualities to new spark plugs from which they are practically indistinguishable in appearance.

PAR. 11. The reconditioned spark plugs sold by respondent do not comply with the blueprints and specifications of the original manufacturers thereof and are not considered by them to be a satisfactory product. Neither Champion Spark Plug Co. nor AC Spark Plug Co., nor any other spark plug manufacturer, engages in the practice of collecting, cleaning, and selling discarded spark plugs. The damage and wear which result from use of the spark plug are to the firing end of the plug, which is located within the cylinder of the motor. In addition to the wear which occurs to the firing end of the spark plug through use, the suppliers of such refurbished spark plugs to the respondent herein remove additional material by its sandblasting and filing operations, which treatments alter the three important functional dimensions of the plug, which the manufacturers undertake to hold to very close limits in order to secure proper performance. These three dimensions are the distances from tip of insulator to end of center wire, from tip of insulator to end of shell, and from end of shell to end of center wire. Slight variations in one or more of these dimensions may make a spark plug incapable of rendering efficient service in the motors for which it is recommended by the manufacturer and result in waste of fuel and improper performance of the engine.

Because of the various requirements of different automobile engines, over 70 types of spark plugs are supplied by one manufacturer. In some instances the differences in functional dimensions between various types of new Champion and AC plugs are less than the differences in functional dimensions between a used spark plug sold by respondent and a new one of the same type made by the manufacturer. Spark plugs refurbished for respondent in which the functional dimensions have been altered to any material extent no longer correctly represent the type of designation given them by the original manufacturer.

PAR. 12. The wholesale selling prices of used spark plugs refurbished for respondent are approximately one-third those of corresponding new spark plugs. Sales of respondent's plugs to car owners at the usual retail selling prices of new plugs would result in several times as much profit to the seller as the sale of a corresponding new plug. Sales of respondent's plugs at retail prices substantially lower than those of corresponding new plugs would still result in much greater profit to the seller. The appearance of respondent's spark plugs together with the possibilities of greater profits are incentives to the dealer to substitute respondent's spark plugs for new ones.
Par. 13. Spark plug cleaning services are generally available to motorists throughout the United States. A large percentage of garages and service stations have spark plug cleaning machines which clean the firing end of the spark plug by sandblasting and such establishments also clean and adjust the points. A charge of five cents per plug is made for this service. The treatments thus available to motorists at garages and service stations before spark plugs are abandoned by their owners are substantially equivalent to those which the suppliers of such refurbished spark plugs to the respondent herein give to discarded, unserviceable, and worn out spark plugs, except for the additional steps performed by said suppliers having to do with restoring the appearance of newness.

Par. 14. The acts and practices of respondent in selling discarded spark plugs which have been treated and refurbished, and which bear the brand names and other identifying marks of the original manufacturers, have had and now have the tendency and capacity to deceive purchasers thereof into the mistaken and erroneous belief that said spark plugs are new and unused spark plugs, in the same merchantable condition as when manufactured and first sold and distributed, and backed by the reputation and guarantee of the respective manufacturers thereof. As a direct result trade in commerce with foreign countries has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from competitors in said commerce engaged in the sale of new and unused spark plugs and from competitors selling used spark plugs who truthfully represent the quality and character thereof. In consequence thereof injury has been done to competitors in commerce with foreign countries.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, J. E. Bernard & Co., Inc., and the stipulation as to the facts entered into by and between W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, and John Wilson Hood, attorney for the respondent, and, pursuant to such stipulation, on the record, briefs, and arguments in the matter of "Peter Sanders, Harry Sanders, and Samuel Sanders, individuals, doing business as The Perfect Recondition Spark Plug Co., and Samuel Sanders, an individual, doing business as Ace Auto Supply Co., Docket No. 3392,"¹ and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, J. E. Bernard & Co., Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of spark plugs in commerce with foreign countries, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Offering for sale, selling, or delivering to others for sale to the public, any spark plug which has been used and thereafter reconditioned in any manner unless the word "used" or "second-hand" or "reconditioned," or some other word or words of similar import and meaning, have been permanently stamped or fixed on each of such spark plugs in a color in contrast to the surface to which the word is applied and of a size and in such location as to be clearly legible to the purchasers thereof after the same shall have been installed, and unless there has been plainly printed or marked on the boxes, cartons, or other containers in which such spark plugs are sold or offered for sale, a notice that said spark plugs are used, second-hand, or reconditioned.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

ALGREN MANUFACTURING COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 3 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3200. Complaint, Aug. 10, 1931—Decision, July 9, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of jewelry findings, including wrist watch buckles, and in sale and distribution thereof to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in manufacture of such products, and in sale and distribution thereof to jobbers in commerce among the various States and in said District of Columbia—

Sold its said jewelry findings and buckles with words “Gold Filled,” which it had caused to be stamped, branded, or imprinted thereon, to jobbers by whom they were offered and sold, thus branded, to consuming public, facts being, minimum standard for marking of gold-filled articles other than watch cases, as accepted by jewelry manufacturing trade, which had generally adopted use of certain terms in describing gold-covered articles as descriptive of process used in applying gold thereto and as designating quality, quantity, and character of gold thus applied, and as representations to general public that articles were made, and gold applied, in conformity with certain set standards, is one-twentieth by weight of 10-carat gold, and said wrist watch buckles did not contain a layer or coating of gold of such substantial thickness as to be properly and accurately represented, designated, or referred to as “Gold Filled,” but contained 12-carat gold to extent only of one-fiftieth of their weight, and not equivalent to one-twentieth by weight of 10-carat gold, in accordance with minimum standard aforesaid for articles properly designated as “Gold Filled” and generally accepted by trade and substantial portion of general purchasing public as being of character and weight superior to articles made by processes designated as “Gold Plate” and “Gold Electro-Plate”;

With result, through use of such false and misleading statement, of placing in hands of jewelry jobbers aforesaid, instrument and means whereby they might perpetrate a fraud upon substantial portion of retailers, and both jobbers and retailers upon substantial portion of consuming public, by enabling them falsely to represent, offer, and sell said wrist watch buckles as being superior to other articles not so branded, and as being of same quality and value as other articles truthfully branded “Gold Filled,” and with effect that substantial portion of retailers aforesaid and of consuming public, believing that words “Gold Filled” denoted quality exceeded only by solid gold or carat gold, were led, because of such belief, to purchase its said product, and with further result that its said acts and practices constituted added inducements for substantial number of jobbers and retail and consuming purchasers to buy such product, and unfairly diverted substantial volume of trade from many competitors who conform to set standards above referred to and do not brand as “Gold Filled” wrist watch buckles or other jewelry findings which do not contain by weight at least 5 percent gold of a fineness of at least 10 carats; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:
Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public and of competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. John W. Addison, trial examiner.

Mr. Morton Nesmith for the Commission.

Mr. Henry S. Sellin, of New York City, and Mr. Lucien Nemser, of Brooklyn, N. Y., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Algren Manufacturing Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, is now, and has been, using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereto would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Algren Manufacturing Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business located at 8 Washington Place, in the city of New York, State of New York, and is now, and has been for several years last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing jewelry findings, including wrist watch buckles, in commerce as hereinafter set out.

Par. 2. Said respondent, being engaged in the business as aforesaid, causes said jewelry findings, including wrist watch buckles, when sold, to be transported from its office and principal place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various cities and other States of the United States and the District of Columbia, and there is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a constant current of trade and commerce in said jewelry findings, including watch buckles, so sold and distributed by respondent between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of said business, the respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition with individuals, firms, and corporations engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing jewelry findings, including wrist watch buckles, as herein described, to jobbers and retailers in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.
Par. 4. In the course of the operation of said business and for the purpose of inducing individuals, firms, and corporations to purchase said wrist watch buckles, the respondent caused the words "Gold Filled" to be stamped, branded, or imprinted upon said buckles.

Respondent sells its jewelry findings, including wrist watch buckles, as described in paragraph 4 hereof, to jobbers and retailers who in turn offer for sale and sell the articles to the consuming public branded "Gold Filled."

Par. 5. The jewelry manufacturing trade has generally adopted the use of certain terms in describing gold covered articles. The names so used are descriptive of the process used in applying gold to the manufactured articles, and also designate the quality, quantity, and character of the gold so applied to the articles, and serve as representations to the general purchasing public that the articles were manufactured, and the gold applied, in conformity, with certain set standards. The designations generally adopted by the trade with respect to articles that are not of solid gold are: "Gold Filled," "Rolled Gold Plate," "Gold Plate," and "Gold Electro-Plate." In the process of manufacturing articles designated as "Gold Filled," a substantial quantity of gold in weight and thickness is applied to the base metal core, and these articles truthfully designated as "Gold Filled" are generally accepted by the trade and a substantial portion of the general purchasing public as being of a character and quality superior to articles manufactured by the processes designed as "Gold Plate" and "Gold Electro-Plate."

Par. 6. In truth and in fact, the respondent's wrist-watch buckles described in paragraph 4 do not contain a layer or coating of gold of such substantial thickness as to be properly and accurately represented, designated or referred to as "Gold Filled."

Par. 7. The foregoing false and misleading statement on the part of the respondent places in the hands of the aforesaid jewelry jobbers an instrument and means whereby said jobbers may perpetrate a fraud upon a substantial portion of the retailers, and both jobbers and retailers upon a substantial portion of the general purchasing public, by enabling them to falsely represent, offer for sale, and sell respondent's wrist watch buckles as being superior to other articles not so branded and as being of equal quality and value with other articles truthfully branded "Gold Filled." A substantial portion of said retailers and of the consuming public are of the opinion that the words "Gold Filled" denote a quality exceeded only by solid gold or carat gold, and are thus led to purchase respondent's product engendered by said belief.

Par. 8. There are among the competitors of respondent many persons, firms, and corporations who in no way misrepresent the composi-
Findings

The respondent, Algren Manufacturing Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue, nature, character, or quality of the jewelry findings, including wrist-watch buckles, which they manufacture, sell, and distribute.

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are added inducements for a substantial number of jobbers, retail purchasers, and consuming purchasers to buy respondent's product, and have a tendency and capacity to, and do unfairly divert a substantial volume of trade to respondent from its said competitors. As a consequence thereof, substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia has been substantially injured.

PAR. 9. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondent have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors, as aforesaid, and have been, and are, unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of section 5 of an act entitled "An act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 10, 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Algren Manufacturing Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto were introduced by Morton Nesmith and S. Brogdyne Teu, II, attorneys for the Commission, and Henry S. Sellin, counsel for the respondent, before John W. Addison, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, testimony, and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Algren Manufacturing Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by vir-
Findings

Par. 2. Said respondent, being engaged in the business as aforesaid, caused said jewelry findings, including wrist-watch buckles, when sold, to be transported from its office and principal place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various cities in other States of the United States and the District of Columbia, and there is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a current of trade and commerce in said jewelry findings, including wrist-watch buckles, so sold and distributed by respondent between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of said business, the respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition with individuals, firms, and corporations engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing jewelry findings, including wrist watch buckles, as herein described, to jobbers in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In the course of the operation of said business and for the purpose of inducing individuals, firms, and corporations to purchase wrist-watch buckles, the respondent caused the words "Gold Filled" to be stamped, branded, or imprinted upon said buckles.

Respondent sells its jewelry findings, including wrist-watch buckles as hereinbefore described, to jobbers who in turn offer for sale and sell the articles to the consuming public branded "Gold Filled."

Par. 5. The jewelry manufacturing trade has generally adopted the use of certain terms in describing gold covered articles. The names so used are descriptive of the process used in applying gold to the manufactured articles, and also designate the quality, quantity, and character of the gold so applied to the articles, and serve as representations to the general purchasing public that the articles were manufactured, and the gold applied, in conformity with certain set standards. The designations generally adopted by the trade with respect to articles that are not of solid gold are: "Gold Filled," "Rolled Gold Plate," "Gold Plate," and "Gold Electro-Plate." In the process of manufacturing articles designated as "Gold Filled," a substantial quantity of gold in weight and thickness is applied to the base metal core. The minimum standard for the marking of gold-filled articles other than watch cases as accepted by the trade is one-twentieth by weight of 10-carat gold. The fraction preceding the carat mark or fineness designation denotes the correct proportion of the weight of the gold to the weight of the entire article. These articles are properly designated as "Gold Filled" and are generally accepted by the trade and a substantial portion of the general purchasing public as being of a character and weight superior to articles manufactured by the processes designated as "Gold Plate" and "Gold Electro-Plate."

Par. 6. In truth and in fact, the respondent's wrist-watch buckles, described in paragraph 4, made before 1937, did not contain a layer or coating of gold of such substantial thickness as to be properly and accurately represented, designated, or referred to as "Gold Filled." They contained 12-carat gold only to the extent of one-fiftieth of their weight, which is not equivalent to one-twentieth by weight of 10-carat gold.

Par. 7. The use of the foregoing false and misleading statement by the respondent places in the hands of the aforesaid jewelry jobbers an instrument and means whereby said jobbers may perpetrate a fraud upon a substantial portion of the retailers, and both jobbers and retailers upon a substantial portion of the consuming public by enabling them to falsely represent, offer for sale, and sell respondent's wrist watch buckles as being superior to other articles not so branded and as being of equal quality and value with other articles truthfully branded "Gold Filled." A substantial portion of said retailers, and of the consuming public, are of the opinion that the words "Gold Filled" denote a quality exceeded only by solid gold or carat gold, and are led to purchase respondent's product because of such belief.

Par. 8. There are among the competitors of respondent many persons, firms, and corporations who conform to the set standards referred to in paragraph 5 above and do not brand wrist watch buckles or other jewelry findings "Gold Filled" unless they contain by weight at least 5 percent gold of a fineness of at least 10 carats.

Par. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are added inducements for a substantial number of jobbers, retail purchasers, and consuming purchasers to buy respondent's product, and have a tendency and capacity to, and do unfairly divert a substantial volume of trade to respondent from its said competitors. As a consequence thereof competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia has been substantially injured.

CONCLUSION

The foregoing acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before John W. Addison, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief on behalf of the Commission filed herein by Morton Nesmith, counsel for the Commission (respondent having waived the filing of brief), oral argument not having been requested, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Algren Manufacturing Co., Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of wrist watch buckles in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia do forthwith cease and desist from:

Using the term “gold filled” or any other term or word of similar import and meaning as a brand, stamp, or label upon or for wrist watch buckles, unless such buckles shall have an alloyed gold content of one-twentieth by weight of 10-carat gold.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

In the Matter of

John B. Roche, Trading as the G-H-R Electric Dilator Company and the Roche Electric Machine Company

Complaint, Findings, and Order in Regard to the Alleged Violation of Sec. 5 of an Act of Congress Approved Sept. 26, 1914

Docket 3772. Complaint, Apr. 25, 1939—Decision, July 9, 1940

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of Electric Thermitis Dilator for use in treatment of prostate gland, and of his Electric Hygienic Machine for use, as recommended by him, in treatment of various ailments, diseases and conditions, to purchasers in the various other States and in competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of like or similar devices, and of preparations, remedies, and treatments for use and useful in treatment of ailments, diseases, and conditions for which he recommended his said devices, in commerce also among the various States and in the District of Columbia; in advertisements of his said devices which he disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals of general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter distributed in commerce among and between the various States, and by other means in commerce, and which advertisements were intended or likely to induce purchase of his said devices—

(a) Represented, directly and by implication, that prostate disorders are responsible for many of the ailments, diseases, and conditions of the human body, including impotency, kidney weaknesses, loss of vitality, constipation, piles, and sexual decline, and that use of his Electric Thermitis Dilator device would cure prostate disorders and the ailments, diseases, and conditions caused thereby; and

(b) Represented, as aforesaid, that the use of his said Dilator would stop the wasting away of tissues and keep glands vigorous and strong, enabling one to feel and look young at 80, and that said device was useful and effective in treatment of frigidity and would eliminate lack of procreative impulse, and was useful generally in renewing vigor and vitality and would produce beneficial results where all other treatments and methods had failed, and would restore and preserve prostate gland;

Facts being said dilator, while it might have some beneficial effects on congested prostatic conditions because of heat generated in said device, had no value in treatment of prostatic disorders and its use would not cure such disorders, and use thereof was not a cure or remedy for, or a competent treatment of, impotency, kidney weakness, or other ailments and conditions above set forth, and would not stop wasting away of tissues or keep glands vigorous and strong, would have no effect on conditions due to age, and would not make user thereof feel and look young at 80, and use of said device was of no value in treatment of frigidity and would not eliminate lack of procreative impulse or be useful in renewing vigor and vitality; and

(c) Represented, as aforesaid, that use of said Electric Hygienic Machine would take place of exercise and massage and all other vibrators and would revive the nerves and muscles, including involuntary muscles, insure perfect blood circulation, restore health and vital force where such health and force had been lost by prodigal expenditure of nervous and physical energy, and that said machine would renew human vitality, however and whatever lost, and, through increasing circulation of blood, would eliminate failure or weakness of any vital organ and restore such organ so that it would perform its normal functions and set it vigorously to work; and

(d) Represented, as aforesaid, that said machine was a cure for, or beneficial in treatment of, paralysis, locomotor ataxia, vertigo, apoplexy, rheumatism, gout, 'umbago, high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, and many other ailments, diseases, and conditions afflicting mankind, and that there was no other treatment on the market for ailments, diseases, and conditions mentioned as efficacious as his said machine;

Facts being, said device would not take place of exercise, massage, or all other vibrators and would not revive nerves and muscles, use thereof would not insure perfect blood circulation nor restore health and vital force, or renew human vitality, however and whatever lost, it was not effective in treatment of any weakness of any vital organ and would not restore such organ so that it would perform its normal functions or set such organ vigorously to work, and use of said device was not a cure or remedy for, or competent treatment of, paralysis and other ailments, diseases, or conditions above set forth;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and of causing portion of such public, because of said belief, to purchase his said devices, and with result that trade was diverted unfairly to him from his competitors who were likewise engaged in sale and distribution in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia of preparations, remedies, and treatments for use in treatment of ailments, diseases, and conditions for which he recommended his said devices, and who truthfully advertise the effectiveness and therapeutic value of their respective preparations and devices; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Lewis C. Russell, trial examiner.

Mr. Clark Nichols for the Commission.

Mr. Stewart J. Roche, of Hart, Mich., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that John B. Roche, an individual, trading as The G-H-R Electric Dilator Co. and The Roche Electric Machine Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to said
Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, John B. Roche, is an individual trading and doing business as The G-H-R Electric Dilator Co. and The Roche Electric Machine Co., with principal place of business at 215 North Division Avenue, Grand Rapids, Mich. Respondent is now and for the several years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of a device under the name Electric Thermitis Dilator for use in the treatment of the prostate gland, and a device under the name Roche Electric Hygienic Machine recommended by the respondent for use in the treatment of various ailments, diseases and conditions, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said devices, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in Grand Rapids, Mich., to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the several States of the United States other than the State of Michigan. There is now and has been for the several years last past a course of trade in such devices in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, the respondent is in competition with other individuals and with corporations and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar devices, and in the sale and distribution of preparations, remedies, and treatments for use and useful in the treatment of the ailments, diseases, and conditions for which the respondent recommends his said devices, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said devices, by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said devices; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said devices, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly... or indirectly, the purchase of his said devices in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the statements made in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, with reference to the device sold under the name Electric Thermitis Dilator, are the following:

Let us by a simple and harmless means restore to normal this very vital and important gland, for upon this gland in a large degree depends the future race. Not only that, but it has been proven in thousands of cases that prostate disorders are as a rule largely responsible for a long list of ailments to which our body is subject.

This can be done by means of our new and improved G-H-R Electric Thermitis Dilator and a few minutes spent each day brings you new health, vigor, and vitality. Those whose vital stamina has been on the decrease, and who have failed in nerve energy, should by all means seek a restoration for this lost power, in order that they may get the best out of life.

Men wonder why they are old at fifty. The knife is a failure in preserving that wonderful gland. Send for our G-H-R Electric Thermitis Dilator.

Women often suffer from various forms of female disorders which can be overcome by this simple and harmless treatment.

Impotency and prostate disorders are very closely related.

Why permit yourself to grow old when science has discovered a way out. The new and Improved G-H-R Electric Thermitis Dilator is the one true method for the treatment of bladder or kidney weakness, loss of vitality, prostate gland trouble. Constipation, piles, sexual decline, and other seminal losses can be laid to the birth of prostate gland trouble.

You cannot go wrong when you purchase one of these G-H-R Electric Thermitis Dilators for prostate gland trouble, so get into the highways of strength and preserve this wonderful gland.

Of course, you will notice the years passing by. We cannot prevent it, but you can stop the wasting away of your tissues, and keep your glands vigorous and strong. You can feel and look young at 80 by simply taking the proper treatment.

The principal effect is a typical hyperemia (an increased blood supply) of the pelvic organs, particularly of the genital organs. Remarkable results have been obtained where frigidity and lack of procreative impulse have been treated with this element of the G-H-R Electric Thermitis Dilator.

The G-H-R Electric Thermitis Dilator produces results when all other treatments fail.

Restore and preserve that wonderful gland and don’t be robbed by age.

Among and typical of the statements made in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, with reference to the device sold under the name Roche Electric Hygienic Machine, are the following:

The Roche Electric Hygienic Machine has all the value of exercise, hand manipulation, and so-called vibrators, but it goes still farther for it relieves the nerves and muscles, reaching you voluntarily and involuntarily. The whole world recognizes the necessity of keeping up a good blood circulation. No man knows of a machine or anything that will do it so effectively as the Roche Electric Hygienic Machine.
We honestly believe, yes, and we know that the Roche Electric Hygienic Machine is the greatest boon that has been granted to intelligent teachers of health.

We claim to be able to show how to restore to your system that perfect stage of health and vital force, probably lost by a too prodigal expenditure of nervous and physical energy.

You might sum up the whole story of the Roche Electric Hygienic Machine by saying that it "renews human vitality, however, and whatever lost." Whatever lengths the various ailments for which it is beneficial may lead us to in the description of its uses, you will find through it all the important facts, that whatever it does is done through the renewed and increased circulation of the blood, the restoration of which by our machine once more establishes a vigorous action of the part of the body that was ailing, and since the cause of the troubles originates in the failure or weakness of some vital organ, rendering it incapable of performing the function expected of it, and anything which will restore the strength to this feeble organ and will set it vigorously to work again, that is a cure.

The failure of medicine and so-called electric machines is no argument against the Roche Electric Hygienic Machine. No other treatment is in the same class with it. Everything else may fail, and still the Roche Electric Hygienic Machine will produce results. The merit of this machine is unquestionable.

The Roche Electric Hygienic Machines satisfy and soothe the nerves of one that is longing for a good night's sleep. They will convince the most skeptical after a few demonstrations. This is the one reason why we ask you to give the machine a trial, showing you that this machine will master the ailments that it is recommended for, such as: Paralysis, locomotor ataxia, vertigo, apoplexy, rheumatism, gout, lumbago, high blood pressure, or hardening of the arteries.

Par. 3. Through the use of said statements in said advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, and others similar thereto not herein set out, all of which purport to be descriptive of said devices and their efficacy in the treatment of various ailments, diseases, and conditions of the human body, the respondent represents, directly and by implication, in connection with the offering for sale and sale of said devices, that prostate disorders are responsible for many of the ailments, diseases, and conditions of the human body, including impotency, kidney weaknesses, loss of vitality, constipation, piles, and sexual decline, and that the use of the device known as Electric Thermitis Dilator will cure prostate disorders and the ailments, diseases, and conditions caused thereby; that the use of said dilator will stop the wasting away of tissues and keep glands vigorous and strong, enabling one to feel and look young at eighty; that said dilator is useful and effective in the treatment of frigidity and will eliminate the lack of procreative impulse, and that it is useful generally in renewing vigor and vitality and will produce beneficial results where all other treatments and methods have failed, and will restore and preserve the prostate gland; that the use of the device known as Roche Electric Hygienic Machine will take the place of exercise and massage and all other vibrators and will revive the nerves and muscles, including the involuntary muscles, insure perfect blood circulation, restore health and vital force where health and vital force has been lost by prodigal expenditure of nervous and physical energy; that said machine will renew human vitality, however and whatever lost; that said machine, through increasing the circulation of the blood, will eliminate the failure or weakness of any vital organ and restore such organ so that it will perform its normal functions and set such vital organ vigorously to work; that said machine is a cure for, or beneficial in the treatment of, paralysis, locomotor ataxia, vertigo, apoplexy, rheumatism, gout, lumbago, high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, and many other ailments, diseases, and conditions afflicting mankind, and that there is no other treatment on the market for the ailments, diseases, and conditions mentioned, as efficacious as respondent’s said machine.

Par. 4. The aforesaid representations and claims used and disseminated by the respondent as hereinabove described are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the device known as Electric Thermitis Dilator, while it may have some beneficial effect on congested prostatic conditions because of the heat generated in said device, has no value in the treatment of prostatic disorders and its use will not cure such disorders. The use of said device is not a cure or remedy for, or a competent treatment of, impotency, kidney weakness, loss of vitality, constipation, piles, or sexual decline. The use of said Electric Thermitis Dilator will not stop wasting away of tissues or keep glands vigorous and strong. Its use will have no effect on conditions due to age and will not make the user thereof feel and look young at eighty. The use of said device is of no value in the treatment of frigidity and will not eliminate the lack of procreative impulse or be useful in renewing vigor and vitality.

The device known as Roche Electric Hygienic Machine will not take the place of exercise, massage or all other vibrators and will not revive the nerves and muscles. The use of said device will not insure perfect blood circulation and will not restore health and vital force, or renew human vitality, however and whatever lost. Said device is not effective in the treatment of any weakness of any vital organ, and will not restore such organ so that it will perform its normal functions or set such vital organ vigorously to work. The use of said device is not a cure or remedy for, or a competent treatment of, paralysis, locomotor ataxia, vertigo, apoplexy, rheumatism, gout, lumbago, high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, or any other ailments, diseases, or conditions.
Order

Par. 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements with respect to the therapeutic value and effectiveness of its devices, known as Electric Thermitis Dilator and Roche Electric Hygienic Machine, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and causes a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's devices. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors who are likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of preparations, remedies, and treatments for use in the treatment of ailments, diseases, and conditions for which the respondent recommends his said devices, who truthfully advertise the effectiveness and therapeutic value of their respective preparations and devices. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 25th day of April 1939, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent John B. Roche, trading as G-H-R Electric Dilator Co., and as Roche Electric Machine Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On the 14th day of June 1940, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and now being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
Findings

Findings as to the Facts

Paragraph 1. The respondent, John B. Roche, is an individual trading and doing business as The G-H-R Electric Dilator Co. and as The Roche Electric Machine Co., with his principal place of business at 215 North Division Avenue, Grand Rapids, Mich. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a device under the name Electric Thermitis Dilator for use in the treatment of the prostate gland, and a device under the name of Roche Electric Hygienic Machine, recommended by the respondent for use in the treatment of various ailments, diseases and conditions, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said devices, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in Grand Rapids, Mich., to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the several States of the United States other than the State of Michigan. There is now and has been for several years last past a course of trade in such devices in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, the respondent is in competition with other individuals and with corporations and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar devices, and in the sale and distribution of preparations, remedies, and treatments for use and useful in the treatment of the ailments, diseases, and conditions for which respondent recommends his said devices in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said devices, by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said devices; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said devices, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said devices, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.
Among and typical of the statements made in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, with reference to the device sold under the name Electric Thermitis Dilator, are the following:

Let us by a simple and harmless means restore to normal this very vital and important gland, for upon this gland in a large degree depends the future race. Not only that, but it has been proven in thousands of cases that prostate disorders are as a rule largely responsible for a long list of ailments to which our body is subject.

This can be done by means of our new and improved G-H-R Electric Thermitis Dilator and a few minutes spent each day brings you new health, vigor, and vitality. Those whose vital stamina has been on the decrease, and who have failed in nerve energy, should by all means seek a restoration for this lost power, in order that they may get the best out of life.

Men wonder why they are old at fifty. The knife is a failure in preserving that wonderful gland. Send for our G-H-R Electric Thermitis Dilator.

Women often suffer from various forms of female disorders which can be overcome by this simple and harmless treatment.

Impotency and prostate disorders are very closely related.

WHY PERMIT YOURSELF TO GROW OLD when science has discovered a way out.

The new and improved G-H-R Electric Thermitis Dilator is the one true method for the treatment of bladder or kidney weakness, loss of vitality, prostate gland trouble. Constipation, piles, sexual decline, and other seminal losses can be laid to the birth of prostate gland trouble.

You cannot go wrong when you purchase one of these G-H-R Electric Thermitis Dilators for prostate gland trouble, so get into the highways of strength and preserve this wonderful gland.

Of course, you will notice the years passing by. We cannot prevent it, but you can stop the wasting away of your tissues, and keep your glands vigorous and strong. You can feel and look young at 80 by simply taking the proper treatment.

The principal effect is a typical hyperemia (an increasing blood supply) of the pelvic organs, particularly of the genital organs. Remarkable results have been obtained where frigidity and lack of procreative impulse have been treated with this element of the G-H-R Electric Thermitis Dilator.

The G-H-R Electric Thermitis Dilator produces results when all other treatments fail.

Restore and preserve that wonderful gland and don't be robbed by age.

Among and typical of the statements made in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, with reference to the device sold under the name of Roche Electric Hygienic Machine, are the following:

The Roche Electric Hygienic Machine has all the value of exercise, hand manipulation, and so-called vibrators, but it goes still further for it relieves the nerves and muscles, reaching you voluntarily and involuntarily. The whole world recognizes the necessity of keeping up a good blood circulation. No man knows of a machine or anything that will do it so effectively as the Roche Electric Hygienic Machine.
We honestly believe, yes, and we know that the Roche Electric Hygienic Machine is the greatest boon that has been granted to intelligent teachers of health.

We claim to be able to show how to restore to your system that perfect stage of health and vital force, probably lost by a too prodigal expenditure of nervous and physical energy.

You might sum up the whole story of the Roche Electric Hygienic Machine by saying that it "renews human vitality, however, and whatever lost." Whatever lengths the various ailments for which it is beneficial may lead us to in the description of its uses, you will find through it all the important facts, that whatever it does is done through the renewed and increased circulation of the blood, the restoration of which by our machine once more establishes a vigorous action of the part of the body that was ailing, and since the cause of the trouble originates in the failure or weakness of some vital organ, rendering it incapable of performing the function expected of it, and anything which will restore the strength to this feeble organ and will set it vigorously to work again, that is a cure.

The failure of medicine and so-called electric machines is no argument against the Roche Electric Hygienic Machine. No other treatment is in the same class with it. Everything else may fail, and still the Roche Electric Hygienic Machine will produce results. The merit of this machine is unquestionable.

The Roche Electric Hygienic Machines satisfy and soothe the nerves of one that is longing for a good night's sleep. They will convince the most skeptical after a few demonstrations. This is the one reason why we ask you to give the machine a trial, showing you that this machine will master the ailments that it is recommended for, such as: Paralysis, locomotor ataxia, vertigo, apoplexy, rheumatism, gout, lumbago, high blood pressure, or hardening of the arteries.

PAR. 3. Through the use of said statements in said advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, and others similar thereto not herein set out, all of which purport to be descriptive of said devices and their efficacy in the treatment of various ailments, diseases, and conditions of the human body, the respondent represents, directly and by implication, in connection with the offering for sale of said devices, that prostate disorders are responsible for many of the ailments, diseases, and conditions of the human body, including impotency, kidney weaknesses, loss of vitality, constipation, piles, and sexual decline, and that the use of the device known as Electric Thermitis Dilator will cure prostate disorders and the ailments, diseases, and conditions caused thereby; that the use of said dilator will stop the wasting away of tissues and keep glands vigorous and strong, enabling one to feel and look young at 80; that said dilator is useful and effective in the treatment of frigidity and will eliminate the lack of procreative impulse, and that it is useful generally in renewing vigor and vitality and will produce beneficial results where all other treatments and methods have failed, and will restore and preserve the prostate gland; that the use of the device known as Roche Electric Hygienic Machine will take the place of exercise and massage and all other vibrators and will revive the nerves and muscles, including the involuntary muscles, insure perfect blood circulation, restore health and vital force where health and vital force has been lost by prodigal expenditure of nervous and physical energy; that said machine will renew human vitality, however and whatever lost; that said machine, through increasing the circulation of the blood, will eliminate the failure or weakness of any vital organ and restore such organ so that it will perform its normal functions and set such vital organ vigorously to work; that said machine is a cure for, or beneficial in the treatment of, paralysis, locomotor ataxia, vertigo, apoplexy, rheumatism, gout, lumbago, high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, and many other ailments, diseases, and conditions afflicting mankind, and that there is no other treatment on the market for the ailments, diseases, and conditions mentioned, as efficacious as respondent's said machine.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid representations and claims used and disseminated by the respondent as hereinabove described are grossly exaggerated, misleading and untrue. In truth and in fact, the device known as Electric Thermitis Dilator, while it may have some beneficial effect on congested prostatic conditions because of the heat generated in said device, has no value in the treatment of prostatic disorders and its use will not cure such disorders. The use of said device is not a cure or remedy for, or a competent treatment of, impotency, kidney weakness, loss of vitality, constipation, piles, or sexual decline. The use of said Electric Thermitis Dilator will not stop wasting away of tissues or keep glands vigorous and strong. Its use will have no effect on conditions due to age and will not make the user thereof feel and look young at 80. The use of said device is of no value in the treatment of frigidity and will not eliminate the lack of procreative impulse or be useful in renewing vigor and vitality.

The device known as Roche Electric Hygienic Machine will not take the place of exercise, massage or all other vibrators and will not revive the nerves and muscles. The use of said device will not insure perfect blood circulation and will not restore health and vital force, or renew human vitality, however and whatever lost. Said device is not effective in the treatment of any weakness of any vital organ, and will not restore such organ so that it will perform its normal functions or set such vital organ vigorously to work. The use of said device is not a cure or remedy for, or a competent treatment of, paralysis, locomotor ataxia, vertigo, apoplexy, rheumatism, gout, lumbago, high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, or any other ailments, diseases or conditions.
PAR. 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements with respect to the therapeutic value and effectiveness of his devices, known as Electric Thermitis Dilator and Roche Electric Hygienic Machine, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and causes a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's devices. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from his competitors who are likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of preparations, remedies, and treatments for use in the treatment of ailments, diseases, and conditions for which the respondent recommends his said devices, who truthfully advertise the effectiveness and therapeutic value of their respective preparations and devices. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent John B. Roche, individually, and trading as The G–H–R Electric Dilator Co. and as The Roche Electric Machine Co., or trading under any other name or names, his agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribu-of his devices designated Electric Thermitis Dilator and Roche Electric Hygienic Machine, or any other devices of substantially similar construction or possessing substantially similar qualities, whether sold under the same names or under any other names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or by any means in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent, directly or through inference:

(a) That the use of said device designated Electric Thermitis Dilator will cure or serve as a competent or effective treatment for impotency, sexual decline, kidney weakness, piles, constipation, or prostatic disorders; that the use of such device has any therapeutic value in the treatment of prostatic conditions in excess of the beneficial effect of heat with relation to congested prostatic conditions; that the use of said device will stop the wasting away of tissues or beneficially affect the functioning of glands; that the use of said device will have any effect on conditions due to age; that said device possesses any value in the treatment of frigidity or that it will supply any lack of the procreative impulse; or that the use of said device will supply or renew so-called vigor or vitality.

(b) That said device designated Roche Electric Hygienic Machine will cure or serve as a competent or effective treatment for paralysis, locomotor ataxia, vertigo, apoplexy, rheumatism, gout, lumbago, high blood pressure, or hardening of the arteries; that the use of such device is an effective substitute for exercise; that the use of such device will revive the nerves or muscles; that said device will insure perfect blood circulation, or restore health or vital force, or renew vitality; or that said device constitutes an effective treatment for any weakness of any of the vital organs or possesses any therapeutic value with respect thereto.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as “commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said devices, which advertisements contain any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

VERONICA IGNATOVITCH, TRADING AS MADAME VERA, MADAM VERA, AND MME. VERA

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3906. Complaint, Oct. 3, 1939—Decision, July 9, 1940

Where an individual engaged in manufacture of her "Madame Vera Hair Grower Salve" for use on hair and scalp, and in sale thereof to purchasers in various other States and in District of Columbia, in advertisements of her said product, which she disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails, insertions in newspapers and periodicals having general circulation, and through other printed or written matter, distributed in commerce among the various States and by other means in commerce, and otherwise, and which advertisements were intended and likely to induce purchase of her said product—

(a) Represented, through various statements in said advertisements and including "before and after" pictures, that her said preparation was a competent and effective remedy for conditions known as dandruff and falling hair and that it grew new hair and that it had been used successfully by thousands of persons; facts being, it was not a competent or effective remedy for conditions above set forth, and would not grow new hair and had not been used successfully by thousands of persons or any other number; and

(b) Represented that price at which said preparation was offered for sale was a special price and was substantially less than that at which it was customarily offered, through such statement as "Special 30-day offer. Send only $1 for treatment. Regularly $3"; facts being, price at which it was offered was not specially reduced one, but price at which it was regularly and customarily sold;

With capacity and tendency to, and effect of, misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representations were true and to induce substantial portion of such public, because of said belief thus engendered, to purchase her medicinal preparation aforesaid:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Lewis C. Russell, trial examiner.
Mr. John M. Russell for the Commission.
Gould & Price, of Bridgeport, Conn., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Veronica Ignatovitch, trading as Madame Vera, Madam Vera, and as Mme. Vera, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Veronica Ignatovitch, is an individual trading as Madame Vera, Madam Vera, and as Mme. Vera, having her office and principal place of business located in Room No. 322, Meigs Building, Bridgeport, Conn.

Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling a preparation for use on the hair and scalp known as "Madam Vera Hair Grower Salve." Respondent causes said product, when sold, to be transported from her place of business in the State of Connecticut to purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said salve in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of her aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning her said preparation by the United States mails, by insertions in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said preparation; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning her said preparation by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said preparation in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false representations contained in the advertisements disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

Madam Vera Hair Grower Salve.

After washing your head, rub in * * * enough salve to cover the whole scalp. After three or four days * * * repeat this operation until you will find dandruff has entirely disappeared and a new growth of hair started. To obtain permanent results, keep using the salve at weekly intervals.

Picture of same man with a growth of heavy black hair

B E F O R E

A F T E R
Par. 3. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth, and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondent represents that her said preparation is a competent and effective remedy for the conditions known as dandruff and falling hair; that it grows new hair; that it has been used successfully by thousands of persons; and that the price at which said preparation is offered for sale is a "special" price and is substantially less than the price at which said preparation is customarily offered for sale.

Par. 4. The statements and representations made by the respondent, as aforesaid, are false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, said preparation is not a competent or effective remedy for dandruff or falling hair; it will not grow new hair; nor has it been used successfully by thousands of persons, or any other number. The price at which said preparation is offered for sale is not a special or reduced price, but is the price at which said preparation is regularly and customarily sold.

Par. 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representations are true, and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public to purchase respondent's medicinal preparation because of such erroneous and mistaken belief engendered as above set forth.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

ent, the respondent in person, and John M. Russell, attorney for the Federal Trade Commission, wherein it was agreed that the stipulation may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon such stipulation to make its report stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs.

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and answer and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved and accepted, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent Veronica Ignatovitch, is an individual, trading as Madam Vera, Madame Vera, and Mme. Vera, having her office and principal place of business located in Room 322, Meigs Building, Bridgeport, Conn.

Respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling a preparation for use on the hair and scalp known as "Madam Vera Hair Grower Salve." Respondent causes said product, when sold, to be transported from her place of business in the State of Connecticut to purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said salve in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of her aforesaid business prior to the date of the service of the complaint upon her, the respondent disseminated and caused the dissemination of false advertisements concerning her said preparation by the United States mails, by insertions in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said preparation; and also disseminated and caused the
Findings

Dissemination of false advertisements concerning her said preparation by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said preparation in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false representations contained in the advertisements disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

Madam Vera Hair Grower Salve.
After washing your head, rub in * * * enough salve to cover the whole scalp. After three or four days * * * repeat this operation until you will find dandruff has entirely disappeared and a new growth of hair started. To obtain permanent results, keep using the salve at weekly intervals.

Respondent has not disseminated or issued any such statements or advertisements as hereinbefore set forth since the complaint was served on her herein.

Par. 3. By the use of the representations herein set forth, and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondent represents that her said preparation is a competent and effective remedy for the conditions known as dandruff and falling hair; that it grows new hair; that it has been used successfully by thousands of persons; and that the price at which said preparation is offered for sale is a "special" price and is substantially less than the price at which said preparation is customarily offered for sale.

Par. 4. The statements and representations made by the respondent, as aforesaid, are false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, said preparation is not a competent or effective remedy for dandruff or falling hair; it will not grow new hair; nor has it been used successfully by thousands of persons, or any other number. The price at which said preparation is offered for sale is not a special or reduced price, but is the price at which said preparation is regularly and customarily sold.

Par. 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had the capacity and tendency to and did mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representations are true, and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public to purchase respondent's medicinal preparation because of such erroneous and mistaken belief engendered as above set forth.
Order

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Veronica Ignatovitch, trading as Madame Vera, Madam Vera, and Mme. Vera, as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Veronica Ignatovitch, trading as Madame Vera, Madam Vera, and Mme. Vera, or trading under any other name or names, her agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of her medicinal preparation advertised as "Madam Vera Hair Salve", or any other medicinal preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails, or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent directly or through inference that said preparation is a competent or effective remedy for the condition known as dandruff or falling hair; that it grows new hair; that it has been used successfully by anyone; or that any price which is the customary and usual price at which said preparation is offered for sale is a special or reduced price.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of any said preparation which advertisements contain any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon her of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which she has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

GEORGE C. HUSKINS, MINA D. HUSKINS, AND HOWARD W. ELLISON, TRADING AS CARTER SALES COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4028. Complaint, Feb. 8, 1940—Decision, July 9, 1940

Where three individuals engaged in sale and distribution of their "Carter's Special Formula," drug-containing preparation, which they recommended for use as treatment and cure for alcoholism and for liquor habit to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia; in advertisements of their said product which they disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails, through insertion in newspapers of general circulation, and through circulars and other printed or written matter distributed in commerce among the various States and through continuities broadcast from radio stations of extrastate audience, and otherwise, and which advertisements were intended, and likely to, induce purchase of their said product—

Represented, directly and by implication, that their said formula was a cure or remedy for and a competent and effective treatment for alcoholism and the liquor habit, and that through its use desire for alcoholic stimulants would be eradicated, and that it was absolutely harmless and contained no harmful drugs, through such statements, among others, as "It contains no harmful drugs"; "* * * In most cases at the end of three days the desire for alcohol is gone"; "* * * complete relief from this vicious habit"; and "* * * the modern, inexpensive THREE DAY LIQUOR TREATMENT * * * with an absolute MONEY BACK GUARANTEE CERTIFICATE"; and others of similar tenor; facts being, said product was not a cure or remedy nor competent or effective treatment for alcoholism or liquor habit, use thereof would not eradicate desire for alcoholic stimulants, and product was not absolutely harmless, in that it might, in some cases, cause skin rashes, dermatitis, and injury to liver and intestinal mucosa;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations were true and to induce substantial portion of said public, because of such belief, to purchase their medicinal preparation aforesaid;

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.
Mr. Randolph W. Branch for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that George C. Huskins, Mina D. Huskins, and Howard W. Ellison, individuals trading under the name of Carter Sales Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents are individuals who, trading and doing business under the name of Carter Sales Co., maintained an office and principal place of business in the Arcade Building, Los Angeles, Calif., which was later removed to 208 West Eighth Street, Los Angeles, Calif.

PAR. 2. Respondents, from on or about September 1, 1938, have been engaged in the business of selling and distributing a certain preparation containing drugs, described by them as “Carter’s Special Formula” and recommended by them for use as a treatment and cure for alcoholism and for the liquor habit. Respondents cause said preparation, when sold, to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of California, to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents at all times mentioned herein have maintained a course of trade in said preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, respondents have disseminated and caused the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said preparation by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which have been distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by continuities broadcast from radio stations having sufficient power to convey, and which did convey, the programs emanating therefrom to listeners located in various States of the United States other than the State in which said broadcasts originated, and by other means in commerce as “commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said product; and have disseminated and caused the dissemination of false advertisements, concerning their said preparation, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said medicinal preparation in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representation contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid are the following:

It contains no harmful drugs, in most cases at the end of three days the desire for alcohol is gone. Complete relief from this vicious habit.

Carter's Special Formula is an effective treatment for habitual drinkers on a full money back guarantee. Satisfaction within even a three-day period.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondents have represented, directly and indirectly, that their preparation "Carter's Special Formula" is a cure or remedy for, and a competent and effective treatment for, alcoholism and the liquor habit; that by its use the desire for alcoholic stimulants will be eradicated; that it is absolutely harmless and contains no harmful drugs.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact respondents' product is not a cure or remedy nor a competent or effective treatment for alcoholism or the liquor habit. The use of such product will not eradicate the desire for alcoholic stimulants. Said product is not absolutely harmless, in that it may in some cases cause skin rashes, dermatitis, and injury to the liver and the intestinal mucosa.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to their preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' medicinal preparation.

Par. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 8th day of February 1940, issued, and thereafter served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, George C. Huskins, Mina D. Huskins, and Howard W. Ellison, trading as Carter Sales Co., charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, hearings were held before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, at which hearings testimony and other evidence were introduced in support of the allegations of said complaint. Before said hearings were concluded, the respondents filed an answer, in which they admitted all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts.
Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, answer, testimony, and other evidence, said testimony and other evidence having been duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondents are individuals who, trading and doing business under the name of Carter Sales Co., maintained an office and principal place of business in the Arcade Building, Los Angeles, Calif., which was later removed to 208 West Eighth Street, Los Angeles, Calif.

Par. 2. Respondents, from on or about September 1, 1938, have been engaged in the business of selling and distributing a certain preparation containing drugs, described by them as "Carter's Special Formula" and recommended by them for use as a treatment and cure for alcoholism and for the liquor habit. Respondents cause said preparation, when sold, to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of California, to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents at all times mentioned herein have maintained a course of trade in said preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, respondents have disseminated and caused the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said preparation by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which have been distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by continuities broadcast from radio stations having sufficient power to convey, and which did convey, the programs emanating therefrom to listeners located in various States of the United States other than the State in which said broadcasts originated, and by other means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said product; and have disseminated and caused the dissemination of false advertisements, concerning their said preparation, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said medicinal preparation in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondents have represented, directly or indirectly, that their preparation “Carter’s Special Formula” is a cure or remedy for, and a competent and effective treatment for, alcoholism and the liquor habit; that by its use the desire for alcoholic stimulants will be eradicated; that it is absolutely harmless and contains no harmful drugs.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact respondents’ product is not a cure or remedy nor a competent or effective treatment for alcoholism or the liquor habit. The use of such product will not eradicate the desire for alcoholic stimulants. Such product is not absolutely harmless, in that it may in some cases cause skin rashes, dermatitis, and injury to the liver and the intestinal mucosa.

PAR. 6. The use by respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to their preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents’ medicinal preparation.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, testimony and other evidence introduced before William C. Reeves, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint, and the answer of the respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents George C. Huskins, Mina D. Huskins, and Howard W. Ellison, individually, and trading as Carter Sales Co., or trading under any other name or names, their agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of their medicinal preparation designated "Carter's Special Formula," or any other preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent, directly or through inference, that said preparation is a cure or remedy or a competent or effective treatment for alcoholism or the liquor habit; that the use of said preparation will eradicate the desire for alcoholic stimulants; that said preparation is in all cases safe or harmless, or that it contains no harmful drugs.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisements contain any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

SOHN & COMPANY, INC., AND BENJAMIN SOHN, MORRIS SOHN, AND ISADORE SOHN, INDIVIDUALLY AND AS OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS OF SOHN & COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4012. Complaint, Mar. 28, 1940—Decision, July 9, 1940

Where a corporation and three individuals who were officers and directors thereof and, as such, managed, controlled, and dominated its corporate affairs and activities, and acting in conjunction and cooperation with each other in carrying out the acts and practices and methods below set forth, and engaged in manufacture of mattresses and bedding with old, second-hand, used, and discarded cotton and other materials which they purchased and which, after being combed with a type of machine and reworked, were covered with new coverings and, in sale and distribution to purchasers in various other States and including wholesalers, retailers, and other buyers who resold same to purchasing public, of said products, which, after being fitted with new coverings as aforesaid, had appearance of new mattresses—Sold said products, with appearance aforesaid, and with no marking or designation clearly and conspicuously stamped thereon, or attached thereto, to indicate to purchasing public that such mattresses were in fact made from old, previously used, discarded, and second-hand mattresses, and in case of certain of said mattresses thus made but with labels bearing terms "Made of previously used materials" stamped thereon with such markings so illegible and inconspicuous that it could not be read by wholesale and retail buyers thereof or by members of the purchasing public, to retailers, and to jobbers and wholesalers, by whom said mattresses were sold to purchasing public without disclosing fact that they were reconditioned and made from old, used, discarded, and second-hand materials which had been remanufactured and fitted with new covering, and so as to indicate products in question were, in fact, composed in their entirety of new materials which had never been previously used, and thereby failed to disclose, through use by corporation and individuals aforesaid of said acts and practices, the kind and type of materials from which their products were made;

With the result that they thereby placed in the hands of unscrupulous and uninformed persons, means and instrumentality whereby such persons had been and were enabled to mislead and deceive members of purchasing and consuming public into erroneous and mistaken belief that their products, nearly all of which were made from old, used, discarded, and second-hand materials covered with new covering, were manufactured from new materials, and with effect, through use of such practices, of misleading and deceiving retail and wholesale dealers who purchase such products and substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that said mattresses, made as aforesaid, were new products manufactured from new and unused materials, and with the result, as consequence of such belief, that said public was induced to, and did, purchase substantial quantities of their said products:
Complaint

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Robert Mathis, Jr., for the Commission.

King & Esterman, of Chicago, Ill., for F. E. Hummel, trustee in bankruptcy for respondents, and, along with Mr. Hamilton Klorfine, of Chicago, Ill., for Morris Sohn.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Sohn & Co., Inc. and Benjamin Sohn, Morris Sohn, and Isadore Sohn, individually and as officers and directors of Sohn & Co., Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Sohn & Co., Inc., is now and has been at all times mentioned herein a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois. Respondents Benjamin Sohn, Morris Sohn, and Isadore Sohn are individuals and are president, secretary, and treasurer, respectively, and directors of respondent Sohn & Co., Inc., and as such manage, control, and dominate its corporate affairs and activities. All of the respondents have acted in conjunction and cooperation with each other in carrying out the acts and practices, and methods hereinafter alleged. All have their offices and principal place of business at 1450 West Roosevelt Road, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondents are now and have been for more than two years last past engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of mattresses and bedding. Respondents cause their said merchandise when sold to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to various purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. Respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a substantial course of trade in commerce in said merchandise among and between the various States of the United States.

Para. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, respondents have bought and still buy old, second-hand, used, and discarded cotton and other used materials. Such materials are, after being combed with a type of machine and reworked, then used by respond...ents in the manufacture of mattresses and bedding which are covered with new covering and are sold by the respondents to wholesalers, retailers, and other purchasers who resell the same to the purchasing public.

Par. 3. Respondents' mattresses made from the aforesaid old, used, discarded, and second-hand materials, after being fitted with new coverings as aforesaid, have the appearance of new mattresses, and said mattresses are sold by respondents to wholesalers, jobbers, and retail dealers without any marking or designation clearly and conspicuously stamped thereon or attached thereto to indicate to the purchasing public that said mattresses were in fact manufactured from old, previously used, discarded, and second-hand materials. Said mattresses are also resold by jobbers and wholesalers to retail dealers who sell them to the purchasing public without disclosing the fact that said mattresses are reconditioned and manufactured from old, used, discarded, and second-hand material which has been re-manufactured and fitted with a new covering and so as to indicate that said mattresses are in fact composed in their entirety of new materials which have never been previously used.

Certain of the mattresses manufactured by respondents from old, used, discarded, and second-hand materials do have labels with the terms "Made of previously used materials" stamped thereon, and in such instances where said labels bear these terms the marking is so illegible and inconspicuous that it cannot be read by the wholesale and retail dealers who buy respondents' product or by members of the purchasing public.

Par. 4. Through the use of the acts and practices as herein set forth, respondents have and do fail to disclose the kind and type of materials from which their products are manufactured and thereby respondents have placed in the hands of unscrupulous and uninformed persons a means and instrumentality whereby such persons have been and are enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing and consuming public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents' products are manufactured from new materials when in truth and in fact nearly all of respondents' mattresses are manufactured from old, used, discarded, and second-hand materials which are covered with a new covering.

Par. 5. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid acts and practices has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive retail dealers and wholesale dealers who purchase said products and a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said mattresses manufactured from old, used, and discarded materials are new mat... tresses manufactured from new and unused materials. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief the purchasing public is induced to, and does, purchase substantial quantities of respondents' products.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on March 28, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Sohn & Co., Inc., and Benjamin Sohn, Morris Sohn, and Isadore Sohn, individually and as officers and directors of Sohn & Co., Inc., charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of said complaint, the respondents herein filed an answer in which they in part admitted and in part denied the allegations of the complaint. Subsequent thereto, under date of June 18, 1940, respondents, with the approval of the Commission, withdrew their original answer and filed herein a substitute answer, admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in the said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts.

Thereafter, the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent Sohn & Co., Inc., is now and has been at all times mentioned herein a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois. Respondents Benjamin Sohn, Morris Sohn, and Isadore Sohn are individuals and are president, secretary, and treasurer, respectively, and directors of respondent Sohn & Co., Inc., and as such manage, control, and dominate its corporate affairs and activities. All of the respondents have acted in conjunction and cooperation with each other in carrying out the acts and practices, and methods hereinafter stated.
All have their offices and principal place of business at 1450 West Roosevelt Road, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondents are now, and have been for more than two years last past, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of mattresses and bedding. Respondents cause their said merchandise when sold to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to various purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. Respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a substantial course of trade in said merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, respondents have bought and still buy old, second-hand, used, and discarded cotton and other used materials. Such materials are, after being combed with a type of machine and reworked, then used by respondents in the manufacture of mattresses and bedding which are covered with new coverings and are sold by the respondents to wholesalers, retailers, and other purchasers who resell the same to the purchasing public.

Par. 3. Respondents' mattresses made from the aforesaid old, used, discarded, and second-hand materials, after being fitted with new coverings, as aforesaid, have the appearance of new mattresses, and said mattresses are sold by respondents to wholesalers, jobbers, and retail dealers without any marking or designation clearly and conspicuously stamped thereon or attached thereto to indicate to the purchasing public that said mattresses were in fact manufactured from old, previously used, discarded, and second-hand materials. Said mattresses are also resold by jobbers and wholesalers to retail dealers who sell them to the purchasing public without disclosing the fact that said mattresses are reconditioned and manufactured from old, used, discarded, and second-hand material which has been remanufactured and fitted with a new covering and so as to indicate that said mattresses are in fact composed in their entirety of new materials which have never been previously used.

Certain of the mattresses manufactured by respondents from old, used, discarded, and second-hand material do have labels with the terms “Made of previously used materials” stamped thereon, and in such instances where said labels bear these terms the marking is so illegible and inconspicuous that it cannot be read by the wholesale and retail dealers who buy respondents' product or by members of the purchasing public.

Par. 4. Through the use of the acts and practices as herein set forth, respondents have failed to disclose the kind and type of materials from which their products are manufactured. Respondents have placed in the hands of unscrupulous and uninformed persons a means and instrumentality whereby such persons have been and are enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing and consuming public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents' products are manufactured from new materials when in truth and in fact nearly all of respondents' mattresses are manufactured from old, used, discarded, and second-hand materials which are covered with a new covering.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid acts and practices has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive retail dealers and wholesale dealers who purchase said products and a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said mattresses manufactured from old, used, and discarded materials are new mattresses manufactured from new and unused materials. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief the purchasing public is induced to, and does, purchase substantial quantities of respondents' products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the substitute answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Sohn & Co., Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and the respondents, Benjamin Sohn, Morris Sohn, and Isadore Sohn, individually and as officers and directors of Sohn & Co., Inc., their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of mattresses in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:
1. Representing in any manner, or by any means or device, that mattresses which are composed in whole or in part of old, used, discarded, or second-hand materials are new mattresses or are made from new or unused materials.

2. Failing to permanently affix to mattresses made in whole or in part from old, used, discarded or second-hand materials, labels, or tags which clearly and conspicuously reveal that such mattresses are in fact composed of old, used, discarded, and second-hand materials, and which tags or labels cannot readily be removed, obliterated, obscured, or minimized.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

BLUE RIBBON CANDY COMPANY, INC., AMERICAN CANDY AND SALES COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4091. Complaint, Apr. 17, 1940—Decision, July 9, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of candy and in sale of certain assortments thereof which were so packed and assembled as to involve use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, when sold or distributed to consumers, and included, as illustrative, assortment of 60 bars of candy of uniform size and shape, together with push card for use in sale and distribution of said bars under a plan by which customer purchasers punching numbers ranging from one to three paid 1 cent, 2 cents, and 3 cents for said product, and purchasers punching number "0" paid nothing, and in furnishing various other push cards for use in the sale and distribution of its candy by means of game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, and similar to that above described and varying therefrom in detail only—

Sold such assortments, together with said push cards, to wholesalers, jobbers, and retailers, by whom, as direct or indirect purchasers thereof, they were exposed and sold to purchasing public in accordance with sales plan aforesaid, under which prices of bars in question were determined wholly by lot or chance, and involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure bars of candy at prices much less than normal retail prices thereof, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with sales plan above set forth, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the criminal laws and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said, or any method, involving a game of chance or sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy, and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons, attracted by said sales plan or method employed by it in sale and distribution of its candy and by element of chance involved therein, were thereby induced to buy and sell its said product in preference to candy of said competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods and with result, through use of such method and because of said game of chance of diverting unfairly trade in commerce to it from its competitors aforesaid who do not use same or equivalent methods:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr., for the Commission.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Blue Ribbon Candy Co., Inc., a corporation, also trading as American Candy and Sales Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Blue Ribbon Candy Co., Inc., also trading as American Candy and Sales Co., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Georgia, with its office and principal place of business located at 124 Tenth Street, NE., Atlanta, Ga. Respondent is now and for more than 6 months last past has been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products when sold to be transported from its principal place of business, in the city of Atlanta, Ga., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than Georgia and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 6 months last past a course of trade by respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment is composed of 60 bars of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a device commonly called a push card. The said push card has 60 partially perforated disks, on the face of which is printed the word "Push." Concealed within the said disks are numbers ranging from 0 to 3, inclusive. When the disks are pushed or separated from the card a number is disclosed. Purchasers punching numbers 1, 2, and 3 pay 1 cent, 2 cents, and 3 cents respectively. Purchasers punching number 0 pay nothing. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the disks are pushed or separated from the card. The prices of said bars of candy are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent furnishes, and has furnished, various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of its candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such cards are similar to the one herein described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said candy, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its candy and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure bars of candy at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its candy and in the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell the respondent's candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Findings

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on April 17, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Blue Ribbon Candy Co., Inc., a corporation, also trading as American Candy and Sales Co., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On June 18, 1940, the respondent filed its answer in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPh 1. Respondent, Blue Ribbon Candy Co., Inc., also trading as American Candy and Sales Co., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Georgia, with its office and principal place of business located at 124 Tenth Street, NE., Atlanta, Ga. Respondent is now and for more than 6 months last past has been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products when sold to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of Atlanta, Ga., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than Georgia and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 6 months last past a course of trade by respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment is composed of 60 bars of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a device commonly called a push card. The said push card has 60 partially perforated disks, on the face of which is printed the word "Push." Concealed within the said disks are numbers ranging from 0 to 3, inclusive. When the disks are pushed or separated from the card a number is disclosed. Purchasers punching numbers 1, 2, and 3 pay 1 cent, 2 cents, and 3 cents respectively. Purchasers punching number 0 pay nothing. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the disks are pushed or separated from the card. The prices of said bars of candy are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent furnishes, and has furnished, various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of its candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such cards are similar to the one herein described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who directly or indirectly purchase respondent's candy, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its candy and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure bars of candy at prices much less than the normal price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its candy and in the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent’s candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent’s competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Blue Ribbon Candy Co., Inc., a corporation, also trading as American Candy and Sales Co., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing candy or any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such candy or other merchandise to the general public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.
2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others candy or any merchandise, together with push or pull cards, punchboards or any other lottery devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing said candy or merchandise to the public.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing any merchandise to the public.

4. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of marble and granite tombstones and monuments, to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia, and in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of tombstones and monuments in commerce among the various States and in said District, and including many who sell and distribute like or similar products and do not misrepresent respective qualities thereof or matters pertaining thereto; in advertising his said products in catalogs having general circulation, and in circulars, price lists, and other advertising material distributed among prospective purchasers—

(a) Represented that his memorials would stand the ravages of time forever, that they were everlasting and forever durable, would last for all time, would never fade, stain, or tarnish and would always retain their original brightness, and that they were age enduring, facts being they would stain, tarnish, fade, and deteriorate, and would not retain their original brightness, and his said representations and implications as above set forth were false, misleading, and deceptive; and

(b) Represented that, through his "Gold Bond Guarantee," purchasers were assured of the everlasting quality and durability of his said products and the freedom thereof from fading, staining, or tarnishing, and that said "Gold Bond Guarantee" protected purchasers of such products if his claims and representations were not true and products did stain, tarnish, fade, and lose their original brightness and were not forever durable and everlasting, facts being said so-called "Gold Bond Guarantee" was not supported by any funds set aside by him or anyone else to assure fulfillment of the terms thereof, and it accordingly in no wise assured purchasers of everlasting quality and durability of said products or freedom thereof from fading, staining, or tarnishing, and did not in any wise protect purchasers of said products if his claims and representations were not true;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations were true, and with result, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, that substantial portion of purchasing public was induced to and did purchase his said products; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

1 Findings made as of date indicated are published as very slightly modified by Commission on October 11, 1940, through deleting few words theretofore included with other quoted matter in par. 3.
Complaint

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. B. G. Wilson for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Asa L. Wooten, an individual, trading as United States Marble and Granite Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Asa L. Wooten, is an individual trading as United States Marble and Granite Co., with his office and principal place of business located at Oneco, Fla. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of marble and granite tombstones and monuments in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Respondent causes his said products, when sold, to be shipped from his place of business in the State of Florida to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said tombstones and monuments in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, in substantial competition with other individuals, partnerships, firms, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of tombstones and monuments in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. To induce the purchase of his said products, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating false and misleading statements and representations with respect to said products. Such statements and representations are inserted in catalogs having a general circulation and in circulars, price lists, and other advertising material which are distributed among prospective purchasers. Among and typical of such false and misleading representations are the following:

Memorials that will stand the ravages of time.
Select white, gray or blue marble.
An everlasting memorial.
Forever durable.
World’s best genuine marble or granite.
Good for continuous wear.
To last for all time.
They will never fade but always retain their original brightness.
Age enduring.
These monuments will last for all time.
Quality cannot be excelled.
Gold Bond Guarantee.
The whole memorial is guaranteed to never stain nor tarnish.
Is one of the strongest guarantees ever given.

PAR. 4. By the use of the foregoing representations, together with other representations similar thereto not set out herein, the respondent represents that his memorials will stand the ravages of time forever; that they are everlasting and forever durable; that they are the world’s best genuine marble or granite monuments; that they will last for all time, will never fade, stain, or tarnish and will always retain their original brightness; and that said memorials are age enduring.
Respondent represents or implies that through his “Gold Bond Guarantee” purchasers are assured of the everlasting quality and durability of his said products and the freedom of such products from fading, staining, or tarnishing and that said “Gold Bond Guarantee” protects purchasers of such products if respondent’s claims and representations are not true and said products do stain, tarnish, fade, and lose their original brightness and are not forever durable and everlasting.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations and implications are false, misleading, and deceptive. In truth and in fact, respondent’s memorials will not stand the ravages of time forever; they are not everlasting or forever durable but they will stain, tarnish, fade, and deteriorate and will not retain their original brightness. Said memorials are not the world’s best genuine marble or granite monuments as there are many other marble or granite monuments on the market which are as good as, or better than, respondent’s said products. In truth and in fact, said so-called “Gold Bond Guarantee” in no wise assures purchasers of the everlasting quality and durability of said products or the freedom of such products from fading, staining, or tarnishing and does not in any wise protect purchasers of respondent’s said products if respondent’s claims and representations are not true because said so-called “Gold Bond Guarantee” is not supported by any fund set aside by the respondent or anyone else for the purpose of assuring fulfilment of the terms thereof.

Par. 6. There are among the competitors of respondent, as mentioned in paragraph 2 hereof, many who sell and distribute like or similar products who do not misrepresent the respective qualities of said products or matters pertaining thereto.

Par. 7. The use by the respondent of the false and misleading statements and representations referred to herein has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, a substantial portion of the purchasing public is induced to, and does, purchase respondent's said products. As a result thereof substantial injury has been done, and is being done, by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein set forth are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 21st day of May 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Asa L. Wooten, an individual, trading as United States Marble & Granite Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On the 6th day of June 1940, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Asa L. Wooten, is an individual trading as United States Marble and Granite Co. with his office and principal place of business located at Oneco, Fla. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of marble and granite tombstones and monuments in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Respondent causes his said products, when sold, to be shipped from his place of business in the State of Florida to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said tombstones and monuments in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, in substantial competition with other individuals, partnerships, firms, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of tombstones and monuments in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. To induce the purchase of his said products, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating false and misleading statements and representations with respect to said products. Such statements and representations are inserted in catalogs having a general circulation and in circulars, price lists, and other advertising material which are distributed among prospective purchasers. Among and typical of such false and misleading representations are the following:

Memorials that will stand the ravages of time.
An everlasting memorial.
Forever durable.
Good for continuous wear.
To last for all time.
They will never fade but always retain their original brightness.
Age enduring.
These monuments will last for all time.
Quality cannot be excelled.
Gold Bond Guarantee.
The whole memorial is guaranteed to never stain nor tarnish.
Is one of the strongest guarantees ever given.

Paragraph 4. By the use of the foregoing representations, together with other representations similar thereto not set out herein, the respondent represents that his memorials will stand the ravages of time forever; that they are everlasting and forever durable; that they will last for all time, will never fade, stain, or tarnish and will always retain their original brightness; and that said memorials are age enduring. Respondent represents or implies that through his "Gold Bond Guarantee" purchasers are assured of the everlasting quality and durability of his said products and the freedom of such products from fading, staining, or tarnishing and that said "Gold Bond Guarantee" protects purchasers of such products if respondent’s claims and representations are not true and said products do stain, tarnish, fade, and lose their original brightness and are not forever durable and everlasting.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations and implications are false, misleading, and deceptive. In truth and in fact, respondent’s memorials will not stand the ravages of time forever; they are not everlasting or forever durable but they will stain, tarnish, fade, and deteriorate and will not retain their original brightness. In truth and in fact, said so-called "Gold Bond Guarantee" in no wise assures purchasers of the everlasting quality and durability of said products or the freedom of such products from fading, staining, or tarnishing and does not in any wise protect purchasers of respondent’s said products if respondent’s claims and representations are not true because said so-called "Gold Bond Guarantee" is not supported by any fund set aside by the respondent or anyone else for the purpose of assuring fulfillment of the terms thereof.

PAR. 6. There are among the competitors of respondent, as mentioned in paragraph 2 hereof, many who sell and distribute like or similar products who do not misrepresent the respective qualities of said products or matters pertaining thereto.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the false and misleading statements and representations referred to herein has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and because of such erroneous and mistaken belief a substantial portion of the purchasing public is induced to, and does, purchase respondent’s said products. As a result thereof substantial injury has been done, and is being done, by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Asa L. Wooten, an individual, trading as United States Marble & Granite Co., or under any other trade name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of marble and granite tombstones and monuments in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or by implication:

1. That respondent's memorials will stand the ravages of time forever, or that they are everlasting or forever durable, or that they will never fade, stain, or tarnish.

2. That respondent's said marble and granite tombstones and monuments will always retain their original brightness or that said memorials are age enduring.

3. That respondent has posted a "Gold Bond Guarantee" assuring purchasers of the everlasting quality and durability of his said products and the freedom of such products from fading, staining, or tarnishing and that said "Gold Bond Guarantee" protects purchasers of such products if respondent's claims and representations are not true.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF
CECIL DWIGHT KITCHEN, TRADING AS THE REVA COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4158. Complaint, June 7, 1940—Decision, July 9, 1940

Where an individual engaged in manufacture of his “Reva” cosmetic preparation for hair and scalp and in sale and distribution thereof to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia; in advertisements of his said product, which he disseminated and caused to be disseminated through the mails and various other means in commerce, and otherwise, and including advertisements in newspapers and periodicals and circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, and which various advertisements were intended and likely to induce purchase of the said preparation—

(a) Represented that his said Reva product was not a hair dye but a preparation which substituted or replaced the pigment in hair and restored natural, youthlike color thereto, facts being, product in question was a lead and sulphur dye which, among other things, contained sulphur, lead acetate, and ammonia, forming, in combination, lead sulphide, and, applied to hair, dyed exterior of hair shaft, color thus produced was artificial, and it would not supply, substitute, or replace natural pigment in the hair nor restore natural or youthlike color thereto; and

(b) Represented that said product stimulated growth of hair and that it constituted a cure or remedy for dandruff, scalp eczema, or falling hair and a competent and effective treatment for such conditions and was safe and harmless for use in treatment of hair and scalp disorders, facts being, it would not stimulate growth of hair, was not a cure or remedy for said various conditions, and had no therapeutic value in treatment thereof in excess of affording temporary relief of itching in some instances, and was not safe or harmless, because use thereof might cause injury, in that application to skin or scalp where abrasions were present might cause absorption of lead into the system;

With capacity and tendency to and effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations in advertisements were true, and to induce portion of such public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase his cosmetic product aforesaid:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Robert Mathis, Jr., for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Cecil Dwight-
Kitchen, an individual trading as The Reva Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Cecil Dwight Kitchen, is an individual trading as The Reva Co., and has his office and principal place of business at 4234 Lincoln Avenue in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

Par. 2. The respondent is now and has been for several years last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing a cosmetic preparation for the hair and scalp designated "Reva." Respondent causes said preparation, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said preparation in commerce among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said products by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce directly or indirectly, the purchase of said products; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said products by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce directly or indirectly the purchase of his said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature are the following:

Par. 4. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations and others of similar import and meaning not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents that his preparation “Reva” is not a hair dye, but instead that it substitutes or replaces the pigment in hair necessary to give it color, stimulates the growth of hair, and will restore natural youthlike color to the hair; and that the use of said preparation will produce no harmful or injurious effects. In the same manner, respondent represents that his preparation “Reva” is a cure or remedy for dandruff, scalp eczema, and falling hair, and that it constitutes a competent and effective treatment for such conditions.

Par. 5. The aforesaid statements and representations used by the respondent, as hereinabove described, are grossly misleading, exaggerated, and untrue. In truth and in fact, respondent’s preparation “Reva” is a lead sulphur dye, which contains, among other ingredients, sulphur, lead acetate, and ammonia, which in combination form lead sulphide. When applied to the hair, this preparation dyes the exterior of the hair shaft, and the color produced by its use is that of an artificial dye. This preparation will not supply, substitute, or replace natural pigment to the hair, and will not restore natural or youthlike color to the hair or stimulate the growth of the hair. Respondent’s preparation is not a cure or remedy for dandruff, scalp eczema, or falling hair, and has no therapeutic value in the treatment of such conditions in excess of affording temporary relief from itching in some instances. Respondent’s preparation is not safe or harmless because its use may cause injury in that the application of this preparation to the skin or scalp where abrasions are present might cause absorption of lead into the system.

Findings

Findings disseminated as aforesaid has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations and advertisements are true, and to induce a portion of the purchasing public because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase respondent's cosmetic products.

Par. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 7th day of June 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Cecil Dwight Kitchen, an individual trading as The Reva Co., charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Thereafter, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts. The proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this, its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

Findings as to the Facts

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Cecil Dwight Kitchen, is an individual trading as The Reva Co., and has his office and principal place of business at 4234 Lincoln Avenue in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

Par. 2. The respondent is now, and has been for several years last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing a cosmetic preparation for the hair and scalp designated "Reva." Respondent causes said preparation, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said preparation in commerce among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Findings

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce directly or indirectly, the purchase of said product; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product by various means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature are the following:

PAR. 4. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations and others of similar import and meaning not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents that his preparation "Reva" is not a hair dye; that said preparation substitutes or replaces the pigment in hair and restores natural youthlike color to hair; that said preparation stimulates the growth of hair; and that said preparation is safe and harmless for use in the treatment of hair and scalp disorders. In the same manner, respondent represents that the preparation "Reva" is a cure or remedy for dandruff, scalp eczema, and falling hair, and that such preparation constitutes a competent and effective treatment for such conditions.

Par. 5. The aforesaid statements and representations used by the respondent, as hereinabove described, are grossly misleading, exaggerated, and untrue. Respondent's preparation is not a cure or remedy for dandruff, scalp eczema, or falling hair, and has no therapeutic value in the treatment of such conditions in excess of affording temporary relief from itching in some instances. Respondent's preparation is not safe or harmless because its use may cause injury in that the application of this preparation to the skin or scalp where abrasions are present might cause absorption of lead into the system.

Par. 6. The use by respondent of the foregoing false and deceptive statements and representations with respect to his cosmetic preparation disseminated as aforesaid has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations and advertisements are true, and to induce a portion of the purchasing public because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase respondent's cosmetic product.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Cecil Dwight Kitchen, individually and trading as The Reva Co., or trading under any other name or names, his agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of his cosmetic preparation designated as "Reva" or any other cosmetic preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent directly or through inference:
   (a) That respondent's preparation is not a dye or is anything other than a dye.
   (b) That respondent's preparation will supply a substitute for or replace natural pigment or color in the hair.
   (c) That respondent's preparation will restore natural or youthlike color to the hair.
   (d) That respondent's preparation will have any effect in stimulating the growth of hair.
   (e) That respondent's preparation is a cure or remedy for dandruff, scalp eczema, or falling hair, or that it has any therapeutic value in the treatment thereof in excess of affording temporary relief from the symptoms of itching in some instances.
   (f) That respondent's preparation is a safe or harmless preparation for use in the treatment of hair or scalp disorders.

2. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said cosmetic preparation in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements contain any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

JEFFERSON R. BREWSTER, TRADING AS BREWSTER LABORATORIES AND DR. REECE BREWSTER

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3566. Complaint, Aug. 30, 1938—Decision, July 11, 1940

Where an individual engaged in manufacture of various medicinal preparations which he designated as his “Brewster's G-D” and, similarly, as his “T-Z,” “Tonic,” “Throat Wash,” “Thoax-Eaz,” “Sinine,” “Pain Kill,” “Ready Relief,” and “Pile Ointment,” and of a combination of four preparations referred to above as “G-D,” “T-Z,” “Tonic,” and “Throat Wash,” and also of other preparations, and in sale and distribution of his said various products from his Tennessee place of business to purchasers in Kentucky, North and South Carolina, Arkansas, Texas, and other States, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution among the various States of medicinal preparations for treatment of same ailments as those for which his said products were recommended; in advertising same in circulars distributed among prospective purchasers in several States—

(a) Represented, directly and by inference, that his said “G-D” was a remedy for constipation and for running sores, a means of relieving pain in any part of the body, and, in combination with the “Tonic” hereinafter mentioned, a preventive of tuberculosis, and that his “T-Z” would prevent and alleviate coughing spells, would cure hemorrhages, keep the nerves quiet, and women's menstruation regular;

(b) Represented that his said “Tonic” and “Throat Wash,” respectively, would make the blood circulate properly if there was any disease or other condition of the circulatory system existing, would remedy stomach conditions and keep stomach in good condition, and would produce a good appetite, and constituted a means of preventing colds and would relieve tonsillitis and other throat troubles;

(c) Represented that his “Thoax-Eaz” and “Sinine,” respectively, constituted a means of relieving and curing croup, diphtheria, whooping cough, common cough, and scarlet fever and of preventing whooping cough or diphtheria in small and delicate children, and treatment and remedy for sinus, mastoid, antrum and nose and ear troubles;

(d) Represented that his “Pain Kill” and “Ready Relief” constituted, respectively, a competent and effective germicide and treatment for rheumatism, neuritis, and neuralgia, and a cure for pneumonia, slow fever, and typhoid fever, and that his “Pile Ointment” was a cure for hemorrhoids; and

(e) Represented that a combination of the four preparations “G-D,” “T-Z,” “Tonic,” and “Throat Wash” constituted a cure for tuberculosis of the lungs or bone and for asthma, and that he had other preparations which constituted cures for kidney trouble, cancer, female trouble, measles, stomach trouble, gallstones, gout, sciatica, head troubles, fistula troubles, piles, and nerve disorders;
Facts being that all of his said preparations were combinations in varying proportions of turpentine, kerosene, and edible oil, with traces of water, iron salts, lodides, ammonia, iodine, cresols, and oil of cinnamon, none of said preparations, whether used singly or in combination with others, constituted a cure or remedy or competent or effective treatment for any of the ailments, diseases, or conditions of the human body for which they were recommended by him, nor did said preparations, or any of them, constitute preventives of whooping cough or diphtheria, or constitute competent or effective germicides, and they were wholly without therapeutic value; and

(1) Represented that he owned or operated a laboratory in connection with his business, and that his preparations were compounded and tested therein, through such typical representations as "Prepared and guaranteed by Brewster Laboratories" and "Manufactured and guaranteed by Brewster Laboratories," facts being he did not own or operate, and had not at any time owned or operated, a laboratory, but mixed his preparations in his own home, and his equipment consisted only of jugs and bottles, a funnel, and certain measuring cans or vessels;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations were true, and into purchase of substantial quantities of his said preparations, and with result that trade was diverted unfairly to him from his competitors; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiner.

Mr. Randolph W. Branch and Mr. DeWitt T. Puckett for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Jefferson R. Brewster, an individual, trading and doing business in his own name, and also under the names of "Brewster Laboratories" and "Dr. Reece Brewster," hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The said respondent, Jefferson R. Brewster, is an individual trading and doing business under his own name and also under the names of "Brewster Laboratories" and "Dr. Reece Brewster," with his principal place of business at 2609 Latimer Avenue, in the city of Dallas, State of Texas, to which it has recently been moved from 903 Lischey Avenue, in the city of Nashville, State of Tennessee.
Complaint 31 F. T. C.

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling certain medicinal preparations, intended for use in the relief, remedy, and treatment of or protection against certain diseases, symptoms, and conditions, as follows:

1. Brewster's G-D
2. Brewster's T-Z
3. Brewster's Tonic
4. Brewster's Throat Wash
5. Brewster's Thoax-Eaz, also known as Brewster's Throat Eaz
6. Brewster's Sinine
7. Brewster's Pain Kill
8. Brewster's Ready Relief
9. Brewster's Pyle Ointment
10. A combination of the four preparations referred to above as G-D, T-Z, Tonic, and Throat Wash
11. Other preparations.

Respondent causes and has caused the said preparations, when sold, to be transported from the place where his business is carried on in the State of Tennessee or the State of Texas, to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the States of Tennessee or Texas and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent is now, and has been for more than 3 years last past, in competition with other individuals and with partnerships, firms, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of various drugs and medicinal preparations intended for use and application in the relief, remedy, and treatment of the various diseases, symptoms, and conditions hereinafter mentioned, and the building up of bodily resistance against the ravages thereof and the alleviation of the pains incident thereto.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of his said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his said preparations, the respondent has caused circulars containing certain claims with respect to the therapeutic value of the said preparations to be distributed between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Included among and typical of such claims are the following:

(With respect to "Brewster's G-D.")

There is practically no danger of one contracting it (tuberculosis) if he will observe the following rules: Take Brewster's liver tonic regularly and take two treatments of Brewster's G-D each week while you are being constantly exposed to the disease.
Complaint

For constipation rub G-D on the bowels three times a day.
If you have a pain anywhere about your body, rub G-D on and get relief.
Directions for treatment of cancer and tuberculosis of the bone or any kind of sore on the body no matter how long it has been running.
Directions for using Brewster's G-D for asthma.
Kills stray germs.

(With respect to "Brewster's T-Z.")

If you have a hemorrhage or symptoms of one, just begin rubbing T-Z right where the blood is coming from or feels like it might come and rub on gently until the symptoms disappear. However, it is not often that one of our patients have a hemorrhage after starting our treatment.
Rub T-Z on the spine all the way up and down every night. It will keep your nerves quiet so that you can sleep.
If patient is a woman * * * rub T-Z * * *. That will keep her periods regular * * *.

(With respect to "Brewster’s Tonic.")

Give Brewster's Liver Tonic as directed; it will keep the blood circulating, the stomach in good condition, and the appetite good.

(With respect to "Brewster’s Throat Wash.")

If—taking cold, gargle with Throat Wash as directed for tonsil trouble. One or two gargles will stop the cold.

(With respect to "Brewster's Throat Eaz" or "Brewster’s Thoax Eaz.")

If you notice at any time of day or night that you are taking cold, gargle the throat with Throat Eaz as directed for tonsil trouble.
It will keep off colds. As soon as you notice that your throat is getting sore or that you are taking cold, gargle one time. Will stop if you do as directed. Also relieves tonsillitis and other throat trouble.
Rub * * * on the spine all the way up and down every night. It will keep your nerves quiet so that you can sleep.
If patient is a woman * * * she will rub Throat-Eaz on both sides * * *. That will keep periods regular.
A quick and sure relief for croup, diphtheria, whooping cough, scarlet fever, or cough from colds.
Brewster’s Thoax-Eaz will absolutely remove the cause of the cough and if used according to directions will cure your cold.
Relieves whooping cough and coughs from colds, croup, and diphtheria as soon as applied.
If you have a small or delicate child that you want to keep from taking whooping cough or if you have one exposed to diphtheria, rub their throats with Thoax-Eaz six nights after such exposure. There will be no danger of them contracting either.

(With respect to “Brewster’s Sinine.”)

As treatment for sinus, mastoid, anthrum, nose or ear trouble.

(With respect to “Brewster’s Pain Kill.”)

It stops rheumatic and other body pains.
For Neuralgia.
For Rheumatism and Neuritis.
(With respect to "Brewster's Ready Relief.")

It is unnecessary to be over three or four days in getting a patient over an attack of pneumonia.
Not over a week with typhoid or slow fever.

(With respect to the treatment of tuberculosis of the bone or lungs and asthma by the combined use of the four preparations mentioned in paragraph 2 hereof.)

We were * * * restoring poor tuberculosis sufferers back to health. We do it in a few months.
The one right medicine would have healed every tuberculosis patient that has ever fallen.
We are successfully treating tuberculosis of all kinds.
The patient, if not altogether relieved, will show such improvement that they will be anxious to order the second treatment.

(With respect to the other preparations.)

Don't allow Stomach Trouble, Kidney Trouble, Female Trouble, After Effect of Flu, Fever, Whooping Cough, Measles, or any other trouble that is calculated to pull down your power of resisting disease.—We have a treatment for most all of the diseases mentioned above.

Brewster's guaranteed treatment for goiter.
We also treat under a guarantee—Sciatica, mastoid, ear and head troubles; fistula and pile troubles, stomach and nerve troubles, gallstone and many other bodily ills.

By the said statements and others of like import and effect in his said circulars, respondent directly and by inference represents:

That "Brewster's G-D" is a protection and preventative against tuberculosis, a remedy for constipation, a remedy for asthma, a means of relieving pain in any part of the body, a germicide, and, in combination with the "Tonic" hereinafter mentioned, a remedy for cancer or any sore on the body.

That "Brewster's T-Z" is a means of preventing or alleviating coughing spells and tubercular hemorrhages, keeping the nerves quiet, and women's menstruation regular.

That "Brewster's Tonic" is a means of keeping the blood circulating, the stomach in good condition, and the appetite good.

That "Brewster's Throat Wash" is a means of preventing colds.
That "Brewster's Throat Eaz" is a preventive of, and a remedy for, colds, and a means of relieving coughing spells, tonsilitis, and other throat troubles, keeping the nerves quiet, and women's menstruation regular; a sure and quick relief and cure for croup, diphtheria, whooping cough, common cough, and scarlet fever, and a means of preventing whooping cough or diphtheria in small and delicate children.

That "Brewster's Sinine" is a treatment for sinus, mastoid, antrum, nose, or ear trouble.
That "Brewster's Pain Kill" is a treatment for rheumatism, neuritis, neuralgia, a means of stopping rheumatic and other body pains, and a cure for pneumonia and diphtheria.

That "Brewster's Ready Relief" is a remedy for head, chest, or lung colds, pneumonia, flu, typhoid fever, and childbed fever, and a means of warding off after effects of flu, pneumonia, or deep colds.

That "Brewster's Pyle Ointment" is of value for the relief and cure of hemorrhoids.

That a combination of the four preparations referred to above as "G-D," "Tonic," and "Throat Wash" together constitute a complete course of treatment for the cure of relief of tuberculosis of lungs or bone.

That he has other preparations which constitute treatments for kidney trouble, female trouble, measles, stomach trouble, gall stones, and goiter.

Par. 5. In addition to the claims set forth in paragraph 4, the respondent, in like manner, has caused certain claims to be made as to his business and professional status.

Included among and typical of such claims are the following:

- Prepared and guaranteed by Brewster Laboratories.
- Manufactured and guaranteed by Brewster Laboratories.
- Dr. Reece Brewster.

By the said statements, and others of like import and significance, respondent directly and by inference represents that the said preparations are compounded or manufactured in "laboratories," within the common and usual meaning of the word when used in connection with the preparation of drugs and medicines, i. e., place appropriately equipped for, and devoted to, experimental study in medical or pharmaceutical science, or the application of medical or pharmaceutical principles in the testing and analysis, or in the preparation of drugs and medicines, by persons skilled in those arts, and that the respondent is a physician entitled to use the designation or style of "Doctor" or "Dr."

Par. 6. The representations made by respondent directly or by inference, with respect to the said medicinal preparations and to the curative or therapeutic value thereof, and the results to be obtained from the use thereof, are false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, "Brewster's G-D" will not, singly or in combination with other preparations of the respondent, constitute either a competent remedy or an adequate treatment for tuberculosis of the lungs or bone, cancer, asthma, or running sores. It will neither relieve constipation, nor afford protection against tuberculosis. It will not relieve pain and will not kill germs. "Brewster's T-Z" will not allay or avert coughing spells or tubercular hemorrhages, and will neither quiet the nerves nor keep women’s periods regular. “Brewster’s Tonic” has no tonic qualities nor does it affect the circulation of the blood. “Brewster’s Throat-Eaz” (or “Thoax Eaz”) is not a preventative of or a remedy for colds and does not constitute an effective treatment for any diseased condition of the throat, will not quiet the nerves and will not keep women’s periods regular, will not relieve or cure croup, diphtheria, whooping cough, or scarlet fever, nor protect small or delicate children from contracting whooping cough or diphtheria. “Brewster’s Sinine” is of no value in the treatment of sinus, mastoid, antrum, nose, or ear trouble. “Brewster’s Pain Kill” is not a competent treatment or adequate remedy for rheumatism, neuritis, neuralgia, pneumonia, or diphtheria nor will it stop rheumatic and other bodily pain. “Brewster’s Ready Relief” is not a competent remedy or adequate treatment for colds, pneumonia, flu, typhoid fever, or childbed fever, nor will it ward off the after effects of any of them. “Brewster’s Pyle Ointment” is of no value in the treatment of piles. None of the said preparations, singly or in conjunction, constitute a competent remedy or adequate treatment for kidney trouble, female trouble, measles, stomach trouble, gallstones, or goiter.

The true facts are that the said preparations named herein consist essentially of mixtures of turpentine, kerosene, and edible oil in varying proportions. None of them are of value in the relief, remedy, and treatment of or protection against the diseases, symptoms, or conditions as represented by respondent. In addition, the preparations known as “G-D,” “T-Z,” and “Throat Wash” which are offered in combination with the “Tonic” as a cure for tuberculosis, contain iodides which have the property of breaking down the walled-off tubercular lesions.

Par. 7. The representations made by respondent directly or by inference with respect to his business and professional status are false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the said preparations are not prepared or manufactured in laboratories within the common and usual conception of the word when used in connection with drugs and medical preparations; respondent has had no medical training or laboratory experience, and is not qualified under the laws of the State of Tennessee or Texas as a person entitled to practice medicine.

Par. 8. There are among the competitors of respondent, many who are engaged in the business of selling and distributing drugs and medicinal preparations intended for use in the relief, remedy, and treatment of the diseases, symptoms, and conditions hereinbefore set forth, and the building up of bodily resistance against the ravages thereof and the alleviation of the pains incident thereto, who do not in any way misrepresent the therapeutic value of their said drugs and medicinal preparations or their respective business status.

Par. 9. Each and all of the foregoing false and misleading representations and implications made by respondent, as hereinabove set out, were and are calculated to, and have had, and now have a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the false and erroneous belief that the said representations and implications are true. As a direct result of such false and erroneous belief a number of the consuming public have purchased substantial amounts of respondent's preparations, with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from respondent's competitors as aforesaid who do not resort to such false and deceptive representations. As a consequence thereof injury has been done, and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 10. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 30th day of August 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Jefferson R. Brewster, an individual trading as the Brewster Laboratories and as Dr. Reece Brewster, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, the respondent having failed to file any answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by DeWitt T. Puckett, attorney for the Commission, before John J. Keenan, examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. The respondent appeared in person at said hearing, but offered no evidence in opposition to said complaint. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, testimony, and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed any brief and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having duly considered the matter and now being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Jefferson R. Brewster, of 1908 Joe Johnson Avenue, Nashville, Tenn., is an individual trading at this address under his own name and also under the name Brewster Laboratories.

Par. 2. Respondent is engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing various medicinal preparations designated by him as—

1. Brewster's G-D
2. Brewster's T-Z
3. Brewster's Tonic
4. Brewster's Throat Wash
5. Brewster's Thoax-Eaz
6. Brewster's Sinine
7. Brewster's Pain Kill
8. Brewster's Ready Relief
9. Brewster's Pile Ointment
10. A combination of the four preparations referred to above as G-D, T-Z, Tonic, and Throat Wash.
11. Other preparations.

Par. 3. Respondent causes, and has caused, his said preparations, when sold, to be shipped from his place of business in Tennessee to purchasers thereof located in the States of Kentucky, North and South Carolina, Arkansas, Texas, and other States of the United States. Respondent maintains and has maintained a course of trade in his products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 4. The respondent is in substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution among and between the various States of the United States of medicinal preparations designed for the treatment of the same ailments of the human body as those for which the respondent's preparations are recommended.

Par. 5. The respondent, to promote the sale of his preparations, has caused circulars containing representations and claims with respect to his products to be distributed among prospective purchasers located in several States of the United States.
Among and typical of the representations and claims contained in said circulars are the following:

(With respect to "Brewster's G-D."

There is practically no danger of one contracting it (tuberculosis) if he will observe the following rules: Take Brewster's liver tonic regularly and take two treatments of Brewster's G-D each week while you are being constantly exposed to the disease.

For constipation rub G-D on the bowels three times a day.

If you have a pain anywhere about your body, rub G-D on and get relief.

* * * many large running sores, * * * Brewster's G-D cured her in 80 days.

(With respect to "Brewster's T-Z."

If you have a hemorrhage or symptoms of one, just begin rubbing T-Z right where the blood is coming from or feels like it might come and rub on gently until the symptoms disappear. However, it is not often that one of our patients have a hemorrhage after starting our treatment.

Rub T-Z on spine all the way up and down every night. It will keep your nerves quiet so that you can sleep.

If patient is a woman * * * rub T-Z * * *. That will keep periods regular * * *.

(With respect to "Brewster's Tonic."

Give Brewster's Liver Tonic as directed; it will keep the blood circulating, the stomach in good condition, and the appetite good.

(With respect to "Brewster's Throat Wash."

It will keep off cold. As soon as you notice that your throat is getting sore or that you are taking cold, gargle one time. Will stop if you do as directed. Also relieves tonsillitis and other throat troubles.

(With respect to "Brewster's Thoax-Eaz."

A quick and sure relief for croup, diphtheria, whooping cough, scarlet fever, or cough from colds.

Brewster's Thoax-Eaz will absolutely remove the cause of the cough and if used according to directions will cure your child.

Relieves whooping cough and coughs from colds, croup, and diphtheria as soon as applied.

If you have a small or delicate child that you want to keep from taking whooping cough or if you have one exposed to diphtheria, rub their throats with Thoax-Eaz six nights after such exposure. There will be no danger of them contracting either.

(With respect to "Brewster's Sinine."

For sinus, mastoid, antrum, nose, and ear troubles.

(With respect to "Brewster's Pain Kill."

For Neuralgia.

For rheumatism and neuritis. It stops the pain.

You will catch the stray germs * * *.
(With respect to "Brewster's Ready Relief.")

It is unnecessary to be over three or four days in getting a patient over an attack of pneumonia.

Not over a week with typhoid or slow fever.

(With respect to the treatment of tuberculosis of the bone or lungs and asthma by the combined use of the four preparations mentioned in paragraph 2 hereof.)

We were * * * restoring poor tuberculosis sufferers back to health. We do it in a few months.

The one right medicine would have healed every tuberculosis patient that has ever fallen.

Brewster's Treatment for T. B. of Lung and Bone and Asthma.

We are successfully treating tuberculosis of all kinds.

The patient, if not altogether relieved, will show such improvement that they will be anxious to order the second treatment.

(With respect to the other preparations.)

Don't allow Stomach Trouble, Kidney Trouble, Female Trouble, After Effect of Flu, Fever, Whooping Cough, Measles, or any other trouble, that is calculated to pull down your power of resisting disease—protect yourself against cancer—. We have a treatment for most all of the diseases mentioned above.

Brewster's guaranteed treatment for goiter.

We also treat under a guarantee—Sciatica, mastoid, ear and head troubles; fistula and pile troubles, stomach and nerve troubles, gallstones and many other bodily ills.

Par. 6. By the use of said statements and representations, and others of like import and effect in the said circulars, respondent, directly and by inference, represents that his preparations possess remedial and curative qualities; that "Brewster's G-D" is a remedy for constipation, and for running sores, a means of relieving pain in any part of the body; and, in combination with the "Tonic" hereinafter mentioned, a preventive of tuberculosis; that "Brewster's T-Z" will prevent and alleviate coughing spells, will cure hemorrhages, keep the nerves quiet, and women's menstruation regular; that "Brewster's Tonic" will make the blood circulate properly if there is any disease or other condition of the circulatory system existing, will remedy stomach conditions and keep the stomach in good condition, and will produce a good appetite; that "Brewster's Throat Wash" is a means of preventing colds, and will relieve tonsilitis and other throat troubles; that "Brewster's Thoax-Eaz" is a means of relieving and curing croup, diphtheria, whooping cough, common cough, and scarlet fever, and a means also of preventing whooping cough or diphtheria in small and delicate children; that "Brewster's Sinine" is a treatment and remedy for sinus, mastoid, antrum, and nose and ear troubles; that "Brewster's Pain Kill" is a competent and effective germicide and a competent and effective treatment for rheumatism, neuritis, and neuralgia; that "Brewster's Ready Relief" is a cure for pneumonia, slow fever, and typhoid fever; that "Brewster's Pile Ointment" is a cure for hemorrhoids; that a combination of the four preparations "G-D," "T-Z," "Tonic" and "Throat Wash" constitutes a cure for tuberculosis of the lungs or bone and for asthma; that respondent has other preparations which constitute cures for kidney trouble, cancer, female trouble, measles, stomach trouble, gallstones, goiter, sciatica, head troubles, fistula troubles, piles, and nerve disorders.

PAR. 7. The Commission finds that all of the respondent's preparations are combinations in varying proportions of turpentine, kerosene, and edible oil, with traces of water, iron salts, iodides, ammonia, iodine, cresols, and oil of cinnamon. None of the preparations, whether used singly or in combination with others, constitute a cure or remedy or a competent or effective treatment for any of the ailments, diseases, or conditions of the human body for which they are recommended by the respondent. Nor do said preparations or any of them constitute preventives of whooping cough or diphtheria, or constitute competent or effective germicides. The preparations are wholly without therapeutic value.

PAR. 8. In addition to the representations made by the respondent with respect to his preparations as herein set forth, the respondent has also made in his said advertising material certain representations with respect to his business status.

Among and typical of such representations are the following:

Prepared and guaranteed by Brewster Laboratories.
Manufactured and guaranteed by Brewster Laboratories.

By the use of said statements and representations and others of like import, the respondent represents that he owns or operates a laboratory in connection with his business, and that his said preparations are compounded and tested in such laboratory.

The Commission finds that the respondent does not now own or operate, nor has he at any time owned or operated, a laboratory. Respondent mixes his preparations in his own home, and his equipment consists only of jugs and bottles, a funnel, and certain measuring cans or vessels.

PAR. 9. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's preparations. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from his competitors, and in consequence thereof substantial injury has been done and is being done by the respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Jefferson R. Brewster, individually and trading as Brewster's Laboratories, or trading under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of his medicinal preparations designated "Brewster's G-D," "Brewster's T-Z," "Brewster's Tonic," "Brewster's Throat Wash," "Brewster's Thoax-Eaz," "Brewster's Sinine," "Brewster's Pain Kill," "Brewster's Ready Relief," and "Brewster's Pile Ointment," or any other preparations composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other names, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that said preparations, or any of them, or any combination of two or more of them, are cures or remedies for, or possess any therapeutic value in the treatment of, constipation, running sores, pains in the body, tuberculosis, coughing spells, hemorrhages, nervousness, irregular menstruation, disorders of the circula-ory system, stomach disorders, lack of appetite, colds, tonsilitis, throat troubles, croup, diphtheria, whooping cough, common coughs, scarlet fever, sinus disorders, mastoid disorders, nose troubles, an­ trum, ear troubles, rheumatism, neuritis, neuralgia, pneumonia, slow fever, typhoid fever, hemorrhoids, asthma, kidney trouble, cancer, female troubles, measles, gallstones, goiter, sciatica, head troubles, fistula troubles, piles, or nerve disorders.

2. Representing that any of said preparations constitute preventives of whooping cough or diphtheria.

3. Representing that any of said preparations constitute compotent or effective germicides.

4. Using the word “Laboratories” or any other word of similar import or meaning in his trade name, or otherwise representing that he owns or operates a laboratory.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon him of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

SAN PEDRO FISH EXCHANGE, SEAFOOD BROKERAGE, INC., SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA WHOLESALE FISH DEALERS ASSOCIATION AND THE RESPECTIVE OFFICERS, ETC., OF SAID ASSOCIATIONS AND CORPORATION, AND LOS ANGELES FISH EXCHANGE, M. N. BLUMENTHAL AND SOUTHERN SEA PRODUCTS BROKERAGE CORPORATION, AND OFFICERS, DIRECTORS AND STOCKHOLDERS THEREOF

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914, AND OF SUBSEC. (c) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Where distributors or wholesale fish dealers who (1) were engaged in purchasing, selling, and distributing fish and sea products from their respective places of business on the Municipal Wharf in San Pedro, Calif., 20 miles from city proper in metropolitan Los Angeles, and principal fresh fish market in southern California, through which pass most of fish caught locally and marketed in commerce, (2) purchased, until recently, when situation was affected by demands and activities of one of unions of fishermen who had brought fish to said point, entire supply of fish caught locally and moving across San Pedro wharf, and part of which was shipped to customers in States lying east and northeast of southern California and to dealers in San Francisco and other places in State, (3) handled, prior to unaccommodated price demand of one of fishermen's unions, through their Fish Exchange, the entire commercial supply of fresh fish caught locally and coming to said point, (4) bought fish and sea products originating elsewhere from shippers, and usually through their Seafood Brokerage concern, and (5) sold fresh fish moving across said wharf to wholesalers in Los Angeles and other California points, to retailers in states outside of California and those within said State, and to stock wagons and peddlers operating in Los Angeles area—

(a) Entered into an understanding and agreement, as members of their said San Pedro Fish Exchange association, organized and composed of all wholesale fish and sea food dealers at said point, to effect that each would observe prices fixed by price committee of Exchange, and that each should pay to Exchange, as liquidated damages for all fish sold other than in accordance with uniform price quotation of executive committee thereof, 5 cents per pound for entire shipment wherein any item thereof was so sold in violation of such quotations, and with minimum penalty of $5; and

Where aforesaid unincorporated association, organized in December 1936, under laws of said State, as San Pedro Fish Exchange, with principal office and place of business at said point, composed as aforesaid, and to which no new members, under agreement and articles of association limiting such members to those receiving two-thirds favorable vote and paying initiation fee of $5,000, had been admitted since organization, and executive committee of which, under such agreement, was to keep all members posted "upon price conditions, necessary overhead expense * * * for the purpose of giving the members accurate information as to the margin of profit they should have so that the members may be better enabled to proceed to some degree of uniformity," and with all members agreeing thereunder "that they shall accept the advice given them by the executive committee and conduct their respective businesses accordingly"—

(b) Issued weekly price lists which (1) showed buying prices for various varieties of fish and sea food, and selling prices therefor, including wholesale, stock wagon, shipping, and peddling prices, with understanding among members that such prices would be adhered to as a minimum, and (2) included selling prices not only for fish caught locally coming over San Pedro wharf, but also for fish and shell food shipped in from northern California and points outside, with selling based on buying prices; and

Where an association, members of which were distributor or wholesale fish dealers engaged in purchasing, selling, and distributing fish and sea food products from their respective places of business in Los Angeles, and which, (1) under same Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers' Association, embraced practically all the wholesalers in said city, whose business consisted in selling fish and sea products at wholesale in Los Angeles area principally, and in supplying, also, customers in States to north and northeast of southern California and in other parts of State, and who (a) purchased local fish from San Pedro dealers, and (b) from market set up by one of fishermen's union following price disagreement with San Pedro dealers, and (c) from other southern California markets, and who (d) obtained other fish and sea food from shippers located in other parts of the United States and in foreign countries through purchase through their Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, as below more particularly referred to, or through other brokers; and which (2) succeeded, in spring of 1937, to similar association formed by Los Angeles fish wholesalers in preceding October, and used somewhat same policies as those of latter, activities or policies of which had included limitation of broker members' activities to handling sea products on brokerage basis only, discussions relative to activities of certain firms doing combined wholesale and retail business, handling of trade practice matters with dealers in San Pedro and other California points and in Seattle, employment of investigator relative to violation of its rules and regulations, establishment of price committee and fixing of selling prices, expulsion of member for price cutting, and attempts to prevent price cutting by retailers and solicitation by one member of another's accounts—

(c) Issued weekly minimum selling prices on all varieties of sea food handled by its members, and consisting of "trade" or prices to retailer and "stock wagon" prices, which various prices, as thus published, but with no penalty imposed by association for nonconformance, were, in the main, accepted and adhered to by association members; and

Where said San Pedro dealers, acting with and through their Seafood Brokerage, Inc., purchasing and brokerage agency, stock of which they owned and controlled, and with and through its manager—

(d) Entered into a combination and agreement to eliminate price competition in sale of Mexican sea bass in market concerned, through series of transactions under which, with money raised on note of said dealers, contract was secured with Mexican cooperatives of fishermen through loan of money thereto and offer of more favorable terms than those under consideration, and under which contract and outlet, as assisted by Mexican government in interest of stabilizing sea bass industry in behalf of Mexican fishermen, control of at least 95 percent of all said choice fish sold to trade in southern California territory, on basis of minimum contract price, and with selling price from day to day dependent upon price dealers were willing to pay and figure asked by cooperatives' representative, was secured by aforesaid individual, manager of said brokerage and purchasing agency, in its behalf and interest and in that of said San Pedro dealers, its owners, and under which supply of said bass was allotted by such individual to wholesalers in Los Angeles, San Pedro, or Long Beach, or to any buyer, according to needs and conditions which said individual considered to be fair and equitable; and

Where Los Angeles dealers here involved, members of aforesaid Southern California Association—

(e) Made use of their Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, purchasing and brokerage agency, stock of which they owned and controlled, to supersede arrangements theretofore made under which they designated as their sole and exclusive purchasing agent and broker, for period of 5 years, corporation formed by their predecessor association under designation Los Angeles Fish Exchange, for use, in various ways, of said association; and

Where said Los Angeles and San Pedro dealers herein concerned—

(f) Agreed on plan to employ as broker to purchase all their supplies except local fish bought at San Pedro wharf, one Blumenthal, by whom letters were sent to suppliers notifying them of arrangement and threatening that they would not get their share of business unless they recognized and adhered to such agreement, and under which contract or arrangement purchase and sale of commodity was controlled and directed by buyers herein concerned, through acts and agency of said broker individual; and

Where said Los Angeles Fish Exchange and said San Pedro dealers—

(g) Drew, or caused to be drawn, up contract between them in which said dealers engaged said exchange to act as their sole and exclusive broker for 3 months' period; and

Where said Sea Food Brokerage, Inc., owned, controlled and directed, as above noted, by said San Pedro dealers, along with said manager, and as a result of transactions indicated with respect to supply of Mexican sea bass coming into southern California market—

(h) Contracted at least 95 percent of said supply of Mexican sea bass; with result that, through operations of said Sea Food Brokerage, Inc., and Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, instrumentalities owned, controlled, and made use of as purchasing agents and brokers by said San Pedro and Los Angeles dealers respectively, as hereinbefore indicated, many shippers were forced to discontinue relations with independent brokers and were compelled to give their accounts to said brokerage companies, general brokerage business in area concerned was adversely affected through their said plan of operation, which enabled wholesalers to secure brokerage fees on their purchases of sea products as a result of operations in question of such corporate purchasing agencies, with their respective stockholder wholesalers constituting practically only customers and buyers, and by whom were determined their policies and to whom net profits realized by said corporate brokerage and purchasing agencies on purchases made, in effect, for their stockholders; and
Where said various dealers, banded and allied together in said associations, organizations, and corporations to carry into effect programs and policies described, and during and in period of three or more years last past, as hereinbefore noted—

(i) Combined and agreed, together and with others, and united in and pursued a common and concerted course of action among themselves and with others, to adopt, carry out, and maintain, in the trade areas above referred to, a program, and policy of establishing, fixing, and maintaining the prices at which, and the conditions upon which, fish and sea products were sold by said distributors to other dealers and to consumers, of seeking to acquire and maintain a monopoly in sale and distribution of fish and sea products in said trade territory, and of seeking to impose said prices and policies on all dealers in fish and sea products therein and require observance thereof and adherence thereto; and

Where said members of San Pedro Fish Exchange, stockholders of said Sea Food Brokerage, Inc., banded and allied together to carry into effect program and policies herein described—

(j) Agreed and combined together and with others, and initiated and pursued a common and concerted course of action and undertaking among themselves and with others, to adopt, carry out, maintain in trade area above referred to a plan and policy of establishing, fixing, and maintaining prices at which and conditions upon which fish and sea food products were purchased by said distributors from shippers and producers, of establishing, fixing, and maintaining the prices at which, and the conditions upon which, Mexican sea bass was sold by said distributors to other dealers and to consumers, and of acquiring and maintaining, as aforesaid, a monopoly in the purchase, sale, and distribution of Mexican sea bass in said trade territory;

With result that capacity, tendency, and effect of said agreements, combinations, and undertakings, and their said acts and practices, as set forth, were and had been, in said trade area and other related or connected territory, frequently comprising more than one State—

(1) To tend to monopolize, in said various dealers, etc., the business of dealing in and distributing fish and sea products;

(2) To unreasonably lessen, eliminate, restrain, hamper, and suppress competition in said sea products trade and industry, and to deprive the purchasing and consuming public of advantages in price, service, and other consideration which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal and unobstructed, or free and fair, competition in said trade and industry; and to otherwise operate as a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition in such trade and industry;

(3) To oppress, eliminate, and discriminate against small business enterprises which were or had been engaged in purchasing, selling, and distributing such products;

(4) To obstruct, hamper, and interfere with the normal and natural flow of trade and commerce in Mexican sea bass in, to, and from such trade area; and to injure competitors of said individual dealers in unfairly diverting business and trade from them, depriving them thereof, and otherwise oppressing or driving them out of business; and

(5) To prejudice and injure the public and shippers, producers, dealers, distributors, wholesalers, and others who do not conform to program of said various dealers, etc., or who do not desire, but are compelled to conform therewith:
Held, That said acts and practices of said various dealers, etc., as above set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and had a dangerous tendency to and actually did hinder and prevent price competition between and among themselves in sale of fish and seafood products in commerce, and placed in themselves power to control and enhance prices and created in themselves monopoly in sale of Mexican sea bass in said commerce, and unreasonably restrained such commerce in sea products, and constituted unfair methods of competition; and

Where members of said San Pedro Fish Exchange, in course of their said purchasing transactions, which resulted in delivery of fish and sea products from one or more of the producers, suppliers or shippers to members of said Exchange by means of the purchasing services of their said Sea Food Brokerage, Inc., or without such services—

(a) Caused and required said producers, suppliers, and shippers, and each of them, to transmit, pay to, and deliver to said Sea Food Brokerage, Inc., brokerage fee or commission, consisting of a certain percentage of purchase price agreed upon by buyers concerned and seller; and

(b) Caused and required said producers, suppliers, and shippers, and each of them, to transmit, pay to, and deliver to said Sea Food Brokerage, Inc., brokerage fee or commission, consisting of a certain percentage of purchase price agreed upon by buyers concerned and seller; and

Where said Sea Food Brokerage, Inc., in course of such purchasing transactions—

Held, That receipt and acceptance of such brokerage fees and commissions by said Sea Food Brokerage, Inc., and plan and policy of aforesaid members, and of said Seafood Brokerage, Inc., of exacting such fees and commissions from sellers of said products, were in violation of Subsection (c) of Section 2 of Clayton Act, as amended; and

Where members of said Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers' Association and of said San Pedro Fish Exchange, purchasing fish and sea products from various producers, suppliers and shippers, directly or through the agency of said Los Angeles Fish Exchange and said Blumenthal, upon orders which were placed by said various members with said Los Angeles Exchange and said Blumenthal, and caused such producers, etc., to ship or transport said products from places of origin outside of State into said State, and resulted in delivery thereof from one or more of said producers, etc., to such members through means of purchasing services of said Los Angeles Exchange and said Blumenthal, or without such services—

(a) Caused and required said producers, etc., to pay to and deliver to said Blumenthal brokerage fee or commission consisting of certain percentage of purchase price agreed upon by said various buyers and seller; and

(b) Caused and required said producers, etc., to pay to and deliver to said Blumenthal brokerage fee or commission consisting of certain percentage of purchase price agreed upon by said various buyers and seller; and

Held. That such receipt and acceptance of said brokerage fees and commissions by said individual was in violation of Subsection (c) of Section 2 of Clayton Act, as amended; and Where members of said Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers' Association, purchasing fish and sea products from various producers, suppliers, and shippers, directly or through agency of their said Sea Products Brokerage Corporation or through said corporation as intermediary, upon orders placed by such members with said corporation, and which caused, as result of such purchases, such producers, etc., to ship or transport said products from place of origin thereof outside of State into said State, and resulted in delivery of said products from one or more of said producers, etc., to said members by means of the purchasing services of their said brokerage corporation, or without such services—

(a) Caused and required said producers, etc., and each of them, to transmit, pay to, and deliver to their said Brokerage Corporation, brokerage fee or commission constituting certain percentage of purchase price agreed upon by such buyer members and the seller; and

Where said Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, in course of such purchasing transactions—

(b) Received and accepted such fees and commissions, for which no services in connection with said purchases were rendered by members in question of said Wholesale Fish Dealers' Association to said producers, etc., and in which receipt and acceptance it was agent for said purchasers and at all times, in conduct of its said business, their agent and representative, and acting for them and in their behalf and under their control:

Held. That such receipt and acceptance of such so-called brokerage fees and commissions by said brokerage corporation for use and benefit of members herein of said Wholesale Fish Dealers' Association in the manner and under the circumstances above set forth, and the plan and policy of said members and said Association of exacting such fees and commissions from said sellers of such fish and seafood products, were in violation of Subsection (c) of Section 2 of Clayton Act, as amended.

Before Mr. Robert S. Hall, trial examiner.

Mr. Allen C. Phelps for the Commission.

Mr. Clifton A. Hill, of San Pedro, Calif., for San Pedro Fish Exchange, its officers and members, Seafood Brokerage, Inc., its officers and stockholders, and, along with Mr. Ben A. Hill, of San Pedro, Calif., for Paul A. Marencovich.

Mr. Vernon S. Gray and Covey & Covey, of Los Angeles, Calif., for Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Ass'n, Los Angeles Fish Exchange, Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corp., various officers, members, and stockholders, thereof, and M. N. Blumenthal.

PAR. 3. Respondent Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association is an unincorporated association with its headquarters at 1211 East Olympic Boulevard, Los Angeles, Calif. Respondent Chas. Rennick is secretary and manager of said association. The members of said association are distributors or wholesale fish dealers engaged in purchasing, selling, and distributing fish and seafood products from their respective places of business in Los Angeles, Calif. Among the members of said Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association are the following respondents:

Superior Seafood Company, Ltd., a corporation, 624 Ceres Ave., Los Angeles.
Los Angeles Fish and Oyster Company, Inc., Ltd., a corporation, 1320 Newton St., Los Angeles.
Central Fish and Oyster Company, a corporation, 1217 Birch St., Los Angeles.
Western Fish Company, a copartnership, consisting of Stephen Gentry and George Kriste, 514 Gladys Avenue, Los Angeles.
Complaint

Morris Isenberg, trading as Mermaid Fish and Oyster Company, 1246 East 6th Street, Los Angeles.

National Seafood Company, a copartnership, of which John Di Massa is a partner, 1812 South Central Street, Los Angeles.

Respondent Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association is a successor to the Los Angeles Wholesale Fish Dealers Association, which was disbanded about April 1, 1937.

Par. 4. Respondent Los Angeles Fish Exchange is a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, with its principal office and place of business located at 914 Bankers Building, Los Angeles, Calif. This respondent was during 1937 employed as purchasing agent and broker by the members of respondent Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association enumerated in paragraph 3 above and for the members of respondent San Pedro Fish Exchange, enumerated in paragraph 1 above.

Respondent M. N. Blumenthal, 405 Stanford Avenue, Los Angeles, Calif., is a broker and in 1937 he was employed by respondent Los Angeles Fish Exchange and by respondent members of said Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association and San Pedro Fish Exchange.

Par. 5. Respondent, Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, with its principal office and place of business located at 415½ South Central Avenue, Los Angeles, Calif. This respondent is engaged in the business of acting as purchasing agent and broker for respondent members of the Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association, enumerated in paragraph 3 above. The outstanding capital stock of this respondent has been issued to, and is owned by, or is controlled by, said respondent members of the Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association. Respondent Elmo C. Jack is manager of the Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, and as such manager, is in immediate charge of its operations.

The stockholders of said Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation are the following respondents:

Max Freeman and Arthur Freeman, 624 Ceres Ave., Los Angeles, Calif., who are also holders of a majority of the stock in respondent Superior Sea Food Co., Ltd.

Jack De Luca, 1320 Newton St., Los Angeles, Calif., who is also the sole owner of the stock of respondent Los Angeles Fish and Oyster Co., Ltd.

Louis G. Beverino, 1012 Central Ave., Los Angeles, Calif., who is secretary, treasurer, and manager of respondent Central Fish and Oyster Co.

Complaint

Morris Isenherg, 1246 East 6th St., Los Angeles, Calif., who owns and operates respondent Mermaid Fish and Oyster Co.

John Di Massa, 1812 South Central Ave., Los Angeles, Calif., who is a partner in respondent National Seafood Co.

Guiseppe Alioto, 535 Washington St., San Francisco, California, who is also the president of the San Francisco International Fish Company, which owns one-third of the stock of respondent Central Fish and Oyster Company.

Par. 6. Respondent distributors and wholesale fish dealers, members of said San Pedro Fish Exchange and Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association, purchase their fish and sea products, in the course and conduct of their respective businesses, from producers, shippers, and distributors located in various States and foreign countries, and cause such fish and sea products to be shipped and transported to their respective headquarters and places of business and/or to their customers, from points in States other than the State of California and from foreign countries and from waters adjacent to the United States and foreign countries. In the course of the sale and distribution of their fish and sea products such respondent members of said San Pedro Fish Exchange and Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association, cause such fish and sea products when sold to be shipped and transported, pursuant to purchase orders, from their headquarters or places of business, or direct from their suppliers, to their customers at points in States other than the State of California or the place or origin of such shipments. There is a continuous flow and current of commerce in fish and sea products from respondent members’ suppliers, through respondent members, to dealers and consumers located within and without the State of California. In the course and conduct of their respective business, respondent members are and have been engaged in commerce among the several States and with foreign countries and in trade, business, and commerce, directly affecting interstate and foreign commerce in fish and sea products. Except insofar as competition has been restrained, stifled, lessened, suppressed, eliminated or destroyed by the respondent members, as hereinafter alleged, each of said respondent members is and has been in actual and potential competition with the other respondent members and other dealers in the purchase, sale, and distribution of fish and sea products. Respondents Seafood Brokerage, Inc., Los Angeles Fish Exchange, M. N. Blumenthal and Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation act, or have acted, as purchasing agents for respondent members, or some of them, and are, or have been, likewise engaged in interstate and foreign commerce in fish and sea products and in providing facilities and performing functions in connection with the flow of such commerce.
FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION DECISIONS

Complaint

31 F. T. C.

Par. 7. The distributors and wholesale fish dealers making up the memberships of respondents San Pedro Fish Exchange and Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association together hold a monopoly on the purchase, sale, and distribution of certain varieties of fish and sea products in the trade territory extending inland from San Pedro and Los Angeles, Calif., through adjacent parts of California and into various States of the United States to the eastward, and together they constitute a group so powerful as to be able to dominate and control the sources of supply and channels of distribution in all fresh fish and sea products in such trade territory.

Par. 8. Respondents are banded and allied together in the aforesaid associations, organizations, and corporations to carry into effect the program and policies hereinbelow described and to enhance and promote the volume of trade, business and profits of respondent distributors and wholesale fish dealers; and the respondents, namely the said associations, corporations, partnerships, and individuals, and the officers, members, agents, and employees thereof, parties respondent herein, during and in the period of three or more years last past, have agreed, conspired, combined, and confederated together and with others, and have united in and pursued a common and concerted course of action and undertaking among themselves and with others, to adopt, follow, carry out, enforce, and maintain, in the trade areas above referred to, a program, and certain policies and practices, to wit:

1. To establish, fix, and maintain the prices at which and conditions upon which fish and sea products were purchased by respondent members and competing dealers from shipper and producers.

2. To establish, fix, and maintain the prices at which, and the conditions upon which, fish and sea products were sold by respondent members and competing dealers to other dealers and to consumers.

3. To interfere with and shut off the sources of supply of some varieties of fish and sea products, particularly Mexican sea bass, to dealers, distributors, and wholesalers competing with respondent members in the purchase of such products and the sale and distribution thereof, or to dealers desiring to so compete.

4. To acquire and maintain a monopoly in the purchase, sale, and distribution of fish and sea products in said trade territory.

5. To impose said prices and policies on all dealers in fish and sea products in said trade territory and to require universal observance and adherence thereto.

Par. 9. The parties respondent herein have agreed, combined, confederated, and conspired together for the purpose and with the intent of carrying out the aforesaid program and policies, and they have been and are now engaged in carrying into effect and maintaining said program and policies, and the said agreement, combination, confederation, conspiracy, and undertaking as set forth in paragraph 8 hereof. Pursuant to and for the purpose of effecting and carrying out the said program and policies and said agreement, combination, conf­ederation, conspiracy, and undertaking, the respondents have, among other things, done the following:

(a) Mutually pledged and promised to support, adhere to, and enforce the foregoing program and policies, alleged in paragraph 8 above, and entered into contracts and agreements relating thereto.

(b) Used and continued to use, in concert and agreement among themselves, and with others, coercive and concerted action, boycott, threats of boycott, and other united action against producers, shippers, wholesalers, distributors, dealers, and others to induce and require them, and to attempt so to induce and require them, to agree and conform to, and to support and enforce the said program and policies of respondents.

(c) Held meetings of respondent associations and organizations, their officers and members, to devise means of exerting influence, pressure, coercion or other means of inducing, coercing, and requiring shippers, producers, distributors, dealers, and others engaged in said fish and sea products trade and industry to abide by and adhere to said program and policies.

(d) Respondent members of San Pedro Fish Exchange have acted in concert and agreement to control the policies and practices of respondent Seafood Brokerage, Inc., and by exercising such control and have caused it to adopt and pursue policies and practices conforming to and in harmony with the program and policies above described.

(e) Respondent members of Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association have acted in concert and agreement to control the policies and practices of respondents Los Angeles Fish Exchange, M. N. Blumenthal, and Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, and by exercising such control have caused said corporations and said individual to adopt and pursue policies and practices conforming to and in harmony with the program and policies above described.

(f) Excluded from membership in said respondent associations and organizations distributors and dealers who failed or refused to support, abide by or cooperate in carrying out said program and policies of respondents.

(g) Disciplined certain members and imposed penalties on them for acts in violation of the tenets and requirements of said program and policies.

(h) Exchanged information between one another concerning the prices and trade policies and practices used by them individually and issued and distributed bulletins, circulars, letters, price lists, and other printed matter and distributed the same among the members of said associations and others, announcing the adoption of said policies, practices, and requirements and the imposition of the same upon all those affected thereby.
Complaint

(i) Used and engaged in other acts, cooperative and concerted action, and coercive methods and practices in promoting, establishing, and carrying out the foregoing program and agreement, policies, combinations, conspiracy, confederation, and undertaking set forth in paragraph 8 hereof.

PAR. 10. The capacity, tendency, and effect of said agreement, combination, conspiracy, confederation, and undertaking, and the said acts and practices of respondents, set forth above, are and have been in said trade area and other related or connected territory, frequently comprising more than one State or portions of more than one State, are and have been:

(a) To tend to monopolize, in said respondents, the business of dealing in and distributing fish and sea products.

(b) To unreasonably lessen, eliminate, restrain, stifle, hamper, and suppress competition in said fish and sea products trade and industry, and to deprive the purchasing and consuming public of advantages in price, service, and other consideration which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal and unobstructed, or free and fair, competition in said trade and industry; and to otherwise operate as a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition in such trade and industry.

(c) To substantially increase the cost to purchasers of such fish and sea products.

(d) To oppress, eliminate, and discriminate against small business enterprises which are or have been engaged in purchasing, selling, and distributing such products.

(e) To obstruct, hamper, and interfere with the normal and natural flow of trade and commerce in fish and sea products in, to, and from such trade area; and to injure respondent's competitors in unfairly diverting business and trade from them, depriving them thereof, and otherwise oppressing or driving them out of business.

(f) To prejudice and injure the public and shippers, producers, dealers, distributors, wholesalers, and others who do not conform to respondent's program or who do not desire, but are compelled to conform therewith.

PAR. 11. The acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public; have a dangerous tendency to and have actually hindered and prevented price competition between and among respondents in the sale of fish and sea products in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act; have placed in respondents the power to control and enhance prices; have created in the respondents a monopoly in the sale of fish and sea products in such commerce; have unreasonably restrained such commerce in fish and sea products, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Charge 2

Paragraph 1. The pertinent allegations of charge 1 hereof are hereby incorporated herein as though fully set forth verbatim.

Paragraph 2. Respondent members of the respondent San Pedro Fish Exchange, in the ordinary course and conduct of their respective businesses, purchase fish and sea products from various producers, suppliers, and shippers, directly, or through the agency of respondent Seafood Brokerage, Inc., or through respondent Seafood Brokerage, Inc., as intermediary, upon orders placed by said respondent members with said Seafood Brokerage, Inc.; and as a result of such purchases or orders respondent members, and each of them, cause such producers, suppliers, and shippers to ship or transport fish and sea products from the places of origin thereof outside of the State of California into said State.

Paragraph 3. In the course of said purchasing transactions above referred to, resulting in the delivery of fish and sea products from one or more of said producers, suppliers, or shippers to said respondent members by means of the purchasing services of respondent Seafood Brokerage, Inc., or without such services, respondent members of said San Pedro Fish Exchange have and do cause and require said producers, suppliers, and shippers, and each of them, to transmit, pay to, and deliver to respondent Seafood Brokerage, Inc., a so-called brokerage fee or commission, being a certain percentage of the purchase price agreed upon by buyer respondents and the seller. In the course of such purchasing transactions, respondent Seafood Brokerage, Inc., has received and accepted, and is receiving and accepting, such fees and commissions for which no services connected with such purchases of said products by respondent members of San Pedro Fish Exchange were rendered to said producers, suppliers, or shippers, and the said Seafood Brokerage, Inc., has and does receive and accept such so-called brokerage fees and commissions as agent for and for the use and benefit of said purchasers, being respondent members of San Pedro Fish Exchange, or one or more of them. In receiving and accepting said so-called brokerage fees and commissions, and at all times in the conduct of its business respondent Seafood Brokerage, Inc., is the representative or purported representative of respondent members of San Pedro Fish Exchange and acts for them and in their behalf and is under their control.

PAR. 4. The receipt and acceptance of such so-called brokerage fees and commissions by respondent Seafood Brokerage, Inc., for the use and benefit of respondent members of San Pedro Fish Exchange, in the manner and under the circumstances hereinabove set forth, and the plan and policy of said respondent members and said Seafood Brokerage, Inc., of exacting such fees and commissions from the sellers of said products is in violation of subsection (c) of Section 2 of said Clayton Act, as amended.

Charge 3

Paragraph 1. The pertinent allegations of charge 1 hereof are hereby incorporated herein as though fully set forth verbatim.

PAR. 2. During part of the year 1937, respondent members of respondents Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association and San Pedro Fish Exchange, in the course and conduct of their respective businesses, purchased fish and sea products from various producers, suppliers, and shippers, directly, or through the agency of respondents Los Angeles Fish Exchange and M. N. Blumenthal, upon orders placed by said respondent members with said Los Angeles Fish Exchange and M. N. Blumenthal; and as a result of such purchases and orders respondent members, and each of them, caused such producers, suppliers, and shippers to ship or transport fish and sea products from the places of origin thereof outside of the State of California into said State.

PAR. 3. In the course of said purchasing transactions above referred to, resulting in the delivery of fish and sea products from one or more of said producers, suppliers, or shippers to said respondent members, by means of the purchasing services of respondents Los Angeles Fish Exchange and M. N. Blumenthal, or without such services, respondent members of Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association and San Pedro Fish Exchange, caused and required said producers, suppliers, and shippers to transmit, pay to, and deliver to respondents Los Angeles Fish Exchange and M. N. Blumenthal, a so-called brokerage fee or commission, being a certain percentage of the purchase price agreed upon by buyer respondents and the seller. In the course of such purchasing transactions respondents Los Angeles Fish Exchange and M. N. Blumenthal received and accepted such fees and commissions for which no services connected with the purchase of such products by said respondent members were rendered to said producers, shippers, or suppliers, and the said Los Angeles Fish Exchange and M. N. Blumenthal received and accepted such so-called brokerage fees and commission as agent for and for the use and benefit of said purchasers, being said respondent members above referred to, or one or more of them. In receiving and accepting said fees and commissions, respondents Los Angeles Fish Exchange and M. N. Blumenthal were the representatives or purported representatives of respondents' members of said Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association and San Pedro Fish Exchange, and acted for them and in their behalf and under their control.

Par. 4. The receipt and acceptance of such so-called brokerage fees and commissions by respondents Los Angeles Fish Exchange and M. N. Blumenthal, for the use and benefit of said respondent members of said associations, in the manner and under the circumstances hereinbefore set forth, was in violation of subsection (c) of section 2 of said Clayton Act, as amended.

Charge 4

Paragraph 1. The pertinent allegations of charge 1 hereof are hereby incorporated herein as though fully set forth verbatim.

Par. 2. Respondent members of the respondent Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association, in the ordinary course and conduct of their respective businesses, purchase fish and sea products from various producers, suppliers, and shippers, directly, or through the agency of respondent Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, or through respondent Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, as intermediary, upon orders placed by said respondent members with said Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation; and as a result of such purchases or orders respondent members, and each of them, cause such producers, suppliers, and shippers to ship or transport fish and sea products from the places of origin thereof outside of the State of California into said State.

Par. 3. In the course of said purchasing transactions above referred to, resulting in the delivery of fish and sea products from one or more of said producers, suppliers, or shippers to said respondent members by means of the purchasing services of respondent Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, or without such services, respondent members of said Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association have and do cause and require said producers, suppliers and shippers, and each of them, to transmit, pay to and deliver to respondent Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation a so-called brokerage fee or commission, being a certain percentage of the purchase price agreed upon by buyer respondents and the seller. In the course of such purchasing transactions, respondent Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation has received and accepted, and is receiving and accepting, such fees and commissions for which no services connected with such purchases of said products by respondent members of Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association were rendered to said producers, suppliers, or shippers, and the said Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation has and does receive and accept such so-called brokerage fees and commissions as agent for and for the use and benefit of said purchasers, being respondent members of Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association, or one or more of them. In receiving and accepting said so-called brokerage fees and commissions, and at all times in the conduct of its business respondent Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation is the representative or purported representative of respondent members of Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association and acts for them and in their behalf and is under their control.

Par. 4. The receipt and acceptance of such so-called brokerage fees and commissions by respondent Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, for the use and benefit of respondent members of Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association, in the manner and under the circumstances hereinabove set forth, and the plan and policy of said respondent members and said Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation of exacting such fees and commissions from the sellers of said products is in violation of subsection (c) of section 2 of said Clayton Act, as amended.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled “An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes” (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13, the Clayton Act), as amended, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that respondents named herein, and each of them have violated the provisions of said Federal Trade Commission Act and of subsection (c) of section 2 of said Clayton Act, as amended, the Federal Trade Commission on March 17, 1939, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the parties respondent, named in the caption hereof, charging them with violation of the provisions of the said act, and the said amendment thereto. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents’ answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Allen C. Phelps, attorney for the Commission, before Robert S. Hall, an examiner for the Commission therafter duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Jules J. Covey, Vernon S. Gray, and Clifton A. Hix, attorneys for the said respondents, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, answers, testimony, and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of the said Allen C. Phelps for the Commission and Clifton A. Hix for some of the respondents, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
Findings

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent San Pedro Fish Exchange, is an unincorporated association organized under the laws of the State of California, with its principal office and place of business at the Municipal Wharf, Los Angeles Harbor, San Pedro, Calif. The officers of said San Pedro Fish Exchange have been respondents Anthony B. Jaconi, president, Giosue Di Massa, vice president, and Albert H. Finch, secretary, all of the Municipal Wharf, San Pedro, Calif. The members of said Exchange are distributors or wholesale fish dealers engaged in purchasing, selling, and distributing fish and sea products from their respective places of business on the Municipal Wharf in San Pedro, Calif. Among the members of said San Pedro Fish Exchange are the following respondents:

American Fisheries, Inc., a corporation.
Star Fisheries, Inc., a corporation.
Mutual Fish Company, Ltd., a corporation.
Seiichi Nakahara, trading as Pacific Coast Fish Co.
Gennaro Mineghino, trading as Independent Fish Co.
Vincent DeMeglio, trading as Ocean Fish Company.
Standard Fisheries Company, a copartner consisting of John Ivancich, John Sulentor, and Andrew Fishtonich.
Central Fish Company, a copartnership, consisting of Yoshitsura Kamiya, Leo T. Toyama, and Y. Uyeda.
Tomich Brothers Fish Company, a copartnership, consisting of Peter Tomich and Frank Tomich.
Catalina Fish Company, a copartnership, consisting of Vincent Vitalich and George Stanovich.
Harbor Seafood Company, a copartnership, consisting of Andrew Petrasich, Martin Zuanich and Joe Evich.
State Fish Company, a copartnership, consisting of Gerald Cigliano and Jack Deluca.
Los Angeles Fish and Oyster Company, a copartnership, consisting of Giosue Di Massa, John DiMeglio, and Frank Glynn.

Zankich Brothers Fish Company, a copartnership, consisting of Jerry Zankich and Vincent Zankich.

Pioneer Fisheries, a copartnership, consisting of Anthony B. Jaconi and Paul A. Marencovich.

Par. 2. Respondent Seafood Brokerage, Inc., is a corporation. Respondent Hugh Reves is, and has been, the manager of said respondent Seafood Brokerage, Inc., and as such manager has been in immediate charge of its business. The corporation is organized and doing business under the laws of the State of California with its principal office and place of business located at the Municipal Wharf in San Pedro, Calif. This respondent is engaged in acting as purchasing agent and broker for the members of the respondent San Pedro Fish Exchange enumerated in paragraph 1 above. All of the outstanding stock of Seafood Brokerage, Inc., is held and owned by said respondent members of San Pedro Fish Exchange, or by representatives of said members, and collectively they own and control said respondent Seafood Brokerage, Inc.

The officers of respondent Seafood Brokerage, Inc., are or have been, respondents John Ivancich, president, Giosue Di Massa, vice president, and Yoshitsura Kamiya, secretary-treasurer; and the stockholders are, or have been, the following respondents:

Arthur W. Ross, who is also president of respondent American Fisheries, Inc.
Peter A. Kuglis, who is also president of respondent Star Fisheries, Inc.
Tokutaro Furukawa, who is also president of respondent Mutual Fish Co., Ltd.
Selichi Nakahara, who owns and operates the Pacific Coast Fish Company.
Gennaro Mineghino, who owns and operates the Independent Fish Co.
Vincent DiMeglio, who owns and operates The Ocean Fish Company.
John Ivancich, who is also a partner in respondent Standard Fisheries Company.
Yoshitsura Kamiya, who is also a partner in respondent Central Fish Company.
Peter Tomich, who is also a partner in respondent Tomich Bros. Fish Company.
Vincent Vitalich, who is also a partner in respondent Catalina Fish Company.
Andrew Petrasich, who is also a partner in respondent Harbor Seafood Company.
Gerald Cigliano, who is also a partner in respondent State Fish Company.
Giosue Di Massa, who is also a partner in respondent Los Angeles Fish and Oyster Company.

Jerry Zankich, who is also a partner in respondent Zankich Bros. Fish Company.
Anthony B. Jaconi, who is also a partner in respondent Pioneer Fisheries.

Par. 3. Respondent Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association is an unincorporated association with its headquarters at 1211 East Olympic Boulevard, Los Angeles, Calif. Respondent Chas. Rennick is secretary and manager of said association. The members of said association are distributors or wholesale fish dealers engaged in purchasing, selling, and distributing fish and seafood products from their respective places of business in Los Angeles, Calif. Among the members of said Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association are the following respondents:

Superior Seafood Company, Ltd., a corporation, 624 Ceres Ave., Los Angeles, Calif.
Los Angeles Fish and Oyster Company, a corporation, 1320 Newton St., Los Angeles.
Central Fish and Oyster Company, a corporation, 1217 Birch St., Los Angeles.
Western Fish Company, a copartnership, consisting of Stephen Gentry and George Krise, 514 Gladys Avenue, Los Angeles.
Morris Isenberg, trading as Mermaid Fish and Oyster Company, 1246 East 6th Street, Los Angeles.
National Seafood Company, a copartnership, of which John DiMassa is a partner, 1512 South Central Street, Los Angeles.

Respondent Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association is a successor to the Los Angeles Wholesale Fish Dealers Association, which was disbanded about April 1, 1937.

Par. 4. Respondent Los Angeles Fish Exchange is a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, with its principal office and place of business located at 914 Bankers Building, Los Angeles, Calif. This respondent was during 1937 employed as purchasing agent and broker by the members of respondent Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association enumerated in paragraph 3 above and for the members of respondent San Pedro Fish Exchange, enumerated in paragraph 1 above.

Par. 5. Respondent M. N. Blumenthal, 405 Stanford Avenue, Los Angeles, Calif., is a broker and in 1937 he was employed in the capacity of a broker by respondent Los Angeles Fish Exchange and by respondent members of said Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association and San Pedro Fish Exchange.

Par. 6. Respondent, Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, with its principal office and place of business located at 415½ South Central Avenue, Los Angeles, Calif. This respondent is engaged in the business of acting as purchasing agent and broker for respondent members of the Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association, enumerated in paragraph 3 above. The outstanding capital stock of this respondent has been issued to and is owned by the individual respondents hereafter named who manage and control the respective respondent members of the Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association. Respondent Elmo C. Jack is manager of the Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, and as such manager is in immediate charge of its operations.
Findings

The stockholders of said Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation are the following respondents:

Max Freeman and Arthur Freeman, 624 Ceres Ave., Los Angeles, Calif., who are also holders of a majority of the stock in respondent Superior Sea Food Co., Ltd.

Jack DeLuca, 1320 Newton St., Los Angeles, Calif., who is also the sole owner of the stock of respondent Los Angeles Fish and Oyster Co.

Louis G. Beverline, 1012 Central Ave., Los Angeles, Calif., who is secretary, treasurer, and Manager of respondent Central Fish and Oyster Co.

Stephen Gentry and George Kriste, 514 Gladys Ave., Los Angeles, Calif., who compose the partnership of respondent Western Fish Co.

Morris Isenberg, 1246 East 6th St., Los Angeles, Calif., who owns and operates respondent Mermaid Fish and Oyster Co.

John Di Massa, 1812 South Central Ave., Los Angeles, Calif., who is a partner in respondent National Seafood Co.

Gulseppe Alioto, 535 Washington Street, San Francisco, California, who is also the president of the San Francisco International Fish Company, which owns one-third of the stock of respondent Central Fish and Oyster Company.

Par. 7. San Pedro, which is a part of metropolitan Los Angeles, but which is located about 20 miles from the city proper, is the principal fresh fish market in southern California. There are, however, two other fish exchanges, one in Santa Barbara and one in San Diego. Across the San Pedro wharf come most of the fish caught locally, which are marketed in commerce. Until recently the entire supply of this fish was purchased by the members of the San Pedro Fish Exchange from the fishermen and sold by such members to the trade, i.e., to other wholesalers (including the Los Angeles wholesalers), to stock wagons, to peddlers, and to retailers. A part of this supply is shipped to customers in States lying east and northeast of southern California and to dealers in San Francisco and other places in California. Extensive supplies of fish and sea foods also come into the southern California markets from San Francisco, Seattle, Japan, Mexico, and the eastern seaboard. These products are usually bought and sold through brokers or on a brokerage basis. There are at least four fish brokers in the Los Angeles area and two brokerage concerns, the latter being respondents Seafood Brokerage, Inc., and Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation.

Prior to June 1939, all of the commercial supply of fresh fish caught locally and coming into San Pedro was handled by the San Pedro Fish Exchange, which includes in its membership all of the wholesale fish dealers in San Pedro. In June 1939, the Gill Net Fishermen’s Union, affiliated with the C. I. O., asked the San Pedro dealers for a minimum price guarantee on fish marketed by them, and when this demand was refused a so-called C. I. O. Fishermen’s Market was set up to sell fish direct to the trade in competition with the San Pedro dealers. The San Pedro dealers continued to buy fish from other fishermen who belonged to a union affiliated with the A. F. of L. The C. I. O. market was said to be selling to Los Angeles wholesalers at lower prices than the San Pedro dealers could quote and at the time of the hearings sales of fish by the San Pedro dealers to Los Angeles wholesalers had been practically stopped for this reason.

The San Pedro dealers buy fish and sea products originating elsewhere from shippers, usually through Seafood Brokerage, Inc.

The members of the Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers' Association constitute practically all of the wholesalers in Los Angeles. Their principal business consists of selling fish and sea products at wholesale in the Los Angeles area, but they also supply customers in the States to the north and northeast of southern California, and in other parts of California. They purchase local fish from the San Pedro dealers, the C. I. O. market and from other southern California markets. They obtain other fish and sea food from shippers located in other parts of the United States and in foreign countries, buying either through the Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation or through other brokers.

Fresh fish moving across the San Pedro wharf is sold by the San Pedro dealers to wholesalers in Los Angeles and other California points, to retailers in States outside of California and to retailers in California and to stock wagons and peddlers operating in the Los Angeles area.

Fish and sea food not caught locally (except Mexican sea bass which will be considered separately) move from the shipper to the Los Angeles and San Pedro wholesalers and from them to the trade. Some of this supply is sold to customers in States to the east and northeast of southern California.

Wholesalers sell these products to stock wagons, who resell to small retailers; to retailers; to peddlers who resell from house-to-house; and direct to the institutional trade, such as hotels, restaurants, institutions, etc. Stock wagons compete with wholesalers in selling the same class of trade, and in some cases may be owned by wholesalers. Wholesalers compete with retailers in selling the institutional trade.

Shippers may be wholesalers in the local market in which they operate, as for example, some shippers in Seattle and San Francisco. Shippers sell as jobbers and also as wholesalers. Wholesalers sell at wholesale and at times at retail. Large retailers and chain stores attempt to and often do buy at prices lower than the prices quoted to retailers generally. Brokers at time have bought and sold on their own account and also sold direct to stock wagons and even to the retail trade.
Stock wagons compete with wholesalers, but do not have the overhead expense of maintaining regular establishments. The wholesalers think it is unfair for stock wagons to buy at the wholesale buying price through brokers. A distinction has been made between “first line wholesalers” and stock wagons. Both the Los Angeles wholesalers and the San Pedro dealers established prices to stock wagons. In Los Angeles those prices were midway between the wholesaler’s cost price and the price to the retailer. In San Pedro the stock wagon price was about the same as the so-called wholesale price, these two prices being below the “shipping” price to outside customers and the “peddler” price, which were likewise about equal.

Par. 8. The San Pedro Fish Exchange was organized in December 1936. It is composed of all of the wholesale fish and sea food dealers in San Pedro.

The agreement and Articles of Association of the San Pedro Fish Exchange, signed by all of the members, limits new members to those receiving a two-thirds favorable vote and paying an initiation fee of $5,000. No new members have been admitted since organization. This agreement further provides that the Executive Committee shall keep all members posted “upon price conditions, necessary overhead expense, which shall be for the purpose of giving the members accurate information as to the margin of profit they should have so that the members may be better enabled to proceed to some degree of uniformity” * * * “and all of the members agree that they shall accept the advice given them by the Executive Committee and conduct their respective businesses according.”

During 1937 and 1938 the Exchange issued weekly price lists showing the buying prices for the various varieties of fish and sea food and the selling prices therefor. Four different selling prices were shown, being the wholesale selling price, the stock wagon price, the shipping price, and the peddler price. It was the understanding among the members of the Exchange that these prices would be adhered to as a minimum and, with few exceptions, they were so followed. These price lists included selling prices not only on fish caught locally coming over the San Pedro wharf, but also for fish and shell food shipped in from northern California and points outside of California. The selling prices on such price lists were figured from the buying prices, the prices to wholesalers being from 2 cents to 4 cents per pound above the San Pedro cost price. Prices to stock wagons on local fish were practically the same as the prices to wholesalers. The “shipping” prices were prices governing sales to retailers and lot shipments to points outside of the Los Angeles area. The “peddler” prices were quoted to house-to-house peddlers selling to consumers. The “shipping” prices and “peddler” prices tended to be the same, and were usually about a cent a pound above the wholesale and stock wagon prices.

Each member of the San Pedro Fish Exchange, by agreement, pays 1 cent per pound on all large local fish handled and 1/2 cent per pound on all small local fish handled, into the treasury of the San Pedro Fish Exchange. Overhead expenses are paid out of this fund, and the balance is divided annually in equal parts among all members, except one (Harbor Sea Food Co.), which receives a 1/2 share. In 1938 under this arrangement eight of the members of the Exchange paid more money into this fund than was returned to them; seven received more in payments out of the fund than they paid into it. Of $34,167.41 collected and disbursed, only $4,638.51 was required for expenses.

It was understood and agreed by the members of the San Pedro Fish Exchange that each would observe the prices fixed by the Price Committee of the Exchange. The agreement signed by all members provided that each member should pay to the Exchange as liquidated damages for all fish sold other than in accordance with the uniform price quotation of the Executive Committee, 5 cents per pound for the entire shipment wherein any one item of such shipment was so sold in violation of such price quotations, with a minimum penalty of $5. On February 11, 1938, fines were levied against several members for violation of the rules of the Exchange, such fines ranging from $5 to $100 in amount.

Par. 9. About October 1936, the fish wholesalers of Los Angeles formed the Los Angeles Wholesale Fish Dealers' Association. This Association continued in existence until March 31, 1937, when it was dissolved to be succeeded by the Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers' Association, one of the respondents herein. This latter Association ceased its activities about October 21, 1938.

The original association, the Los Angeles Wholesale Fish Dealers Association, was composed of eleven wholesalers of Los Angeles, three affiliated wholesale dealers (one at Santa Barbara and two at Long Beach) and five brokers. During its lifetime this association took action:

To require broker members to handle sea products on brokerage basis only, i.e., not to buy and sell on their own account “for the purpose of speculation”; discussed questions arising from the activities of certain firms doing a combined wholesale and retail business; set initiation fees for members of the Association at $2,500 for all except original members and later raised this to $5,000; took up trade practice matters with dealers in San Pedro, San Diego, San Francisco, and
Seattle; employed an investigator to handle complaints of violations of the Association's rules and regulations; set up a price committee and fixed selling prices for sea products; discussed "unfair and unethical" methods as used by some members; expelled one member (Blue Shell Oyster Co.) for alleged "lack of cooperation in association affairs and non-payment of dues"—(the real reason being the cutting of prices by this member below prices fixed by the price committee); attempted to prevent price cutting by retailers and solicitation by one member of another's accounts.

The Los Angeles Wholesale Fish Dealers Association was dissolved on April 1, 1937. The Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association was organized the same day. This association was organized by and included all members of the Los Angeles Association except the United Fish Co., Blue Shell Oyster Co., Long Beach Fish Co., and A. K. Koulouris & Co., a broker. To all intents and purposes the Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association was the successor to the Los Angeles Association and the former continued to use somewhat the same policies as the latter had followed.

The Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association issued weekly minimum selling prices on all varieties of sea food handled by its members. The prices quoted were "trade" (to retailers) prices and "stock wagon" prices. Prices to stock wagons were usually 2 cents per pound less than prices to the trade. The published prices were, in the main, accepted and adhered to by the members of the Association, although there was no penalty imposed by the Association for non-conformity with such prices.

Par. 10. One of the choice varieties of fresh fish coming into the southern California market is Mexican sea bass or totoaba. This fish is caught by Mexican fishermen in the Gulf of California in Mexican waters off the coasts of Sonora and Lower California, whence it is trucked to the southern California market. Prior to the season of 1937-38 (the season is during the winter, spring, and early summer) this fish was brought into the southern California market by truckers or fishermen who sold their truckloads of fish to brokers and dealers. In the early part of 1939 the supply of this fish coming into Los Angeles and San Pedro ran from 350,000 to over 600,000 pounds per month.

By November 1937, the Mexican fishermen had been organized into cooperatives ("cooperativas") with the help of the Mexican Government. At that time a contract was made between the cooperatives and respondent Jack DeLuca, who was a wholesaler in Los Angeles, whereby the representatives agreed to sell and DeLuca agreed to buy all the Mexican sea bass caught during the 1937-38 season at 8 cents a
In November 1937, after the contract was made DeLuca received some 300,000 or 400,000 pounds of this fish and the Los Angeles and San Pedro wholesalers suddenly stopped purchasing. As a result, DeLuca was unable to dispose of this supply and it became a glut on the market. DeLuca was given to understand that the dealers had encouraged the fishermen to send an unusual supply so that "they could break up my contract that much faster." Prior to that time the market had been absorbing from 200,000 to 300,000 pounds a week. As a result of this over-supply DeLuca negotiated a cancellation of his agreement with the Mexican cooperatives and made a settlement with them. At the time of the cancellation of his agreement DeLuca had on hand about 100,000 pounds of Mexican sea bass in his icebox which he sold out to his trade in 2 or 3 weeks. There were at the same time 200,000 or 300,000 pounds of this fish in trucks on which DeLuca had been unable to accept delivery. This supply was taken by the dealers in Los Angeles and San Pedro within 12 to 24 hours after DeLuca's contract with the Mexican cooperatives had been canceled.

In November 1937, while DeLuca's contract was still in effect, respondents Vincent Vitalich, Peter Tomich, and Andrew Fishtoich, San Pedro dealers, went to San Luis, Mexico (on the Arizona border), and met some of the Mexican fishermen and truckers. They went to arrange for a supply of Mexican sea bass, although they knew that Jack DeLuca had a contract with the cooperatives. However, they claimed they were not getting any sea bass, a statement contradicted elsewhere in the record. A short time afterward the DeLuca contract was canceled and the San Pedro dealers received adequate supplies after that.

DeLuca's avowed purpose in contracting for the Mexican sea bass was to stabilize the market. He resold the sea bass to wholesalers at 8½ cents or 9 cents a pound and also sold to his own trade (retailers). During the time he held his contract he controlled the available supply of this fish. After cancellation of the DeLuca contract the supply was brought in by truckers and sold by them to brokers and wholesalers during the balance of the 1937-38 season.

In November 1938, the Mexican cooperatives, with the Mexican Government, went ahead with the plan to sell all sea bass through one channel. At the request of the Minister of Agriculture, A. K. Koulouris, a wholesale broker, went to Mexico City where a contract was signed on December 10, 1938, whereby Koulouris was to act as sales agent on a commission basis. In this contract Koulouris guaranteed to dispose of 68 tons of Mexican sea bass weekly during the fishing season. This contract provided that a ratification meeting of the cooperatives should be called and such a meeting was held at Nogales, Sonora, on December 22, 1938. Respondent Hugh Reves, manager of respondent Sea Food Brokerage, Inc., appeared at said meeting and offered to advance the cooperatives $15,000 or more in cash and to sell a larger percentage of fish at a better price than Koulouris. Reves got the contract in which he agreed to advance $15,000, to sell 91 metric tons of sea bass weekly at a minimum price of 8 cents a pound. He was to receive a 3 percent commission on all sales. Reves asserted that some Mexican cooperatives exist other than those who are parties to this contract and that such other cooperatives sent sea bass into the Los Angeles market. However, at least 95 percent of all the sea bass sold to the trade in the southern California territory is handled by Reves under his contract with the Mexican cooperatives, on the basis of a minimum contract price of 8 cents per pound. The selling price from day to day depends on the price the dealers are willing to pay and the figure asked for by the cooperatives’ representative. The price in July 1939, was 9 cents a pound, although it sometimes has reached 14 cents or 15 cents.

Previous to 1938, trouble had been experienced by some dealers, who advanced money to truckers to go to Mexico for a load of sea bass, in getting the truckers to deliver the fish contracted for. Sometimes the trucker did not come back and sometimes he sold the fish to other dealers. Sea bass sold to Reves is resold to Los Angeles dealers at the same price as to San Pedro dealers.

Reves acted as agent for the San Pedro dealers in making the contract with the Mexican cooperatives. The contract, in fact, was a joint venture of the San Pedro dealers and was assigned by Reves to respondent John Ivancich, who is president of respondent Sea Food Brokerage, Inc. Ivancich advanced the $15,000 ($17,000 actually sent) payment to Reves, who loaned it to the Mexican cooperatives. This money was borrowed from the bank on a note signed by all the San Pedro dealers. The purchase of Mexican sea bass under the terms of the Reves contract is actually made by the Sea Food Brokerage, Inc. The Mexican cooperatives pay Reves a commission or brokerage of 3 percent and all commissions received under the contract go into the treasury of Sea Food Brokerage, Inc. This sea bass is sold by Sea Food Brokerage, Inc., to dealers in southern California and in States other than the State of California. Sea Food Brokerage, Inc., has continued to aid and finance the Mexican cooperatives.

The control of the Mexican sea bass by Reves under his contract has enabled him to determine the allotment of the commodity to wholesale dealers in Los Angeles, San Pedro, Long Beach, or any buyer thereof, according to the needs and conditions which Reves con-considered to be fair and equitable. When Mexican sea bass is scarce, Reves, acting through Sea Food Brokerage, Inc., allocates the supply on a percentage basis according to the sea bass previously purchased by the dealer. The dealer having purchased large quantities receives a larger allotment than one having purchased smaller quantities. The Los Angeles wholesale dealers have no connection with or control of the sea bass agreement between Reves and the Mexican cooperatives. The contract was suggested and assisted in by the Mexican Government in order that the sea bass industry might be stabilized in the interests of the Mexican fishermen.

Par. 11. Early in 1937 and while the Los Angeles Wholesale Fish Dealers Association was in existence, its attorney was directed to form a corporation, the Los Angeles Fish Exchange. The original purpose of this corporation was to collect money from the members of the wholesalers association to be used for advertising the fish industry. This purpose was never carried out because of a price war that broke out upon the entry of the United Fish & Oyster Co. into business. However, a plan was later formulated to use the corporation as a brokerage company to buy sea products for both the Los Angeles and San Pedro dealers and others. It was also contemplated that the corporation would finance purchases of frozen fish from Japan and buy shrimps in carload lots and market these products as far east as Kansas City, Mo. On August 20, 1937, the members of the Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association designated the Los Angeles Fish Exchange as their sole and exclusive purchasing agent and broker for a period of five years, but this arrangement was never effectuated and later was superseded by the formation of Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation. On June 15, 1937, the Los Angeles and San Pedro dealers, respondents herein, agreed on a plan to employ respondent M. N. Blumenthal, a broker, to purchase all their supplies, except the local fish purchased at the San Pedro wharf. Letters were sent to suppliers by Blumenthal notifying them of the arrangement and threatening that they would not get their share of the business unless they recognized and adhered to this agreement. A contract was also drawn between Los Angeles Fish Exchange and San Pedro dealers in which the San Pedro dealers engaged the Los Angeles Fish Exchange to act as their sole and exclusive broker for three months, from June 15, 1937, to September 15, 1937. A contract was also drawn between the Los Angeles Fish Exchange and the dealers of Los Angeles and San Pedro (executed only by the Los Angeles Fish Exchange and the San Pedro dealers) providing that all money received by the Los Angeles Exchange from its brokerage operations should be paid into a general welfare fund, and it was also stipulated that the Los Angeles dealers were to receive 50 percent of this fund, and the San Pedro dealers the other 50 percent. An agreement was made between Los Angeles Fish Exchange and the Los Angeles dealers dividing up this 50 percent among the dealers. The entire arrangement, as finally agreed upon by Blumenthal and the dealers became operative.

Blumenthal acted for three monthly only, and had at the end of that time about $4,000 which he still holds, but to which he disclaims title.

The purchase and sale of the commodity, therefore, was controlled and directed by the respondent buyers, through the acts and agency of M. N. Blumenthal, the broker.

Par. 12. Respondent Seafood Brokerage Inc. and respondent Reves contract at least 95 percent of the supply of Mexican sea bass coming into the southern California market. The contract herein set out growing out of the collective action of the Mexican fishermen and the Government of Mexico in compelling the supply to be sold through one outlet on one hand and the combination and agreement among the San Pedro Fish Exchange members, who are likewise stockholders in, Seafood Brokerage, Inc., and Seafood Brokerage, Inc., itself, and respondent Reves, to jointly purchase and resell this fish, on the other hand, the daily fixing of the price at which this fish is sold by the Mexican Cooperatives and purchased by respondent dealers and other dealers, by agreement between the representative of the cooperatives and Reves, acting pursuant to the contract and agreement among the San Pedro dealers to receive and sell this fish on a commission basis, constitute a combination and agreement eliminating price competition in this line of commerce.

Par. 13. Since operations of the respondents Seafood Brokerage, Inc., and Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, many shippers were forced to discontinue relations with independent brokers and they were compelled to give their accounts to respondent brokerage companies. The general brokerage businesses in this area have been adversely affected by the operations of these two respondents. Their plan of operation enables wholesalers to secure brokerage fees on their purchases of sea products. Such corporations thus created are purchasing agencies and practically the only customers they have are the respective stockholders or such wholesalers themselves.

Par. 14. The following circumstances and conditions exist as between the Seafood Brokerage, Inc., and its stockholders, and the Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation and its stockholders:
Findings

The stockholders, in the case of each corporation, are the buyers of sea products; they or their representatives own the stock in the respective brokerage corporations, determine the policy of such corporations, elect the directors, who in turn designate the executive officers, agents, and employees. Brokerage fees are collected by said Seafood Brokerage, Inc., and Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation from sellers of sea products on purchases of such products made for and at the instance of the individual dealer respondents, who own or control the stock of said respective corporations. The net profits of said brokerage corporations belong to the stockholders and may be paid to them as dividends.

Par. 15. Respondents have been banded and allied together in the aforesaid associations, organizations and corporations to carry into effect the program and policies hereinafter described, and during and in the period of 3 or more years last past, they have combined and agreed together and with others, and united in and pursued a common and concerted course of action among themselves and with others, to adopt, carry out, and maintain, in the trade areas above referred to, a program, and policy of establishing, fixing, and maintaining the prices at which, and the conditions upon which, fish and sea products were sold by respondent distributors to other dealers and to consumers; of seeking to acquire and maintain a monopoly in the sale and distribution of fish and sea products in said trade territory; and of seeking to impose said prices and policies on all dealers in fish and sea products in said trade territory and to require observance thereof and adherence thereto.

Par. 16. Respondent members of San Pedro Fish Exchange and stockholders of Seafood Brokerage, Inc., have been banded and allied together to carry into effect the program and policies herein described and have agreed, and combined together and with others, and have initiated and pursued a common and concerted course of action and undertaking among themselves and with others to adopt, carry out, maintain in the trade areas above referred to a plan and policy of establishing, fixing, and maintaining the prices at which and conditions upon which products were purchased by respondent distributors from shippers and producers; of establishing, fixing, and maintaining the prices at which, and the conditions upon which, Mexican sea bass was sold by respondent distributors to other dealers and to consumers; and of acquiring and maintaining a monopoly in the purchase, sale, and distribution of Mexican sea bass in said trade territory.

Par. 17. The capacity, tendency, and effect of said agreements, combinations, and undertakings and the said acts and practices of respondents, set forth above, are and have been in said trade area and other related or connected territory, frequently comprising more than one State or portions of more than one State:

(a) To tend to monopolize, in said respondents, the business of dealing in and distributing fish and sea products.

(b) To unreasonably lessen, eliminate, restrain, hamper, and suppress competition in said sea products trade and industry, and to deprive the purchasing and consuming public of advantages in price, service, and other consideration which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal and unobstructed, or free and fair, competition in said trade and industry; and to otherwise operate as a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition in such trade and industry.

(c) To oppress, eliminate, and discriminate against small business enterprises which are or have been engaged in purchasing, selling, and distributing such products.

(d) To obstruct, hamper, and interfere with the normal and natural flow of trade and commerce in Mexican sea bass in, to, and from such trade area; and to injure competitors of the individual respondents in unfairly diverting business and trade from them, de­priving them thereof, and otherwise oppressing or driving them out of business.

(e) To prejudice and injure the public and shippers, producers, dealers, distributors, wholesalers, and others who do not conform to respondent's program or who do not desire, but are compelled to conform therewith.

PAR. 18. The acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public; have a dangerous tendency to and have actually hindered and prevented price competition between and among respondents in the sale of fish and sea products in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act; have placed in respondents the power to control and enhance prices; have created in the respondents a monopoly in the sale of Mexican sea bass products in such commerce; have unreasonably restrained such commerce in sea products, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

PAR. 19. Respondent members of the respondent San Pedro Fish Exchange in the course of said purchasing transactions referred to herein, resulting in the delivery of fish and sea products from one or more of said producers, suppliers, or shippers to said respondent members by means of the purchasing services of respondent Seafood Brokerage, Inc., or without such services, respondent members of said San Pedro Fish Exchange have and do cause and require said producers, suppliers, and shippers, and each of them, to transmit, pay to, and deliver to respondent Seafood Brokerage, Inc., a brokerage fee or commission, being a certain percentage of the purchase price agreed upon by buyer respondents and the seller. In the course of such purchasing transactions, respondent Seafood Brokerage, Inc., has received and accepted, and is receiving and accepting, such fees and commission for which no services connected with such purchases of said products by respondent members of San Pedro Fish Exchange were rendered to said producers, suppliers, or shippers, and the said Seafood Brokerage, Inc., has and does receive and accept such brokerage fees and commissions as agent for and for the use and benefit of said purchasers, being respondent members of San Pedro Fish Exchange, or one or more of them. In receiving and accepting said brokerage fees and commissions, and at all times in the conduct of its business, respondent Seafood Brokerage, Inc., is the agent and representative of respondent members of San Pedro Fish Exchange and acts for them and in their behalf and is under their control.

Par. 20. The receipt and acceptance of such brokerage fees and commissions by respondent Seafood Brokerage, Inc., and the plan and policy of said respondent members and said Seafood Brokerage, Inc., of exacting such fees and commissions from the sellers of said products is in violation of subsection (c) of section 2 of said Clayton Act, as amended.

Par. 21. Respondent members of respondents Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association and San Pedro Fish Exchange, in the course and conduct of their respective businesses, purchased fish and sea products from various producers, suppliers, and shippers, directly, or through the agency of respondents Los Angeles Fish Exchange and M. N. Blumenthal, upon orders placed by said respondent members with said Los Angeles Fish Exchange and M. N. Blumenthal; and as a result of such purchases and orders respondent members, and each of them, caused such producers, suppliers, and shippers to ship or transport fish and sea products from the places of origin thereof outside of the State of California into said State.

Par. 22. In the course of said purchasing transactions above referred to, resulting in the delivery of fish and sea products from one or more of said producers, suppliers, or shippers to said respondent members, by means of the purchasing services of respondents Los Angeles Fish Exchange and M. N. Blumenthal, or without such services, respondent members of Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association and San Pedro Fish Exchange, caused and required said producers, suppliers, and shippers to transmit, pay to and deliver to respondent M. N. Blumenthal, a brokerage fee or commission, being a certain percentage of the purchase price agreed upon by buyer respondents and the seller. In the course of such purchasing transactions respondent M. N. Blumenthal received and accepted such fees and commissions for which no services connected with the purchase of such products by said respondent members were rendered to said producers, shippers, or suppliers, and the said M. N. Blumenthal received and accepted such brokerage fees and commissions as agent for said purchasers, being said respondent members above referred to, or one or more of them. In receiving and accepting said fees and commissions, respondent M. N. Blumenthal was the agent and representative of respondent members of said Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association and San Pedro Fish Exchange, and acted for them and in their behalf and under their control.

Par. 23. The receipt and acceptance of such brokerage fees and commissions by respondent M. N. Blumenthal, was in violation of subsection (c) of section 2 of said Clayton Act, as amended.

Par. 24. Respondent members of the respondent Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association, in the ordinary course and conduct of their respective businesses, purchase fish and sea products from various producers, suppliers, and shippers, directly, or through the agency of respondent Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, or through respondent Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, as intermediary, upon orders placed by said respondent members with said Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation; and as a result of such purchases or orders respondent members and each of them, cause such producers, suppliers, and shippers to ship or transport fish and sea products from the places of origin thereof outside of the State of California into said State.

Par. 25. In the course of said purchasing transactions referred to herein, resulting in the delivery of fish and sea products from one or more of said producers, suppliers, or shippers to said respondent members by means of the purchasing services of respondent Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, or without such services, respondent members of said Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association have and do cause and require said producers, suppliers, and shippers, and each of them, to transmit, pay to, and deliver to respondent Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation a brokerage fee or commission, being a certain percentage of the purchase price agreed upon by buyer respondents and the seller. In the course of such purchasing transactions, respondent Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation has received and accepted, and is receiving and accepting, such fees and commissions for which no services connected with such purchases of said products by respondent members of Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association were rendered to said producers, suppliers, or shippers, and the said Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation has and does receive and accept such brokerage fees and commissions as agent for said purchasers, being respondent members of Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association, or one or more of them. In receiving and accepting said brokerage fees and commissions, and at all times in the conduct of its business respondent Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation is the agent and representative of respondent members of Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association and acts for them and in their behalf and is under their control.

PAR. 26. The receipt and acceptance of such so-called brokerage fees and commissions by respondent Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, for the use and benefit of respondent members of Southern California Wholesale Fish Dealers Association, in the manner and under the circumstances hereinabove set forth, and the plan and policy of said respondent members and said Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation of exacting such fees and commissions from the sellers of said products is in violation of subsection (c) of section 2 of said Clayton Act, as amended.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, constitute either unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act, or violations of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended, as hereinabove specified.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission on the complaint of the Commission, the answers of the parties respondent named in the caption hereof, testimony and other evidence taken before Robert S. Hall, an examiner for the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of Allen C. Phelps, counsel for the Commission and Clifton A. Hix, counsel for respondents, San Pedro Fish Exchange and Seafood Brokerage, Inc., and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended, by an Act of Congress approved June 19, 1936 (the Robinson-Patman Act);

It is ordered, That the respondent, San Pedro Fish Exchange, an unincorporated association, its officers:

Giosue Di Massa, a partner in respondent Los Angeles Fish and Oyster Co.
Jerry Zankich, a partner in respondent Zankich Bros. Fish Co.
Anthony B. Jaconi, a partner in respondent Pioneer Fisheries.

and respondent Los Angeles Fish Exchange, a corporation, and respondent M. N. Blumenthal, and respondent Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation and Elmo C. Jack, manager, and the following-named respondents, stockholders of said Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation:

Max Freeman and Arthur Freeman, holders of a majority of the stock in respondent Superior Sea Food Co., Ltd.
Jack DeLuca, sole owner of the stock of respondent Los Angeles Fish and Oyster Co.
Louis G. Beverino, secretary, treasurer and manager of respondent Central Fish and Oyster Co.
Stephen Gentry and George Kriste, partners of respondent Western Fish Co.
Morris Isenberg, owning and operating respondent Mermaid Fish and Oyster Co.
John Di Massa, a partner in respondent National Seafood Co.
Guiseppe Alioto, president of the San Francisco International Fish Co., which owns one-third of the stock of respondent Central Fish & Oyster Co.

Cease and desist, In connection with purchases of fish and sea products in interstate commerce by any of respondent stockholders of either respondent Seafood Brokerage, Inc., or respondent Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, or by any of respondent wholesale fish dealers whom any such stockholders owns, controls, or represents or with whom he is associated or affiliated, as hereinabove specified, from receiving and accepting and from the practice of receiving or accepting, either directly or indirectly, from suppliers or sellers of such products, any brokerage fees or commission or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof.

It is further ordered, That respondent Seafood Brokerage, Inc., in connection with purchases of fish or sea products hereafter made by its stockholders in interstate commerce, or those respondent dealers whom such stockholders represent or are affiliated with, as hereinabove specified, through the medium of said Seafood Brokerage, Inc., cease and desist from paying or granting to such stockholders any brokerage fees or commissions, or any dividends, disbursements or payments in lieu thereof.

It is further ordered, That respondent Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, in connection with purchases of fish or sea products hereafter made by its stockholders in interstate commerce, or those respondent dealers whom such stockholders represent or are affiliated with, as hereinabove specified, through the medium of said Southern Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, cease and desist from paying or granting to such stockholders any brokerage fees or commissions, or any dividends, disbursements, or payments in lieu thereof.

It is further ordered, That respondent members of San Pedro Fish Exchange or Southern California Fish Dealers Association, in connection with the purchase of fish or sea products in interstate commerce hereafter made by them or any of them, cease and desist from receiving or accepting, either directly or indirectly, from respondents Seafood Brokerage, Inc., or Southern California Sea Products Brokerage Corporation, any brokerage fees or commission, or any dividends, disbursements or payments in lieu thereof.

It is further ordered, That each of the respondents shall within 60 days of service upon them of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he or it has complied with this order.
Where an individual engaged in manufacture of its "Glantex" medicinal preparation and in sale and distribution thereof to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of similar preparations or others intended for similar usage in commerce as aforesaid; in advertisements of its said Glantex which it inserted in newspapers and periodicals and through circulars, booklets, form letters, and other advertising material sent through the mails and circulated among the various States and in the District of Columbia and through broadcasts from radio stations of extra-State audience—

Represented expressly and by implication that said Glantex was a safe, competent, and reliable remedy and treatment for prostatitis, cystitis, urethritis, dropsy, sugar diabetes, illio-colitis, inflammation of the bladder, ptomaine poison, and worn out or run down feeling, and that it had curative value for diseases generally known to mankind;

Facts being that none of the drugs contained in the formula of aforesaid preparation had any proper bearing on the genito-urinary tract and such product had no value in the treatment of any diseases or disorders thereof, it was not a safe, competent, and reliable remedy or treatment for prostatitis, cystitis, or any of the other diseases and symptoms for which it was claimed to be as above set forth, was of no value whatever in treatment of hypertrophied prostrate glands and would not reduce such glands, when enlarged and congested, to normal size, no internal medication alone constitutes competent treatment for prostatic ailments, and it contained no drug that would in any way aid nature in causing the various glands of the body to function in more normal manner, but chemical composition thereof was such that it could not be expected to produce any therapeutic effect upon any known disease or pathological condition, and it had no other therapeutic value other than that, when taken internally and in large quantity, it was a laxative and nothing more;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that such false statements and representations were true, and of inducing purchase of its said product because of such belief, and with result, as consequence, that trade was diverted unfairly to it from competitors engaged in selling preparations designed for treatment of same diseases and conditions, and who do not misrepresent their preparations or effectiveness thereof; to the injury of competition in commerce:
Complaint

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas and Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiners.

Mr. William L. Taggart for the Commission.

Hall & Cotten, of Oklahoma City, Okla., and Mr. R. A. Wilkerson, of Pryor, Okla., for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that George G. Neff, an individual, doing business under the trade name Prostex Co., herein-after referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, George G. Neff, an individual, doing business under the trade name Prostex Co., has been, and is now, engaged in the business of offering for sale and selling a medical preparation for the treatment of various diseases, ailments, and conditions afflicting mankind. The principal office and place of business of respondent is Miami, Okla. The preparation marketed by respondent is known and described as "Glantex." The respondent causes the preparation, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Oklahoma to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of Oklahoma and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains a course of trade and commerce in said preparation so distributed and sold by him between the State of Oklahoma and the various other States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent has been, and is, in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with other individuals, and with firms, corporations, and partnerships engaged in the distribution and sale of preparations used and useful for the treatment of the diseases, ailments, and conditions for which the respondent recommends his said preparation.
PAR. 3. In the operation of his said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said preparation by members of the public, the respondent causes advertisements to be published in various newspapers in the United States, distributes booklets, pamphlets, circulars, and labels, and broadcasts radio programs containing advertisements regarding said preparation. In said advertisements respondent makes many statements purporting to be descriptive of said preparation and regarding its efficacy as a treatment for various diseases, ailments, and conditions afflicting mankind. Among and typical of the statements so made and used by the respondent are the following representations and claims:

PROSTATE SUFFERERS. Prostate gland acute or chronic, rheumatism, kidney and bladder sufferers send for free trial package, amazing results. Endorsed by doctors.

PROSTEX COMPANY, Dept. 7, Miami, Oklahoma.

• • • For the agonizing pains and discomforts caused by prostatitis, cystitis, urethritis, difficult urination, dribbling, getting up nights, catarrhal conditions of urinary tract and prostate gland. Its influence will be manifested as a relief or arthritis and neuralgia occasioned by acute or chronic congestion of the prostate gland. There is no use in wasting time with anything that does not stop your pain, and if it does, then you know that you are going to get relief. Order a bottle of GLANTEX today. • • •

• • • It is so effective and quick acting in the relief of prostate gland disorders, that 90 to 95% of the sufferers who have used GLANTEX say that one dose generally relieves some of the pain and inconveniences caused by a congested and inflamed prostate gland. This single dose of GLANTEX might give you more relief than all of the treatments you have ever tried. It has been proven in Clinical tests.

If your bladder is highly inflamed this dose of GLANTEX may give you prompt relief and might cause you to pass a quantity of pus with your urine or from your gland. If you are suffering a chronic discharge the first dose may stop the same. GLANTEX acts by reducing the congestion and inflammation, and its internal antiseptic effect.

• • • GLANTEX is absolutely harmless, but has a very powerful tonic effect and your backaches, leg aches, worn out and run down feeling will in all probability disappear in most instances.

• • • If results are obtained, it may be attributed to the fact that GLANTEX is helping nature to cause the gland to function in a more normal manner.

• • • GLANTEX is also very good for all forms of bowel trouble. • • • GLANTEX actually reduces a congested and inflamed prostate gland to normal size, in most instances.

• • • this medicine has a very high potency in the treatment of these various diseases some of which I will mention: prostatitis, acute indigestion, ptomaine poison, sugar diabetes, dropsy, iliocolitis, gastritis, malaria, and common physic.

Acute Indigestion: Most always one dose will relieve the pain almost immediately, even quicker than morphine. A few doses, one a day, will soon get the patient O. K.
Ptomaine Poison: A dose an hour apart for two or three doses soon eliminates the poison and the patient is fine in a short time.

Rheumatism: When caused as an after effect of prostatitis, venereal disease, cystitis, etc., it acts very quickly.

Dropy: In light cases, sometimes one dose completely removes all signs of dropsy. A year or so ago we had a case of dropsy, a lady weighing nearly 300 pounds. The swelling was very bad, both shins broken from knee to ankle and wasted as much as a gallon a day or night. In three months there was not a sign of swelling and the patient was doing her housework and was happy. We have known of other similar cases that responded more quickly.

Illio-colitis, colitis, dysentery: A few doses relieves them in a few hours.

In said statements, and in other similar statements not herein set out with respect to the preparation, respondent directly and by implication represents that the preparation forms a safe, competent, and reliable remedy and treatment for such physical troubles as prostatitis, cystitis, urethritis, for backaches, leg aches, worn out or rundown feeling, acute indigestion, ptomaine poisoning, sugar diabetes, dropsy, illio-colitis, gastritis, malaria, and that it acts as an effective physic without pain or cramping, and generally has a curative effect for diseases known to man.

In truth and in fact the said preparation is not a safe, competent, and reliable remedy and treatment for prostatitis, cystitis, urethritis, for backaches, leg aches, worn out or rundown feeling, acute indigestion, ptomaine poisoning, sugar diabetes, dropsy, illio-colitis, gastritis, malaria, and does not act as an effective physic without pain or cramping, and generally is not a remedy and has no curative effect for diseases known to man; and such statements are false and misleading.

Par. 4. There are among respondent’s competitors in commerce, as herein set out, those who do not in any way misrepresent the character and nature of their products and who do not make use of any of the misleading representations herein set out and similar ones with respect to the therapeutic value of their respective preparations.

Par. 5. The aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations used by the respondent in offering for sale and selling the said preparation in commerce as herein set out, have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent’s preparation on account of said erroneous and mistaken belief.

As a result thereof trade in said commerce is unfairly diverted to respondent from his competitors who do not, in the sale and distribution of their respective preparations, make use of the same or similar misrepresentations. In consequence thereof substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 6. The methods, acts, and practices of respondent herein set forth are to the prejudice of the public and of competitors of the respondent, as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of section 5 of an act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on January 4, 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent George G. Neff, an individual doing business under the trade name of Prostex Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by attorneys for the respondent before trial examiners of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments of counsel, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPHS 1. Respondent George G. Neff, is an individual doing business under the trade name of Prostex Co., having his principal office and place of business located in the city of Miami, State of Oklahoma, and is engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of a liquid medicinal preparation known as Glantex. Respondent causes said product, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in Miami, Okla., to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of Oklahoma, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said product in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent is, and has been, in substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations and firms who are also engaged in the sale and distribution of similar preparations or other preparations intended for similar usage in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of the product Glantex, respondent has caused advertisements to be inserted in newspapers, magazines, and periodicals, and has sent through the United States mails circulars, booklets, form letters, and other advertising material, all of which were circulated between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and has caused advertisements to be broadcast over radio stations, which radio stations were of such power to cause their said broadcast to be transmitted to States of the United States other than the State of origin. Typical of said advertisements, thus disseminated by the respondent, are the following:

and bladder sufferers send for trial package, amazing results. Endorsed by some of which I will mention: Prostatitis, acute indigestion, prostatine poison, sugar diabetes, dropsy, ilio-colitis, gastritis, malaria, and common physic.

Rheumatism: When caused as an after-effect of prostatitis, venereal disease, cystitis, etc., it acts very quickly.
Findings

The aforesaid statements and representations, together with similar statements and representations appearing in respondent's advertising, but not set out herein, purport to be descriptive of respondent's preparation Glantex and of its effectiveness in use. In the manner and by the means aforesaid, respondent represents expressly and by implication that Glantex is a safe, competent, and reliable remedy and treatment for the following diseases and symptoms: Prostatitis, cystitis, urethritis, dropsy, sugar diabetes, illio-colitis, inflammation of the bladder, ptomaine poison, rheumatism, backaches, leg aches, gastritis, malaria, acute indigestion, and worn out or rundown feeling. In the same manner, respondent also represents that the preparation "Glantex" has curative value for diseases generally known to mankind.

PAR. 3. The formula for respondent's preparation is as follows:

A solution in water of <table>

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Ingredient</th>
<th>Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Alum (approximately)</td>
<td>7.3%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Epsom salts (approximately)</td>
<td>33.0%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Quinine sulphate (approximately)</td>
<td>½ grain per fluid ounce</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sulphuric acid</td>
<td>Small proportion</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Potassium nitrate</td>
<td>Small proportion</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

The recommended dosage of the preparation is one tablespoonful to a teaspoonful graduated down.

PAR. 4. The Commission finds that the statements made by respondent with respect to its aforesaid preparation are misleading and false. None of the drugs contained in the formula for Glantex have any proper bearing on the genito-urinary tract and such product has no value in the treatment of any disease or disorders of the genito-urinary tract. Said preparation is not a safe, competent, and reliable remedy or treatment for any of the following diseases and symptoms: Prostatitis, cystitis, urethritis, dropsy, sugar diabetes, illio-colitis, inflammation of the bladder, ptomaine poison, rheumatism, backaches, leg aches, gastritis, malaria, acute indigestion, or the feeling of being rundown. The preparation Glantex is of no value whatever in the treatment of hypertrophied prostate glands and will not reduce enlarged and congested prostate glands to normal size. No internal medication alone constitutes a competent treatment for prostatic ailments. There is no drug in the preparation that would in any way aid nature in causing the various glands of the body to function in a more normal manner. The chemical composition of the product Glantex is such that it could not be expected to produce any therapeutic effect upon any known disease or pathological condition. The preparation Glantex when taken internally is nothing more than a laxative and then only provided it is taken in a large quantity. It has no other therapeutic value.
PAR. 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing deceptive, false, and misleading statements in describing the preparation Glantex and its effectiveness in use has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such false statements and representations are true, and induces the purchase of respondent’s preparation because of said erroneous and mistaken belief. As a result thereof, trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors engaged in selling preparations designed for the treatment of these diseases and conditions who do not misrepresent their preparations or their effectiveness in use. In consequence thereof, injury has been done by respondent to competition in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein and oral arguments by counsel for the Commission and by counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent George G. Neff, an individual doing business under the trade name of Prostex Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of a medicinal preparation known as Glantex, or any other preparation composed of similar ingredients or possessing similar properties whether sold under the name or under any other name in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing directly or by implication:

1. That said preparation will cure prostatitis, cystitis, urethritis, sugar diabetes, dropsy, illio-colitis, gastritis, malaria, inflammation of the bladder, acute indigestion, ptomaine poisoning, rheumatism, backaches, leg aches, or worn out or rundown feeling, or will serve as a safe, competent, or effective treatment for any of such diseases or conditions.

2. That said preparation will cure any disease or pathological condition or will serve as a competent or effective treatment therefor or that said preparation possesses any therapeutic value in excess of that due to its laxative properties.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he is complying with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

SILVER SERVICE CORPORATION AND EDWIN I. GORDON

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3654. Complaint, Nov. 30, 1938—Decision, July 16, 1940

Where a corporation and an individual, who was its president and treasurer and -dominated and controlled its business activities and practices, engaged in sale and distribution to retail merchants of a sales promotion plan, under which they supplied to merchants entering into contracts with them, advertising material with which to conduct a "Count-the-dot" sale, and which contemplated use by local merchants of newspaper material supplied, reproducing pictures or photographs of various articles of plated silverware, with numerous dots imposed thereon, and offer by local merchant in local newspaper to award certain prizes of silverware free to person most nearly estimating correct number of dots, and also to give to stated number of persons whose answers were nearest to prize-winning answer certain credit checks" or coupons redeemable in silverware, and, as thus engaged, in substantial competition with others also engaged in sale and distribution of various sales promotion plans in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia, and Including among such competitors many who do not engage in methods and practices as herein set forth—

(a) Represented said sales promotion plan to particular merchants contacted and solicited as being a special campaign to introduce and advertise silverware in question, facts being it was in no sense such a special or introductory offer or advertising campaign, but merely method adopted by them for marketing said silverware, on sale of which, under an agreement between them and manufacturer of product, they received stated commission on each set sold;

(b) Represented or caused or assisted purchasers of such a plan to represent as aforesaid that plan in question was a contest, facts being it was not such within real meaning of term, in many instances no prizes of any kind were awarded but credit checks or coupons were forwarded by them or by merchant under their direction to all persons sending in answers to purported contest, without regard to correctness of answers submitted, and purported contest actually was merely means of obtaining names of members of public who might be interested in purchasing silverware, and of inducing, through issuance of such credit checks or coupons, purchase thereof;

(c) Represented or caused or assisted purchasers, as aforesaid indicated, to represent that through credit voucher, checks, or other form of prize or gift award, in connection with such plan, recipients were to be enabled to receive a credit, reduction, or other financial advantage in purchase of merchandise, facts being credit checks or coupons issued by them or by merchants under their direction did not have any value or represent any prize or discount to prospective purchaser, but represented merely difference between fictitious value advertised and regular retail price of silverware, and recipients of said vouchers or checks did not in fact receive any such credit, reduction, or other financial advantage based upon usual customary retail price of merchandise involved; and
Complaint

(d) Represented or caused or assisted purchasers, as above indicated, to represent as customary or regular price or value of merchandise offered for sale in connection with plan in question prices or values which were in fact fictitious, and in excess of those at which such merchandise was regularly and customarily offered for sale at retail in usual and normal course of business, and which, in some instances, were twice as much as regular retail prices of silverware involved;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial number of retail merchants into purchase of their said sales promotional plan, and substantial number of purchasing public into purchase of merchandise offered for sale in connection therewith, and with results that trade was diverted unfairly to them from their competitors; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Robert S. Hall and Mr. Edward E. Reardon, trial examiners.

Mr. James L. Fort for the Commission.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Silver Service Corporation, a corporation, and Edwin I. Gordon, an individual, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Silver Service Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 58 East Washington Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Edwin I. Gordon is the president and treasurer of respondent Silver Service Corporation and as such operates, dominates, and controls the business activities and affairs of respondent, Silver Service Corporation.

Respondent Silver Service Corporation, and respondent Edwin I. Gordon are engaged in the business of selling and offering for sale to retail merchants throughout the various States of the United States a certain sales promotion plan.

In the course and conduct of their said business respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a course of trade in said sales promotion plan in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
Par. 2. Respondents enter into contracts with various retail merchants throughout the various States of the United States, under and by the terms of which, for a stated consideration, respondents agree, among other things, to furnish to such merchants advertising mats and other supplies to be used by retail merchants in the conduct of a "Count-the-dot" sale. The mats, when used, reproduce what are known to the trade as "Count-the-Dot" puzzles, which consist of a reproduction or photograph of various articles of plated silverware featured by such retail merchants. Superimposed upon such reproduction or photograph are numerous dots. Retail merchants are instructed by the respondents to cause the insertion of such reproduction or photograph in a paper or periodical of general circulation within the trade area of such merchants for a contracted and stated period of time. Accompanying such picture is a representation made by the retail merchant, acting under instructions by the respondents, that upon a given day the retail merchant will give free of charge to the person most closely approximating the number of dots in the picture certain described merchandise which is represented to be of considerable value.

Further representations are made that a stated number of persons submitting answers or solutions to such puzzles nearest the correct answer or solution of the same will receive vouchers or checks redeemable in merchandise only and sold only at the store of such retail merchant.

Par. 3. In truth and in fact such credit vouchers or checks are indiscriminately distributed without regard to the solution submitted by contestants and are intended to be used and are used solely for the purpose of stimulating trade by enticing customers into the store of the merchant.

Par. 4. The contract between the respondents and retail merchants also provides, among other things, that the merchants shall be entitled to the services of a representative to advise them during the course of the sale or contest. Acting under the direction and advice of the respondents, retail merchants procure from Oneida, Ltd., a corporation manufacturing plated silverware and located at Oneida, N. Y., certain silver-plated articles which, upon instruction of respondents, are falsely represented to be in value more than the real worth thereof; such increase in represented value amounting to approximately the purported value of said credit vouchers.

The conditions and terms of the purchase of the plated silverware by the retail merchant from Oneida, Ltd., are fixed in a certain contract existing between said Oneida, Ltd., and respondents.

These false and fictitious values are widely advertised by circulars, handbills, periodicals, magazines, newspapers, and by other means throughout the trade area where the retail merchants operate, and the publishing of such fictitious prices has a tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial number of purchasers into the false belief that by purchasing the merchandise so advertised and represented during the period of the sale hereinbefore described, they effect economies and make pecuniary gains and savings. Relying upon such belief, a substantial number of the members of the purchasing public have purchased said merchandise.

Par. 5. In engaging in the business of stimulating trade and holding itself out as business consultants, the respondents are in competition with a substantial number of other persons, firms, copartner­ships, and corporations who likewise represent themselves to be business consultants and are engaged in the business of stimulating trade, but who do not engage in the practice of fostering false or fictitious prices, and who do not cause those with whom they contract falsely to represent to the purchasing public that the commodity offered for sale is of a superior quality to such articles ordinarily sold at a price for which it is offered for sale and who do not mislead and deceive or cause a deception of the members of the purchasing public by issuing, or causing to be issued, trade or credit vouchers for various stated amounts which are actually of no monetary value in purchasing from the merchants so issuing.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents have a tendency and capacity to and do in fact cause a substantial diversion of trade from their competitors. As a consequence thereof, substantial injury has been done and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 30th day of November 1938, issued, and thereafter served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Silver Service Corporation, a corporation, and Edwin I. Gordon, an individual, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.
Findings

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by James L. Fort, attorney for the Commission, before Robert S. Hall and Edward E. Reardon, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. No testimony or other evidence was offered by the respondents. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed on behalf of the respondents, and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Silver Service Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 58 East Washington Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Edwin I. Gordon, is the president and treasurer of respondent Silver Service Corporation and as such dominates and controls the business activities and practices of respondent Silver Service Corporation.

The respondents are now and since the year 1936 have been engaged in the sale and distribution of a sales-promotion plan to retail merchants, which plan includes certain purported contests and certain newspaper mats and other advertising material. Respondents cause and have caused their said plan and the contests and advertising material used in connection therewith, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain and since 1936 have maintained a course of trade in their said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. The respondents are in substantial competition with other corporations and individuals and with firms and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of various sales promotion plans in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business the respondents, acting through agents or solicitors, contact retail merchants and undertake to sell such merchants the respondents' sales promotion plan. If the merchant is induced to purchase the plan a written contract is entered into whereby the respondents agree, for a stated consideration, to supply to the merchant certain advertising material with which to conduct what is known as a "Count-the-dot" sale. The advertising material includes, among other things, certain newspaper mats which, when used, reproduce pictures or photographs of various articles of plated silverware. Superimposed upon such photographs are numerous dots. The retail merchant, acting under directions supplied to him by the respondents, causes these photographs to appear in local newspapers, along with representations that on a certain designated day the merchant will award certain pieces of silverware free to the person most nearly estimating the correct number of dots on the photographs appearing in such advertisements.

Further representations are made in the advertisements that in addition to the prize awarded for the most nearly correct answer in the contest, the merchant will give to a stated number of persons whose answers are nearest to the prize-winning answer certain "credit checks" or coupons redeemable in silverware.

While all of the operations in connection with the sale, including the advertising, are carried on in the name of the merchant, such operations are in fact planned and directed in their entirety by the respondents, acting through their agents. All mats and other advertising material are supplied by the respondents, and the merchant is guided and instructed by the respondents, through their agents, as to all of the details involved in putting the sale into operation.

PAR. 4. Under an agreement existing between respondents and the manufacture of the silverware used in the operation of the plan, the respondents receive a stated commission on each set of silverware sold during the sale.

The entire sales promotion plan is represented to the merchant by respondents as being a special campaign for the purpose of introducing and advertising the silverware. The Commission finds, however, that in fact the plan is in no sense a special or introductory or advertising campaign but is merely a method adopted by the respondents for marketing the silverware.

PAR. 5. The Commission further finds that the so-called "Count-the-dot" contest is not in fact a contest within the real meaning of the term. In many instances no prizes of any kind are awarded, but credit checks or coupons are forwarded by the respondents or by the merchant, under the respondents' direction, to all persons sending in answers to the purported contest, without regard to the correctness of the answers submitted by such persons. Actually, the purported contest is merely a means of obtaining the names of members of the public who might be interested in purchasing silverware, and of inducing, through the issuance of such credit checks or coupons, the purchase of such silverware.

PAR. 6. The Commission further finds that the values ascribed to such silverware in said advertising are highly fictitious, being greatly in excess of the prices at which such silverware is regularly and customarily sold at retail in the usual and normal course of business. In some instances the values advertised have been twice as much as the regular retail prices of the silverware. The credit checks or coupons issued by the respondents, or by the merchants under the respondents' direction, do not in fact have any value, and do not represent any prize or discount to the prospective purchaser, but merely represent the difference between the fictitious values advertised and the regular retail prices of the silverware.

PAR. 7. There are among the competitors of the respondents as referred to in paragraph 2 hereof many who do not engage in the methods and practices herein set forth.

PAR. 8. The use by the respondents of the acts, practices, and methods herein set forth has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial number of retail merchants into the purchase of respondents' sales promotional plan, and a substantial number of the purchasing public into the purchase of the merchandise offered for sale in connection with such plan. As a result trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors and in consequence substantial injury has been done and is being done by the respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondents, testimony, and other evidence taken before Robert S.
Hall and Edward E. Reardon, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint, and brief filed by James L. Fort, counsel for the Commission, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Silver Service Corporation, a corporation, and its officers, and Edwin I. Gordon, an individual, their respective agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of any sales promotion plan or of any merchandise which is to be resold through use of a sales promotion plan furnished by respondents, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that the respondents are conducting any special campaign or advertising campaign to introduce or advertise silverware or other merchandise.

2. Representing, or causing or assisting the purchasers of said plan to represent, that any sales promotion plan in which credit vouchers, checks, gifts, or any form of so-called prizes, are given to the entrants or contestants therein without regard to the relative correctness of the answers or solutions submitted by said entrants or contestants, is a contest.

3. Representing, or causing or assisting the purchasers of said plan to represent, that credit vouchers or checks, or any other form of prizes or gifts awarded in connection with such sales promotion plan, enable the recipients thereof to receive a "credit," "reduction," or other financial advantage in the purchase of merchandise when the recipients thereof do not in fact receive a credit, reduction, or other financial advantage based upon the usual and customary retail price of such merchandise.

4. Representing, or causing or assisting the purchasers of said plan to represent, as the customary or regular prices or values of merchandise offered for sale in connection with the said sales promotion plan, prices or values which are in fact fictitious and in excess of the prices at which such merchandise is regularly and customarily offered for sale.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

Docket 3779. Complaint, May 2, 1939—Decision, July 16, 1940

Where a corporation engaged for more than 15 years past in sale and distribution of certain masonry cement under trade name of Hy-Test and which, through its president and principal executive officer who owned controlling interest therein, had taken part, along with other members and organizations of general trade and industry concerned, in tests conducted by Bureau of Standards of the various products involved of the different participating members in the interest of the public, the trade, State governments, and the United States Government, and which, through active participation therein by its said president and through conferences with officials of said Bureau and notices therefrom and otherwise, was fully advised as to the policy adopted and respected generally in said connection of divulging to participant's results of said tests only as concerned particular participant's product and of not divulging at all to general public results thereof as respects particular products or manufacturers' data—

(a) Divulged and made public results of such research by overprinting on Bureau's circular describing same, symbol identifying its own particular product, and distributed and made known to its salesmen and through them to general public, results of the tests or research by said Bureau as they affected not only its own product but those of competitors;

(b) Published under same title as made use of by chief of section concerned of said Bureau in article entitled, "Brick Laying to Avoid Leaks," and included in its own article thus published, and at its own expense, statement identifying and praising its own particular product, and on a comparative basis, as a result of particular tests in question and investigations and research by said Bureau; and

(c) Published, through its agents and through advertising in sales promotional literature from time to time during the years, the results of said tests of the Bureau and information with reference thereto, in which it identified all masonry cements as used therein and not disclosed in the Bureau's research paper, in violation, as aforesaid, of the established policy and practice in the Bureau, and contrary to its rules and instructions, and understandings between it and participants and in bad faith;

With results, through its said acts and practices in advising purchasing public as to identity of cements used in said tests, made under supervision of said Bureau as aforesaid, and through use of reports of tests and articles prepared by said section chief, for advertising publicity and sales promotion purposes, of placing it at a competitive advantage over its competitors who participated in said tests under the Research Associates plan of bureau in question, above described, and were unwilling to adopt and use such or any other method or methods contrary to policy of said Bureau with reference to plan in question, and compiled with rules, regulations, and instructions issued by said Bureau, and did not use reports of tests

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.
Mr. Curtis C. Shears for the Commission.
Mr. Percy II. Russell, Jr., and Mr. Edward K. Wheeler of Kirkland, Fleming, Green, Martin & Ellis, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

Complaint 1

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Hy-Test Cement Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Hy-Test Cement Co., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business located in the Fox Building, Philadelphia, Pa. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the business of advertising, offering for sale and selling masonry cement under the trade name "Hy-Test" Masonry Cement. In the conduct of its business, as aforesaid, respondent causes and has caused said cement when sold to be transported from its place of manufacture in Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, at their respective places of busi-

1 By order dated August 10, 1939, and in response to motion of acting chief counsel and counsel for Commission pars. 4 and 5 of the complaint as originally issued were amended to read as set forth in the complaint as published herewith.

Said order in response to such motion of said acting chief counsel and trial attorney for the Commission in the proceedings in question further provided, "that all testimony and other evidence heretofore received at hearings held in this proceeding be made a part of the record in connection with the complaint as amended and be considered in like manner and to the same effect as though said testimony and other evidence had been originally received at hearings held upon the allegations contained in said complaint as amended, saving, however, to the respondent its right to rebut said testimony or other evidence by any proper means at any such subsequent hearings as may be held therein."

ness. There is now and has been for some time last past, a course of trade in said cement by said respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respond­ ten is in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of cement in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. The National Bureau of Standards in the Department of Commerce of the United States, hereinafter referred to as the Bureau, has as one of its chief functions the discovery and evaluation of material standards and the solution of basic technical problems by the use of its unique research and testing facilities. Its establishment of more precise values for the standard constants furnishes an exact basis for scientific experiment and design and makes possible the efficient technical control of industrial processes. Its work on standards of quality sets up attainable standards to assure high utility in the products of industry and furnishes a scientific basis for cooperation between the Bureau and industry in research charged with the public interest. In the course of its work in the fields involving the standards above described, it makes researches and tests for the deter­ nination of the properties of stone, clays, cement, and other structural materials. The Bureau's functions are exercised for the United States Government, State governments, and the general public. In the case of the general public, researches are made by persons designated as "Research Associates," assigned to the Bureau by an association representing an industry, or by a group of associations. Researches made by Research Associates have for their object the solution of problems considered important to the entire industry concerned. In such cases, the facts found are made public in order that the industry as a whole and the public dealing with it may benefit. In order to obtain the cooperation of industry, it is necessary that all members of an industry be assured that no one member shall profit at the expense of the other members of the industry. To secure the benefits resulting to the public from such researches, it is the rule and policy of the Bureau to omit from the report the names of the manufacturers whose products are utilized, as well as the names or other identification of their brands. Each such manufacturer is given a key which will enable him to identify in such report his own product, but not the products of other participants. In transmitting this key number, it is the practice of the Bureau to inform each manufacturer receiving the same that he may not utilize the information so disclosed for advertising or sales promotion purposes.
PAR. 3. During the years 1931–32 an investigation of masonry mortars was undertaken by said bureau, at the request of the American Face Brick Association, the National Lime Association, and certain producers of masonry cements, under the “Research Associate” procedure described in paragraph 2 hereof, and more fully outlined in Bureau Circular 296, entitled “Research Associate Plan.” Upon the completion of such investigation, the results were printed in the Bureau’s “Research Paper 683, A study of the properties of mortars and bricks and their relation to bond”; and information respecting the same was also given out in the following papers:

“Permeability Tests of 8-inch brick wallettes.”
“Rate of stiffening of mortars on a porous base,” Rock Products, September 10, 1932.

All of the manufacturers whose products had been used in carrying out such tests were sent by the Bureau a copy of its Research Paper No. 683 containing the results of the investigation, and informed of the key numbers of their products, as used in the test and shown by said report; and all of said manufacturers were at the same time informed that the information contained in the report was not to be used for advertising, publication, or sales promotion, as provided in said Circular 296, “Research Associate Plan.”

The respondent was one of the manufacturers whose product was used in making the tests described and a report upon which formed part of Research Paper No. 683. On or about July 5, 1934, respondent was informed in writing by the Bureau:

Replying to your letter of July 2, your material is designated in Research Paper 683 as masonry cement No. 6 used in making mortar B-VI. This information is not to be used for advertising, publication, or sales promotion.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said products in said commerce, respondent is now and for some time last past has been, publishing in connection with its advertising and sales promotion of said cement the identity of the various brands of cement of the manufacturers participating in said investigation as described in paragraph 3 hereof, and particularly the identity and information that the masonry cement used in making mortar B-VI as designated in said Research Paper 683 was “Hy-Test” Masonry Cement, and is now and has been distributing said information widely in commerce. The use by respondent of said method of sales promotion in revealing said information, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to the established rules and policies of the Bureau and the public policy of the United States. Many persons, firms, and corporations, participating in said tests as described in paragraph 2 hereof, who are in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any methods that are contrary to a policy or rule of practice established by the Bureau in connection with the Bureau's said "Research Associate Plan." Many persons, firms, and corporations are induced by said method employed by respondent in the sale of said cement to buy respondent's cement in preference to cement offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent of not observing the policy and rules of the Bureau, has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent method and as a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said cement in said commerce, respondent is making and has made many misleading representations, among and typical of which are representations contained in a booklet respondent has caused to be prepared, published and circulated, entitled "Bricklaying To Avoid Leaks." In addition to publishing in said booklet the information alleged in paragraph 4 hereof showing the identity of respondent's said product as used in said test in violation of the rules and policy of the Bureau and of the public policy of the United States as hereinbefore alleged, said booklet is and has been prepared, published, and circulated in such a manner as to import and imply that it is in whole or substantially an official report of the Bureau, when in truth and in fact it is not a report of said Bureau, but contains many misleading representations as well as containing in a changed and modified form, an altered reprint of an article written by one D. E. Parsons, chief of the Masonry Construction Section of the Bureau. Among and typical of said representations used and caused to be used by the said respondent are and have been the following:

Does not this report of the Bureau of Standards point to the following essential conclusions?

Here is real information from the Bureau of Standards, real help-worthy views. The Bureau of Standards' report points out the danger of depending on single walls to keep water out.

Listen to the views of your own Bureau of Standards.
and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said publication is in whole or substantially an official report of said Bureau, and that statements which are quoted in said booklet are taken from official reports of said Bureau. The use of said booklet containing said representations and the information of the purchasing public as to the identity of said keys used in said test as aforesaid by respondent has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 2nd day of May 1939, issued, and subsequently served, its complaint herein charging Hy-Test Cement Co., a corporation, with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act. Said complaint was amended on the 10th day of August 1939. After issuance of said complaint and the filing of answer thereto by respondent, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Curtis C. Shears, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Percy H. Russell, Jr., of the firm of Kirkland, Fleming, Green, Martin & Ellis, attorneys for the respondent, before Randolph Preston, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto and oral argument of counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion.
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Hy-Test Cement Co., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business located in the Fox Building, Philadelphia, Pa. Abraham T. Malmed is, and since the organization of the corporation has been, its president and principal executive officer, owning a controlling interest in said corporation.

Respondent is now and for more than 15 years has been engaged in the sale and distribution of a certain masonry cement under the trade name Hy-Test Masonry Cement.

Par. 2. The National Bureau of Standards of the Department of Commerce of the United States, hereinafter referred to as "The Bureau," has as one of its chief functions the discovery and evaluation of materials, standards, and the solution of basic technical problems by the use of its unique and unusually efficient research and testing facilities; its establishment of more precise values for the standard constants furnishes an exact or approximately exact basis for scientific experiments and designs, and thus makes possible a more efficient and technical control of various industrial processes. The Bureau's work on standards of quality thus sets up practical and attainable standards for assuring better utility of the products of the industry and furnishes a scientific basis for cooperation between the said Bureau and industry in researches which are in the public interest.

In the course of the aforesaid work, the Bureau makes researches and tests for the determination of the purposes and comparative usefulness in structural work of stone, clays, cement, and other similar materials. These functions and activities are exercised for the United States Government, for the various State governments and for the general public. In the case of investigations on behalf of the general public, researches are made by persons designated as "Research Associates," assigned to the Bureau by some individual or individuals, association or group of associations, connected with the production and use of the materials thus to be investigated. The researches made by said Research Associates have for their object the solution of problems considered important to the entire industry concerned. In such cases, the facts found are made public, in order that the industry as a whole and the public dealing with it may be benefited thereby. In order to obtain the cooperation of industry, the Bureau has had a general policy of assuring all persons and associations thus cooperating that the work of a Research Associate is one of peculiar trust, often confidential, on problems of concern to the entire industry; that the work of such Associates is directed exclusively to research projects approved by the director of the Bureau of Standards; that no member participating shall profit thereby at the expense of other members of said industries or industry. Such policy and rules have been authorized by acts of Congress.

To secure the benefits resulting to the public from such researches, it is and has been the rule and policy of the Bureau to omit from the report of its findings upon materials submitted as aforesaid, the names of the manufacturers or other persons whose products are thus tested, as well as the trade names or other identification of the particular brands or products submitted. Each participant is given a key, or symbol, which will enable him to identify in such report his own product, but is given no information whereby he may identify the products of the other participants. In transmitting this key it is and has been the practice of the Bureau to inform each participant receiving the same that he may not utilize the information thus furnished him for advertising or sales-promotional purposes.

As early as March 27, 1929, respondent had notice of the policy of the Bureau with respect to the use of reports of its findings upon materials tested for advertising or sales promotional purposes and the divulgence of the identity of products tested, for on that date the Director of the Bureau wrote the president of respondent a letter which was in part as follows:

We have received from an architect in New Jersey a copy of your advertisement the first page of which contains in large print the heading, "U. S. Bureau of Standards," and following this, various excerpts and references to our Circular 360.

The Bureau does not wish its publications to be used in this manner and would like very much for you to withdraw this circular of yours from circulation.

Par. 3. Beginning with the year 1931 and continuing until the year 1934, under the plans and policies of the Bureau above set forth, and at the request of the American Face Brick Association, the National Lime Association, the respondent Hy-Test Cement Co., and certain other producers of masonry cement, the Bureau conducted, under its Research Associate procedure as described in paragraph 2, supra, a certain series of tests in regard to mortars, bricks, their relation to bond, and other related questions.

During the period of the said investigation there were many conferences and much correspondence between the various firms above mentioned (hereinafter called "participants") and the Bureau, with reference to the nature and progress of said investigation. The respondent through its president, Malmed, actively participated in practically all of same and was fully advised as to the methods, policies, and practice of the Research Associates in making the test as to respondent's products and those of other participants.
Findings

Respondent was present at one or more meetings when a paper writing entitled "Tentative Outline of Proposed Investigation of Masonry Mortar" was discussed. Paragraph 4 of same contains, in part, the following language:

In any report or publication of results, no material will be designated by its trade name. Any organization may learn of the performance of its own material provided it adheres to the Bureau's policy of regarding all of the information as strictly confidential.

PAR. 4. A final report of the results of the test was embodied in and formed a part of Bureau's Research Paper No. 683, which bears date March 14, 1934, and which was generally distributed, to respondent and the other participants, some time thereafter. In said research paper, respondents product, Hy-Test Masonry Cement, was referred to by the symbol "B-VI," and all cements tested were designated by similar symbols.

Shortly thereafter, respondent, in violation of the rules and policy of the Bureau, to which it had agreed, made known to the public in various ways that the said symbol referred to its product, one of such ways being by overprinting, in large blue type, on the first page of said Bureau's Research Paper 683, the following words and figures, to wit:

Hy-Test Cement in this paper is designated as B-VI. See pages 638-39, 41-42.

On April 13, 1934, the respondent through its president, Malmed, wrote a letter to said Bureau which contained the following among other statements:

We originally agreed to all rules for conducting these tests.

In the month of May or early part of June 1934, respondent distributed to its salesmen information regarding "Secret tests made by the Bureau of Standards on various types of mortar and brick—1931-34." The identification on all of the key numbers of the masonry cement used in the mortars represented by the symbols were by this means made known to the agents of respondent and, through them, to a substantial portion of the purchasing public.

On July 2, 1934, respondent wrote said Bureau, requesting that it be officially notified as to the key number used to identify its product. Malmed had theretofore known this and had distributed information identifying respondent's symbols and those of other participants in the said tests.
On July 5, 1934, the said Bureau advised respondent, in writing, of the symbol used to designate its cement only, and it further cautioned respondent as follows:

This information is not to be used for advertising, publication, or sales promotion.

On July 7, 1934, all the other participants were similarly advised.

In the month of July 1934, Malmed, president of the respondent, had a conference in Washington, D. C., with Dr. Bates, chief of the Clay and Silicate Products Division of the said Bureau, with reference to the Bureau's letter prohibiting disclosure of the identity of the symbols, which had been so generally done by respondent and its agents. Thereafter there was some correspondence and conversations between the Bureau and Malmed and other participants as to the divulgence of said symbols.

On July 5, 1935, respondent wrote to said Bureau in part as follows:

I thoroughly understand that they (results of tests and symbols) must not be used for advertising purposes, and you have my word of honor on this.

On July 30, 1935, the said Bureau advised Malmed:

This information (as to said tests) is confidential and not to be used for advertising, publication, or sales promotion.

Said respondent was at other times advised by the said Bureau to the same effect.

During the years 1935 to 1938, inclusive, respondent continued to insert an advertisement in Sweet’s Catalogue, a publication in general use by architects, engineers, and contractors in the United States, which advertisement contained much of the confidential information which respondent had obtained as the result of being a participant in said tests.

Par. 5. In September 1937, an article entitled “Bricklaying to Avoid Leaks,” prepared by D. E. Parsons, chief of the Masonry Construction Section of said Bureau, was published in “The American Builder and Building Age,” a magazine generally used and relied upon by the building trades in the United States.

In the early part of the year 1938 respondent, at his own expense, caused to be published and distributed in commerce, as an advertisement in promotion of the sale in commerce of respondent's product, a pamphlet bearing the same title “Bricklaying to Avoid Leaks,” which pamphlet contained what erroneously purported to be an exact reprint of the said Parsons article of the same title, and which gave the impression to the general public that it was a Government publication. On page 10 of this second, or private, publication, in the last paragraph, it is stated:

An investigation took place at the Bureau of Standards from 1931 to 1934, which was paid for by the American Face Brick Association, the Portland Cement Association, and a group of cement manufacturers. The Hy-Test Masonry Cement, known as "Mortar B-VI," was mentioned as one of the five outstanding mortars that provided good bonding efficiency, and it is a matter of record that it is the only one of the five leaders that came forth with a perfect record on durability of bond tests.

Said pamphlet also contained other statements and conclusions which greatly praised the Hy-Test Masonry Cement.

Shortly thereafter, Dr. L. J. Briggs, and other officials of said Bureau, called said Malmed, president of respondent, to Washington for a conference and directed that he cease the distribution of said pamphlet until he had obliterated therefrom all the confidential information obtained from the said tests. To this Malmed agreed, but the first copies sent out did not completely obliterate such information, if at all. After subsequent communications from the Bureau the said obliteration was made.

Most of the other participants in said tests neither identified their cements nor otherwise made public any of the results of said tests, but abided by their understanding and agreement with said Bureau to conform to its policy as to maintaining the confidential nature of the results of said tests.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of its business as hereinbefore described, during the years 1934 to 1939, inclusive, and for the purpose of promoting the purchase of its products in commerce, the respondent from time to time published, through its agents and by advertising in sales promotional literature, the results of said tests and information with reference thereto, identifying all masonry cements used in said tests but not disclosed in said Research Paper 683. The use by the respondent of said information was in violation of the established policy and practices of said Bureau of Standards, and contrary to the rules and written instructions of said Bureau and the understanding between said Bureau and the participants in said tests—all of which was done in bad faith; and persons, firms, and corporations have been induced by said methods employed by respondent as aforesaid to buy respondent's cement in preference to cement offered for sale and sold by competitors of respondent who do not use the same or similar methods.

PAR. 7. The other participants in said tests hereinbefore described, and who are in competition with respondent in said cement business, have been and are unwilling to adopt and use such methods, or any other method or methods contrary to the policy of the said Bureau with reference to the said Research Associates plan as hereinbefore described.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent in advising the purchasing public as to the identity of the cements used in said tests made under the supervision of the National Bureau of Standards of the Department of Commerce as aforesaid and the use of the reports of tests and the articles prepared by the said D. E. Parsons, chief of the Masonry Construction Section of said Bureau, for advertising, publicity, and sales-promotion purposes, places the respondent at a competitive advantage over its competitors who participated in said test but who comply with the rules, regulations, or instructions issued by said Bureau of Standards and do not use reports of tests for advertising, publicity, or sales-promotion purposes or divulge the identity of the products used in making such tests. As a result a substantial portion of the purchasing public has been induced to buy said product and trade in commerce between and among the States and in the District of Columbia has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and the respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before Randolph Preston, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral argument by Curtis C. Shears, counsel for the Commission, and by Percy H. Russell, Jr. (with Edward K. Wheeler on the brief) of Kirkland, Fleming, Green, Martin & Ellis, of Washington, D. C., counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Hy-Test Cement Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or indirectly, or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of Hy-Test Masonry Cement or any other cement, or any other product, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Divulging, in any manner, or assisting the purchasing public in determining, by any means, the identity of the manufacturer or the brand name of any cement which was tested by the Bureau of Standards of the United States Department of Commerce; the results of which tests were published by the Bureau of Standards of the United States Department of Commerce in "Research Paper 683, A Study of the Properties of Mortars and Brick and Their Relation to Bond."

2. Using, in whole or in part, for advertising, publicity, or sales-promotion purposes, any report by any bureau, department, or other agency of the United States Government, or by any official or employee thereof, where such use of said report is violative of any rule, regulation, or instruction issued by said bureau, department or other agency, or where such use imports or implies, directly or inferentially, that said bureau, department, or other agency has approved or recommended the use of respondent's products.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

ROY T. EHRENZELLER, TRADING AS MAPLE LAWN POULTRY FARM AND MAPLE LAWN HATCHERY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 8941. Complaint, Nov. 8, 1939—Decision, July 16, 1940

Where an individual doing business as Maple Lawn Poultry Farm and Maple Lawn Hatchery and engaged in sale and distribution of baby chicks; in advertisements which he disseminated through newspapers, trade magazines, and other publications having general circulation throughout various States, and through letters, catalogues, circulars, leaflets, and other printed and written matter distributed among prospective purchasers—

(a) Represented that he personally supervised and controlled flocks from which his eggs were produced and owned and controlled same, through statements referring to his flocks, trade name, alleged methods, etc., such as "We leave in our breeding flocks only those birds," etc., "We will not tolerate any unsanitary or careless management of breeders," etc., and "our careful selection of breeding stock," etc.;

Facts being he did not own, control, or supervise any of the flocks of poultry supplying the eggs used in his hatchery and incubation business, but purchased same from various sources and had no personal knowledge as to whether or not the flocks producing such eggs were blood-tested or culled or free from disease; and

(b) Represented that the eggs from which his baby chicks were hatched were from blood-tested and culled flocks and that his said eggs and chicks were of superior grade, origin, quality, and type, character, and nature, and were from blood-tested and culled flocks and free from disease, through such statements among others as "Every Breeder is BLOOD-TESTED," "Blood-testing means the testing of a sample of blood, * * *" and "We leave in our breeding flocks only those birds which we are sure have not the slightest trace of this (pullorum) disease in their veins," and all flocks "are of superior worth, coming from proven varieties * * * all from vigorous, hardy breeders blood-tested annually * * *";

Facts being that, as above indicated, he purchased eggs from various sources, and had no personal knowledge as to whether or not flocks producing such eggs were blood tested or culled or free from disease, purchased in many instances eggs from flocks which had not been thus blood tested, etc., and, as understood from term "bloodtested" by purchasers of baby chicks, all chicks sold by him were hatched from eggs purchased as above detailed, and he therefore could not truthfully represent that chicks hatched by him from eggs purchased as aforesaid from flocks which were not blood tested nor culled nor free from disease, were themselves from blood tested and culled flocks or, as aforesaid, free from disease;
With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations were true and with result, as consequence, that substantial portion of purchasing public, because of such belief, was induced to purchase his said chicks:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts in commerce.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.

Mr. John R. Phillips, Jr., for the Commission.

Berman & Smith, of Washington, D. C., and Mr. Edred J. Pennell, of Mifflintown, Pa., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Roy T. Ehrenzeller, trading as Maple Lawn Poultry Farm and Maple Lawn Hatchery, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Roy T. Ehrenzeller, is an individual, residing at McAlisterville, Pa., trading as Maple Lawn Poultry Farm and Maple Lawn Hatchery, with his principal place of business located at McAlisterville in the State of Pennsylvania. Respondent is now and for several years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of baby chicks in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. The respondent causes his said baby chicks, when sold, to be shipped from his place of business in the State of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said baby chicks in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his baby chicks by members of the purchasing public, respondent has made false and misleading representations with respect to the grade, origin, quality, and type, character, and nature of his baby chicks. Such representations are disseminated by means of advertisements inserted in newspapers, trade magazines, and other publications having a general circulation throughout various States of the United States and by means of letters, catalogs, circulars, leaflets, and other printed and written matter distributed among prospective purchasers. Among and typical of such false and misleading representations disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

_Every Breeder is bloodtested_

Bloodtesting means the testing of a sample of blood from an individual bird to find out whether or not the bird is a carrier of pullorum disease (B. W. D.). This is one of the most dreaded and destructive of baby chick diseases. It is transmitted to the chick through the egg. The only sure way to prevent it is to eliminate from the flock every breeder which shows through bloodtesting that it is a reactor to pullorum disease.

Every breeder, male and female, used for Maple Lawn Hatchery, is bloodtested annually and any reactors are immediately removed.

We leave in our breeding flocks only those birds which we are sure have not the slightest trace of this disease in their veins.

We will not tolerate any unsatisfactory or careless management of breeders from which eggs for Maple Lawn Chicks are produced. This assures your getting big, healthy chicks—chicks that will live, grow and make greater profits for you. It pays to be sure you are buying chicks from bloodtested parents—from parents that are known to be free of disease.

It is because we know that our careful selection of breeding stock has given to our chicks greater health and potential earning power, because our hatching methods have turned out the most vigorous chicks possible to hatch, and because our entire method of operation enables us to offer a better chick for less money, that we can say with confidence, "Maple Lawn Chicks will make you greater profits during 1939."

We do not mean to infer that our chicks are all hatched from eggs produced right here on our own farm. It would take hundreds of acres for that, as well as a breeding flock of more than 30,000 females. But we do have access to a large number of high class flocks, many of which are under our direct, personal supervision, and as we have stated elsewhere in this folder, every breeder is bloodtested for B. W. D. These birds receive more individual care and attention than could possibly be devoted to birds in huge breeding flocks.

All Maple Lawn Chicks are of superior worth, coming from proven varieties of both the most popular heavy and light breeds—all from vigorous, hardy breeders bloodtested annually for pullorum disease. Maple Lawn Chicks are disease-free and were bred to step out and bring larger profits during 1939.

FOLKS! Here is Something to Remember:—For the past twelve years we have been producing "MAPLE LAWN CHICKS THAT LIVE AND GROW." Each year finds us improving our flock by bloodtesting more closely. Nothing but high-producing male birds are used on our flocks. We want you to have the best.
Complaint

BLOOD-TESTED

These chicks were hatched from Breeders Blood-Tested for Pullorum Disease B. W. D. by the Antigen Stain Method, all reactors were removed from flocks. Testing done in the present year by Roy T. Ehrenzeller.

Par. 4. By means of the foregoing representations, together with other representations of similar import not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of respondent’s business status and of his products, the respondent represents that he personally supervises and controls the flocks from which his eggs are produced; that such eggs are from blood-tested and culled flocks; that his eggs and baby chicks are of superior grade, origin, quality and type, character and nature, and that said baby chicks are from blood-tested and culled flocks and are free from disease.

To purchasers of baby chicks, the term “blood-tested” means and refers to poultry flocks that have been tested for certain diseases common to poultry, and from which flocks diseased poultry has been eliminated. It is believed by such purchasers that baby chicks hatched from the eggs of blood-tested flocks are less likely to be infected with certain diseases than chicks hatched from the eggs of flocks which have not been blood tested and culled. There is a decided preference among the purchasers for baby chicks hatched from eggs from poultry flocks that have been blood tested, culled, and personally supervised and controlled.

Par. 5. In truth and in fact these representations thus made are false and misleading. The respondent does not own, control, nor supervise any of the flocks of poultry supplying the eggs used in his hatchery and incubation business. Respondent purchases eggs from various sources and has no personal knowledge as to whether or not the flocks producing such eggs were blood tested or culled or free from disease. In truth and in fact, in many instances, respondent purchases eggs from flocks which were not blood tested, nor culled, nor free from disease.

Par. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to his said product has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations are true and as a result thereof a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, is induced to and does purchase respondent’s baby chicks.

Par. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on November 3, 1939, issued, and on November 4, 1939, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Roy T. Ehrenzeller, trading as Maple Lawn Poultry Farm and Maple Lawn Hatchery, charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of the said complaint, were introduced by John R. Phillips, Jr., attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Sidney Smith, attorney for the respondent, before W. W. Sheppard, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Subsequently, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw his original answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, testimony, and other evidence, and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Roy T. Ehrenzeller, is an individual, residing at McAlisterville, Pa., trading as Maple Lawn Poultry Farm and Maple Lawn Hatchery, with his principal place of business located at McAlisterville in the State of Pennsylvania. Respondent is now and for several years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of baby chicks in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. The respondent causes his said baby chicks, when sold, to be shipped from his place of business, in the State of Pennsylvania, to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said baby chicks in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his baby chicks by members of the purchasing public, respondent has made false and misleading representations with respect to the grade, origin, quality, and type, character, and nature of his baby chicks. Such representations are disseminated by means of advertisements inserted in newspapers, trade magazines, and other publications having a general circulation throughout various States of the United States, and by means of letters, catalogs, circulars, leaflets, and other printed and written matter distributed among prospective purchasers. Among and typical of such false and misleading representations disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Bloodtesting means the testing of a sample of blood from an individual bird to find out whether or not the bird is a carrier of pullorum disease (B. W. D.). This is one of the most dreaded and destructive of baby chick diseases. It is transmitted to the chick through the egg. The only sure way to prevent it is to eliminate from the flock every breeder which shows through bloodtesting that it is a reactor to pullorum disease.

Every breeder, male and female, used for Maple Lawn Hatchery, is bloodtested annually and any reactors are immediately removed.

We leave in our breeding flocks only those birds which we are sure have not the slightest trace of this disease in their veins.

We will not tolerate any unsanitary or careless management of breeders from which eggs for Maple Lawn Chicks are produced. This assures your getting big, healthy chicks—chicks that will live, grow and make greater profits for you. It pays to be sure you are buying chicks from bloodtested parentage—from parents that are known to be free of disease.

It is because we know that our careful selection of breeding stock has given to our chicks greater health and potential earning power, because our hatching methods have turned out the most vigorous chicks possible to hatch, and because our entire method of operation enables us to offer a better chick for less money, that we can say with confidence, "Maple Lawn Chicks will make you greater profits during 1939."

We do not mean to infer that our chicks are all hatched from eggs produced right here on our own farm. It would take hundreds of acres for that, as well as a breeding flock of more than 30,000 females. But we do have access to a large number of high class flocks, many of which are under our direct, personal supervision, and as we have stated elsewhere in this folder, every breeder is bloodtested for B. W. D. These birds receive more individual care and attention than could possibly be devoted to birds in huge breeding flocks.

All Maple Lawn Chicks are of superior worth, coming from proven varieties of both the most popular heavy and light breeds—all from vigorous, hardy breeders bloodtested annually for pullorum disease. Maple Lawn Chicks are disease-free and were bred to step out and bring larger profits during 1939.

FOLKS! Here is Something to Remember:—For the past twelve years we have been producing "MAPLE LAWN CHICKS THAT LIVE AND GROW." Each year finds us Improving our flock by bloodtesting more closely. Nothing but high-producing male birds are used on our flocks. We want you to have the best.

BLOOD-TESTED

These chicks were hatched from Breeders Blood-Tested for Pullorum Disease B. W. D. by the Antigen Stain Method, all reactors were removed from flocks. Testing done in the present year by Roy T. Ehrenzeller.

PAR. 4. By means of the foregoing representations, together with other representations of similar import not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of respondent's business status and of his products, the respondent represents that he personally supervises and controls the flocks from which his eggs are produced; that such eggs are from blood-tested and culled flocks; that his eggs and baby chicks are of superior grade, origin, quality, and type, character, and nature, and that said baby chicks are from blood-tested and culled flocks and are free from disease.

To purchasers of baby chicks, the term "blood-tested" means and refers to poultry flocks that have been tested for certain diseases common to poultry, and from which flocks diseased poultry has been eliminated. It is believed by such purchasers that baby chicks hatched from the eggs of blood-tested flocks are less likely to be infected with certain diseases than chicks hatched from the eggs of flocks which have not been blood tested and culled. There is a decided preference among the purchasers for baby chicks hatched from eggs from poultry flocks that have been blood tested, culled, and personally supervised and controlled.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact these representations thus made are false and misleading. The respondent does not own, control, nor supervise any of the flocks of poultry supplying the eggs used in his hatchery and incubation business. Respondent purchases eggs from various sources and has no personal knowledge as to whether or not the flocks producing such eggs were blood tested or culled or free from disease. In truth and in fact, in many instances, respondent purchases eggs from flocks which were not blood tested nor culled nor free from disease. All of the chicks sold by the respondent are hatched from eggs purchased by him as hereinabove detailed, and when the respondent purchases eggs from flocks which were not blood tested nor culled nor free from disease, the chicks hatched from such eggs cannot be truthfully represented as being from blood tested and culled flocks or as being free from disease.

Par. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to his said eggs and chicks has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations are true. As a result thereof a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, is induced to, and does, purchase respondent's baby chicks.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, testimony, and other evidence introduced before W. W. Sheppard, an examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Roy T. Ehrenzeller, individually and trading as Maple Lawn Poultry Farm and as Maple Lawn Hatchery, or trading under any other name, or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of baby chicks in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that the flocks of poultry supplying the eggs from which respondent's baby chicks are produced are owned, controlled, or supervised by respondent.
2. Representing that eggs obtained from flocks which have not been blood tested and found free from disease or which have not been culled are from blood tested and culled flocks or are free from disease.

3. Representing that the chicks hatched from eggs obtained from flocks which have not been blood tested and found free from disease or which have not been culled are from blood-tested and culled flocks or are free from disease.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon him of this order file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
Where two individuals engaged in manufacture of mattresses and bedding with old, second-hand, used, and discarded cotton which they purchased, and which, after being combed by machine and reworked, was used by them in making said products, with new coverings, and in sale and distribution to purchasers in various other States, including wholesalers, retailers, and other buyers, who resold same to purchasing public of said products which, after being fitted with new coverings as aforesaid, had appearance of new mattresses—Sold said products with appearance aforesaid and with no marking or designation clearly and conspicuously stamped thereon or attached thereto to indicate to purchasing public that such mattresses were in fact made of old, previously used, discarded, and second-hand materials and, in case of said mattresses thus made but with labels bearing terms “Made of previously used materials” stamped thereon, with such marking so illegible and inconspicuous that it could not be read by wholesale and retail buyers thereof or by members of purchasing public, to retailers and jobbers and wholesalers, by whom said products were sold to purchasing public without disclosing fact that they were reconditioned and made from old, used, discarded, and second-hand material fitted with new covering, and under such conditions as to cause members of purchasing public erroneously to believe that they were in fact composed in their entirety of new materials which had never been previously used;

With result that through their said acts and practices in placing new coverings on mattresses made from old, used, discarded, and second-hand materials, without disclosing fact that such materials were old, etc., they placed in hands of unscrupulous or uninformed persons means and instrumentality whereby they had been and were enabled to mislead and deceive members of purchasing and consuming public into erroneous and mistaken belief that their said products were manufactured from new materials, and with effect of misleading and deceiving retail and wholesale dealers who purchased such products, and substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that products in question, manufactured from old, used, and discarded materials, were new mattresses made from new and unused materials, and with result and consequence that purchasing public was induced to and did buy substantial quantities of their said products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. John W. Addison, trial examiner.
Mr. Robert Mathis, Jr., for the Commission.
Weinstein, Murray & Weinstein and Dubrow & Sohn, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Arthur Sohn and Carl Sohn, individuals, trading as Sohn Bros., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents Arthur and Carl Sohn are individuals trading under the firm name Sohn Bros., with their office and principal place of business located at 1709 West Roosevelt Road, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondents are now and have been for more than 2 years last past engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of mattresses and bedding. Respondents cause their said merchandise when sold to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to various purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. Respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a substantial course of trade in commerce in said merchandise among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, respondents have bought and still buy old, second-hand, used, and discarded cotton and other used materials. Such materials are, after being combed with a type of machine and reworked, then used by respondents in the manufacture of mattresses and bedding which are covered with new coverings and are sold by the respondents to wholesalers, retailers, and other purchasers who resell the same to the purchasing public.

PAR. 3. Respondents' mattresses made from the aforesaid old, used, discarded, and second-handed materials, after being fitted with new coverings as aforesaid, have the appearance of new mattresses, and said mattresses are sold by respondents to wholesalers, jobbers, and retail dealers without any marking or designation clearly and conspicuously stamped thereon or attached thereto to indicate to the purchasing public that said mattresses were in fact manufactured from old, previously used, discarded, and second-hand materials. Said mattresses are also resold by jobbers and wholesalers to retail dealers who sell them to the purchasing public without disclosing the fact that said mattresses are reconditioned and manufactured from old, used, discarded, and second-hand material which has been remanufactured and fitted with a new covering and so as to indicate that said mattresses are in fact composed in their entirety of new materials which have never been previously used.

Certain of the mattresses manufactured by respondents from old, used, discarded, and second-hand material do have labels with the terms "Made of previously used materials" stamped thereon, and in such instances where said labels bear these terms the marking is so illegible and inconspicuous that it cannot be read by the wholesale and retail dealers who buy respondents’ product or by members of the purchasing public.

Par. 4. Through the use of the acts and practices as herein set forth, respondents have and do fail to disclose the kind and type of materials from which their products are manufactured and thereby respondents have placed in the hands of unscrupulous and uninformed persons means and instrumentality whereby such persons have been and are enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing and consuming public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents’ products are manufactured from new materials when in truth and in fact nearly all of respondents’ mattresses are manufactured from old, used, discarded, and second-hand materials which are covered with a new covering.

Par. 5. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid acts and practices has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive retail dealers and wholesale dealers who purchase said products and a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said mattresses manufactured from old, used, and discarded materials are new mattresses manufactured from new and unused materials. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief the purchasing public is induced to, and does, purchase substantial quantities of respondents’ products.

Par. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 28th day of March 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Arthur Sohn and Carl Sohn, individuals, trading as Sohn Bros., charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents’ answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and said substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this, its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents Arthur and Carl Sohn are individuals trading under the firm name Sohn Bros., with their office and principal place of business located at 1709 West Roosevelt Road, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondents are now and have been for more than 2 years last past engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of mattresses and bedding. Respondents cause their said merchandise when sold to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to various purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. Respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a substantial course of trade in said merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, respondents have bought and still buy old, second-hand, used, and discarded cotton, which material, after being combed with a machine and re-worked, then is used by respondents in the manufacture of mattresses and bedding which are covered with new coverings and are sold by the respondents to wholesalers, jobbers, and other purchasers who resell the same to the purchasing public.

PAR. 3. Respondents' mattresses made from the aforesaid old, used, discarded, and second-hand material, after being fitted with new coverings as aforesaid, have the appearance of new mattresses, and said mattresses are sold by respondents to wholesalers, jobbers, and retail dealers without any marking or designation clearly and conspicuously stamped thereon or attached thereto to indicate to the purchasing public that said mattresses were in fact manufactured from old, previously used, discarded, and second-hand materials. Said mattresses are also resold by jobbers and wholesalers to retail dealers who sell them to the purchasing public without disclosing the fact that such mattresses are reconditioned and manufactured from old, used, discarded, and second-hand material which has been fitted with a new covering, and under such conditions as to cause members of the purchasing public to erroneously believe that said mattresses are in fact composed in their entirety of new materials which have never been previously used.

Certain of the mattresses manufactured by respondents from old, used, discarded, and second-hand material do have labels with the terms “Made of previously used materials” stamped thereon, and in such instances where said labels bear these terms the marking is so illegible and inconspicuous that it cannot be read by the wholesale and retail dealers who buy respondents’ product or by members of the purchasing public.

PAR. 4. The acts and practices of the respondents in placing new coverings on mattresses made from old, used, discarded, and second-hand materials without disclosing the fact that such materials are old, used, discarded, and second-hand places in the hands of unscrupulous or uninformed persons a means and instrumentality whereby such persons have been and are enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing and consuming public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents’ products are manufactured from new materials.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid acts and practices has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to; and does, mislead and deceive retail dealers and wholesale dealers who purchase said products and a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said mattresses manufactured from old, used, and discarded materials are new mattresses manufactured from new and unused materials. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief the purchasing public is induced to, and does, purchase substantial quantities of respondent’s products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the substitute answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusions that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Arthur Sohn and Carl Sohn, individuals, trading as Sohn Bros., or under any other trade name or names, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of mattresses in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing in any manner, or by any means or device, that mattresses which are composed in whole or in part of old, used, discarded, or second-hand materials are new mattresses or are made from new or unused materials.

2. Failing to permanently affix to mattresses made in whole or in part from old, used, discarded, or second-hand materials, labels, or tags, which cannot readily be removed, obliterated, obscured, or minimized and, which clearly and conspicuously reveal that such mattresses are in fact composed of old, used, discarded, and second-hand materials in whole or in part, as the case may be.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

JOHN H. MULKEY, TRADING AS WESTERN NOVELTY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4082. Complaint, Apr. 4, 1940—Decision, July 16, 1940

Where an individual engaged in offering for sale novelty jewelry, including finger rings with setting of hematite or certain nonprecious crystal, to dealer purchasers in various States and in the Territory of Alaska, and in substantial competition as thus engaged with others engaged in sale of novelty jewelry and gem jewelry, including rings as aforesaid, and including some who sell rings set with nonprecious crystals, including hematite, and who do not in any manner misrepresent their products or origin thereof—

Represented and implied that hematite settings in his said rings were diamonds or gem or jewel stones of dark or unusual color produced in Alaska, through such typical statements, etc., in advertisements circulated among prospective purchasers, as "Alaska Black Diamond" and "Genuine Laska Black Diamond" and through latter words also on metal tag customarily attached to such rings, and through statements on placards circulated by him among tourists journeying to Alaska and advertising his said products as "sold at all reliable curio and jewelry stores in Alaska—Watch for this label (meaning tag above referred to and depicted in advertisement)—There are imitations on the market";

Fact being none of his said rings were set with diamonds or gem or jewel settings but, as indicated, with ground, shaped, polished settings of hematite crystals, substance of which is not precious stone or gem, but is an ore of iron and called also in crystal form "Specular Iron" and constitutes nonprecious crystal of variable dark colors;

With result that purchasing public was deceived and erroneously led to believe and understand that his said rings were in fact set with diamonds or jewels or gems of dark and unusual color, produced in Alaska, and with consequence, as result of such belief, that number of purchasing public bought his said rings and trade was thereby diverted unfairly to him from his competitors in commerce between and among the various States and with said Territory; to their injury and that of public:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. Wm. T. Chantland for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that John H. Mulkey, an individual, trading as Western Novelty Co., has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, John H. Mulkey, an individual, trading as Western Novelty Co., with his office and principal place of business at 305 Southwest Third Avenue, Portland, Oreg., is now and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of offering for sale and selling novelty jewelry, including finger rings with settings of hematite, a nonprecious crystal, to dealer purchasers in various States of the United States and in the Territory of Alaska, and in so offering said wares for sale, and when so sold to dealer purchasers outside of the State of Oregon, respondent has caused said wares to be transported from his principal place of business in Oregon to said dealer purchasers in various States of the United States and the Territory of Alaska.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, in substantial competition with corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the business of selling novelty jewelry and gem jewelry, including finger rings, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and with the Territory of Alaska. Among said competitors are many who sell rings set with nonprecious crystals, including hematite, and who do not in any manner misrepresent their products or the origin thereof.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his business in said commerce as aforesaid and to induce the purchase of his said rings, respondent has circulated among prospective purchasers of such rings advertisements containing statements and representations with reference to said rings and with reference to the material of which the ring sets are composed. Among and typical of the statements and representations so made and circulated by the respondent are the following:

Alaska Black Diamond and
Genuine Laska Black Diamond

On a metal tag customarily attached to said rings appears the statement—"Genuine Laska Black Diamond." In circulars circulated among prospective purchasers, and more particularly among tourists journeying to the Territory of Alaska, the respondent has and does circulate placards advertising said rings, upon which appears the following statement:

Sold at all reliable curio and jewelry stores in Alaska. Watch for this label. There are imitations on the market.

The warning in such statement to watch for "this label" refers to the metal tag above mentioned which is depicted in said advertisement.
Findings

PAR. 4. By the means and in the manner aforesaid, respondent represents that the sets in said rings are diamonds, or stones or jewels produced in Alaska and known as Alaska Black Diamond, and through the use of the aforesaid statement warning prospective purchasers that "there are imitations on the market" imports and implies that rings manufactured by competitors and offered for sale and sold to the public containing sets of hematite, as do respondent's rings, are imitations and that respondent's rings contain the "genuine" stone or jewel.

In truth and in fact the sets in said rings are not diamonds, or a stone or jewel produced in Alaska known as Alaska Black Diamonds, but are composed of a nonprecious crystal hematite, as hereinabove alleged.

PAR. 5. The acts and practices of the respondent, as aforesaid, in designating, describing, and referring to said hematite sets as "Alaska Black Diamond" and "Genuine Laska Black Diamond" and warning the public to beware of imitations, have the capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said rings are set with diamonds, or with stones or jewels produced in Alaska and known as Alaska Black Diamonds. As a result of said erroneous and mistaken belief, members of the purchasing public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's said hematite rings, thereby unfairly diverting trade to respondent from its competitors in said commerce to their injury and to the injury of the public.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on April 4, 1940, issued and thereafter caused its complaint to be served in this proceeding upon respondent John H. Mulkey, an individual trading as Western Novelty Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondent and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto, and that the Commission may proceed upon such statement of facts to make its report stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without further presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, John H. Mulkey, is an individual, trading as Western Novelty Co., with his office and principal place of business at 305 Southwest Third Avenue, Portland, Oreg., and is now and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of offering for sale and selling novelty jewelry, including finger rings with settings of hematite, a nonprecious crystal, to dealer purchasers in various States of the United States and in the Territory of Alaska, and in so offering said wares for sale, and when so sold to dealer purchasers outside of the State of Oregon, respondent has caused said wares to be transported from his principal place of business in Oregon to said dealer purchasers in various States of the United States and in the Territory of Alaska.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, in substantial competition with corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the business of selling novelty jewelry and gem jewelry, including finger rings, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and with the Territory of Alaska. Among said competitors are some who sell rings set with nonprecious crystals, including hematite, and who do not in any manner misrepresent their products or the origin thereof.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of his business in said commerce as aforesaid and to induce the purchase of his said rings, respondent has circulated among prospective purchasers of such rings advertisements containing statements and representations with reference to said rings and with reference to the material of which the ring sets are composed. Among and typical of the statements and representations so made and circulated by the respondent are the following:

Alaska Black Diamond and
Genuine Laska Black Diamond
On a metal tag customarily attached to said rings appears the statement—"Genuine Laska Black Diamond." In circulars circulated among prospective purchasers, and more particularly among tourists journeying to the Territory of Alaska, the respondent has and does circulate placards advertising said rings, upon which appears the following statement:

Sold at all reliable curio and jewelry stores in Alaska. Watch for this label. There are imitations on the market.

The warning in such statement to watch for "This label" refers to the metal tag above mentioned which is depicted in said advertisement.

None of respondent's said finger rings transported and sold under the advertising and representations stated above, are set with diamonds or gem or jewel settings, but are, in fact, set with ground, shaped, polished settings of hematite crystals. Hematite is not a precious stone or gem, but is an ore of iron, and in crystal form is also called "Specular Iron," a nonprecious crystal of variable dark colors.

By the means and in the manner above described, respondent implied and represented that the settings in his said rings were diamonds or gem or jewel stones of dark and unusual color produced in Alaska, when such are not the facts.

Par. 4. As a result of the above stated acts and practices of respondent in making the aforesaid representations with regard to said hematite set finger rings, the purchasing public has been and is being deceived and erroneously led to believe and understand that respondent's said rings are, in fact, set with diamonds, or jewels or gems of dark and unusual color produced in the Territory of Alaska, and as a result of this mistaken and erroneous belief a number of the purchasing public have purchased respondent's said rings and as a consequence trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from his competitors in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and with the Territory of Alaska to their injury and the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors of the respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard and considered by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into by and between W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, and John H. Mulkey, respondent, which has been duly approved by the Commission, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondent John H. Mulkey, trading as Western Novelty Co., has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent John H. Mulkey, individually, or trading as Western Novelty Co., or under any other trade or through any corporate or other device, his agents, representatives and employees in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of rings in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and within the Territory of Alaska, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Representing, directly or by implication, that rings set with hematite, or any nonprecious crystal or stone, are set with diamonds, "Alaska Black Diamonds," or "Genuine Laska Black Diamonds"; or that such rings are set with any precious or semiprecious stones; or that the sets in said rings are produced in the Territory of Alaska.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF
ATLANTIC COMMISSION COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 2 (c) OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 3344. Complaint, Mar. 2, 1938—Decision, July 24, 1940

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 2 (C)—BROKERAGE OR COMMISSION PROVISIONS—SELLER TO BUYER PAYMENTS—SERVICES RENDERED CLAUSE.

DISCRIMINATING IN PRICE—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 2 (C)—BROKERAGE OR COMMISSION PROVISIONS—SELLER TO BUYER PAYMENTS—BUYER BROKERAGE CONCERN ON OWN ACCOUNT PURCHASES—SERVICES RENDERED CLAUSE.

Where a corporate concern which (1) was a wholly owned subsidiary of a corporation engaged, through several other wholly owned corporate subsidiaries bearing same name, in retail grocery business and in operation of several thousand retail grocery stores owned by it and located in 38 States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia, and which (2) was engaged in buying, selling, and distributing fresh fruits and vegetables and other commodities on and for its own account and on and for the account of aforesaid corporations, and also in thus buying, selling, and distributing such various products and commodities as a broker and on consignment as a commission merchant for the accounts of other sellers and buyers, and which, along with aforesaid corporations, was in substantial competition with others engaged in like businesses;

In purchasing in interstate commerce from various sellers, on and for its own account, substantial quantity of fresh fruits and vegetables—

(a) Received and accepted allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage upon its own purchases of commodities in interstate commerce, and without the intervention of a broker, through practice of making such purchases at a "net price" or "net basis" reflecting a reduction from the prices at which sellers were currently selling commodities to other buyers, many of whom were engaged in competition with it, of an amount representing and reflecting, in whole in some instances and in part in others, amount of brokerage currently being paid by sellers to brokers representing them in effecting sales of their commodities to buyers other than it, and irrespective of whether quantity purchased by it from such sellers was large or small; and

(b) Received and accepted allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage upon its own purchases of commodities in interstate commerce, and without the intervention of a broker, through practice of negotiating with many sellers who did not sell to it at "net price" or on "net basis," so-called "quantity discount agreements" under which, without being obligated itself and generally irrespective of quantities purchased, there were paid to it so-called "quantity discounts," upon its purchases, of an amount which represented and reflected, in whole in some instances and in part in others, brokerage which sellers were currently paying to their brokers on sales of commodities made for them by latter:

Held, That, on basis of said facts, as a matter of law, no services in connection with the sale of commodities within the meaning of section 2 (c) were or could be rendered to sellers by it on its own purchases of such commodities, and that said concern, in thus accepting and receiving discounts and allowances in lieu of brokerage upon purchases of commodities for its own account in interstate commerce, as above set forth, violated provisions of section 2 (c) of an act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936.

Mr. J. J. Smith, Jr., for the Commission.

Mr. Caruthers Ewing, of New York City, and Watson, King & Brode and Feldman, Kittelle, Campbell & Ewing, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

Complaint

The Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the Atlantic Commission Company, hereinafter called respondent, since June 19, 1936, has violated and is now violating the provisions of section 2 (c) of the act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act), as amended by the act of Congress entitled "An act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes," approved June 19, 1936 (the Robinson-Patman Act), hereby issues this its complaint against respondent and states its charges with respect thereto as follows, to wit:

Paragraph 1. Respondent is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York and has its principal office and place of business at 102 Warren Street in the city of New York, N. Y.
Findings

Par. 2. For several years prior to and on June 19, 1936, and ever since that date, the respondent was, has been, and is now engaged in the business of buying, selling, and distributing fresh fruits and vegetables and other commodities on and for its own account and in the business of selling fresh fruits and vegetables and other commodities as a broker for other sellers thereof.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, since June 19, 1936, the respondent has been and is now making purchases in commerce of fresh fruits and vegetables and other commodities on and for its own account from various sellers thereof, which said fresh fruits and vegetables and other commodities purchased on and for its own account the respondent has been and is now causing to be shipped to it in commerce by said sellers from various States of the United States through, across and into other States of the United States and the District of Columbia, and in the course of making said purchases of fresh fruits and vegetables and other commodities on and for its own account since June 19, 1936, the respondent has been and is now receiving and accepting thereon from said sellers allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage, for which said allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage no services whatsoever in connection with said purchases, or in connection with the sale to the respondent of said fresh fruits and vegetables and other commodities purchased by the respondent on and for its own account, have been rendered or are now being rendered to, for or on behalf of the sellers of said fresh fruits and vegetables and other commodities by the respondent or by any agent, representative or intermediary subject to the direct or indirect control of the respondent.

Par. 4. The receipt and acceptance by the respondent of allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage, as aforesaid, constitutes a violation of the provisions of section 2 (c) of the abovementioned act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act), as amended by the act of Congress entitled "An act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes;' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes," approved June 19, 1936 (the Robinson-Patman Act).

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Clayton Act, approved October 15, 1914 (38 Stat. 730), as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (49 Stat. 1526; 15 U. S. C., sec. 13) the Federal Trade Commission on March 2, 1938, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Atlantic Commission Co., charging it with violating the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act. On March 30, 1938, the respondent filed its answer to said complaint. Thereafter, on June 26, 1940, a stipulation was entered into, signed, and executed by the executive vice president and general manager and by the general counsel of the respondent and by W. T. Kelly, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, whereby it was stipulated and agreed, subject to the approval of the Commission, that a statement of facts set forth in said stipulation may be made a part of the record and taken as the facts in this proceeding in lieu of testimony in support of and in opposition to the charges stated in the complaint herein, and that the Federal Trade Commission, upon said statement of facts, may make and enter in this proceeding its report stating its findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon, and enters its order disposing of this proceeding without the taking of testimony, presentation of argument, filing of briefs, or other intervening procedure. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, answer and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed by the Commission, and the Commission, having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, makes this its report, setting forth its findings as to the facts and conclusion.
Findings 31 F. T. C.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Atlantic Commission Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York and has its principal office and place of business at 102 Warren Street in the city of New York, N. Y.

Par. 2. Respondent is a wholly owned subsidiary of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. of America, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Maryland. The said The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. of America, through several wholly owned corporate subsidiaries bearing the name "The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co." and incorporated, severally, under the laws of Arizona, Nevada, and New Jersey, is engaged in the retail grocery business, and owns and operates several thousand retail grocery stores located in 38 States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.
FINDINGS

PAR. 3. For several years prior to, and since, June 19, 1936, the respondent was, has been, and is now, engaged in the business of buying, selling, and distributing in interstate commerce, fresh fruits and vegetables and other commodities on and for its own account, and on and for the accounts of the corporations above referred to in paragraph 2, and also in the business of buying, selling, and distributing in interstate commerce, fresh fruits and vegetables and other commodities as a broker and on consignment as a commission merchant for the accounts of other sellers and buyers thereof. For the purpose of conducting its said business the respondent has continuously maintained and does now maintain offices in various cities throughout the United States.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses the respondent and the corporations above referred to in paragraph 2 are engaged in substantial competition in interstate commerce with other persons, firms, and corporations engaged in like businesses in interstate commerce.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of its business since June 19, 1936, respondent has purchased in interstate commerce from various sellers on and for its own account substantial quantities of fresh fruits and vegetables on the following bases, to wit:

(a) At a price or on a basis, commonly referred to in the food and produce industry as a "net price" or "net basis," reflecting a reduction from the prices at which sellers were currently selling commodities to other buyers, many of whom were engaged in competition with the respondent, of an amount representing and reflecting, in whole in some cases and in part in others, the amount of brokerage which was currently being paid by sellers to brokers representing them in effecting sales of their commodities to buyers other than respondent. For example, in many instances where commodities were being sold by a seller at a price of $1 and the rate at which brokerage was currently being paid by the seller to brokers representing him in effecting sales of commodities for him was 5 percent, respondent purchased said commodities direct from the seller without the intervention of a broker at a price of 95 cents net. The 5-cent differential between these two prices in a substantial number of instances represented and reflected, and was granted and received in lieu of, brokerage which the seller was currently paying to his brokers on sales of commodities made by them for him. Where respondent was able to effect a net price or a net basis arrangement with a seller, respondent's purchases of commodities were made from such seller at such a price or on such basis irrespective of whether the quantity purchased was large or small.
(b) With many sellers who did not sell to respondent at a net price or on a net basis, as above referred to, respondent negotiated and executed so-called "quantity discount agreements," a typical form of which is as follows:

QUANTITY DISCOUNT AGREEMENT

PURCHASER: THE ATLANTIC COMMISSION COMPANY, INC.

ADDRESS:

SOLDIER:

---

THE PURCHASER HAS OBLIGATED ITSELF TO BUY FROM THE SELLER A LARGE QUANTITY OF MERCHANDISE AND, IN VIEW OF THE PURCHASES IN LARGE QUANTITY, PRESENT AND PROSPECTIVE, THE SELLER AGREES TO ALLOW THE FOLLOWING QUANTITY DISCOUNT ON AMOUNTS BOUGHT BY THE PURCHASER, BEGINNING _______ AND CONTINUING UNTIL CANCELLED BY EITHER PARTY.

THE SELLER AVOWS ITS WILLINGNESS TO MAKE THE SAME AGREEMENT AS IS HERE MADE WITH ANY OTHER PURCHASER SIMILARLY SITUATED AND ON PROPORTIONALLY EQUAL TERMS.

By ___________________________ SELLER.

ATLANTIC COMMISSION COMPANY, INC.,

By ___________________________ Purchaser.

Such agreements in many instances provided for the payment to the respondent, as a so-called "quantity discount" upon respondent's purchases, of an amount to be computed on the basis of the rate at which the contracting-seller was currently paying brokerage to his brokers representing him in effecting sales of commodities to buyers other than respondent, many of which buyers were engaged in competition with the respondent. Such agreements did not obligate the respondent to purchase any commodities from the contracting-sellers, and respondent had no obligation apart from such agreements to purchase any commodities from the contracting-sellers. Pursuant to the terms of many of such agreements contracting-sellers paid to the respondent, and the respondent received and accepted from contracting-sellers, on purchases of commodities made direct from the sellers for respondent's own account, without the intervention of a broker, sums of money which represented and reflected, in whole in some cases and in part in others, and were paid and received in lieu of, brokerage which the sellers were currently paying to their brokers on sales of commodities.
made for them by their brokers. Generally such sums were paid to the respondent monthly upon the purchases made by the respondent during the preceding month and irrespective of whether the quantity of commodities purchased by the respondent was large or small.

Par. 6. In purchasing commodities for its own account at prices reflecting reductions of amounts representing, in whole or in part, brokerage which was currently being paid by sellers to brokers, as referred to in subparagraph (a) of paragraph 5, supra, the respondent received and accepted allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage upon its own purchases of commodities in interstate commerce.

Par. 7. In receiving and accepting upon purchases of commodities made for its own account so-called “quantity discounts” representing and reflecting, in whole or in part, brokerage which was currently being paid by sellers to brokers, as referred to in subparagraph (b) of paragraph 5, supra, the respondent received and accepted allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage upon its own purchases of commodities in interstate commerce.

CONCLUSION

The payment of brokerage to, and the receipt thereof by, a buyer upon his own purchases of commodities in interstate commerce is prohibited by paragraph (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act (15 U. S. C. sec. 13 (c)), and the services rendered clause of that paragraph sets up no condition upon which such brokerage may be paid or received (Biddle Purchasing Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 96 F. (2d) 667 (C. C. A. 2d, 1938), [26 F. T. C. 1511], cert. denied 305 U. S. 634 (1938); Oliver Brothers v. Federal Trade Commission, 102 F. (2d) 763 (C. C. A. 4th, 1939), [28 F. T. C. 1926]; The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 106 F. (2d) 667 (C. C. A. 3rd, 1939), [29 F. T. C. 1391], cert. denied 305 U. S. 625, 60 S. Ct. 380 (1940), rehearing denied 309 U. S. 649, 60 S. Ct. 466 (1940); and Webb-Crawford Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 109 F. (2d) 268 (C. C. A. 5th, 1940), [30 F. T. C. 1630], cert. denied 310 U. S. 638, 60 S. Ct. 1080 (1940)). Moreover, on the basis of the facts above found, the Commission concludes as a matter of law that no services in connection with the sale of commodities within the meaning of section 2 (c) were or could be rendered to sellers by the respondent on the respondent's own purchases of such commodities.

In accepting and receiving discounts and allowances in lieu of brokerage upon purchase of commodities for its own account in interstate commerce.
commerce as set forth in paragraphs 5, 6, and 7 of the foregoing findings as to the facts, the respondent, Atlantic Commission Co., violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That in purchasing commodities in interstate commerce and the District of Columbia the respondent, Atlantic Commission Co., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Making purchases of commodities for the respondent's own account at a so-called net price or on a so-called net basis, and at any other price and on any other basis, which reflects a deduction or reduction, or is arrived at or computed by deducting or subtracting, from the prices at which sellers are selling commodities to other purchasers thereof any amount representing or reflecting, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by sellers to their brokers on sales of commodities made for said sellers by, or by said sellers through, their said brokers; and

2. Accepting from sellers on purchases of commodities made for the respondent's own account any so-called quantity discounts and payments of all kinds representing or reflecting, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by sellers to their brokers on sales of commodities made for said sellers by, or by said sellers through, their said brokers; and

3. Accepting from sellers directly or indirectly on purchases of commodities made for the respondent's own account any brokerage and any allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage, in whatever manner or form said allowances and discounts may be offered, allowed, granted, paid or transmitted; and

4. Accepting from sellers in any manner or form whatever, directly or indirectly, anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof upon purchases of commodities made for respondent's own account.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Federal Trade Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

WILLIAM VORUNION AND BENJAMIN VORUNION, DOING BUSINESS UNDER THE TRADE NAMES OF HOWARD SALES COMPANY AND BERWICK PEN COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3514. Complaint, July 27, 1938—Decision, July 24, 1940

Where two individuals engaged in assembling fountain pens and pencils and in sale and distribution thereof and in regularly advertising, offering, and selling said pens at 59 cents and pencils at 29 cents, through various retail outlets and under special sales promotion scheme which included the shipping to various retailers and merchants of such pens and pencils, shipping charges prepaid, the supplying of advertising material, the payment by them of retailers' expense in advertising in the local papers, the remission to them by retailers and merchants of the proceeds, after deducting 30 percent of gross sales and all advertising costs, and the returning of all unsold goods at expense of said individuals, and which further included pretended special sale as below more fully set forth—

(a) Represented through statements in their advertising material which they thus disseminated and which was in turn communicated or distributed among purchasers and prospective purchasers by retail sales dealers and customers, that customary and usual retail price at which said pens were sold was $5 and that at which pencils were sold was $1.50, and that they were being sold at 59 cents and 29 cents, respectively, for 1 or 2 days only and for purpose of introducing said articles, and that after special sale, prices thereof would be as above set forth; facts being pens in question were not $5 vacuum filler, sackless fountain pens and such price was greatly exaggerated and fictitious, and much in excess of customary price at which products in question were intended to be and were customarily sold; and pencils likewise had no such regular market price of $1.50, which was also greatly exaggerated and fictitious and much in excess of contemplated and customary selling price thereof, and "Sale" was not an introductory one for 1 or 2 days only, nor a special one at which said products were sold at reduced prices, but they conducted other sales through same dealers short time after, offering same merchandise at same alleged special prices, and using same type of advertising;

(b) Represented that said pens and pencils were of quality and character different from or superior to those offered and sold by competitors at comparable prices and that pen held 200 percent more ink than any of the fountain pens on the market; facts being that they did not have any such capacity as claimed, and that such statements and representations were false and misleading;

(c) Represented that pens in question had been tested and were guaranteed by the factory to be unbreakable for life, and that in case of breakage or other unsatisfactory service they would be repaired free of charge or exchanged for new pens upon return; with 25 cents to cover cost of handling, postage, and insurance; the sum of 25 cents charged purchaser for replacement of broken or unsatisfactory pens covered only cost aforesaid; facts being said products were not tested and guaranteed as aforesaid, nor repaired free of charge or exchanged for new pen when returned with 25 cents in stamps or coin covering cost of handling, postage, and insurance, and said sum included also cost of providing and furnishing new pen;

(d) Represented through symbols and letters "14K" in conspicuous type, along with "Gold Plated" in small inconspicuous type, in an obscure place, on said pen tips and nibs, that tips or nibs were composed of 14-carat gold; facts being said tips or nibs of pens were not 14-carat gold as represented; and

(e) Represented that certificate cut from newspaper advertisements of said products was worth $4.41 as applied, along with 59 cents, on such supposed $5 pens, through such statements as "The Pen That Makes Writing a Pleasure 59¢ Friday and Saturday—This Certificate is worth $4.41" in their advertisements and "This certificate and 59¢ entitles the bearer to one of our Genuine Indestructible $5.00 Vacuum Filler Sackless Fountain Pens," etc., facts being certificate cut from newspaper advertisement did not become one worth $4.41 in purchase of said pen, which never had any such value as assigned thereto, and regular and customary retail price of which was the 59 cents charged therefor;

With effect of misleading and deceiving purchasing public into erroneous belief that such representations were true, and, by reason such belief, thus engendered, inducing purchase of substantial quantity of their said pens and pencils, and with result, through such methods and representations, of placing in hands of dealers means by which said public might be misled and deceived and business diverted to them from those with whom they were in substantial competition in sale and distribution of said products in commerce, and including many who do not employ methods used by them as herein set forth, or any similar methods involving use of misleading representations in sale of their pen and pencil products, and do not place in hands of distributors means of deceiving public in regard thereto, and from whom trade and commerce was unfairly diverted to said individuals; to the injury of their competitors and that of the public:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiner.

Mr. John R. Phillips, Jr. for the Commission.

Mr. Nathan H. Stryker, of Newark, N. J., for respondents.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that William Vorunion and Benjamin Vorunion, doing business under the trade names and styles of Howard Sales Co. and Berwick Pen Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. William Vorunion and Benjamin Vorunion are individuals who are now, and have been for all times mentioned herein, doing business under the trade names and styles of Howard Sales Co. with offices and a place of business at 17–19 Williams Street, Newark, N. J.; and Berwick Pen Co. with offices and a place of business at 726 Lyons Avenue, Irvington, N. J., which is and was the apartment where the respondent William Vorunion then and there resided. The respondents are now and for many years last past have been engaged in the business of selling and distributing fountain pens and pencils in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. Said respondents being engaged in the business as aforesaid, caused and still cause said fountain pens and pencils, when sold, to be transported from their places of business in the State of New Jersey or from the residence of the respondent, William Vorunion, at Irvington, N. J., to those who have ordered or purchased thereof, located in the various States of the United States other than New Jersey, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a course of trade in said fountain pens and pencils sold and distributed by respondents in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents are now and have been in substantial competition with other individuals and with partnerships, firms, and corporations likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing fountain pens and pencils in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. Respondents in the course and conduct of their business, as aforesaid, cause to be inserted in newspapers having a general local and interstate circulation advertisements containing statements purporting to be descriptive of the merchandise which has been ordered or sold and offered for sale or resale by or through respondents, together with throw circulars to be distributed in connection with the sale of said pens and pencils to ultimate purchasers thereof. The articles offered for sale by or through the respondents as an “introductory offer” are described in said advertisements and throw circulars as possessing retail values and prices many times in excess of the actual price at which the respondent sell said merchandise to purchasers, and are many times in excess of the actual selling price of the said articles to the consuming public, and are many times in excess of their true and actual value. The value as set forth in said advertisements is false and fictitious, in no sense represents the true value or the true selling price of the articles described in said advertisements, and in truth and in fact said price is not an "introductory offer" but the actual and customary price at which such articles are generally sold.

Among the said advertisements so used are the following:

The Pen That Makes Writing a Pleasure

59¢

ONLY FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

This certificate is Worth $4.41

(cut of Pen)

This certificate and 59¢ entitles the bearer to one of our Genuine Indestructible $5.00 VACUUM FILLER BACKLESS FOUNTAIN PENS. Visible Ink Supply. You See the Ink. A lifetime guarantee with each pen. *INTRODUCTORY OFFER—This Pen will be $5.00 after sale. Also $1.50 Pencils to Match Above Pens, only 29¢

ADD 6¢ Extra for Mail Orders LIMIT 3 Pens to Each Certificate

Through such statements and others similar thereto not herein set out, it is represented that the customary and usual retail value or price of said pens and pencils is greatly in excess of their advertised price, that they are sold as an "introductory offer" at the advertised price for only a limited time; that said pens and pencils are of a quality and character different from and superior to other pens and pencils of comparable price, and that said pens and pencils are equal in value to pens costing from $5 upward.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact the respondents' pens are not a $5 value and are not equal in value or price to pens having such value or price, but are of a type having a value much less than $5, and are ordinarily sold in the usual course of trade for approximately the price as advertised as an "introductory offer" price for said pens. The certificate referred to in said advertisement does not have a value of $4.41 or any value whatever, as said pens are intended to be, and are, sold in the usual course of trade without a certificate, for the price of approximately 59 cents as advertised. Said pens and pencils are not different from or superior to competitors' pens or pencils selling for approximately the same amount. The statement in the advertisement of the sale of the pens and pencils for only a limited time and that "the pen will be $5 after sale" is false and misleading, for the offer to sell said pens and pencils at the price advertised was not and is not limited as to time but is in truth and in fact the regular or customary price at which said pens and pencils are offered for sale and sold in the usual course of trade. The statement that each of said pens "holds 200 percent more ink than any ordinary fountain pen on the market" is false and misleading, for in truth and in fact said pens do not hold 200 percent more ink than many ordinary fountain pens on the market. The statement that "every pen was tested and guaranteed by the factory to be unbreakable for life" is false, misleading, and untrue. The "certificate of guarantee" accompanying the pen leads the prospective purchaser to believe that the pen has been carefully inspected and tested and in case of any dissatisfaction whatever may be returned to the Berwick Pen Co., Irvington, N. J., where it will be repaired free of charge or exchanged for a new pen upon remittance of 25 cents in stamps or coin to cover cost of handling, postage, and insurance. The representation in said "certificate of guarantee" is false and misleading, in that the 25 cents is not to cover repair or exchange of said pens but covers and is in excess of the total cost of said pens to the respondents.

The pen point or nib in said pen is conspicuously marked with the letter and symbol "14k" and the informative phrase "gold plated" which appears thereunder is in inconspicuous and small type. This means of stamping, branding, or imprinting pen points may cause a substantial portion of the purchasing public to purchase such pens in the belief that said pen points or nibs are of 14-carat fineness, when in truth and in fact such points or nibs are not of such carat fineness and are thinly gold plated or washed.

Respondents' pencils advertised to be of $1.50 value in this "introductory offer" for a limited time for only 29 cents are not of such value nor are they equal in value or price to pencils of comparable price and are generally and customarily sold at the price advertised as the special introductory price. The 29-cent price stated in said "introductory offer" is the regular or customary price at which said pencils are offered for sale and sold.

Par. 6. The respondents' foregoing acts and practices, as herein-above set out, in the sale and distribution of their fountain pens and pencils, have had, and have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced as aforesaid. As a result thereof trade has been, and is, unfairly diverted to respondents from competitors in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia who do not adopt, use, or follow similar acts and practices in connection with the sale of their respective products.

Par. 7. There are among competitors of respondents many individuals, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute fountain pens and pencils in commerce as hereinbefore described, who do not misrepresent the character or quality of their fountain pens. As a consequence of respondents' practices substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia has been substantially injured.

Par. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 27th day of July 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents William Vorunion and Benjamin Vorunion, individuals, doing business under the trade names of Howard Sales Co. and Berwick Pen Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were offered by John R. Phillips, Jr., attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of said complaint by Nathan H. Stryker, attorney for the respondents, before John J. Keenan, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
Findings

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondents, William Vorunion and Benjamin Vorunion, are individuals doing business under the trade names of Howard Sales Co. and Berwick Pen Co., with their offices and principal places of business located at 17-19 William Street, Newark, N. J., and at 726 Lyons Avenue, Irvington, N. J. They are now engaged, and for more than a year prior to issuance of the complaint herein were engaged, in the business of assembling fountain pens and pencils and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause their products, when sold, to be transported from their places of business in the State of New Jersey to the purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of New Jersey, and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of their said business respondents have regularly advertised, offered for sale and sold their said fountain pens at 59 cents and their pencils at 29 cents through various retail outlets. The pens so sold by the respondents have on the tip or nib thereof conspicuously displayed the letter and symbol "14K" and above and considerably removed therefrom, and in inconspicuous small type, the phrase "Gold Plated."

Paragraph 3. In the course and conduct of their business respondents solicit the sale of and sell their pen and pencil products by means of advertising, including literature and circular letters sent through the mails, and by personal calls by representatives, offering a special sales promotion scheme to purchasers and prospective purchasers. Among and typical of the statements in such advertisements and literature offering respondent's pens and pencils through said sales plan is the following:

This letter introduces a simple plan which will bring you a lot of additional business in two days—every month. The merchandise is on consignment. You run local newspaper advertising at our expense (with other advtg., if desired) and a good profit goes into your pocket.

This plan is a fine business-getter and is reserved for only one store in a town. It brings many additional customers into your store already "sold" ready to buy. A large number of stores are making real money with our merchandise which sells throughout the year.

Here's the plan! We send you a quantity of fountain pens and pencils on consignment, prepaid, for a profitable sale. You run local newspaper advertising at our expense. After the sale, deduct 30% from gross sales for your profit; then deduct your newspaper advertising and charges for returning any unsold goods. Thus without any displays, "sales talk" or much extra effort, you make 30% clear profit on all this extra business and get many more customers into your store.

Pens retail at 59¢; pencils at 29¢.
Under this sales plan, respondents ship quantities of fountain pens and pencils, shipping charges prepaid, to various retail dealers and merchants located in States other than the State of New Jersey, to be there sold by them. Advertising material furnished such retail dealers by respondents is run in local papers at the expense of respondents. After the sale under said sales promotion plan, the retail dealers and merchants deduct 30 percent of the gross sales, the cost of all advertising, and remit the balance to the respondents. All unsold goods are returned to the respondents at their expense.

Among and typical of the statements and representations disseminated, as aforesaid, by respondents, and which have been and are in turn communicated to or distributed among purchasers and prospective purchasers by the retail dealers or merchants, are the following:

The Pen That Makes Writing a Pleasure

LIMIT 3 Pens to Each Certificate

All of the aforesaid statements and representations by respondents, together with similar statements appearing in respondents' other advertising matter, purport to be descriptive of respondents' merchandise and of their sales methods in disposing of the same. Through said advertising and by other means respondents represent that their pens and pencils are sold at 59 cents and 29 cents for 1 or 2 days only; that their pens ordinarily sell for $5 but that the certificate supplied retailers "worth" $4.41, which is given with the special sale on pens, reduces the price to 59 cents; that pens and pencils are offered to the public at special prices only for the purpose of introducing same and that after the special sale the prices will be
$5 for the pen and $1.50 for the pencil; that said pens and pencils are of a quality and character different from and superior to other pens and pencils of comparable price; that every pen has been tested and is guaranteed by the factory to be unbreakable for life; that in case of breakage or other unsatisfactory service, each pen will be repaired free of charge or exchanged for a new pen upon remittance of 25 cents in stamps or coin to cover the cost of handling, postage, and insurance; that said pens are equal in value to pens costing from $5 upward, and that the pencils have a regular market value of $1.50; and that said pens hold 200 percent more ink than any other pen. Through the use of, and by means of, the symbol and letter “14K,” in conspicuous type and the words “Gold Plated” in small inconspicuous type in an obscure place, on said pen tips and nibs, respondents represent that the tips or nibs of their pens are composed of 14-carat gold.

Par. 5. In truth and in fact, all of the said statements and representations are false and misleading. The fountain pens offered for sale and sold by the respondents are not $5 vacuum filler sackless fountain pens. Said price is greatly exaggerated and fictitious and much in excess of the prices at which said pens were and are intended to be and are customarily sold. The pens do not hold 200 percent more ink than any ordinary fountain pen on the market. The pencils do not have a regular market price and value of $1.50, said price bring greatly exaggerated and fictitious and much in excess of the price at which said pencils were and are intended to be and are customarily sold. The “sale” is not an introductory sale for 1 or 2 days only, nor is it a special sale at which respondents’ pens and pencils are sold at reduced prices. Respondents have conducted other sales through the same dealers a short time after the original sale, offering the same merchandise at the alleged special prices of 59 cents and 29 cents, respectively, and using the same type of advertising. The certificate cut from the newspaper advertisement does not become a certificate worth $4.41 in the purchase of said fountain pen, because said pens do not have and never have had a value or price of $5 and were never intended to be and are never sold for $5, and 59 cents is the regular and customary retail price of such pens. The nibs or tips of said pens are not 14-carat gold as represented by the respondents. Respondents’ pens are not tested and guaranteed by the factory to be unbreakable for life and they are not repaired free of charge or exchanged for a new pen upon remittance of 25 cents in stamps or coin to cover cost of handling, postage, and insurance, for the sum of 25 cents includes the cost of providing and furnishing a new pen.
Order

Par. 6. The use by respondents of the foregoing false and misleading representations is calculated to, and does, mislead and deceive the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true, and by reason of such belief so engendered induces the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' pens and pencils. The respondents further, by the aforesaid methods and representations, have placed in the hands of dealers the means by which the purchasing public may be misled and deceived and business diverted to respondents from their competitors.

Par. 7. There are now, and have been during all the time herein mentioned, persons and partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of fountain pens and pencils in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, with whom respondents have been and are in substantial competition. Among such competitors are many who do not employ the methods used by the respondents, as herein set forth, or any similar methods involving the use of misleading representations in the sale of their pen and pencil products, and who do not place in the hands of others the means of deceiving the public in regard to their products.

As a result trade in said commerce has been and is unfairly diverted to the respondents from their competitors in said commerce to their injury, and to the injury of the public.

Conclusion

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Order to Cease and Desist

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony, and other evidence taken before John J. Keenan, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and briefs filed herein, no request for oral argument having been made, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, William Vorunion and Benjamin Vorunion, doing business under the trade names of Howard Sales Co. and Berwick Pen Co., their agents, employees, and representatives, directly or indirectly, through any corporate or other device, or through the use of any other trade name or names, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of fountain pens and pencils in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that the customary and usual retail price at which said fountain pens are sold is $5, and that the customary and usual retail price of said pencils is $1.50, or any other sums in excess of the price at which such pens and pencils are usually and customarily sold at retail.

2. Representing that said pens are being sold at 59 cents and said pencils at 29 cents, or at any other specified prices as an introductory offer for a limited period of time only, when the prices so quoted are the prices at which said pens and pencils are usually and customarily offered for sale and sold.

3. Representing that said pens and pencils are of a quality and character different from or superior to pens and pencils offered for sale and sold by competitors at comparable prices.

4. Representing that said pens have been tested and are guaranteed by the factory to be unbreakable for life, and that in case of breakage or other unsatisfactory service said pens will be repaired free of charge or exchanged for a new pen upon remittance to cover the cost of handling, postage, and insurance, when any charge is made in excess of handling, postage, and insurance costs.

5. Representing that the sum of 25 cents charged purchasers for replacement of broken or unsatisfactory pens covers only the cost of handling, postage, and insurance.

6. Representing that said fountain pens hold 200 percent more ink than any ordinary fountain pen on the market.

7. Representing, through the use of the symbol "14K," or any other symbol, or any figures, letters, or words of similar import and meaning, or otherwise, that the point or nib of said pen is composed of 14-carat gold or gold of the fineness indicated by the symbol, figures, letters, or words used, when such is not the fact.

8. Representing that certificates cut from newspaper advertisements of said pens and pencils are worth $4.41 or any other sum in connection with the purchase of such products.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

THE PERFECT MANUFACTURING COMPANY,
TRADING AS R. E. ENGINEERS

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4163. Complaint, June 13, 1940—Decision, July 24, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of radio receiving sets, electrical devices, rubber products, chemical specialties and like products, and electrical and mechanical devices for attachment to such sets, and marketed and sold under trade name "Add-A-Tube," to purchasers of various States and in the District of Columbia; in advertising said last-named device through advertising folders, pamphlets, circulars, and other literature, and newspapers published throughout the United States, and including reproduction or purported reproduction of testimonial statements,

(a) Represented that such device would give longer life to radio tubes and improve reception and make possible broadcasts from domestic and foreign stations which could not be otherwise received, and bring set up to date and give any radio tone or selectivity and static free reception found in most expensive sets on the market; and

(b) Represented that such device would improve reception on every type of radio and give it automatic volume control, and guaranteed clear and long distance reception and enabled user to tune out local and tune in distant stations free from interference, and would make any old radio receiving set as efficient as modern ones;

Facts being said electrical and mechanical device attachments aforesaid would not give longer life to tubes, improve reception, make set more efficient in receiving broadcasts from domestic or foreign stations, bring set up to date or enable users to tune out local stations and tune in distant ones, except to reduce interference from local stations, and claims otherwise and representations made therefor, as above set forth, were deceptive, false and misleading; and

(c) Represented and implied through use of name "Add-A-Tube" as trade name for and on said device that use thereof on radio receiving set, when attached, gave radio an additional tube;

Facts being it did not add a tube to or have effect of an additional tube in set to which it was attached;

With effect of misleading and deceiving, through use of such false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations and use of said trade name on device in question, substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations were true and inducing portion of said public, because of such belief, to purchase its said device:

 Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Carrel F. Rhodes for the Commission.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that The Perfect Manufacturing Co., a corporation, operating and doing business under the trade name of R. E. Engineers, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, The Perfect Manufacturing Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio. Said respondent conducts its business in the name of R. E. Engineers, with its principal office and place of business located at Madison Road at B. & O. R. R., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling and distributing radio receiving sets, electrical devices, rubber products, chemical specialties and like products and an electrical and mechanical device for attachment to radio receiving sets under the brand and trade name "Add-A-Tube." Said respondent now causes, and for more than 3 years last past has caused, its said products to be sold directly by mail to dealers for resale and to the purchasing public and has caused the same, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in Cincinnati, Ohio, to purchasers thereof located at points in the State of Ohio and various States of the United States other than the State of Ohio, and in the District of Columbia.

There is now, and has been for more than 3 years last past, a course of trade in said products so sold by respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, respondent, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of an electrical and mechanical device sold under the name "Add-A-Tube" for use in radio receiving sets offered for sale and sold by it, has circulated, by mail and otherwise, among purchasers and prospective purchasers throughout the United States, advertising folders, pamphlets, circulars, letters and other literature and advertisements in newspapers published and circulated throughout the United States, certain statements and representations concerning the adaptability, functions and uses of its said device “Add-A-Tube.” Typical of said statements and representations are the following:

Amazing new invention improves reception on every type of set, battery or electric. Easily installed in a few minutes.

Remember—ADD-A-TUBE saves tubes, improves radio reception.

Tune out strong local stations—tune in Los Angeles, Canada, Mexico! Increase selectivity, improve tone, cut out static, distortion, interference, with amazing new ADD-A-TUBE.

Add-A-Tube gives your radio automatic volume control, and prevents overloading, exactly the same as newest, latest-improved sets. Anyone can install.

Do your strong local stations come in all over the dial? Do they keep you from listening to out-of-town stations you have always wanted to hear? We guarantee Add-A-Tube to bring your radio up to date and to correct these conditions, or your money back. Add-A-Tube gives any radio the same mellow tone, the same sharpness of selectivity, the same static-free reception as the latest, most expensive sets on the market. OPERATES BOTH ON LONG AND SHORT WAVES AND ON INSIDE OR OUTSIDE AERIALS. Amazing new invention improves reception on every type of set, battery or electric.

If you are bothered by local stations, if electrical noises interfere with your reception, if you desire better tone from your loud-speaker, if you wish longer life from your tubes—In general, if you want improved reception from your radio—USE ADD-A-TUBE.

"I have given the ADD-A-TUBE a thorough test and am more than gratified. We had to content ourselves with Canadian daylight reception with the exception of two small nearby stations. Since adding ADD-A-TUBE I can pick up Denver, Salt Lake City, Chicago, St. Paul, Fargo, Oklahoma City, Billings, and Great Falls at any time during the day with good volume. I can also get foreign stations that I never heard before.”

Said statements and representations, together with other similar statements and representations not herein set out, purport to be descriptive of respondent’s device “Add-A-Tube” and serve as representations on the part of the respondent to members of the purchasing public that the use of said device will give longer life to radio tubes; will improve radio reception; will make it possible to receive radio broadcasts from domestic and foreign stations which could not be received without the use of said device; will bring the user’s radio up to date; will give any radio the tone, sharpness of selectivity and the static-free reception found in the most expensive radio receiving sets on the market; will improve reception on every type of radio receiving set; will give the user’s radio automatic volume control and guarantee clear local and long-distance reception; will enable the user to tune out local stations and tune in distant stations free from interference; and will make any old radio receiving set as efficient as modern radio receiving sets.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact, the statements and representations hereinabove set out are deceptive, false and misleading. Respondent ent's aforesaid "Add-A-Tube" electrical and mechanical device when attached to a radio receiving set will not give longer life to radio tubes; will not improve radio reception; will not render the radio receiving set more efficient in receiving broadcasts from domestic or foreign stations; will not bring the radio set up to date; will not give any radio set the tone, sharpness of selectivity, and the static-free reception found in more expensive sets; will not improve reception on every type of set; will not give a radio receiving set automatic volume control or render local or distant reception clear and free from static; will not enable the user to tune out local stations and tune in distant stations, except to reduce interference from local stations; and it will not cut out static distortion and interference.

Par. 5. The respondent represents and implies, through the use of the name "Add-A-Tube" on its device, that said device when attached to a radio receiving set gives such radio set an additional or extra tube. In truth and in fact, the use of said device does not add a tube or have the effect of an additional tube in the radio receiving set to which it is attached.

Par. 6. The use by respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations with respect to its "Add-A-Tube" electrical and mechanical device and like products, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase respondent's "Add-A-Tube" device and other like products.

Par. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on June 13, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, The Perfect Manufacturing Co., a corporation trading as R. E. Engineers, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On June 27, 1940, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearings as to the said facts. There­ thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
Findings

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, The Perfect Manufacturing Company, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Ohio, with its office and principal place of business located at Madison Road at B. & O. R. R., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than three years last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and dis­ distributing radio receiving sets, electrical devices, rubber products, chemical specialties and like products, and electrical and mechanical devices for attachment to radio receiving sets marked and sold under the trade name "Add-A-Tube."

The respondent causes said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers thereof, some located in the State of Ohio, and others located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

The respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, respondent, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of an electrical or mechanical device offered for sale and sold by it under the name, "Add-A-Tube" for use in radio receiving sets, has circulated among purchasers and prospective purchasers throughout the United States, through advertising folders, pamphlets, circulars, letters, and other literature, and through advertisements in newspapers published throughout the United States, certain false and misleading statements and representations concerning the adaptability, functions, and uses of its said device "Add-A-Tube." Typical of said statements and representations, among others, are the following:

Amazing new invention improves reception on every type of set, battery or electric. Easily installed in a few minutes.

Remember—ADD-A-TUBE SAVES TUBES, IMPROVES RADIO RECEPTION.

Tune out strong local stations—tune in Los Angeles, Canada, Mexico! Increase selectivity, improve tone, cut out static, distortion, interference, with amazing new ADD-A-TUBE.
"Add-A-Tube" gives your radio automatic volume control, and prevents overloading, exactly the same as newest, latest-improved sets. Anyone can install.

Do your strong local stations come in all over the dial? Do they keep you from listening to out-of-town stations you have always wanted to hear? We guarantee Add-A-Tube to bring your radio up to date and to correct these conditions, or your money back. Add-A-Tube gives any radio the same mellow tone, the same sharpness of selectivity, the same static-free reception as the latest, most expensive sets on the market. Operates both on long and short waves and on inside or outside aerials. Amazing new invention improves reception on every type of set, battery or electric.

If you are bothered by local stations, if electrical noises interfere with your reception, if you desire better tone from your loud-speaker, if you wish longer life from your tubes—in general, if you want improved reception from your radio—use ADD-A-TUBE.

"I have given the ADD-A-TUBE a thorough test and am more than gratified. We had to content ourselves with Canadian daylight reception with the exception of two small nearby stations. Since adding ADD-A-TUBE I can pick up Denver, Salt Lake City, Chicago, St. Paul, Fargo, Oklahoma City, Billings, and Great Falls at any time during the day with good volume. I can also get foreign stations that I never heard before."

The aforesaid statements and representations, together with similar statements and representations not herein set out in full, purport to be descriptive of respondent's said device and serve as representations on the part of the respondent to members of the purchasing public that the use of said device will give longer life to radio tubes; improve radio reception; will make it possible to receive radio broadcasts from domestic and foreign stations which could not be received without the use of said device; will bring the radio up to date; will give any radio the tone, sharpness of selectivity and the static-free reception found in the most expensive radio receiving sets on the market; will improve reception on every type of radio receiving set; will give the user's radio automatic volume control and guarantee clear local and long distance reception; will enable the user to tune out local stations and tune in distant stations free from interference; and will make any old radio receiving set as efficient as modern radio receiving sets.

Par. 4. In truth and in fact, the statements and representations hereinabove set out are deceptive, false, and misleading. Respondent's said electrical and mechanical device when attached to a radio receiving set will not give longer life to radio tubes, will not improve radio reception, will not render the radio receiving set more efficient in receiving broadcasts from domestic or foreign stations; will not bring the radio set up to date; will not give any radio set the tone, sharpness of selectivity and static-free reception found in more expensive sets; will not improve reception on every type of set; will not give a radio receiving set automatic volume control or render local or long-distance reception clear and free from static; will not enable the user to tune out local stations and tune in distant stations, except to reduce interference from local stations; and it will not eliminate static, distortion, and interference.

Par. 5. The respondent represents and implies, through the use of the name “Add-A-Tube” as a trade name for and on said device, that said device when attached to a radio receiving set gives to such radio set an additional or extra tube, whereas in truth and in fact, the use of said device does not add a tube to, or have the effect of an additional tube in, the radio receiving set to which it is attached.

Par. 6. The use by respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to its said electrical and mechanical radio device and the use of the trade name “Add-A-Tube” for said device have had and now have the capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and induce a portion of the purchasing public because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase respondent’s said device.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, The Perfect Manufacturing Company, a corporation, trading as R. E. Engineers, or trading under any other name or names, its agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of a device now designated by it by the name, “Add-A-Tube,” or any other similar device or devices to be used for the same or similar purposes, whether sold under the same name or under any other name or names, in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that said device, when attached to a radio receiving set, adds to such set an extra tube or gives to it the effect of an additional tube; or that such device adds life to the tubes therein; or that it improves reception or renders the radio receiving set more efficient in receiving broadcasts from domestic or foreign stations; or that it brings the radio receiving set up to date and gives to such set additional sharpness, tone and selectivity; or that it gives a radio receiving set automatic volume control or renders long distance reception free from static, distortion or interference.

2. Using the term "Add-A-Tube," or any other term, phrase or designation of similar import or meaning, to designate or describe said electrical or mechanical device, which device, when added or attached to a radio receiving set, does not perform the functions of an additional tube in such set.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

INDUSTRIAL PLANTS CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3835. Complaint, June 27, 1939—Decision, July 30, 1940

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution of various products, including pliers, to purchasers in various other States and in District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of said last-named product in commerce as aforesaid; in describing its said pliers in advertisements and catalogs and other printed matter distributed to members of the purchasing public in the various States and the District of Columbia—

Falsely represented said products as nickel plated, through such statements as "Machine nickel plated pliers are furnished and nickel plated" and "Nickel plated pliers are ground and polished all over, heavily nickel plated and buffed to a high luster";

With effect of misleading and deceiving members of purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false and misleading statements and representations were true, and into purchase of substantial quantity of its said product by reason of such belief, and with direct result that trade in commerce was diverted unfairly to it from its said competitors who do not falsely represent as nickel plated their respective products; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. Maurice C. Pearce for the Commission.

Mr. Jerome N. Seward, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Industrial Plants Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent Industrial Plants Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York and having its office and principal place of business at 90 West Broadway in the city of New York, State of New York.
Complaint

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for several years last past, engaged in the business of selling and distributing various products, including pliers and wrenches. Respondent causes said pliers and wrenches, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said pliers and wrenches in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and has been during all the times mentioned herein, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms, individuals and partnerships selling and distributing pliers and wrenches in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said pliers and wrenches, respondent has caused various statements and representations relative to said pliers and wrenches to be inserted in advertisements in catalogues and other printed matter all of which are distributed to members of the purchasing public situated in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among and typical of said statements and representations by respondent relative to said pliers and wrenches are the following:

- Machine Nickel Pliers are finished and nickel plated.
- Nickel Plated Pliers are ground and polished all over, heavily nickel plated and buffed to a high lustre.
- Nickel Plated Wrenches.

Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations, and others of similar import and meaning not herein set out, the respondent has represented that the aforesaid pliers are nickel plated, and that the aforesaid wrenches are nickel plated.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid statements and representations by respondent relative to said pliers and wrenches are false and misleading. In truth and in fact, the pliers which the respondent represents as aforesaid as being nickel plated are not nickel plated. The wrenches which the respondent represents as aforesaid as being nickel plated are not nickel plated.

PAR. 6. There is a preference on the part of a substantial number of members of the purchasing public for pliers and wrenches which are nickel plated because of the durability and resistance to rust and corrosion of such pliers and wrenches.
Findings

Par. 7. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's pliers and wrenches because of said erroneous and mistaken belief. As a direct result thereof, trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its said competitors who do not falsely represent that their respective pliers and wrenches are nickel plated. In consequence thereof, injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Report, Findings as to the Facts, and Order

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 27th day of June 1939, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Industrial Plants Corporation, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer dated June 19, 1940, admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, except those allegations contained therein referring to wrenches, which are denied, and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the substitute answer and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

Findings as to the Facts

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Industrial Plants Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and having its office and principal place of business at 90 West Broadway, in the city of New York, State of New York.

Par. 2. Respondent is now and has been for several years last past, engaged in the business of selling and distributing various products including pliers. Respondent causes said pliers when sold to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said pliers
in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid, respondent is now, and has been during all the times mentioned herein, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms, individuals, and partnerships selling and distributing pliers in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said pliers, respondent has caused various statements and representations relative to said pliers to be inserted in advertisements and catalogues and other printed matter, all of which are distributed to members of the purchasing public situated in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among and typical of said statements and representations by respondent relative to said pliers are the following:

Machine nickel pliers are furnished and nickel plated.
Nickel plated pliers are ground and polished all over, heavily nickel plated and buffed to a high lustre.

Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations and others of similar import and meaning, not herein set out, the respond­ et has represented that the aforesaid pliers are nickel plated.

Par. 5. The aforesaid statements and representations by respondent relative to said pliers are false and misleading. In truth and in fact the pliers which the respondent represents as aforesaid as being nickel plated are not nickel plated.

Par. 6. There is a preference on the part of a substantial number of the members of the purchasing public for pliers which are nickel plated because of the durability and resistance to rust and corrosion of such pliers,
The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations are true and into the purchase of a substantial quantity of respondent's pliers, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief. As a direct result thereof trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its said competitors who do not falsely represent that their respective pliers are nickel plated. In consequence thereof, injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint except those allegations contained therein referring to wrenches which are denied, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Industrial Plants Corporation, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its products in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or indirectly, that pliers or any other tools which are not plated with the metal nickel are nickel plated.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF LUXOR, LTD.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 2 (E) OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED
BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 3736. Complaint, Mar. 10, 1939—Decision, July 31, 1940

Where a corporation which was engaged in manufacture of toilet articles and cosmetics and in sale thereof to purchasers in each of the several States and in the District of Columbia, and which, as thus engaged in sale of its said products to retailers in the various States, was in competition with others who made and thus sold like articles and products to retailers who purchased products of said corporation and those of said other manufacturers and were in competition with each other in business of selling and reselling same to purchasing public;

In carrying on its business as above indicated and set forth, in connection with which it (1) sold and shipped its products to retail druggists and drug jobbers in every State, (2) made contracts fixing minimum resale price thereof in all States in which it was permissible by law so to do, called on retail druggists who did not receive direct shipments from it, and maintained its pricing policies with druggists not under contract and who purchased indirectly through jobbers, and (3) packaged for resale some of its most popular complexion powders, creams and rouge in “standard” or “regular” size packages and in “junior” size containers having about one-fifth capacity of others and resale price of 10 cents, as compared with 49 cent resale price of “standard” or “regular” size packages; and (4) accorded to novelty, variety, syndicate and five and ten cent stores both service or facility of such “standard” size packaging or packages, further division of which by retailer was impracticable and undesirable, and such “junior” size packaging, for which there was public demand from all classes of consumers, irrespective of financial conditions or position in life, by reason, in part, of convenience, reduction of waste and retention of fragrance and freshness, and by which packaging resale was facilitated.

Refused to furnish service or facility of such “junior” size packaging to competing purchasers of identical products, including retail druggists upon whom there was demand for its products in said “junior” size and whose practice it was to seek to maintain stock in their stores for which there was public demand, and who endeavored to obtain its products in such “junior” size and were in direct competition in same cities with, and often in close proximity to, said novelty, variety, syndicate and five and ten cent stores to whom it furnished its “junior” size facilities, in or through which convenience in display and sale was promoted, and lack of which, through such druggists' inability to furnish same in response to public call therefor, resulted in loss of sale and sometimes loss of regular customer:

Held, Subsection (e) of Section 2 of act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, as amended by act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, violated by it.
Before Mr. Webster Ballinger, trial examiner.
Mr. P. C. Kolinski for the Commission.
Mr. R. F. Feagans, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved October 15, 1914 (The Clayton Act), as amended by an act approved June 19, 1936, the Robinson-Patman Act (15 U. S. C. A. sec. 13 (e)), the Federal Trade Commission hereby issues its complaint against Luxor, Ltd., stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Luxor, Ltd., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Maine, with its principal place of business at 1355 West Thirty-first Street, Chicago, Ill. For more than a year last past respondent has been engaged in the manufacture of toilet articles and cosmetics and the sale thereof to retail dealers, causing the said products when sold to be shipped from its place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Such customers of respondent have been and are now in competition with each other in the business of selling and retailing said products to the purchasing public.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, since June 19, 1936, has been and now is discriminating in favor of certain of its purchasers against other purchasers of its said products bought for resale, by contracting to give and furnish, and by giving and furnishing, certain services and facilities in connection with the handling, sale, or offering for sale, of its said products so purchased by its customers, not accorded to all such purchasers on proportionally equal terms. Specifically, said respondents are favoring certain purchasers, as aforesaid, of their said commodities, cosmetics, and toilet preparations bought for resale, by contracting to furnish or furnishing to such favored purchasers, packages, containers, and mounted sales cards of a special size and capacity for the vending of certain of their toilet articles and cosmetics known as Luxor Complexion Powder, Luxor Rouge, and Luxor Cold, and Cleansing, Vanishing, and Foundation, Special Formula, Tissue, and Hand Creams, without similarly according such said package, container and sales card facilities to other such purchasers on proportionally equal terms.

PAR. 3. The services and facilities in connection with the handling, sale and offering for sale of its products furnished by respondent to certain of its customers consist of the following:
The toilet and cosmetic article known as "Luxor Complexion Powder" is packed in square cardboard containers with approximate dimensions of $3\frac{1}{4}$ inches per side, and a depth of $1\frac{3}{8}$ inches. The capacity of such container is approximately 2½ ounces of said complexion powder, and to its customers respondent suggests the price of this article for resale to the public at 55 cents.

To certain other of its customers respondent furnishes said complexion powder of identical grade and quality in smaller square cardboard containers with approximate dimensions of $2\frac{3}{8}$ inches per side and a depth of five-eighths of an inch. The capacity of such smaller container is approximately one-half ounce, and to its customers respondent suggests the price of this article for resale at the public at 10 cents.

The toilet and cosmetic articles known as Luxor Cold and Cleansing Cream, Luxor Vanishing and Foundation Cream, Luxor Tissue Cream, and Luxor Hand Cream, are packed in opaque glass jars of an approximate capacity of 4 ounces of such creams, and respondent suggests to its customers the resale of said products to the public at the price of 55 cents. To some of its customers, respondent furnishes the same grade and quality of Luxor Cold and Cleansing Cream, Luxor Vanishing and Foundation Cream, Luxor Tissue Cream, and Luxor Hand Cream in opaque glass jars of a much smaller size with a capacity of approximately three-quarters of an ounce, and to such customers respondent suggests the price of said articles for resale to the public at 10 cents.

Respondent manufactures and sells an additional cosmetic cream known as Luxor Special Formula Cream. This article is packed in a collapsible metal tube of a capacity of approximately 2 ounces of said cream, and its resale to the public is suggested by respondent at a price of 55 cents. To some of its customers respondent furnishes the identical cream, as to grade and quality, in small opaque glass jars having a capacity of approximately one-half ounce of said cream. To customers who are supplied with this article respondent suggests a price of 10 cents for its resale to the public.

The cosmetic article known as Luxor Rouge is packed in metal containers known as compacts, having a capacity of approximately one-fifth ounce of said produce. Respondent suggests to customers to whom it sells this product a price of 55 cents for its resale to the public. For some of its customers respondent packs Luxor Rouge of the identical grade and quality in much smaller metal compacts. The capacity of such smaller compacts is approximately one-twentieth of an ounce, and they are mounted singly on paper cards of the approximate dimensions—3 by 4 inches. Respondent suggests to customers to whom it supplies this produce on mounted sales cards, a resale price to the purchasing public of 10 cents.

Respondent designates its said toilet and cosmetic products packed and mounted as aforesaid in smaller containers, "Luxor 10 Cent Toiletries," and accords the facilities of small packaging and sales card mounting only to so-called novelty, variety, syndicate and 5- and 10-cent stores.

There exists among the purchasing and consuming public a demand for said cosmetic and toilet products, designated "Luxor 10 Cent Toiletries."

Respondent furnishes the services and facilities of small packaging and sales card mounting in the 10-cent size designated as aforesaid, to certain of its said customers. Respondent does not accord said services and facilities to other of its said customers competitively engaged with the favored customers. Respondent's failure to accord to the latter class of customer the services and facilities hereinbefore described, has the capacity and tendency to divert trade from, and to cause competitive disadvantage to, such latter class of customer.

PAR. 4. The foregoing alleged acts of said respondent are a violation of subsection (e) of section 2 of the act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," as amended by said act approved June 19, 1936.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, entitled "An act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,'" the Federal Trade Commission, on the 10th day of March 1939, issued, and on the 13th day of March 1939, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Luxor, Ltd., charging said respondent with violating the provisions of subsection (e) of section 2 of said act as amended. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by P. C. Kolinski, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by R. F. Feagans, attorney for the respondent, before Webster Ballinger, an examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly appointed by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint, and in opposition thereto, respondent having waived oral argument, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Luxor, Ltd., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Maine, with its principal place of business at 1355 West Thirty-first Street, Chicago, Ill.

Par. 2. Respondent is now, and has been since June 19, 1936, engaged in the manufacture of toilet articles and cosmetics, and in the sale thereof has caused, and is causing said products, when sold, to be shipped from its said place of business in Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in each of the several States of the Union, and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 3. Respondent is now, and has been since June 19, 1936, in competition with other manufacturers of like toilet articles and cosmetics, and in the sale thereof to retail dealers located in the various States of the Union, which said manufacturers cause their said products, when sold, to be shipped from their respective places of business in certain States of the Union to said purchasers located in other and different States of the Union. The said retail dealers, located in various States of the Union, purchase respondent's products and the products of other manufacturers, and are in competition with each other in the business of selling and retailing said products to the purchasing public.

Respondent sells and ships its products to retail druggists and drug jobbers in every State of the Union, and employs 20 salesmen to call on this particular trade, which salesmen frequently secure orders from retailers which orders they turn over to jobbers for delivery of respondent's products. Respondent makes contracts fixing the minimum resale price of its products in all of the States of the Union wherein it is permissible by law to make such contracts. Respondent's salesmen call on retail druggists who do not receive direct shipments from respondent, and respondent's pricing policies on its products are maintained as to retail druggists who are not under contract and purchase indirectly through drug jobbers in the same manner in which they are maintained in the case of druggists who are under contract to maintain prices and receive direct shipments from respondent. The Commission finds that retail druggists who purchase the respondent's products indirectly from drug jobbers are under the circumstances of this case purchasers within the meaning of section 2 (e) hereinabove cited.

Par. 4. The respondent, in connection with the sale of some of its most popular complexion powders, creams and rouge, packages each of such products in both "standard" or "regular" size packages, and in containers known as "junior" size which have approximately one-fifth the capacity of the "regular" or "standard" packages. The resale prices of the "regular" size are 49 cents, and of the "junior" size, 10 cents. Each of the respective products packages in the two sizes are identical. These products packaged in the "regular" or "standard" size are sold to all types of retailers, novelty, variety, syndicate, 5- and 10-cent stores, and retail druggists both directly from the respondent and indirectly through jobbers. The Commission finds that the "junior" size packaging facilitates the resale of products so packaged.

The respondent, in connection with the sale of these products, accords the service or facility of the "junior" size packaging and the "standard" size packaging to purchasers known as novelty, variety, syndicate and 5- and 10-cent stores, and refuses to furnish the service or facility of such "junior" size packaging to competing purchasers of the identical products. The Commission further finds that the furnishing of the "junior" size packaging constitutes a service or facility supplied in connection with the handling, sale, or offering for sale of such commodities.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of its business respondent, since June 19, 1936, continuously in selling its aforesaid products to various classes of purchasers has refused and now refuses to accord the service or facility of packaging in small sized containers for all competing purchasers of such commodities upon proportionally equal terms, or upon any terms whatsoever.

Par. 6. The Commission finds that the public demand for the "junior" size of cosmetics comes from all classes of consumers irrespective of financial condition or position in life, and is in part due to the fact that such "junior" size is more convenient to carry, that such size reduces the element of waste, and adds to the retention of fragrance and freshness. The retail drug stores have demand for respondent's products in the "junior" size and have endeavored to obtain respondent's "junior" size products. Retail druggists seek to maintain stock in their stores for which there is a public demand. The novelty, variety, syndicate, and 5- and 10-cent stores, to whom respondent furnishes its "junior" size facilities, are located in the same cities of the various States of the Union in which the retail drug stores to whom respondent refuses to accord its “junior” size facilities are located, the two classes of stores being in direct competition and often located in close proximity to each other. Thirty-eight percent of the dollar volume of respondent's products is packaged for customers in the “junior” size. The aforesaid “junior” size facilities promote convenience in display and sale of respondent's products, and it is impractical and undesirable for retailers to divide the “standard” size packages into smaller quantity units. The inability of the retail druggists to furnish the “junior” size of respondent's products when called for by the public results in the loss of a sale and sometimes the loss of a regular customer.

CONCLUSION

The Commission concludes that subsection (e) of section 2 of the said act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled “An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,” as amended by the act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, entitled “An act to amend section 2 of the act entitled ‘An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes’” has been violated by the respondent.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony and other evidence, taken before Webster Ballinger, an examiner for the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed in support of said complaint and in opposition thereto, and the respondent having waived oral argument, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion with respect to the violation of the provisions of an act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled “An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes” as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, entitled “An act to amend section 2 of the act entitled ‘An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes’” approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13) and for other purposes.

It is ordered, That the respondent Luxor, Ltd., and its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the sale and distribution of toilet articles and cosmetics in commerce among the several States and in the District of Columbia, cease and desist from furnishing any such commodity packaged in containers of a certain size and style unless all purchasers competing in the resale of such commodities are accorded the facility of packaging in containers of like size and style, on proportionally equal terms.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
In the Matter of

MONROE CHEMICAL COMPANY AND MARY T. GOLDMAN COMPANY

COMPLAINT, MODIFIED FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3274. Complaint, Nov. 26, 1937—Decision, Aug. 5, 1940

Where a corporation, and a second concern, which acquired controlling interest therein and controlled business policies thereof, engaged, as aforesaid directly and indirectly, in manufacture and sale of various preparations, including said corporation's "Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Color Restorer," to purchasers in various States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with others engaged in distribution and sale, in commerce as aforesaid, of hair tonics, hair dyes, or other products for treating various conditions of hair and scalp, and for coloring or dyeing gray hair, and including many who distribute and sell such hair tonics and other preparations and who do not in any way misrepresent quality or character or effectiveness thereof; in advertising their said "Color Restorer" in newspapers and periodicals of general circulation and in advertising folders distributed to members of the purchasing public in various States—

(a) Represented, directly or by implication, that use of product in question would restore original or youthful color to gray, streaked or faded hair and would erase or remove all trace of gray hair, through use of word "restorer" in designation of product in question, and through such statements as "Just comb colorless liquid through hair—youthful color comes—nothing to wash or rub off on clothing," and "Gray Hair Gone," and "We will show you how to bring youthful color to every hair in your head," facts being product in question does not restore original color to gray, faded or streaked hair or user, but acts as dye or stain, color produced by use thereof is artificial and it will not color or restore color to hair as aforesaid, except in the sense that it may dye the same, all trace of such hair is not removed or erased, as repeated applications are required in order to prevent new growth showing gray, faded, or streaked above scalp line, and preparation acts, as above set forth, as dye or stain on that portion exposed above such line; and

(b) Represented that originator of preparation in question was a living person, personally recommending use of such product and personally corresponding with users and prospective users thereof with respect thereto and effectiveness thereof, through displaying, in advertisements and other literature disseminated by them, purported facsimile signature of one Mary T. Goldman, notwithstanding fact individual in question, and originator of formula for producing so-called "restorer," and their predecessor in sale of preparation in question, had long since deceased and was not living at times letters and advertisements concerned were published and used by corporation and concern aforesaid;

1 The Commission on August 5, 1940, modified findings as to the facts, through modifying, as published herein, par. 10 of the original findings.
With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into erroneous and mistaken belief that such false and misleading statements and representations were true, and into purchase of substantial quantity of their said preparations, and with result, as direct consequence of such belief induced by such false statements and representations, that trade was unfairly diverted to them from those likewise engaged in sale and offer of hair preparations and cosmetics and who truthfully advertise and represent their products; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Robert Mathis, Jr., for the Commission.
Lancaster & Nichols, of Quincy, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the Monroe Chemical Co. and the Mary T. Goldman Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are now using unfair methods of competition in commerce as commerce is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Mary T. Goldman Co., is a corporation, incorporated under the laws of Minnesota on or about February 7, 1927, and having a principal place of business at St. Paul, Minn., at all times since its incorporation.

The respondent, Monroe Chemical Co., is a corporation, incorporated prior to the year 1927, under the laws of Illinois and having its principal place of business at Quincy, Ill., at all times since its incorporation.

Paragraph 2. At all times since its incorporation, the respondent Mary T. Goldman Co., has been engaged in the business of the manufacture and sale of various toilet preparations, including a preparation designated "Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Color Restorer." In or about August 1929, the respondent, Monroe Chemical Co., bought the capital stock, or a controlling interest therein, of the respondent, Mary T. Goldman Co., and at all times since the said date, has controlled the business policies of the Mary T. Goldman Co. and has operated that company for the manufacture and sale of various preparations, including the preparation called "Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Color Restorer." The respondents sell and cause others to sell said preparation for the purpose of giving color to the gray or faded hair of the user thereof.
Complaint 31 F. T. C.

Par. 3. Said respondents, being engaged in business as aforesaid, cause said "Gray Hair Color Restorer," when sold, to be transported from their places of business in the States of Illinois and Minnesota to purchasers thereof located at various points in States other than Illinois and Minnesota and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been during all of the time referred to herein, a constant current of trade and commerce in said "Gray Hair Color Restorer" so manufactured, distributed, and sold by the respondents, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of their business, respondents are now, and have been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling hair tonics, hair dyes, and various gray hair color restorers, or other products, designed, intended, and sold for the purpose of treating various conditions of the hair or scalp and for the purpose of coloring or dyeing gray hair, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 5. In the course of the operation of said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said "Gray Hair Color Restorer," respondents have caused advertisements to be inserted in newspapers and magazines of general circulation throughout the United States and have printed and circulated throughout the several States, to customers and prospective customers, through the United States mails and otherwise, advertising folders and literature in which the following statements and representations, among others, are made:

* * * they restore original color in a scientific way which gives perfect results quickly.

Just begin complete restoration of your hair and soon you will be delighted by the beauty of the perfectly restored natural shade.

Besides restoring your hair to its natural color, Mary T. Goldman's makes your hair soft and fluffy.

There is but one scientific hair color restorer and that is Mary T. Goldman's.

Watch the gray disappear—the youthful shade return.

Just comb colorless liquid through hair—youthful color comes—nothing to wash or rub off on clothing.

Erase away all trace of gray. * * * Brings warm, youthful color.

Goodbye gray hairs—free test shows way to end them.

We will show you how to bring youthful color to every hair in your head.

Have ever-youthful looking hair.

Faded—streaked—dull strands—all vanish at the touch of this famous clear water-like liquid.

The respondents also cause the name of the product, "Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Color Restorer," to be conspicuously placed on labels on the bottles in which said product is contained, and on the outside of the cartons, and in all of their pamphlets and other advertising literature above referred to.

All of said statements, together with similar statements appearing in respondents' advertising literature, including the use of the word "Restorer" in the name by which the preparation is designated, purport to be descriptive of respondents' product and its effectiveness in use. In all of their advertising literature, and through other means, respondents represent, through the statements and representations herein set out, and through other statements of similar import and effect, that said preparation designated as "Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Restorer" will (1) restore gray, streaked or faded hair of the user to its original or youthful color; (2) erase or remove all trace of gray hair; and (3) bring warm, youthful color or original color of the user's gray, streaked or faded hair as a result of the use thereof.

Said preparation does not restore the original color or the youthful color to the gray, faded, or streaked hair of the user thereof. The preparation acts as a dye or stain and the color produced by its use is artificial. Said preparation will not color or restore color to gray or faded hair except in the sense that it may dye the hair. All trace of gray, faded, or streaked hair is not removed or erased in the sense that repeated applications of said preparation will not be required in order to prevent the new growth of hair from showing gray above the scalp line. Youthful color or original color of the user's hair is not restored and does not come as a result of the use thereof, except insofar as the preparation acts as a dye on that portion of the hair already exposed above the scalp line.

PAR. 6. During all of the time referred to herein, the advertisements and other literature referred to have been signed with the name Mary T. Goldman. Such use of the name Mary T. Goldman serves as a representation that Mary T. Goldman was the originator of said preparation and is a living person personally recommending the use of said preparation and personally corresponding with users and prospective users of said preparation with respect to the product and its effectiveness in use.

PAR. 7. Mary T. Goldman was the originator of the formula for producing the preparation referred to above and was the predecessor of the respondents in the business of the sale of the preparation. The said Mary T. Goldman has long since deceased. She was not living at the times the letters and advertisements above mentioned were published and used by the respondents.

PAR. 8. There are among respondents' competitors many who manufacture, distribute, and sell hair tonics, hair dyes, and various gray hair color restorers, or other products, designed, intended, and sold for the purpose of treating various conditions of the hair or scalp and for the purpose of coloring or dyeing gray hair, who do not, in any way, misrepresent the quality or character of their respective products or the effectiveness of such products in use.

PAR. 9. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondents in designating and describing said preparation and the effectiveness thereof for restoring original and natural color to gray, faded, or streaked hair, in their advertising literature as hereinabove set out, in offering for sale and selling said preparation, were, and are, calculated to, and have had, and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true. Further, as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the representations of the respondents as aforesaid, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondents' preparation with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondents from competitors likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling similar preparations, or hair dyes, or other products, designed, intended, and sold for the purpose of treating gray, faded or streaked hair and who truthfully advertise their respective products and effectiveness thereof in use. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 10. The aforesaid acts, practices and representations of the respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors, as hereinabove alleged, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of section 5 of an act of Congress, entitled "An act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, MODIFIED FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on November 26, 1937, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondents, Monroe Chemical Company, a corporation, and Mary T. Goldman Co., a corporation, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On December 11, 1937, the respondent, Monroe Chemical Co. filed its answer in this proceeding, there being no answer filed on behalf of Mary T. Goldman Co. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondents and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, and in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceedings without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Mary T. Goldman Co., is a corporation, incorporated under the laws of Minnesota on or about February 7, 1927, and having its principal place of business at St. Paul, Minn.

The respondent, Monroe Chemical Co., is a corporation, incorporated prior to the year 1927, under the laws of Illinois and having its principal place of business at Quincy, Ill.

Par. 2. At all times since its incorporation, the respondent, Mary T. Goldman Co., has been engaged in the business of the manufacture and sale of various toilet preparations, including a preparation designated "Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Color Restorer." In August 1929, the respondent, Monroe Chemical Co., bought the capital stock, or a controlling interest therein, of the respondent, Mary T. Goldman Co., and at all times since that date, has controlled the business policies of the Mary T. Goldman Co. and has operated that company for the manufacture and sale of various preparations, including the preparation called "Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Color Restorer." Subsequent to the issuance and service of the complaint herein the respondents changed the designation of said preparation to "Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Coloring Preparation."

Par. 3. Respondents cause said preparation, when sold, to be transported from their places of business in the States of Illinois and Minnesota to purchasers thereof located at various points in States other than Illinois and Minnesota and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been during all of the time referred to herein, a course of trade and commerce in said preparation by respondents between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 4. In the course and conduct of their business, respondents are now, and have been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals also engaged in the business of distributing and selling in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, hair tonics, hair dyes, or other products, designed, intended, and sold for the purpose of treating various conditions of the hair or scalp and for the purpose of coloring or dyeing gray hair.

Par. 5. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, the respondents have caused various statements and representations relative to said preparation and its effectiveness in use to be inserted in advertisements in newspapers and magazines having a general circulation throughout the United States and in advertising folders distributed to members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States. Among and typical of said statements and representations are the following:

Erase away all trace of gray. • • • Brings warm, youthful color.
Goodbye gray hairs—free test shows way to end them.
We will show you how to bring youthful color to every hair in your head.
Have ever-youthful looking hair.
Gray Hair Gone.

In addition to the statements and representations set out above, the respondents caused many other statements and representations of similar import or meaning to be published and circulated as described above. Respondents also caused the name of the product, “Mary T. Goldman’s Gray Hair Color Restorer” to be conspicuously placed on the labels on bottles in which said product is contained and on the outside of the cartons and in the other pamphlets and advertising literature above referred to.

Prior to the acquisition by the Monroe Chemical Co. of the Mary T. Goldman Co. as hereinabove described, the respondent Mary T. Goldman Co. caused statements to be made in advertisements disseminated as above described containing representations that the use of Mary T. Goldman’s Hair Color Restorer restored the natural color to gray hair.
PAR. 6. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations, including the use of the word "restorer" in the designation of said preparation, the respondents have represented directly or by implication that the use of said preparation will restore the original or youthful color to gray streaked or faded hair, and will erase or remove all trace of gray hair.

PAR. 7. Said preparation does not restore the original color to the gray, faded, or streaked hair of the user thereof. The preparation acts as a dye or stain and the color produced by its use is artificial. Said preparation will not color or restore color to gray or faded or streaked hair except in the sense that it may dye the hair. All trace of gray, faded, or streaked hair is not removed or erased as repeated applications of said preparation are required in order to prevent the new growth of hair from showing gray, faded, or streaked above the scalp line. The natural, youthful, original color of the user's hair is not restored and does not come as a result of the use thereof. The preparation acts as a dye or stain on that portion of the hair already exposed above the scalp line.

PAR. 8. The respondents have caused advertisements and other literature referred to above to be disseminated as above described bearing what purports to be the facsimile signature of Mary T. Goldman. Mary T. Goldman was the originator of the formula for producing the Mary T. Goldman Hair Color Restorer and was the predecessor of the respondents in the business and the sale of the preparation. Said Mary T. Goldman has long since deceased. She was not living at the times the letters and advertisements above mentioned were published and used by the respondents. The use by the respondents of what purports to be the facsimile signature of Mary T. Goldman in the manner described above serves as a representation by the respondents that Mary T. Goldman (the originator of said preparation) is a living person personally recommending the use of said preparation and personally corresponding with the users and prospective users of said preparation with respect to the preparation and its effectiveness in use.

PAR. 9. There are among respondents' competitors many who distribute and sell hair tonics, hair dyes, or other products, designed, intended and sold for the purpose of treating various conditions of the hair or scalp and for the purpose of coloring or dyeing gray hair, who do not, in any way, misrepresent the quality or character of their respective products or the effectiveness of such products in use.

PAR. 10. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations has had the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations are true and into the purchase of a substantial quantity of respondents' preparation. Further, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous belief induced by the false statements and representations of respondents, as hereinabove enumerated, trade has been unfairly diverted to respondents from corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the selling and offering for sale of hair preparations and cosmetics, who truthfully advertise and represent their products. As a consequence thereof, substantial injury has been done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondents, Monroe Chemical Co., a corporation, and Mary T. Goldman Co., a corporation, their respective officers, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of their cosmetic preparation designated "Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Color Restorer" or any other cosmetic preparation composed of substantially similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar therapeutic properties, whether sold under that name or any other name or names, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:
Order

1. Representing in any manner that said preparation is not a dye, or is other than a dye, or will cause gray or faded or streaked hair to change color without dyeing the hair; or that said preparation will restore the natural, original, or youthful color to gray hair; or that said preparation will remove all trace of gray hair in any other manner than as a dye.

2. Representing by any means that Mary T. Goldman is a living person personally recommending said preparation or personally corresponding with the users or prospective users of said preparation.

3. Representing that anything less than repeated applications of said product will change the color of the user's hair; or representing that in the use of said product anything less than repeated applications of said product will cause the user's hair to maintain the color imparted to the hair by said product.

4. Using the word "restorer" or any other word or term of similar import or meaning as part of the brand name for its products.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
Where a corporation engaged in manufacture of metallic sign letters and numbers, known in trade as "ready-made" products, as distinguished from "hand-letter" work, and in sale and distribution thereof to purchasers in various States and in the District of Columbia, in active and substantial competition with others engaged in commerce, as aforesaid, in sale of similar letters and numbers; in advertising its products through circulars, pamphlets, price lists, and in periodicals and newspapers circulating in various States—

(a) Made use of statements, in referring to certain of its said sign letters and numbers, "Genuine Gold Leaf Sign Letters" and "Genuine Gold Leaf," and statement that "Our Gold Leaf is Made of Pure 24 Karat and Contains no Alloy," and represented and implied thereby that its said products were composed of 24 carat pure gold exclusively, facts being products in question were not composed of 24 carat pure gold exclusively, and were not, as signified and understood from use of terms "gold leaf" or "genuine gold leaf" to designate, describe or refer to products of type sold by said corporation, signs produced by the more expensive and generally preferred "hand letter" work or process of gold leaf exclusively, but were made of combination of gold leaf and silver leaf mounted on tinfoil, long labeled and sold as "Half Gold" by manufacturers thereof, with gold leaf, under process employed by said corporation, exposed to view and silver leaf concealed between other and tinfoil back; and

(b) Made use of statement, in describing certain other of its said sign letter and number products, "The New Modernistic One Piece Silver and Black Sign Letters," and represented and implied thereby that signs so designated, described, or referred to were made from silver leaf, notwithstanding fact they contained no silver metal or leaf, as signified and understood from use of word "silver" to designate, describe, or refer to sign letters or numbers of type produced by it;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that such representations were true, and into purchase of substantial quantities of its product as result thereof, and with result that trade in commerce was diverted to it from its competitors who do not use deceptive and misleading representations in connection with sale and distribution of their products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard and Mr. L. C. Russell, trial examiners.

Mr. E. P. Schrup and Mr. DeWitt T. Puckett for the Commission.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Consolidated Sign Letter Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Consolidated Sign Letter Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal place of business located at 416 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent is engaged in the manufacture and sale of metallic sign letters and numbers, and causes said products when sold to be transported from its place of business in Chicago, State of Illinois, to the purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in the said metallic sign letters and numbers sold and distributed by it, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is in active and substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of metallic sign letters and numbers and with others engaged in the sale and distribution of gold leaf and silver leaf, all of said competitors being engaged in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 4. In the course and conduct of its business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said metallic sign letters and numbers, respondent has made many representations concerning the character and quality of said products, by means of advertising circulars, folders, and price lists circulated generally, and by means of advertisements inserted in magazines and newspapers having an interstate circulation. Among said representations made by the respondent are the following:

- Genuine Gold Leaf Sign Letters.
- Genuine Gold Leaf.
- Our Gold Leaf is made of Pure 24 Karat and Contains no Alloy.
- The New Modernistic one piece Silver and Black Sign Letters.
All of said statements, together with similar statements appearing in the respondent’s advertising literature, purport to be descriptive of respondent’s products and representative of the character and quality thereof. In all of its advertising literature and through other means, respondent, directly or by inference, through the statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect represents that its “Genuine Gold Leaf” metallic sign letters and numbers are actually made and composed of genuine gold leaf; that said “Genuine Gold Leaf” is 24 carat pure gold containing no alloy and that “The New Modernistic one piece Silver and Black Sign Letters” actually contain the element of silver.

Par. 5. The said representations as made by the respondent with respect to the character and quality of its metallic sign letters and numbers are false, misleading and untrue.

In truth and in fact, the products described as being made and composed of “Genuine Gold Leaf” are not made and composed of genuine gold leaf, nor are they made and composed of pure 24-carat gold containing no alloy as represented by the respondent. Further, “The New Modernistic one piece Silver and Black Sign Letters” contain no silver, contrary to respondent’s description and representation.

The true facts are that respondent's so-called Genuine Gold Leaf is not the product correctly known, described and accepted as genuine gold leaf nor does it contain gold of the absolute standard of 24 carat fineness and purity. Respondent's “Genuine Gold Leaf” is actually made and composed of a very thin strip of gold superimposed upon a very thin strip of silver, the two strips together forming a single leaf, the top portion being gold and the bottom portion silver. Respondent’s so-called piece Silver and Black Sign Letters contain no silver; the same being made and composed entirely of lead foil and tin foil.

The words “Gold Leaf,” “Genuine Gold Leaf,” “24 Karat,” and “Silver” as used herein have a definite well-known, generally understood and accepted meaning. Products so described represent to the purchasing public that they are in fact real gold leaf made and composed entirely of gold; that the gold used therein is pure unalloyed 24 carat fine; that the products as so described contain the element of silver. It is common knowledge that the inherent qualities of genuine gold leaf and real silver are such that they are of superior value and adaptability for the particular usage herein required and for which usage respondent’s products are represented to be designed.
PAR. 6. There are among respondent's competitors many who sell and distribute metallic sign letters and numbers who do not misrepresent the character or quality of their respective products, and many who sell and distribute gold leaf and silver leaf who do not misrepresent the character or quality thereof.

PAR. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent in describing the character, content, and quality of its products, as hereinabove set out, were and are calculated to have, have had, and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true. As a direct result of this erroneous and mistaken belief, a number of the public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors likewise engaged in selling and distributing metallic sign letters and numbers, and from competitors engaged in selling and distributing gold leaf and silver leaf, who truthfully advertise their respective products and the character and quality thereof.

Respondent's acts and practices, as herein detailed, serve to place in the hands of unscrupulous or uninformed retail dealers a means and instrumentality whereby said dealers may mislead the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that respondent's products are of the character and quality indicated by respondent's description and representations.

As a consequence thereof, injury has been done, and is now being done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 17, 1938, issued, and subsequently served, its complaint in this proceeding charging respondent, Consolidated Sign Letter Co., Inc., a corporation, with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by DeWitt T. Puckett, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by John L. Larkin and Rudolph Winter, president and vice president, respectively, of respondent before W. W. Sheppard and L. C. Russell, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. The respondent, Consolidated Sign Letter Co., Inc., is an Illinois corporation with its office and place of business located at 416 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and has been for several years last past, engaged in the manufacture and sale of metallic sign letters and numbers.

Respondent ships its said products, when sold, from its place of business in Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. During all the time mentioned herein, respondent has maintained a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is in active and substantial competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale of metallic sign letters and numbers, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Paragraph 2. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent advertised its products by the use of circulars, pamphlets, price lists, and in magazines and newspapers circulated in various States of the United States. Among the statements used to describe its said products are the following:

Genuine Gold Leaf Sign Letters.
Genuine Gold Leaf.

Our Gold Leaf is Made of Pure 24 Karat and Contains no Alloy.

The New Modernistic One Piece Silver and Black Sign Letters.
Findings

Par. 3. Respondent's sign letters and numbers are known in the trade as "ready-made" products, as distinguished from "hand-letter" work. Respondent's products, designated and described as above set forth, as "Genuine Gold Leaf Sign Letters" and "Genuine Gold Leaf," are made of a combination of gold leaf and silver leaf mounted on tinfoil. The gold leaf and silver leaf combination is made by welding the two leaves together by a heating process. This processing is done by the H. J. Weickman Co. of Hicksville, N. Y., which has been manufacturing the product for many years. That company labels and sells the product as "Half Gold." Respondent purchases this "Half Gold" leaf from said company and cuts the combination of gold leaf and silver leaf in sized letters and numbers and mounts them on a backing of tinfoil which gives added strength and makes them easier to handle. In the finished letter or number the gold leaf is exposed to view but the silver leaf is concealed between the gold leaf and the tinfoil back. This processing is done by the respondent in its factory in Chicago, Ill. Such letters and numbers are then sold to sign painters and others who apply them to glass or other substances by means of a glue which holds the letters in place.

Respondent's "New Modernistic One Piece Silver and Black Sign Letters" are made from a combination of lead and tinfoil. They contain no silver metal. The edges of the letters and numbers are colored with black paint, leaving the center or face thereof a silver color.

Par. 4. Gold leaf is made from gold alloy. The purest gold leaf known is approximately 23 Carat or 0.999 fine gold. Silver leaf is made from silver alloy and the purest silver leaf known is 0.999 fine silver. Both are used for sign and gilding purposes and are applied to an object such as glass by a brush. A certain degree of skill is required in applying the leaf properly and the application thereof in the sign painting trade is known as "hand-letter" work. "Hand-letter" work is more expensive than, and generally preferred to, "ready-made" letter work such as is sold by respondent.

Par. 5. The testimony shows and the Commission finds that respondent's aforesaid advertising representations are false, deceptive and misleading. The term "gold leaf" and the word "silver," when used to describe or refer to sign letters or numbers, have well-established and generally understood meanings. The use of the term "gold leaf" or "genuine gold leaf" to designate, describe or refer to sign letters or numbers of the type sold by the respondent or signs produced by the method known as "hand-letter" work means that the leaf used in the manufacture of such letters or numbers is gold leaf exclusively. The use of the word "silver" to designate, describe or refer to sign letters or numbers of the type produced by the respondent means that silver leaf has been used in the manufacture of such letters and numbers.

The respondent, through the use of the statements "Genuine Gold Leaf Sign Letters" or "Genuine Gold Leaf" and "Our Gold Leaf is Made of Pure 24 Karat and Contains no Alloy," as hereinabove set out, represents and implies that its so-called "gold leaf" sign letters and numbers are composed of 24 Carat pure gold exclusively, and through the use of the statement "The New Modernistic One Piece Silver and Black Sign Letters," represents and implies that the signs so designated, described, or referred to are manufactured from silver leaf.

In truth and in fact, the gold leaf used in respondent's said products is not 24 Carat pure gold and said gold leaf does contain an alloy. The so-called "gold-leaf" sign letters and numbers designated, described, and referred to by the respondent as "gold leaf" and "genuine gold leaf" are not composed exclusively of gold leaf, and the products designated, described, and referred to as "The New Modernistic One Piece Silver and Black Sign Letters" are not composed of silver leaf and contain no silver metal.

PAR. 6. The use by respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading representations, disseminated as aforesaid, has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's products as a result of such erroneous belief. As the result thereof, trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia has been diverted to respondent from its competitors who do not use deceptive and misleading representations in connection with the sale and distribution of their products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before W. W. Sheppard and L. C. Russell, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and briefs filed herein (oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Consolidated Sign Letter Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of metallic sign letters and numbers in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, through the use of the terms “genuine gold leaf sign letters” or “genuine gold leaf” or any other words of similar import or meaning, that sign letters or numbers composed of a combination of gold and silver leaf on a backing of lead and tinfoil are composed of gold, gold leaf, or genuine gold leaf.

2. Representing that the gold leaf used in the manufacture of its products is 24 Carat fine gold, or that said leaf contains an amount of gold in excess of its actual content.

3. Representing that the gold leaf used in the manufacture of its products is made exclusively from gold and does not contain an alloy.

4. Representing, through the use of the word “silver” in the trade name, or in any other manner, that letters or numbers manufactured from a combination of lead and tinfoil contain, or are composed of, silver metal.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF

SAMUEL SWIMMER, DOING BUSINESS AS SEABOARD PAINT & VARNISH COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4014. Complaint, Feb. 5, 1940—Decision, Aug. 5, 1940

Where an individual engaged in reconditioning "Spray Booth Off Fall" paint, or product lost in painting of various products with spray guns, and in sale and distribution of such reconditioned product as outside paint to purchasers in various other States and in the District of Columbia; in letters mailed to prospective purchasers in various States—

(a) Represented that the usual, regular and customary price of said product was $2.65 a gallon, and that it was being offered and would be sold at a sacrifice price of $1.55, and that he had, in a warehouse located in the vicinity of the recipient, some 100, or other specified number, of gallons of such product, accounting for reputed sacrifice in price, facts being regular price thereof was that at which offered, and he did not have said quantity thereof, or any other number of gallons of paint, in a warehouse in recipient's vicinity, but product was warehoused at his place of business in New York State and shipments made therefrom to purchasers; and

(b) Represented that said product was manufactured for use on surfaces exposed to the weather and was clean, fresh stock in perfect condition and of extremely high quality, and would last practically a lifetime, facts being it was not made for use on outside or exposed surfaces, but for use in the painting of "frigidaires," ice boxes and other articles of merchandise not exposed to the weather, was not clean, fresh stock, as aforesaid, but made from paint lost or wasted in painting of various products with spray guns, and did not last practically a lifetime;

With effect of misleading substantial portion of purchasing public into mistaken and erroneous belief that such representations were true and, by reason of such belief, of causing substantial portion of such purchasing public to buy said products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. L. C. Russell, trial examiner.

Mr. Clark Nichols for the Commission.

Mr. Simon Michelet, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Samuel Swimmer, an individual doing business under the firm name of Seaboard Paint
& Varnish Co., hereinafter referred to as the respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Samuel Swimmer, is an individual, trading and doing business under the firm name of "Seaboard Paint & Varnish Co." with its principal place of business at 275 Russell Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. Respondent is now and has been for more than 2 years last past engaged in the sale and distribution of paint. The paint offered for sale and sold by respondent is commonly known as "spray booth off fall" paint, which is paint that is lost in the painting of various products with spray guns. This paint is reconditioned by the respondent and sold as an outside paint. Respondent causes said product, when sold by him, to be transported from his place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said product in commerce among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his said product, the respondent has mailed to prospective purchasers located in various of the several States of the United States, letters containing representations as to the price and quality of such product. Typical of the letters mailed to prospective purchasers by the respondent as aforesaid, containing such representations is the following:

In a warehouse near you, we have 100 one gallon cans, packed in cartons, of our Outside White Paint, guaranteed to be clean fresh stock in perfect condition which we will sacrifice for $1.55 per gallon, delivered, freight prepaid; original price was $2.65 per gallon.

This material is superior in quality and composition to the most expensive made well known brands of Outside White and is far superior to White Lead as to whiteness and durability.

Its unusual high quality makes it ideal for inside and outside painting on wood, metal, concrete or over old paint. It covers solid in one coat, brushes easily and dries in six hours. Endures severest exposures without cracking, chipping or flaking and lasts practically a life time.

Through the use of the foregoing statements and others of similar import and meaning not set out herein, the respondent represents and implies that the regular and customary price of said paint is $2.65 per gallon and that it is being offered for sale and will be sold at a sacrifice price of $1.55 per gallon; that said paint was manufactured for use on surfaces exposed to the weather; and that the respondent has, in a warehouse located in the vicinity of the recipient of the letter, some 100 or other specified number of gallons of such paint, which accounts for the sacrifice he is reputedly making in price, and that such paint is of clean fresh stock, in perfect condition, and that it is of extremely high quality and "lasts practically a lifetime."

PAR. 3. The above representations are false, misleading, and deceptive, for in truth and in fact, the usual, regular and customary price of the paint referred to in said letters is not $2.65 per gallon but is $1.55 per gallon, the price at which it is offered for sale to the recipients of such letters. The respondent does not have 100 gallons of paint or any other number of gallons of paint at a warehouse located in the vicinity of the recipient of the letter containing such representation for, in truth and in fact, all of respondent's paint is warehoused at his place of business in the State of New York and all shipments are made therefrom to purchasers. Respondent's paint was not manufactured for use on outside or exposed surfaces, but was manufactured for use in the painting of "frigidaires," ice boxes and other articles of merchandise which are not exposed to the weather. Respondent's paint is not of clean fresh stock, but is made as alleged from paint lost or wasted in the painting of various products with spray guns, and it does not "last practically a lifetime" or any other such extended period of time.

PAR. 4. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading representations and implications respecting his said product as to its price, quality and location has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that such representations and implications are true, and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such mistaken and erroneous belief, to purchase said product.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

charging him with unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Samuel Swimmer, is an individual trading and doing business under the firm name of Seaboard Paint & Varnish Co., with his principal place of business at 275 Russell Street, Brooklyn, N.Y. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 2 years last past, engaged in the sale and distribution of paint. The paint offered for sale and sold by respondent is commonly known as "Spray Booth Off Fall," which is paint that is lost in the painting of various products with spray guns. This paint is reconditioned by respondent and sold as an outside paint. Respondent causes said product, when sold by him, to be transported from his place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. In the course and conduct of his business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his said product, the respondent has mailed to prospective purchasers located in various of the several States of the United States, letters containing representations as to the price and quality of such product. Typical of the letters mailed to prospective purchasers by respondent as aforesaid, containing such representations, is the following:

In a warehouse near you we have 100 one-gallon cans, packed in cartons, of our Outside White Paint, guaranteed to be clean fresh stock in perfect condition which we will sacrifice at $1.55 per gallon, delivered, freight prepaid; original price was $2.65 per gallon.
This material is superior in quality and composition to the most expensively made well-known brands of Outside White and is far superior to White Lead as to whiteness and durability.

Its unusual high quality makes it ideal for inside and outdoor painting on wood, metal, concrete or over old paint. It covers solid in one coat, brushes easily and dries in six hours. Endures severest exposures without cracking, chipping or flaking and lasts practically a lifetime.

Through the use of such statements, the respondent represents and implies that the regular and customary price of said paint is $2.65 per gallon and that it is being offered for sale and will be sold at a sacrifice price of $1.55 per gallon; that said paint was manufactured for use on surfaces exposed to the weather; that the respondent has, in a warehouse located in the vicinity of the recipient of the letter, some one hundred or other specified number of gallons of such paint, which accounts for the sacrifice he is reputedly making in the price, and that such paint is of clean fresh stock, in perfect condition, and that it is of extremely high quality, and lasts practically a lifetime.

PAR. 3. The above representations are false, misleading, and deceptive. The usual, regular, and customary price of the paint referred to in said letters is not $2.65 per gallon, but is $1.55 per gallon, the price at which it is offered for sale to the recipients of such letters. The respondent does not have 100 gallons of paint or any other number of gallons of paint in a warehouse located in the vicinity of the recipient of the letter containing such representations. All of respondent's paint is warehoused at his place of business in the State of New York and all shipments are made therefrom to purchasers. Respondent's paint was not manufactured for use on outside or exposed surfaces, but was manufactured for use in the painting of "frigidaires," ice boxes and other articles of merchandise which are not exposed to the weather. Respondent's paint is not of clean, fresh stock, but is made from paint lost or wasted in the painting of various products with spray guns, and it does not last practically a lifetime.

PAR. 4. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading representations and implications respecting his said product as to its price, quality, or location has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead, and does mislead, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that said representations are true and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public to purchase said products because of such mistaken and erroneous belief.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Samuel Swimmer, his representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of reclaimed or reconditioned paint in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that the usual, regular, or customary price per gallon of said paint is $2.65, or any sum in excess of the price at which said paint is usually and customarily sold.

2. Representing that respondent has a quantity of said paint warehoused at any point other than his place of business, when in fact he does not have any of said paint warehoused at such other point or points.

3. Representing that said paint was manufactured for use on outside or exposed surfaces or that said paint is clean, fresh stock and will last practically a lifetime.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

1 Order published as modified as of October 1, 1940.
IN THE MATTER OF

CHARLES POLK, TRADING AS SALES PROMOTING COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4175. Complaint, July 6, 1940—Decision, Aug. 5, 1940

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution of watches, clocks, leather goods, electric lamps, and various other articles of merchandise, to purchasers in various States; in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing his said products—

Furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involved operation of games of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery schemes, including plan under which he sold to fraternal and charitable organizations contacted by him articles of merchandise dealt in by him as above indicated, together with push cards for use in sale and distribution of merchandise in question to purchasing public by said organizations' members, under scheme or plan by which person selecting by chance one of feminine names displayed corresponding to name concealed under card's master seal became entitled to one of articles of merchandise being thus disposed of, and operator and seller of chances was similarly compensated for his services, and amount paid by each purchaser of chance was dependent upon number concealed and secured under disk selected; and

Supplied thereby to and placed in the hands of others, in accordance with aforesaid and similar plans involving the furnishing of other push cards and lottery devices for use in sale and distribution of such merchandise, means of conducting lotteries in sale of his said products in accordance with such plans, as above set forth, involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than normal retail price thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to adopt and use said or any method involving game of chance or sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy, and refrain therefrom; With result that many persons were attracted by said sales plan or method employed by him in sale and distribution of his merchandise, and element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell same in preference to that offered and sold by competitors aforesaid, who do not use such or equivalent method, and with effect through use of such method and game of chance aforesaid, of unfairly diverting trade to him from his said competitors who do not use such or equivalent method; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practice therein.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.
Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Charles Polk, individually and trading as Sales Promoting Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Charles Polk, is an individual doing business under the trade name Sales Promoting Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 160 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y., and residence at 205 West Eighty-ninth Street, New York, N. Y. Respondent is now and for more than 5 years last past has been engaged in the offering for sale and selling watches, clocks, leather goods, electric lamps, quilts, blankets, waffle irons, radios, toilet sets, tourists sets, and other articles of merchandise to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise when sold to be shipped or transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States. There is now and for more than 5 years last past has been a course of trade in such merchandise in commerce between and among various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like and similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof and in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing said merchandise respondent has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involves the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes. One method or sales plan adopted and used by respondent was and is substantially as follows:

Respondent contacts fraternal and charitable organizations located in various States of the United States and sells and distributes to such organizations said articles of merchandise, together with devices commonly known as push cards. The said organizations in turn distribute said push cards to the members of such organizations and such members, in turn, distribute said merchandise to the purchasing public in substantially the following manner. The push card contains a number of partially perforated disks, within each of which disks there is concealed a number. Immediately beneath each of said disks there appears a feminine name. Said push cards contain also a master seal which conceals a name corresponding to one of said feminine names. Sales are from 1 cent to 35 cents and the purchaser pays in cents the amount of the number appearing within the disk selected and removed from said card by him unless the number is in excess of 35, in which event the purchaser pays only 35 cents. The purchaser pushing the disk beneath which is the feminine name corresponding with the one under the master seal which is removed after all of said disks have been sold is entitled to and receives one of said articles of merchandise, and the person who sells the chances on said push card is also entitled to and receives one of said articles of merchandise for his services. Persons who are not successful in selecting the winning number receive nothing for their money. The numbers within said disks are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the said disks have been pushed or removed from said card. All the said articles of merchandise have retail values greater than the amounts to be paid therefor. The said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes and has furnished various other push cards and other lottery devices for use in the sale and distribution of their merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

Par. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes the push cards use same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with said plans hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of said merchandise, and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said sales plan or method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

Par. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sales of chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent as above alleged are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and the injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on July 6, 1940, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Charles Polk, individually, and trading as Sales Promoting Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On July 24, 1940, the respondent filed his answer in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Charles Polk, is an individual doing business under the trade name Sales Promoting Co., with his prinprincipal office and place of business located at 160 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y., and residence at 205 West Eighty-ninth Street, New York N. Y. Respondent is now and for more than 5 years last past has been engaged in the offering for sale and selling watches, clocks, leather goods, electric lamps, quilts, blankets, waffle irons, radios, toilet sets, tourists sets, and other articles of merchandise to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise when sold to be shipped or transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States. There is now and for more than 5 years last past has been a course of trade in such merchandise in commerce between and among various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like and similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof and in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing said merchandise respondent has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involves the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes. One method or sales plan adopted and used by respondent was and is substantially as follows:

Respondent contacts fraternal and charitable organizations located in various States of the United States and sells and distributes to such organizations said articles of merchandise, together with devices commonly known as push cards. The said organizations, in turn, distribute said push cards to the members of such organizations and such members, in turn, distribute said merchandise to the purchasing public in substantially the following manner: The push card contains a number of partially perforated disks, within each of which disks there is concealed a number. Immediately beneath each of said disks there appears a feminine name. Said push cards contain also a master seal which conceals a name corresponding to one of said feminine names. Sales are from 1 cent to 35 cents and the purchaser pays in cents the amount of the number appearing within the disk selected and removed from said card by him unless the number is in excess of 35, in which event the purchaser pays only 35 cents. The purchaser pushing the disk beneath which is the feminine name corresponding with the one under the master seal which is removed after all of said disks have been sold is entitled to and receives one of said articles of merchandise, and the person who sells the chances on said push card is also entitled to and receives one of said articles of merchandise for his services. Persons who are not successful in selecting the winning number receive nothing for their money. The numbers within said disks are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the said disks have been pushed or removed from said card. All the said articles of merchandise have retail values greater than the amounts to be paid therefor. The said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes and has furnished various other push cards and other lottery devices for use in the sale and distribution of their merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes the push cards use same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with said plans hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of said merchandise, and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said sales plan or method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sales of chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent as above described are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.
and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and the injury of the public and of respondent’s competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Charles Polk, individually and trading as Sales Promoting Co., or trading under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of watches, clocks, leather goods, electric lamps, quilts, blankets, waffle irons, radios, toilet sets, tourist sets, or any other merchandise in commerce as “commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of said merchandise to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others any merchandise, together with push or pull cards, punchboards or other devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the general public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards, or other devices either with merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such merchandise to the general public, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

4. Selling or otherwise distributing any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.
Where a corporation and three individuals, who were officers thereof, managed, directed, and controlled its policies, practices, and business affairs, and participated in below acts and practices, engaged in sale and distribution of fountain pens to purchasers in other States and in District of Columbia, and in thus offering and selling to wholesalers certain pens at 33½ cents each, in substantial competition with others also engaged in such sale and distribution of fountain pens and including many who are unwilling to employ methods used by them, as below set forth, or any similar methods involving use of misleading and deceptive representations in sale of their respective products, and who do not place in the hands of others means of deceiving public in regard thereto—

(a) Offered and sold their said “Tourist” pens with price mark or band affixed to each disclosing figure $3.75, and designation “The Tourist,” wrapped in so-called “Guaranteed Lifetime Service” “certificate”; and

(b) Represented their said “Tourist” pens as “custom-built” in advertising thereof;

Facts being pens' regular retail price was from 89 cents to $1, purported resale price placed thereon was greatly exaggerated and fictitious and much in excess of that contemplated and in no wise represented pens' regular retail price or value, neither pens nor parts were, as understood by purchasing public from term “custom-built,” “hand-made,” but were assembled by them from parts purchased from different manufacturers, and they were not, as thus understood, “custom-built” nor with points such as last, ordinarily, two years or thereabouts, of grade and quality that would last for lifetime of purchaser, and they did not make repairs and replacements without cost to purchaser, but only upon payment of postage and insurance;

With result of placing in hands of retailers, through practice of affixing said price mark or band, means by which purchasing public was misled or deceived as to pens' true retail price and value, and of leading said public, through such so-called “Guarantee,” to believe that product was of grade and quality that would last for purchaser's lifetime, with any repairs necessary made without cost to purchaser, and of misleading and deceiving it further as to real grade and quality of said pens, thus banded, and into belief that they were in fact of grade and quality which ordinarily sell for and have retail value of $3.75, and were “custom-built” or “hand-made,” and with effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion thereof into erroneous and mistaken belief that said pens did in fact have such value and ordinarily sell for said sum, and were “custom-built” or “hand-made,” with repairs and replacements without cost to purchaser, and of causing such portion of public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase said pens, and thereby unfairly divert trade to them from their competitors in commerce; to injury of said competitors and that of public:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan and Mr. Miles J. Furnas, trial examiners.

Mr. John R. Phillips, Jr., for the Commission.
Block & Shlivek, of New York City, for respondents.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Union Fountain Pen Co., a corporation, doing business as "Morrison Fountain Pen Co.,” and Pauline Joab, Isadora Sandrow, and Louis Morrison, individual and as officers of said corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Union Fountain Pen Co., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its offices and principal place of business located at 79 Fifth Avenue, city of New York, State of New York. Respondent, Union Fountain Pen Co., also trades as Morrison Fountain Pen Co. Said respondent is engaged in the manufacture of fountain pens known as "Morrison's” and “Morrison Pens.”
Respondents, Pauline Joab, Isadora Sandrow, and Louis Morrison, whose address is 79 Fifth Avenue in the city of New York, State of New York, are officers of the aforesaid respondent corporation and manage, control, and direct the policies, practices, and business affairs of said corporation, and participate in the acts and practices herein charged.

The above-named corporate respondent caused and causes its products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in New York City in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent corporation now maintains, and for more than 2 years last past has maintained, a course of trade in the aforesaid fountain
Complaint

Pens so sold and distributed by it in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 2. The respondent corporation, in the course and conduct of its business, is now selling and distributing in commerce, and has been for more than 2 years last past selling and distributing in commerce, certain fountain pens designated as “No. 90 Morrison Tourist Pens,” which have been and are now uniformly banded with a price mark of $3.75, and which are sold to wholesalers at an average cost of 33 1/3 cents each, and to retailers at an average cost of 50 cents each, and have been, and are, customarily retailed to the ultimate purchaser at from 89 cents to $1. In truth and in fact the said fountain pens of respondent corporation are not of $3.75 value and are not equal in value or price to fountain pens having such value or price, but are of the type having a value of much less than $3.75, and are ordinarily sold in the usual course of trade for approximately the sum of 89 cents or $1 and were never intended to be sold for $3.75.

Par. 3. In some of its literature the respondent corporation represents, and has for more than 2 years last past represented, that the pen point or nib of the “No. 90 Morrison Tourist Pen” is 14-carat gold, by the use of a placard or poster upon which appears a large picturization of a fountain pen with the figures and letters “14Kt.” on the point or nib thereof. Although the pen point or nib itself does not bear this mark, a substantial portion of the purchasing public is nevertheless led to believe from these pictorial representations that said pens are equipped with a 14-carat point or nib, when in truth and in fact said points do not contain such a carat fineness and are of inferior quality. Said fountain pens are and have been represented as “custom built” and are sold under a purported “guaranteed lifetime service.” These representations convey to a substantial portion of the purchasing public the impression that special care has been employed in the construction of said pens, and that they are guaranteed for life. In truth and in fact respondents do not employ any special care in the construction of said pens nor is the lifetime guarantee provision fully carried out by the respondents.

Par. 4. There are among the competitors of the respondents hereinabove described corporations, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of fountain pens in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, who do not misrepresent the price of their products or falsely represent their products, but who truthfully represent the same.

Par. 5. The acts and practices of the respondents as aforesaid in using said price labels or bands showing the price of said pens to be "3.75," said representations to the effect that said fountain pen is custom built and sold under a lifetime guarantee, and said pictorial representations to the effect that the pen point or nib is 14-carat gold, have a capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that respondents' said fountain pen is in truth and in fact of the value of, and ordinarily sells for, the sum of $3.75, that the point or nib of said pen is 14-carat gold, and that said pen is of a grade, quality, and value equal to pens which ordinarily sell for the sum of $3.75 and up; and cause many members of the purchasing public, on account of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase fountain pens from respondents, thereby unfairly diverting trade in said commerce to the respondents from their competitors to the injury of such competitors and the injury of the public.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 2d day of August A. D. 1938, issued, and thereafter served, its complaint in this proceeding, charging respondents, Union Fountain Pen Co., a corporation, Pauline Joab, Isadore Sandrow, and Louis Morrison, with unfair methods of competition in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by John R. Phillips, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Max Shlivek, counsel for the respondents, before John J. Keenan and Miles J. Furnas, examiners of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, oral argument not having been requested; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.
FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Union Fountain Pen Co., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business at 79 Fifth Avenue, in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondents, Pauline Joab, Isadore Sandrow (named in the complaint as Isadora Sandrow), and Louis Morrison are officers of the aforesaid corporation and manage, direct, and control the policies, practices, and business affairs of said corporation and participated in the acts and practices alleged in the complaint.

For more than 1 year prior to the issuance of the complaint herein, the above-named respondents have been, and now are, engaged in the business of selling and distributing fountain pens in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In addition to conducting their said business under the name of Union Fountain Pen Co., respondents also conducted, prior to October 1938, their business under the name, "Morrison Fountain Pen Co."

Respondents have caused and cause their products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. There are now, and have been during all the time respondents have been engaged in business, persons, firms, and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of fountain pens in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, with whom the respondents are and have been in substantial competition. Among such competitors are many who are unwilling to employ the methods used by the respondents, as hereinafter set forth, or any similar methods involving the use of misleading and deceptive representations in the sale of their respective products, and who do not place in the hands of others the means of deceiving the public in regard to their respective products.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, as hereinabove set out, respondents offer for sale and sell their "Morrison's No. 90 'Tourist' Pen" to wholesalers at $33 1/3 cents each. These wholesalers, in turn, resell such pens to the retail trade at 50 cents each and the retail merchants sell these pens to ultimate purchasers at prices ranging from 89 cents to $1 each. These fountain pens, when sold by the respondents and when delivered to the retailers for resale to the purchasing public, have a price mark or band affixed to each pen bearing the following statement:

$3.75—Morrison's No. 90.
1/20—18 K. Band “The Tourist.”

Through said price mark or band, the respondents represent to the purchasing public that the regular retail price of said pens is $3.75 each.

Respondents in their advertising used in connection with the sale of said “Tourist” pens represent that the pens are “custom-built.”

Each of said pens, when sold by the respondents and when delivered to ultimate purchasers, is wrapped in a “certificate” bearing the caption “Guaranteed Lifetime Service.”

PAR. 4. The purported retail price of $3.75 placed on the price marks or bands attached to said “Tourist” pens by the respondents is a greatly exaggerated and fictitious price and is much in excess of the price at which respondents intend that said pens are to be sold, and in nowise represents either the regular retail price or value of said pens, which ranges as above found from 89 cents to $1. The use of this exaggerated and fictitious price mark or band leads the purchasing public to believe that $3.75 is the regular retail price of said “Tourist” pens, and that said pens are of the grade and quality of pens which ordinarily or regularly retail for $3.75. In truth and in fact, the regular retail price of said pens so price marked by the respondents is from 89 cents to $1 each.

Respondents, by affixing said price mark or band to their said fountain pens, place in the hands of retail dealers the means by which the purchasing public is misled and deceived as to the true retail price and the true value of said “Tourist” pens.

The term “custom-built,” when used in connection with fountain pens, is understood by the purchasing public to mean that said pens are “hand-made.” Through the use of the term “custom-built” in designating and describing said pens in their advertising matter, respondents lead members of the purchasing public to believe that said pens are hand-made, when in truth and in fact the component parts of said pens are purchased from a number of different manufacturers and are assembled by the respondents into a finished pen.
Neither the pen as a whole nor any of the component parts thereof are hand-made, and said pens are not “custom-built” as that term is understood by the purchasing public.

The use by the respondents of the “Guaranteed Lifetime Service” certificate in connection with the sale of said “Tourist” pens leads the purchasing public to believe that the pen is of a grade and quality that will last for the lifetime of the purchaser and that any repairs necessary will be made by the respondents without cost to the purchaser. In truth and in fact, said pens will not last a "lifetime." Expert witnesses who testified in this proceeding estimate, and the Commission finds, that, under ordinary usage, the point or nib used in said pens would last for approximately 2 years, when it would have to be replaced. Repairs and replacements are not made by the respondents without cost to the purchasers of said pens, but only upon payment of a charge covering postage and insurance. The use of said "Guaranteed Lifetime Service" certificate in connection with the fictitious price mark or band showing a price of $3.75 for each of said pens misleads and deceives the purchasing public as to the real grade and quality of said pens and leads the public to believe that said pens are of the grade and quality of pens which ordinarily sell for, and have a retail value of, $3.75.

Par. 5. The use of the aforesaid acts and practices by the respondents in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of said "Tourist" fountain pens has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that each of said fountain pens is in truth and in fact of the value of, and ordinarily sells for, the sum of $3.75, and that said fountain pens are "custom-built" or "hand-made" and will last a lifetime, and that repairs and replacements will be made without any cost to the purchaser, and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' said fountain pens, thereby unfairly diverting trade to the respondents from their competitors in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to the injury of said competitors and to the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondents, Union Fountain Pen Co., its officers, agents, employees, and representatives, and Pauline Joab, Isadore Sandrow, and Louis Morrison, their agents, employees, and representatives, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of fountain pens in commerce, as “commerce” is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that the customary and usual retail price at which said fountain pens are sold is $3.75, or any other sum in excess of the price at which such pens are usually and customarily sold at retail.

2. Affixing to said fountain pens price marks or bands containing purported retail prices, when the prices stated on said marks or bands are fictitious and in excess of the prices at which said pens are usually and customarily offered for sale and sold.

3. Using the term “custom-built” in designating, describing, or referring to said pens.

4. Representing, through the use of a “Guaranteed Lifetime Service” certificate, or in any other manner, that said fountain pens will last a lifetime.

5. Representing that respondents will repair said pens or replace damaged parts thereof without cost, when any charge is made for such service.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.
IN THE MATTER OF
HARDWOOD CHARCOAL COMPANY, MANUFACTURERS CHARCOAL COMPANY, TENNESSEE EASTMAN CORPORATION, CLIFFS-DOW CHEMICAL COMPANY, ET AL

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3670. Complaint, Feb. 17, 1939.—Decision, Aug. 9, 1940

Where two corporate entities which, (1) together with two other aggregations of concerns and individuals, as below set forth, produced about 65 percent of all the hardwood charcoal made in the United States, (2) were, along with said aggregations and the component concerns and individuals making up the same, in active and substantial competition with one another in sale of said product in trade and commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia, prior to and but for the acts and practices below set forth, and which, (3) along with said other groups, etc., in various combinations, and as below described, entered into and carried out agreements to suppress and eliminate price competition among themselves in sale and distribution of said product, and which two, respectively, were—

I. Tennessee selling agency organized in 1932 to act as exclusive agent in sale and distribution of hardwood charcoal produced by its three corporate "hardwood members" in certain areas of the United States and particularly in the southern part thereof, and including the States of Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, and some parts of Louisiana, Georgia, Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Kentucky, and Florida, and which, as such exclusive agent and within said area, handled entire charcoal output of its members and set prices at which said product was sold throughout such area, and shipped or caused to be shipped said product to the purchasers at their respective points of location in the several States other than the States of origin of such shipments; and

II. Tennessee producing company, engaged among other things, in producing charcoal as byproduct of hardwood distillation, and in selling and distributing same to distributors and dealers at various points throughout the United States and in said District, and in shipping or causing its product to be shipped to purchasers at their respective points of location, in substantial competition with pit or kiln produced hardwood charcoal and pine charcoal for same common purposes—

(a) Entered into and, since 1932, had, and carried out, a continuous understanding and agreement whereby said agency filled orders received by said producer from latter's customers (in cases in which producer had insufficient supply of own product so to do), and under practice by which particular member of said agency filling order (contract for which was between said producer and its purchaser-customer and with price of which particular member filling order had nothing to do), placed in bags bearing trade name of producer charcoal produced by particular member, with no indication on bags or receptacles that contents were packed for seller, contrary to

sellers' common practice throughout the United States of placing upon merchandise not made, produced, or packed by said sellers, or upon containers thereof, sellers' own trade-mark, trade name or other trade identification, accompanied by statement that such merchandise was manufactured or packed for sellers in question; and

Where said Tennessee selling agency, as above described, and Pennsylvania sales organization which operated substantially on nonprofit basis in sale of hardwood charcoal produced by distillation method by its various Pennsylvania and New York members, under agency contracts therewith, and which, acting as such sales agent, sold and distributed hardwood charcoal to distributors and dealers thereof at various points throughout the United States—

(b) Entered into agreement to fix and maintain identical delivered prices at which hardwood charcoal was to be sold at destination points in the United States, and, since 1932 organization of said Tennessee agency, entered into and carried out an understanding or agreement to exchange information as to delivered prices at which each sold its charcoal to distributors and dealers and as to sales policies, accounting methods and charcoal situation in their respective territories, and other information, with intent better to effectuate said delivered price agreement aforesaid;

(c) Entered into and carried out 1933 agreement or understanding in behalf of said Pennsylvania agency concern and its members and said Tennessee agency, for allocation of certain territories of the United States to one another, and, under quota system adopted, severally and reciprocally limited, for period of years in furtherance thereof, respective amounts of hardwood charcoal which each might and did seek to sell and deliver to customers in territory allotted, under which, as brokerage arrangement, latter paid former certain amount per ton for handling charcoal of latter's members, with former, or Pennsylvania agency, assuming credit responsibility as sole brokers for other in eastern market, and with other's accounts in eastern area protected so far as concerned receipt of sufficient tonnage;

(d) Entered into and carried out 1934 agreement or understanding as to distributors in eastern market to whom neither would sell as, in their joint opinion, neither substantial nor reliable, and limited thereby number of dealers to whom they would sell their respective products;

(e) Entered into and carried out 1933 and 1936 understanding and agreement to fix and maintain uniform resale prices at which hardwood charcoal was to be sold at retail at certain destination points; and

(f) Entered into and carried out 1935 understanding and agreement not to solicit one another's customers; and

Where said four corporate organizations, i.e., said Tennessee and Pennsylvania selling concerns or agencies, said Tennessee producer, and Michigan producer which, among other activities, produced charcoal as byproduct of hardwood distillation and sold and distributed the same throughout the United States to distributors and dealers at various points—

(g) Entered into and carried out June 4, 1933, understanding and agreement to fix and maintain identical delivered prices at which they would sell hardwood charcoal to dealers and distributors thereof at destination points throughout the United States; and

Where some fifteen Pennsylvania and New York corporate, partnership or individual businesses engaged as small producers in manufacture of hardwood charcoal by distillation method, and in sale and distribution thereof to distributors and dealers at various points throughout the United States; with intent, tendency and effect of suppressing and eliminating all substantial price competition between said Pennsylvania selling agency and members thereof, and between and among such members themselves, and between said members and said Tennessee selling agency and its members, and said Tennessee and Michigan and other producers, and sales agents for producers of hardwood charcoal in making and seeking to make sales of said product in trade and commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia, and as the case might be—

(h) Entered into and carried out 1935 exclusive sales contracts with said Pennsylvania selling agency, under which the 13 then involved could sell product only to said sales agency, and under which exact price to be received as agency members, unknown at time of various sales, was determined by price received by agency, less amount fixed by latter to cover its operations, with credit risks assumed by it; and

(i) Entered into 1936 contracts, in response to said selling agency's expressed desire to act as selling agency for two concerns involved and eliminate their competition with it in sale of their products, under which agency was granted right to purchase concerns' entire output, excepting certain specified customers only, and producer, who exchanged information with said Pennsylvania and Tennessee selling agencies as to prices to be charged for product, received from agency specified sum therefor; and

(j) Entered into 1936 agreement with producer under which business and successor business concerned agreed to sell entire output to said Pennsylvania selling agency, with 3-month retort shut down annually, shipments to be made as directed by agency, and monthly payments to be amount equal to market price at time of purchase, less amount fixed by agency to cover its costs of operation; and Where said Pennsylvania selling agency, or such various producers acting through it, pursuant to and as result of agreements or understandings between and among said agency's members, as hereinabove set forth—

(k) Purchased from Canadian concern 35 cars of charcoal, or entire Canadian charcoal output entering United States during 2 or 3 month period involved; with intent to prevent Canadian product from competing with that produced by said producer members and sold and distributed by said agency on its own behalf and for benefit of such members in commerce among the States;

With result that tendency and capacity of such agreements, and acts and practices performed pursuant thereto and in furtherance thereof, as above set forth, were, during periods involved, to unduly and unlawfully restrict and restrain sale of hardwood charcoal to distributors and dealers thereof in United States, and to wholesale and retail trade therein, in trade and commerce in said product between and among the several States and in the District of Columbia, and were to, and did actually, hinder and prevent price competition between and among all of said groups, members, concerns, and individuals in sale and distribution of said product in commerce, and were to enhance substantially prices to consuming public and maintain same at artificial levels and otherwise deprive public of benefits that would flow from normal competition between and among said groups, members, concerns, and individuals.
Complaint

Hold, That such acts and practices of said groups, members, concerns, and individuals, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and had dangerous tendency to hinder and prevent competition in sale and distribution of hardwood charcoal in trade in commerce among the several States, and to place in said various groups, etc., power to control such sale and distribution in the United States, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Fletcher G. Cohn for the Commission.

Dixon & Edmondson, of Memphis, Tenn., Mr. John Gosnell, of Crossett, Ark., McConnico, Hatcher & Waller and Gaughan, Sifford & Gaughan, of Nashville, Tenn., for Hardwood Charcoal Co., Tennessee Products Corp., Forest Products Chemical Co., and Crossett Chemical Co.

Kelly, Penn & Hunter, of Kingsport, Tenn., for Tennessee Eastman Corp.

Mr. Calvin A. Campbell, of Midland, Mich., for Cliffs-Dow Chemical Co.

Mr. Paul F. Eaton, of Walton, N.Y., for G. H. Treyz & Co. and the estate of G. I. Treyz.

Amended Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the corporations, firms and individuals, hereinafter described and named, have been and are now using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined by said act, and it appearing to the said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its amended complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent, Hardwood Charcoal Co., hereinafter referred to as "Hardwood," is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware and having its principal office in the Sterick Building, Memphis, Tenn. It was organized in 1932 for the purpose of acting, as the exclusive agent for respondents, Tennessee Products Corporation, Forest Products Chemical Co. and Crossett Chemical Co., hereinafter referred to as "Hardwood Members," in the sale and distribution of hardwood charcoal produced by said respondents, who each owns one-third of its stock; respondent, Hardwood, handles all of the charcoal output of said three respondents, setting the price at which said charcoal is sold; it produces no charcoal itself but maintains distribution warehouses at Atlanta, Ga., Birmingham, Ala., and Chattanooga, Tenn.

Respondent, Tennessee Products Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Tennessee and having its principal office located in Nashville, Tenn.

Respondent, Forest Products Chemical Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Tennessee, with its principal office and place of business located in Memphis, Tenn.

Respondent, Crossett Chemical Co. is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business located at Crossett, Ark.

All of said three respondents, Hardwood Members, produce charcoal as a byproduct of hardwood distillation. Each sells its entire output of hardwood charcoal to respondent Hardwood at cost; respondent Hardwood fixes the price at which the charcoal is sold to the purchasers thereof; each Hardwood Member secures its proportionate share of the profits of Hardwood based on the sales and shipments from its particular plant; each Hardwood Member bears its proportional share of the costs of operating and maintaining Hardwood.

Par. 2. Respondent, Manufacturers Charcoal Co., hereinafter referred to as "Manufacturers," is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located in Bradford, Pa. It is a non-profit sales organization which has acted, and still acts, as exclusive sales agent for certain persons, partnerships, and corporations located in the States of Pennsylvania and New York, which produce charcoal as a byproduct of hardwood distillation, most of whom are stockholders in respondent manufacturers.

Under its sales agency contracts, which are entered into semiannually with said producers of charcoal, each producer sells its entire output of charcoal to Manufacturers and, in return, secures the net amount received by Manufacturers from the ultimate purchasers less the pro rata sales expense to Manufacturers computed on a per bushel basis. Respondent Manufacturers is not a producer of charcoal and neither owns nor operates any plants engaged in the production of charcoal or wood chemicals. It solicits orders for hardwood charcoal on the basis of carload lots, upon receipt of an order, it purchases the charcoal from one of the producers for which it acts as sales agent at said producer's plant, and forwards same to the purchaser thereof.

Respondents, all hardwood charcoal producers, hereinafter referred to as "Manufacturers Members," for which respondent Manufacturers has acted and is now acting as sales agent, are as follows:

Clawson Chemical Co., a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at Ridgway, Pa., and with charcoal retort plants located at Hallton and Gilson, Pa.

Custer City Chemical Co., a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at Custer City, Pa.

Genesee Chemical Co., a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at Genesee, Pa.

The Gray Chemical Co., a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at Roulette, Pa.

Heinemann Chemical Co., a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at Crosby, Pa.

Thomas Keery Co., Inc., a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office located at Hancock, N. Y.

Kinzua Valley Chemical Co., a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at Williamsport, Pa., and which maintains a wood, charcoal, and chemical retort plant at Morrison, Pa.

Mayburg Chemical Co., a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at Endeavor, Pa., and which maintains a chemical retort plant at Mayburg, Pa.

Morris Chemical Co., a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at Smethport, Pa., and which maintains a charcoal retort plant at Morris, Pa.

Oswayo Chemical Co., a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at Genesee, Pa., and which maintains a retort plant at Coneville, Pa.
Otto Chemical Co., a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at Williamsport, Pa., and which maintains a retort plant at Sergeant, Pa.

Pennsylvania Charcoal & Chemical Co., a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at East Smethport, Pa.

Union Charcoal Co. of Pennsylvania, a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business, located at Westline, Pa.

Beatrice A. Treyz and Carol Treyz Southworth, as individuals, doing business under the trade name of G. H. Treyz & Co., with their principal place of business located at Cooks Falls, N. Y.

Victor and Laura Treyz, individuals, operating the estate of G. I. Treyz, with their principal office at Cooks Falls, N. Y.

PAR. 3. Respondent, Tennessee Eastman Corporation, hereinafter referred to as “Eastman,” is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Virginia, with its principal office located at Kingsport, Tenn. Among its other activities, it produces charcoal as a byproduct of hardwood distillation and sells and distributes same.

PAR. 4. Respondent, Cliffs-Dow Chemical Co., hereinafter referred to as “Cliffs-Dow,” is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Michigan, with its principal office and place of business located at Marquette, Mich. Among its other activities, it produces charcoal as a byproduct of hardwood distillation and sells and distributes the same.

PAR. 5. Respondent, Hardwood Members and Manufacturer Members, together with respondents, Eastman and Cliffs-Dow, produce approximately 70 percent of all the hardwood charcoal in the United States.

Hardwood charcoal is produced by the hardwood distillation method, and all of it is of the same quality.

It is a general practice in the hardwood charcoal industry to sell hardwood charcoal at a delivered price at each destination point.

Respondents, Hardwood, Manufacturers, and their respective Members, through and by means of said Hardwood and Manufacturers, together with respondents, Eastman and Cliffs-Dow, sell and distribute to distributors and dealers of charcoal practically all of the charcoal produced by the wholesale and retail trade in the United States; the amount of charcoal, other than that purchased by the hardwood distillation method, which is sold and distributed to distributors and dealers and to the wholesale and retail trade in the United States by other corporations and by partnerships and individuals, is negligible.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, respondents, Hardwood, Manufacturers, Eastman, and Cliffs-Dow, directly, and respondent Hardwood Members and Manufacturers Members, indirectly, through and by means of said Hardwood and Manufacturers acting as sales agents for their respective Members, sell and distribute hardwood charcoal to distributors and dealers thereof at various points throughout the United States, and, when said sales are made, and as a part thereof, regularly have shipped or caused to be shipped and do ship or cause to be shipped, said product to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the several States of the United States other than in the States of origin of such shipments. All of the respondents, in the aforementioned manner, maintain, and still do maintain, a constant current of trade and commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. Prior to 1932, respondent, Hardwood Members were in active and substantial price competition with each other, as well as with respondents, Manufacturers, Eastman, Cliffs-Dow, and other producers and sales agents for producers of charcoal, in making and seeking to make sales of hardwood charcoal in trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and, but for said Hardwood Members entering into and carrying out the understanding, agreement, combination and conspiracy hereinafter set out in paragraph 8, such active and substantial price competition would have continued to the present.

PAR. 8. In 1932, respondent, Hardwood Members, entered into, and thereafter carried out, an understanding, agreement, combination, and conspiracy, to discontinue, eliminate, and suppress all price competition between and among said respondent Hardwood Members themselves and also by and between Hardwood Members and respondents, Manufacturers Members, Eastman, Cliffs-Dow, and other producers and sales agents of producers of hardwood charcoal, in making and seeking to make sales of hardwood charcoal in trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Pursuant to such understanding, agreement, combination, and conspiracy, and for the purpose of effectuating same, said respondent Hardwood Members did, in 1932, form and organize respondent
Hardwood for the purpose, and with the effect, of having said Hardwood sell the entire output of hardwood charcoal of said Members; and respondent Hardwood has since operated and functioned, and is still operating and functioning, for the same purpose and with the same effect.

Par. 9. Prior to their entering into exclusive sales contracts with respondent Manufacturers, respondent Manufacturers Members were in active and substantial price competition with each other, as well as with respondents Hardwood, Hardwood Members, Eastman, Cliffs-Dow, and other producers and sales agents for producers of hardwood charcoal, in making, and seeking to make, sales of hardwood charcoal in trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and, but for said respondent Manufacturers Members entering into and carrying out the agreements, understandings, combinations and conspiracies, hereinafter set out in paragraph 10, said active and substantial price competition would have continued until the present.

Par. 10. Subsequent to the incorporation of respondent Manufacturers in 1912, and particularly since 1932, respondent Manufacturers Members entered into and have since carried out, and still are carrying out, agreements, understandings, combinations, and conspiracies whereby said respondent Manufacturers Members made and executed, and are now making and executing, with respondent Manufacturers, the exclusive sales contracts hereinbefore described in paragraph 4, for the purpose and with the effect, of restricting, suppressing, and eliminating all price competition between and among, said respondent Manufacturers Members themselves and also by and between said Manufacturers Members and respondents, Hardwood, Hardwood Members, Eastman, Cliffs-Dow, and other producers and sales agents for producers of hardwood charcoal, in making and seeking to make sales of hardwood charcoal in trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 11. Beginning in 1932, after the organization of respondent Hardwood, and continuing until 1935, respondents, Hardwood, Manufacturers, and Eastman, together with Western Charcoal Co., acting as exclusive sales agent for several Midwestern hardwood charcoal producers, including the Chemical Department of Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co., the predecessor of respondent, Cliffs-Dow, entered into understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies to suppress and eliminate price competition in the sale and distribution of hardwood charcoal throughout the United States; then during 1935, when the Western Charcoal Co. ceased to function, respondents, Hardwood, Manufacturers, Eastman, and Cliffs-Dow entered into other understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies to suppress and eliminate price competition in the sale of hardwood charcoal in the United States; all of said understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies were entered into and thereafter carried out, and those entered into during 1935 and thereafter are still being carried out, for the purpose and with the effect, of restricting, restraining, and monopolizing, and suppressing and eliminating competition in the sale of hardwood charcoal in trade and commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 12. Pursuant to the understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies entered into by, between, and among respondents, Hardwood, Hardwood Members, Manufacturers, Manufacturers Members, Eastman, and Cliffs-Dow, and in furtherance thereof, said respondents, among other acts and things, agreed:

1. To fix and maintain, and they have fixed and maintained, identical delivered prices at which hardwood charcoal is to be sold, and is sold, by them to distributors and dealers thereof at each destination point throughout the United States.

2. To fix and maintain, and they have fixed and maintained, uniform resale prices at which hardwood charcoal is to be sold, and is actually sold, at retail throughout the United States.

3. To allot, and they have allotted, territories in the United States to each of said respondents within which each is to sell, and beyond which it shall not sell, its charcoal.

4. To severally and reciprocally limit, and they have so limited, the respective amounts of hardwood charcoal which each respondent may, shall and does sell and deliver to customers in each territory respondents have allotted as the territory of each other, thereby in effect, adopting a quota system.

5. To purchase, and they have purchased, the entire Canadian hardwood charcoal output shipped into the United States for the purpose, and with the intent and effect of eliminating all possible competition arising from, or which might arise from, the sales of said Canadian charcoal in the United States.

6. To coerce, and they have coerced, and are still coercing, producers in the Eastern States of the United States who do not have exclusive sales agency contracts with respondent Manufacturers and who, prior to the acts and things herein averred, competed with the respondents, and except for said acts and things, still might and would compete with respondents in the sale of hardwood charcoal to distributors and dealers thereof in the various States of the United States, to the end that they may make and enter into such exclusive sales agency contracts with respondent Manufacturers.
7. Not to solicit, and they have not solicited, the customers of each other.

8. To penalize, and they have penalized, distributors and dealers who sold below the prices fixed by respondents at which said distributors and dealers were required to resell charcoal, by cutting down the shipments to said dealers and distributors or entirely refusing shipments to them.

9. To fill, and they have filled, each other's orders from distributors and dealers.

10. To refuse to sell, and they have refused to sell, certain designated distributors and dealers of hardwood charcoal, thus cutting off entirely the supply of hardwood charcoal of said distributors and dealers.

11. To limit, and they have limited, the number of distributors and dealers to whom charcoal is to be sold and is sold throughout the United States.

12. To exchange, and they have exchanged, information as to the delivered prices at which each sells its charcoal to distributors and dealers, as to sales policies, accounting methods, the charcoal situation in their respective territories, and other information, all for the purpose, and with the intent, of better effectuating their agreement to fix and maintain the identical delivered prices at which charcoal is to be sold and is sold at each destination throughout the United States.

13. To use, and they have used, and are now using, other means and methods designed to suppress and prevent competition, and to restrict and restrain the sale of hardwood charcoal in trade and commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 13. Each of the respondents, at the times mentioned herein, acted in concert with one or more of the other respondents in doing and performing the acts and things herein alleged in furtherance of the understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies hereinbefore set out in paragraphs 8, 10, 11, and 12; said respondents have thus adopted, and maintain and operate a system which is wholly inconsistent with, and is intended to nullify, and does nullify, the play of the forces of full competition in the hardwood charcoal industry in the United States.

Par. 14. The understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies, and the things done thereunder and pursuant thereto and in furtherance thereof, as all have hereinbefore been alleged in paragraphs 8, 10, 11, 12, and 13, have had, and do have, the effect of unduly and unlawfully restricting and restraining the sale of hardwood charcoal to the distributors and dealers thereof in the United States, and also to the wholesale and retail trade in same, in trade and commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; of unduly and unlawfully restricting and restraining trade and commerce in said hardwood charcoal in said commerce; of substantially enhancing prices to the consuming public and maintaining prices at artificial levels, and otherwise depriving the public of benefits that would flow from normal competition among and between the respondents in said commerce; and of eliminating price competition, with the tendency and capacity of creating a monopoly in the respondents' sale and distribution of hardwood charcoal in said commerce. Said understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies, and the things done thereunder and in furtherance thereof, as above alleged, constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 17th day of February 1939, issued and served its amended complaint in this proceeding upon respondents named in the caption hereof, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Answers were filed by all of the respondents to this complaint. Thereafter, stipulations were entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that statements of fact, signed and executed by respondents Hardwood Charcoal Co., Tennessee Eastman Corporation, Cliffs Dow Chemical Co., referred to in the amended complaint as Cliffs-Dow Chemical Co., Manufacturers Charcoal Co., acting for and on behalf of itself and its members, the respondents Clawson Chemical Co., Custer City Chemical Co., Genesee Chemical Co., The Gray Chemical Co., Heinemann Chemical Co., Thomas Keery Co., Inc., Kinzua Valley Chemical Co., Mayburg Chemical Co., Morris Chemical Co., Oswayo Chemical Co., Otto Chemical Co., Penn Charcoal & Chemical Co., referred to in the amended complaint as Pennsylvania Charcoal & Chemical Co., Beatrice A. Treyz & Carol Treyz Southworth, doing business as G. H. Treyz & Co., Victor Treyz and Laura Treyz, operating the estate of G. I. Treyz, and by respondents Morris Chemical Co., Penn Charcoal & Chemical Co., Beatrice A. Treyz and Carol Treyz Southworth, copartners doing business under the name and style of G. H. Treyz & Co., and Victor Treyz and Laura Treyz, operating the estate of G. I. Treyz, and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel of the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, except those charges contained in paragraphs 7 and 8 of the amended complaint and those contained in any other paragraphs of said amended complaint which pertain to the alleged understanding, agreement, combination, and conspiracy between and among respondents, Tennessee Products Corporation, Forest Products Chemical Co., and Crossett Chemical Co., to discontinue, eliminate, and suppress all competition which may have existed between and among them in the sale or distribution of hardwood charcoal in interstate commerce, through the formation of respondent Hardwood Charcoal Co. in 1932; and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statements of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding; except as above indicated, said respondents having agreed in said stipulations to waive the presentation of arguments or the filing of briefs before the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answers and stipulations, said stipulations having been approved, accepted, and filed by the Commission, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Paragraph 1. Respondent Hardwood Charcoal Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent "Hardwood," is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, and having its principal office in the Sterick Building, Memphis, Tenn.

It was organized in 1932 for the purpose of acting, has since acted, and is now acting, as exclusive agent for respondents, Tennessee Products Corporation, Forest Products Chemical Co., and Crossett Chemical Co., hereinafter referred to as "Hardwood Members," in the sale and distribution of hardwood charcoal produced by said respondent Hardwood Members, in certain areas of the United States, particularly in the southern part of the United States, and including the States of Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, and some parts of Louisiana, Georgia, Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Kentucky, and Florida. Respondent Hardwood Members each own one-third of the capital stock of respondent Hardwood Charcoal Co. Within the area hereinabove defined, respondent Hardwood Charcoal Co. handles the entire charcoal output of the respondent Hardwood Members, setting the prices at which said charcoal is sold by it throughout said area. Said respondent, Hardwood Charcoal Co., produces no charcoal itself but maintains distribution warehouses at Atlanta, Ga., Birmingham, Ala., and Chattanooga, Tenn.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Manufacturers Charcoal Co., hereinafter referred to as "Manufacturers," is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located in Bradford, Pa.

It is a sales organization operated substantially on a nonprofit basis, and now sells, or did sell within a year prior to the filing of the original and amended complaints herein, the charcoal produced by a number of small producers of hardwood charcoal, produced by the distillation method, located in the States of Pennsylvania and New York, included among which producers are the respondents Clawson Chemical Co., Custer City Chemical Co., Genesee Chemical Co., The Gray Chemical Co., Heinemann Chemical Co., Thomas Keery Co., Inc., Kinzua Valley Chemical Co., Mayburg Chemical Co., Morris Chemical Co., Oswayo Chemical Co., Otto Chemical Co., Penn Charcoal & Chemical Co., Union Charcoal Co. of Pennsylvania, Beatrice A. Treyz and Carol Treyz Southworth, doing business as G. H. Treyz & Co., and Victor Treyz and Laura Treyz, operating the Estate of G. I. Treyz, hereinafter referred to as "Manufacturers' Members."

The stock of respondent, Manufacturers, is owned and held by 4 of the aforementioned respondent Manufacturers' Members, 14 individuals who are, in turn, connected with some of the aforesaid respondents, Manufacturers' Members, and 28 individuals, most of whom were formerly, but are not now, engaged in the production of charcoal by the hardwood distillation method, for whom respondent Manufacturers did, at one time, act as a selling agent.

Respondent, Manufacturers, is not a producer of charcoal, and does not own or operate any plants producing charcoal in any form; it is strictly a sales agency. It solicits orders for charcoal on a basis of carload lots; when an order is received, it purchases the charcoal from a producer with whom it has an agency contract, and has said producer then ship said charcoal to the purchaser thereof, who pays respondent Manufacturers for the same at the prices agreed upon between said purchaser and respondent Manufacturers, as hereinafter more fully set forth.

PAR. 3. Respondent, Clawson Chemical Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at Ridgway, Pa., and with charcoal retort plants located at Hallton and Gilson, Pa.

Respondent, Custer City Chemical Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at Custer City, Pa.

Respondent, Genesee Chemical Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at Genesee, Pa.

Respondent, The Gray Chemical Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at Roulette, Pa.

Respondent, Heinemann Chemical Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at Crosby, Pa.

Respondent, Thomas Keery Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office located at Hancock, N. Y.

Respondent, Kinzua Valley Chemical Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at Williamsport, Pa., and which maintains a wood, charcoal, and chemical retort plant at Morrison, Pa.

Respondent, Mayburg Chemical Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at Endeavor, Pa., and which maintains a chemical retort plant at Mayburg, Pa.

Respondent, Morris Chemical Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office located at Smethport, Pa., and which maintains a charcoal retort plant at Morris, Pa.

Respondent, Oswayo Chemical Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at Genesee, Pa., and which maintains a retort plant at Coneville, Pa.

Respondent, Otto Chemical Co., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office located at Williamsport, Pa., and which maintains a retort plant at Sergeant, Pa.
Respondent, Penn Charcoal & Chemical Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office located at East Smethport, Pa.

Respondent, Union Charcoal Co. of Pennsylvania, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business located at Westline, Pa.

Respondents, Beatrice A. Treyz and Carol Treyz Southworth, are individuals doing business as copartners under the trade name of G. H. Treyz & Co., with their principal place of business located at 61 Front Street, Binghamton, N. Y.

Respondents, Victor and Laura Treyz, are individuals, operating the Estate of G. I. Treyz, with their principal office at Cooks Falls, N. Y.

Par. 4. Respondent, Tennessee Eastman Corporation, hereinafter referred to as "Eastman," is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Virginia, with its principal office located at Kingsport, Tenn. Among its other activities it produces charcoal as a byproduct of hardwood distillation, and sells and distributes same, as hereinafter more particularly described.

Respondent, Eastman, manufactures only hardwood charcoal, and that by the retort method; approximately 80 percent of said charcoal is sold by it for industrial purposes and 20 percent of same to the wholesale and retail trade in the United States. In most parts of the United States where respondent Eastman sells its charcoal, said charcoal is in substantial competition with pit or kiln produced hardwood charcoal, and pine charcoal, all of which are used for the same common purposes, both industrially and domestically.

Par. 5. Respondent, Cliffs Dow Chemical Co., hereinafter referred to as "Cliffs Dow," is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Michigan, with its principal office and place of business located at Marquette, Mich. It began its corporate existence on May 24, 1935. Among its other activities it produces charcoal as a byproduct of hardwood distillation and sells and distributes same throughout the various States of the United States, as hereinafter more particularly described.

Par. 6. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent Hardwood Charcoal Co. sells and distributes hardwood charcoal to distributors, dealers and customers thereof at various points throughout the territory of the United States in which respondent Hardwood Charcoal Co. acts as a sales agent for respondent Hardwood Members, which territory has hereinbefore been described; and when said sales are made, and as a part thereof, said respondents regularly have shipped or cause to be shipped, and do ship or cause to be shipped, said product to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the several States of the United States other than the States of origin of said shipments. Said respondent in the aforementioned manner maintained and still does maintain a constant current of trade in commerce of hardwood charcoal between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 7. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, respondent Manufacturers directly, and respondents Manufacturers' Members indirectly, through and by means of respondent Manufacturers, acting as sales agent for said respondents Manufacturers' Members, sell and distribute hardwood charcoal to the distributors and dealers thereof at various points throughout the United States; and when said sales are made, and as a part thereof, regularly have shipped or caused to be shipped, and do ship or cause to be shipped, said product to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the several States of the United States other than the States of origin of said shipments. All of said respondents in the aforementioned manner maintained and still do maintain a constant current of trade in commerce of hardwood charcoal between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 8. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent Eastman sells and distributes hardwood charcoal to distributors and dealers thereof at various points throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia, and when said sales are made and as a part thereof, regularly has shipped or caused to be shipped, and does ship or cause to be shipped, said product to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, said respective points of location being in States other than the States of origin of said shipments. In the aforementioned manner respondent Eastman maintained and still does maintain a constant current of trade in commerce in hardwood charcoal between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 9. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent Cliffs Dow sells and distributes hardwood charcoal to distributors and dealers at various points throughout the United States, and when said sales are made, and as a part thereof, regularly has shipped or caused to be shipped, and does ship or cause to be shipped, said product to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the several States of the United States other than the State of origin of said shipments, the State of Michigan. Respondent Cliffs Dow in this manner has maintained and still does maintain a constant current of trade in commerce in hardwood charcoal between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 10. The respondents, Hardwood Members, Manufacturers’ Members, Cliffs Dow, and Eastman produce approximately 65 percent of all the hardwood charcoal produced in the United States. Hardwood charcoal is produced by the hardwood distillation method and all of it is of the same general quality. It is a general practice in the hardwood charcoal industry to sell hardwood charcoal at delivered prices at the destination point.

PAR. 11. Active and substantial price competition did exist, and would have continued to exist, between and among respondent Manufacturers’ Members and by and between said respondent Manufacturers’ Members, respondents Hardwood, Hardwood Members, Eastman, Cliffs Dow, and other producers and sales agents for producers of hardwood charcoal, in making and seeking to make, sales of hardwood charcoal in trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, were it not for said respondent Manufacturers’ Members entering into and thereafter carrying out the understandings or agreements hereinafter set forth in paragraphs 12 and 13.

PAR. 12. All of respondent Manufacturers’ Members except respondents Beatrice A. Treyz and Carol Treyz Southworth, doing business as G. H. Treyz & Co., and Victor Treyz and Laura Treyz, operating the estate of G. I. Treyz, in 1935 entered into an understanding or agreement to eliminate competition between and among themselves in selling or seeking to sell the hardwood charcoal produced by them, in trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States; pursuant to said understanding or agreement, the said respondent Manufacturers’ Members, on December 27, 1935, did enter into and thereafter carry out, exclusive sales contracts with respondent Manufacturers, which contracts are similar to those entered into and carried out by these same respondents since 1935.

Under the aforementioned contracts, respondent Manufacturers’ Members, all producers of hardwood charcoal by the distillation method, could sell charcoal which they produced, to no one except respondent Manufacturers, which charcoal was handled by respondent Manufacturers in the manner hereinabove found in paragraph 2; but said contracts did not require respondent Manufacturers’ Members to produce charcoal nor to sell any of the charcoal which they might produce unless they so desired, but if they did produce and sell any charcoal, it had to be sold under said contracts through respondent Manufacturers. When respondent Manufacturers' Members, under said contracts, sell the charcoal produced by them to respondent Manufacturers, said respondent Manufacturers' Members do not know the exact price which they will receive from respondent Manufacturers for said charcoal but at the end of each month, respondent Manufacturers pays to respondent Manufacturers' Members, from whom it purchased charcoal during said month, an amount equal to the purchase price paid it for such charcoal, less an amount fixed by respondent Manufacturers to cover its operations. Respondent Manufacturers makes such payments regardless of whether or not it has been paid by the purchasers of the charcoal from it, and assumes all credit risks.

PAR. 13. In 1936 the estate of G. I. Treyz, and also G. H. Treyz & Co., sold their charcoal directly to customers. Respondents Victor Treyz and Laura Treyz operate the estate of G. I. Treyz. In 1936 G. H. Treyz & Co. was owned and operated by Harry Treyz, but at the time of the filing of the amended complaint herein respondents Beatrice A. Treyz and Carol Treyz Southworth were, and still are, copartners doing business under the name and style of G. H. Treyz & Co.

In 1936 respondent Manufacturers expressed its desire to the parties operating the estate of G. I. Treyz, which controlled a 36-cord charcoal plant, and G. H. Treyz & Company, which operated an 18-cord charcoal plant, to act as a selling agent for said concerns, and not have them compete with respondent Manufacturers in seeking to sell and selling charcoal. In August 1936, a verbal agreement was entered into by and between respondent Manufacturers and respondents Victor and Laura Treyz, operating the estate of G. I. Treyz, whereby respondent Manufacturers was granted the right to purchase all of the charcoal produced by the said Victor Treyz and Laura Treyz, operating the estate of G. I. Treyz, except that said respondents were privileged to sell certain specified customers which they had prior to the agreement, directly and not through respondent Manufacturers. By the terms of this oral agreement, which was terminable at the will of either party, but which continued in full force until on or about January 1, 1939, respondent Manufacturers paid respondents Victor Treyz and Laura Treyz, operating the estate of G. I. Treyz, a price agreed upon by said parties at the time for the charcoal which respondent Manufacturers ordered from respondents Victor Treyz and Laura Treyz, operating the estate of G. I. Treyz, to be shipped by the latter respondents to the customers of the respondent Manufacturers. Respondents Victor Treyz and Laura Treyz, operating the estate of G. I.
Treyz, in 1936 interchanged information with respondent Manufacturers and respondent Hardwood as to the prices to be charged by each of them for hardwood charcoal sold by them to the dealers and distributors thereof. Approximately 30 percent of the charcoal produced by respondents Victor Treyz and Laura Treyz, operating the estate of G. I. Treyz, was sold by said respondents to respondent Manufacturers, under the agreement heretofore set forth. Respondent Manufacturers, therefore, during the period of the aforementioned agreement acted, in effect, as an exclusive agent for the sale or disposition of a substantial proportion of the charcoal produced by the respondents Victor Treyz and Laura Treyz, operating the estate of G. I. Treyz. Respondents Victor Treyz and Laura Treyz have never owned any stock in respondent Manufacturers nor has either of them ever been a member of the board of directors or executive committee of said respondent, nor has either of them had anything to do with the actual management, operation, or conduct of the business of said respondent Manufacturers.

On or about July 1, 1936, respondent Manufacturers entered into a verbal agreement with Harry Treyz, then doing business as G. H. Treyz & Co., which was adopted, ratified, and continued by respondents Beatrice A. Treyz and Carol Treyz Southworth, copartners, when they succeeded to the business of G. H. Treyz & Co. upon the death of Harry Treyz, which occurred some time prior to January 1, 1939. Said agreement was terminable at the will of either party, but remained in full force and effect until on or about January 1, 1939. By its terms, Harry Treyz, doing business as G. H. Treyz & Co., agreed to sell the entire output of charcoal produced by him to respondent Manufacturers, and to shut down his retorts from June 1 to September 1 of each year. Said agreement further provided that when respondent Manufacturers received an order for charcoal, it purchased same from respondent Harry Treyz, doing business as G. H. Treyz & Co., and instructed him where to ship same; at the end of each month, respondent Manufacturers paid the said respondent Harry Treyz, doing business as G. H. Treyz & Co. (and the respondents Beatrice A. Treyz and Carol Treyz Southworth when they succeeded to said business) for the charcoal purchased from him during the month, an amount equal to the market price at the time of its purchases for him less an amount fixed by respondent Manufacturers to cover its costs of operation. Respondent, Manufacturers, during the period of said agreement, acted as the exclusive sales agent for Harry Treyz, doing business as G. H. Treyz & Co., and for respondents Beatrice Treyz and Carol Treyz Southworth when they succeeded to the business of G. H. Treyz & Co., for the sale of all charcoal produced by them. Neither Harry Treyz, Beatrice Treyz, or Carol Treyz Southworth, at any time, held stock in respondent Manufacturers, nor has any of them been a member of its board of directors or executive committee or taken any part in its active management, control, or operation.

Par. 14. The purpose, tendency and effect and result of the agreements or understandings by respondent Manufacturers' Members to enter into and thereafter carry out the exclusive sales contracts and the understandings and agreements heretofore described in paragraphs 12 and 13, are to suppress and eliminate all substantial price competition between respondent Manufacturers and respondents Manufacturers' Members, and between and among said respondent Manufacturers' Members themselves, and also by and between said respondent Manufacturers' Members and respondents, Hardwood, Hardwood Members, Eastman, Cliffs Dow, and other producers and sales agents for producers of hardwood charcoal, in making and seeking to make sales of hardwood charcoal in trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 15. Pursuant to, and as a result of, the agreements or understandings between and among respondent Manufacturers' Members as hereinbefore found in paragraphs 12 and 13, respondent Manufacturers, from November 1936, to January 23, 1937, purchased a total of 35 cars of charcoal from Yale Fuel Co., of Toronto, Canada, which represented the entire Canadian charcoal output entering the United States during that period. These purchases were made by respondent Manufacturers for the purpose of preventing the Canadian charcoal from competing with that charcoal produced by respondent Manufacturers' Members, and sold and distributed by respondent Manufacturers, on its own behalf and for the benefit of respondent Manufacturers' Members, in commerce between and among the several States of the United States.

Par. 16. Prior to the agreements and understandings by and between respondents, Manufacturers, Hardwood, Cliffs Dow, and Eastman, as hereinafter found, all of said respondents were in active and substantial competition with each other in making and seeking to make sales of hardwood charcoal in trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Par. 17. Respondents, Hardwood, Manufacturers, Cliffs Dow, and Eastman, entered into, and thereafter carried out, various understandings and agreements, on the dates and in the manner and method hereinafter specifically set forth, to suppress, and eliminate price competition between and among themselves, in the sale and distribution of hardwood charcoal, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; some of these understandings and agreements, and the acts and practices done pursuant thereto, and in furtherance thereof, were entered into and carried out by all of said respondents, acting on their own behalf and also on behalf, and for the benefit, of their respective members; others were only entered into and carried out by some of said respondents; still others were only entered into, and carried out, by two of said respondents, acting either on their own behalf or on behalf of their respective members.

Par. 18. Respondents, Hardwood and Eastman, since the formation of respondent Hardwood in 1932, have had a continuous understanding and agreement, and have carried same out, whereby respondent Hardwood has filled orders received by respondent Eastman from respondent Eastman's customers. Pursuant to such agreements and understandings, the following acts and practices were performed by said respondents.

1. Respondent Eastman has purchased charcoal from respondent Hardwood for respondent Eastman's customers. During the months of January and February 1937, respondent Eastman placed $20,938.94 worth of business with respondent Hardwood. Respondent Hardwood keeps a supply of bags on which appears the trade name of charcoal sold by respondent Eastman, to wit, "Tec-Lump," at the plants of respondent Hardwood Members, and when respondent Eastman receives an order which is filled by a respondent Hardwood Member, said respondent Hardwood Member, in approximately 40 percent of the cases where the orders are for nonindustrial charcoal, places in the bag bearing the trade name of respondent Eastman, the charcoal produced by said respondent Hardwood Member, and then ships same to the customer of the respondent Eastman, said charcoal being shipped in the name of respondent Eastman, for which said respondent Hardwood receives from respondent Eastman the price agreed upon between said respondents at the time of purchase by respondent Eastman. In approximately 60 percent of the cases, when respondent Eastman's orders for nonindustrial charcoal are filled by any of respondent Hardwood Members, shipment is made in bulk by said respondent Hardwood Members. The contract for the purchase of said charcoal is made between respondent Eastman and the purchaser thereof, and the respondent Hardwood Member, which fills such an order for respondent Eastman, has nothing to do with the price at which said charcoal is sold by respondent Eastman to its customer.
2. On January 12, 1937, respondent Hardwood Member, Tennessee Products Corporation, had close to 300,000 “Tec-Lump” bags in its plant at Lyles, Tenn., to be used by said respondent Hardwood Member in filling the orders of respondent Eastman, from respondent Eastman’s customers.

3. Respondent Hardwood, at various times and occasions, has requested respondent Eastman to give it business, and respondent Eastman has frequently complied with said requests.

4. At various times throughout the year, respondent Eastman has an insufficient supply of its own charcoal to fill its orders, most of which are based on prior contracts; and it is only at such times, respondent Eastman purchases charcoal from respondent Hardwood, in the manner heretofore described; respondent Eastman likewise, on said occasions, sometimes purchases charcoal from the respondent Manufacturers, the said respondent Manufacturers then shipping the charcoal of respondent Manufacturers’ Members to respondent Eastman’s customers in bulk and not sacked in respondent Eastman’s bags.

5. On April 21, 1933, respondent Eastman wrote respondent Hardwood, that its contract customers were pushing it heavily, and it was compelled to give respondent Hardwood Member, Tennessee Products Corporation, an order for five cars instead of firing up one of respondent Eastman’s additional retorts.

Par. 19. Respondents, Hardwood and Manufacturers, since the organization of respondent Hardwood in 1932 and until on or about January 1, 1937, had, and carried out, an understanding or agreement to exchange, and they have exchanged, information as to the delivered prices at which each sells its charcoal to distributors and dealers, as to sales policies, accounting methods, the charcoal situation in their respective territories, and other information, all for the purpose, and with the intent, of better effectuating their agreement to fix and maintain identical delivered prices at which charcoal is to be sold at destination points in the United States.

Par. 20. In 1933, respondents, Manufacturers acting for and on behalf of itself and its then members, and Hardwood, entered into, and thereafter carried out until on or about April 1938, an agreement or understanding to allot certain territories of the United States to each other, and pursuant to such agreement or understanding, and in furtherance thereof, said respondents severally and reciprocally limited, for the aforementioned period, the respective amounts of hardwood charcoal which each might, and did seek to, sell, and did sell and deliver to customers in the territory they allotted to each other, thereby adopting a quota system.
PAR. 21. The agreement or understanding between respondents, Hardwood and Manufacturers, heretofore found in paragraph 20, was a brokerage arrangement, and respondent Hardwood, at all times paid respondent Manufacturers a certain amount per ton for handling the charcoal of respondent Hardwood Members, with respondent Manufacturers assuming the credit responsibility, with the exception of one account which was indebted to respondent Hardwood; a definite part of the agreement or understanding was that respondent Hardwood's accounts in the eastern area would always be protected so far as their receiving sufficient tonnage was concerned; said agreement or understanding further provided that respondent Manufacturers was to act as respondent Hardwood's sole broker in the eastern market.

PAR. 22. In 1934, respondents, Manufacturers and Hardwood, entered into, and thereafter carried out, an agreement or understanding as to the distributors in the eastern market to whom neither would sell charcoal, because in their joint opinion, said distributors were neither substantial nor reliable; and they thereby limited the number of dealers to whom they would sell their respective charcoal.

PAR. 23. On June 4, 1935, respondents, Manufacturers, Hardwood, Eastman, and Cliffs Dow, entered into an understanding and agreement, and thereafter carried out same until about November 1, 1936, to fix and maintain identical delivered prices at which hardwood charcoal was to be sold, and was sold, by them to dealers and distributors thereof at destination points throughout the United States.

PAR. 24. During the years 1935 and 1936, respondents, Manufacturers and Hardwood, entered into, and thereafter carried out, an understanding and agreement to fix and maintain uniform resale prices at which hardwood charcoal was to be sold, and was actually sold, at retail at certain destination points in the United States.

PAR. 25. Respondents, Manufacturers and Hardwood, in 1935, entered into, and thereafter carried out until March 1938, an understanding or agreement not to solicit the customers of each other.

PAR. 26. It is a common practice throughout the United States for sellers of merchandise which they do not themselves manufacture, produce, or pack, to place upon such merchandise or upon the container or receptacle therefor, their own trade-mark, trade name or other trade identification accompanied by a statement that said merchandise is manufactured or packed for said sellers.

PAR. 27. The tendency and capacity of all of the aforementioned agreements, and the acts and practices performed pursuant thereto, and in furtherance thereof, as heretofore specifically have been found, were, during the periods when same were performed, to unduly and unlawfully restrict and restrain the sale of hardwood charcoal to distributors and dealers thereof in the United States, and also to the wholesale and retail trade in same, in trade and commerce in hardwood charcoal, between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to hinder and prevent, and did actually hinder and prevent, price competition between and among all of said respondents, in the sale and distribution of hardwood charcoal in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, to enhance substantially prices to the consuming public and maintain such prices at artificial levels, and to otherwise deprive the public of the benefits that would flow from normal competition between and among respondents, and between and among respondents Hardwood Members' and Manufacturers' Members.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of respondents, Hardwood Charcoal Co., Manufacturers Charcoal Co., Tennessee Eastman Corporation, Cliffs-Dow Chemical Co., Clawson Chemical Co., Custer City Chemical Co., Genesee Chemical Co., The Gray Chemical Co., Heinemann Chemical Co., Thomas Keery Co., Inc., Kinzua Valley Chemical Co., Mayburg Chemical Co., Morris Chemical Co., Oswayo Chemical Co., Otto Chemical Co., Penn Charcoal & Chemical Co., Union Charcoal Co. of Pennsylvania, Beatrice A. Treyz and Carol Treyz Southworth, doing business as G. H. Treyz & Co., Victor Treyz and Laura Treyz, operating the estate of G. I. Treyz, as hereinbefore found, are all to the prejudice of the public, and have a dangerous tendency to hinder and prevent competition in the sale and distribution of hardwood charcoal, in trade and commerce between and among the several States of the United States, to place in the respondents the power to control the sale and distribution of hardwood charcoal in the United States, and constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended complaint of the Commission, the answers of the respondents and stipulations as to the facts entered into between the respondents herein and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, which provide, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondents herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.
