FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION DECISIONS

FINDINGS AND ORDERS, JUNE 1, 1941, TO OCTOBER 31, 1941

IN THE MATTER OF

ART-WEB MANUFACTURING COMPANY, INC., ET AL.

Docket 3471. Complaint, June 30, 1938—Decision, June 2, 1941

Where two corporations and two individuals, who were officers thereof, owned all their capital stock, and controlled and directed their business and policies; engaged in the manufacture and competitive interstate sale and distribution of wearing apparel, including polo shirts—

Made use on a substantial number of such polo shirts of labels inscribed "EDWARD VIII Sportwear 'Fit for a King'" surmounted by a close simulation of the British royal crown, and packaged them in containers bearing a similar label and picture; notwithstanding fact that such goods were all of domestic manufacture, and that they were not holders of a royal warrant authorizing them to supply goods to any member of the British royal family, or indicating approval by any member of such family, as represented and implied through aforesaid labels;

With effect of misleading and deceiving members of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that their products were those of a British concern enjoying British royal patronage, made in Great Britain and imported into this country, and, because of such belief, into purchasing said products, whereby trade was unfairly diverted to them from their competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan, Mr. John P. Bramhall, Mr. Lewis C. Russell, and Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, trial examiners.

Mr. Carrel F. Rhodes for the Commission.

Mr. Hyman Lehon, of New York City, for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Art-Web Manufacturing Co., Inc., a corporation, A. M. Webb & Co., Inc., a corporation, and Leon J. Isaacs and Jesse Kohn, individually, and as officers of said corporations, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Art-Web Manufacturing Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its offices and principal place of business located at 86 Meserole Street, in the city of Brooklyn, State of New York. Said respondent is engaged in the manufacture of knitted underwear, sports clothes, and like products in its said place of business in Brooklyn, N. Y., and in the sale and distribution of such products. Respondent A. M. Webb & Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its offices and principal place of business located at 93 Worth Street, in the city of New York, State of New York. Said respondent is engaged in the sale and distribution of a line of merchandise including knitted underwear, sports clothes, and like products. Respondents Leon J. Isaacs and Jesse Kohn, whose address is 93 Worth Street, in the city of New York, State of New York, are officers of the aforesaid respondent corporations, and manage, control, and direct the sales policies and business affairs of said corporations, and participated in the acts and practices herein charged.

The above-named corporate respondents caused and cause their products, when sold, to be transported from their places of business in Brooklyn and in New York City, in the State of New York, to the purchasers thereof, located in States of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent corporations now maintain, and for more than 5 years last past have maintained, a course of trade in the aforesaid garments and other products so sold and distributed by them in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their said business, the corporate respondents are now, and for more than 5 years last past have been, in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing knitted underwear, sports clothes, and like products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their products by members of the purchasing public, respondents published and circulated among prospective purchasers in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, advertisements in letters, pamphlets, circulars, and by other means, designed and intended to influence purchasers of their products. In said advertisements, and on the labels on their products, and on the boxes and wrappers in which said products are packed when shipped, respondents have used certain names, ciphers, symbols, trade-marks, and pictorial representations, among which are the following:

A pictorial representation of a crown simulating the British Royal Crown and the words "trade-mark," together with the name or cipher designating a head of the British royal family, in the following manner:

EDWARD VIII

EDWARD "fit for a king"

VIII "fit for a king"

EDWARD VIII, sportwear, "fit for a king"

PAR. 4. The British Royal Crown is the property and symbol of the British Government and of the reigning royal family of the British Government, and the name "Edward VIII" is the name used to designate and describe a reigning head of the British Government. The use of the British Royal Crown, or other royal symbols, or the use of words or symbols implying patronage by the British royal family, is strictly limited and guarded by the British Government. Such use in business is confined to those persons who manufacture articles that have been used by members of the royal family and who have, because of such patronage, been granted royal warrants to use such crown, emblems, or statements implying royal patronage. It is generally recognized throughout the British domain that such warrants are granted only to individuals who, as a result of long and continuous faithful service to members of the British royal family have proved the unquestioned uniform high quality of their products and the dependability of their service.

PAR. 5. There is a preference among a portion of the purchasing public, particularly among persons of British descent and others having a predilection for products processed or fabricated of British materials and manufactured or made in Great Britain, for products of royal warrant holders, or members of the Royal Warrant Holders Association. Such preference is the result of the belief that royal warrants are granted only to those manufacturers whose products are uniformly of the highest quality and whose service is absolutely dependable in every respect.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of the name, cipher, symbols, and pictorial representation set out in paragraph 3, on or in connection with their products and in their advertising matter, serves as a representation to the members of the purchasing public that said products are manufactured by or under the authority of the British Government, the British Crown, a royal warrant holder, or member of the Royal Warrant Holders Association, and that said products are of British manufacture.

PAR. 7. In truth and in fact the products offered for sale and sold by respondents as hereinabove described are not of British manufacture, nor are said products manufactured or sold by or under the authority of the British Government, the British Crown, or a royal warrant holder, or member of the Royal Warrant Holders Association. Respondents are not royal warrant holders or members of the Royal Warrant Holders Association and have no authority to use any names or symbols so indicating in connection with their business or in connection with the products offered for sale and sold by them.

PAR. 8. There are among the competitors of the respondents, hereinbefore described, corporations, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the manufacture, sale and distribution of knitted underwear, sports clothes, and like products, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, who do not misbrand or falsely represent their products, but truthfully represent the same.

PAR. 9. The use by respondents of "Edward VIII," "Edward 'fit for a king'," "VIII 'fit for a king'," "Edward VIII, sportwear 'fit for a king'," together with the representation of a crown and the words "trade-mark" is deceptive and misleading, and had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and did and does, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that respondents' said products so marked or advertised are the products of well known and long established British concerns which enjoy British royal patronage, and, by reason thereof, are royal warrant holders, and that the products so marked or advertised were manufactured or made in Great Britain and imported into this country. On account of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs, a substantial portion of the purchasing public has been and is now being induced to purchase said products from respondents, and thereby trade has been and is now being diverted unfairly to respondents from competitors designated in paragraphs 2 and 8 hereof. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 10. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on June 30, 1938, issued and subsequently served its complaint upon respondents Artwebb Manufacturing Co., Inc., a corporation, A. M. Webb & Co., Inc., a corporation, and Leon J. Isaacs and Jesse Kohn, individuals, charging them with unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by attorney for respondents, before examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report and supplemental report of the trial examiners and exceptions thereto, and brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed by respondent and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Artwebb Manufacturing Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York. This company is not at present actively engaged in business, but during a substantial portion of the time alleged in the complaint was engaged in the manufacture of wearing apparel, particularly polo shirts, and had its principal place of business at 86 Meserole Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. The correct spelling of respondent's name is Art-Web Manufacturing Co., Inc.

Respondent A. M. Webb & Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York engaged in acting as a selling agent for various manufacturers and having its office and principal place of business at 93 Worth Street, New York, N. Y.

Respondent Leon J. Isaacs, an individual, is vice president and secretary of respondent Art-Web Manufacturing Co., Inc., and president and treasurer of respondent A. M. Webb & Co., Inc., and together with respondent Jesse Kohn owns all the capital stock of both corporate respondents.

Respondent Jesse Kohn, an individual, is president and treasurer of respondent Art-Web Manufacturing Co., Inc., and vice president and secretary of respondent A. M. Webb & Co., Inc., and together with respondent Leon J. Isaacs owns all the capital stock of both corporate respondents.

The two individual respondents, by reason of the offices which they hold and their ownership of the capital stock of the two corporate respondents, own, control, and direct the business and policies of both corporate respondents.

PAR. 2. During a substantial portion of the time alleged in the complaint respondents have been engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of articles of wearing apparel, including polo shirts, and in the course and conduct of such business have caused said articles of wearing apparel to be transported from the State of New York to purchasers in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of said business respondents have been engaged in substantial competition with other corporations and individuals, and with partnerships engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing wearing apparel, including polo shirts, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. A substantial number of polo shirts sold and distributed in commerce by respondents between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia bore labels inscribed.

surmounted by a pictorial representation closely simulating the British royal crown, and were packaged in containers bearing labels reading, with a pictorial representation closely simulating the British royal crown imprinted above the word and figures "Edward VIII."

EDWARD VIII

During a portion of the time that respondents used the aforesaid labels, including said pictorial representations, the reigning head of the British Empire was Edward VIII, King of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions Beyond the Seas, Emperor of India. The labels used by respondents represented and implied that such use was by authority or right and signified to members of the consuming public that the articles bearing such labels, or the manufacturer thereof, had the approval of the head of or some member of the British royal family and that the goods bearing such labels were of English manufacture and were imported into this country.

There is a preference among a portion of the purchasing public for products manufactured in Great Britain or by holders of royal warrants. Respondents' goods bearing said labels were in fact of domestic manufacture and respondents are not holders of a royal warrant authorizing them to supply goods to any member of the British royal family or indicating approval by any member of the British royal family.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations are deceptive and misleading and have the capacity and tendency, to, and do, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that respondents' products are those of a British concern enjoying British royal patronage and were manufactured or made in Great Britain and imported into this country. Because of such mistaken and erroneous belief a substantial portion of the purchasing public was induced to purchase said products from respondents, and thereby trade has been unfairly diverted to respondents from their competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto taken before examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, report and supplemental report of the trial examiners and exceptions thereto, and brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed by respondents and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondents Art-Web Manufacturing Co., Inc. (Artwebb Manufacturing Co., Inc.), a corporation, A. M. Webb & Co., Inc., a corporation, their officers, agents, representatives, and employees, respondents Leon J. Isaacs and Jesse Kohn, individuals, and their agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the sale and offering for sale of articles of wearing apparel in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Using the designation "Edward VIII," either separately or in conjunction with any pictorial representation simulating the British crown, as a label for, or to designate or describe, any article of wearing apparel; or otherwise representing or implying that such products are of British manufacture, or imported from Great Britain, or have the approval of or warrant from any member of the British royal family.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall, within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

SOL. RAPHAEL, INC.

Docket 4205. Complaint, July 31, 1940—Decision, June 4, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in importing rugs and in competitive interstate sale and distribution thereof to wholesale and retail dealers—

Made use of designations "Khandah," "Aristan," "Karachi," "Numdah," "Calcutta," "Burma," "Daria," "Damascus," "Bagad," "Tamur," and "Chinese," in describing and designating certain of its products in invoices and letters addressed to dealers, and in otherwise referring thereto, and on labels attached to rugs designated "Calcutta," set forth said name with depiction of coat of arms of Persia, and on labels attached to its "Bagad" rugs, said name together with depiction of an oriental scene;

Notwithstanding the fact that aforesaid rugs designated, as case might be, by names "Khandah" and "Aristan," which were those of the genuine product, made in the true oriental manner in India; by name "Karachi" which was that of true oriental rug made in Persia; by name "Numdah" which was that of felted woolen rug made in India; and by other names or designations which, used as aforesaid, connoted places in the Orient and China, were not, as long understood from such designations, oriental rugs made in the Orient, or more particularly certain parts of southwestern Asia, or Chinese oriental rugs made in China, by hand, with pile of wool, or silk and wool, threads of which were knotted by hand in a special manner, long held in great public esteem because of texture, beauty, and durability and therefore decidedly preferred on the part of many of the purchasing public, but were made on power looms in factories in France and Belgium of cotton or jute, or of a combination of both, and did not possess all the characteristics, as aforesaid indicated, of the true oriental or Chinese oriental rugs, which they so closely simulated in appearance as to be indistinguishable therefrom by a large portion of the purchasing public;

With capacity and tendency to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous belief that said representations and designations were true, and to induce them to purchase said rugs, by reason thereof, as the genuine product, in all respects, and with effect of placing in the hands of retail dealers means of misleading the public in aforesaid particulars, and with further result that trade was unfairly diverted to it from its competitors engaged in interstate sale of rugs of various kinds, including genuine oriental, Chinese oriental, and domestic rugs, who truthfully represent their said products; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That said acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. Randolph W. Branch for the Commission.
Mary Rehan, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Sol. Raphael, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Sol. Raphael, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York and having an office and principal place of business at 333 Seventh Avenue, city and State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 3 years last past, engaged in the business of importing, distributing, and selling rugs. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent sells said rugs to various wholesale and retail dealers and causes them, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said rugs in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of rugs in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among such competitors are many who do not misrepresent the nature of their products and the place or method of manufacture thereof, or who do not furnish their dealer-customers with means or instrumentalities for deceiving the public.

PAR. 4. A substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public understands, and for many years has understood, oriental rugs to be rugs made in the Orient or, more particularly, in certain parts of Southwestern Asia, by hand, of pleasing texture and original and beautiful design and having a pile of wool or silk and wool, the threads of which are individually knotted in a special manner. Such rugs are usually designated by names which are indicative of the Orient and oriental origin and manufacture. A substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public understands, and for many years has understood, Chinese oriental rugs to be made in China, by hand, in the same manner and possessing the same qualities and characteristics as the oriental rug. Both oriental and Chinese rugs have been for many years, and still are, held in great public esteem because of their texture, beauty, durability, and other qualities, and by reason thereof, there is a decided preference on the part of many of the purchasing public for such rugs.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of its business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said rugs, respondent has engaged in the practice of describing and designating certain of its rugs which closely resemble true oriental or Chinese oriental rugs in appearance by the names of "Khandah," "Aristan," "Karachi," "Numdah," "Calcutta," "Burma," "Daria," "Damascus," "Bagad," "Tamur," and "Chinese." There are rugs known as "Khandah" and "Aristan," which are made in the true oriental manner, in India. A true oriental rug, made in Persia, is known as the "Karachi," and a felted woolen rug, made in India, is known as the "Numdah."

The use by respondent of the designations "Khandah," "Aristan," "Karachi," and "Numdah" have the capacity and tendency to create the mistaken and erroneous belief that the rugs so designated are in fact the genuine oriental and Indian rugs of the same names. The other designations, used as aforesaid, connote places in the Orient and China, and have the capacity and tendency to induce the mistaken and erroneous belief that the "Chinese" rugs are made in China, that the others are made in the Orient, that all are made by hand and are, in all respects, including materials, true Chinese oriental or oriental rugs. Respondent uses said names to designate its said rugs in invoices and letters addressed to dealers, and in otherwise referring to the same in the sale thereof to dealers. To the rugs designated as "Calcutta" are firmly attached labels upon which that name appears in connection with a depiction of the coat of arms of Persia; to the rugs designated "Bagad" are firmly attached labels upon which that name appears in connection with the depiction of an oriental scene. Said labels are plainly discernible to members of the purchasing public when said rugs are displayed for sale by retail dealers.

In truth and in fact respondent's said rugs are woven on power looms in factories in France and Belgium. They are not made by hand, nor are the individual threads knotted in the distinctive manner of the true oriental or Chinese oriental rug. Said rugs are made of cotton or of jute or of the two combined. They do not possess all the characteristics of the true oriental or Chinese oriental rug, but do in fact so closely simulate them in appearance as to be indistinguishable from them by a large portion of the purchasing public, and are in consequence readily accepted as being true oriental or Chinese oriental rugs.

PAR. 6. The use by respondent of the designations, depictions and representations, as set forth herein, in connection with the offering for sale and sale of its said rugs, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations and designations are true and correct, and to induce them to purchase said rugs on account thereof. Respondent's said acts and practices have the effect of placing in the hands of retail dealers who purchase said rugs and resell the same to the purchasing public, means and instrumentalities of misleading and deceiving the public in the particulars aforesaid.

As a result of respondent's said acts and practices, trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from its competitors engaged in the sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of rugs of various kinds, including genuine oriental, Chinese oriental, and domestic rugs, who truthfully represent their products as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof. In consequence thereof, injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 31, 1940, issued, and on August 1, 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Sol. Raphael, Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's request for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Sol. Raphael, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York and having an office and principal place of business at 333 Seventh Avenue, city and State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 3 years last past, engaged in the business of importing, distributing, and selling rugs. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent sells said rugs to various wholesale and retail dealers and causes them, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said rugs in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of rugs in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among such competitors are many who do not misrepresent the nature of their products and the place or method of manufacture thereof, or who do not furnish their dealer-customers with means or instrumentalities for deceiving the public.

PAR. 4. A substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public understands, and for many years has understood, oriental rugs to be rugs made in the Orient or, more particularly, in certain parts of southwestern Asia, by hand, of pleasing texture and original and beautiful design and having a pile of wool or silk and wool, the threads of which are individually knotted in a special manner. Such rugs are usually designated by names which are indicative of the Orient and oriental origin and manufacture. A substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public understands, and for many years has understood, Chinese oriental rugs to be made in China, by hand, in the same manner and possessing the same qualities and characteristics as the oriental rug. Both oriental and Chinese rugs have been for many years, and still are, held in great public esteem because of their texture, beauty, durability, and other qualities, and by reason thereof there is a decided preference on the part of many of the purchasing public for such rugs.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of its business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said rugs, respondent has engaged in the practice of describing and designating certain of its rugs which closely resemble true oriental or Chinese oriental rugs in appearance by the names of "Khandah," "Aristan," "Karachi," "Numdah," "Calcutta," "Burma," "Daria," "Damascus," "Bagad," "Tamur," and "Chinese." There are rugs known as "Khandah" and "Aristan," which are made in the true oriental manner, in India. A true oriental rug, made in Persia, is known as the "Karachi," and a felted woolen rug, made in India, is known as the "Numdah."

The use by respondent of the designations "Khandah," "Aristan," "Karachi," and "Numdah" have the capacity and tendency to create the mistaken and erroneous belief that the rugs so designated are in fact the genuine oriental and Indian rugs of the same names. The other designations, used as aforesaid, connote places in the Orient and China, and have the capacity and tendency to induce the mistaken and erroneous belief that the "Chinese" rugs are made in China, that the others are made in the Orient, that all are made by hand and are, in all respects, including materials, true Chinese oriental or oriental rugs. Respondent uses said names to designate its said rugs in invoices and letters addressed to dealers, and in otherwise referring to the same in the sale thereof to dealers. To the rugs designated as "Calcutta" are firmly attached labels upon which that name appears in connection with a depiction of the coat of arms of Persia; to the rugs designated "Bagad" are firmly attached labels upon which that name appears in connection with the depiction of an oriental scene. Said labels are plainly discernible to members of the purchasing public when said rugs are displayed for sale by retail dealers.

In truth and in fact respondent's said rugs are woven on power looms in factories in France and Belgium. They are not made by hand, nor are the individual threads knotted in the distinctive manner of the true oriental or Chinese oriental rug. Said rugs are made of cotton or of jute or of the two combined. They do not possess all the characteristics of the true oriental or Chinese oriental rug, but do in fact so closely simulate them in appearance as to be indistinguishable from them by a large portion of the purchasing public, and are in consequence readily accepted as being true oriental or Chinese oriental rugs.

PAR. 6. The use by respondent of the designations, depictions, and representations, as set forth herein, in connection with the offering for sale and sale of its said rugs, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations and designations are true and correct, and to induce them to purchase said rugs on account thereof. Respondent's said acts and practices have the effect of placing in the hands of retail dealers who purchase said rugs and resell the same to the purchasing public, means and instrumentalities of misleading and deceiving the public in the particulars aforesaid.

As a result of respondent's said acts and practices, trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from its competitors engaged in the sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of rugs of various kinds, including genuine oriental, Chinese oriental, and domestic rugs, who truthfully represent their products as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof. In consequence thereof, injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Sol. Raphael, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of rugs and other merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Using the words "Khandah," "Aristan," "Karachi," "Numdah," "Calcutta," "Burma," "Daria," "Damascus," "Bagad," "Tamur," or "Chinese," or any other words or names indicative of the Orient or pictorial representations or simulations of the coat of arms of Persia or other oriental arms or of typically oriental scenes, to mark, designate, describe, or refer to rugs not made in the Orient and which do not possess all the essential characteristics and structure of the type of oriental rug which they purport to be.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

ALTMAN NECKWEAR CORPORATION

Docket 4226. Complaint, Aug. 7, 1940—Decision, June 4, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture of neckties and in the interstate sale and distribution thereof to members of the purchasing public—

(a) Represented that a certain style of tie sold by it was made from materials woven by the Cherokee Indians, through labeling same "Cherokee Indian Homespun Wool," with likeness of an Indian depicted thereon, facts being said products were not made from materials woven or manufactured by the Cherokee or any other Indians;

(b) Represented that another style of tie was made wholly of silk, through labeling same "Duo-Silk-All-O Lined Throughout," when said product was not made entirely from silk, product of the cocoon of the silkworm, long held in great public esteem and in substantial demand, but consisted instead of a mixture of silk and rayon, the rayon predominating, so made as to simulate silk and practically indistinguishable by the purchasing public therefrom, with lining of rayon; and

(c) Failed to disclose in labeling and designating its said neckwear that lining thereof was composed of rayon and that tie materials consisted of mixture of rayon, predominating usually, with silk;

With tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous belief that such representations were true and to induce them to purchase substantial numbers of its said neckties:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Lewis C. Russell, trial examiner.

Mr. Donovan R. Divet for the Commission.

Mr. Herbert L. Slote and Mr. Harold M. Goldblatt, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Altman Neckwear Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as the respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Altman Neckwear Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and having its principal place of business at 333 Fifth Avenue in the city of New York, State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing neckties. The respondent sells its products to members of the purchasing public situated in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes said products, when sold, to be transported from its said place of business in New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, for the purpose of promoting the sale of its products, the respondent has engaged in the practice of falsely representing the constituent fiber or material of certain of such products and of falsely representing the source of the material of which certain others of them are made, and the persons by whom made, by means of false representations appearing on labels attached to said products, and otherwise, and by failing to disclose the rayon content of certain of said products.

PAR. 4. Among the products sold and distributed by respondent as aforesaid are two styles of neckties. One of these styles respondent has labeled, "Cherokee Indian Homespun Wool" with the likeness of an Indian depicted thereon. The other style is labeled "Duo-Silk-All-O Lined Throughout." By the use of said labels, words and representations, respondent represents that the material of which the first group of said neckties are made was woven by the Cherokee Indians, and that the material of which the second group of said neckties are made is silk.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations are false and misleading. In truth and in fact the material from which said neckties known as "Cherokee Indian Homespun Wool" are made is not woven or manufactured by the Cherokee Indians or any other Indians, and the neckties labeled "Duo-Silk-All-O" are not made entirely from silk. The tie materials consist of a mixture of silk and rayon, the rayon predominating, the lining is rayon and the interlining cotton.

PAR. 6. The word "silk" for many years last past has had, and still has in the minds of the purchasing and consuming public generally, a definite and specific meaning, to wit, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk products for many years have held, and still hold, public esteem for their preeminent qualities, and because of such reputation there is a substantial demand on the part of the purchasing public for such products. "Rayon" is the name of a chemically manufactured fiber or fabric which may be manufactured so as to simulate silk, and when so manufactured has the appearance and feel of silk and is practically indistinguishable by the purchasing public from silk. By reason of these qualities rayon, when manufactured to simulate silk and not designated as rayon, is readily believed to be and is accepted by the purchasing public as being silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. All of the rayon contained in respondent's said neckties labeled "Duo-Silk-All-O," is manufactured so as to simulate silk, and has the appearance and feel of silk. In selling and offering said "Duo-Silk-All-O" neckties for sale, respondent has not at any time mentioned in this complaint disclosed, and does not now disclose, by labels or in any other manner, the fact that the lining of said neckties is rayon, or that the tie materials consist of a mixture of silk and rayon, with the rayon predominating.

PAR. 7. The use by respondent of the aforesaid method of labeling and representing its neckties and of failing to disclose the rayon content thereof has had, and has, the tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true, and that the rayon fabric and fiber used in the make-up of said ties are silk, and to induce them to purchase substantial numbers of respondent's said neckties.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on August 7, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Altman Neckwear Corporation, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Donovan R. Divet, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Herbert L. Slote, attorney for the respondent, before Lewis C. Russell, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH. 1. Respondent, Altman Neckwear Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York and having its principal place of business at 333 Fifth Avenue in the city of New York, State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing neckties. Respondent sells its products to members of the purchasing public situated in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia and causes said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, for the purpose of promoting the sale of its products, the respondent has engaged in the practice of falsely representing the constituent fiber or material of certain of such products and of falsely representing the source of the material of which certain other products are made, and the persons by whom made, by means of false representations appearing on labels attached to said products, and otherwise, and by failing to disclose the rayon content of certain of said products.

PAR. 4. Among the products sold and distributed by respondent are two styles of neckties. One of these styles respondent has labeled "Cherokee Indian Homespun Wool" with the likeness of an Indian depicted thereon. The other style is labeled "Duo-Silk-All-O Lined Throughout." By the use of said labels, words, and representations, respondent represents that the neckties labeled "Cherokee Indian Homespun Wool" are made from materials woven by the Cherokee Indians and that the neckties designated "Duo-Silk-All-O Lined Throughout" are made wholly of silk.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations are false and misleading. The neckties designated "Cherokee Indian Homespun Wool" are not made from materials woven or manufactured by the Cherokee Indians or any other Indians, and the neckties labeled "Duo-Silk-All-O" are not made entirely from silk but, instead, the tie materials consist of a mixture of silk and rayon, usually with rayon predominating, and with a lining of rayon and an interlining of wool or cotton.

PAR. 6. The word "silk" for many years last past has had, and still has, in the minds of the purchasing and consuming public generally, a definite and specific meaning, to wit, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk products have held, and still hold, public esteem for their preeminent qualities, and because of such reputation there is a substantial demand on the part of the purchasing public for such products. "Rayon" is the name of a chemically manufactured fiber or fabric which may be manufactured so as to simulate silk, and when so manufactured has the appearance and feel of silk and is practically indistinguishable by the purchasing public from silk. All of the rayon contained in respondent's said neckties labeled "Duo-Silk-All-O" is manufactured so as to simulate silk and has the appearance and feel of silk. In labeling and designating its said neckwear, the respondent does not disclose in any manner the fact that the lining of said neckties is composed of rayon and that the tie materials consist of a mixture of silk and rayon, usually with rayon predominating.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid method of labeling and representing its neckties and of failing to disclose the rayon content thereof has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true, and that the rayon fabric and fiber used in the make-up of said ties are silk, and to induce them to purchase substantial numbers of respondent's said neckties.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, answer of the respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Lewis C. Russell, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, and report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and briefs filed herein, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Altman Neckwear Corporation, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of neckties and other similar merchandise in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the unqualified term "silk" or any other term or terms of similar import or meaning indicative of silk, to describe or designate any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm: Provided, however, That in the case of a fabric or product composed in part of silk and in part of materials other than silk, such term or similar terms may be used as descriptive of the silk content if they are used in immediate connection and conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing and designating each constituent fiber thereof.

2. Using the term "Duo-Silk-All-O" or any other term of similar import or meaning on labels, or otherwise, to describe, designate, or refer to any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

3. Advertising, offering for sale, or selling neckties or other products composed in whole or in part of rayon without clearly disclosing the fact that such fabrics or products are composed of rayon, and when such fabrics or products are composed in part of rayon and in part of other fibers or materials, such fibers or materials, including rayon, shall be named in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness by words truthfully describing and designating each constituent fiber or material thereof.

4. Using the term "Cherokee Indian Homespun Wool" or any other term of similar import or meaning on labels, or otherwise, to describe, designate, or refer to any fabric or product which is not woven or manufactured by the Cherokee Indians.

5. Using any pictorial design of an Indian in connection with any description of, or reference to, fabrics or products which are not woven or manufactured by the American Indian.

6. Using the term "Indian" or any term which includes the word "Indian" or any colorable simulation thereof, or using any other term of similar import or meaning on labels, or otherwise, to describe, designate, or refer to any fabric or product which is not woven or manufactured by the American Indian.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

E. B. MULLER & CO. ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914, AND OF SEC. 2 (a) OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED

Docket 3224. Complaint, Feb. 11, 1938[1]—Decision, June 11, 1941

Where corporations M. and F. with principal places of business in Port Huron, Mich., and Flushing, N. Y., engaged respectively, in the processing of chicory and, as between themselves, in noncompetitive complementary interstate sale and distribution thereof in bulk to coffee roasters and others, and in packaged form to retail outlets for resale to consumers, which, controlled and directed by husband and wife, were, prior to 1930, the only domestic producers of granulated chicory, with their only competition coming from the imported product, total imports of which were relatively small;

Following the installation in 1930 by S., theretofore principal importer of the product, of a plant in New Orleans for roasting and granulating imported dry chicory (operations of which S. concern in 1933 included the installation of a plant for drying chicory in Linwood, Mich., in the limited area in which the domestic product is grown, and in which said M. and F. procured and dried their supply; and shipment of the dried root therefrom to its New Orleans plant, where it roasted, granulated and prepared the root for distribution and sale); and as a part of a concerted and calculated campaign to harass, injure and, if possible, eliminate said S. from the competitive field, and thus to regain the substantially complete monopoly which they previously enjoyed in the distribution of chicory in the United States, and acting through one or the other, or both—

(a) Represented that the color and uniformity of color of the chicory of M. were achieved by and attributable only to a superior method of roasting and a painstaking process of selecting and sorting, through affirmative statements in many ways, including published advertisements and letters to customers and prospective customers, when in fact said M. was artificially coloring its granulated chicory by adding iron oxide, which resulted in giving it an exceptionally desirable and uniform color, production of which solely by process of selection and roasting would be much more difficult and expensive, and of which addition it did not in any way advise its customers;

(b) Defamed and disparaged the chicory products of said S., its sole competitor, on many occasions, with no sufficient knowledge of the facts to indicate good faith, through representing, by means of officials and sales representatives, that such products contained molasses, sugar beets or other foreign substances and were thus, as considered by the trade, adulterated; threatened customers of said competitor with seizure by governmental authority of chicory purchased from said competitor as being adulterated; and procured the institution of such a proceeding, advising chicory purchasers, on the basis of the analysis of one sample of product purportedly sold by said S., that said competitive product contained approximately 50 percent roasted sugar beet, and took no steps, following the abandonment of said proceeding shortly, to correct the disparaging statements previously made to the trade; and

Where said two corporations, with the deliberate intent of hindering, handicapping, injuring and destroying S., their aforesaid only domestic competitor, as shown by a long series of acts and practices including, among others, (1) efforts to secure an increase in the tariff on granulated chicory in order to cut off said competitor's source of supply with result that the increased tariff forced said competitor to cease importing the granulated chicory, and, instead, to import the root; (2) efforts, shortly thereafter, to seek an increase in the tariff on dried chicory root when it was learned that said competitor planned to import the root and manufacture the granulated product domestically; (3) cut in price in the New Orleans market, in which a substantial proportion of the products of M. and F. were sold, theretofore definitely rejected, as involving an unwarranted loss of $30,000 a year; (4) steady and effective opposition to said competitor's efforts to secure a more favorable rate on the domestic chicory root brought by it from its Michigan kiln to its New Orleans plant, with the result that it cost said competitor $70 more to deliver enough chicory root from Michigan to New Orleans to produce 40,000 pounds of the granulated chicory than it cost M. to transport a 40,000 pound carload of the granulated product between the same points, and that in the matter of freight rates (in which matter said M. had also secured, unlawfully, substantially more favorable rates than it was entitled to, through improperly shipping with chicory, cereals or coffee susbtitutes without disclosure), contrary to the usual situation in which a finished product normally pays higher transportation cost than the raw material, the reverse obtained; (5) establishment and use of a "fighting brand"; and, (6) other obstructive acts and practices as shown by discussion of subject in correspondence between officers and employees of the two corporations;

(c) Sold, with aforesaid intent, (1) as respects said F. concern, a large proportion of its granulated chicory, during its 1936 and 1937 fiscal years, to two large customers in New Orleans at a loss of approximately 11 cents per hundred pounds during the 6 months ended June 30, 1936, and at cost or slightly below cost during the 8 months ended March 31, 1937, and sold also, from time to time, various other customers who purchased in smaller quantities at a loss also, while making from other profitable sales sufficient gain to overcome the losses set forth, and (2), as respects M., made sales, among others, to customers in New Orleans at losses ranging from 66 cents to $1.11 per hundred pounds, and to those in Memphis, Louisville, St. Louis, and Birmingham at prices ranging from 67 cents per hundred pounds loss to 44 cents per hundred pounds profit, with said company's entire business in granulated chicory in the 1936 and 1937 fiscal years showing losses of approximately 18 cents and 8 cents per hundred pounds respectively, and with prices received by it in the New Orleans trade territory in general substantially lower than those it secured from purchasers for whose trade it did not have to compete with S., and, appealed to on several occasions by S., their said competitor, to increase their prices in the New Orleans area in order that it, S., would not be forced to lose money in attempting to meet their competition, rejected such requests, with result that said competitor eventually, finding it was losing so much money that it could no longer afford to sell at their prices, was compelled to increase its own, following which M. and F. likewise made increases in their prices, though still maintaining them below those of said S. and without terminating their selling below cost; and

Where said corporations, in engaging, as below set forth, in price discrimination under general pattern of making low prices in a few southern States where they were in active competition with said S., and recouping in part by higher prices elsewhere, as said competitor could not, and also in substantial discrimination among purchasers in said States and among those in other States—

(d) Discriminated in price, in the case of F., by selling granulated chicory to its two largest customers in New Orleans at lower prices than all others and which, as respected all others, were not justified under the law by differences in cost; and, in the case of M., also discriminated among its customers generally in a variety of ways, including outright price differences, sale of better quality product at or below the price of inferior, use of quantity rebate or discount plans, and others; and, acting under the common control;

(e) Discriminated in price in that, among their respective customers, each sold chicory of like grade and quality to some customers at prices different from those charged by the other to some of its customers, and at differences which were not justified as aforesaid;

Effect of which selling below cost and discriminations in price caused by selling to customers in trade area in which said sole competitor operated at lower prices than elsewhere in the United States, was to divert to themselves a substantial volume of business which their competitor might otherwise have obtained, to force said competitor to sell at unprofitable prices or at a loss in order to avoid being forced out of business, and thus to impair its financial position and render it unreasonably difficult, if not impossible, for it to secure capital for its operations, while they were substantially increasing their volume of sales; and tendency of which was to create in themselves a monopoly in the production and sale of domestic chicory, in sale of which even a small price variation is of highly important competitive significance to purchasers and coffee roasters;

With result, as respects aforesaid false disparagements and misrepresentations as to color and uniformity of color of said concerns' artificially colored chicory, of contributing to such injury to and suppression of competition and tendency toward monopoly in said concerns and of misleading and deceiving members of the purchasing public by creating in their minds the mistaken belief that such statements were true, whereby trade was unfairly diverted from competitors to them:

Held. (a) That said discriminations in price resulted in substantial injury to their competitors, hindered, obstructed and tended to suppress competition with them and create a monopoly in them in the processing and sale of granulated chicory, and resulted in substantial injury to competition among purchasers of such product by affording material and unjustified price advantages to preferred purchasers and not to others, and violated subsection (a) of section 2 of an act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936; and

(b) That sales below cost by them were made with purpose and effect of substantially injuring and lessening competition and tending to create a monopoly in the processing and sale of domestic granulated chicory in themselves, and that their said and other acts and practices, as aforesaid, were all to the injury and prejudice of the public and their competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, Mr. W. W. Sheppard and Mr. John L. Hornor, trial examiners.

Mr. J. J. Smith, Jr. and Mr. John Darsey for the Commission.

AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes" (the Federal Trade Commission Act), and pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes" (the Clayton Act), as amended by an act approved June 19, 1936, entitled "An act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes" (the Robinson-Patman Act), the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that E. B. Muller & Co. and Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., have violated and are now violating the provisions of the said Federal Trade Commission Act and the said Clayton Act, as amended, issues this its amended and supplemental complaint against the said E. B. Muller & Co. and the said Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., respondents in this proceeding, and states its charges as follows, to wit:

Count I

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent E. B. Muller & Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Michigan and has its principal office and place of business at 220 Quay Street in the city of Port Huron, Mich.

PAR. 2. Respondent Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware and has its principal office and place of business at 131 Avery Avenue in the city of Flushing, N. Y.

PAR. 3. The officers of the respondent E. B. Muller & Co. are H. Gordon McMorran, president, Miss Charlotte C. McMorran, vice president, and Mrs. Charlotte H. McMorran, secretary-treasurer. Said officers comprise the board of directors of respondent E. B. Muller & Co.

The officers of the respondent Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., are David McMorran, president, A. F. Kalk, vice president, and Eugen Beitter, secretary-treasurer. Said officers comprise the board of directors of Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc.

David McMorran and Mrs. Charlotte H. McMorran are, respectively, husband and wife, and the father and mother of H. Gordon McMorran and Miss Charlotte C. McMorran.

Respondent E. B. Muller & Co. has outstanding 30,000 shares of common stock, of which the Detroit Trust Co., a banking corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Michigan and having its principal office and place of business in Detroit, Mich., holds 25, 578 shares in trust for David McMorran and Mrs. Charlotte H. McMorran for life under a trust agreement which provides that David McMorran and Mrs. Charlotte H. McMorran jointly, or the survivor of them, may terminate said trust at any time and cause said shares to be delivered and transferred to them, or to the survivor of them, absolutely and unconditionally. Mrs. Charlotte H. McMorran owns in her own right 41 shares of the common stock of the respondent E. B. Muller & Co. Respondent E. B. Muller & Co., has no preferred stock outstanding.

Respondent Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., has outstanding 10,000 shares of common stock, all of which is owned by David McMorran, and 5,430 shares of preferred stock, of which the Michigan Debenture Co., a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, owns 4,400 shares and Eugen Beitter owns 1,030 shares. David McMorran owns all the stock of the said Michigan Debenture Co.

The respondents dominate the market for green chicory root in the United States and purchase and use in their respective businesses the greater part of all green chicory root produced in the United States. The respondents also dominate the granulated chicory market in the United States, manufacturing and selling the greater part of all granulated chicory manufactured and sold in the United States. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, as is more particularly hereinafter stated, the respondents are engaged in competition with other purchasers and users of green chicory root in the United States and with other manufacturers and sellers of granulated chicory in the United States, and if those competitively engaged with the respondent in the United States in the purchase and use of green chicory root and the manufacture and sale of granulated chicory are eliminated from the business of purchasing and using green chicory root and manufacturing and selling granulated chicory, the above-mentioned David McMorran and Mrs. Charlotte H. McMorran, husband and wife, will have and enjoy, through the respondents, a monopoly in the purchase and use of green chicory root in the United States and in the manufacture and sale of granulated chicory in the United States.

PAR. 4. For more than 2 years prior hereto the respondents have been, and are now, engaged in the business of manufacturing granulated chicory from green chicory root and in selling and shipping granulated chicory, and in the course and conduct of their respective businesses the respondents have sold and shipped, and do now sell and ship, granulated chicory in commerce between and among the various States of the United States from the States in which their respective factories are located and from States in which they maintain stocks of granulated chicory across State lines to purchasers thereof located in States other than the States in which respondents' said factories are located and other than the States in which respondents maintain stocks of granulated chicory.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, as aforesaid, the respondents have been, and are now, engaged in substantial competition in commerce with other manufacturers and sellers of granulated chicory who, for more than 2 years prior hereto have been, and are now, manufacturing granulated chicory from green chicory root and selling and shipping granulated chicory in commerce across State lines between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, as aforesaid, with the intent, purpose, and effect of injuring, restraining, suppressing, and destroying competition in commerce in the manufacture and sale of granulated chicory between themselves and competing manufacturers and sellers of granulated chicory, the respondents have been, and are now, manufacturing granulated chicory and selling, shipping, and delivering the said granulated chicory across State lines to purchasers thereof at prices below the cost to the respondents of manufacturing, selling, shipping, and delivering said granulated chicory.

PAR. 7. The effect and result of the sale and delivery by respondents of granulated chicory in commerce across State lines to purchasers thereof at prices below the cost to the respondents of manufacturing, selling, shipping and delivering the same, as above set forth in paragraph 6 hereof, have been, and are now, unduly and substantially to injure, restrain and suppress competition between respondents and their competitors in the manufacture of granulated chicory and the sale and shipment thereof in commerce across State lines, and to tend to create in the above mentioned David McMorran and Mrs. Charlotte H. McMorran, through the respondents, a monopoly in the manufacture and sale of granulated chicory in the United States.

PAR. 8. Granulated chicory is an ingredient used principally by commercial processors and roasters of coffee for the purpose of imparting to and fixing in coffee certain flavors desired by many consumers thereof. Such processors and roasters prefer to purchase and use granulated chicory which does not contain molasses, sugar beet, or sugar beet pulp, and granulated chicory which does contain molasses, sugar beet, or sugar beet pulp is regarded by processors and roasters of coffee as an undesirable and adulterated commodity.

In purchasing granulated chicory the color or shade thereof and its uniformity of color or shade are factors which are considered, and to which great importance is attached, by processors and roasters of coffee. Color or shade is generally imparted to granulated chicory by roasting, and uniformity of color or shade is generally attained by separating or assorting such chicory according to color or shade after it has been roasted. Unless otherwise advised and informed processors and roasters of coffee assume that the color or shade of granulated chicory and its uniformity of color or shade are attributable to the method by and manner in which it is roasted and thereafter separated or assorted according to color or shade by the manufacturers of such chicory.

PAR. 9. In the course and conduct of its business, as aforesaid, the respondent, E. B. Muller & Co., has adopted, practiced, and engaged in the following methods of competition in the sale and shipment of granulated chicory in commerce across State lines between and among the various States of the United States, to wit:

(a) It has falsely defamed and disparaged the granulated chicory manufactured and sold and shipped in commerce across State lines by one of its competitors, namely, R. E. Schanzer, Inc., of New Orleans, La., by falsely asserting and representing to purchasers and users of granulated chicory that the granulated chicory manufactured and sold by the said R. E. Schanzer, Inc., contained molasses, sugar beet, or sugar beet pulp, or two or more of such substances.

(b) It has artificially colored granulated chicory manufactured and sold by it and shipped by it across State lines by adding or applying thereto iron oxide, or some other pigment or pigments, which have imparted to such granulated chicory a commercially attractive and desirable, and exceptionally uniform, color or shade, has failed to advise the purchasers of such granulated chicory that the same was artificially colored, and has affirmatively or impliedly falsely represented to such purchasers that the color or shade of such chicory was achieved by and attributable to the respondent E. B.

Muller & Co.'s superior method of roasting chicory, and that the uniformity of such color or shade was achieved by and attributable to the respondent E. B. Muller & Co.'s careful and painstaking method of separating and assorting such chicory, after roasting, according to color or shade.

(c) In single railroad cars, commonly referred to as "combination cars," it has combined, shipped, and caused to be transported across State lines by common carriers by railroad coffee substitutes (generally referred to in the coffee trade as "cereals") and granulated chicory, and has falsely and fraudulently billed, classified, and described the contents of said cars by falsely and fraudulently representing to the carriers thereof that said cars contained only granulated chicory, by means of which false and fraudulent billing, classification, description and representation the respondent E. B. Muller & Co. has caused combination cars of coffee substitutes and granulated chicory to be transported across State lines by common carriers by railroad at freight rates substantially lower than the freight rates lawfully applicable thereto and which should have been paid thereon.

PAR. 10. The effect and result of the use by the respondent, E. B. Muller & Co., of the methods of competition set forth above in paragraph 9 hereof have been, and are now, unduly and substantially to injure, restrain and suppress competition between respondent, E. B. Muller & Co., and its competitors in the manufacture of granulated chicory and in the sale and shipment thereof in commerce across State lines, and to tend to create in the above mentioned David McMorran and Mrs. Charlotte H. McMorran, through the respondents, a monopoly in the manufacture and sale of granulated chicory in the United States.

PAR. 11. The sale of granulated chicory by the respondents below cost as above alleged in paragraph 6 hereof, with the effect and result as above alleged in pargraph 7 hereof, is to the injury and prejudice of the public, and to the injury and prejudice of respondents' competitors, and constitutes an unfair method of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of section 5 of the aforesaid Federal Trade Commission Act.

PAR. 12. The use by the respondent, E. B. Muller & Co., of the methods of competition set forth above in paragraph 9, hereof, with the effect and result set forth above in paragraph 10 hereof, is to the injury and prejudice of the public, and to the injury and prejudice of respondent E. B. Muller & Co.'s competitors, and said methods of competition are unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of section 5 of the aforesaid Federal Trade Commission Act.

Count II

PARAGRAPH 1. Paragraph 1, paragraph 2, paragraph 3, paragraph 4, and paragraph 5 of count I of this amended and supplemental complaint are, by reference, incorporated herein and made a part hereof as fully and completely as if set out verbatim.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, as aforesaid, since June 19, 1936, the respondents have been, and are now, discriminating in price between different purchasers of granulated chicory of like grade and quality sold and shipped by the respondents in commerce across State lines to said purchasers for use, consumption and resale by said purchasers within the United States, in that the respondents have sold and shipped, and are now selling and shipping, granulated chicory in commerce across State lines, for use, consumption, and resale within the United States, to certain purchasers of said granulated chicory at prices below the prices at which the respondents have sold and shipped, and are now selling and shipping, in commerce across State lines, for use, consumption, and resale within the United States, granulated chicory of like grade and quality to other purchasers of said granulated chicory engaged in competition with the former purchasers in the use, consumption, and resale within the United States of said granulated chicory, and the respondent, E. B. Muller & Co., has been, and is now, further and additionally discriminating in price between different purchasers of granulated chicory of like grade and quality sold and shipped by the said respondent, E. B. Muller & Co., in commerce across State lines to said purchasers for use, consumption, and resale by said purchasers within the United States, in that upon the said respondent, E. B. Muller & Co.'s sales to purchasers of granulated chicory of like grade and quality, sold and shipped in commerce across State lines by the said respondent, E. B. Muller & Co., to said purchasers for use, consumption and resale by them within the United States, the said respondent, E. B. Muller & Co., has been, and is now, granting, allowing, and paying to certain favored purchasers rebates upon said favored purchasers' purchases of granulated chicory from the said respondent, E. B. Muller & Co., and denying to other purchasers engaged in competition with said favored purchasers rebates upon said other purchasers' purchases of granulated chicory from the said respondent, E. B. Muller & Co.

PAR. 3. The effect of the discriminations in price made by the respondents in the sale of granulated chicory as above set forth in paragraph 2 of this count has been and may be substantially to lessen competition, or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition between respondents and their competitors in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of granulated chicory in the United States and to tend to create in the above-mentioned David McMorran and Mrs. Charlotte H. McMorran, through the respondents, a monopoly in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of granulated chicory in the United States, and has been and may be substantially to lessen competition or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition in the use, consumption, or resale of granulated chicory within the United States between those customers of respondents who receive the benefit of the lower prices or rebates above mentioned in paragraph 2 of this count and those customers of respondents engaged in competition with them who do not receive the benefit of said lower prices or said rebates.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid discriminations in price made by the respondents as above stated in paragraph 2 of this count constitute a violation of the provisions of paragraph (a) of section 2 of the aforesaid Clayton Act, as amended.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and to the provisions of an Act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (The Clayton Act), as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), the Federal Trade Commission on September 11, 1937, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, E. B. Muller & Co., a corporation, and Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., a corporation, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and with discriminations in price in the sale of chicory in violation of the provisions of subsection (a) of section 2 of said Clayton Act as amended.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by attorneys for the commission, and in opposition thereto by attorneys for respondents, before examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it. On February 11, 1938, the Commission issued and thereafter served upon respondents an amended and supplemental complaint charging violations of the aforesaid statutes. After the filing of respondents' answers to the amended and supplemental complaint, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by attorneys for the respondents, before examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and the testimony and other evidence taken pursuant to both complaints were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the amended and supplemental complaint, the answers thereto, testimony, and other evidence, report of the trial examiners and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments of counsel; and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, E. B. Muller & Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Michigan and having its principal place of business at 220 Quay Street, Port Huron, Mich.

Respondent, Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware and having its principal place of business at 131 Avery Avenue, Flushing, N. Y.

Respondents for many years have been engaged in the processing and sale of chicory, and at all times mentioned in the complaint have been, and are now, selling and shipping chicory from the States in which their respective factories are located, and from States in which they maintain stocks of processed chicory, across State lines to purchasers located in States other than those in which such factories or stocks are located, and have maintained a constant course of trade in such products in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said acts.

PAR. 2. Chicory is a root or tuber resembling in appearance the sugar beet and is commercially produced in the United States in only a few counties in the State of Michigan. It is also produced in Belgium and the Netherlands. When dried, roasted, and granulated it is mixed with coffee for the purpose of imparting to or fixing in coffee certain flavors desired by many consumers. The principal market for this product is in New Orleans, La., and in the trade territory served from that city, although it is sold and used to some extent in most, if not all, of the States of the United States. About 75 percent of the production of respondent Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., and 40 percent of the production of respondent E. B. Muller & Co. is sold in the New Orleans trade territory.

PAR. 3. The officers of respondent, E. B. Muller & Co., are H. Gordon McMorran, president, Miss Charlotte C. McMorran, vice president, and Mrs. Charlotte H. McMorran, secretary-treasurer; and these officers consistute the board of directors of said company.

The officers of respondent, Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., are David McMorran, president, A. F. Kalk, vice president, Eugen Beitter (until his death during the pendency of this proceeding), secretary-treasurer; and these officers constitute the board of directors of that company.

David McMorran and Mrs. Charlotte H. McMorran are, respectively, husband and wife and father and mother of H. Gordon McMorran and Miss Charlotte C. McMorran.

Prior to 1919 the businesses now conducted by respondents were owned by different interests and presumably competed with each other. David McMorran, who was then an officer and director of E. B. Muller & Co., and who with his father, the then president of that company, owned a controlling interest in it, purchased the stock of Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., at public auction from the United States Alien Property Custodian. After a hearing by the Federal Trade Commission, David McMorran was advised by the Alien Property Custodian that upon recommendation of said Commission the sale to him would not be confirmed unless he resigned as an officer and director of E. B. Muller & Co., and disposed of his stock in that concern. David McMorran thereupon sold his stock in E. B. Muller & Co., to his father, to his attorney, and to a personal friend, and represented in an affidavit submitted to the Alien Property Custodian for the purpose of securing confirmation of his purchase that his stock in said company had been disposed of absolutely and unconditionally. Subsequently the stock sold to David McMorran's attorney and to his friend was acquired by his brother-in-law. Between 1919 and 1924 Mrs. Charlotte H. McMorran acquired all the stock originally disposed of by her husband, David McMorran, together with the stock previously owned by David McMorran's father, totaling more than five-sixths of the outstanding 30,000 shares of capital stock of E. B. Muller & Co., all upon consideration furnished by David McMorran and upon the understanding that the stock was to be placed in a trust for David McMorran and his wife, Charlotte H. McMorran, for life, provided that David McMorran and Charlotte H. McMorran jointly, or the survivor of them, might terminate the trust at any time and cause the stock to be delivered and transferred to them or to the survivor of them absolutely and unconditionally. This stock was held until 1939 under such a trust agreement by the Detroit Trust Co., a banking corporation, when the trust was set aside by a State court decree purporting to hold that David McMorran had no interest in the stock. There is no testimony, however, that the understanding with respect to terms upon which the stock was acquired has been abrogated.

Respondent, Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., has outstanding 10,000 shares of common stock and 5,430 shares of preferred stock. David McMorran owns all of the common stock of this company and 4,400 shares of the preferred stock, the latter being owned by him through the medium of the Michigan Debenture Co., of which he owns all the capital stock.

David McMorran is furnished by respondent, E. B. Muller & Co., with an office and clerical assistance at the principal place of business of said respondent company, has access to the files and records of both respondent companies, advises and consults with and gives directions to officers, agents, and employees of both respondent companies. Gordon McMorran has access to the files and records of respondent, Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., and advises and consults with officials of that company. Neither Mrs. Charlotte H. McMorran nor Miss Charlotte C. McMorran does more than formally participate in the management and direction of the respondent companies. Upon testimony and other evidence the Commission finds that David McMorran and his wife, Charlotte H. McMorran, own control of respondent companies, and David McMorran dominates, directs, and controls the policies and practices of both companies and operates them in the common interest of the two companies.

PAR. 4. Prior to 1930 respondents were the only domestic producers of granulated chicory and their only competition came from imported chicory. The total imports of such chicory were relatively small in comparison with respondents' production, and the largest importer of this product was R. E. Schanzer, Inc., a Louisiana corporation, having its principal place of business in New Orleans, La.

Respondent, E. B. Muller & Co., has concentrated upon the production of granulated chicory and the sale thereof in bulk. A limited quantity of this product is packed by said respondent in small containers and sold to retail outlets for resale to consumers, but such sales have been insignificant in volume and the company desires and is endeavoring to discontinue the manufacture and distribution of packaged chicory. Substantially all of said respondent's sales volume consists of granulated chicory in bulk, sold largely to coffee roasters.

Respondent, Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., produces and sells a large quantity of chicory in packaged form to retail outlets for resale to consumers. This packaged chicory is granulated chicory which has been subjected to a further grinding process and converted into a powder, and thereafter packaged in different forms. Said respondent also sells granulated chicory in bulk form to a very limited number of coffee roasters, but does not actively solicit or seek to sell to coffee roasters generally.

Respondents do not compete with each other in any real sense; the business of each is designedly complementary, rather than competitive, to that of the other. Respondents agreed between themselves that E. B. Muller & Co. would not seek business from established customers of Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., and when sales representatives of the former sought business from customers of the latter they were advised to avoid this as E. B. Muller & Co. was not competing with Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc. An example of this policy appears in the following extract from a letter of May 14, 1934, from Gordon McMorran to the New York office of E. B. Muller & Co. in which reference is made to a sales representative of that company in New Orleans as follows:

He also must be definitely warned off of F customers with the exception of those customers whom we know are buying from Schanzer. We do not want any of F's business and must concentrate solely on Schanzer's.

PAR. 5. In 1930 R. E. Schanzer, Inc., formerly the principal importer of chicory, installed a plant in New Orleans, La., for roasting and granulating imported dried chicory, and in 1933 this company installed and commenced the operation of a plant for drying chicory in Linwood, Mich., in the limited area in which domestic chicory is grown. It is in this area that respondents procure and dry their supply of chicory which E. B. Muller & Co. subsequently processes in Michigan and Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., in New York. R. E. Schanzer, Inc., ships dried chicory root from Michigan to its plant in New Orleans where it is roasted, granulated, and prepared for distribution and sale. Even before R. E. Schanzer, Inc., commenced the operation of the abovementioned plant in New Orleans it represented the only substantial competition to respondents, and after the installation of said plant in 1930 respondents began a definite and active campaign to harass, injure, and, if possible, eliminate R. E. Schanzer, Inc., from the competitive field and thus regain the substantially complete monopoly which they previously enjoyed in the distribution of chicory in the United States. This concerted effort on the part of respondents was further intensified after R. E. Schanzer, Inc., established a drying plant in Michigan and became a competitor of respondents in the processing and sale of domestically produced chicory. The calculated course of action taken by respondents looking toward crippling or destroying the competition offered by R. E. Schanzer, Inc., has manifested itself in a number of forms, among which are those set out in subsequent paragraphs.

PAR. 6. Granulated chicory is ordinarily produced in three different shades of color, usually designated light, medium, and dark, and in different sized granules in each color. Inasmuch as granulated chicory is added to coffee by coffee roasters, color and uniformity of color in chicory are of great importance to such customers. Darker colors are more expensive to produce by roasting, and uniformity of color is more expensive and difficult to attain by natural means because of the cost of inspection and selection required. It is the general understanding and belief of coffee roasters that color and uniformity of color in chicory are secured by care in selecting and processing chicory. At all times mentioned in the complaint respondent, E. B. Muller & Co., artificially colored the granulated chicory which it sold by adding iron oxide to such chicory. The addition of iron oxide resulted in giving its granulated chicory an exceptionally desirable and uniform color which would be more difficult and expensive to produce solely by the process of selection and roasting. This respondent did not in any way advise its customers that its chicory was artificially colored. On the contrary, it represented to its customers that the color and uniformity of color of its chicory were achieved by and attributable only to a superior method of roasting and a painstaking process of selecting and sorting. Affirmative representations of this character were made in many ways, including published advertisements such as:

All chicory grown and sold by E. B. Muller & Co. is fully kiln dried and expertly roasted by the Calorithern process. Color and grinds are uniform, * * *.

Those roasters who buy Muller Chicory have learned by experience that the full flavor developed by the exclusive Calorithern roasting process makes a noticeable improvement in the coffee blend. Less moisture, quicker solubility and rich color characterize Muller products.

and, further, by letters to customers and prospective customers containing statements such as:

As to Roasts, of which we produce several shades, they are produced actually by roasting light, medium or dark. Other methods can and have been used to produce differences in color but not by us. This also applies to our "Standard" Grade.

At the time representations such as those quoted from above and others of like import were being made, respondent E. B. Muller & Co. was in fact using iron oxide to aid in attaining color and uniformity of color in its chicory products.

Chicory used for blending with coffee should not contain foreign substances such as sugar beet or molasses, and chicory which does contain such foreign substances is considered by the trade to be adulterated. Since 1930 respondent, E. B. Muller and Co., through its officials and sales representatives, has frequently and on many occasions disparaged the chicory products sold by R. E. Schanzer, Inc., by representing to purchasers of chicory that such products contained molasses, sugar beet, or other foreign substances. Customers of R. E. Schanzer, Inc., have been threatened by respondent with seizure by governmental authorities of chicory purchased from R. E. Schanzer, Inc., as being adulterated. A sales representative of respondent was instructed to advise a customer of R. E. Schanzer, Inc., who had on hand a quantity of molasses which he wished to sell that such sales representative knew where this molasses could be sold and to supply the name of R. E. Schanzer, Inc., as the prospective purchaser. Upon consideration of the evidence it is found that respondent, E. B. Muller & Co. has defamed and disparaged the chicory products of its competitor, R. E. Schanzer, Inc., by falsely representing that they contained foreign substances, and many such representations were knowingly and deliberately made without any actual or adequate knowledge of the facts sufficient to indicate good faith on the part of respondent.

Respondent, Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., had an analysis made of a sample of chicory purported to have been sold by R. E. Schanzer, Inc., the report of which analysis stated that this sample contained approximately 50 percent roasted sugar beet; whereupon the sales representative of said respondent was instructed to, and did, advise chicory purchasers that the chicory sold by R. E. Schanzer, Inc., was adulterated with a large percentage of sugar beet, and further, procured the institution of a proceeding by governmental authorities against R. E. Schanzer, Inc., which proceeding was soon abandoned, but respondent took no steps of any kind to correct the statements previously made to the trade by its representative.

PAR. 8. Frequently the freight rates on granulated chicory differ considerably from those on coffee substitutes, commonly known in the trade as cereals. In order to take advantage of the substantially lower rate frequently prevailing on granulated chicory as compared with coffee substitutes, and of the lower carload freight rates, respondent, E. R. Muller & Co., on numerous occasions over a period of years misbilled to the railroads its products moving in interstate commerce. Muller shipped in single railroad cars combinations of its products consisting of large quantities of chicory and smaller quantities of coffee substitutes, falsely and fraudulently describing and representing to the railroads that the cars contained chicory only. By this means respondent obtained substantially lower freight rates than those applicable to coffee substitutes properly described and classified, and in some cases rates lower than those applicable to either of the commodities so transported since the less-than-carload rate for less-than-carload shipments would have applied on both products had the proper billing been made except that the carload rate for the minimum carload quantity permitted may be paid in lieu of the less-than-carload rate on the actual quantity shipped. The freight advantage so secured has amounted to as much as $65.16 per car. Such falsified billings were made with the knowledge of officials of E. B. Muller & Co. and with the deliberate intent of obtaining an illegal freight advantage. This is illustrated by the following extract from a letter dated November 16, 1931, from the sales manager of E. B. Muller & Co. to respondent's New Orleans broker:

As we previously advised you, we are not supposed to ship any cereals in Chicory cars, and if it were discovered it would make trouble for us. Port Huron therefore marked these goods only W. R. D. standing for Whole Rye Dark, and it will be advisable that you tell the warehouse not to in any way reveal the fact that these goods are anything but Chicory.

PAR. 9. Detailed cost studies for 1936 and 1937 were made of the granulated chicory business of each respondent. The record shows that respondent, Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., in its 1936 and 1937 fiscal years sold 5,094,320 and 5,123,974 pounds of granulated chicory, respectively, that of these amounts 3,821,279 and 4,445,149 pounds, respectively, were sold to two customers of respondent in New Orleans, La., and that sales to these two customers were made at a loss of approximately 11 cents per hundred pounds during the 6 months ended June 30, 1936, and at cost or slightly below cost during the 8 months ended March 31, 1937. It is apparent from the record that from time to time various other customers of this respondent who purchased in smaller quantities were also sold at a loss but that the gains from profitable sales were sufficient to overcome the losses mentioned so that the business of this respondent in granulated chicory, considered as a whole, was not operated at a loss. The two large customers in New Orleans referred to above were William B. Reily & Co. and Merchants Coffee Co. Among those purchasing in smaller quantities at prices which represented a loss to this respondent were The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. in Atlanta, A. Jochelson in New York, McGaffey Coffee Co. in Los Angeles, Jones Thierbach Co. in San Francisco, and others.

The record shows that respondent, E. B. Muller & Co., conducted its entire business in granulated chicory in its 1936 and 1937 fiscal years at average losses of approximately 18 cents and 8 cents per hundred pounds, respectively. The prices which this respondent received from purchasers in the New Orleans trade territory were in general substantially lower than the prices secured from purchasers for whose trade it did not have to compete with R. E. Shanzer, Inc. For example, in the year ended June 30, 1937, sales were made to customers in New Orleans at losses ranging from approximately 66 cents to $1.11 per hundred pounds, and to customers in Memphis, Louisville, St. Louis, Birmingham, and Atlanta at prices which represented a range of from 67 cents per hundred pounds loss to 44 cents per hundred pounds profit. Examples of losses on sales to specific customers in New Orleans are American Coffee Co., Arnaud Coffee Corporation, Boothe Brothers Coffee Co., and others, who were sold at losses of from 66 cents to 91 cents per hundred pounds, and C. D. Kenny Co., which was sold at losses of $1.10–$1.11 per hundred pounds. From this it is plain that the prices of this respondent in the New Orleans trade territory were more substantially below its costs than the figures shown by the cost study for sales in other territories and for the business as a whole of this respondent in granulated chicory.

The sales below cost made by respondents during the period covered by the cost study, as well as other sales below cost prior to the period covered by such study, were made with the deliberate purpose and intent of hindering, handicapping, injuring, and, if possible, destroying their only domestic competitor, R. E. Schanzer, Inc. This general intent and purpose of both respondents, acting under the common control and direction heretofore mentioned, is demonstrated by a long series of acts and practices consisting not only of selling below cost but also of the use of other means directed toward the same end. Some of these acts and practices were as follows:

In 1929 R. E. Schanzer, Inc., was not a manufacturer of granulated chicory and depended upon imports as its source of supply. It was, however, at that time becoming a serious competitor of respondents. Respondents appeared before a committee of the United States House of Representatives and sought an increase in the tariff on granulated chicory for the purpose of making it impracticable to import granulated chicory and thereby cutting off the source of supply of R. E. Schanzer, Inc., but no request was made for an increase in the tariff on dried chicory root, and the Committee was advised that in the event of a short domestic crop manufacturers wished to be in a position to import foreign chicory root. Soon after this appearance respondents learned that R. E. Schanzer, Inc., planned, if the tariff were increased on granulated chicory, to import dried chicory root and manufacture granulated chicory in this country. Thereupon respondents appeared before a committee of the United States Senate and sought an increase in the tariff on dried chicory root. Respondent, Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., was advised by its New Orleans representative under date of July 5, 1930, in part:

Schanzer has been obliged to raise his price ¼¢ because of the tariff, and the supposition is he will have to raise it more, which will practically put him out of the chicory business, because our chicory being better, and if his reaches the same price, ours will be preferred.

R. E. Schanzer, Inc., was in fact put out of the business of importing granulated chicory but continued in the chicory business by the establishment of a plant in New Orleans in which it made granulated chicory from imported chicory root.

Under date of April 10, 1931, Gordon McMorran wrote the New York office of E. B. Muller & Co. in part:

We have your letter of the 7th in reference to prices in southern territory. We note your persistence in advocating a cut in New Orleans prices. What you seem to overlook is the fact that a cut by us at the present time to 8¢ New Orleans for the New Orleans trade will result in a loss to us of $30,000 per year. The whole New Orleans trade is not worth that to us.

Later in the same year E. B. Muller & Co. in fact reduced its price in New Orleans to 7¾ cents.

On November 2, 1931, David McMorran wrote an official of Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., in part as follows:

If you think advisable perhaps it would be well to write Reily (one of Franck's largest customers) that Schanzer is making desperate efforts to sell out. * * * If Reily should contract with Schanzer, it would not only reduce his rebate from us but it would be a very uncertain source of supply. Schanzer is liable to pass out at any time and if European root went up or the tariff was increased Schanzer would simply fold up and fail to deliver to Reily.

Under date of January 14, 1933, a sales representative of respondent, E. B. Muller & Co., wrote that company in part:

I am sorry that we have allowed Schanzer to get to the point where he can expand, which was made possible by partner who has some capital. However, if a reduction on tariff should take place, it would make the situation still worse. I certainly hope that we can, as you expect, eliminate him entirely, by making prices that he cannot meet without losing money.

In a letter dated February 2, 1933, David McMorran wrote another official of Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., discussing the possibility of an offer of lower prices to one of that company's large customers in New Orleans. He said in part:

The reduction in our basis price will put a crimp in Schanzer's operations and probably discourage him from making any further investment.

Under date of March 17, 1933, the production manager for E. B. Muller & Co. wrote the New York office of that company in part:

January reports show largest importation per month on record, 267,000# of root, at an average cost of $1.44, which is, as we recall it, considerable lower than any previous low, so that the cut of ½¢ which he (R. E. Schanzer, Inc.) made following us to some extent is offset by a lower cost to him.

In a letter written 2 days later between the same parties the production manager stated in part:

Regardless of what loss it may involve for the present, we are still in favor of lower Chicory prices, effective at this time. We know it involves a loss, but we fear it will react upon us later because of the strength we are giving competitors by maintaining present basis, but, as you well know, such recommendations would not receive any support now, but we believe we should both do all we can to prevail for a reduction of another ½¢ in the Fall, possibly November first.

At the time R. E. Schanzer, Inc., was beginning the construction of a drying kiln in Michigan in 1933 in order to utilize domestic chicory root, respondents claimed that the patterns and blue prints used by a machinery manufacturer to build machinery for them belonged to them, and when this claim was of no avail purchased such patterns and blue prints to prevent their use in building machinery for R. E. Schanzer, Inc. In July 1933 David McMorran wrote an official of Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., in part:

Schanzer asked Kinzle (respondent's employee) if we would sell him the cutter from Midland and Kinzle told him he would have to find out. I advised Kinzle to stall Schanzer along as long as possible and then tell him "No."

Under date of November 27, 1933, the sales manager of E. B. Muller & Co. advised its New Orleans representative that the company's St. Louis representative would be visiting in New Orleans soon and would call, and said in part:

As the question of prices will no doubt arise, we wish you would not stress the extremely low prices we are compelled to make at New Orleans for reasons well known to you. He is of course, accustomed to obtaining very much higher prices at St. Louis despite the much lower freight rate to that point from Port Huron. This of course by reason of the fact that New Orleans would have to pay a considerable freight rate on shipments to St. Louis, as he has had the business so well in hand for years, that they have found it impossible to break in—and for us, it is a case of averaging up, as if we were compelled to sell at other points at the same price as we sell in New Orleans, we could just as well close up the plant, as we could not exist on the profit.

Under date of January 3, 1934, David McMorran wrote another official of Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., in part:

I think Schanzer requires our immediate and careful consideration. You will have noted from the prices on recent imports that Schanzer's imported dried root is costing him approximately $80 per ton delivered. His Linwood dried root this fall will also cost him approximately $80 per ton delivered New Orleans. This means 4¢ per pound for his root. Add to this 20% shrinkage or say 1¼¢ per pound plus 1¼¢ for manufacturing, making a total cost to him of 6½¢. If we maintain present prices in New Orleans and the South, it means that Schanzer can scrape thru the next year at just about cost without any overhead cost which in his case is rather low as he has his crockery business to pay his traveling expenses. I am inclined to think that Schanzer has spent most of his working capital at Linwood this year and is probably pretty hard up. If we lower the price of granulated ½ or ¼ cent it will mean that Schanzer will have to do business at a considerable loss as he is selling approximately 1,000,000 pounds per year. We can justify the lower price on the basis of lower cost of our dried root this year. If Schanzer continues to operate at Linwood after this year, he will be a serious menace as his kiln is now in fairly good operating condition with a few minor changes which he contemplates making. His greatest danger now is fire at Linwood as his kiln draft is tremendous and he loads his floors very lightly and will probably result in charring the lower layer. With a lower price for this year, Schanzer will probably be extremely hard up and unable to finance another crop.

A cut of ¼ to ½¢ will mean some loss to us. Is it better to let him go along and scrape thru this year and be in position to become a serious factor next year, or is it better to lower the price with probably his inability to continue?

At the time R. E. Schanzer, Inc., began using domestic chicory root produced in Michigan the company on two occasions sought to obtain a reduction in freight rates on dried chicory root from its kiln in Michigan to its manufacturing plant in New Orleans. Respondents recognized the reasonableness of the reduction sought, as indicated by a letter of March 2, 1934, from the production manager of E. B. Muller & Co. to the New York office of that concern:

Have just received the inclosed wire from New Orleans, which, of course, follows local carriers' refusal to join the Southern on the basis of 47¢, 80,000# minimum. I do not see how we could consistently fight this 65¢ rate, 60,000# minimum, because of the fact that it is generally conceded that raw material or semi-raw material should command a lower rate than prepared and finished material, and we have a 65¢ rate on the latter, 40,000# minimum.

Respondents, however, opposed both applications. Both were refused and chicory root continued to take the same rate as the finished product, granulated chicory, with the result that it costs R. E. Schanzer, Inc., some $70 more to deliver enough chicory root from Michigan to New Orleans to produce 40,000 pounds of granulated chicory than its costs E. B. Muller & Co. to deliver a 40,000 pound car of granulated chicory from Michigan to New Orleans.

A letter of July 26, 1934, from the New Orleans sales representative to the New York office of E. B. Muller & Co., in referring to competition with R. E. Schanzer, Inc., stated:

In the writer's humble opinion, all that is necessary to finish the job, would be to allow "Free Drayage and Tare on Bags," to the local trade. What think ye?

We realize this is an expensive undertaking, but if the plan is adopted, we know he cannot survive the summer.

Shortly thereafter the plan referred to was in fact put into operation.

In a letter of December 28, 1934, from Gordon McMorran to the New York office of E. B. Muller & Co. it was stated in part:

We learn that Schanzer has applied to the Seatrain for a special rate on chicory from Linwood to New Orleans. This application probably covers a rate on dried root only. Please keep in touch with the Seatrain traffic department and tell them that if the rate is made on dried chicory root we will have to have the same rate applied on manufactured chicory or discontinue our shipments.

In 1934 the sales manager for E. B. Muller & Co. told the wife of the company's New Orleans representative that if her husband succeeded in putting R. E. Schanzer, Inc., out of business he would buy her the best fur coat in New York. This promise was repeated in 1935 and on April 12, 1935, it was referred to in a letter from the wife of the sales manager for E. B. Muller & Co. to the wife of the New Orleans representative of that company in a statement hoping that the New Orleans representative "has a most successful season from all points, as we want to shop for a fur coat this fall."

Ways and means of eliminating R. E. Schanzer, Inc., and the progress made in that direction were frequent topics of conversation among respondent's officers and employees. A former sales representative of E. B. Muller & Co. testified it was his understanding that the purpose of the company in opening a New Orleans office was to break R. E. Schanzer, Inc. In a letter to the New York office of E. B. Muller & Co. this former representative referred to the opening of the New Orleans office and stated, "It was with the intention of breaking Schanzer."

In replying to an observation by a sales representative concerning difficulties which might ensue if customers of E. B. Muller & Co. not solicited by Schanzer discovered that other purchasers received more favorable prices, the sales manager of E. B. Muller & Co. under date of October 2, 1934, wrote in part:

It is quite evident that neither Forbes or Evans have sold these people and not likely that the sale will come to their attention. If it should, your explanation is—that we are fighting an unscrupulous competitor who will possibly pass out of the picture before long, but in the meantime we will have to do such things to discourage him, but that before long we hope conditions will get back to their normal basis, so that we as in the past could work with the Jobbers entirely. This wish is father to the thought.

In 1934 E. B. Muller & Co. decided to thereafter offer two grades of granulated chicory, one known as "Premium" and the other as "Standard" and to maintain their then current prices on the best grade and use the Standard grade as a competitive brand. On October 9, 1934, the sales manager of E. B. Muller & Co. in a letter to one of its sales representatives explained the plan in part as follows:

The decision arrived at, is to offer hereafter two grades of Chicory, maintaining present prices on our best grade, which will be the goods as we turned them out heretofore, somewhat improved, and use the second grade, which however, will be stock equal to anything our competitor can offer and very likely better than his, as our fighting brand with price. However, the change will not go into effect until Nov. 1 and as it will be necessary that you have samples to show the difference in the grades, it will be just as well not to make mention of it now, especially among the small trade which you are visiting.

The introduction of two grades of chicory by E. B. Muller & Co. was carried out in a manner intended to, and which so far as practicable did, limit the sale of the so-called fighting brand to the territory in which respondent competed with R. E. Schanzer Inc. Respondent sells much the greater part of the Premium grade at higher prices in other territories and the quantity of Premium grade sold as such in the territory covered by R. E. Schanzer, Inc., is relatively quite small.

In a letter of September 9, 1935, from the sales manager of E. B. Muller & Co. to its New Orleans sales representative, in referring to R. E. Schanzer, Inc., it was stated:

Evidently Neal has drawn in the lines on account of poor conditions—so by continuing our efforts and putting a crimp into him wherever possible, we may ultimately curb this competition if we should not succeed in eliminating it entirely.

In a letter of November 14, 1935, from the sales manager of E. B. Muller & Co. to one of its sales representatives an attempt was made to explain the price situation and it was stated in part as follows:

Against that, if we sold trade in St. Louis at rock-bottom prices without considering what competition can do, we would have a good chance of going broke in our efforts to eliminate the competition.

On November 27, 1935, Gordon McMcrran in writing to the New York office of E. B. Muller & Co. stated in part:

Regarding your suggestion to make the differential between Standard and Premium ½¢, we can not quite agree that this is necessary in all cases. In fact we expressed our opinion a year ago that we are not interested in maintaining any volume on Premium, but must have a higher priced article to protect ourselves in the event that competition should be eliminated, and also to prevent any suggestion that we are engaged in price cutting.

On December 24, 1935, Gordon McMorran in writing to the New York office of E. B. Muller & Co. concerning negotiations with a customer, stated in part:

We would rather sell Drown at a price just below Schanzer as Drown thoroughly understands our position and knows that we are out to beat our competition.

On several occasions prior to 1937 R. E. Schanzer, Inc., appealed to respondents to increase their prices in the New Orleans area in order that it would not be forced to lose money in attempting to meet their competition. Finally, in January 1937 R. E. Schanzer, Inc., found that it was losing so much money that it could no longer afford to sell at respondents' prices and that it was compelled to, and consequently did, increase its prices. Respondents on the occasion of one such request by R. E. Schanzer, Inc., stated if that company could not afford to lose money it should get out of the chicory business, and on another such occasion told R. E. Schanzer, Inc., that while they were not making any money they were satisfied with the way things were going and would not increase their prices, and further that they intended to retain their sales volume at any and all costs.

R. E. Schanzer, Inc., attempted to explain the necessity of the price increase by that company to its customers. An example of one such effort is contained in a letter of January 29, 1937, which reads in part as follows:

Your letter of January 26th received and in connection with our advance on Chicory let me first give the facts that forced us to take this step.

In the first place, the price prevailing during 1936 of 5¼¢ fob New Orleans was in itself below actual cost but we continued selling at this basis hoping that competitive conditions would adjust themselves and that we would be able to obtain a price that would at least cover our cost.

As soon as figures were available for the 1936/7 crop it disclosed that the cost of the new crop was very much higher than we had anticipated * * *.

In view of these conditions and if we want to continue in the Chicory business there was no alternative left but raise our price to where we at least break even. We are fully aware that there will be some customers who will quit us entirely but, on the other hand we have hopes that the majority of our friends will recognize the distinct service we have rendered them in the past and favor us at least with a portion of their requirements. We feel our presence in the Chicory business will always assure them of a fair and reasonable price for this product.

Promptly after the increase in price was made by R. E. Schanzer, Inc., E. B. Muller & Co. made an increase in its price which was followed by an increase in price by Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., and a few months thereafter a second increase by E. B. Muller & Co. The increases in price made by the respondents did not, however, raise their prices to the same level as those of R. E. Schanzer, Inc., or terminate their selling below cost.

From long experience in the manufacture and sale of chicory and periodical checks upon their costs respondents were aware that they were selling below their own costs in their efforts to destroy and suppress the competition of R. E. Schanzer, Inc. Examples of such knowledge appear in evidence previously referred to and also in the following excerpts from communications by respondents' officials. In a letter from the production manager of E. B. Muller & Co. to its sales manager dated November 8, 1935, it was stated in part:

It is not likely that there will be further reductions at New Orleans as a price of 5½¢ is already substantially below cost * * *.

In a letter of April 15, 1937, to its sales representative in New Orleans the sales manager of E. B. Muller & Co. stated in part:

5.55 with freight of 54¢ and stop-over charge, nets us less than 5¢ and we have been given to understand that cost is slightly over 5¢. It certainly seems a shame that under present conditions we should be compelled to continue working at a loss.

An official of Heinr. Franck Sons., Inc., informed one of its largest customers that his company was losing between $20,000 and $25,000 a year on sales to that customer.

PAR. 10. Respondent, Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., has discriminated in price among its customers by selling granulated chicory to some at prices materially different from the prices charged others for chicory of like grade and quality. Its largest customers, William B. Reily & Co. and Merchants Coffee Co., both of New Orleans, La., received the lowest prices. Considering these two customers as one group against all other customers of this respondent as a second group, the actual average price differentials between the two groups were substantial and were not justified by reason of differences in cost to respondent of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from differing methods or quantities in which chicory of like grade and quality was sold and delivered. Examples of such unjustified price differences as between the two customers mentioned and other customers where the difference is not accounted for by any general change in respondent's prices are: A 50 cents per hundred pounds higher price to American Coffee Co., New Orleans, which failed of justification by 48 cents; a 75 cents per hundred pounds higher price to Southern Coffee Mills, New Orleans, which failed of justification by 72 cents; a $1.25 per hundred pounds higher price to U & J Lenson Co., New York, which failed of justification by 6 cents; a $2.50 per hundred pounds higher price to Golden Gate Supply Co., San Francisco, which failed of justification by $1.66; and other similar instances. There are, of course, instances where higher prices to others were fully justified by respondent's cost differences.

Respondent, Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., also discriminated in price as among its customers generally, in addition to the discriminations between its two large customers and others mentioned or referred to above, by selling granulated chicory of like grade and quality to some at materially higher prices than to others, and certain of these differences are not justified by cost differences to the respondent. Examples of such discriminations in prices are: A 25 cents per hundred pounds higher price to U & J Lenson Co. than to S. A. Schonbrunn Co. and Old Dutch Mills, all of New York City, for which difference no cost justification is shown; a 25 cents per hundred pounds higher price to S. B. Cole & Co. than to McGaffey Coffee Co., both of Los Angeles, which difference failed of justification by $1.12; a price of $7.75 to Golden Gate Supply Co. of San Francisco as against a $6 per hundred pounds price to American Coffee Co., New Orleans, resulting in a price difference of $1.75 per hundred pounds, which failed of justification by 93 cents; a price of $8.25 to Haas Baruch & Co. of Los Angeles as against a $6 per hundred pounds price to The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. of Atlanta, which difference failed of justification by 77 cents per hundred pounds; and others of a similar nature.

Respondent, E. B. Muller & Co., has discriminated in the price of granulated chicory of like grade and quality as among many of its customers by charging materially different prices to some than to others, and many such price differences are not justified by differences in cost to the respondent of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which said chicory was sold or delivered. The price discriminations by this respondent were accomplished in many different ways: Some resulted merely from outright price differences among customers; some were accomplished by selling a higher grade of chicory to preferred customers at or below the price of a lower grade, when other purchasers of the higher grade were required to pay a premium in price; some were created by the use of a rebate or discount plan under which a few preferred customers who made large annual purchases were granted an additional price reduction or discount; and some were created by other means. The quantity discount or rebate plan referred to was offered to only a few customers of respondent, and among such preferred customers neither the base price nor the rate of discount or rebate was uniform as among those with whom agreements were entered into prior to June 19, 1936, but pursuant to which sales were made subsequent to that date. As among preferred customers who received such quantity discounts or rebates pursuant to agreements entered into subsequent to June 19, 1936, the rate of discount or rebate was uniform but the base prices were not. Examples of unjustified discriminations in price by respondent, E. B. Muller & Co., are: A 45 cents per hundred pounds higher price to American Coffee Company, New Orleans, than to C. D. Kenny Company, New Orleans, no part of which price difference was justified; a 20 cents per hundred pounds higher price to Southern Coffee Mills, New Orleans, than to Mobala Coffee Co., New Orleans, no part of which difference was justified; a 25 cents per hundred pounds higher price to the Southland Coffee Co., Atlanta, than to McDougall Coffee Co., Atlanta, no part of which difference was justified; and other similar instances.

Respondents, acting under the common control heretofore stated, have discriminated in price as among the customers of each other in that each respondent has sold chicory of like grade and quality to some of its customers at prices different from those charged by the other respondent to some of its customers, and such price differences are not justified by reason of differences in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from differing methods or quantities in which such chicory of like grade and quality was sold or delivered. Examples of such discriminatory price differences are: A 25 cents per hundred pounds higher price to William B. Reily & Co., New Orleans, by Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., than to New South Warehouse Coffee Co., New Orleans, by E. B. Muller & Co., which failed of cost justification by 95 cents; a 30 cents per hundred pounds higher price to Merchants Coffee Co., New Orleans, by Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., than to Southern Coffee Mills, New Orleans, by E. B. Muller & Co., which failed of justification by 95 cents; a $1.08 per hundred pounds higher price to American Coffee Co., New Orleans, by Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., than to C. D. Kenny Co., New Orleans, by E. B. Muller & Co., which failed of justification by $1.81; a $1.50 higher price to U & J Lenson Co., New York, by Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., than to Boothe Bros. Coffee Co., New Orleans, by E. B. Muller & Co., which failed of justification by $1.02; a 63 cents per hundred pounds higher price to American Coffee Co., New Orleans, by Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., than to Trico Coffee Co., New Orleans, by E. B. Muller & Co., which failed of justification by $1.36; and numerous other similar instances.

The general pattern of the price discrimination followed by respondents has been to make low prices in a few southern States where they are in active competition with R. E. Schanzer, Inc., and make higher prices on sales elsewhere in the United States where their competitor does not attempt to and cannot, because of transportation costs, sell its products. As a result of this respondents recouped in part for the lower prices at which they sold their products in southern States. Respondents' price discriminations, while following the general pattern stated, also included substantial price discriminations as among purchasers within the southern States referred to and among purchasers elsewhere in the United States. In many instances respondents maintained discriminatory prices as between customers located in the same city.

PAR. 11. The effect of respondents' selling below cost in the trade area in which their competitor, R. E. Schanzer, Inc., operates, and the discriminations in price caused by selling to customers in the trade territory covered by R. E. Schanzer, Inc., at lower prices than elsewhere in the United States, has been to divert to themselves a substantial volume of business which their competitor might otherwise have obtained, to force their competitor to sell at unprofitable prices or at prices which represented a loss in order to avoid being forced out of business, and thus to impair their competitor's financial position and render it unreasonably difficult if not impossible for it to secure capital to finance and expand its operations.

During the year 1937 when R. E. Schanzer, Inc., was forced to increase its prices substantially above those of respondents in an effort to avoid financial losses which it could not bear, respondents continued their sales below cost and discriminatory prices and this resulted in a loss of sales volume by R. E. Schanzer, Inc., of nearly 650,000 pounds, or more than 25 percent of its volume in the preceding year. At the time that R. E. Schanzer, Inc., was losing volume of sales because of respondents' pricing and other practices, respondents were substantially increasing their volume of sales. Respondents have by these practices not only weakened and injured competition but have also tended to create in themselves a monopoly in the production and sale of domestic chicory.

The threat of monopoly which might be followed by monopolistic prices was recognized among purchasers of chicory. An intercompany communication by the purchasing officer of a large user of chicory stated in part:

There is no getting around it but what if Schanzer had stayed out of the picture we would be paying much higher prices for chicory from either Heinr. Franck or Muller so we really owe something to them. Muller and Franck have always had an opportunity to quote on our business and they always quoted the same price. Now, since Schanzer has gotten the business they are making a strenuous effort to get it back and just the minute that they have eliminated Schanzer I feel quite sure that their prices would be much higher.

That this view was warranted is indicated in the following extract from a letter of March 9, 1937, from the sales manager of E. B. Muller & Co. to the Port Huron office of that concern, stating in part:

We would suggest that they be given a price of 6¢ Jacksonville, which with freight Port Huron to New York and New York to Jacksonville, 65½¢ total, would net 5.34½ Port Huron, unless different information should come to hand of Schanzer having actually closed up entirely, in which case of course, a better price could be obtained * * *.

The sales manager of E. B. Muller & Co. used the possibility of creating a monopoly in respondents as a threat to purchasers. He wrote a sales representative of that company in part as follows:

However, we feel sure that if you will diplomatically advise your trade that Schanzer surely will not last much longer, which is certainly proven by the repeated offers he has made to us to buy him out, they will see the handwriting on the wall, and realize that if Schanzer drops out, which he undoubtedly will, they will have to come back to us, and it should appear reasonable to them to consider that we would not feel as kindly towards those who have gotten away from us for a slight consideration in price, than to those who stuck to us and that they would be the ones in future who will receive the greatest consideration.

Of course it is needless to tell you that this will have to be handled very carefully, not in the nature of a threat but just as a friendly suggestion on your part, and we believe it can be handled very much better by you than by the writer, as such intimation coming from him would not take as well.

Many of the discriminatory prices granted by respondents were among purchasers engaged in competition with each other in the sale of coffee containing chicory. In their competition for trade coffee roasters who purchase chicory and use it for blending with coffee which they sell for resale feel the competitive effects of paying a higher price for chicory than their competitors pay. The importance of price is recognized in the trade since a very small difference in price, sometimes as little as one-twentieth of a cent per pound, will result in a change of source of supply. The importance of price is expressed by a coffee roaster in a letter to respondent E. B. Muller & Co. which stated in part:

* * * although we like your product much better we would like to buy Chicory as cheaply as possible on account of the competition we have on cheap mixed goods in which we use Chicory.

A sales representative of E. B. Muller & Co., reporting to that company, stated in part:

They (referring to a customer) were also very appreciative of our telling them about the use of Standard Chicory in the cheaper Coffee blends as the competition is very keen and they were losing business using our higher priced Chicory when it was not necessary.

Respondents themselves recognized and admitted the substantial competitive advantage to a coffee roaster of a lower price for chicory. David McMorran in writing to an official of Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., stated in part:

This is the danger in letting one customer get too big as we have done by rebates to Reily. Reily has been able to undersell his competitors thru our help and when he gets big enough he will unquestionably attempt to go into the business himself. The only thing that will prevent him will be the fear that if he does do this there will be a fight and every 5 bag buyer in New Orleans will get his chicory just as cheap as Mr. Reily can produce it for itself. Reily would not be able to sell much outside of his own trade and if his chicory costs him as much as his small competitors, all of Reily's advantage is gone.

In another letter to the same official David McMorran stated in part:

What I am trying to get at is to reduce the cost of granulated for a portion of the New Orleans trade. I cannot see my way clear to consenting to making further quantity rebate to Reily. The rebate is altogether too high now and we are damaging our other granulated trade by giving Reily such a large rebate. It is dangerous for us to increase Reily's trade at the expense of his competitors.

The Commission finds that the sales below cost and the discriminations in price made by respondents resulted in substantial injury to competition among their customers and the customers of each of them.

PAR. 12. Respondents attempted to justify their sales below cost and their discriminations in price on the ground that such prices were made in good faith to meet the competition of R. E. Schanzer, Inc. Upon consideration of the evidence the Commission finds that with minor exceptions the discriminatory prices and sales below cost made by respondents were not protective measures on their part to meet previously established lower prices by R. E. Schanzer, Inc., but were aggressive acts in which they deliberately cut their prices below those of their competitor and discriminated in price among their customers as a part of their purpose and design to suppress and destroy competition, and that there is no foundation in fact for the claim of meeting competition in good faith.

At the time R. E. Schanzer, Inc., was selling imported chicory, by reason of a prejudice among purchasers against imported chicory or doubt as to its quality being equal to that of domestic chicory, said company was unable to sell such imported products at the price level of competing domestic products, and the making of sales of imported goods required the granting of a slightly lower price than that current on domestic chicory. During this period of time the instances where respondents reduced their prices below those of R. E. Schanzer, Inc., as well as those instances where such reductions resulted in prices level with those of R. E. Schanzer, Inc., amounted to more than meeting competition in good faith and were not warranted by competitive necessity.

There have been instances where the prices of R. E. Schanzer, Inc., were lower than the prices of Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., but not lower than the then current prices of E. B. Muller & Co., or lower than the prices of E. B. Muller & Co. but not lower than the then current prices of Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc. In the great majority of such instances the fact that the prices of R. E. Schanzer, Inc., were lower than those of one of the respondents resulted from an attempt by R. E. Schanzer, Inc., to meet lower prices established by the other respondent.

A former sales representative of respondent E. B. Muller & Co. testified that during his connection with that company it was E. B. Muller & Co. and not R. E. Schanzer, Inc., which assumed the initiative in cutting prices and that his company four or five times reduced its prices below those of R. E. Schanzer, Inc., and that he knew of no instance where R. E. Schanzer, Inc., had cut its prices below those of E. B. Muller & Co.

On November 12, 1931, E. B. Muller & Co. wrote its New Orleans sales representative in part:

> We would like to know just what Schanzer's prices now are. While you wrote us that he met our cut, it is not clear to us to what extent, as we have three prices, * * *.

On January 13, 1932, E. B. Muller & Co. wrote its New Orleans sales representative in part:

> We note that Schanzer has met our prices both locally and in the country. We are wondering how long he will be able to do this without losing a lot of money.

On March 15, 1933, the production manager of E. B. Muller & Co. wrote its New York office with reference to R. E. Schanzer, Inc., and said in part:

> * * * that the cut of ½¢ which he made following us to some extent is offset by a lower cost to him.

On April 24, 1934, the sales manager of E. B. Muller & Co. in writing to its New Orleans sales representative, referring to a recent price reduction made by his company, stated in part:

Black reports having met Schanzer's man in Atlanta the first day he was able to be out again after having been ill, and he sure acted as though he had gotten a Solar Plexus blow, going so far as to rail at Black in front of a customer for having made a reduction at this time, when they appear to be looking for an increase in price.

On February 21, 1935, a sales representative of E. B. Muller & Co. wrote the New York office of that concern in part:

Schanzer recently sold the Jobbers Coffee Co., 902 Main Street, Columbia, S. C., chicory at 6.90 * * * I made them a price of 6.85 on our Standard * * *.

On March 1, 1937, a sales representative of E. B. Muller & Co., writing from Birmingham, Ala., advised the New Orleans office of that concern that he had seen the buyer for Standard Brands, Inc., and had been:

* * * told that Schanzer is charging them 6¼¢ FOB New Orleans on the chicory he is shipping them now. I quoted them 6¢ FOB Birmingham, as you instructed me and this price may swing this business to us.

The contention of respondents that prices in other cities are not discriminatory where they are equal to the New Orleans, Port Huron, or New York base price of respondents plus the amount transportation from the nearest of these three points would cost is not accepted. The costs which may be used in justification of price differences are actual costs as distinguished from theoretical or artificial costs.

PAR. 13. The false and disparaging representations published and circulated by respondents concerning alleged adulteration of the products of competitors, and the false and misleading representations that the color and uniformity of color of their own granulated chicory were obtained by care and selection in roasting when in truth and in fact such granulated chicory was artificially colored as hereinbefore set out, contributed to the injury to and suppression of competition and tendency toward monopoly in respondents resulting from the sales below cost and discriminations in price as aforesaid, and in addition thereto in and of themselves have had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to, and have, and do, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public by creating in their minds the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements were, and are, true, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted from competitors to respondents.

CONCLUSION

The discriminations in price by respondents as hereinabove set out have resulted, and do result, in substantial injury to their competitors, hinder, obstruct, and tend to suppress competition with respondents and create a monopoly in them in the processing and sale of granulated chicory, and have resulted, and do result, in substantial injury to competition among purchasers of such chicory by affording material and unjustified price advantages to preferred purchasers and not to others, and violate subsection (a) of section 2 of an act of Congress entitled, "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act), as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13). The sales below cost by respondents were made with the intent and purpose and with the effect of substantially injuring and lessening competition and tending to create a monopoly in the processing and sale of domestic granulated chicory in respondents and this practice and the other acts and practices of respondents as aforesaid are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint and the amended and supplemental complaint of the Commission, the answers of respondents, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaints and in opposition thereto taken before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, report of the trial examiners and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments of counsel; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and of subsection (a) of section 2 of an act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act), as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13).

It is ordered, That respondents, E. B. Muller & Co., a corporation, and Heinr. Franck Sons, Inc., a corporation, their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, either jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of granulated chicory in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Disparaging the products of competitors by falsely representing that such products contain molasses, sugar beets, sugar beet pulp, or other foreign substances, or are adulterated in any manner; or otherwise making and publishing any false and disparaging representations concerning the products of competitors.

2. Representing that granulated chicory the color or uniformity of color of which has been affected by the use of iron oxide or any other artificial coloring agent is not artificially colored, either by affirmative representations or by failure clearly to disclose that such product has been artificially colored.

3. Selling or offering to sell granulated chicory at a price less than the cost thereof to respondents with the purpose or intent, and where the effect may be, to injure, suppress, or stifle competition or tend to create a monopoly in the production or sale of such products. (As used in this paragraph the term "cost" means the total cost to respondents of any such transactions of sale, including the costs of acquisition, processing, preparation for marketing, sale, and delivery of such products.)

It is further ordered, That said respondents, their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, either jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in the sale of granulated chicory in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the aforesaid Clayton Act, do forthwith cease and desist from discriminating directly or indirectly in the price of such products of like grade and quality, as among purchasers from either or both of them, where the differences in price are not justified by differences in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from differing methods or quantities in which such products are sold or delivered:

(A) By selling any material quantity of such products to purchasers in one or more general trade areas at prices different from those to purchasers in any other general trade area.

(B) By selling such products to some purchasers in any general trade area at prices materially different from those to other purchasers in the same general trade area.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall, within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

VON SCHRADER MANUFACTURING COMPANY ET AL.

Docket 3924. Complaint, Oct. 12, 1939—Decision, June 11, 1941

Where two partners, successors to a discontinued corporate business, engaged in the competitive interstate sale and distribution of electrically operated portable rug and carpet washing machines, cleaning function of which involved the automatic application to, and removal from, the surface being cleaned, of soap solution fed to machines' oscillating rubber brushes; by advertisements in magazines and other publications of general circulation, circulars, other printed matter, and letters distributed to members of the purchasing public—

(a) Represented that their machine would restore the original color of rugs or carpets, destroy germs or other micro-organisms therein and sterilize or substantially sterilize the same, through such statements, among others, as "Let us restore the exquisite colorings in your rugs and carpets," "All the delicate colors, the beautiful shades that you have long forgotten were in your rug or carpet, are brought back * * ," and " * * removes the deeply imbedded grime and the microbes of disease which are carried into the home by every shoe that crosses the threshold";

Facts being soap solution used therein was not a germicide, and would not "destroy every vestige of germs" or remove "the microbes of disease," the cleaning action of the machine being limited to the removal of such dirt and other foreign material as might be loosened by its scrubbing action and incorporated in the lather, and machine did not restore the original colors of carpets and rugs, except for any freshness of appearance which might result from such cleaning; and (b) Represented that the profits of operators of their said machine averaged $200 or $400 a month, through such statements as "$200 to $400 a month is an easy average," and "$200 my first week";

Facts being business in question is a seasonal one and there are periods when little business is obtained by operators; $200 to $400 a month profit was not an easy average for operators nor an average of any kind of their earnings, and representations as to large gross amounts which had been earned by individual operators in their best day, week, or month, were false and misleading, in that they represented unusual and exceptional conditions and not the ordinary course of business under normal conditions;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public as to the effectiveness of their machines and earnings which might be secured from operation thereof, with result that many members of such public were thereby induced to purchase their products under the erroneous belief that said representations were true, and trade was diverted to them from competitors, to the substantial injury of competition in interstate commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Lewis C. Russell, trial examiner.
Mr. B. G. Wilson for the Commission.
Mayer, Meyer, Austrian & Platt, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT [1]

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Von Schrader Manufacturing Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Von Schrader Manufacturing Co. is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Wisconsin and having its office and principal place of business at Sixteenth Street and Junction Avenue, Racine, Wis. Respondent is now, and for some time past has been, engaged in the business of selling an electric machine designated "Von Schrader Portable Carpet Washer." Respondent causes and has caused said machines, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Wisconsin to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Wisconsin.

There is now, and has been during all the times mentioned herein, a course of trade by said respondent in said machines in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business, re-

[1] The evidence having disclosed at hearing before Trial Examiner Lewis C. Russell on June 4, 1940 that respondent corporation was dissolved on June 26, 1937, and was succeeded by a partnership which, subsequent to December 31, 1939, was composed of H. D. Rench and F. U. Von Schrader, trading as Von Schrader Manufacturing Co., it was agreed by W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, and by said individuals, trading as aforesaid, through stipulation duly approved on October 2, 1940, "that the complaint in this cause be amended so as to include H. D. Rench and F. U. Von Schrader, trading as Von Schrader Manufacturing Co., as parties respondent in this proceeding for all purposes; that said H. D. Rench and F. U. Von Schrader waive issuance and service of such amended complaint naming them as additional respondents herein; and that all the testimony and other evidence heretofore taken at hearings before Lewis C. Russell, trial examiner, may be considered in connection with the amended complaint to the same extent and with the same effect as if such testimony and other evidence had been originally taken in connection with the proceedings under the amended complaint and may also be considered as being applicable to the activities of H. D. Rench and F. U. Von Schrader subsequent to the dissolution of the corporate respondent on January 26, 1937."

spondent is in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals also engaged in the sale and distribution of like and similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, and in furtherance of the sale of its said machines, respondent has caused various false and misleading statements and representations relative to the effectiveness in use of said machines and relative to earnings made by purchasers of respondent's said machines to be inserted in magazines and other publications having a general circulation throughout the United States and in circulars and other printed matter distributed to members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States. Among and typical of said statements and representations are the following:

You may have a vacuum cleaner, but * * * you must have them washed to dissolve and destroy every vestige of germ and grime.

The Von Schrader carpet washer which we use removes the deeply imbedded grime and the microbes of disease which are carried into the home by every shoe that crosses the threshold.

Let us restore the exquisite colorings in your rugs and carpets.

Restores colors. All the delicate colors, the beautiful shades that you have long forgotten were in your rug or carpet, are brought back by the sanitary up-to-date method we employ.

Renews colors.

Thoroughly cleans carpets and rugs. Demoths and Sanitizes.

When you are getting started, naturally your profits depend on how diligently you go after business, but $200 to $400 a month is an easy average.

$200 my first week.

Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations and others of similar import or meaning not herein set out, the respondent represents directly, or by implication, that said carpet washers remove germs and microbes from carpets and rugs, that said carpet washers restore and renew the colors and shades of carpets and rugs, and that purchasers of respondent's carpet washers earn $200 a week, $400 a month and various other sums approximately equal thereto under normal conditions and circumstances and in the ordinary course of their business of washing rugs and carpets.

PAR. 3. The aforesaid statements and representations which respondent has made are false and misleading. In truth and in fact respondent's said carpet washers will not remove germs or microbes from carpets or rugs. Said carpet washers will not renew or restore the colors or shades of carpets or rugs. Purchasers of respondent's said carpet washers do not earn $200 a week or $400 per month or any other sums approximately equal thereto under normal conditions and circumstances and in the ordinary course of their business of washing carpets and rugs. In fact, the earnings of said persons are substantially less than such amounts.

PAR. 4. The use by respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's carpet washers because of such erroneous and mistaken belief. As a direct result thereof, trade in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, is being, and has been, diverted unfairly to the respondent from its said competitors who do not falsely represent the effectiveness in use of their respective products or the earnings of the users of their respective products. In consequence thereof, substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on October 12, 1939, issued and subsequently served its complaint upon respondent Von Schrader Manufacturing Co., a corporation, charging it with unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by an attorney for the Commission and in opposition thereto by attorney for the respondents before Lewis D. Russell, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, the complaint was amended by stipulation, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, stipulation amending the complaint, report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Von Schrader Manufacturing Co. was a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Wisconsin and having its principal place of business at 1600 Junction Avenue, Racine, Wis. After the commencement of the present proceeding it was found that the respondent corporation was dissolved on June 26, 1937 (but was still in existence for purposes of suing or being sued), and was succeeded by a partnership which subsequent to December 31, 1939, was composed of H. D. Rench and Francis U. Von Schrader, trading as Von Schrader Manufacturing Co. and having their principal place of business at 1600 Junction Avenue, Racine, Wis. By stipulation the partners agreed to amendment of the complaint in this proceeding to include them as parties respondent and waived issuance and service of an amended complaint, and further agreed that all testimony and other evidence theretofore taken in this proceeding might be considered in connection with the amended complaint to the same extent and with the same effect as if such testimony and other evidence had been originally taken in connection with proceedings under the amended complaint and as applicable to the activities of the copartners subsequent to the dissolution of the corporate respondent. The partnership took over the assets and liabilities of the respondent corporation which had been engaged in the business of selling an electric machine designated as the "Von Schrader Portable Carpet Washer" and has continued such business to the present time.

PAR. 2. Respondents at all times alleged in the complaint have been engaged in the sale and distribution of electrically operated portable carpet washing machines, and in the course and conduct of said business have caused said machines, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Wisconsin to purchasers located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been during all times mentioned herein, a course of trade in said machines in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondents are in competition with other corporations and partnerships, and with individuals, also engaged in the sale and distribution of similar articles of merchandise between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business and in furtherance of the sale of said machines respondents have caused various statements and representations relative to the effectiveness in use of said machines and with respect to earnings made by purchasers of such machines to be inserted in magazines and other publications having general circulation throughout the United States, and in circulars, other printed matter, and letters distributed to members of the purchasing public in various States of the United States. Among and typical of said statements and representations are:

You may have a vacuum cleaner, but * * * you must have them washed, to dissolve and destroy every vestige of germ and grime.

The VON SCHRADER carpet washer which we use removes the deeply imbedded grime and the microbes of disease which are carried into the home by every shoe that crosses the threshold.

Let us restore the exquisite colorings in your rugs and carpets.

Restores Colors

All the delicate colors, the beautiful shades that you have long forgotten were in your rug or carpet, are brought back by the sanitary up-to-date method we employ.

When you are getting started, naturally your profits depend on how diligently you go after business, but $200 to $400 a month is an easy average. $200 my first week.

PAR. 4. In substance the machine sold by respondents performs its cleaning function by means of rapidly oscillating rubber brushes which are in contact with the rug or carpet to be cleaned and which create a lather from a soap solution automatically fed to them from a container carried on the machine, and when the machine is moved forward a suction fan removes the lather from the surface of the rug or carpet, with such dust and dirt as may have been incorporated therein, and deposits it in an appropriate container attached to the machine. The soap solution sold by respondents to operators of such machines for use therein is not a germicide and will not "destroy every vestige of germ" or remove "the microbes of disease which are carried into the home by every shoe that crosses the threshold." The cleaning action of said machine is limited to the removal from rugs and carpets of such dirt and other foreign material as may be loosened by the scrubbing action of the machine and incorporated in the lather which is then removed. The machine does not operate to restore in whole or in part the original colors of the carpets and rugs cleaned by it. If such colors have faded or bleached or been changed or destroyed in any way the operation of respondents' machine does not have any restorative effect whatsoever except for any freshness of appearance as may result from such cleaning of the rug or carpet as is performed by said machine. Respondents conceded that their machine does not "restore" color to rugs or carpets but testified to a belief that the term used does not mislead or deceive and is understood to mean no more than such freshness of appearance as results from removal of dirt and grime from rugs and carpets.

In order to assist purchasers of their machines in establishing a business, respondents, among other things, advise such purchasers of methods which may be used to secure business, furnish suggested forms of sales letters to be used in soliciting cleaning work, suggest newspaper copy, furnish electrotypes for use in advertising, and supply advertising circulars for distribution to prospective customers.

PAR. 5. The representations by respondents with respect to amounts earned by operators of their machines, including those specifically set out in the complaint—"$200 to $400 a month is an easy average" and "$200 my first week"—are false and misleading in that respondents have no knowledge of what the actual average profits or earnings of purchasers of their machines may be, and such knowledge as they do have with respect thereto is limited to verbal and written statements made to them or their representatives by a limited number of purchasers of the machines sold by them. Individual witnesses produced by respondents to testify with respect to their profits and earnings from the operation of the rug cleaning machines sold by respondent stated that the business of rug and carpet cleaning is a seasonal one and the time of largest earnings is usually in the spring of the year. There are periods during the year when relatively little business is obtained by them. Among the witnesses who testified as to earnings during their best week the amounts ranged from about $135 to $411 " or something." The witness who named the maximum amount of gross income in his best week stated that his yearly average gross income was about $2,000. Testifying to the gross earnings in their best month, the range shown was from about $340 to $779.81. The witnesses as a group, in selecting their respective best weeks and best months, covered the years 1936 to 1940, inclusive, although all of them did not testify as to each of the five years in the period named. The annual gross income among operators who testified on behalf of respondents with respect thereto ranged from $1,593.68 to about $3,000. In the case of the witness testifying as to an annual gross income of $1,593.68 his expenses of operation during that year were stated to be $869.21. It is concluded that $200 to $400 a month profit is not an "easy average" for operators of respondents' machines, nor in fact an average of any kind of the earnings of such operators. Because of the seasonal nature of the business, representations as to large gross amounts which may have been earned by individual operators in their best day, week, or month are false and misleading in that they represent unusual and exceptional conditions and not the ordinary course of business under normal conditions.

PAR. 6. On February 2, 1937, a stipulation as to the facts and an agreement to cease and desist from certain representations was entered into between the Federal Trade Commission and respondent Von Schrader Manufacturing Co., by its president, Francis U. Von Schrader. By this stipulation it was admitted that it is impossible for the Von Schrader carpet washer to restore colors or shades when faded, or to remove all microbes or germs of disease from carpets and rugs, and that in the operation of said machine success is not assured, and it was agreed that the corporation would cease and desist from representing that said machine restores colors or shades to carpets or rugs or that it removes microbes or germs from carpets or rugs, and that owning and operating such a machine assures one of success.

PAR. 7. The false and misleading representations made by respondents and circulated as aforesaid have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public as to the effectiveness in use of respondents' machines and the earnings which may be secured from the operation thereof, and many members of such public have thereby been induced to purchase respondents' products under the erroneous belief that such representations were true. The aforesaid practices are to the detriment and injury of competitors of respondents and have the capacity and tendency to divert to respondents the trade of competitors selling in interstate commerce products of the nature of those sold by respondents, and thereby substantial injury is done, and has been done, by respondents to competition in interstate commerce.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices have been, and are, all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, Von Schrader Manufacturing Co., a corporation, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto taken before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, stipulation amending the complaint, report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent and respondents included by said stipulation amending the complaint have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondents H. D. Rench and Francis U. Von Schrader, copartners trading as Von Schrader Manufacturing Co., or under any other trade name or style, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of rug and carpet cleaning machines, do forthwith cease and desist from representing or implying:

1. That the Von Schrader rug and carpet washer, or any substantially similar machine, will in any way or to any degree restore the original color or colors of rugs or carpets;

2. That the Von Schrader rug and carpet washer, or any substantially similar machine, will destroy germs or other microorganisms in, or otherwise, sterilize or substantially sterilize, rugs and carpets;

3. That the profits of operators of the Von Schrader rug and carpet washer, or any substantially similar machine, average $200 or $400 per month, or any other sum in excess of the actual average net profits of such operators over a sufficient period of time to give effect to the seasonal nature of such business, or using statements of specific sums earned by any particular operator or operators in any stated periods of time in a manner which imports or implies that any unusual or exceptional earnings represent the usual and ordinary course of business.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall, within 60 days after the services upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That in view of the dissolution of respondent Von Schrader Manufacturing Co., a corporation, the complaint against said corporation be, and the same is, hereby dismissed.

IN THE MATTER OF

ETHEL'S CANDY & SALES COMPANY, INC.

Docket 4056. Complaint, Mar. 12, 1940—Decision, June 11, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture and competitive interstate sale and distribution of candy to retail dealers—

Furnished to purchasers various devices and plans which involved the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes for sale and distribution of its merchandise to the ultimate consumer wholly by lot or chance, including, as typical, assortment consisting of a number of bars of candy and a push card displaying 40 feminine names, with adjoining disks, for use in sale of candy under a plan which provided that purchasers pay for a "push" from 1 to 5 cents, depending upon the number disclosed by disk pushed, and thereby placed in the hands of others various plans and devices whereby its said candy was distributed to the ultimate consumer wholly by lot or chance;

With result that many persons were attracted by aforesaid sales methods and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to purchase its candy in preference to that of its competitors who did not use similar methods, and trade was unfairly diverted from such competitors to it:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and its competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas, Mr. Randolph Preston, and Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiners.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Mr. Isaac M. Wengrow, of Atlanta, Ga., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Ethel's Candy & Sales Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Ethel's Candy & Sales Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Georgia, with its principal office and place of business located at 164 Whitehall Street, SW., Atlanta, Ga. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to dealers. Respondent causes and has caused its said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its aforesaid principal place of business in the State of Georgia, to purchasers thereof in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers certain assortments of said candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when said candy is sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments consists of a number of bars of candy, together with a device commonly called a push card. Said push card contains a number of partially perforated disks with the word "push" appearing on the face of each of said disks. Printed within each of said disks is either 1¢—2¢—3¢—4¢ or 5¢. Each purchaser selects and removes one of said disks from said card and receives a bar of said candy for the amount disclosed when said disk is removed from the card. Each of said bars of candy has a retail value greater than 1 cent. The said amounts are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the disks have been selected and removed from said card. The amounts to be paid for said bars of candy are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure bars of candy at prices much less than the normal retail prices thereof. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of candy and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws. The use by respondent of said methods has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or to create a monopoly in this, to wit: that the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same or equivalent methods involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale and sell candy so packed and assembled as above described, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, or any other method of sale that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 4. Many dealers in, and ultimate purchasers of, candy are attracted by respondent's said methods and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent has a tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to unfairly divert to respondent trade from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to, and who do not, use the same or equivalent or similar methods because the same are unlawful, to lessen competition in said candy trade, to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or equivalent methods and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said methods by respondent has a tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said methods or equivalent methods.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 12th day of March, A. D., 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Ethel's Candy & Sales Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding. Said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiners thereon, and brief of attorney for the Commission, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Ethel's Candy & Sales Co., Inc., is a corporation organized in October 1939 under the laws of the State of Georgia and having its principal place of business in the city of Atlanta, State of Georgia.

PAR. 2. Respondent for some time prior to the issuance of the complaint herein was engaged in the manufacture and sale of candy, which it distributed to retail dealers and caused its candy when sold to be shipped from its principal place of business to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Respondent in the conduct of its business, as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 4. Respondent in the sale and distribution of its candy has furnished to the purchasers thereof various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, by means of which said candy was sold and distributed to the ultimate consumer wholly by lot or chance. Typical of the methods used by the respondent is the following:

One of respondent's assortments consisted of a number of candy bars and a push card. Upon the face of this card appear 40 disks each bearing the word "push," and above the disk appears a feminine name. Printed on the under side of each disk appear numbers ranging from 1¢ to 5¢. These numbers are not disclosed until the disk is pushed. The price paid for each push is determined by the number disclosed after the disk is pushed.

Respondent has used other similar devices in disposing of its candy, which differ from the above in detail only.

PAR. 5. Respondent by its sales methods hereinabove described has placed in the hands of others various plans, methods, and devices which involve games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, to be used in the distribution of its candy, and by the use of said plan, methods, and devices said candy was distributed to the ultimate consumer wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 6. Many persons have been and are attracted by the sales methods employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its candy and by the element of chance involved therein, and have been thereby induced to purchase respondent's candy in preference to that offered for sale by respondent's competitors who do not use the same or a similar method.

PAR. 7. During all the times herein mentioned, respondent has been in competition with corporations, individuals, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy similar to that sold by respondent in commerce between and among various States of the United States, who are unwilling to use and do not use in the sale and distribution of their candy any method involving a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, and as a result trade has been unfairly diverted from such competitors to the respondent.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, testimony and other evidence taken before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, the report of the trial examiners thereon, and brief filed by the attorney for the Commission, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent, Ethel's Candy & Sales

Co., Inc., a corporation, has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Ethel's Candy & Sales Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, directors, agents, and employees, jointly and severally, directly or indirectly, or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy or other merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, shall forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of such merchandise to the public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or a lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

J. R. OLNEY, SR., AND J. R. OLNEY, JR., DOING BUSINESS AS J. R. PHARMACAL COMPANY

Docket 4127. Complaint, May 7, 1940—Decision, June 11, 1941

Where two individuals engaged in interstate sale and distribution of their "J. R." medicinal preparation; by advertisements disseminated through the mails, newspapers, and periodicals, and circulars, leaflets, and other advertising literature—

(a) Represented that their preparation constituted a cure or remedy for all cases of athlete's foot and afforded immediate relief from said condition, itching toes, ringworm, and raw, inflamed feet, that it was endorsed by leading health institutions, and was the only known treatment of its kind;

Facts being no method of treating the condition known as athlete's foot is applicable or suitable in all cases, extended treatment is usually required, and in certain cases it is practically impossible to kill or destroy all of the fungi; while the drugs in said preparation were among those used by dermatologists in treatment of athlete's foot or ringworm generally, they were rarely used by such persons in the proportions found therein, and might in some cases aggravate rather than improve the condition; said preparation would not afford cure or remedy or immediate relief in all cases, though possibly affording temporary relief in some cases from frequent itching symptom associated therewith; and said product had not been endorsed as claimed, and was not the only known treatment of its kind; and

(b) Represented through the statement "Athlete's foot fungi killed in less than 3 minutes in laboratory test," that said product would in all cases kill or destroy such fungi, so that thereby speedy cure would be effected;

Facts being that while said statement might be literally true, as used it was deceptive and misleading: conditions under which laboratory tests were made and those existing when the fungi were on the foot were so dissimilar that results obtained in the former instances are not necessarily indicative of what might be expected in latter; and said preparation was wholly incapable of killing all fungi under ordinary conditions of use;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the therapeutic value of their said preparation, and to cause it to purchase their product as a result of such erroneous belief:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiner.
Mr. R. P. Bellinger for the Commission.
Mr. Guy W. Davis, of Chester, Pa., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that J. R. Olney, Sr., and J. R. Olney, Jr., individuals, doing business as J. R. Pharmacal Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a prbceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, J. R. Olney, Sr., and J. R. Olney, Jr., are individuals doing business as J. R. Pharmacal Co., with their principal office and place of business located at 2011 Edgmont Avenue, Chester, Pa. Respondents are now and for more than 1 year last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of a medical preparation designated "J. R." In the course and conduct of their business, respondents cause said preparation when sold to be transported from their place of business in the State of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. At all times mentioned herein respondents have maintained a course of trade in said preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said product by the United States mails, and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said product; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said product by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

Can't get rid of athlete's foot? Then you haven't used J. R.

Athlete's foot, itching toes, ringworm, raw inflamed feet, here is new instant relief.

Athlete's foot is generally relieved by a single application. Contains a valuable healing agent which heals the inflamed tissues.

J. R. is indorsed by leading health institutions as a most thorough scientific treatment for athlete's foot.

PAR. 3. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondents have represented and now represent that the use of their preparation "J. R." assures a cure of all cases of athlete's foot; that it gives instant or immediate relief from athlete's foot, itching toes, ringworm, and raw, inflamed feet; that it is endorsed by leading health institutions; that it is unique or the only known treatment of its kind.

The representations used and disseminated by the respondent in the manner above described are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue and constitute false advertisements. In truth and in fact the condition known as athlete's foot is caused by several different types of organisms and "J. R." is not a remedy or cure for all forms of the disorder and is not effective in all instances. It will not give instant or immediate relief from athlete's foot, itching toes, ringworm, or raw, inflamed feet in excess of alleviating the symptomic itching which accompanies or is associated with such conditions. Respondents' preparation has not been endorsed by leading health institutions; and it is not unique or the only known treatment of its kind.

Through the dissemination of the further advertising claims "athlete's foot fungi killed in less than 3 minutes in laboratory tests," respondents represent that their preparation "J. R." will kill the fungi causing athlete's foot. By the use of said representation, respondents induce purchasers to believe that said preparation will destroy athlete's foot fungi in all instances when applied to the affected portion. In truth and in fact the application of respondents' preparation "J. R." will not kill athlete's foot fungi in all instances since the condition known as athlete's foot is caused by several different types of organisms and "J. R." is not a remedy or cure for all forms of the disorder and is not effective in all instances.

PAR. 4. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to their preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and induces a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' said medicinal preparation.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 7, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, J. R. Olney, Sr., and J. R. Olney, Jr., individuals, doing business as J. R. Pharmacal Co., charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by R. P. Bellinger, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Guy W. Davis, attorney for the respondents, before John J. Keenan, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and the exceptions thereto, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, J. R. Olney, Sr., and J. R. Olney, Jr., are individuals doing business as J. R. Pharmacal Co., with their principal office and place of business located at 2011 Edgemont Avenue, Chester, Pa. Respondents are now, and for more than 3 years last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation designated by them as "J. R." and intended for use in the treatment of certain ailments and conditions of the human body.

In the course and conduct of their business respondents cause their preparation, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and for more than 3 years last past have maintained, a course of trade in their preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, advertisements concerning their preparation by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, advertisements concerning their preparation by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their preparation in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in such advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as herein set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, and by circulars, leaflets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

ATHLETE'S FOOT, ITCHING TOES—RINGWORM, RAW INFLAMED FEET.

Here is instant relief. The only known treatment of its kind. J. R. is endorsed by leading health institutions as the most thoroughly scientific treatment for Athlete's Foot. Don't take chances use J. R.

CAN'T GET RID OF ATHLETE'S FOOT? THEN YOU HAVEN'T USED J. R.

ATHLETE'S FOOT, RINGWORM, ITCHING TOES QUICKLY RELIEVED BY J. R.

At the first sign of itching of the feet or toes, something should be applied which is capable of killing the fungi. J. R. is especially recommended for this purpose; it also stops that annoying itching immediately; In this early stage, Athlete's Foot is generally relieved by a single application of J. R.

J. R. FOR ATHLETE'S FOOT, INSTANT RELIEF FROM ITCHING.

A scientific treatment for Athlete's Foot, "ringworm," toe itch.

J. R. contains a most valuable healing agent which soothes the inflamed tissues, and other ingredients allay the itching, toughening the tender surface.

ITCHING TOES (due to fungus infection) RAW INFLAMED FEET—RINGWORM ATHLETE'S FOOT ENTIRELY CLEARED UP * * *.

PAR. 3. The Commission finds that through the use of these advertisements, and others of a similar nature, the respondents have represented that their preparation constitutes a cure or remedy for all cases of athlete's foot; that it affords instant or immediate relief from athlete's foot, itching toes, ringworm, and raw, inflamed feet; that it is endorsed by leading health institutions; and that it is the only known treatment of its kind.

PAR. 4. The evidence shows, and the Commission finds, that the condition known as athlete's foot is a form of ring worm. It is caused by fungi, of which there are many varieties. There is no method of treating the condition which is applicable or suitable in all cases. The treatment must in each case be governed by the variety of the fungi, the condition prevailing in the particular case and the acuteness of the condition, Rarely, if ever, can a case of athlete's foot be cured within a short period of time, extended treatment usually being required. And, in many cases, even after extended treatment and after the condition appears to have been eliminated, certain of the fungi still remain. There are, in fact, certain cases of athlete's foot in which it is practically impossible to kill or destroy all of the fungi.

The active ingredients of respondents' preparation are:

Salicylic acid
Benzoic acid
Tannic acid and Phenol.

While these drugs are among those used by dermatologists in the treatment of athlete's foot and ringworm generally, the drugs are rarely used by dermatologists in the proportions found in respondents' preparation. For example, the salicylic acid content in the preparation is unusually high, and this would in some cases cause the preparation to aggravate rather than improve the condition. The preparation does not in any event constitute a cure or remedy for athlete's foot in all cases. Nor will the preparation afford instant or immediate relief from athlete's foot, itching toes, ringworm, or raw, inflamed feet, although it may, by reason of its phenol content, afford temporary relief in some cases from the itching symptom frequently associated with such conditions. Respondents' preparation has not been endorsed by leading health institutions, nor is it the only known treatment of its kind. The drugs constituting the preparation have long been known to and used by dermatologists generally.

The Commission therefore finds that these representations of the respondents with respect to their preparation and its therapeutic value are grossly exaggerated, deceptive, and misleading, and constitute false advertisements.

PAR. 5. The respondents have also used in their advertisements the statement, "Athlete's foot fungi killed in less than 3 minutes in laboratory test." The testimony of a number of members of the purchasing public shows, and the Commission finds, that to a substantial portion of the purchasing public this statement constitutes a representation that respondents' preparation will in all cases kill or destroy athlete's foot fungi, and that thereby a speedy cure of athlete's foot will be effected.

Respondents introduced in evidence a report of a chemical laboratory showing that under certain tests conducted by the laboratory certain athlete's foot fungi were killed in 3 minutes when subjected to respondents' preparation. However, the conditions under which laboratory tests are made and the conditions existing when the fungi are actually on the foot are so dissimilar that results obtained in the former instance are not necessarily indicative of results which may be expected in the latter instance. The uncontradicted expert testimony in the record is to the effect that respondents' preparation is wholly incapable of killing athlete's foot fungi in all cases under ordinary conditions of use. The Commission therefore finds that while respondents' statement with respect to the laboratory test of their preparation may be literally true, such statement is deceptive and misleading when used in connection with the advertising of the preparation to the general public.

PAR. 6. The Commission further finds that the use by the respondents of the false advertisements herein referred to has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the therapeutic value of respondents' preparation, and to cause such portion of the purchasing public to purchase respondents' preparation as a result of the erroneous and mistaken belief so engendered.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

sion and Guy W. Davis, attorney for the respondents (oral argument not having been requested) and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, J. R. Olney, Sr., and J. R. Olney, Jr., individually and trading as J. R. Pharmacal Co., or trading under any other name, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of respondents' medicinal preparation designated "J. R.," or any preparation of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act which advertisement:

(a) Represents, directly or through inference, that said preparation is in all cases a cure or remedy for athlete's foot.

(b) Represents, directly or through inference, that said preparation affords instant or immediate relief from athlete's foot, itching toes, ringworm, or raw, inflamed feet, in excess of temporarily relieving the itching symptom associated with such conditions.

(c) Represents, directly or through inference, that said preparation is endorsed by leading health institutions, or that it is the only known treatment of its kind.

(d) Uses the statement, "Athlete's foot fungi killed in less than three minutes in laboratory test," or otherwise represents that said preparation will in all cases kill or destroy athlete's foot fungi.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

D. J. MAHLER COMPANY, INC.

Docket 4228. Complaint, Aug. 7, 1940—Decision, June 11, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in interstate sale and distribution of its "Mahler Electrolysis Apparatus" for electrolytic removal of superfluous hair by individual self-application in the home; by advertisements disseminated through the mails, newspapers, circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature—

(a) Represented that said device was an efficient, effective and safe method for the permanent removal of hair by individual self-application in the home, and that its operation required only ordinary care and skill, when in fact its operation required the services of a skilled operator who must be acquainted with anatomy and physiology, particularly of the areas to be covered, and also with bacteriology and sepsis, as well as the properties of the machine used, proper use whereof by lay person is extremely difficult, while improper use may cause scarring, pitting or infection, with particular danger where used on certain areas and possibility of infection leading to abscess of the brain; use to remove hairs from some pigmented moles may stimulate quiescent cells to growth terminating in cancer, treatment of cancerous mole may cause dissemination of cancer cells all over the body; and use thereof to remove hairs from syphilitic lesions or other areas showing local pathological conditions may produce serious injury; and

(b) Failed to reveal facts material in the light of aforesaid representations, and that use of said device under prescribed or usual conditions might result in permanent disfigurement or cause infections or other irreparable injury to health, and that said device should not be used to remove hair from cancerous or syphilitic lesions, pigmented moles, or other areas showing local pathological conditions;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, and of inducing a portion of it, because of such belief, to purchase its said device:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Robert S. Hall, trial examiner.
Mr. William L. Taggart for the Commission.
Mr. Hugh F. O'Donnell, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that D. J. Mahler Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. D. J. Mahler Co., Inc., is a corporation created, organized, and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Rhode Island, with its office and principal place of business at 3124 Pawtucket Avenue, East Providence, R. I.

PAR. 2. The respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a certain device or apparatus designated as the Mahler Electrolysis Apparatus, advertised and recommended for use in the electrolytic removal of superfluous hair from the human body by individual self application in the home.

In the course and conduct of its business, the respondent causes said device or apparatus, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Rhode Island to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said device or apparatus in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of the aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said device or apparatus by United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said device or apparatus, by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said device or apparatus in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets and other advertising literature, are the following:

KILL THE HAIR ROOT

Remove superfluous hair privately at home, following directions with ordinary care and skill. The Mahler Method positively prevents the hair from growing again by killing the hair root. The delightful relief will bring happiness, freedom of mind and greater success. Backed by 45 years of successful use all over the world. Send 6¢ in stamps today for illustrated booklet "How to remove superfluous hair forever."

D. J. MAHLER CO., INC.,
Dept. 56F,
Providence, R. I.

PAR. 4. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth and other representations similar thereto, not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents that its device designated as the Mahler Electrolysis Apparatus or the Mahler Method is an efficient, effective, and safe device and method for the permanent removal of superfluous hair from the human body and that said device or apparatus can be successfully operated by an unskilled layman with ordinary care and skill.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, the device or apparatus sold and distributed by the respondent, as aforesaid, designated as the Mahler Electrolysis Apparatus, is composed principally of an electric battery to which is attached a cord terminated by a needle. Said device is used by inserting the needle into the hair follicle for the purpose of destroying the root of the hair by electrolysis, which process may cause serious injury to health. The said device or method is not an effective, efficient device or method for the permanent removal of superfluous hair from the human body by individual self application in the home. Said device cannot be successfully operated by an unskilled layman with ordinary care and skill, and its use by individual self application in the home is not safe.

PAR. 6. In addition to the representations hereinabove set forth, the respondent has also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in the manner above set forth in that said advertisements so disseminated fail to reveal facts material in the light of such representations and fail to reveal that the use of said device or apparatus under conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in serious physical injury, permanent disfigurement and in serious irreparable danger to health.

Such use, as aforesaid, may result in local infections, erysipelas, skin burns, scars, metallic tattoo marks, pitting and permanent disfigurement. When infection occurs as a result of the use of said device in the area about the nose, on the upper lip or over the glabella, it may be so serious as to cause serious injury to health, and in instances where the device and method are applied to cancerous or syphilitic lesions which are not recognizable as such by the layman, fatal consequences may result from infection.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to its device or apparatus, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to. and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true and induce a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's said device or apparatus.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on August 7, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint upon the respondent, D. J. Mahler Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by William L. Taggart, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Hugh F. O'Donnell, attorney for the respondent, before Robert S. Hall, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and exceptions filed thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments of counsel, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, D. J. Mahler Co., Inc., is a corporation created, organized, and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Rhode Island, with its office and principal place of business at 3124 Pawtucket Avenue, East Providence, R. I.

Findings

PAR. 2. The respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a certain device or apparatus designated as the Mahler Electrolysis Apparatus, advertised and recommended for use in the electrolytic removal of superfluous hair from the human body by individual self-application in the home.

In the course and conduct of its business, the respondent causes said device or apparatus, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Rhode Island to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said device or apparatus in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of the aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said device or apparatus by United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said device or apparatus, by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said device or apparatus in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets and other advertising literature, are the following:

KILL THE HAIR ROOT

Remove superfluous hair privately at home, following directions with ordinary care and skill. The Mahler Method positively prevents the hair from growing again by killing the hair root. The delightful relief will bring happiness, freedom of mind and greater success. Backed by 45 years of successful use all over the world. Send 6¢ in stamps today for illustrated booklet "How to remove superfluous hair forever."

D. J. Mahler Co., Inc.,

Dept. 56F,

Providence, R. I.

PAR. 4. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents that its device designated as the Mahler Electrolysis Apparatus or the Mahler Method is an efficient, effective, and safe device and method for the permanent removal of superfluous hair from the human body by individual self-application in the home, and that the operation of said device requires only ordinary care and skill.

PAR. 5. The device or apparatus sold and distributed by the respondent as aforesaid designated as "Mahler Electrolysis Apparatus" or "Mahler Method" is composed principally of an electric battery to which is attached a cord terminated by a needle. The needle is inserted into the hair follicle, usually from $\frac{1}{16}$ to $\frac{3}{16}$ of an inch beneath the surface of the skin. The current produced by the device brings about a chemical action which destroys the root of the hair.

The operation of this device requires the services of a skilled operator who must be acquainted with anatomy and physiology, particularly of the areas to be covered, and also with bacteriology and sepsis, as well as the properties of the machine used. The skin must be properly examined and prepared before the use of electrolysis and the operator must be able to determine when enough current has been used, as the amount of current necessary depends upon differences in response of the hair follicle treated.

It is extremely difficult for a lay person to properly use this device and to insert the needle naturally so as to reach the hair follicle without injury to the surrounding tissue. Improper use of this device might cause scarring, pittinfi or infection. There is particular danger in the use of this device on the areas of the upper lip or around the nose by reason of the nature of the blood supply and the lymphatic system in that area, enabling an infection to easily spread up through the nose to the sinuses or the brain, causing abscess of the brain, with very serious results.

The use of this device to remove hairs from some pigmented moles may have very serious consequences, as it might stimulate the pigmented cells to growth terminating in cancer which ordinarily would remain in the quiescent state, and the insertion of this needle into a cancerous mole might cause dissemination of the cancer cells all over the body. The use of this device to remove hairs from syphilitic lesions or other areas showing local pathological conditions might produce serious injury.

PAR. 6. In addition to the representations hereinabove set forth, respondent is also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in the manner above set forth, in that said advertisements so disseminated fail to reveal facts material in the light of such representations and fail to reveal that the use of said device or apparatus under conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in permanent disfigurement or cause infections or other irreparable injury to health and that said device should not be used to remove hair from cancerous or syphilitic lesions, pigmented moles, or other areas showing local pathological conditions.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to its device or apparatus, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and advertisements are true and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's said device or apparatus.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, answer of the respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Robert S. Hall, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and exceptions filed thereto, briefs filed herein and oral arguments of counsel, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act;

It is ordered, That the respondent, D. J. Mahler Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of its device or apparatus designated as "Mahler Electrolysis Apparatus" or "Mahler Method," or of any other device or apparatus of substantially similar composition or construction or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of the United States mails or by any means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference, that respondent's device "Mahler Electrolysis Apparatus" or "Mahler Method" is a safe device for the electrolytic removal of superfluous hair from the human body by individual self-application in the home or that said device can be operated with ordinary care and skill, or which advertisement fails to reveal that the use of said device or apparatus by persons not trained in the technique of removing superfluous hair from the human body by electrolysis may result in permanent disfigurement, cause infections or other irreparable injury to health, and that said device should not be used to remove hair from cancerous or syphilitic lesions, pigmented moles or other areas showing local pathological conditions.

2. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said device or apparatus designated "Mahler Electrolysis Apparatus" or "Mahler Method," which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof or which fails to reveal that the use of said device or apparatus by persons not trained in the technique of removing superfluous hair from the human body by electrolysis may result in permanent disfigurement, cause infections or other irreparable injury to health, and that said device should not be used to remove hair from cancerous or syphilitic lesions, pigmented moles or other areas showing local pathological conditions.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 10 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing, stating whether it intends to comply with this order and, if so, the manner and form in which it intends to comply, and that within 60 days after service upon it of this order, said respondent shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

BURRY BISCUIT CORPORATION AND TASTY BUD BISCUIT COMPANY, INC.

Docket 4374. Complaint, Nov. 9, 1940—Decision, June 11, 1941

Where two corporations engaged in manufacture of bakery products, including crackers, and in interstate sale and distribution thereof to purchasers, including retail stores—

(a) Caused certain of their cracker products, called "Bisc-O-Bits," to be packaged, offered for sale and sold in cardboard containers bearing in conspicuous type, visible to shoppers, the statement "Average 90 Crackers," when in fact said packages did not contain or average 90 crackers, but contained substantially less; and

(b) Made use of practice of slack filling, in that aforesaid containers were substantially larger than reasonably required to package the 10 ounces of crackers actually placed therein, and, when offered and sold to purchasing public, were not filled to capacity, but, as aforesaid, contained substantially less;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the buying public into the false belief that aforesaid packages contained 90 crackers, or more, and that they were filled to capacity, and into purchase of such crackers in reliance upon such erroneous belief, and with further effect of placing in the hands of retail sellers the means of deceiving members of the buying public;

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the injury and prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Jay L. Jackson for the Commission.

I

COMPLAINT[1]

[1] The Commission on April 30, 1941 granted request of respondents to substitute parties and amend complaint and granted leave to file substitute answer by the following order:

This matter coming on to be heard upon the request of Burry Biscuit Corporation and Tasty Bud Biscuit Co., Inc., that they be substituted as parties respondent in lieu and instead of Burry Biscuit Co., Inc., and Tastybud Biscuit Co., Inc., respectively, and that the complaint be considered and taken as amended by the substitution of the names of said petitioners in lieu of the names appearing in said complaint, and requesting leave to withdraw their answer filed herein on November 27, 1940, and to substitute in lieu thereof their answer dated January 22, 1941, and annexed to said request; and it appearing to the Commission that said petitioners Burry Biscuit Corporation and Tasty Bud Biscuit Co., Inc., corporations, have heretofore been duly served in this proceeding, that they are proper parties respondent, having been erroneously named in the complaint as Burry Biscuit Co., Inc., and Tastybud Biscuit Co., Inc., respectively, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises.

Inc., a corporation, and Tastybud Biscuit Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Burry Biscuit Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business located at 925 Newark Avenue, in the city of Elizabeth, State of New Jersey. Said respondent also maintains a branch office and plant in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

Respondent Tastybud Biscuit Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business located at 925 Newark Avenue, in the city of Elizabeth, State of New Jersey. Said respondent is a wholly owned and controlled subsidiary of respondent Burry Biscuit Co., Inc.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for several years last past have been, engaged in the business of manufacturing bakery products including crackers, and in the sale thereof in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said respondents cause said products, when sold, to be transported from their places of business in the States of New Jersey and Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the States of New Jersey and Illinois, and to purchasers located in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, in the course of which commerce respondents sell and have sold their said products to retail stores and other resale outlets.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, respondents have offered and offer for sale, and have sold and sell, crackers under the brand name "Bisc-O-Bits Crackers," packaged in a cardboard container which is sealed and wrapped in wax paper. Imprinted and labeled on the visible surface of said containers and wrappers, among other printed statements, in conspicuous type and

It is ordered, That said request be granted and that Burry Biscuit Corporation and Tasty Bud Biscuit Co., Inc., corporations, be, and they hereby are, substituted as parties respondent in this proceeding in lieu and instead of Burry Biscuit Co., Inc., and Tastybud Biscuit Co., Inc., respectively, and that the complaint herein be considered as if so amended;

It is further ordered, That the respondents' request for leave to withdraw their answer filed herein on November 27, 1940, and to file in lieu thereof their answer dated January 22, 1941, and annexed to said request, be, and the same hereby is, granted.

visible to the eye of shoppers and members of the purchasing public, appears the following statement:

Average 90 Crackers.

The foregoing statement and representation, as caused by respondents to appear on the containers and wrappers of its Bisc-O-Bits Crackers, packaged as aforesaid, is false and misleading in that the said packages did not, and do not, contain 90 crackers, nor do they average 90 crackers to a box. In truth and in fact, the said packages contain substantially less than 90 crackers to a box.

The aforesaid cardboard containers measure 6⅜ by 3 by 8⅝ inches and are of a capacity and size in excess of that reasonably required to package 10 ounces of said crackers, the quantity of crackers actually placed therein by respondents. Said containers, when offered for sale and sold to the purchasing public, are not filled to capacity, and the quantity of crackers contained therein is substantially less than the capacity of said containers. The practice of using oversize containers is known in the trade and generally as "slack filling" and has the force and effect of misleading or deceiving members of the purchasing public with respect to the quantity of product contained in such packages.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents have had, and have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of purchasers and prospective purchasers, members of the buying public, into the false and erroneous belief that the aforesaid packages contain 90 crackers, or more, and that said containers are filled to capacity and contain the quantity of crackers indicated by the capacity of said containers, and into the purchase of said crackers in reliance upon such erroneous belief. The said practice further places in the hands of retail sellers the means whereby to mislead and deceive members of the buying public.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on November 9, 1940, issued, and on November 12, 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Burry Biscuit Corporation and Tasty Bud Biscuit Co., Inc., charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission, by an order herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and said substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Burry Biscuit Corporation is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business located at 925 Newark Avenue, in the city of Elizabeth, State of New Jersey. Said respondent also maintains a branch office and plant in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

Respondent Tasty Bud Biscuit Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business located at 925 Newark Avenue, in the city of Elizabeth, State of New Jersey. Said respondent Tasty Bud Biscuit Co., Inc., is a subsidiary of, and wholly owned and controlled by, respondent Burry Biscuit Corporation.

PAR. 2. Respondents now are, and for the past several years have been, engaged in the business of manufacturing bakery products, including crackers, and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia, and have maintained and maintain a constant course of trade in said products in said commerce. Respondents have caused and cause said products, when sold, to be transported from their aforesaid places of business in the States of New Jersey and Illinois to purchasers thereof, inclusive of retail stores, located in States of the United States other than the States of New Jersey and Illinois, and to such purchasers in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business prior to August 1940, respondents caused certain of their cracker products, called "Bisc-O-Bits," to be packaged, offered for sale and sold in cardboard containers wrapped and sealed in wax paper, and bearing on the surface thereof, in conspicuous type, visible to the eye of shoppers and members of the purchasing public, the following statement:

Average 90 Crackers.

The foregoing statement and representation, as caused by respondents to appear on the packages referred to, was in fact false and misleading for the reason that said packages did not contain 90 crackers and did not average 90 crackers each. In truth, said packages contained substantially less than 90 crackers.

The aforesaid cardboard containers measure 6⅜ by 3 by 8⅝ inches and are of a capacity and size in excess of that reasonably required to package 10 ounces of said crackers, the quantity of crackers actually placed therein by respondents. Said containers, when offered for sale and sold to the purchasing public, are not filled to capacity, and the quantity of crackers contained therein is substantially less than the capacity of said containers. The practice of using over-size containers is known in the trade and generally as "slack filling" and has the force and effect of misleading or deceiving members of the purchasing public with respect to the quantity of product contained in such packages.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents have had, and have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the buying public into the false and erroneous belief that the aforesaid containers or packages contain 90 crackers, or more, and that such packages are filled to capacity and contain the quantity of crackers indicated by the capacity or size thereof, and into the purchase of such crackers in reliance upon such erroneous belief. The said practice further places in the hands of retail sellers the means whereby to mislead and deceive members of the buying public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, Burry Biscuit Corporation and Tasty Bud Biscuit Co., Inc., are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondents, Burry Biscuit Corporation and Tasty Bud Biscuit Co., Inc., corporations, their officers, representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of their bakery products, inclusive of crackers, in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that the number or quantity of any of said products contained in any container or package in which the same is offered for sale or sold is greater than the number or quantity of such product actually contained or placed therein.

2. Offering for sale or selling any of said products in a container or package which is substantially larger in size or capacity than that required for packaging the quantity of product contained therein.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

HELEN HARRISON CANDIES, INC.

Docket 4467. Complaint, Feb. 21, 1941—Decision, June 11, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture and the competitive interstate sale and distribution of candy, including certain assortments which were so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to consumers; a typical assortment including thirty boxes of candy and a punchboard for use in sale thereof under a plan, as thereon explained, by which a purchaser paid one to five cents or nothing for a punch depending on the last digit of the number of the slip he secured from the 500-hole punchboard, and whether he received a box of candy or nothing for his money was similarly determined;

Sold such assortments to wholesalers, jobbers, and retailers, by whom, as direct or indirect purchasers, they were exposed and sold to the purchasing public, in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, involving game of chance to procure candy at price much less than normal retail price thereof; and thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products, contrary to the established public policy of the United States Government; and in competition with many who are unwilling to use such or other method contrary to public policy, and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by its said sales plan and the element of chance involved therein and were thereby induced to buy and sell its candy in preference to that of its said competitors, whereby trade was unfairly diverted to it from such competitors and substantial injury was done to competition:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and its competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr., for the Commission.
Latimer, Donovan & Brown, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Helen Harrison Candies, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Helen Harrison Candies, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 325 North Wells Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now and for more than one year last past has been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said candy, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the city of Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than Illinois and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than six months last past a course of trade by respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment includes 30 boxes of candy and a punchboard. Appearing on the face of the punchboard is the following legend:

Said candy is distributed to the purchasing public in accordance with the foregoing legend and in the following manner:

The punchboard contains 500 punches, each concealing a number; said numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. Whether a purchaser pays 1, 2, 3, 4, or 5 cents, or receives his chance free, is determined by the last digit of the number of the slip punched by him from the punchboard, and whether he receives a box of candy or nothing for his money is determined by the number appearing on the slip punched by him from said board. Persons who qualify by receiving one of the designated numbers receive a box of candy. Persons not obtaining one of the designated numbers receive nothing. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch selection has been made and a particular punch separated from the board. The candy is thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by chance, and the amount to be paid for each punch or purchase is also determined wholly by chance.

The respondent furnishes and has furnished various punchboard and candy assortments for use in the sale and distribution of its candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such punchboards and candy assortments are similar to the one herein described, and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's candy directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its candy and the sales of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure candy at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its candy and in the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on February 21, 1941, issued and on February 24, 1941, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent Helen Harrison Candies, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On March 31, 1941, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Helen Harrison Candies, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 325 North Wells Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now and for more than six months last past has been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said candy, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the city of Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than Illinois and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 6 months last past a course of trade by respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment includes 30 boxes of candy and a punchboard. Appearing on the face of the punchboard is the following legend:

Said candy is distributed to the purchasing public in accordance with the foregoing legend, and in the following manner:

The punchboard contains 500 punches, each concealing a number; said numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. Whether a purchaser pays 1, 2, 3, 4, or 5 cents, or receives his chance free, is determined by the last digit of the number of the slip punched by him from the punchboard, and whether he receives a box of candy or nothing for his money is determined by the number appearing on the slip punched by him from said board. Persons who qualify by receiving one of the designated numbers receive a box of candy. Persons not obtaining one of the designated numbers receive nothing. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch selection has been made and a particular punch separated from the board. The candy is thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by chance, and the amount to be paid for each punch or purchase is also determined wholly by chance.

The respondent furnishes and has furnished various punchboard and candy assortments for use in the sale and distribution of its candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such punchboards and candy assortments are similar to the one herein described, and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's candy, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its candy and the sales of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure candy at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its candy and in the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent, Helen Harrison Candies, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing candy or any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such candy or other merchandise to the general public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of others, punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices either with assortments of candy or other merchandise or separately, which said punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such candy or other merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

SANDERS MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Docket 3526. Complaint, Aug. 4, 1938—Decision, June 12, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture and the competitive interstate sale and distribution of advertising novelties, rulers, calendars, fans, flyswatters, punchboards, and various other articles—

Furnished purchasers various plans and devices which involved the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by means of which said merchandise was distributed to the ultimate consumers wholly by lot or chance, and included, as typical, combination of one of the aforesaid articles of merchandise together with a punchboard for use under a sales plan providing that the purchaser of a "punch" who punched certain concealed number, received the article without additional payment, and purchasers of all other punches received nothing for their 5 cents except the "punch"; placing thereby in the hands of others various devices involving games or schemes of chance for distribution of its said merchandise to the ultimate consumer wholly by lot or chance, contrary to established public policy of the United States Government;

With result that many persons were attracted by aforesaid sales method and the element of chance involved therein and were thereby induced to purchase its merchandise in preference to that of its competitors who were unwilling to and did not use any such methods, and trade was unfairly diverted from them to it:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and its competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, Mr. John W. Addison, Mr. Miles J. Furnas and Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiners.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Sanders Manufacturing Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Tennessee with its principal office and place of business located at 122–126 Fourth Avenue, South, in the city of Nashville, State of Tennessee. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing various articles of novelty merchandise, including pencils, knife sharpeners, billhooks, pocket mirrors, key tags, and sand glasses. Respondent also sells and distributes knives and watches together with various punchboards and push cards. All of the above-described merchandise is sold and distributed by respondent for resale or distribution to the purchasing public. Respondent's customers are located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and the respondent causes its merchandise, when sold, to be transported from one of its places of business in the State of Tennessee or from the place of manufacture to the purchasers thereof in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, at their respective addresses. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent in soliciting the sale of, and in selling and distributing certain of its products in commerce, has furnished or sold various punchboards or push cards which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is or may be or is designed to be distributed to the ultimate purchasers or consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance.

The punchboards or push cards, as sold or distributed by the respondent, have attached thereto watches or pocket knives and have printed on the top of said punchboards or push cards various statements or legends showing the manner or sales plan by which said articles of merchandise are to be sold or distributed to the purchasing or consuming public. Sales are generally 5 cents each and said punchboards or push cards have a number of holes or partially perforated disks and each purchaser is entitled to a punch or push from said punchboard or push card, and when a punch or push is made a printed slip or disk is separated and a number disclosed. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the punch or push completed. Certain specified numbers entitle purchasers to an article of merchandise. Persons obtaining numbers not so specified receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of making a punch or push from said board or card. The articles of merchandise attached to said board are offered for distribution and distributed to the public in accordance with the above described sales plan and the merchandise attached to said punchboards or push cards is thus distributed to the consuming or purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase or procure respondent's said merchandise and punchboards or push cards either directly or indirectly from respondent expose said devices and the merchandise attached thereto to the purchasing public and sell or distribute such articles of merchandise in accordance with the above described sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries, gift enterprises, or games of chance in the sale of said merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. Such sales plan has the tendency and capacity to induce the consuming or purchasing public to purchase respondent's merchandise in preference to similar merchandise offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure said articles of merchandise. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of its merchandise and the sale of its merchandise by and through the use thereof is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method has the tendency to unfairly hinder competition. Many persons, firms and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent as above described are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of merchandise similar to that distributed by respondent are attracted by respondent's said sales plan or method and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described and are thereby induced to purchase said merchandise from respondent in preference to similar merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or a similar method. The use of said method by respondent has the capacity and tendency, because of said game of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise, unfairly to divert to respondent trade and custom from its competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent or similar method, and has the capacity and tendency to deprive the purchasing public of free competition in said merchandise.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 4th day of August, A. D. 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Sanders Manufacturing Co., a corporation, charging it with unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding. No testimony or evidence was offered on behalf of the respondent. The testimony and other evidence introduced were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, the testimony and other evidence and the report of the trial examiners thereon, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Sanders Manufacturing Co. is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Tennessee with its principal office and place of business located at Nashville, Tenn., and it also operates two branches at Shelbyville, Tenn.

PAR. 2. Respondent is engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing advertising novelties, rulers, calendars, fans, flyswatters, punchboards and various other articles.

PAR. 3. Respondent causes its said merchandise described in paragraph 2, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its said places of business to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States at their respective points of location.

PAR. 4. Respondent in the course and conduct of its business as set forth in paragraphs 2 and 3 hereof now is, and has been, in competition with other corporations, individuals, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 5. Respondent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise furnished, and now furnishes, to purchasers thereof various plans and devices which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by means of which said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumers wholly by lot or chance. Typical of the methods used by respondent is the following:

One of respondent's combinations consists of one of the articles of merchandise mentioned in paragraph 2 hereof, and a punchboard. This punchboard has 100 covered tubes, for the right to punch which a charge of 5 cents is usually made. Each of these tubes contains a ticket which is effectively concealed until the cover of the tube has been punched. On each of the tickets is printed a number, and one of the numbers entitles the purchaser to receive the article of merchandise as a prize, without any additional payment. The purchasers of all the other punches received nothing for their investment except the right to punch one of the tubes.

Other like or similar devices, differing only in detail, are used by respondent in disposing of its merchandise.

PAR. 6. The respondent, by its sales methods hereinbefore described, places in the hands of others various devices to be used in the distribution of its merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, and by the use of such devices said merchandise is distributed to the ultimate consumer wholly by lot or chance. Respondent's said sales methods are contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 7. Many persons have been and are attracted by the sales methods employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise, and by the element of chance involved therein, and have been thereby induced to purchase respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale by respondent's competitors who do not use the same or a similar method.

PAR. 8. Respondent, for some time last past, has been in competition with other manufacturers and distributors of merchandise similar to that mentioned in paragraph 2 hereof, who are engaged in commerce between and among various States of the United States, and who are unwilling to use, and do not use, in the distribution of their merchandise any method involving a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme; and as a result of respondent's said methods, trade has been unfairly diverted from such competitors of the respondent.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and are contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States of America, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, and the report of the trial examiners thereon, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent Sanders Manufacturing Co. has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Sanders Manufacturing Co., a corporation, its officers, directors, representatives, agents, and employees, jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of advertising novelties, rulers, calendars, fans, flyswatters, punchboards or any other merchandise in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commisison Act, shall forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of such merchandise to the public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices either with assortments of merchandise or separately which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

FRED P. WEISSMAN, INC.

Docket 3532. Complaint, Aug. 9, 1938—Decision, June 12, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of women's coats and other garments—

Caused to be attached to its products certain labels carrying legend "100 percent CAMEL'S HAIR," and thereby represented that such products were composed entirely of said hair, when said coats in fact contained only about 30 percent of camel's hair, preferred by substantial portion of purchasing public over those made of other fibers or materials, with remaining fibers consisting of wool and mohair in about equal proportions;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the composition of said coats, and of inducing it, as a result of the erroneous belief so engendered, to purchase its products in preference to those of its competitors, and of thereby diverting trade unfairly to it from said competitors, many of whom do not misrepresent the constituent materials of their products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan, Mr. Miles J. Furnas, and Mr. Lewis C. Russell, trial examiners.

Mr. John R. Phillips, Jr., for the Commission.

Mr. David Leavenworth, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by the said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Fred P. Weissman, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Fred P. Weissman, Inc., is a corporation created by and existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal offices and place of business located at 270 West Thirty-Eighth Street, in the city of New York, State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 4 years last past has been engaged in the business of distributing and selling a line of sport and dress coats and garments. Respondent causes said coats and garments when sold to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to its customers located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said coats and garments sold and distributed by it in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business respondent is in active and substantial competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of coats and garments in commerce between and among the various States of the United Sates and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said coats and garments, respondent has made, by means of labels affixed and attached to its coats and garments, and by means of suggesting and assisting in the phrasing and wording of advertisements used by the retailers of said coats and garments, which are inserted in newspapers having a general interstate circulation, many representations concerning the character, quality, nature, fiber, and fabric of its coats and garments. Among said representations made by respondent are the following:

"100% CAMEL'S HAIR"

"SPORTLEIGH"
Reg.

The above label depicts a crown between the words "Master" and "Camel."

"CAMEL

In the above label the word "Camel" is in large cap type letters and the words "and Wool" are in small letters, not caps. There is depicted between the word "Camel" and the words "and Wool" a pictorial representation of palm trees, pyramids, and a man leading a camel.

NEW HUNCHES ON THE GOOD OLD CAMEL—

Slip on a Coat—see how light it is! Roll it up in a ball—see how fluffy it is! We've mixed Camel's Hair with llama and wool in a mixture that is soft as baby's bunting. We've made it into good, roomy coats. What's more, we have lined them with Earl-Glo DeLuxe Rayon Satin Acetate—long wearing enough for all you college girls, business girls, chauffeuring-suburbanites and others who will live in them!

SLIP ONE ON—

See how light it is. That's because the fabric is a mixture of Camel's Hair with llama and wool (in about equal proportions) that gives ample warmth without an ounce of extra weight.

All of said statements, together with similar statements appearing on the labels affixed to respondent's coats and garments, and the aforesaid advertising matter, purport to be descriptive of the character, quality, nature, fiber, and fabric of respondent's coats and garments. By use of said labels affixed to its coats and garments, and of the aforesaid advertising matter, and through other means, the respondent, through the statements and representations herein set out, and other statements of similar import and effect, represents that its coats and garments are either in whole or in predominant part camel's hair, and that its coats and garments have the warmth, long-wearing qualities, and lightness in weight of genuine camel's hair coats and garments.

PAR. 5. The representations made by respondent with respect to the character, quality, nature, fiber, and fabric of its coats and garments, are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact the coats and garments of respondent are not in whole or in predominant part of camel's hair, and do not have the warmth, long-wearing qualities, and lightness in weight of genuine camel's hair coats and garments.

The true fact is that respondent's coats and garments contain but approximately 20 percent genuine camel's hair.

The manufacturers, distributors, and sellers of fabrics and garments made therefrom have generally adopted and followed, and they now follow, the common practice and custom of truthfully disclosing the various fibers and materials out of which such fabrics and garments are made and, in the case of mixed goods, of disclosing each fiber present therein by naming each constituent fiber or materials in the order of its predominance by weight. This custom and practice on the part of said manufacturers, distributors, and sellers of fabrics and garments made therefrom is understood and relied upon by the purchasing public to a considerable extent in its purchase of fabrics and garments.

Coats and garments made from camel's hair or camel's wool are generally believed by many retail dealers and members of the general purchasing public to be more desirable than garments made from any other material. Coats and garments made from genuine camel's hair or camel's wool are light in weight and are warm, and possess other qualities which make them more desirable than other similar garments not made from camel's hair or camel's wool. Consequently, there is a preference on the part of the purchasing public for purchasing garments that are in truth and in fact made up of camel's hair or camel's wool, or are made up in predominant part of camel's hair or camel's wool.

PAR. 6. There are, among respondent's competitors, many who manufacture, distribute, and sell coats and garments who do not in any way misrepresent the quality or character of their respective coats and garments.

PAR. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by respondent in designating or describing its coats and garments, as hereinabove set-out, were and are calculated to, and have had and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous beliefs that all of said representations are true and that said coats and garments are made from fabrics composed wholly and entirely of camel's hair or are made from fabrics made up of camel's hair in predominant part together with other wool in less than a predominant part, and into the purchase of a substantial volume of respondent's coats and garments on account of said belief so induced, with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling coats and garments, who truthfully represent the quality and character of their respective coats and garments and the material or fabrics from which they are made. As a consequence thereof, injury has been done and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on August 9, 1938, issued, and subsequently served, its complaint in this proceeding, charging the respondent, Fred P. Weissman, Inc., a corporation, with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act. Respondent filed its answer to the complaint on August 26, 1938. Thereafter testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by John R. Phillips, Jr., attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by David Leavenworth, attorney for the respondent, before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and the testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer of the respondent, testimony and other evidence, the report of the trial examiners thereon and briefs of attorney for the Commission and attorney for the respondent, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that the proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Fred P. Weissman, Inc., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business at 270 West Thirty-eighth Street, New York, N. Y. It is now and for more than 5 years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of women's coats and other garments. Respondent sells its products to numerous retail dealers located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and respondent causes its products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to such purchasers. Respondent maintains a course of trade in its products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the sale and distribution of its products respondent is in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, and for the purpose of furthering the sale of its products, the respondent has caused to be attached to its products certain labels purporting to designate and describe the constituent fibers or materials of which such products are made. One of such labels carried the legend "100% CAMEL'S HAIR." Through the use of this legend the respondent represented that the garments so labeled were composed entirely of camel's hair.

PAR. 4. The Commission finds that this representation was false and misleading. The garments labeled "100% CAMEL'S HAIR" were not composed entirely of camel's hair, but in fact contained only about 30 percent camel's hair, the remaining fibers being wool and mohair in about equal proportions.

PAR. 5. The Commission further finds that there is a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for coats made of camel's hair over coats made of other fibers or materials.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the representation herein set forth has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the fibers or materials of which respondent's products are made. As a result of the erroneous and mistaken belief so engendered by the respondent, a substantial portion of the purchasing public has been induced to purchase, and has purchased, respondent's products in preference to the products of respondent's competitors. Thereby, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors, many of whom do not misrepresent the constituent fibers or materials of which their products are made.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, the report of the trial examiners thereon and briefs filed by counsel for the Commission and for respondent (no request for oral argument having been made) and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent, Fred P. Weissman, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its coats and other garments in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the term "100% Camel's Hair", or any other term of similar import or meaning, to designate, describe or refer to any fabric or product which is not composed entirely of camel's hair.

2. Representing in any manner that respondent's products contain camel's hair in greater quantity than is actually the case.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That no provisions contained in this order shall be construed as authorizing or permitting, after July 14, 1941, the labeling of any wool product in any manner other than in strict conformity with the provisions of the Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939.

IN THE MATTER OF

GRAND RAPIDS EXCHANGE, INC., ALSO TRADING AS DENIS FURNITURE COMPANY

Docket 3703. Complaint, Feb. 8, 1939—Decision, June 12, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in wholesale distribution of household furniture at Brooklyn under its corporate name, and in retail sale thereof under separate trade name at New York City, in interstate sale of its said products, in competition with many who thus sell and distribute household furniture which was manufactured and had its origin in the city of Grand Rapids, Mich., and others who sell and distribute such furniture which was neither made nor originated there and who do not misrepresent their business, the quality or the origin or manufacture of their said products or that they own or conduct a factory or factories where such furniture is made—

Represented and implied that its said household furniture was manufactured at Grand Rapids, Mich., that its places of business were exchanges or headquarters or central offices for the Grand Rapids furniture industry, of which it was the authorized agency, and that it sold and distributed only Grand Rapids furniture made in its own factory at Grand Rapids, Mich., through use of its corporate name, together with the words "Factory and Show Rooms", on its letterheads, invoices and other printed matter, and prominent display on conspicuous signs at its aforesaid place of business of the statements "THE ORIGINAL GRAND RAPIDS EXC. INC. FURNITURE Main Show Rooms," "FIRST visit GRAND RAPIDS FURNITURE EXC. INC. SALES ROOMS," and "Authorized Agent for GRAND RAPIDS EXCH. Show Rooms," and through statements of its officers, agents and employees, that it was "The only authorized agent in New York City handling Grand Rapids Furniture," that it was "One of the two places in New York where a dealer can get Grand Rapids Furniture," and that "We are the real McCoy because we have our factory in Grand Rapids, Mich., and the name of it is the Grand Rapids Furniture Company";

The facts being it dealt and traded extensively in household furniture of other origin and manufacture, and sold or distributed only a small portion of furniture made at Grand Rapids, Mich.—the furniture products of which are preferred and bought by a substantial number of the purchasing public—and it did not own, operate or control a factory, was not the headquarters or central office or exchange for the Grand Rapids Furniture industry, was not an authorized agent thereof or, as aforesaid indicated, a factory or headquarters of such furniture, from which a substantial portion of said public prefers to purchase as securing advantages not ordinarily obtainable through middlemen and others who do not deal exclusively in such furniture;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public, and of causing a number of members of such public mistakenly and erroneously to believe that said representations and implications were true, whereby trade in commerce was diverted unfairly to it from its competitors; to their injury and that of the public:

Held, That such acts and practices, as above set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas and Mr. John W. Addison, trial examiners.

Mr. John R. Phillips, Jr., for the Commission.

Mr. Nathan R. Shapiro, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Grand Rapids Exchange, Inc., a corporation, also trading as "Denis Furniture Company," hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said Act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Grand Rapids Exchange, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its offices and principal place of business located at 55 Hope Street in the city of Brooklyn, State of New York, and also trades under the style and name of "Denis Furniture Company" at 2182 Third Avenue in the city of New York, State of New York. Said respondent is engaged in the wholesale distribution of household furniture under its corporate name, at Brooklyn, and in the retail sale thereof under its trade name of "Denis Furniture Company" at New York City, as aforesaid:

Respondent caused and causes its household furniture, when sold, to be transported from its places of business in New York and Brooklyn, in the State of New York, to the purchasers thereof located in the States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent now maintains, and for more than three years last past has maintained, a course of trade in household furniture, distributed and sold by it in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as aforesaid, the respondent is, and for more than three years last past has been, in competition with corporations, individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of household furniture, in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Among the competitors of respondent are many corporations, individuals and partnerships who sell and distribute, in said commerce, household furniture, manufactured and having its origin in the city of Grand Rapids, Mich., and others selling and distributing household furniture not having been manufactured nor having its origin in said city of Grand Rapids, who do not misrepresent their business, the quality, nor the origin of the manufacture of their household furniture, or that they own or conduct a factory or factories where such household furniture is manufactured.

PAR. 3. In the course of its aforesaid business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its household furniture by members of the purchasing public, respondent uses, and has used, for the last three years, its corporate name, and prominently displays certain conspicuous signs on its principal place of business in the city of Brooklyn, and also at its retail store in the city of New York, the arrangement and the wording of the signs being as follows:

Respondent also makes oral representations to its purchasers and prospective purchasers through its officers, agents and employees as being "The only authorized agent in New York City handling Grand Rapids Furniture"; also that it is "One of the two places in New York where a dealer can get Grand Rapids Furniture"; that "We are the real McCoy because we have our factory in Grand Rapids, Mich., and the name of it is the Grand Rapids Furniture Company."

Respondent also uses its corporate name, to wit: "Grand Rapids Exchange, Inc.", to appear variously on its letterheads, invoices and other printed matter, accompanied with the words and phrases "Factory and Showrooms," which are used and circulated by the respondent through the United States mails and otherwise to its customers and prospective customers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. The city of Grand Rapids, Mich., has been for many years, and is now, a large and important center of the furniture industry in the United States, which fact is generally known to the public throughout the United States, and furniture manufactured in said city of Grand Rapids has for many years enjoyed, and now enjoys, a widespread popularity, reputation, good will and demand throughout the United States as being furniture of dependable quality and other desirable characteristics.

PAR. 5. By means and in the manner aforesaid, respondent represents and implies that said household furniture is manufactured at Grand Rapids, Mich.; that its places of business are exchanges, implying that its said places of business are headquarters or central offices for the Grand Rapids furniture industry; that it is the authorized agency for the Grand Rapids furniture industry; that only Grand Rapids furniture is sold and distributed by it; that such household furniture is manufactured in its own factory at Grand Rapids, Mich., and that it controls or operates its own factory.

By reason of the widespread reputation, popularity and good will among the public throughout the United States enjoyed by the aforesaid furniture industry of Grand Rapids, Mich., and its products, there are among the members of the purchasing public a substantial number who prefer to purchase household furniture manufactured and having its origin in said city of Grand Rapids, and to purchase the same from a factory or a headquarters of the Grand Rapids furniture industry, believing that in so doing they secure better prices, superior quality and other advantages not ordinarily obtainable when purchasing through middlemen and others who do not deal exclusively in Grand Rapids furniture.

Respondent sells or distributes only a small portion of household furniture originating and manufactured at Grand Rapids, Mich. It does not own, operate, or control a factory, and is not the headquarters or central offices nor exchange for the Grand Rapids furniture industry. Respondent is not an authorized agent handling Grand Rapids furniture, but deals and trades extensively in household furniture of other origin, make, and manufacture.

PAR. 6. Respondent's acts and practices, as hereinabove alleged, have had, and do have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public, and have caused, and do cause, a number of members of the purchasing public mistakenly and erroneously to believe that said representations and implications are true and that the respondent's places of business as aforesaid are actually the New York headquarters, central office and exchanges of the Grand Rapids furniture industry; that the respondent is the authorized agency for Grand Rapids furniture; that respondent deals exclusively in furniture manufactured in Grand Rapids, Mich., and that it owns, operates and controls its own factory or factories. As a result thereof, trade in said commerce has been, and is, diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors to the injury of said competitors and to the injury of the public.

PAR. 7. The acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on February 8, 1939, issued, and on February 9, 1939, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Grand Rapids Exchange, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Grand Rapids Exchange, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its offices and principal place of business located at 55 Hope Street in the city of Brooklyn, State of New York, and also trades under the style and name of Denis Furniture Co. at 2182 Third Avenue in the city of New York, State of New York. Said respondent is engaged in the wholesale distribution of household furniture under its corporate name, at Brooklyn, and in the retail sale thereof under its trade name of Denis Furniture Company at New York City, as aforesaid.

Respondent caused and causes its household furniture, when sold, to be transported from its places of business in New York and Brooklyn, in the State of New York, to the purchasers thereof located in the States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent now maintains, and for more than three years last past has maintained, a course of trade in household furniture, distributed and sold by it in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as aforesaid, the respondent is, and for more than three years last past has been, in competition with corporations, individuals, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of household furniture, in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Among the competitors of respondent are many corporations, individuals and partnerships who sell and distribute, in said commerce, household furniture, manufactured and having its origin in the city of Grand Rapids, Mich., and others selling and distributing household furniture not having been manufactured nor having its origin in said city of Grand Rapids, who do not misrepresent their business, the quality, nor the origin of the manufacture of their household furniture, or that they own or conduct a factory or factories where such household furniture is manufactured.

PAR. 3. In the course of its aforesaid business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its household furniture by members of the purchasing public, respondent uses, and has used, for the last three years, its corporate name, and prominently displays certain conspicuous signs on its principal place of business in the city of Brooklyn, and also at its retail store in the city of New York, the arrangement and the wording of the signs being as follows:

Respondent also makes oral representations to its purchasers and prospective purchasers through its officers, agents and employees as being "The only authorized agent in New York City handling Grand Rapids Furniture"; also that it is "One of the two places in New York where a dealer can get Grand Rapids Furniture"; that "We are the real McCoy because we have our factory in Grand Rapids, Mich., and the name of it is the Grand Rapids Furniture Company."

Respondent also uses its corporate name, to wit: "Grand Rapids Exchange, Inc.," to appear variously on its letterheads, invoices and other printed matter, accompanied with the words and phrases "Factory and Showrooms," which are used and circulated by the respondent through the United States mails and otherwise to its customers and prospective customers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. The city of Grand Rapids, Mich., has been for many years, and is now, a large and important center of the furniture industry in the United States, which fact is generally known to the public throughout the United States, and furniture manufactured in said city of Grand Rapids has for many years enjoyed, and now enjoys, a widespread popularity, reputation, good will and demand throughout the United States as being furniture of dependable quality and other desirable characteristics.

PAR. 5. By means and in the manner aforesaid, respondent represents and implies that said household furniture is manufactured at Grand Rapids, Mich.; that its places of business are exchanges, implying that its said places of business are headquarters or central offices for the Grand Rapids furniture industry; that it is the authorized agency for the Grand Rapids furniture industry; that only Grand Rapids furniture is sold and distributed by it; that such household furniture is manufactured in its own factory at Grand Rapids, Mich., and that it controls or operates its own factory.

By reason of the widespread reputation, popularity and good will among the public throughout the United States enjoyed by the aforesaid furniture industry of Grand Rapids, Mich., and its products, there are among the members of the purchasing public a substantial number who prefer to purchase household furniture manufactured and having its origin in said city of Grand Rapids, and to purchase the same from a factory or a headquarters of the Grand Rapids furniture industry, believing that in so doing they secure better prices, superior quality and other advantages not ordinarily obtainable when purchasing through middlemen and others who do not deal exclusively in Grand Rapids furniture.

Respondent sells or distributes only a small portion of household furniture originating and manufactured at Grand Rapids, Mich. It does not own, operate or control a factory, and is not the headquarters or central offices nor exchange for the Grand Rapids furniture industry. Respondent is not an authorized agent handling Grand Rapids furniture, but deals and trades extensively in household furniture of other origin, make and manufacture.

PAR. 6. Respondent's acts and practices, as hereinabove alleged, have had, and do have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public, and have caused, and do cause, a number of members of the purchasing public mistakenly and erroneously to believe that said representations and implications are true and that the respondent's places of business as aforesaid are actually the New York headquarters, central office and exchanges of the Grand Rapids furniture industry; that the respondent is the authorized agency for Grand Rapids furniture; that respondent deals exclusively in furniture manufactured in Grand Rapids, Michigan, and that it owns, operates, and controls its own factory or factories. As a result thereof, trade in said commerce has been, and is, diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors to the injury of said competitors and to the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Grand Rapids Exchange, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of furniture in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the words "Grand Rapids" or "Grand Rapids Exchange," or words or terms of similar import or meaning, as a corporate or trade name or as a part of its corporate or trade name, or in any other manner, unless all furniture sold by it is manufactured in the city of Grand Rapids, Mich.;

2. Representing, directly or indirectly, that it is the authorized agency or is the central office or headquarters for the Grand Rapids Furniture industry;

3. Representing, directly or indirectly, that only furniture made in Grand Rapids, Mich., is sold or distributed by it;

4. Using the word "Factory" or otherwise representing through the use of any other word or term of similar import or meaning, or through any other means or device, or in any manner, that respondent is the manufacturer of the furniture sold by it, unless and until respondent actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory wherein such furniture is manufactured.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

THOMSEN-KING & COMPANY, INC., WINSHIP CORPORATION, JAMES M. WOODMAN, JESSE L. STEWART, ET AL.

Docket 3998. Complaint, Jan. 24, 1940—Decision, June 12, 1941

Where two corporations, which were created to continue the business of engaging in prize contests as a means of merchandising cosmetics, and which were the most recent of 16 companies organized, discontinued, or dissolved, and reorganized under the plan below set forth, over a period of some 10 years; and numerous individuals cooperating with one another, directly or indirectly, in conducting prize contests through such contest companies, which they organized, and including among their number (1) 10 partners operating "The Committee for General Investments," who, together with other investors, financed and aided the financing of one or more "prize contests" as hereinafter described, (2) a number of partners or associates, who conducted "prize contests" under various trade names such as "Woodman-Stewart Advertising Agency," and prepared advertisements used in connection therewith, and (3) some 20 others engaged, at some time during period concerned, directly or indirectly, in financing, operating or managing one or more of the aforesaid contests;

Acting in furtherance of a common plan, pursuant to which they—

I. Organized and operated some 16 corporations, or companies operating under trade names, to disseminate advertisements concerning numerous "prize contests" and induce the sale of certain cosmetics, and under which, when cited to appear before the Commission, they would, (1) in some cases, stipulate therewith to cease and desist the objectionable acts and practices, following which they would make little, if any, effort to comply, but would either discontinue or dissolve the particular company, organize a new one, and proceed with acts and practices substantially similar to, and in some instances identical with those which they had agreed to discontinue; and (2) in other instances, following issuance of complaints by Commission against one or more of their companies, they would, during the pendency of the proceedings, complete the particular contest involved and then dissolve or discontinue the particular company respondent in the proceeding concerned, filing either an admissive answer or entering a dilatory contest for purposes of delay, and then organize new companies to continue practices substantially similar to and, in some instances, identical with those involved in complaints and orders referred to;

II. Frequently changed the corporate or trade names used in promoting sale of their cosmetics, dissolving the existing company, distributing its principal and profits, and transferring its physical properties to a new concern; and

III. Employed or designated new "prize managers" for newly organized prize contests, and new officers and so-called owners of new companies, to continue such contests, the new managers, officers and owners being such, however, in name only, in most instances with no financial interest involved and in some instances financially irresponsible;

By means of advertisements disseminated through the mails, newspapers, and periodicals of general circulation, and circulars and other printed or written matter—

(a) Represented that they were conducting a contest confined to the solution of a picture puzzle or similar device, involving only skill in submitting solutions, without expenditure of either money or work on the part of contestants, in order to win a prize; that the simple act of sending in a correct solution to a puzzle or contest would entitle contestant to one of the grand prize awards given free; and that they were giving free substantial sums of money or other awards, as a means of advertising their products; and

(b) Represented that the recipient of a so-called Grand Prize Promptness Certificate had gained an advantage by virtue of skill in solving a puzzle and that an award was guaranteed or assured by simply mailing in such certificate to them; that purchasers of small quantities of their cosmetics stood in as favorable a position as large quantity purchasers, with a favorable or reasonable chance of winning the grand prize or other cash prizes; that by simply replying to their advertising literature and requests therein made, contestant would receive specified or other prizes; that hundreds had already won big prizes in similar friendship campaigns conducted by the same prize company; and that the giving of a certain order and the payment of a specified amount therefor, would assure the contestants addressed of securing a money prize;

Facts being said puzzle or picture contest and offer of awards or prizes was used solely as a means to obtain names of people who would later be encouraged to enter a competitive selling contest, said puzzle contest constituting merely the initial step in a system of effecting sales; picture puzzle advertised by them was so simple as to remove it from the category of a competitive contest or one of skill, being such that a substantial majority, if not all, of those replying would submit correct solutions; said advertised contest and offer of awards or prizes in connection therewith was but a deceptive form of bait or decoy for unsuspecting members of the buying public; said various contests were buying contests, requiring quantity purchases of their products by contestants, and the winning of any contest required the purchase of quantities of their cosmetics equal to or in excess of the awards or prizes granted, which in fact constituted bonuses for sales made by individual contestants;

(c) Failed to reveal to prospective contestants that participation in the awards depended in whole or in part upon purchase or sale of cosmetics, and obscured the fact that requirements for winning a prize were neither easy nor simple, so that, mostly, such fact was not ascertained by contestant until after making purchases of cosmetics; and

(d) Falsely represented that the preparations sold to persons entering the contest were sold at reduced and introductory prices and at less than an established retail price and value, and that they had been in business under various trade names for a long period of years, had an established reputation with respect to their products and for business success, and that their products, which they represented directly or impliedly as originating with them, were of national reputation and of such quality that resale to the general public was not difficult, and that their cosmetics would restore a youthful condition to the skin, removing wrinkles, etc., and their dental preparations help to make the gums healthy;

Facts being products offered were not of established reputation, in use among usual retail outlets, were not offered at reduced, introductory, or advertising prices and would not accomplish results claimed therefor;

(e) Represented that telegrams, requests for photographs and other forms of encouragement received by contestants indicated that the particular contestant was about to, or certain or likely to, win a cash prize in the contest, that a money prize or reward was guaranteed to persons who became members of so-called prize clubs and that such members were among the leading contestants, that the recipient of points or votes in the form of a certificate of award was the subject of a special favor or advantage which substantially enhanced his chance of winning; that so-called advice and suggestions given in letters to contestants were due to a personal interest in the person addressed and given exclusively to him, and that his position was equal or superior to that of other contestants; that the certificate of award, diploma, or other form supplied to the participant was good for an emolument or advantage not held by other contestants, that in the preliminary stages contestant had already made such progress that his choice of prize was requested, that his score was so high that a request for his photograph was warranted, and that receipt of a facsimile check indicated that the recipient was in a favorable position to win the amount indicated thereon;

The facts being that they granted no special favor to any particular contestant, and aforesaid representations were only stimuli for the purchase of additional cosmetics, and were integral parts of their system to lead on the prospect, step by step, and induce his purchases, award of points or votes, following initial award, being conditioned solely upon and made incident to purchase orders for their products; and such awards or points or votes in the early stages of the contest and incident to the first purchase order having no material or substantial value; and the majority of persons addressed by said corporation and individuals at no time stood in a position affording them a favorable chance of winning the grand prize or any other of the money prizes offered;

With the result that through said means they sold, by means of each contest, to between 10,000 and 234,000 individual contestants, each of whom was induced to spend from a few dollars up to $11,000, in one instance, and sold as much, in single contest, as $1,643,000 in cosmetics; and

Where said corporations and individuals, at various stages of progress of the contest—

(f) Furnished to contestants and urged use by them of punch or pull cards or other devices involving a lottery or game of chance in the resale of their products in which the cosmetics or article to be purchased and price to be paid therefor were determined entirely by chance, thereby supplying to and placing in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their said products, contrary to the established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the criminal laws of many of the States, and in competition with many who, unwilling to use any such method, refrain therefrom;

With the result that many persons were attracted by their said sales plans and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell their cosmetics in preference to those sold by their competitors who do not use such methods, whereby trade was unfairly diverted to them from their competitors, to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Capacity, tendency, and effect of which acts, practices, and methods were to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said false and deceptive representations were true; to induce it to purchase quantities of their said products; and unfairly to divert trade from competitors to them:

Held, That said acts and practices, performed and carried out as part of wrongful and unlawful understandings and agreements entered into by individuals concerned, for more than 10 years last past in order to continue same directly and indirectly, in interstate commerce and to avoid and render ineffectual the orders and processes of the Commission, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and said individuals' competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Warren Lee Eastman, Ernie A. Storesund, A. Leonard Anderson, Gerald G. Grant, W. W. Young, Paul Manning, Fred W. Fitch, Mrs. Fred. W. Fitch, Lucius W. Fitch, Mrs. Lucius W. Fitch, Gail W. Fitch, Mrs. Gail W. Fitch, Lester R. Sandahl, Mrs. Lester R. Sandahl, Richard H. Young, and Mrs. Richard H. Young, hereinafter designated and referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH. 1. Respondent, Thomsen-King & Co., Inc., is an Illinois corporation with its principal office and place of business at 710 South Plymouth Court, city of Chicago, State of Illinois. It is the immediate successor of Van Dear Products, Ltd., at the same address.

Respondent, Winship Corporation, is an Iowa corporation with its principal office and place of business at 112–114 West Eleventh Street, city of Des Moines, State of Iowa. It is the immediate successor of the Lorna Gay Co., at the same address.

Said corporate respondents are engaged in the business of selling and distributing certain various cosmetics such as beauty preparations and toiletries, perfumery, face powder, cleansing cream, astringent lotion, foundation cream, pore cream, lipstick, tooth powder and tooth paste under their respective corporate names by means of a series of prize contests for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said cosmetics.

Respondent, F. W. Fitch Co., an Iowa corporation, with its principal office and place of business in 304 Fifteenth Street, city of Des Moines, State of Iowa, manufactures hair tonics, beauty preparations, perfumery, and other toiletries, a substantial portion of which are sold and distributed by means of a series of prize contests. Through its officers, directly or indirectly, and by means of a committee for general investments, this respondent has financed or aided in the financing of a number of said prize contests, and acting through certain designated agents, Prentice W. Shaw, R. E. Williams, W. C. Phillips, A. Leonard Anderson, and others unknown to the Commission, has exercised a substantial measure of control over the management and policies of one or more of the prize contest companies hereinafter more particularly described.

The respondents, Fred W. Fitch, Gail W. Fitch, Lucius W. Fitch, Lester R. Sandahl, and Richard H. Young, are officers of the F. W.

Fitch Co. and with the respondents, Mrs. Fred W. Fitch, Mrs. Gail W. Fitch, Mrs. Lucius W. Fitch, Mrs. Lester R. Sandahl, and Mrs. Richard H. Young, constitute said committee for general investments.

Respondents, James M. Woodman, Jesse L. Stewart, Merrold Johnson, G. Fred Stayton, and Joseph Furth, were at one time or another during the period involved herein associated as partners or associates under various names including the Woodman-Stewart Advertising Agency and the Jesse L. Stewart Advertising Agency, with their principal office and place of business at 520 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill., in preparing and otherwise writing advertisements and advertising copy for said prize contest companies. They exercise a substantial measure of control over the policies of certain of the various prize contest companies hereinafter more particularly designated and described by devising and preparing or aiding in devising and preparing the false advertisements hereinafter more particularly described. Respondents, Woodman, Johnson, and Stayton, were actively engaged, at one time or another, in the management of several of said prize contests.

Respondent, Walter Rubens, an individual, under various names including Vanderbie & Rubens, with a principal office and place of business at 540 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill., has been at one time or another during the period involved herein, active in preparing, revising, and otherwise writing advertisements and advertising copy for, and has exercised a substantial measure of control over, the policies of one or more of said prize contest companies.

Respondents, Sibley F. Everitt, John E. Woodman, Walter C. Phillips, Don W. Parmelee, Albert L. Bisson, Leta M. Clanton, George Schaffer, Evelyn Henderson, Glenn Tate, Paul H. Williams, Richard E. Williams, Prentice W. Shaw, James M. Woodman, Merrold Johnson, George Thomsen, Amber M. McCluskey, James L. Decker, G. Fred Stayton, Steve W. Phillips, Warren Lee Eastman, Ernie A. Storesund, A. Leonard Anderson, Gerald G. Grant, W. W. Young, and Paul Manning, were at one time or another during the period involved herein actively engaged in the financing or operating of one or more of the prize contest companies hereinafter more particularly described.

Respondents, J. G. Hamer, B. Brown, H. Rosenstein, Claude A. Burnett, Ross J. Miller, and Joseph Kane, are individuals who have incorporated one or more of the recent prize contest companies and actively participated in the control of their policies.

All of the aforesaid individual respondents have acted together and in cooperation with each other and with the corporate respondents in doing the acts and practices hereinafter alleged, and such individuals exercise, individually and collectively, directly, or indirectly, a substantial measure of control over the organization, management, policies, operation, and financing of said prize contest companies.

The residence or business addresses of said individual respondents, so far as are known to the Commission, are as follows:

PAR. 2. Each of said respondents, at one time or another, individually and in concert and cooperation with each other, has engaged, directly or indirectly, in the business of conducting prize contests, through various contest companies organized for the purpose of inducing the purchase of cosmetics through advertising matter mailed directly to members of the purchasing public located in the various States of the United States. When sales are made through said contest companies to persons contacted by direct mail or other means and as a part of said sales, said respondents ship said cosmetics from their respective places of business or direct from the place of business of the manufacturer of said cosmetics to such purchaser-contestants located in the various States of the United States. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said cosmetics in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of said business hereinbefore described, said respondents from September 1, 1929, to the present time have entered into certain unlawful understandings, agreements and conspiracies with each other and with other persons not specifically named herein to do certain unlawful acts for the purpose of inducing the purchase of various cosmetics and of avoiding and rendering ineffectual the orders and other processes of the Federal Trade Commission through various acts and practices hereinafter more particularly described.

In furtherance of such unlawful understandings, agreements, and conspiracies, and as a part thereof, the respondents would organize and operate a corporation or a company under a trade name for the purpose of engaging in the dissemination of false advertisements with respect to a prize contest in order to induce the sale of certain cosmetics. When the acts and practices of a particular company operated by the respondents would come before the Federal Trade Commission for action as the result of an investigation instituted by the Commission, the particular company then under investigation would in some cases enter into a stipulation with the Federal Trade Commission to cease and desist from the acts and practices then being conducted and substantially similar if not identical to those set out in this complaint. The respondents, after execution of such stipulation, would make no effort to conform their practices to the terms of said stipulation but instead would either discontinue or dissolve the particular operating company and organize a new company and proceed with substantially similar and in many cases the identical acts and practices which they had stipulated to discontinue in the proceeding before the Federal Trade Commission. In other cases in which a complaint had been issued by the Federal Trade Commission, the respondents, during the pendency of such proceedings, would complete the particular prize contest involved and then dissolve or discontinue the particular company made respondent in such complaint and either file an admission answer in the Commission's proceeding or enter a dilatory contest for the purpose of delay. During the pendency of such proceedings or after a cease and desist order had been issued by the Commission, the respondents would organize new corporations or companies to continue with the identical practices involved in such complaints or orders to cease and desist. In furtherance of this plan it was the practice of the respondents to frequently change the corporate or trade name used in promoting the sale of such cosmetics, dissolve the existing company, distribute its principal and profits, and transfer its physical properties to a new company designed to take over the operation of the business conducted by the former company. It was further a part of said plan that respondents would employ or designate a new prize manager for each contest and new officers and so-called owners for each new company to continue said prize contest under said new names and with said new personnel. Such prize managers, officers, and so-called owners were in many cases owners, officers, and managers in name only and had in most instances no financial interest in said companies and were in some cases financially irresponsible. Among the companies organized, reorganized, and discontinued or dissolved under the operation of this plan were the following: Helen Dawn Co., Co-Ed, Inc., Paramount Products Co., Betty White Corporation, Paradise Company, Van Dear Products, Ltd., Century Co., Sterling Co., Knight Co., Marena Co., Lorna Gay Co., E. M. Davis Co., Nannette Co., Super-Franklin Co., and others, as well as the present operating corporations, Thomsen-King & Co., Inc. and Winship Corporation.

In furtherance of said conspiracy and as a part thereof, the respondents would disseminate or cause to be disseminated to purchasers and prospective purchasers of said cosmetics, in and through the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, letters, circulars, telegrams, advertisements, and other forms of printed and written matter in which false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations were made.

In furtherance of said conspiracy and as a part thereof, the respondent, F. W. Fitch Co., its officers, and employees, in their representative as well as their individual capacities, would counsel and aid in the selection of so-called owners, officers, and prize managers of said prize contest companies and would aid in the financing of some of said prize contest companies and assist said companies to obtain bank and other credit references and other facilities. For the purpose of protecting such financial investment, the F. W. Fitch Co., acting through a committee for general investments, would employ or cause to be employed various individuals to represent the interest of said committee from time to time in the management and operation of said prize contest companies.

The acts and practices and methods in conducting said business described above, and other acts, practices, and methods not described herein, to which each and all of said respondents have at any time or another participated were all in furtherance of said conspiracy.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their various prize contests, under various trade and corporate names, the respondents have disseminated, and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning the various cosmetic products sold and distributed by them, by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said cosmetic products, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

1. That the simple act of sending in a correct solution to a puzzle or contest will entitle the contestant to one of the grand prize awards and that such prize will be given free without the expenditure of either money or work on the part of such contestant.

2. That the respondents are conducting a prize contest and giving free substantial sums of money or other awards as a means of advertising their products.

3. That the recipient of a so-called "Grand Prize Promptness Certificate" has gained an advantage for himself by virtue of skill in solving a puzzle and that an award is guaranteed or assured by simply mailing in such certificate to the respondents.

4. That the purchasers of small quantities of cosmetics stand in as favorable a position as large quantity purchasers of said cosmetics, offering them a favorable or reasonable chance of winning the grand prize or any other of the cash prizes offered.

5. That the telegrams, requests for contestant's photographs, and other forms of encouragement received by contestants indicates that said contestant is about to, or is certain or likely to win a cash prize in said contest.

6. That said cosmetics are of national reputation and are of such quality that resale to the general public is not difficult.

7. That a money prize or reward is guaranteed to that person who becomes a member of one of the so-called "Prize Clubs," and that such members are among the leading contestants.

8. That, by the simple act of responding to the advertising of respondents and to literature received from respondents and to the requests therein made by respondents, such contestants will receive or win a specified grand prize, or various other prizes.

9. That hundreds have already won big cash prizes in similar friendship campaigns conducted by the same prize company which is conducting the current contest.

10. That the preparations and products sold to persons who enter said contest are sold at reduced prices and at less than an established retail price and value.

11. That the recipient of points or votes in the form of a certificate of award, is the subject of a special favor or advantage not generally extended to other individual contestants, and that the said points or votes substantially enhance the chance of said recipient toward the winning of one or more of the prizes offered by respondents.

12. That respondents, under each of the trade names used by them, have been in business for a long period of years and have an established reputation with respect to their products and for business success.

13. That the giving of a certain order for goods and the payment of a specified amount therefor, will assure the contestant addressed of securing a money prize.

14. That so-called advice and suggestions given in letters to contestants are due to a personal interest in the contestant addressed and that such advice and suggestions are given exclusively to the one addressed.

15. That each contestant or person addressed stands in a position equal to or superior to that of other contestants and have a favorable or reasonable chance of winning the grand prize or various other of the prizes offered.

16. That the prize company conducting the contest is a manufacturing concern and that such company originates, compounds, and prepares the preparations and products sold by it.

17. That there is no element of lottery in connection with the contest or the sale of the merchandise.

18. That by answering promptly or before a given date the contestant will qualify for his share of the prize money that must be given away for advertising purposes.

19. That the sending of one or more initial payments completely qualifies the participant for the promptness prize or other awards.

20. That the certificate of award, diploma or other forms supplied to the participant are good for an emolument or advantage not held by other contestants.

21. That in the preliminary stages the contestant has already made such progress that his choice of prize is requested and that his score is so high that a request for his photograph is warranted.

22. That the receipt of a facsimile check for various sums of money indicates that the recipient is in a favorable or reasonable position to win the amount indicated on said check.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations as well as others similar thereto not specifically set out herein which have been disseminated and are now being disseminated by the respondents in the manner and form above described, are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue and constitute false advertisements. In truth and in fact, respondents do not conduct any contest involving competition among contestants in promptness or skill as a means of advertising their products and of gaining publicity for the aforesaid cosmetics. The picture puzzle advertised by respondents is so simple of solution as to remove it from the category of a competitive contest or contest of skill, and is such that substantial number or majority, if not all, of the persons responding thereto would submit correct solutions. The said advertised puzzle contest and offer of awards or prizes in connection therewith is but a deceptive form of "bait" or "decoy" attractive to the innocent, unwary, and unsuspecting members of the buying public, and has been and is used by respondents as the initial step in a system of effecting sales.

The various contests conducted by respondents are buying contests requiring quantity purchases of respondents' cosmetic products by the contestants or persons entered therein. The winning of a prize is dependent upon the quantities of respondents' products which are purchased by the individual contestants and has no material connection with the promptness or solution of any picture puzzle or other form of contest. In fact, in order to win any such contest, the contestant must necessarily purchase quantities of respondents' cosmetics, equal to, or in excess of the awards or prizes granted. The sums of money or other awards given by the respondents as prizes are not in fact prizes but instead each constitutes a bonus for the sales made by the individual contestant.

The conditions and requirements for winning a prize offered by the respondents are neither easy nor simple. Respondents do not generally disclose these facts but otherwise so obscure them that for the most part they are not ascertained by contestants or persons responding to such sales promotional literature until after said persons have made one or more purchases of assortments of the cosmetics distributed by the respondents.

The aforesaid false and misleading representations are joined together as integral parts of the system employed by respondents in selling their products to persons responding to the puzzle or other form of contest. Having first created the general impression in the minds of persons responding thereto that each has a certain or reasonable chance of winning one or more of the prizes offered, the plan moves to include a system of awarding points or votes to contestants in the form of printed certificates which, by their form and substance, grossly exaggerate the value or significance of said award in relation to the recipient's chance or chances of winning any prize. Such practice also serves to and does in fact create and enliven the impression that the recipient does in fact have a certain or reasonable chance of winning a prize.

By means of such certificates and accompanying circulars and letters, the respondents create the impression in the mind of the recipient that such recipient is the subject of a special favor or advantage as a contestant, and that the award of points or votes is in itself sufficient to entitle the recipient to consideration as a contestant at the time of the final award of prizes. The award of points or votes following the initial award is conditioned solely upon and made incident to purchase orders for products of the respondents.

The interest and zeal of each contestant to acquire additional points or votes through purchases is repeatedly heightened by the respondents by way of false assurances, requests for photographs, statements implying personal interest in the particular contestant, and other means implying that such contestant is guaranteed or is sure or certain to be a winner of the grand prize or to be among the winners of other prizes offered by the respondents. By this means, repeated orders in various amounts are thus induced in the course of which the respondents further allay sales resistance and otherwise induce purchases to be made by the contestants by means of false and misleading statements and representations with reference to the reputed quality, value and prices of the products offered. It is not until the latter stages of the contest that the respondents convert the program into a selling contest requiring quantity purchases and resale of the products of the respondents on the part of the contestants in the course of which the respondents continue to further misrepresent the standing of individual contestants in the contest as a means of stimulating additional purchases by such contestants.

PAR. 6. By the aforesaid means, respondents accomplish the maximum number of sales in the course of the system's operation, and as a result have sold, entirely through and by means of each such contest, to between 104,000 and 234,000 individual contestants, each of whom was induced to spend sums of money ranging from a few dollars up to and including $11,000 in one instance. By this practice, the respondents have sold between $736,000 and $1,643,000 in cosmetics to contestants in various of said contests.

In the course and conduct of their various prize contests, the respondents do not grant any special favor or interest to any particular contestant as represented and implied, and the representations made by the respondents to the effect that any particular contestant has an advantage toward the winning of any prize offered is without basis of fact and serves only as a stimulation for the purchase of additional cosmetics. The awards of points or votes in the early stages of the contest and incident to the first purchase order have no material or substantial value and as among the great majority of recipients, the same do not give rise to, or materially or substantially enhance, the chance or chances of winning any money or prize. The majority of persons addressed by respondents at no time stand in any position affording them a favorable chance of winning the grand prize, or any other of the money prizes offered. The products offered are not of established reputation in use among usual retail outlets, are not offered at a reduction in established retail prices, and are not introductory or for advertising purposes.

At various stages of progress of the contest respondents furnished to contestants and urged the use by them of certain punch or pull cards or other devices involving a lottery or a game of chance in the resale of the products purchased by contestants from respondents. The sale of cosmetics to the purchasing public in this manner involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure said cosmetics through a lottery in which the article to be purchased and the price to be paid for said article are determined entirely by chance. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their cosmetics. The sale of said cosmetics by and through the use of such sales plans or methods, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws of many of the States of the United States.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute cosmetics in competition with respondents, as hereinabove alleged, are unwilling to adopt or use said sales plans or methods or any methods involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to select and pay for said cosmetics by chance, or any other methods that are contrary to public policy or in violation of criminal statutes, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their cosmetics and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' cosmetics in preference to cosmetics offered for sale and sold by competitors of respondents who are likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of cosmetics in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia and who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondents, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof, substantial injury is being done and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. In addition to the acts and practices hereinabove set forth, the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements in the same manner as hereinabove set forth, with reference to the effectiveness of the use of their various cosmetics to the effect that said cosmetics will restore a youthful condition of the skin, produce a youthful appearance, make skin younger, remove wrinkles and worry lines, tone and strengthen the muscles, and help make gums healthy, and also that the retail value or worth of said cosmetics is greatly in excess of the regular, usual, or customary retail value or worth thereof.

In truth and in fact, the aforesaid statements, representations and advertisements hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, are false, misleading, and deceptive for the reason that none of said preparations will restore a youthful condition of the skin, produce a youthful appearance, make the skin younger, remove wrinkles and worry lines, tone and strengthen the muscles, or help make the gums healthy, nor are the said cosmetics of the regular or customary retail value or worth as represented by the respondents.

PAR. 8. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid acts and practices and methods, and the aforesaid false, misleading, and deceptive representations, statements and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, in soliciting and offering for sale and selling various cosmetics by means of so-called prize contests, has had and now has a tendency and capacity to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid false, misleading, and deceptive representations and statements are true, and induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public to purchase quantities of respondents' cosmetics on account of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 24th day of January 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents named in the caption hereof, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of answers by all the respondents except Thomsen-King & Co., Inc., evidence was introduced in support of the allegations of the complaint by Curtis Shears and Donovan R. Divet, attorneys for the Commission before Randolph Preston, a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission theretofore designated by it to serve in this proceeding. Said evidence was duly filed in the office of the Commission. No testimony or other evidence was introduced by any of the respondents or their attorneys.

A stipulation as to the facts was entered into between all the respondents herein and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel of the Federal Trade Commission, and approved by the Commission, in which it was provided that the Commission may proceed upon such statement of facts, including the inferences which may be drawn therefrom and any testimony introduced in support of the charges of the complaint and in opposition thereto, to make its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and to enter its order disposing of the proceeding.

Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the said complaint, the answers thereto, the evidence introduced on behalf of the Commission, the said stipulation as to the facts, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the report of the trial examiner; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Thomsen-King & Co., Inc., was incorporated under the laws of the State of Illinois in the fall of 1939; its principal office and place of business was located at 710 South Plymouth Court, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois; respondent George Thomsen was its president, respondent Amber M. McCluskey was its secretary and treasurer, and respondent James L. Decker was its majority stockholder; respondents, J. G. Hamer, B. Brown, and H. Rosenstein, were its incorporators. This corporation was organized to take over the physical assets of Van Dear Products, Ltd., and to continue the business of engaging in "prize contests."

Respondent, Winship Corporation, which was organized in the fall of 1939 under the laws of the State of Iowa, is a corporation having its principal place of business located in the city of Des Moines, State of Iowa; respondent, Don W. Parmelee, was its president and general manager. Respondent, Evelyn Henderson, from October 23, 1939, to December 20, 1939, was a member of its board of directors; respondent George Schaffer, from October 22 to December 20, 1939, was a member of its board of directors.

Respondent, F. W. Fitch Co. is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Iowa, with its principal place of business located at 305 Fifteenth Street in the city of Des Moines, State of Iowa. It is engaged in the business of manufacturing beauty preparations, perfumery, and other toiletries which it sells and ships in interstate commerce. Respondents, Fred W. Fitch, Gail W. Fitch, Lucius W. Fitch, Lester R. Sandahl, and Richard H. Young, are officers of respondent F. W. Fitch Co.

Respondents, Fred W. Fitch, Gail W. Fitch, Lucius W. Fitch, Lester R. Sandahl, Richard H. Young, Mrs. Fred W. Fitch, Mrs. Gail W. Fitch, Mrs. Lucius W. Fitch, Mrs. Lester R. Sandahl, and Mrs Richard H. Young, are copartners operating what was styled "The Committee for General Investments," and who, together with other investors, financed and aided in the financing of one or more of the hereinafter described "prize contests."

Respondents, James M. Woodman, John E. Woodman, Jesse L. Stewart, Merrold Johnson, G. Fred Stayton, and Joseph Furth were copartners or associates in business under various trade names, including "Woodman-Stewart Advertising Agency," and "Jesse L. Stewart Advertising Agency," with their principal place of business at 520 North Michigan Avenue, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. They conducted "prize contests" and prepared the advertisements used in connection therewith.

Respondent, Walter Rubens, is an officer and director of Vanderbie & Rubens, Inc., an advertising agency with its principal place of business at 540 North Michigan Avenue, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

Respondents, Sibley F. Everitt, Walter C. Phillips, Don W. Parmelee, Albert L. Bisson, Leta M. Clanton (now Leta M. Frazier), George Schaffer, Evelyn Henderson, Glenn Tate, Paul H. Williams, Richard E. Williams, Prentice W. Shaw, George Thomsen, Amber M. McCluskey, James L. Decker, Steve W. Phillips, Warren Lee Eastman, Ernie A. Storesund, A. Leonard Anderson, Gerald G. Grant, W. W. Young, and Paul Manning, at some time covered by the complaint herein were engaged, directly or indirectly, in financing, operating or managing one or more of the hereinafter mentioned prize contests.

Respondents, Claude T. Burnett (designated in the complaint as "Claude A. Burnett"), Ross J. Miller, and Joseph Kane, caused to be incorporated "prize contest" companies and actively participated in the control of their policies.

PAR. 2. Each of the respondents named in paragraph 1 hereof, except the F. W. Fitch Co., J. G. Hamer, B. Brown, H. Rosenstein, Claude T. Burnett, Ross J. Miller, Joseph Kane, and Walter Rubens, at some time prior to the issuance of the complaint herein, individually and in concert and cooperation with each other, have engaged, directly or indirectly in the business of conducting prize contests through various "contest companies" organized by them for the purpose of inducing the purchase of cosmetics through advertising matter mailed to members of the purchasing public located in various States of the United States. When sales are made through said contest companies to persons contacted by mail or other means, said respondents ship and have shipped said cosmetics from their respective places of business, or direct from the manufacturers thereof, to the purchasers located in various States of the United States other than the State of origin of such shipments.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of said business, each of said respondents, individually and in cooperation with one or more of the other of said respondents, in the furtherance of a common plan to do and perform the acts and practices hereinafter set out, and as a part thereof, have organized and operated approximately sixteen corporations or companies operating under trade names, for the purpose of engaging in the dissemination of advertisements concerning numerous prize contests, in order to induce the sale of certain cosmetics. When one of these companies was cited to appear before the Federal Trade Commission, the respondents in some cases would enter into a stipulation with the Commission to cease and desist from the acts and practices then being conducted, and after the execution of such stipulation the respondents would make little, if any, effort to comply with the terms of the stipulation, but instead, would either discontinue or dissolve the particular operating company, organize a new company, and proceed with substantially similar, and in some instances identical, acts and practices which they had stipulated to discontinue in the proceedings before the Commission. In some instances complaints have been issued by the Commission against one or more of the companies operated by said respondents, and the respondents, during the pendency of such proceedings, would complete the particular prize contest involved and then dissolve or discontinue the particular company made respondent in such action, and either file an admissive answer in the Commission's proceeding, or enter a dilatory contest for the purpose of delay. During the pendency of such proceedings, or after a cease and desist order has been issued by the Commission, said respondents would organize new corporations or companies, to continue substantially similar, and in some instances identical, practices involved in said complaints and orders to cease and desist.

In furtherance of this plan it was the practice of said respondents to frequently change the corporate or trade names used in promoting the sale of such cosmetics, dissolve the existing company, distribute its principal and profits, and transfer its physical properties to a new company designed to take over the operation of the business conducted by the former company. It was further a part of said plan that respondents would employ or designate new "prize managers" for some of the newly organized prize contests, and new officers and so-called owners of some of the new companies, to continue such prize contests under new names and with a new personnel. Such prize managers, officers, and so-called owners were such only in name, and in most instances had no financial interest in such companies, and in some instances were financially irresponsible.

Among the companies so organized, discontinued, or dissolved, and reorganized under the operation of said plan were the following: Hazel Dawn Co.; Co-Ed, Inc.; Paramount Products Co.; Betty White Corporation; Paradise Co.; Van Dear Products, Ltd.; Century Co.; Sterling Co.; Knight Co.; Marena Co.; Lorna Gay Co.; E. M. Davis Co.; Nannette Co.; Super-Franklin Co.; Thomsen-King & Co., Inc.; Winship Corporation, and others.

In furtherance of said plan, and as a part thereof, said respondents disseminated, or caused to be disseminated, to purchasers and prospective purchasers of said cosmetics, in and through the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, letters, circulars, telegrams, advertisements, and other forms of printed and written matter, in which certain statements and representations were made, as hereinafter set out, in paragraphs 4 and 7.

As as part of said plan and in furtherance thereof, the respondents named in paragraph 1 hereof as composing the "Committee for General Investments," in their individual capacities counseled and aided in the selection of so-called owners, officers, and prize managers of said prize contest companies and aided in financing some of said companies; and in order to protect their financial investments therein, said respondents employed or caused to be employed various individuals, to represent the interests of said committee and other investors from time to time in the management or operation of said contest companies.

Some of said respondents, between 1933 and 1940, employed or designated as owners, officers, or managers of said prize contest companies, persons having no actual financial interest in said company and who served in the nominal capacity of owners, officers, and managers, in name only. Among and typical of said respondents employed to act as officers and managers in name only was respondent George Thomsen, who was employed as a bookkeeper by respondent James L. Decker, owner of Van Dear Products Co., in February, 1939. Shortly thereafter he was named director of said company but had no voice in, or knowledge of, the policies, acts, practices, and methods of business of said company outside of his work as bookkeeper. In the fall of 1939, James L. Decker designated said George Thomsen as president of Thomsen-King & Co., Inc., and gave him a check for $1,000, payable to Thomsen-King Co., Inc., which said George Thomsen entered as payment for the stock issued by the company to him, but he did not actually invest any money therein, nor did he receive any compensation other than his salary as bookkeeper. At all times while George Thomsen was president of Thomsen-King & Co., Inc., respondent James L. Decker, Merrold Johnson and Amber M. McCluskey directed the policies, acts, and practices of said company.

The acts and practices of each of the said prize contest companies, as well as the advertisements disseminated in interstate commerce by said respondents through said companies, were substantially similar, and in many cases identical, with the acts and practices of the other prize contest companies referred to herein, as were the advertisements disseminated through all said prize contest companies.

Some of the corporations, or the trade names used in promoting the sales of said cosmetics, when dissolved or discontinued, as aforesaid, have distributed their principal and profits and transferred their physical properties to another prize contest company, usually organized for the purpose of taking over the business of its predecessor company.

For one year prior to September 1930, respondent Sibley F. Everitt was employed by the Gates Manufacturing Co., of Chicago, and sold a line of cosmetics under the trade name "Helen Dawn," through the "one-pay, or non-progressive plan" of contest. In September 1930, respondent James M. Woodman became associated with said respondent Everitt, and they purchased a quantity of the Helen Dawn cosmetics from said Gates Manufacturing Co. and offered said cosmetics for sale through the prize contest plan of merchandising devised by respondents James M. Woodman and Jesse L. Stewart, who organized the Woodman Advertising Co. (unincorporated)for the purpose of devising, writing, and placing advertisements in periodicals, newspapers, and other mediums. The Woodman Advertising Co. financed through the usual trade credits, and placed, advertisements for many of the prize contest companies hereinafter more particularly described, including the Helen Dawn Co. The Helen Dawn Co. (unincorporated) was organized on or about December 27, 1930, in Chicago, Ill., for the purpose of selling cosmetics by means of prize contests. The respondents Sibley F. Everitt, James M. Woodman, and John E. Woodman were associated in the control and management of this business. On or about January 1, 1931, the Helen Dawn Co. was incorporated in the State of Illinois. After numerous complaints, respondent Sibley F. Everitt, on or about November 10, 1931, signed a stipulation, No. 0195, and presented same to the Federal Trade Commission.

On February 10, 1934, respondents James M. Woodman and John E. Woodman sold their stock in Woodman Advertising Agency to Jesse L. Stewart, and in 1937 reorganized the agency as the Jesse L. Stewart Co.

In March 1932, respondent James M. Woodman sold his stock in the Dawn Co. to Sibley F. Everitt. Prior to this time respondent James M. Woodman had purchased the assets of the E. M. Davis Co. (unincorporated) which, prior to September 1931, had been in the business of selling a line of household goods and cosmetics by house-to-house canvassing. Respondent James M. Woodman had been one of the incorporators of E. M. Davis Co., Inc., and was also a director and the secretary and treasurer of said Davis Co. and owned 60 percent of its stock.

In 1936, E. M. Davis Co. conducted two sales promotion contests, all the advertising in connection therewith being written and placed through the Woodman-Stewart Co., later the Jesse L. Stewart Co. E. M. Davis Co. was dissolved May 7, 1937, but in January 1937, Nannette, Inc., had been purchased by respondent James M. Woodman to take over the physical assets of the company to be dissolved and continue the prize contest business. During 1937, Nannette, Inc., of which respondent James M. Woodman was president and majority stockholder, conducted two prize contests, and the advertisements used in connection therewith were written by and placed through the Jesse L. Stewart Co.

On September 4, 1937, a complaint was issued by the Federal Trade Commission against Nannette, Inc., and respondent James M. Woodman as president of said company, and shortly thereafter Nannette, Inc., was dissolved.

Respondent Glenn Tate, who had formerly been a postoffice clerk, was employed to act as president of the Super-Franklin Co., which operated prize contests from the fall of 1937 to the spring of 1939, using advertisements prepared and placed by the Jesse L. Stewart Co. Respondent James M. Woodman was the majority stockholder in this company and respondent Glenn Tate was given 199 shares of stock of the said Super-Franklin Co. without his paying any consideration therefor. On the 28th day of September 1938, the Federal Trade Commission issued a complaint against the Super-Franklin Co., which is still pending before the Commission.

In 1931 and 1932, respondent Amber M. McCluskey, as office manager and auditor, and respondent James L. Decker as president, were actively associated in the control and management of Co-Ed, Inc., successor to National Home Magazines, Inc., with which said respondents had formerly been associated. Respondents James L. Decker and G. Fred Stayton had been associated with the W. D. Boyce Co., publishers, who ran magazine subscription contests. Co-Ed, Inc., was dissolved in 1932.

In the fall of 1938, Van Dear Products, Ltd., was organized, with respondent Amber M. McCluskey as president, respondent George Thomsen vice-president, and respondent James L. Decker secretary and treasurer. The Van Dear Products, Ltd., purchased some of the physical assets of the Super-Franklin Co.

In the fall of 1939, respondent Thomsen-King & Co., Inc., was organized, with respondent George Thomsen as president, respondent Amber M. McCluskey, secretary and treasurer, and respondent James L. Decker as majority stockholder. This company was organized to take over the physical assets of Van Dear Products, Ltd., and continued the prize contests formerly conducted by Van Dear Products, Ltd.

In the fall of 1932, respondents Sibley F. Everitt and G. Fred Stayton organized the Paramount Products Co. of Des Moines, Iowa, the entire capital of which was supplied by respondent Sibley F. Everitt. After conducting one prize contest said company was dissolved in the spring of 1933, and in February 1934, respondent G. Fred Stayton organized Paramount Products, Inc., of Des Moines, which continued the prize contests. In April 1934, respondent Albert H. Bisson purchased stock in this company, as did also Leta M. Clanton (now Frazier) in July of that year.

Respondent Sibley F. Everitt, after the dissolution of Paramount Products Co. organized the Century Co. of Des Moines, and employed respondent Merrold Johnson as president of said company and Paul H. Williams as attorney, in connection with the first prize contest conducted by said company. Respondent Paul H. Williams, acting as counsel, procured the charter for the Century Co. in 1933, and received 10 percent of the net profits of the company for his services.

On February 26, 1934, an informal hearing was held by the Special Board of Investigation of the Federal Trade Commission as the result of an application for complaint against the Century Co., at which hearing respondent Paul H. Williams represented the Century Co. and prepared a stipulation admitting the charges against said company and agreed to cease and desist from continuing the practices complained of. Respondent Merrold Johnson signed the stipulation as general manager of the company and submitted same to the Commission. On July 31, 1934, the company surrendered its corporate charter. A prize contest was being conducted at this time by said company, and from July 31, to August 31, 1934, said contest was conducted as a partnership by respondents Merrold Johnson and Sibley F. Everitt, and the wife of the latter who is not a respondent.

On or about September 17, 1934, a complaint against the Century Co. was issued by the Commission, and respondent Paul H. Williams, on or about October 1, 1934, filed with the Commission proof of publication of the notice of dissolution of the company, whereupon the Commission dismissed its complaint.

About October 6, 1934, respondent Paul H. Williams procured a charter for the Sterling Co. The wife of respondent Sibley F. Everitt transferred the equipment of the Century Co. to the Sterling Co. Respondent Paul H. Williams was the active manager of this company and respondent Sibley F. Everitt was actively associated in its control and management. Respondents Don W. Parmelee, George Schaffer, and Evelyn Henderson were employed by the company but had no financial or stock interest in it. Don W. Parmelee was designated as president; Paul H. Williams, Sibley F. Everitt, and Mrs. Everitt were stockholders and managers. The Sterling Co. used the same methods of selling cosmetics through prize contests as were used by the Century Co., including the names and pictures of some of the alleged prize winners of the latter company, and in its literature stated that the said prizes had been won "in our former prize campaigns." The Sterling Co. ran three prize contests from October 1933 to April 30, 1936, using the name of an employee as prize manager in each of said contests.

On or about November 15, 1935, the Commission issued a complaint against the Sterling Co. and respondents Don. W. Parmelee, Sibley F. Everitt and Paul H. Williams, Docket No. 2629, and on August 12, 1936, the Commission issued a cease and desist order against said respondents.

Three prize contests were conducted by the Sterling Co., the last beginning in the fall of 1935 and ending April 30, 1936. These contests were operated under the name of respondent George Schaffer, who was designated as "prize manager." Said respondent Schaffer had been employed by the Century Co. in charge of the printing department and his duties and work were not changed. The Sterling Co. was dissolved several months prior to August 12, 1936, and on or about April 30, 1936, respondent Paul H. Williams sold the equipment of this company, through respondent Walter C. Phillips, to respondent Richard E. Williams.

In the late summer of 1933, respondent Walter C. Phillips had secured and serviced the advertising account of the Century Co., as a representative of the Archer Advertising Co. of Cincinnati, Ohio, and when, in the spring of 1934, the Archer Co. went into bankruptcy, respondent Walter C. Phillips took the Century account to the Heath-Seehoff Co. of Chicago, Ill., opening offices in Des Moines, Iowa, where he at first handled only the Century account, and later continued, in servicing the advertising account of the Sterling Co., until May 1936.

In June 1936, respondents Richard E. Williams and Walter C. Phillips formed a partnership in which the latter had a one-third interest, and traded under the name Knight Co. Walter C. Phillips managed the affairs of the Knight Co., which started a new prize contest in the fall of 1936. Respondent Richard E. Williams obtained the funds with which to operate this company from respondents Lester R. Sandahl, Lucius W. Fitch, Gail W. Fitch, and Richard H. Young. The Knight Co. operated under this arrangement from the fall of 1936 to the spring of 1937. During the summer of 1937 the partnership between respondents Richard E. Williams and Walter C. Phillips was dissolved, and from the fall of 1937 till the spring of 1938, a similar prize contest was operated under the trade name Marena Co., which said trade name was filed of record in the name of respondent Richard E. Williams. During this period, Walter C. Phillips was employed by Richard E. Williams as general manager of said Marena Company and received a salary and a percentage of the profits.

Respondent Richard E. Williams obtained the money for the operation of the Marena Co. during this period by loans from the following respondents: Gail W. Fitch, Lucius W. Fitch, Fred W. Fitch and Richard H. Young; and from Lawrence DeGraff, Grace DeGraff, George Shaw, C. E. Sandahl, Gertrude W. Fitch, and Letitia Fitch (it not appearing that the six last named are respondents), and also received loans from the "Committee for General Investments," a partnership, as set out in paragraph 1 hereof.

About August 1938, respondent Richard E. Williams sold and conveyed the principal physical assets of the Knight Co. to respondent A. Leonard Anderson, who thereafter employed Warren Lee Eastman as general manager of the Lorna Gay Co., a trade name recorded in the company records of Polk County, Iowa, in the name of said A. Leonard Anderson. In addition to his own investment, the money used for the Lorna Gay Co. in conducting prize contests was obtained by respondent Anderson from respondents Paul Manning, Gerald G. Grant, and Warren Lee Eastman, and from W. W. Young, Amy Williams, R. M. Phillips, Kenneth May, Catherine McComb, C. E. Sandahl, C. L. Sandahl, Fred Gordon, Letitia Fitch and James Child (it not appearing that the 10 last named are respondents), and also from the "Committee for General Investments," the membership of which has been hereinbefore set out. The persons named who loaned money to respondents Richard E. Williams or A. Leonard Anderson received, in addition to 6 percent interest on the amounts so loaned, a percentage of the net profits resulting from the operation of the Knight, Marena, and Lorna Gay companies.

A large number of persons who had been employed by the Century, Sterling, Knight, and Marena companies were employed by the Lorna Gay Co. Respondent Don W. Parmelee was employed by the Lorna Gay Co. to write advertising copy; respondent Ernie A. Storesund, whose name was used as the prize manager for the Lorna Gay Co. was actually shipping and receiving clerk, and worked in that capacity, for the Century, Sterling, Knight, Marena and Lorna Gay companies. Respondent George Schaffer, whose name was used as prize manager of the Sterling Co. prize contests, was head of the printing department of that company, and was also employed in the same capacity by the Knight, Marena, and Lorna Gay companies. Respondent Evelyn Henderson was employed by the Sterling Co. as its secretary, and thereafter was also employed by the Knight and Lorna Gay companies.

The contest conducted under the trade name Lorna Gay Co. ended on May 30, 1939. On June 25, 1939, the Federal Trade Commission issued its complaint (Docket 3833) and named as respondents some of the operators and some of the other individuals who had loaned money to the operators of the Knight, Marena and Lorna Gay companies. This complaint is still pending before the Commission.

Respondent Winship Corporation was organized in the fall of 1939, after complaint had been issued in Docket 3833, and listed as its officers respondent Don W. Parmelee, president; respondent George Schaffer, vice-president; respondent Evelyn Henderson, secretary and treasurer.

After the dissolution of Paramount Products Co. of Des Moines, Iowa, respondent G. Fred Stayton organized Paramount Products, Inc., in which his sister, Leta M. Clanton (now Frazier) and respondent Albert L. Bisson were financially interested, as were also other persons resident in Des Moines.

A hearing on an application for complaint against Paramount Products, Inc., was held on July 25, 1935, after a stipulation (No. 0844) was signed by G. Fred Stayton as president of said company on the 7th day of March 1935, and had been accepted by the Commission on March 25, 1935. On counsel's statement that this company was being dissolved, no action was taken, and on or about October 26, 1935, the company was dissolved. In the meantime, on August 30, 1935, G. Fred Stayton, as the sole incorporator, organized the Betty White Corporation, of Des Moines, Iowa. Respondents Albert L. Bisson and Leta M. Clanton (now Frazier) owned stock in this corporation, which continued to operate said prize contests.

On the 29th day of June 1936, a complaint was issued by the Federal Trade Commission, and on October 20, 1936, an order was issued, against the Betty White Corporation and G. Fred Stayton, Leta M. Clanton (Frazier) was the cashier and owner of $1,000 worth of stock of Paramount Products, Inc., and the cashier, and owner of 7½ shares of stock, in the Betty White Corporation. After the entry of the order against the Betty White Corporation and respondent G. Fred Stayton, on October 20, 1936, respondent Albert L. Bisson organized the Paradise Co. and caused same to be incorporated under the laws of the State of Illinois on or about August 25, 1936. Respondent Leta M. Clanton (Frazier) was cashier of this corporation and owner of $5,000 of its stock; respondent Albert L. Bisson was president of said corporation, and respondent Gerald G. Grant was one of its stockholders. Beginning about August 25, 1936, respondents Bisson, Clanton (Frazier), and others continued the same scheme of prize contests under the name Paradise Co., operating from Chicago, Ill.

On August 25, 1937, a complaint was issued by the Federal Trade Commission naming the Paradise Co., and respondents Albert L. Bisson, Leta M. Clanton (Frazier), Gerald G. Grant, and also Sylvan B. Heininger, and Bertha E. Boeing. This case (Docket 3213) is still pending before the Commission, as are the cases against Nannette Co., Inc. (Docket 3223), Super-Franklin Co. (Docket 3613) and Richard E. Williams, et al. (Docket 3833).

Respondent Jesse L. Stewart became a partner in the firm of Woodman-Stewart on January 1, 1931, which company was incorporated August 6, 1931, under the laws of the State of Illinois, with respondent James M. Woodman as president. On February 10, 1934, respondent Jesse L. Stewart purchased all of the stock of the two respondents James M. Woodman and John E. Woodman, and became president of said corporation. On November 19, 1937, the name of the corporation was changed to J. L. Stewart & Co.

Respondent Jesse L. Stewart owned 20 shares of stock in Helen Dawn Co., which he sold to respondent Sibley F. Everitt in March 1932, and aided in writing and causing the writing of advertising for Helen Dawn Co., Paramount Products, Inc., Betty White Corporation, E. M. Davis Co., Nannette, Inc., Paradise Co. and Super-Franklin Co.

Respondent Jesse L. Stewart, as president of the J. L. Stewart Co., employed G. Fred Stayton from September 11, 1937, to March 31, 1939; respondent Merrold Johnson from December 6, 1937, to July 17, 1939, and respondent Joseph Furth from May 19, 1935, to May 3, 1940.

Respondent John E. Woodman was associated with his father, respondent James M. Woodman, and with respondent Sibley F. Everitt and others, in the control and management of the Helen Dawn Co. On March 3, 1932, respondent John E. Woodman sold his stock interest in the Helen Dawn Co. to respondent Sibley F. Everitt, and became a minority stockholder in the Woodman-Stewart Co., an advertising agency, which stock he sold to respondent Jesse L. Stewart on February 10, 1934.

Vanderbie & Rubens, Inc., advertising agency of which corporation respondent Walter Rubens is an officer and director, placed the advertising of respondent Thomsen-King & Co., Inc., and financed through ordinary credit firms the advertising placed for said company.

Respondent Warren Lee Eastman was employed by the Knight Co. as manager of their prize contests from August 1936, to August 1937, and by Lorna Gay Co. as general manager from August 1938–39; he was also employed as office manager and buyer by the Marena Co. Respondent Steve W. Phillips was employed by the Marena Co. as manager of prize contests from August 1937 to August 1938.

Respondent Prentice W. Shaw acted as counsel for the Lorna Gay Co. and respondent Winship Corporation, and on the 20th day of December 1939, was appointed attorney in fact for the Winship Corporation, for the purpose of dissolving and winding up its affairs. Respondent Prentice W. Shaw also acted as attorney in the incorporation of the Winship Corporation in the fall of 1939, and opened on behalf of the corporation its "prize account" in a Des Moines bank.

Respondent George Schaffer was employed by the Sterling Co. as the manager of its prize contests from June 1935 to May 1936, and was employed by the Knight Co., Marena Co., and Lorna Gay Co. and the Winship Corporation as head of their printing departments, and was, from October 22, 1939, to December 20, 1939, a member of the board of directors of the Winship Corporation.

Some time subsequent to June 1936, respondents Richard E. Williams and Walter C. Phillips entered into a limited partnership to engage in operating and conducting a prize contest under the trade name Knight Co. Richard E. Williams received two-thirds of the profits of the Knight Co., all of which except about 5 percent he distributed to the investors under his contract with them during the first prize contest, and he so distributed the remainder of the profit from the second prize contest with the exception of 10 percent, which he retained. The first of these contests was run under the trade name Knight Co., and the second under the trade name Marena Co.

During October 1938, after the physical assets of the Knight Co. had been transferred by respondent Richard E. Williams to respondent A. Leonard Anderson, respondents A. Leonard Anderson, Lester R. Sandahl, Lucius W. Fitch, R. H. Young and Warren Lee Eastman opened up a checking account for the Lorna Gay Co. at the Valley Savings Bank of Des Moines, Iowa. Respondent Lucius W. Fitch was an officer of the respondent F. W. Fitch Co. and a director in said bank. Shortly thereafter the said bank, without investigating the credit standing of either the Lorna Gay Co. or its officers, loaned this company the sum of $10,000. The loan was secured by a chattel mortgage on the equipment of said company, and was not guaranteed by any of the respondents herein.

In the course and conduct of said business the individual respondents herein, individually and in cooperation with one or more of said respondents named herein, have engaged in the aforesaid acts and practices in furtherance of a common plan to disseminate the advertisements set out in paragraph 4 hereof, and in order to continue said business in interstate commerce.

PAR. 4. In the conduct and operation of the various prize contests hereinbefore mentioned, said respondents, to the extent and in the manner set out in paragraph 3 hereof, and through the Helen Dawn Co., Co-Ed Co., Inc., Paramount Products Co., Betty White Corporation, Paradise Co., Century Co., Sterling Co., Knight Co., Marena Co., Lorna Gay Co., Van Dear Products, Ltd., E. M. Davis Co., Nannette, Inc., Super-Franklin Co., Winship Corporation and Thomsen-King & Co., Inc., have disseminated and have caused the dissemination of false advertisements by means of the United States Mails, by insertions in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which were distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said cosmetic products in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, are the following:

1. That the simple act of sending in a correct solution to a puzzle or contest will entitle the contestant to one of the grand prize awards, and that such prize will be given free without the expenditure of either money or work on the part of such contestant.

2. That said respondents are conducting a prize contest and giving free substantial sums of money or other awards as a means of advertising their products.

3. That the recipient of a so-called "Grand Prize Promptness Certificate" has gained an advantage for himself by virtue of skill in solving a puzzle and that an award is guaranteed or assured by simply mailing in such certificate to said respondents.

4. That the purchasers of small quantities of cosmetics stand in as favorable a position as large quantity purchasers of said cosmetics, offering them a favorable or reasonable chance of winning the grand prize or any other of the cash prizes offered.

5. That the telegrams, requests for contestants' photographs and other forms of encouragement received by contestants indicates that said contestant is about to, or is certain or likely to, win a cash prize in said contest.

6. That said cosmetics are of national reputation and are of such quality that resale to the general public is not difficult.

7. That a money prize or reward is guaranteed to that person who becomes a member of one of the so-called "Prize Clubs," and that such members are among the leading contestants.

8. That by the simple act of responding to the advertising of respondents and to literature received from respondents, and to the requests therein made by respondents, such contestants will receive or win a specified grand prize, or various other prizes.

9. That hundreds have already won big cash prizes in similar friendship campaigns conducted by the same prize company which is conducting the current contest.

10. That the preparations and products sold to persons who enter said contest are sold at reduced prices and at less than an established retail price and value.

11. That the recipient of points or votes in the form of a certificate of award is the subject of a special favor or advantage not generally extended to other individual contestants, and that the said points or votes substantially enhance the chance of said recipient toward the winning of one or more of the prizes offered by respondents.

12. That respondents under each of the trade names used by them have been in business for a long period of years and have an established reputation with respect to their products and for business success.

13. That the giving of a certain order for goods and the payment of a specified amount therefor, will assure the contestant addressed of securing a money prize.

14. That so-called advice and suggestions given in letters to contestants are due to a personal interest in the contestant addressed and that such advice and suggestions are given exclusively to the one addressed.

15. That such contestant or person addressed stands in a position equal to or superior to that of other contestants, and has a favorable or reasonable chance of winning the grand prize or various other of the prizes offered.

16. That the prize company conducting the contest is a manufacturing concern and that such company originates, compounds, and prepares the preparations and products sold by it.

17. That there is no element of lottery in connection with the content or sale of the merchandise.

18. That by answering promptly, or before a given date, the contestant will qualify for his share of the prize money that must be given away for advertising purposes.

19. That the sending of one or more initial payments completely qualifies the participant for the promptness prize, or other awards.

20. That the certificate of award, diploma, or other forms supplied to the participant are good for an emolument or advantage not held by other contestants.

21. That in the preliminary stages the contestant has already made such progress that his choice of prize is requested, and that his score is so high that a request for his photograph is warranted.

22. That the receipt of a facsimile check for various sums of money indicates that the recipient is in a favorable or reasonable position to win the amount indicated on said check.

PAR. 5. Said advertisements are false and misleading in the following material respects:

The puzzle or picture contest and offer of awards or prizes in connection therewith, is used solely as a means of obtaining the names of people who will later be encouraged to enter a competitive selling contest, and this puzzle contest is but the initial step in a system of effecting sales.

In truth and in fact, respondents do not conduct any contest involving competition among contestants in promptness or skill as a means of advertising their products and of gaining publicity for the aforesaid cosmetics. The picture puzzle advertised by respondents is so simple of solution as to remove it from the category of a competitive contest or contest of skill, and is such that a substantial number, or the majority if not all, of the persons responding thereto would submit correct solutions. The said advertised puzzle contest and offer of awards or prizes in connection therewith, is but a deceptive form of "bait" or "decoy," attractive to the innocent, unwary, and unsuspecting members of the buying public, and has been and is used by respondents as the initial step in a system of effecting sales.

The various contests conducted by respondents are buying contests requiring quantity purchases of respondents' cosmetic products by the contestants or persons entered therein. The winning of a prize is dependent upon the quantities of respondents' products which are purchased by the individual contestants and has no material connection with the promptness or solution of any picture puzzle or other form of contest. In fact, in order to win any such contest the contestant must necessarily purchase quantities of respondents' cosmetics equal to, or in excess of, the awards or prizes granted. The sums of money or other awards given by said respondents as prizes are not, in fact, prizes, but instead, each constitutes a bonus for the sales made by the individual contestant.

The conditions and requirements for winning a prize offered by said respondents are neither easy nor simple. Respondents do not generally disclose these facts, but otherwise so obscure them that for the most part they are not ascertained by contestants or persons responding to such sales promotional literature until after said persons have made one or more purchases of assortments of the cosmetics distributed by said respondents.

The aforesaid false and misleading representations are joined together as integral parts of the system employed by respondents in selling their products to persons responding to the puzzle or other form of contest. Having first created the general impression in the minds of persons responding thereto that each has a certain or reasonable chance of winning one or more of the prizes offered, the plan moves to a system of awarding points or votes to contestants in the form of printed certificates which, by their form and substance, grossly exaggerate the value or significance of said award in relation to the recipient's chance or chances of winning any prize. Such practice also serves to, and does in fact, create and enliven the impression that the recipient does, in fact, have a certain or reasonable chance of winning a prize.

By means of such certificates and accompanying circulars and letters, said respondents create the impression in the mind of the recipient that such recipient is the subject of a special favor or advantage as a contestant, and that the award of points or votes is, in itself, sufficient to entitle the recipient to consideration as a contestant at the time of the final award of prizes. The award of points or votes following the initial award is conditioned solely upon, and made incident to, purchase orders for products of said respondents.

The interest and zeal of each respondent to acquire additional points, or votes, through purchases, are repeatedly heightened by way of false and materially misleading assurances, requests for photographs, statements implying personal interest in the particular contestant, and other means implying that such contestant is sure or certain to be a winner of one of the prizes offered by these companies. By these means repeated orders are thus induced, in the course of which, sales resistance is further decreased by means of false and misleading statements and representations with reference to the reputed quality and value, and the prices of the products offered. It is not made clear to each contestant that these contests are selling contests until after one or more purchases have been made, and these companies also misrepresent the standing of individual contestants, as a means of stimulating additional purchases.

In the course and conduct of their various prize contests, said respondents do not grant any special favor or interest to any particular contestant, as represented and implied, and the representations made by the respondents to the effect that any particular contestant has an advantage toward the winning of any prize offered is without basis of fact, and serves only as a stimulation for the purchase of additional cosmetics. The awards of points or votes in the early stages of the contest, and incident to the first purchase order, have no material or substantial value, and, as among the great majority of recipients, the same do not give rise to, or materially or substantially enhance, the chance or chances of winning any money or prize. The majority of persons addressed by respondents at no time stand in any position affording them a favorable chance of winning the grand prize, or any other of the money prizes offered. The products offered are not of established reputation, in use among usual retail outlets, are not offered at a reduction in established retail prices, and are not introductory, or for advertising purposes.

PAR. 6. By the aforesaid means, respondents accomplish the maximum number of sales in the course of the system's operation, and as a result, have sold, entirely through and by means of each contest, to between 10,000 and 234,000 individual contestants, each of whom was induced to spend sums of money ranging from a few dollars up to and including, in one instance, $11,000. By this practice respondents have sold as much as $1,643,000 in cosmetics to contestants in one of said contests.

At various stages of progress of the contest, respondents furnished to contestants, and urged the use by them of certain punch or pull cards, or other devices involving a lottery or game of chance in the resale of the products purchased by contestants from respondents. The sale of cosmetics to the purchasing public in this manner involves a game of chance, or the sale of a chance to procure said cosmetics through a lottery in which the article to be purchased and the price to be paid for such article are determined entirely by chance. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their cosmetics. The sale of said cosmetics by and through the use of such sales plans or methods is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States of America, and in violation of the criminal laws of many of the States of the United States.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute cosmetics in competition with respondents, as hereinabove alleged, are unwilling to adopt or use said plans or methods, or any method involving a lottery, game of chance or the sale of a chance to select and pay for said cosmetics by chance, or any other methods that are contrary to public policy or in violation of criminal statutes, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons have been attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their cosmetics and the element of chance involved therein, and have been thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' cosmetics in preference to cosmetics offered for sale and sold by competitors of respondents who are likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of cosmetics in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondents, because of such lottery or game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof, substantial injury is being done and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. In addition to the acts and practices hereinabove set forth, said respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements, in the same manner as hereinabove set forth, with reference to the effectiveness of the use of their various cosmetics, to the effect that said cosmetics will restore a youthful condition of the skin, produce a youthful appearance, make skin younger, remove wrinkles and worry lines, tone and strengthen the muscles, help make gums healthy, and also that the retail value or worth of said cosmetics is greatly in excess of the prices at which they are offered.

In truth and in fact, the aforesaid statements, representations, and advertisements hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set-out herein, are false, misleading and deceptive, for the reason that none of said preparations will restore a youthful condition of the skin, produce a youthful appearance, make the skin younger, remove wrinkles and worry lines, tone and strengthen the muscles, or help make the gums healthy, nor are the said cosmetics of the regular or customary retail value or worth as represented by the respondents.

PAR. 8. The use by said respondents of the aforesaid acts and practices, and methods, and the aforesaid false, misleading and deceptive representations, statements and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, in soliciting and offering for sale and selling various cosmetics by means of so-called prize contests, has had and now has a tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid false, misleading, and deceptive representations and statements are true, and induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public to purchase quantities of respondents' cosmetics on account of such erroneous and mistaken belief, and as a result thereof, trade has been unfairly diverted to respondents from their said competitors.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents—except J. G. Hamer, B. Brown, H. Rosenstein, Claude T. Burnett, Ross J. Miller, Joseph

Kane, and F. W. Fitch Co.—and Walter Rubens—as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

For more than 10 years last past, respondents—except J. G. Hamer, B. Brown, H. Rosenstein, Claude T. Burnett, Ross J. Miller, Joseph Kane, Walter Rubens, and the F. W. Fitch Co.—have entered into and engaged in wrongful and unlawful understandings and agreements with each other, and with others, to do and continue to do, directly or indirectly, the unlawful acts and practices as herein set forth, in furtherance of a common plan, in order to continue said business in interstate commerce and to avoid and render ineffectual the orders and other processes of the Federal Trade Commission; and such acts and practices are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of their competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answers of all the respondents except Thomsen-King & Co., Inc., evidence introduced before Randolph Preston, a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission theretofore designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint, the report of the trial examiner thereon, a stipulation as to the facts, and briefs filed on behalf of the Commission and of respondents; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that all of the respondents except J. G. Hamer, B. Brown, H. Rosenstein, Claude T. Burnett, Ross J. Miller, Joseph Kane, Walter Rubens, and the F. W. Fitch Co., a corporation, have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Thomsen-King & Co., Inc., The Winship Corporation (corporations), and their respective officers, directors, agents, representatives, and employees, and respondents James M. Woodman, Jesse L. Stewart, Merrold Johnson, G. Fred Stayton, Joseph Furth, Albert L. Bisson, Leta M. Frazier (formerly Leta M. Clanton), Glenn Tate, George Thomsen, Amber M. McCluskey, James L. Decker, Sibley F. Everitt, Walter G. Phillips, Paul H. Williams, Don M. Parmelee (named in complaint as Don W. Parmelee), George Schaffer, Evelyn Henderson, Richard E. Williams, Prentice W. Shaw, John E. Woodman, Steve W. Phillips, Warren Lee Eastman, Ernie A. Storesund, A. Leonard Anderson, Gerald G. Grant, W. W. Young, Paul Manning, Fred W. Fitch, Mrs. Fred W. Fitch, Lucius W. Fitch, Mrs. Lucius W. Fitch, Gail W. Fitch, Mrs. Gail W. Fitch, Lester R. Sandahl, Mrs. Lester R. Sandahl, Richard H. Young, and Mrs. Richard H. Young, individuals, and their respective representatives, agents, and employees, either individually or by any concerted or cooperative action, agreement, or understanding between any two or more of the respondents, or between any one or more of said respondents and others, directly or indirectly, or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of cosmetics, toilet preparations or other items of merchandise, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United-States mails, or by any means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, in connection with a contest wherein the purchase or sale of cosmetics or other articles of merchandise is essential to participation in any awards given, which advertisement—

(a) Represents directly or by implication that the respondents are conducting a contest confined to the solution of a picture puzzle or any similar device which involves only competition in skill in submitting solutions thereof, without the expenditure of either money or work on the part of contestants in order to win a prize, or that the respondents are conducting a contest of any character other than one wherein the purchase or sale by the contestants of cosmetics or other articles of merchandise is essential to participation in any grand prize, cash prize or other award to be given.

(b) Represents directly or by implication that the respondents are giving away a substantial sum of money or merchandise in the form of prizes to a certain limited number of persons as an introductory or advertising offer through a contest, when the conduct of such so-called contest in fact constitutes the ordinary and usual course of business followed by the respondents.

(c) Represents, directly or by implication, that the awards or prizes offered will be determined or augmented by promptness in answering the advertisement of respondents or in complying with similar conditions named therein.

(d) Represents, directly or by implication, that the winning of the grand prize or any other prize offered by the respondents depends in whole or in part upon lot or chance.

(e) Represents, directly or by implication, that the preparations and products sold to persons who enter said contest are sold at wholesale prices, or at special prices not available to the general public.

(f) Represents, directly or by implication, that respondents' various products are of national reputation, or that said products are of such quality that resale to the general public is not difficult.

(g) Represents, directly or by implication, that any of the respondents are manufacturing concerns, or that they originate, prepare or compound the preparations and products sold by them.

(h) Represents, directly or by implication, that respondents' cosmetic preparations, or any of them, will restore a youthful condition to the skin, produce a youthful appearance, make the skin younger, remove wrinkles or worry lines, tone or strengthen the muscles, or that respondents' dental preparations help to make gums healthy; or

(i) Fails to reveal to prospective contestants that participation in the awards given depends in whole or in part, as the case may be, upon the purchase or sale of cosmetics or other articles of merchandise.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement, by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of any of their said preparations, which advertisements contain any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

3. Representing, directly or indirectly, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of cosmetics, toilet preparations, and other items of merchandise in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of a contest wherein the purchase or sale of cosmetics or other articles of merchandise is essential to participation in any of the awards given.

(a) That offers made to individual contestants are exclusive to the individual addressed, and that such individual has been selected for special individual favor, or has been granted an exclusive advantage in a contest, or that credits given or offered give the recipient thereof substantial, advanced standing in a contest over that of others entered therein, or that such credits are given or offered to the individual addressed, exclusively.

(b) That letters written to contestants and prospective contestants are personal to the one addressed, or that the person addressed is about to be the recipient of the grand prize or other prize offered, or that there is nothing to buy or sell in order to participate in the grand prize contest.

(c) That the giving of a certain order for goods and the payment of a specified amount therefor will assure the contestant addressed of securing a money prize or other award.

(d) That the respondents, or any one connected with them has a personal interest in any particular contestant, by means of letters giving so-called advice or suggestions to such contestant, or that such letters of advice are given exclusively to the contestant addressed.

4. The use, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of cosmetics, toilet preparations, or other items of merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by means of a contest wherein the purchase or sale of cosmetics or other articles of merchandise is essential to participation in any awards given, of—

(a) Congratulatory letters, requests for photographs, purported membership certificates in so-called prize clubs, certificates of award, diplomas, facsimile checks, or other similar means, during the course of any so-called contest, which imply that the recipient is about to win a cash prize, grand prize, or other award in such contest, or that said contestant is within a class which is certain to win some award to be given during the course of the contest.

(b) Advertising matter in any contest in which are set-out a portion of the terms and conditions the contestant will be required to meet, without stating that said terms and conditions so specified and set-out are, in fact, only a portion of the requirements which must be met by contestants in order to enter into or win the contest advertised by the respondents.

(c) Advertising matter in any contest which does not disclose all of the terms and conditions which must be performed by the contestant in order to be successful in winning any prize in said contest.

5. Selling or distributing in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, cosmetics or any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such merchandise to the public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, push or pull cards, pull tabs, punchboards, or other lottery devices, with either assortments of cosmetics or any other merchandise, or separately, which said push cards, pull cards, pull tabs, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

Selling or otherwise disposing of cosmetics or any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the complaint herein be, and the same hereby is, dismissed as to respondents J. G. Hamer, B. Brown, H. Rosenstein, Claude T. Burnett, Ross J. Miller, Joseph Kane, and Walter Rubens, individuals, and F. W. Fitch Co., a corporation.

It is further ordered, That Thomsen-King & Co., Inc., and The Winship Corporation, corporations, James M. Woodman, Jesse L. Stewart, Merrold Johnson, G. Fred Stayton, Joseph Furth, Albert L. Bisson, Leta M. Frazier, Glenn Tate, George Thomsen, Amber M. McCluskey, James L. Decker, Sibley F. Everitt, Walter C. Phillips, Paul H. Williams, Don M. Parmelee, George Schaffer, Evelyn Henderson, Richard E. Williams, Prentice W. Shaw, John E. Woodman, Steve W. Phillips, Warren Lee Eastman, Ernie A. Storesund, A. Leonard Anderson, Gerald G. Grant, W. W. Young, Paul Manning, Fred W. Fitch, Mrs. Fred W. Fitch, Lucius W. Fitch, Mrs. Lucius W. Fitch, Gail W. Fitch, Mrs. Gail W. Fitch, Lester R. Sandahl, Mrs. Lester R. Sandahl, Richard H. Young, and Mrs. Richard H. Young, shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

OMEGA MANUFACTURING COMPANY, INC., TRADING AS OMEGA ELECTROLYSIS INSTITUTE, AND MILTON L. BROWNSHIELD, INDIVIDUALLY AND AS AN OFFICER THEREOF

Docket 4146. Complaint, May 31, 1940—Decision, June 12, 1941

Where a corporation, and an individual who was an officer thereof and formulated, controlled, and directed its policies, acts and practices, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of a device or apparatus designated as the "Omega Home Use Portable Machine" and as "Omega Method," for removal of unwanted hair; by advertisements disseminated through the mails, in magazines, circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature—

(a) Represented that said device was an effective, efficient, safe and scientific apparatus for the electrolytic removal of superfluous hair by individual self-application at home, that such removal of hair was permanent, and that said device was foolproof, painless, pleasant, quick, simple, and easy to use, and would have no ill effects upon the body;

Facts being its operation required the services of a skilled operator acquainted with anatomy and physiology, particularly of the areas to be covered, and also with bacteriology and sepsis, as well as with the properties of the machine used; proper use by lay person was extremely difficult, while improper use might cause scarring, pitting, or infection, with particular danger where used on pigmented or cancerous moles or syphilitic lesions and possibility of infection leading to abscess of the brain; use thereof was not painless or pleasant, since insertion of the needle and the electric current might be very painful, depending upon the toleration of the individual skin; and it would not remove superfluous hair quickly, but process required a long time, since hairs must be removed individually and care taken not to remove those adjacent because of danger to the tissue; and

(b) Failed to reveal facts material in the light of aforesaid representations and that use of said device under prescribed or usual conditions might result in permanent disfigurement or cause infections or other irreparable injury to health, and that said device should not be used to remove hair from cancerous or syphilitic lesions, pigmented moles, or other areas showing pathological conditions;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that such representations were true, and of inducing it, because of such belief, to purchase their said device or apparatus:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Robert S. Hall, trial examiner.
Mr. William L. Taggart for the Commission.
Mr. Samuel Z. Cohen, of New York City, for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Omega Manufacturing Co., Inc., a corporation, trading as Omega Electrolysis Institute, and Milton L. Brownshield, individually and as an officer of said corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Omega Manufacturing Co., Inc., is a corporation created, organized, and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business at 516 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y., from which address said corporate respondent also transacts business as Omega Electrolysis Institute. Milton L. Brownshield is an individual, and is also president and treasurer of Omega Manufacturing Co., Inc., with his office and principal place of business at the same address as said corporate respondent.

Respondent, Milton L. Brownshield, as an officer of said corporate respondent, formulates, controls, and directs the policies, acts, and practices of said corporate respondent. Said respondents act in conjunction and cooperation with each other in performing the acts and practices hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 2. The respondents are now, and for more than one year last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a certain device or apparatus, designated as the Omega Home Use Portable Machine, recommended for use in the electrolytic removal of superfluous hair from the human body by individual self-application in the home.

In the course and conduct of their business, the respondents cause said device or apparatus when sold to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein, have maintained a course of trade in said device or apparatus in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said product; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of, the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by United States mails, by advertisements in magazines, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

Omega is the only scientific electrolysis needle—it is a modern marvel.

Electrolysis has the endorsement of the medical profession.

Respectful of the Codes of Ethics of the Medical Societies.

PAR. 4. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent that their device, designated as Omego Home Use Portable Machine, is an effective, efficient, safe and scientific apparatus for the electrolytic removel of superfluous hair from the human body by individual self-application in the home, that the removal of said hair is permanent; that it is foolproof, painless, pleasant, quick, simple and easy to use, and will have no ill effects upon the human body.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, the device or apparatus sold and distributed by the respondents as aforesaid, designated as Omega Home Use Portable Machine, is composed principally of an electric battery to which is attached two cords, one cord terminating in an electrode and the other cord terminating in a needle. The said needle is inserted into the hair follicle for the purpose of destroying the root of the hair by electrolysis, which process may cause serious injury to health. The said device is not an effective, efficient and scientific apparatus for the electrolytic removal of superfluous hair from the human body by individual self-application in the home. Said device will not accomplish the results claimed by the respondents and is not safe, foolproof and painless when used by the unskilled lay public.

PAR. 6. In addition to the representations hereinabove set forth, the respondents have also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in the manner above set forth in that said advertisements so disseminated fail to reveal that the use of said device under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

The use of said device under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual by persons not trained in the technique of removing superfluous hair from the human body by electrolysis may result in serious or irreparable injury to health or permanent disfigurement.

Such use, as aforesaid, may result in local infections, erysipelas, skin burns, scarring, metallic tattoo marks, pitting and permanent disfigurement. When infection occurs in the nose, on the upper lip or over the glabella, it may be so serious as to cause irreparable injury to health, and in those instances where the device and method are applied to cancerous or syphilitic lesions, which are not recognizable as such by the layman, fatal consequences may result from infection.

The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations with respect to their device or apparatus, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and advertisements are true and induce a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' said device or apparatus.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 31, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint upon the respondents, Omega Manufacturing Co., Inc., a corporation, trading as Omega Electrolysis Institute, and Milton L. Brownshield, individually and as officer of said corporation, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by William L. Taggart, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Samuel Z. Cohen, attorney for the respondents, before Robert S. Hall, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed by the respondents or oral argument requested), and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Omega Manufacturing Co., Inc., is a corporation created, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business at 516 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y., from which address said corporate respondent also transacts business as Omega Electrolysis Institute. Milton L. Brownshield is an individual, and is also president and treasurer of Omega Manufacturing Co., Inc., with his office and principal place of business at the same address as said corporate respondent.

Respondent, Milton L. Brownshield, as an officer of said corporate respondent, formulates, controls, and directs the policies, acts and practices of said corporate respondent. Said respondents act in conjunction and cooperation with each other in performing the acts and practices hereinafter found.

PAR. 2. The respondents are now, and for more than one year last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a certain device or apparatus, designated as the "Omega Home Use Portable Machine" and as "Omega Method," recommended for use in the electrolytic removal of superfluous hair from the human body by individual self-application in the home.

In the course and conduct of their business, the respondents cause said device or apparatus when sold to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein, have maintained a course of trade in said device or apparatus in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said product; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said product in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by United States mails, by advertisements in magazines. and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

The needle is inserted into the hair follicle, usually from 1/16 to 3/16 of an inch beneath the surface of the skin. The current produced by the device brings about a chemical action which destroys the root of the hair.

The operation of this device requires the services of a skilled operator who must be acquainted with anatomy and physiology, particularly of the areas to be covered, and also with bacteriology and sepsis, as well as the properties of the machine used. The skin must be properly examined and prepared before the use of electrolysis and the operator must be able to determine when enough current has been used, as the amount of current necessary depends upon differences in response of the hair follicle treated.

It is extremely difficult for a lay person to properly use this device and to insert the needle naturally so as to reach the hair follicle without injury to the surrounding tissue. Improper use of this device might cause scarring, pitting, or infection. There is particular danger in the use of this device on the areas of the upper lip or around the nose by reason of the nature of the blood supply and the lymphatic system in that area, enabling an infection to easily spread up through the nose to the sinuses or the brain, causing abscess of the brain, with very serious results.

The use of this device to remove hairs from some pigmented moles may have very serious consequences, as it might stimulate the pigmented cells to growth terminating in cancer which ordinarily would remain in the quiescent state, and the insertion of this needle into a cancerous mole might cause dissemination of the cancer cells all over the body. The use of this device to remove hairs from syphilitic lesions or other areas showing local pathological conditions might produce serious injury.

Respondents' device is not painless or pleasant to use, as the insertion of the needle as provided in the use of this device, together with the electric current, is very painful, depending upon the toleration of the individual skin upon which the device is used. It will not remove superfluous hair quickly, but is a process requiring a long period of time, as the hairs must be removed individually and care must be taken not to remove adjacent hairs during one operation, because of the danger to the tissue.

PAR. 6. In addition to the representations hereinabove set forth, respondents are also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in the manner above set forth, in that said advertisements so disseminated fail to reveal facts material in the light of such representations and fail to reveal that the use of said device or apparatus under conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in permanent disfigurement or cause infections or other irreparable injury to health and that said device should not be used to remove hair from cancerous or syphilitic lesions, pigmented moles, or other areas showing local pathological conditions.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to their device or apparatus, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and advertisements are true and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' said device or apparatus.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Omega Manufacturing Co., Inc., a corporation, trading as Omega Electrolysis Institute or trading under any other trade name, and its officers, and respondent Milton L. Brownshield, an individual and their respective representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of their device or apparatus designated as "Omega Home Use Portable Machine," or "Omega Method," or of any other device or apparatus of substantially similar composition or construction or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of the United States mails or by any means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference, that respondents' device "Omega Home Use Portable Machine," or "Omega Method," is a safe device for the electrolytic removal of superfluous hair from the human body by individual self-application in the home; that said device is painless, pleasant, quick or simple and easy to use; that said device will have no ill effects upon the human body, or which advertisement fails to reveal that the use of said device or apparatus by persons not trained in the technique of removing superfluous hair from the human body by electrolysis may result in permanent disfigurement, cause infections or other irreparable injury to health, and that said device should not be used to remove hair from cancerous or syphilitic lesions, pigmented moles or other areas showing local pathological conditions;

2. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said device or apparatus designated "Omega Home Use Portable Machine," or "Omega Method," which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof or which fails to reveal that the use of said device or apparatus by persons not trained in the technique of removing superfluous hair from the human body by electrolysis may result in permanent disfigurement, cause infections or other irreparable injury to health, and that said device should not be used to remove hair from cancerous or syphilitic lesions, pigmented moles or other areas showing local pathological conditions.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 10 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing, stating whether they intend to comply with this order and, if so, the manner and form in which they intend to comply, and that within 60 days after service upon them of this order, said respondents shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

MAX COHEN, TRADING AS UNITED SALES COMPANY, UNITED ART DISPLAY AND SALES COMPANY, ETC.

Docket 4161. Complaint, June 13, 1940—Decision, June 12, 1941

Where an individual engaged in interstate sale and distribution of photographic enlargements and frames therefor by house to house canvassing in various states; soliciting orders for enlargements through his "initial salesmen" or "grabbers" who traveled in crews of varying size under crew managers, and whose general plan was to call upon the prospect, usually the woman of the house, making a $2 charge for an enlargement, with one-half payable as a deposit and retained as the "grabber's" commission, while the balance was payable on delivery of the picture by the second agent or "proof passer" and frame salesman—

(a) Falsely represented that his business was operated under the sanction of the United States Supreme Court through a statement on the "Authorization and Identification Certificate," supplied its salesmen, reading "The Bearer of This Document is Operating Under the Sanction of THE UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT * * * The bearer of this document is engaged in Interstate Commerce, a field over which only the Federal Government has jurisdiction";

(b) Falsely represented on order blanks or "Certificates" and orally through his salesmen, directly or by implication, that its colored or tinted photographic enlargements were paintings;

(c) Represented to prospects that said individual, doing business under different trade names, was engaged in procuring pictures for use in art displays and magazine advertisements, that a contest was being conducted at which a number of pictures were to be exhibited and that the customer whose picture was selected would receive from $100 to $2,000, dependent upon the revenue obtained from the agency which might use it; advising prospect, after looking over various photographs and selecting one or more, that the picture would certainly win a prize, but that in order to enter it it would be necessary to have an enlargement made at a cost of $2; and

(d) Represented through the second representative or "passer" calling with customer's enlargement, that the picture had been selected in a preliminary contest to compete for first prize or to be put on exhibition at Chicago, Kansas City, or other large city, but that in order to enter it in such final contest or exhibit it would be necessary that the picture be tinted or framed in a certain way, and that said representative or "passer" was in a position to supply the necessary frame, and that individual referred to would pay half the cost thereof, varying from $6.90 to $14.90 to the customer, and from 70 cents to $2 to individual aforesaid;

Facts being said individual was not engaged in securing photographs for advertising, or in conducting contests or displaying exhibits of them, but primarily in the sale of enlargements and frames therefor, to accomplishment of which there were directed said elaborate sales methods; representation that a particular picture had won a prize was false and fraudulent and made solely to induce purchase of a frame, of which he did not pay one-half the cost, being on the contrary, engaged in sale of frames costing him from 70 cents to $2 at aforesaid exorbitant prices, and his initial offer of 10 by 16 photographic enlargement for $2 was not a special advertising offer, as set forth on salesman's order blank, but his regular method of securing orders;

With the result of placing in the hands of salesmen a means of misleading and deceiving the purchasing public and with the effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion thereof into the erroneous belief that the said representations were true, and of thereby inducing the purchase of substantial quantities of said enlargements and frames:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.
Mr. Merle P. Lyon for the Commission.
Minton & Minton, of Los Angeles, Calif., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Max Cohen is an individual trading variously as United Sales Co., United Art Display and Sales Co., Art Display Co., United Art Display Co., and United Display Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 4042 South Broadway Place, Los Angeles, Calif. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of photographic enlargements and of frames therefor. Respondent, through the medium of salesmen or representatives appointed by him as agents in his behalf, sells his products to customers located in States other than the State of California. In consummating such sales and in distributing such products, respondent causes the photographic enlargements and frames, when sold by him, to be transported from his place of business in Los Angeles in the State of California to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent causes agents and representatives employed by him to visit the homes of prospective customers in the cities, towns, and rural communities of the various States of the United States. The sales plan employed by respondent involves the use of two types of agents. The first type of agent, known in the trade as a "grabber" or "initial solicitor," makes the initial contact with the prospective purchaser by means of a house-to-house canvass ostensibly for the purpose of obtaining photographs, usually of children, for enlargement. The second type of agent used is the "proof passer" or frame salesman who delivers the enlargement and endeavors to sell a frame therefor.

PAR. 3. Respondent supplies to both the initial salesmen and frame salesmen an "Authorization and Identification Certificate" for use in connection with sales made on behalf of his various trade name companies, by means of which the respondent represents that the salesman is a duly authorized agent of the respondent and is acting under the sanction of the Supreme Court of the United States, which certificate reads in part as follows:

This is to certify that the bearer _____ whose signature appears below, is authorized to take orders for our portraits, miniatures and oil paintings providing that such orders are taken on our contracts and in accordance with the printed stipulations * * *.

The Bearer of This Document is Operating Under the Sanction of The United States Supreme Court. The bearer of this document is engaged in Interstate Commerce, a field over which only the Federal Government has jurisdiction.

PAR. 4. The initial salesmen travel in crews of varying size who are under the immediate supervision of crew managers employed, controlled, and directed by the respondent. The orders for enlargements, together with the original pictures, are transmitted to respondent at his home office in Los Angeles, Calif., and the enlargement work is done by a photographer employed by respondent on a contract basis of 25 cents per enlargement. Respondent charges $2 for making a 10- by 16-inch enlargement of a photograph or snapshot, one-half of which sum is required as a deposit at the time the order is taken. The balance is payable at the time the enlargement is delivered. The initial solicitor keeps the deposit paid by the customer and receives one-fourth of the remainder, if and when paid by the customer. He also participates in the receipts from the sales of frames to those customers whose orders for enlargements are taken by him.

PAR. 5. The initial salesmen carry order blanks, supplied to them by respondent. These order blanks, designated as "certificates" read, in part, as follows:

Special Advertising Offer

One Beautiful Duo Tone Reproduction For $2.00. In order to select pictures for our home exhibit we will make you one of our beautiful Duo Tone Reproductions, size 10 by 16, black and white, unframed for only $2.00.

Valuable Prizes Will Be Awarded To All Portraits Framed and Accepted For Art Exhibit.

These salesmen represent to the prospective customer that the respondent is engaged in securing photographs of children to be sold for advertising purposes to manufacturers of children's products; that there is a large demand for such pictures, and that substantial sums of money are paid therefor. Specific references are then made to a picture supposedly sold by the respondent to some large nationally recognized manufacturer of children's products, or to amounts customarily paid by such concerns for pictures of children. These salesmen then represent that, in order to obtain acceptable pictures, the respondent is conducting a contest in which valuable prizes are awarded, such as large cash prizes, wrist watches, radios, silverware, vacuum cleaners, cameras, pearls, and jewelry. In addition to the prizes given, it is further represented that the winning pictures are to be placed on display in exhibits conducted by the respondent in leading cities throughout the United States.

After thus securing the attention and interest of the prospective customer, the salesman requests permission to examine pictures of the children of the prospective customer, and after an apparent careful scrutiny of available pictures the salesman selects one which he declares to be an outstanding picture, one that is practically certain of winning a prize in the contest.

The salesman then represents to the prospective customer that all pictures entered into the contest must be of a uniform size, 10 by 16 inches, and that the respondent will make an enlargement of the picture for $2. During the sales talk the initial solicitor carefully refrains from any reference to frames, and if any question relative thereto is raised by the customer, the salesman assures the customer that she will not be required to purchase a frame in order to enter the contest, and that the only cost to the customer will be the $2 paid for the enlargement. After the customer is induced by the aforesaid representations to sign the order for the enlargement, she pays the $1 deposit to the salesman, who thereupon forwards the original picture and order to the respondent as hereinbefore set-out.

Respondent's salesman and representatives conceal and have concealed from purchasers at the time the photographic enlargement is ordered that it will be delivered in such a peculiar form, shape, and size that it will be impossible for the customer thereafter to obtain a frame to fit it except from the respondent and at prices exacted by respondent therefor.

Respondent through and by means of salesmen variously represents that the tinted enlargements of photographs are oil paintings, paintings or hand-painted portraits.

PAR. 6. After the enlargements have been made, the original pictures and enlargements thereof are sent by respondent to other salesmen employed by respondent, who are known in the trade as "proof passers." The sale of enlargements is merely incidental to respondent's plan of operation, the entire sales plan and each of its integral and component parts having been studiously devised for the purpose of inducing and procuring the sale of frames. The "proof passer" or frame salesman delivers the enlargement to the customer, collects the unpaid balance on the photographic enlargement and seeks to sell the customer a frame for the picture.

In furtherance of this plan and for the purpose of inducing the sale of a frame, the frame salesman informs the customer that such customer's photograph has been selected in the preliminary judging as one of four pictures to receive prizes, and that a final judging will subsequently be held to determine the rating of these four pictures. He explains that in order to enter the picture in the final judging it is necessary to have it framed, and calls the customer's attention to the provision of the written order previously taken by the initial salesman providing that "valuable prizes will be awarded to all portraits framed and accepted for art exhibits." He further represents that the respondent will pay half the cost of the frame, and will, in addition, make an oil painting of the picture free of charge. He further represents that the customer cannot possibly lose, since the value of even the fourth prize is in excess of the amount required to be paid for the frame.

By means of the aforesaid representation or variations thereof, the customer in many cases is induced and persuaded to sign an order for a frame. The frame salesman collects a deposit on said order, and the transaction is consummated in the manner more particularly hereinafter set forth.

Frame salesmen receive their entire remuneration from commissions on the sale of frames, ranging from 35 to 45 percent, depending on the cost of the frame selected by the customer. If the frame salesman is successful in receiving an order for the frame, he forwards the original picture and enlargement back to the respondent in Los Angeles, for tinting and framing of the enlaregement.

The frame and tinted enlargement is then sent by respondent direct, to the customer by parcel post c. o. d. for the balance remaining due on the frame. Frames are sold by respondent at three prices, to wit, $7.90, $9.90 and $14.90, depending on the frame selected. The cost of said frames to the respondent is respectively $1.25, $1.35 and $2.30, plus 60 cents for the glass therefor.

If the customer refuses to purchase a frame or to pay for a frame after same has been ordered, respondent in many instances refuses to deliver the original treasured family photograph borrowed from the customer until a frame is ordered or a balance claimed on a frame is paid in full.

PAR. 7. In truth and in fact, all of the representations hereinabove set forth are false, fraudulent, and misleading. Respondent is not engaged in securing photographs of children to be sold for advertising purposes to manufacturers of children's products, or in selling such photographs, or in conducting contests or displaying exhibits of such photographs. Respondent is engaged primarily and actually in the sale of enlargements and frames therefor, and all of the elaborate and deceptive sales methods employed by him are directed to that end. The purported prize contests are not bona fide, and no radios, watches, cash awards, silverware, or other substantial prizes have been given for selected pictures. In some cases respondent purports to exhibit framed pictures in his place of business and he and his photographic assistant act as judges in "awarding" prizes therefor. In all instances, however, the "prizes" given consist either of a strand of imitation pearls, a cheap billfold, or an autograph book, which cost the respondent from 30 to 60 cents each. No prizes of value are awarded. In no instance is there any judging of pictures which have not been returned for tinting and framing. The representations of respondent's salesmen to the effect that a particular picture has won a prize are wholly false and fraudulent, and are made solely to induce the purchase of a frame. The respondent does not pay half the cost of the frame, but in fact is engaged in the sale at exhorbitant prices of frames purchased by him at wholesale for resale to the public through the methods hereinbefore set out. Respondent does not produce or sell an "oil painting" or "hand-painted portrait" but merely a tinted or colored photographic enlargement. Respondent has never sold any pictures to manufacturers of children's products or to others, and has never made arrangements with any individual or concern to supply pictures for advertising or other purposes. Respondent's initial offer of $2 for a photographic 10- by 16-inch enlargement is not a "special advertising offer," but is his regular, usual, and ordinary method of securing orders for enlargements. Respondent's business is not operated under the sanction of the United States Supreme Court or any other court or tribunal.

PAR. 8. The acts and practices of the respondent and his method of operation as hereinbefore described further place in the hands of salesmen a means and instrumentality for misleading and deceiving the purchasing public.

PAR. 9. The acts and practices of the respondent, as herein set forth, have had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true, and induce the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's said photographic enlargements and of frames therefor because of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

PAR. 10. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on June 13, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Max Cohen, an individual trading variously as United Sales Co., United Art Display and Sales Co., Art Display Co., United Art Display Co., and United Display Co., charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Floyd O. Collins, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Albert N. Minton, attorney for the respondent, before Randolph Preston, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and exceptions filed thereto, and brief in support of the complaint (the respondent not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Max Cohen, is an individual trading variously as United Sales Co., United Art Display and Sales Co., Art Display Co., United Art Display Co., and United Display Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 4042 South Broadway Place, Los Angeles, Calif. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of photographic enlargement and of frames therefor. Respondent, through the medium of salesmen or representatives appointed by him, as agents in his behalf, sells his products to customers located in States of the United States other than the State of California. In consummating such sales and in distributing such products, respondent causes the photographic enlargements and frames, when sold by him, to be transported from his place of business in Los Angeles, State of California, to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States. In the course and conduct of his business the respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent causes agents and representatives employed by him to visit the homes of prospective customers in cities, towns, and rural communities of various States of the United States. The sales plan employed by respondent involved the use of two types of agents. The first type of agent, known to the trade as a "grabber" or "initial solicitor," makes the initial contact with the prospective purchaser by means of a house-to-house canvass, ostensibly for the purpose of obtaining photographs, usually of children, for enlargement. The second type of agent used is the "Proof passer" or frame salesman, who delivers the enlargement and endeavors to sell a frame therefor.

PAR. 3. Respondent supplies to both the initial salesmen and frame salesmen an "Authorization and Identification Certificate" for use in connection with sales made on behalf of his various trade name companies, by means of which the respondent represents that the salesman is a duly authorized agent of the respondent and is acting under the sanction of the Supreme Court of the United States, which certificate reads in part as follows:

This is to certify that the bearer,

Whose signature appears below, is authorized to take orders for our portraits, miniatures, and oil paintings providing that such orders are taken on our contracts and in accordance with the printed stipulations.

He is further authorized to collect deposits which are to be credited to the purchase price. THE CUSTOMER IS TO RECEIVE A PRINTED RECEIPT FOR DEPOSIT PAID.

The authority herein invested is to expire----------19----

Date----------

The above authorization bears the signature of the trade name company under which respondent is operating at the time such certificate is issued. In addition to this certificate, the respondent also issues a purported certificate reading in part as follows:

The Bearer of This Document is Operating Under the Sanction of

THE UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT

The bearer of this document is engaged in Interstate Commerce, a field over which only the Federal Government has jurisdiction.

PAR. 4. The initial salesmen or "grabbers" travel in crews of varying size, who are under the immediate supervision of crew managers employed by the respondent. The orders for enlargements, together with the original pictures, are transmitted to the respondent at his home office in Los Angeles, Calif., and the enlargement work is done by a photographer employed by the respondent on a contract basis. A charge of $2 for enlarging a photograph 10 by 16 inches in black and white is quoted to the customer, one-half of which sum is required as a deposit at the time the order is taken, which the "grabber" retains as his commission. The balance is payable at the time the enlargement is delivered, of which the crew manager retains 50 cents, the "proof passer" 15 cents, leaving a balance of 35 cents for the respondent to cover cost of enlargement. This amount is not sufficient to cover cost of enlargement and the profit in respondent's plan is dependent upon the ability of the "proof passer" to sell the customer a frame.

PAR. 5. The initial salesmen carry order blanks supplied to them by the respondent. These order blanks, designated as "Certificates," read in part as follows:

Special Advertising Offer

One Beautiful Duo Tone Reproduction for $2.00. In order to select pictures for our home exhibit we will make you one of our beautiful Duo Tone Reproductions, size 10 by 16, black and white, unframed for only $2.00. Valuable Prizes will be awarded to all portraits framed and accepted for art exhibit.

Our awards are final.

The general plan followed by such initial salesman was to call upon a prospect, usually the woman of the house, and state that he had heard from some neighbor or other person that the prospective customer had a very beautiful young child and that the respondent, under one of his several trade names, was looking for a picture to be used in art display and magazine advertisements. He further represented that a contest was being conducted at which a number of pictures were to be displayed and that certain pictures would be selected for advertising purposes; and that the prospective customer, if her picture should be selected, would receive from $100 to $2,000, dependent upon the revenue obtained from the magazine or advertising agency which might use such picture.

After looking over various photographs, the representative would select one or more, with the assurance that the picture would certainly win a prize but that the owner would hear from the company later. It was then explained that in order to enter a picture in such contest or exhibit it would be necessary to have an enlargement made at a cost of $2, of which the representative usually collected $1 at the time. A week or more later another representative of the respondent technically known as a "passer" would appear with the enlarged photograph and usually assure the customer that the picture had been selected in a preliminary contest as one of a limited number to compete for first prize or to be put upon exhibition at Chicago, Kansas City, or some of the larger cities of the country. The customer was then advised by the "passer" that, in order the enter such picture in the final contest or exhibit, it would be necessary that the picture be tinted or painted and framed in a certain way and that he was in a position to supply the necessary frame, and that the respondent would pay half the cost of the frame. The prices of the frames to the customer varied from $6.90 to $14.90, which frames cost the respondent 70 cents, 85 cents, $1.50, and $2, respectively. If the customer paid for the frame in full, the picture and frame were usually delivered to such customer, but if the customer refused to buy a frame the enlargement was usually delivered upon payment of $2 as stated.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid statements and representations comprising respondent's sales plan are false, deceptive, and misleading. Respondent is not engaged in securing photographs to be sold for advertising purposes or in selling such photographs or in conducting contests or displaying exhibits of such photographs. Respondent is engaged primarily and actually in the sale of enlargements and frames therefor, and all of the elaborate and deceptive sales methods employed by him are directed to that end. The respondent has never sold or attempted to sell any pictures to advertisers and has never made arrangements with any individual or concern to supply pictures for advertising or other purposes. The respondent displays pictures in his place of business from time to time, not as a competitive contest but solely for the purpose of inducing persons who may come into his place of business to purchase photographic enlargements. The representations of respondent's salesmen to the effect that a particular picture has won a prize are wholly false and fraudulent and are made solely to induce the purchase of a frame. The respondent does not pay half the cost of the frame but, in fact, is engaged in the sale at exorbitant prices of frames purchased by him at wholesale for resale to the public through the methods hereinbefore set out.

Respondent does not produce or sell oil paintings, as represented by salesmen and in his certificate described in paragraph 3 hereof, but merely sells tinted or colored photographic enlargements. Respondent's initial offer of $2 for a photographic 10- by 16-inch enlargement is not a special advertising offer but is the regular, usual, and ordinary method of securing orders for enlargements.

Respondent's business is not operated under sanction of the United States Supreme Court or any other court or tribunal.

PAR. 7. The acts and practices of the respondent and his method of operation as hereinabove described further place in the hands of salesmen a means and instrumentality for misleading and deceiving the purchasing public.

PAR. 8. The acts and practices of the respondent as herein set forth have had, and now have, capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true and induce the purchase of substantial quantitites of respondent's said photographic enlargements and frames therefor because of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

spondent, testimony and other evidence before Randolph Preston, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, and the report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and exceptions thereto and briefs filed herein, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Max Cohen, an individual, trading as United Sales Co., United Art Display and Sales Co., Art Display Co., United Art Display Co., and United Display Co., or under any other trade name, and his agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with offering for sale, sale, and distribution of photographic enlargements and of frames therefor in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or by inference, that colored or tinted pictures, photographs, or photographic enlargements are paintings.

2. Representing that the respondent is engaged in the business of procuring pictures for use in advertising of various products or that any picture so procured by him will be sold or offered for sale to any advertiser, or otherwise misrepresenting the nature of respondent's business or the purposes for which pictures are procured.

3. Representing that pictures submitted to respondent or photographic enlargements made therefrom will be entered in any picture contest unless such contest is then, in fact, being conducted and such pictures or photographic enlargements are eligible for entry therein, or otherwise misrepresenting the existence of any picture contest or the eligibility of customers' pictures or photographic enlargements therein.

4. Representing that any photograph or colored enlargement of a photograph has been entered in any competitive competition or that any award has been made to such photograph or enlargement in such competitive competition.

5. Representing that respondent is conducting any special campaign or advertising campaign in any particular place or locality unless such campaign is, in fact, then being conducted in such locality for such purpose.

6. Representing as customary or regular prices or values for pictures or frames, prices and values which are, in fact, fictitious and greatly in excess of the prices at which said pictures or frames are regularly and customarily offered for sale and sold in the normal and usual course of business.

7. Representing that the respondent will pay half the cost of the frame of any picture when, in fact, the frame is sold to the purchaser at prices in excess of the price at which such frames are regularly and customarily offered for sale and sold in the normal and usual course of business.

8. Representing that respondent's business is operated under the sanction of the United States Supreme Court or any other court or tribunal.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

C. T. CLAYTON TRADING AS CLAYTON CANDY COMPANY

Docket 4395. Complaint, Dec. 3, 1940—Decision, June 12, 1941

Where an individual engaged in the manufacture and the competitive interstate sale and distribution of candy, including certain assortments of candy which were so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to consumers; and included, as typical, 60 bars of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a push card for use in sale thereof under a plan by which a purchaser paid for a bar of candy nothing or 1, 2, or 3 cents, depending on the number disclosed when a disk was pushed from the card;

Sold such assortments to wholesalers, jobbers, salesmen, and retailers, by whom, as direct or indirect purchasers, they were exposed and sold to purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, involving game of chance to procure candy bars without cost and at prices much less than usual, and thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products, contrary to established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws, and in competition with many, who, unwilling to use such or any method contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by said sales plan and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell his candy in preference to that of his said competitors, whereby trade was unfairly diverted to him from them and substantial injury was done to competition:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and his competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr. for the Commission.

Mr. Roy L. Smith, of Phenix City, Ala., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that C. T. Clayton, an individual trading under the name of Clayton Candy Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Phenix City, Ala. Respondent is now and for more than 6 months last past has been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers, salesmen, and retail dealers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products when sold to be transported from his principal place of business in the city of Phenix City, Ala., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than Alabama and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 6 months last past a course of trade by respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with corporations and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, salesmen, and retail dealers, certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment is composed of 60 bars of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a device commonly called a push card. The said push card has 60 partially perforated disks, on the face of which is printed the word "Push." Concealed within the said disks are numbers ranging from 0 to 3, inclusive. When the disks are pushed or separated from the card a number is disclosed. Purchasers punching numbers 1, 2, and 3 pay 1, 2, and 3 cents, respectively. Purchasers punching number 0 pay nothing. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the disks are pushed or separated from the card. The prices of said bars of candy are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent furnishes, and has furnished, various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of his candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such cards are similar to the one herein described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said candy, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of his candy and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure bars of candy without cost or at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his candy and in the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on December 3, 1940 issued and on December 5, 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, C. T. Clayton, an individual trading as Clayton Candy Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On December 23, 1940, the respondent, through his attorney, filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint but requested the right to file a brief and be heard in oral argument on the question whether the facts so admitted constitute the violation of law charged in the complaint. Thereafter a brief in support of the complaint was filed by the attorney for the Commission and served on the respondent, and subsequently the respondent, through his attorney, waived the filing of a brief and oral argument. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the complaint, the answer thereto, and the brief in support of the complaint, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, C. T. Clayton, is an individual trading as the Clayton Candy Co., with his office and principal place of business located in Phenix City, Ala. Respondent is now and for more than 6 months last past has been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers, salesmen, and retail dealers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said candy, when sold, to be transported from his principal place of business in the city of Phenix City, Ala., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than Alabama, and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 6 months last past a course of trade by respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with corporations and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, salesmen, and retail dealers, certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment is composed of 60 bars of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a device commonly called a push card. The said push card has 60 partially perforated disks, on the face of which is printed the word "Push." Concealed within the said disks are numbers ranging from 0 to 3, inclusive. When the disks are pushed or separated from the card a number is disclosed. Purchasers punching number 1, 2, and 3 pay 1, 2, and 3 cents, respectively. Purchasers punching number 0 pay nothing. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the disks are pushed or separated from the card. The prices of said bars of candy are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent furnishes, and has furnished, various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of his candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such cards are similar to the one herein described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said candy, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of his candy and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure bars of candy without cost or at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his candy and in the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and brief in support of the complaint, respondent having waived the right to file a brief and argue the matter orally, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent, C. T. Clayton, individually, and trading as Clayton Candy Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing candy or any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such candy or other merchandise to the general public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of others, push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, either with assortments of candy or other merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such candy or other merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

THE BRIARWOOD CORPORATION

Docket 4401. Complaint, Dec. 5, 1940—Decision, June 12, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture and the competitive interstate sale and distribution of pipes—

Sold to wholesalers, jobbers, and retailers certain assortments of smoking pipes which were so packed and assembled as to involve the use of game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to consumers, and included, as typical, three "Bryson" pipes and a punchboard for use, as there explained, in sale of said articles under a plan by which certain specified numbers entitled purchaser to one of said pipes or a package of cigarettes, the last sale in each of the first nine sections completely sold entitled him to a package of cigarettes, and the last punch on the board entitled him to receive a $3.50 "Bryson" pipe, other customers receiving nothing for their money other than the privilege of a punch; and thus

Supplied to and placed in the hands of retail purchasers, who exposed and sold its pipes in accordance with said plan, involving game of chance to procure pipes at prices much less than usual, means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its pipes, contrary to established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who are unwilling to sell their products by such or any method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by said sales plan and the element of chance involved therein and were thereby induced to buy and sell its pipes in preference to those of its said competitors, and with effect of thus unfairly diverting trade in commerce to it from them; to the substantial injury of competition:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and its competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr., for the Commission.

Mr. William H. Rosenfeld, of Cleveland, Ohio, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that The Briarwood Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, The Briarwood Corporation, is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Ohio with its office and principal place of business located at 2810 Superior Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. Respondent is now, and for more than 6 months last past has been, engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of smoking pipes to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of Cleveland, Ohio, to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than Ohio and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for more than 6 months last past, a course of trade by respondent in such smoking pipes in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of smoking pipes in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of smoking pipes so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment includes three "Bryson" pipes and a punchboard. Appearing on the face of the punchboard is the following inscription:

THE Bryson PIPE
(illustration of pipe)
WITH DURALUMINUM "COOLING ZONE"
NUMBERS 100–200
AND LAST SALE ON BOARD RECEIVES
$3.50 BRYSON PIPE ENSEMBLE
$3.50 with EXTRA BOWL
NUMBERS 10—20—110—120—210—220—310—320—330—340
Each receive 1 Pkg. (20) Cigarettes

LAST SALE IN EACH OF 1st 9 sections completed
REC. 1 PKG. (20) CIGARETTES
5¢ PER SALE

Said pipes are distributed to the purchasing public by means of said punchboard in the following manner:

Sales are 5 cents each, and when a punch is made a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence, and said numbers are arranged in 10 sections. The board bears a statement informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a "Bryson" pipe, and certain other specified numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a package of cigarettes, and the last sale in each of the first 9 sections completely sold entitles the purchaser to receive a package of cigarettes, and the last punch on the board entitles the purchaser to receive a $3.50 "Bryson" pipe. A customer who does not qualify by obtaining 1 of the specified numbers or the last punch on the board or in a section receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The pipes are worth more than 5 cents each, and the cigarettes are worth more than 5 cents per package, and the purchaser who obtains a number calling for a pipe or pack of cigarettes receives the same for 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The smoking pipes are thus distributed to the purchasers of punches from the board wholly by chance.

The respondent furnishes, and has furnished, various punchboards and pipe assortment for use in the sale and distribution of its smoking pipes by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme; such punchboards are similar to the one herein described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's smoking pipes, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its smoking pipes and the sale of said smoking pipes by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of smoking pipes to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure smoking pipes at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute smoking pipes in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its smoking pipes and in the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's smoking pipes in preference to smoking pipes of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on December, 5, 1940, issued and on December 6, 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, The Briarwood Corporation, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, the respondent, on December 26, 1940, filed its answer which answer admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and respondent's attorney later waived the right to file brief or argue the matter orally before the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, The Briarwood Corporation, is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Ohio with its office and principal place of business located at 2810 Superior Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. Respondent is now, and for more than 6 months last past has been, engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of smoking pipes to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of Cleveland, Ohio, to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than Ohio and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for more than 6 months last past, a course of trade by respondent in such smoking pipes in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of smoking pipes in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of smoking pipes so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment includes three "Bryson" pipes and a punchboard. Appearing on the face of the punchboard is the following inscription:

THE Bryson PIPE

(illustration of pipe)

NUMBERS 100—200
AND LAST SALE ON BOARD RECEIVES
$3.50 BRYSON PIPE ENSEMBLE

$3.50 with EXTRA BOWL

NUMBERS 10—20—110—120—210—220—310—320—330—340
Each Receive 1 PKG. (20) Cigarettes

LAST SALE IN EACH OF 1st 9 sections completed
REC. 1 PKG. (20) CIGARETTES

5¢ PER SALE

Said pipes are distributed to the purchasing public by means of said punchboard in the following manner:

Sales are 5 cents each, and when a punch is made a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence, and said numbers are arranged in 10 sections. The board bears a statement informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a "Bryson" pipe, and certain other specified numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a package of cigarettes, and the last sale in each of the first 9 sections completely sold entitles the purchaser to receive a package of cigarettes, and the last punch on the board entitles the purchaser to receive a $3.50 "Bryson" pipe. A customer who does not qualify by obtaining 1 of the specified numbers or the last punch on the board or in a section receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The pipes are worth more than 5 cents each, and the cigarettes are worth more than 5 cents per package, and the purchaser who obtains a number calling for a pipe or pack of cigarettes receives the same for 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The smoking pipes are thus distributed to the purchasers of punches from the board wholly by chance.

The respondent furnishes, and has furnished, various punchboards and pipe assortment for use in the sale and distribution of its smoking pipes by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme; such punchboards are similar to the one herein described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's smoking pipes, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its smoking pipes and the sale of said smoking pipes by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of smoking pipes to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure smoking pipes at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute smoking pipes in competition with respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its smoking pipes and in the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's smoking pipes in preference to smoking pipes of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and respondent having waived filing of brief and oral argument and agreed to the submission of the case to the Commission on the complaint and answer and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission.

It is ordered, That the respondent, The Briarwood Corporation, a corporation, its respective officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of smoking pipes or any other merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing pipes or any other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such pipes or other merchandise to the general public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others punchboards, push or pull cards, pull tabs, or other lottery devices either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, pull tabs, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing said pipes or other merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

J. C. HELMS, INDIVIDUALLY AND TRADING AS H. & L. CANDY COMPANY

Docket 4455. Complaint, Jan. 30, 1941—Decision, June 12, 1941

Where an individual engaged in manufacture of candy, and in interstate sale and distribution of various assortments thereof, which were so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers, a typical assortment including a number of candy bars, together with a push card for use in sale and distribution thereof under a plan by which purchaser, depending upon the particular number secured by chance in accordance with disk pushed, paid nothing or 1, 2 or 3 cents, for a bar, retail value of each of which was greater than 1 cent—

Sold such assortments to dealers and retailers, by whom they were exposed and sold to the purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plans or methods, involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure bars of candy without cost or at prices much less than normal retail prices thereof, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in sale of his product, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who, unwilling to offer or sell their products so packed and assembled as to involve a game of chance or any other method contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With tendency and capacity to induce purchasers to buy his said product in preference to that of his competitors, and with result that many dealers in and ultimate consumers were attracted by said manner of packing candy and by the element of chance involved in sale thereof, and were thereby induced to purchase his said candy in preference to that of his said competitors who do not use such methods; and with tendency and capacity to divert unfairly to him trade from his competitors aforesaid and exclude them from candy trade; lessen competition therein; create monopoly thereof in him and such other distributors as do use such methods; deprive the purchasing public of benefit of competition; and eliminate from said trade all actual, and exclude therefrom all potential, competitors, who do not adopt and use such methods:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr., for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that J. C. Helms, individually and trading under the name of H. & L. Candy Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, J. C. Helms, is an individual doing business under the trade name of H. & L. Candy Co., with his principal office and place of business located at Marshville, N. C. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to dealers. Respondent causes and has caused the said candy, when sold, to be shipped or transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of North Carolina to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of North Carolina and in the District of Columbia. There is now and for more than 1 year last past has been a course of trade by said respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of his business respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers various assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof. One of said assortments is sold and distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner: This assortment consists of a number of bars of candy together with a device called a push card. The card contains a number of partially perforated disks with the word "push" appearing thereon, and printed within each of said disks is either "0¢," "1¢," "2¢," or "3¢." Each purchaser is entitled to push one number from said card. Each purchaser is entitled to and receives one bar of candy and pays therefor the amount indicated within the disk removed from said card, or the purchaser of a disk indicating the amount "0¢" pays nothing for the bar of candy received. All of said bars have a retail value greater than 1 cent. The said amounts to be paid for the candy are effectively concealed from the purchasers and prospective purchasers until a push or selection has been made and the selected disk removed or separated from the card. Thus the amount to be paid by each customer for a bar of candy is determined wholly by lot or chance

The respondent manufactures, sells, and distributes various assortments of candy, involving a lot or chance feature, and such assortments and the sales plans or methods by which said assortments are distributed are similar to the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's assortments of candy directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans or methods. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove set forth. Said sales plans or methods have a tendency and capacity to induce purchasers of said candy to purchase respondent's candy in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by his competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure bars of candy without cost or at prices much less than the normal retail prices thereof. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of his candy and the sale of such candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws. The use by respondent of said methods has a tendency unduly to hinder competition or to create a monopoly in that the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not use and adopt the same or equivalent methods involving the same or equivalent elements of chance or lottery. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with respondent as above alleged are unwilling to offer for sale or to sell their products so packed and assembled as above described or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance or any other method which is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in, and ultimate consumers of, candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent has a tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to unfairly divert to respondent trade from his competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from the candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful; to lessen competition in the candy trade; to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and in such other distributors of candy as use the same or equivalent methods and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition. The use of said methods by respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use the same or equivalent methods.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on January 30, 1941, issued and on February 3, 1941, served its complaint in this proceeding upon J. C. Helms, individually and trading under the name of H. & L. Candy Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On February 14, 1941, respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint. No brief having been filed by respondent and oral argument not having been requested, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, J. C. Helms, is an individual doing business under the trade name of H. & L. Candy Co., with his principal office and place of business located at Marshville, N. C. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to dealers. Respondent causes and has caused the said candy, when sold, to be shipped or transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of North Carolina to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of North Carolina and in the District of Columbia. There is now and for more than 1 year last past has been a course of trade by said respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the Unite States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of his business respondent is in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers various assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof. One of said assortments is sold and distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner: This assortment consists of a number of bars of candy together with a device called a push card. The card contains a number of partially perforated disks with the word "push" appearing thereon, and printed within each of said disks is either "0¢," "1¢," "2¢," or "3¢." Each purchaser is entitled to push one number from said card. Each purchaser is entitled to and receives one bar of candy and pays therefor the amount indicated within the disk removed from said card, or the purchaser of a disk indicating the amount "0¢" pays nothing for the bar of candy received. All of said bars have a retail value greater than 1 cent. The said amounts to be paid for the candy are effectively concealed from the purchasers and prospective purchasers until a push or selection has been made and the selected disk removed or separated from the card. Thus the amount to be paid by each customer for a bar of candy is determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's assortments of candy directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans or methods. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove set forth. Said sales plans or methods have a tendency and capacity to induce purchasers of said candy to purchase respondent's candy in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by his competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure bars of candy without cost or at prices much less than the normal retail prices thereof. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of his candy and the sale of such candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws. The use by respondent of said methods has a tendency unduly to hinder competition or to create a monopoly in that the use thereof has a tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not use and adopt the same or equivalent methods involving the same or equivalent elements of chance or lottery. Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with respondent as above found are unwilling to offer for sale or to sell their products so packed and assembled as above described or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance or any other method which is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in, and ultimate consumers of, candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent has a tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to unfairly divert to respondent trade from his competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from the candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods because the same are unlawful; to lessen competition in the candy trade; to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and in such other distributors of candy as use the same or equivalent methods and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition. The use of said methods by respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use the same or equivalent methods.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, respondent having filed no brief and oral argument not having been requested, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent, J. C. Helms, individually and trading under the name of H. & L. Candy Co., or trading under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing candy or any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such candy or other merchandise to the general public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices, either with assortments of candy or other merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such candy or other merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon him of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

ACTINO LABORATORIES, INC., AND CARL LOEB

Docket 3813. Complaint, June 8, 1939—Decision, June 13, 1941

Where a corporation and an individual, who was its president and principal stockholder and in charge of its operations, engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of certain orthoptic instruments for use in treatment and correction of visual defects, accepting as trade-ins, from purchasers of its "Chrome-Orthoptoscope" certain orthoptic instruments known as "Syntonizers" made by competitors, and resold by it; in advertisements in journals or magazines circulating generally among optometrists—

(a) Represented that certain of such "Syntonizers" were new and unused, through such statements as "FOR SALE—Three Syntonizers, Latest type. Hundred dollars each. One slightly used, seventy-five dollars. * * *," and "FOR SALE.—Three Syntonizers, late type. Price $125.00 each. * * *"; facts being all were used or second hand machines accepted by it as trade-in allowances on new purchases; and

(b) Failed to disclose in its advertising, offer and sale thereof that such instruments were used or second-hand;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the nature and character of their products, and to cause it to purchase them as a result of the mistaken belief so engendered, and with effect of diverting trade unfairly to them from their competitors who do not misrepresent their products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston and Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiners.

Mr. R. P. Bellinger for the Commission.

Mr. E. Sydney Feinstein, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Actino Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, and Carl Loeb, an individual, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Actino Laboratories, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 429 West Superior Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent, Carl Loeb, is an individual and is president of respondent, Actino Laboratories, Inc., and as such manages, dominates, and controls its corporate affairs and activities.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and have been for more than 1 year last past, engaged in the business of selling and distributing orthoptic equipment. Respondents cause said products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in Illinois to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said orthoptic equipment among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business respondents are in substantial competition with other corporations and individuals, and with firms and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of orthoptic equipment in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and who truthfully represent their equipment.

PAR. 4. The orthoptic machines which respondents sell and distribute, as aforesaid, are of three different types and are designated as "Synchro-Orthoptoscopes," "Chrome-Orthoptoscopes," and "Syntonizers." Said Synchro-Orthoptoscopes and Chrome-Orthoptoscopes are products of respondents' own manufacture. The orthoptic machine designated Syntonizer is not manufactured by respondents, but is manufactured by one of respondents' competitors. Respondents, in order to induce the purchase of the machines of their own manufacture, that is, the Synchro-Orthoptoscopes and Chrome-Orthoptoscopes, by purchasers and prospective purchasers, have adopted the practice of accepting used Syntonizers from customers as part payment for their own products. Respondents thereupon sell said Syntonizers at prices substantially lower than prices charged by the manufacturers of said Syntonizers, for new unused Syntonizers.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said Syntonizers, respondents place advertisements in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation throughout the United States. Said advertisements are as follows:

FOR SALE

THREE SYNTONIZERS

AT

$125.00 EACH.

FOR SALE

THREE SYNTONIZERS

Latest type $100.00 each

One slightly used, $70.00.

ACTINO LABORATORIES, INC.

429 West Superior Street,

Chicago, Illinois.

In the manner and by the means aforesaid, respondents represent, directly and by implication, that the Syntonizers which respondents offer for sale are new Syntonizers which have never been used. In truth and in fact, said Syntonizers are not new Syntonizers but are, as above set forth, used Syntonizers which respondents have accepted from purchases of respondents' Synchro-Orthoptoscopes and Chrome-Orthoptoscopes as part payment of the purchase price of said instruments.

PAR. 6. In the course of the operation of his business as aforesaid, respondent, Carl Loeb, uses the name Dr. Carl Loeb with which to carry on his business. Said abbreviation "Dr." is used by respondent Carl Loeb in all of his advertising literature and on letterheads, invoices, and all office stationery. Over a period of many years the universally used professional designations for a medical doctor or a doctor of medicine have been, and now are, either the abbreviation "Dr." or the abbreviation "M. D.," or both. The use by the respondent, Carl Loeb, of the abbreviation "Dr." in close proximity to his name, in the manner and by the means aforesaid, serves as a representation by respondent, Carl Loeb, to prospective purchasers of respondents' orthoptic equipment that respondent, Carl Loeb, is a medical doctor or a doctor of medicine. In truth and in fact, respondent, Carl Loeb, is not a medical doctor or doctor of medicine.

PAR. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by respondents in offering for sale and selling their orthoptic products, as hereinabove set forth, had, and now has, the capacity to, and does, mislead a substantial number of members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations are true. As a direct result of this erroneous and mistaken belief members of the purchasing public have purchased a substantial number of respondents' orthoptic products, with the result that trade in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, has been diverted unfairly to respondents from their said competitors who truthfully represent their products. As a result thereof injury has been done, and is being done, by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein above alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on June 8, 1939, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Actino Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, and Carl Loeb, an individual, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by R. P. Bellinger, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by E. Sydney Feinstein, attorney for the respondents, before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and such testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiners upon the evidence, and the exceptions thereto, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Actino Laboratories, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 429 West Superior Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent, Carl Loeb, an individual, is president of the corporate respondent and is the principal stockholder therein. He is in general charge of the operations of the corporation and formulates and controls its policies and practices.

PAR. 2. The respondents are now, and for more than 5 years last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of certain orthoptic instruments or machines intended for use in the treatment and correction of certain visual defects. Respondents cause their products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and for more than 5 years last past have maintained, a course of trade in their products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, the respondents are, and at all times mentioned herein have been, in substantial competition with other corporations and individuals, and with firms and partnerships, engaged in the sale and distribution, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of orthoptic instruments intended for the same purposes as those for which respondents' products are intended.

PAR. 4. Among the instruments sold and distributed by the respondents is a certain instrument designated by them as "Chrome-Orthoptoscope," which instrument is manufactured by the respondents. In connection with the sale of this instrument the respondents accept from purchasers certain orthoptic instruments manufactured by respondents' competitors and which have been used by such purchasers, such instruments being accepted by respondents as a "trade-in" allowance on the purchase price of respondents' instrument. These used or second-hand instruments are then resold by respondents. Among the used instruments which have been obtained by respondents in this manner and resold are certain instruments known as "Syntonizers."

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their business and for the purpose of promoting the sale of such used instruments, the respondents have placed advertisements in certain journals or magazines having a general circulation among optometrists. Among these advertisements were the following:

FOR SALE—Three Syntonizers, Latest type. Hundred dollars each. One slightly used, seventy-five dollars. Actino Laboratories, Inc., 429 West Superior St., Chicago.

FOR SALE—Three Syntonizers, late type. Price $125.00 each. Actino Laboratories, Inc., 429 W. Superior St., Chicago, Ill.

PAR. 6. The Commission finds that through the use of these advertisements, and through the failure of respondents to disclose that such instruments are used or second-hand instruments, the respondents have represented that certain of the instruments are new and unused. The Commission further finds that none of such instruments are new or unused, but all of them are used or second-hand instruments, having been accepted by the respondents as trade-in allowances on new instruments.

PAR. 7. The Commission further finds that these acts and practices on the part of respondents, including the failure of respondents to disclose the true nature and character of certain of their products, have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the nature and character of respondents' products, and to cause such portion of the purchasing public to purchase respondents' products as a result of the erroneous and mistaken belief so engendered. In consequence, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors, who do not misrepresent their products.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

ents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Actino Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, its officers, and Carl Loeb, individually and as an officer of said corporation, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of their orthoptic instruments and machines in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or by implication, that used or second-hand products are new or unused.

2. Advertising, offering for sale or selling used or second-hand products without disclosing that such products are in fact used or second-hand.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

JOHN J. FULTON COMPANY

Docket 3819. Complaint, June 14, 1939—Decision, June 13, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in compounding its "Uvursin" medicinal preparation for diabetes, and in competitive interstate sale and distribution thereof to members of the medical profession, together with a suggested diet which it recommended for use therewith; by means of advertisements disseminated through the mails, in periodicals and other publications, and in circulars and other printed or written matter—

Represented that its said "Uvursin" had substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of diabetes mellitus and constituted a competent and effective treatment therefor, and that, when used with the recommended diet, it substantially increased the efficacy and therapeutic value of such diet as a treatment for aforesaid condition;

Facts being there is no accepted treatment for diabetes other than diet and insulin adjusted properly to meet the needs of each patient; said product was essentially a combination of crude plant materials which have enjoyed long reputation, particularly in folklore medicine, for treatment of urinary conditions, and general action of which is mildly diuretic; and use thereof, by increasing the flow of urine, would accomplish no more than possible reduction of amount of sugar therein without affecting the blood sugar level; the diet, recommended by said corporation, conformed closely to type physicians would recommend in diabetic cases and any presumed effectiveness of said product would be due to the spontaneous remissions characteristic of the disease and to dietary control of symptoms rather than to any therapeutic value in and of itself; and use thereof might be definitely harmful and even fatal to patient in giving a false sense of security and delaying inauguration of effective treatment, including, as required, administration of insulin, for which no substitute is known to modern medicine;

With the effect of misleading purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous and mistaken belief that aforesaid false and misleading representations were true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of its said medicinal preparation, thereby diverting trade unfairly to it from competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, as above set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas, trial examiner.

Mr. William L. Pencke and Mr. Donovan Divet for the Commission.

Mr. Zach Lamar Cobb, of Los Angeles, Calif., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that John J. Fulton Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, John J. Fulton Co., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of South Dakota and having its office and principal place of business at 88 First Street, in the city of San Francisco, State of California.

Respondent is now, and has been for several years last past, engaged in the business of compounding, selling, and distributing a medicinal preparation designated "Uvursin." The respondent causes the said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of California, or from the State of origin of the shipment thereof, to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States, other than the State of origin of the shipment thereof, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business the respondent is now, and has been during all the times mentioned herein, in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with other corporations, and with persons, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of preparations designed and used for the treatment of the conditions of the human body for which respondent recommends the use of its said preparation. Among said competitors are many who do not misrepresent the therapeutic value or the effectiveness in use of their respective preparations.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said preparation, by United States mails, by insertion in periodicals and other publications having a general circulation throughout the United States and in other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparation; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said preparation, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparation in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in the said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

UVURSIN (Capsules, 5 gr.) is a mild and inocuous oral treatment for Diabetes Mellitus. UVURSIN combines the desirable principles of Chimaphila, Eupatorium, Pareira, Taraxacum, Uva Ursi, Juglans, Lappa, Inula, Eriodictyon and Zea Mais. To overcome any tendency to bowel astringency a little senna is added. With the above are incorporated potassi nitras and sodii boras, one grain of each to the dose. * * *

Physicians have been using UVURSIN and sending us favorable reports on its efficiency in Diabetes Mellitus for more than a decade.

These reports show the normal period of symptomatic improvement as being 10 to 14 days from time treatment is started, and clinical improvement, as disclosed by reduced urinary sugar, from 14 to 21 days.

UVURSIN an efficacious, innocuous, oral treatment for diabetes.

Diabetes gangrene yields to UVURSIN as do other symptoms, the line of demarcation usually beginning to show definitely by about the 20th day of treatment, followed by complete recovery where patient persists in diet and treatment.

UVURSIN is being recognized as the preferred treatment in diabetes mellitus.

Respondent distributes to purchasers of such preparation a suggested diet and recommends that such diet be followed in connection with the use of such preparation.

Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations, and others of similar import or meaning not herein set out, the respondent represents that "Uvursin" is a competent and effective cure or remedy for, and has substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of, diabetes mellitus and that such preparation, when used with the diet recommended by respondent, substantially adds to and increases the efficacy and therapeutic value of such diet as a treatment for diabetes mellitus.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid statements and representations by the respondent are misleading and untrue and constitute false advertisements. Said preparation is not a competent or effective cure or remedy for diabetes mellitus. Said preparation has no therapeutic value in the treatment of diabetes mellitus. Said preparation, when used with the diet recommended by respondent, or with any other diet, does not add to or increase the efficacy or the therapeutic value of the diet as a treatment for diabetes mellitus.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false advertisements and misleading representations has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial number of members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's said preparation containing drugs. As a direct result thereof, trade in commerce among and between various States of the United States has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its said competitors who truthfully represent the effectiveness in use of their respective preparations. In consequence thereof injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on June 14, 1939, issued and subsequently served its complaint upon the respondent, John J. Fulton Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by William L. Pencke, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Zach Lamar Cobb, attorney for the respondent, before Miles J. Furnas, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and exceptions filed thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments by Donovan Divet, attorney for the Commission, and Zach Lamar Cobb, attorney for the respondent, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, John J. Fulton Co., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of South Dakota and having its office and principal place of business at 88 First Street in the city of San Francisco, State of California.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of compounding a medicinal preparation designated "Uvursin" which is recommended by the respondent as a treatment for diabetes, and in the sale and distribution of this medicinal preparation to members of the medical profession located in various States of the United States. Respondent causes said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of California, or from the State of origin of such shipment, to purchasers located in various States of the United States other than the State of origin of such shipments. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent is now, and during all the times mentioned herein has been, engaged in substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, with other corporations and with persons, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of preparations designed and used for the treatment of conditions of the human body for which respondent recommends the use of its said preparation.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said preparation, by United States mails and by various other means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said preparation by various means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparation in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by United States mails, by advertisements in periodicals and other publications, and by circulars and other printed or written matter are the following:

Year after year, doctors report favorable results with Uvursin.

Physicians have been using Uvursin and sending us favorable reports on its efficacy in diabetes mellitus for more than a decade.

Is not that reason enough for you to give it a thorough clinical test in one of your cases?

These reports show normal period of symptomatic improvement as being ten to fourteen days from time treatment is started, and clinical improvement, as disclosed by reduced urinary sugar, from fourteen to twenty-one days. * * * Oral—Innocuous—Efficacious.

In diabetes mellitus a successful oral treatment.

Uvursin (capsules, 5 gr.) is a mild and innocuous oral treatment for diabetes mellitus. Uvursin combines the desirable principles of chimaphila, eupatorium, pareira, taraxacum, uva ursi, juglans, lappa, inula, eriodictyon, and zea mais. To overcome any tendency to bowel astringency a little senna is added. With the above are incorporated potassi nitras and sodii boras, one grain of each to the dose. * * * Other than the fact that the combined infusions are innocuous, the ingredients as explained will mean practically nothing, even to the experienced therapist, for the reason that few of the items are used for the cataloged characteristics of the alcohol extracts as outlined in the Pharmacopeia.

Diabetic Gangrene. Diabetic gangrene yields to Uvursin as do other symptoms, the line of demarcation usually beginning to show definitely by about the twentieth day of treatment, followed by complete recovery where the patient persists in diet and treatment.

Respondent distributes to purchasers of such preparation a suggested diet and recommends that such diet be followed in connection with the use of such preparation.

PAR. 5. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and others of similar import or meaning not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents that its medicinal preparation "Uvursin" has substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of diabetes mellitus and constitutes a competent and effective treatment for such condition and that when said preparation is used with the diet recommended by the respondent, it substantially adds to and increases the efficacy and therapeutic value of such diet as a treatment for diabetes mellitus.

PAR. 6. On the subject of the therapeutic value of respondent's preparation Uvursin, three expert witnesses were called at the instance of the Commission. Two of these witnesses were professors of pharmacology in outstanding medical schools and had devoted much study to the subject of diabetes. The third witness was a practicing physician of many years' experience specializing in diabetes and who was, at the time of the hearing, in charge of one of the diabetic services at the Los Angeles County General Hospital. All of these witnesses occupy eminent places in their professions. The testimony of these experts shows, and the Commission finds, that respondent's preparation Uvursin is not a competent or effective treatment of diabetes mellitus and has no therapeutic value in the treatment of this condition and will not add to or increase the efficacy or therapeutic value of any diet used in the treatment of diabetes mellitus.

PAR. 7. Diabetes mellitus is a disturbance of carbohydrate metabolism in which the blood sugar is elevated to abnormally high levels, due to a decrease in the internal secretion of the pancreas, among the most serious complications of which are acidosis and ketosis, often leading to diabetic coma and sometimes death.

Diabetes mellitus is diagnosed by proper tests made to determine the blood sugar level under appropriate conditions and also by the appearance of sugar in the urine. The treatment consists of administration of proper diet. If that is insufficient to reduce the blood sugar level to normal, insulin is given, which is an extract of the pancreas administered by hypodermic injection. There is no accepted treatment for diabetes other than diet and insulin adjusted properly to meet the needs of each patient.

Respondent's preparation Uvursin consists of the following ingredients: chimaphila, a variety of wintergreen; cupatorium, a plant known as thoroughwort; pareira, the root of chondrodendron; taraxacum, commonly known as dandelion; uva ursi, commonly known as bearberry; juglans, popularly known as butternut bark; lappa, popularly known as burdock; inula, botanically known as elecampane; eriodictyon, popularly known as mountain-balm; and zea mais, which is commonly known as corn. To these materials have been added senna and also some potassium nitrate and sodium borate. However, this preparation is essentialy a combination of crude plant materials.

The formula or statement of the ingredients of this preparation means little or nothing to the average practitioner, for, as stated in respondent's circular,

> Other than the fact that the combined infusions are innocuous, the ingredients as explained will mean practically nothing, even to the experienced therapist, for the reason that few of the items are used for the cataloged characteristics of the alcohol extracts as outlined in the Pharmacopeia.

Furthermore the respondent does not supply a quantitative formula for the information of physicians who are solicited to use its preparation.

The plant materials listed in respondent's preparation have enjoyed a very long reputation, particularly in folklore medicine, for the treatment of urinary conditions, and some of these plant materials were formerly used in the form of tea for bladder and kidney diseases. Their action in general is mildly diuretic and promotes an increased flow of urine, and the senna is added to produce a mild laxative effect. The potassium nitrate and sodium borate contained in this preparation have little or no effect, other than possibly to add to diuretic action. Some of these crude drugs contain insulin and other carbohydrates, which the body may utilize in lieu of ordinary sugars if there is proper metabolic condition prevailing in the body. However, the amount of these crude drugs which is recommended to be administered daily, namely, 30 grains, has no significant effect other than to add very slightly to the amount of carbohydrates which the body is already unable to properly handle when the condition of diabetes exists.

Respondent's product has no effect on the essential diabetic disturbance. By increasing the flow of the urine it will dilute the amount of sugar which has been discovered, and by increasing the amount of urine the percentage of sugar would necessarily drop, but this would not affect the blood sugar level. The use of respondent's preparation without diet would not accomplish any more than the possible reduction of the amount of sugar in the urine, due to its diuretic properties. The existence of diabetes or improvement in diabetic cases cannot be determined by examination of the urine alone, but blood sugar examination is also necessary.

Diabetic gangrene may be precipitated by arteriosclerosis, injury, or infection. The most frequent thing, however, is a combination of these factors, arteriosclerosis plus infection or injury. Gangrene is not necessarily an indication of extreme severity of diabetes but depends upon the blood supply, or potency of the arteries, as well as the adverse effects of abnormally high sugar levels.

Diabetes is a disease in which there may be spontaneous or temporary remissions from time to time, depending partly on the character of the diet. The diet recommended with Uvursin by the respondent conforms closely to the type of diet that physicians would recommend in diabetic cases to reduce the sugar intake, increase the alkaline reserve, and reduce generally the conditions under which symptoms of diabetes mellitus may be manifest.

The preparation Uvursin is not an efficacious treatment for diabetes mellitus, as it does not in any way deal with the causes of the disease. In view of the fact that diabetes is a disease in which spontaneous remission occurs and in view of the fact that the character of the symptoms can, in most instances, be controlled by an appropriate diet, the presumed effectiveness of Uvursin would be due to a combination of these circumstances in individual cases and not to any therapeutic value of the preparation itself. The use of this preparation may be definitely harmful to a patient suffering from diabetes mellitus, in that it would give a false sense of security and delay the inauguration of effective treatment.

The pancreas is a secreting gland which secretes certain enzymes into the digestive tract for the digestion of fat and protein and secretes chemical insulin into the blood stream for handling carbohydrates through all the body. Failure of the pancreas to secrete a sufficient amount of insulin for the purposes of the body, results in the condition known as diabetes, and where there has been a deterioration in the pancreas, it is necessary that needed insulin be supplied artificially.

Insulin was discovered in 1922 and is an extract of the pancreatic gland of animals, such as cattle, sheep, and pigs. Its action, when administered hypodermically, is to supplement the insulin of the pancreas. In some cases it helps to revive the pancreas where no deterioration has taken place. In those cases where diet alone is not effective in restoring action of the pancreas, the failure to give insulin increases the severity of the diabetic condition and may result in diabetic coma and death. In such conditions there is nothing known to modern medicine which will supplant or replace the use of insulin.

PAR. 8. The respondent offered as expert witnesses four practicing physicians, who testified as to experience in the use of respondent's preparation Uvursin in individual cases. Three of these testified to the use of urinalysis test only, to determine sugar, no blood test having been made. The fourth physician did use the blood test but testified that he usually began his treatment with the use of insulin, going to respondent's product in those cases where the patient refused to use the hypodermic needle for the administration of insulin. All four of these physicians testified to the use of the diet in connection with respondent's product, and where serious recurrence of sugar in the urine appeared after discontinuance of respondent's product, it was also admitted that a discontinuance or failure to follow the diet prescribed had occurred.

After giving full consideration to the testimony of these physicians, their method of diagnosis, and also the characteristics of diabetes, in that spontaneous remissions may occur and also the possibility of control of the symptoms by diet, the Commission is of the opinion, and finds, that the testimony in the record based upon experience in individual cases is of little probative value, as compared to the expert testimony in the record based upon general knowledge.

PAR. 9. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false advertisements and misleading representations has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's said medicinal preparation. As a direct result thereof, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors who are likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, of medicinal preparations designed and used for the treatment of the conditions of the human body for which respondent recommends the use of its said preparation.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, John J. Fulton Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its medicinal preparation "Uvursin," or any other product of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents that respondent's preparation "Uvursin" constitutes a competent or effective treatment for diabetes or has any therapeutic value in the treatment of diabetes.

2. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement, by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of respondent's medicinal preparation "Uvursin," which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

B. T. CLIFTON TRADING AS ASSOCIATED SALES AGENCY

Docket 4201. Complaint, July 26, 1940—Decision, June 18, 1941

Where an individual engaged in the competitive interstate sale and distribution of clocks, knives, fountain pens, pipes, watches, cigarette cases, cigarette lighters, and other articles of merchandise—

Furnished to purchasers various devices and plans which involved the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes in the sale and distribution of said merchandise to the ultimate consumer wholly by lot or chance, and included, as typical, assortment consisting of a number of aforesaid articles, together with a 300-cell, 12-section punchboard, for use in sale of said articles under a plan by which purchaser of a punch, at 5 cents, punching a designated number, and the purchaser punching the last remaining cell in each of the 12 sections, receive a specified article, value of which was in excess of 5 cents, others receiving nothing for their money other than the privilege of punching;

With result of thereby placing in the hands of others lottery devices for use in distributing said merchandise to the ultimate consumer wholly by lot or chance, contrary to the established public policy of the United States Government; and whereby trade was unfairly diverted to him from his competitors who did not, in the distribution of their merchandise, use such methods:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and his competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.

Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr. and Mr. J. V. Mishou, for the Commission.

Mr. Robert Morel Montgomery, of Birmingham, Ala., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that B. T. Clifton, individually, and trading as Associated Sales Agency, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, B. T. Clifton, is an individual trading as Associated Sales Agency, with his office and principal place of business located at 108 North Seventeenth Street, Birmingham, Ala. Respondent is now, and for more than 10 years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of clocks, knives, fountain pens, pipes, watches, tie sets, cigarette cases, cigarette lighters, and other articles of merchandise. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in Birmingham, Ala., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than Alabama and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for more than 10 years last past, a course of trade by respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers, certain assortments of merchandise so packed or assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment consists of various articles of merchandise, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Said articles of merchandise are sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner: Sales are 5 cents each, and when a punch is made from the board a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with one and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears a statement or statements informing prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a specified article of merchandise. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the lucky numbers receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The articles of merchandise are worth more than 5 cents each, and the purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for one of the articles of merchandise receives the same for the price of 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, various assortments of merchandise along with punchboards involving a lot or chance feature, but such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase, directly or indirectly, respondent's said merchandise expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure one of the said articles of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent, who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 26th day of July A. D. 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, B. T. Clifton, individually and trading as Associated Sales Agency, charging him with unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by L. P. Allen, Jr., attorney for the Commission, before W. W. Sheppard, a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding. Said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission, on the said complaint, the answer thereto, the testimony and other evidence, the trial examiner's report thereon, and brief in support of the complaint. And the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, B. T. Clifton, is an individual trading as Associated Sales Agency, and having his office and principal place of business in the city of Birmingham, in the State of Alabama.

PAR. 2. Respondent, for some time last past has been, and now is, engaged in the sale and distribution of clocks, knives, fountain pens, pipes, watches, cigarette cases, cigarette lighters, and other articles of merchandise, and causes said articles of merchandise, when sold, to be shipped from his principal place of business in the State of Alabama, to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Respondent, in the conduct of his business as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, has been, and now is, in competition with various other individuals, partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 4. Respondent, in the sale and distribution of his said merchandise, has furnished and furnishes to the purchasers thereof various devices and plans for merchandising same which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, and lottery schemes, by means of which said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumer wholly by lot or chance. Typical of the methods used by the respondent is the following:

(a) One of respondent's assortments consist of a number of the articles herein listed, together with a device commonly called a punchboard, which has 300 tubes or cells, divided into 12 sections of 25 cells each; a slip of paper is contained in each cell, bearing a number which is not disclosed until the cover of the cell has been punched. The punches are sold at 5 cents each, and the purchaser punching a designated number, and the purchaser punching the last remaining cell in each of the 12 sections, receives a specified article of merchandise; the purchaser of a right to punch who does not punch one of the winning numbers or the last remaining cell in each section, receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching. The articles of merchandise thus distributed are worth more than 5 cents each, but the persons punching the winning numbers or the last punch in each section, are not required to pay anything in addition to the price of the punch.

Other items of merchandise were and are sold by the respondent by like or similar methods, and such punchboards, push cards and similar devices differ only in detail.

PAR. 5. Respondent, by his sales methods hereinbefore described, places in the hands of others various devices to be used in the distribution of his merchandise by means of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, and by the use of such devices, such merchandise is distributed to the ultimate consumer wholly by lot or chance; respondent's said sales methods are contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 6. During all of the times herein mentioned, respondent has been in competition with other individuals, partnerships, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise similar to that sold and distributed by respondent, and are engaged in commerce between and among various States of the United States, and are unwilling to use, and do not use, in the distribution of their merchandise, any method involving a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, and as a result of respondent's said methods, trade has been unfairly diverted from such competitors to the respondent.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, the testimony and other evidence taken before W. W. Sheppard, a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, the report of the trial examiner thereon, and brief filed by attorney for the Commission, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent, B. T. Clifton, individually and trading as Associated Sales Agency, has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, B. T. Clifton, individually and trading as Associated Sales Agency, or by any other trade name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of clocks, knives, fountain pens, watches, cigarette cases, cigarette lighters or, any other article of merchandise, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, shall forthwith cease and desist from:

(a) Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of such merchandise to the public are to be made, or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

(b) Supplying to, or placing in the hands of others, push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery device, either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery device, are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such merchandise to the public.

(c) Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise or other lottery device or scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

GEORGE C. BOUNDS AND WILLIAM H. PHILLIPS, DOING BUSINESS AS GEORGE A. BOUNDS & COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SUBSEC. (c) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 4303. Complaint, Sept. 5, 1940—Decision, June 13, 1941

Where two partners engaged in packing, processing, and canning tomatoes and sweetpotatoes, and in interstate sale and distribution thereof (1) through brokers to whom they usually granted brokerage amounting to 4 percent from their invoice or prevailing market price, and (2) directly to purchasers for resale—

(a) Granted to purchasers, the sales to whom were effected by brokers who did not accept brokerage from said partners on such sales, discounts, and allowances in lieu of brokerage, by selling and invoicing said commodities at a net price which was lower than their prevailing market price by an amount approximately equal to the customary brokerage usually granted and allowed by them and accepted by their brokers on similar sales to purchasers;

(b) Granted to purchasers, sales to whom were effected by brokers controlled by such purchasers, discounts and allowances in lieu of brokerage, by selling said commodities to them at a net price which was lower than their prevailing market price by an amount equal to the customary brokerage usually granted and allowed by them to such brokers on similar sales to other purchasers; and

(c) Granted to brokers on sales for such brokers' own account, discounts and allowances in lieu of brokerage, by selling to such brokers at a net price which was lower than their prevailing market price by an amount equal to the customary brokerage usually granted and allowed by them to such brokers on similar sales to other purchasers:

Held, That in granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers in connection with their respective purchases, as above set forth, said partners violated subsection (c) of Section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

Mr. John T. Haslett for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the parties respondent named in the caption hereof and hereinafter more particularly described, since June 19, 1936, have violated and are now violating the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), issues its complaint stating its charges with respect thereto as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, George C. Bounds and William H. Phillips, partners doing business under the name and style of George A. Bounds & Co., have their principal office and place of business located at Salisbury, Md. Respondents own, and for the purpose of packing, processing, and canning tomatoes and sweetpotatoes, operate a factory located at Hebron, Md.

PAR. 2. Respondents since June 19, 1936, have been and are now engaged in the business of selling, shipping, and distributing such commodities, by means and through the use of brokers, directly to purchasers of the same for resale. The customary brokerage granted and allowed by respondents to brokers on such sales has been and usually is 4 percent from invoice price, said invoice price being respondents' prevailing market price.

PAR. 3. Respondents are now and have been since June 19, 1936, selling, shipping, and distributing such commodities in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, and as a result of such sales have caused such commodities to be shipped and transported from the State of Maryland to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Maryland. There is now and has been at all times mentioned herein a continuous current of trade in commerce in such commodities between respondents and the purchasers of such commodities.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their business in commerce as hereinbefore alleged and described.

1. Respondents have granted to purchasers, the sales to whom have been effected by brokers not accepting brokerage from respondents on such sales, discounts, and allowances in lieu of brokerage, by selling and invoicing said commodities to such purchasers at a net price which is lower than respondents' prevailing market price by an amount which approximately equals the customary brokerage usually granted and allowed by respondents and accepted by respondent's brokers on similar sales to purchasers.

2. Respondents have granted to purchasers, the sales to whom have been effected by brokers controlled by such purchasers, discounts and allowances in lieu of or as brokerage, by selling said commodities to such purchasers at a net price which is lower than respondents prevailing market price by an amount which equals the customary brokerage usually granted and allowed by respondents to such brokers on similar sales to other purchasers effected by such brokers.

3. Respondents have granted to brokers, the sales to whom have been for such brokers own account, discounts and allowances in lieu of or as brokerage, by selling said commodities to such brokers at a net price which is lower than respondents prevailing market price by an amount which is equal to the customary brokerage usually granted and allowed by respondents to such brokers on similar sales to other purchasers when effected by such brokers.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts of the respondents constitute a violation of the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of the above-mentioned Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13).

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, the Clayton Act, as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, the Robinson-Patman Act (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), the Federal Trade Commission on the 5th day of September, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the parties respondent named in the caption hereof, charging the respondents with violation of the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of said act, as amended.

After the issuance of said complaint, the respondents filed their answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure as to said facts, and expressly waiving the filing of briefs and oral argument.

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, George C. Bounds and William H. Phillips, partners doing business under the name and style of George A. Bounds & Co., have their principal office and place of business located at Salisbury, Md. Respondents own, and for the purpose of packing, processing, and canning tomatoes and sweetpotatoes, operate a factory located at Hebron, Md.

PAR. 2. Respondents since June 19, 1936, have been and are now engaged in the business of selling, shipping, and distributing such commodities, through the use of brokers and directly to purchasers of the same for resale. The customary brokerage granted and allowed by respondents to brokers on such sales has been and usually is 4 percent from the invoice price, said invoice price being respondents' prevailing market price.

PAR. 3. Respondents are now and have been since June 19, 1936, selling, shipping, and distributing such commodities in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, and as a result of such sales have caused such commodities to be shipped and transported from the State of Maryland to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Maryland. There is now and has been at all times mentioned herein a continuous current of trade in commerce in such commodities between respondents and the purchasers of such commodities.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their business in commerce as hereinbefore described,

1. Respondents have granted to purchasers, the sales to whom have been effected by brokers not accepting brokerage from respondents on such sales, discounts, and allowances in lieu of brokerage, by selling and invoicing said commodities to such purchasers at a net price which is lower than respondents' prevailing market price by an amount which approximately equals the customary brokerage usually granted and allowed by respondents and accepted by respondents' brokers on similar sales to purchasers.

2. Respondents have granted to purchasers, the sales to whom have been effected by brokers controlled by such purchasers, discounts and allowances in lieu of brokerage, by selling said commodities to such purchasers at a net price which is lower than respondents' prevailing market price by an amount which equals the customary brokerage usually granted and allowed by respondents to such brokers on similar sales to other purchasers effected by such brokers.

3. Respondents have granted to brokers, the sales to whom have been for such brokers' own account, discounts and allowances in lieu of brokerage, by selling said commodities to such brokers at a net price which is lower than respondents' prevailing market price by an amount which is equal to the customary brokerage usually granted and allowed by respondents to such brokers on similar sales to other purchasers when effected by such brokers.

CONCLUSION

In granting and allowing brokerage fees and commissions or allowances and discounts in lieu thereof to purchasers in connection with their respective purchases of canned tomatoes and canned sweetpotatoes from the respondents, as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, the respondents, George C. Bounds and William H. Phillips, partners doing business under the name and style of George A. Bounds & Co., have violated and are violating subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondents named in the caption hereof, in which answer said respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint to be true, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and expressly waive the filing of briefs and oral argument, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13).

It is ordered, That the respondents, George C. Bounds and William H. Phillips, partners doing business under the name and style of George A. Bounds & Co., their representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the sale and distribution of canned tomatoes and canned sweetpotatoes in interstate commerce and in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Granting or making any allowances or discounts in lieu of brokerage to any purchaser by selling commodities at a price reflecting a reduction from the prices at which sales of such commodities are currently being effected by respondents to other customers of an amount representing, in whole or in part, brokerage currently being paid by respondents to brokers for brokerage services rendered to respondents in effecting sales of such commodities to such purchasers thereof; and

2. Granting or allowing in any manner or form whatever, directly or indirectly, anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof to any purchaser in such transactions.

It is further ordered, That the respondents named in the caption hereof shall, within 30 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Federal Trade Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

GLAND ESTEMETER CORPORATION, AND WILLIAM ESTEP

Docket 4328. Complaint, Oct. 3, 1940—Decision, June 13, 1941

Where a corporation and its president and general manager, who formulated, directed, and controlled its practices and policies, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of their "Gland Estemeter" device for diagnosing various ailments and conditions; by means of advertisements disseminated through the mails, circulars, leaflets, and other advertising literature—

Represented, directly or by implication, that all ailments and diseases of the human body are caused by improper or abnormal functioning of the glands, and that their said device detected and disclosed any such improper or abnormal functioning, revealed any vitamin deficiency in the body and whether condition thereof was acid or alkaline, disclosed the condition of the blood with respect to energy and activity, and analyzed and disclosed any impairment of the mental processes;

Facts being there are many ailments and diseases which are not caused by any improper or abnormal functioning of the glands, and even where there might be such dysfunctioning, their said device was wholly incapable of detecting or disclosing such condition; and it possessed no value whatsoever in the diagnosis of any ailment, disease, or condition of the body;

With tendency and capacity to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public to believe that such representations were true, and to cause it to purchase substantial quantities of their product as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, as above set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Randolph W. Branch for the Commission.

Darrow, Smith & Carlin, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Gland Estemeter Corporation, a corporation, and William Estep, an individual, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Gland Estemeter Corporation is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Missouri. Respondent William Estep is president and general manager of the corporate respondent and formulates, directs, and controls the practices and policies of said corporation. Both of the respondents formerly maintained their offices and principal places of business at 201 East Twelfth Street, Kansas City, Mo. Their present mailing address is in care of American Health Food Association, 30 North LaSalle Street, Chicago, Ill.

PAR. 2. For more than 1 year next preceding October 31, 1939, the respondents were engaged in the business of selling and distributing a certain device referred to by respondents as a "Gland Estemeter" and intended for use in the diagnosis of various ailments and conditions of the human body.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business the respondents have disseminated and have caused the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said product; and respondents have also disseminated and have caused the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said product by various means for the purpose of inducing and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth by the United States mails, by circulars, leaflets and other advertising literature are the following:

THE GLAND ESTEMETER

This wonderful invention reveals the Vitamin Deficiency and Gland Deficiency of the body. SHOWING THE CAUSE AND PROPER WAY TO ELIMINATE DISEASE.

If Your Glands are Normal, They Register:

Pineal Gland, 580	Spleen Gland, 600
Pituitary Gland, 600	Adrenal Glands, 500
Para Thyroid Gland, 600	Pancreas Gland, 550
Thymus Gland, 550	Gonads, 600
Thyroid Gland, 380

* * * the gland deficiency is the only cause of disease.

IF YOUR HEALTH IS CAUSING YOU TROUBLE, HAVE A GLAND TEST ON THE ESTEMETER AT ONCE. LEARN HOW TO CORRECT YOUR VITAMIN DEFICIENCY, TAKE THE ESTEMETER GLAND TECHNIQUE AND SEE FOR YOURSELF THAT AS FAST AS YOUR GLANDS BECOME NORMAL YOU WILL RECOVER FROM YOUR TROUBLE.

The Gland Estemeter Registers the Power of the Glands, Reveals what vitamins are deficient, shows if the body is acid or alkaline, reveals the blood energy and its power, analyzes the positive or negative mental condition of the brain centers.

The Estemeter also shows the energy in the blood as to its activity and reveals the extent of mineral deficiency, when the mineral is taken the Estemeter reveals the progress toward recovery and the deficiency disease if there is one vanishes as the blood approaches normal on the Estemeter.

THE GREAT BENEFIT HUMANITY WILL DERIVE FROM KNOWING THE CONDITION OF THEIR GLANDS AND HAVING A DEFINITE KNOWLEDGE OF VITAMIN DEFICIENCY IN THE BLOOD, AS WELL AS KNOWING THE EXACT CONDITION OF THEIR MENTAL PROCESS IS BEYOND ESTIMATE.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondents directly and by implication, among other things, have represented that all ailments and diseases of the human body are caused by the improper or abnormal functioning of the glands of the body; that respondents' device detects and discloses any improper or abnormal functioning of the glands; that said device reveals any vitamin deficiency in the body, reveals whether the condition of the body is acid or alkaline, discloses the condition of the blood with respect to energy and activity, and analyzes and discloses any impairment of the mental processes.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are false and misleading. In truth and in fact, there are many ailments and diseases of the human body which are not caused by any improper or abnormal functioning of the glands. Even in those cases where there may be an improper or abnormal functioning of the glands, respondents' device is wholly incapable of detecting or disclosing such condition. Said device does not reveal vitamin deficiencies in the body, nor does it disclose whether the condition of the body is acid or alkaline. It does not disclose the condition of the blood with respect to energy or activity, nor does it disclose any other condition of the blood. It does not analyze or disclose impairments of the mental processes.

Respondents' device is in fact only an ordinary electric battery device, and the registrations shown thereon when said device is in use indicate merely the resistance of the body tissues to the electric current set in motion by the device. Such registrations are in no way related to nor are they indicative of the condition of the glands or any other part of the human body. In truth and in fact, respondents' device possesses no value whatsoever in the diagnosis of any ailment, disease, or condition of the human body.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false and misleading representations with respect to their said product has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false and misleading representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' product.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 3d day of October 1940, issued, and thereafter served, its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondents Gland Estemeter Corporation and William Estep, charging them with unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On October 18, 1940, the respondents filed their answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondents and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceedings without the presentation of argument, the filing of briefs or the filing of a report upon the evidence by the trial examiner. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Gland Estemeter Corporation, is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Missouri. Respondent William Estep is president and general manager of the corporate respondent and formulates, directs, and controls the practices and policies of said corporation. Both of the respondents formerly maintained their offices and principal places of business at 201 East Twelfth Street, Kansas City, Mo. Their present mailing address is care of American Health Food Association, 30 North LaSalle Street, Chicago, Ill.

PAR. 2. For more than 1 year next preceding October 31, 1939, the respondents were engaged in the business of selling and distributing a certain device referred to by respondents as a "Gland Estemeter" and intended for use in the diagnosis of various ailments and conditions of the human body.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business the respondents have disseminated and have caused the dissemination of advertisements concerning their said product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said product; and respondents have also disseminated and have caused the dissemination of advertisements concerning their said product by various means for the purpose of inducing, and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said product in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth by the United States mails, by circulars, leaflets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondents directly and by implication, among other things, have represented that all ailments and diseases of the human body are caused by the improper or abnormal functioning of the glands of the body; that respondents' device detects and discloses any improper or abnormal functioning of the glands; that said device reveals any vitamin deficiency in the body, reveals whether the condition of the body is acid or alkaline, discloses the condition of the blood with respect to energy and activity, and analyzes and discloses any impairment of the mental processes.

PAR. 5. The Commission finds that the representations referred to in paragraphs 3 and 4 are false and misleading, and constitute false advertisements. There are many ailments and diseases of the human body which are not caused by any improper or abnormal functioning of the glands. Even in those cases where there may be an improper or abnormal functioning of the glands, respondents' device is wholly incapable of detecting or disclosing such condition. Respondents' device does not reveal vitamin deficiencies in the body, nor does it disclose whether the condition of the body is acid or alkaline. PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of the foregoing representations with respect to their product has the tendency and capacity to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public to believe that such representations are true, and to cause such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' product as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

sion, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondents herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Gland Estemeter Corporation, a corporation, its officers, and William Estep, an individual, and respondents' representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of their medicinal device known as "Gland Estemeter," or any device of substantially similar construction or possessing substantially similar characteristics, whether sold under the same name or any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference:

(a) That all ailments or diseases of the human body are caused by the improper or abnormal functioning of the glands;

(b) That respondents' device detects or discloses improper or abnormal functioning of the glands;

(c) That said device reveals vitamin deficiencies in the body;

(d) That said device discloses whether the condition of the body is acid or alkaline;

(e) That said device discloses the condition of the blood with respect to energy or activity, or that said device discloses any other condition of the blood;

(f) That said device analyzes or discloses impairments of the mental processes;

(g) That said device possesses any value in the diagnosis of any ailment, disease or condition of the human body.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said device, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

GORDON FOODS, INC.

Docket 4438. Complaint, Dec. 31, 1940—Decision, June 13, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the competitive interstate sale and distribution of food products including assortments of nuts, which were so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold to the consuming public, and included, as typical, a display card with twenty-seven 5-cent packages of nuts each, three of which, however, concealed within them a printed slip of paper bearing the word "free" and were without cost to purchasers procuring same;

Sold such assortments to jobbers and, directly or indirectly, to retailers, by whom they were exposed and sold in accordance with said plan, involving game of chance to procure without cost, package of nuts, and thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products, contrary to established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who, unwilling to sell their products by such or any method contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by its said sales plan and the element of chance involved therein and were thereby induced to buy and sell its products in preference to those of its said competitors, and with tendency and capacity to divert trade unfairly to it from them:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and its competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr. for the Commission.

Mr. Clarence H. Calhoun, of Atlanta, Ga., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Gordon Foods, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Gordon Foods, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Georgia with its principal office and place of business located at 1075 Sylvan Road SW., Atlanta, Ga. Respondent is now and has been for more than 1 year last past engaged in the sale and distribution of food products to jobbers and retail dealers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, its products when sold to be shipped and transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Georgia to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 1 year last past a course of trade by said respondent in such food products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is, and has been, in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, assortments of nuts so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the purchasing and consuming public.

One of said assortments consists of 27 packages of nuts mounted on a display card bearing the legend

TRY YOUR LUCK.

You May Get a Free Package.

and distributed in the following manner:

The said packages of nuts retail at the price of 5 cents each, but three of said packages have within the wrapper or package a printed slip of paper bearing the word "Free" and thereby advising the purchaser thereof that the said package of nuts is given to him without cost. The said printed slips of paper are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until said packages have been opened and the said slips removed therefrom. The purchasers who procure said packages containing said printed slips thus procure the same without cost rather than at the regular retail price of 5 cents each. The fact as to whether the purchasers of said packages of nuts in said assortment procure the same without cost or pay the regular price of 5 cents each therefor, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed various assortments of food products involving a lot or chance feature, but such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said packages of nuts, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its products and the sale of said products by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of packages of nuts to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure packages of said nuts without cost. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute products in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method which is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its products and by the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's products in preference to products of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and, as a result thereof, substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 31st day of December 1940 issued, and on January 2, 1941, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Gordon Foods, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On January 21, 1941, the respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondent through its counsel, Clarence H. Calhoun, and by W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. The respondent also waived the filing of a report upon the evidence by a trial examiner. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Gordon Foods, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Georgia with its principal office and place of business located at 1075 Sylvan Road SW., Atlanta, Ga. Respondent is now and has been for more than 1 year last past engaged in the sale and distribution of food products to jobbers and retail dealers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, its products, when sold, to be shipped and transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Georgia to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 1 year last past a course of trade by said respondent in such food products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is, and has been, in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, assortments of nuts so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the purchasing and consuming public.

One of said assortments consists of 27 packages of nuts mounted on a display card bearing the legend and distributed in the following manner:

The said packages of nuts retail at the price of 5 cents each, but three of said packages have within the wrapper or package a printed slip of paper bearing the word "Free" and thereby advising the purchaser thereof that the said package of nuts is given to him without cost. The said printed slips of paper are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until said packages have been opened and the said slips removed therefrom. The purchasers who procure said packages containing said printed slips thus procure the same without cost rather than at the regular retail price of 5 cents each. The fact as to whether the purchasers of said packages of nuts in said assortment procure the same without cost or pay the regular price of 5 cents each therefor, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said packages of nuts, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its products and the sale of said products by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of packages of nuts to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure packages of said nuts without cost. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute products in competition with respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method which is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its products and by the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's products in preference to products of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, and the stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondent herein and W. T. Kelly, Chief Counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Gordon Foods, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of nuts, nut products, or other merchandise, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing nuts, nut products, or any other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such nuts, nut products, or other merchandise, to the general public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers, or others, assortments of packages of nuts, nut products, or other merchandise which are to be used, or may be used, to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of such nuts, nut products, or other merchandise to the public.

3. Packing or assembling in the same assortment packages of nuts, nut products or other merchandise for ultimate sale to the public, which individual packages of nuts, nut products or other merchandise are of uniform appearance, but some of which contain coupons or slips entitling the purchaser to receive such packages without cost.

4. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

NEO-VIM COMPANY, AND W. C. POLLARD, A. L. RIAFF, L. M. JENSEN, CARL G. ROSSEL, EDWIN L. MILLER, AND L. R. DILLOW

Docket 3969. Complaint, Oct. 10, 1940 [1]—Decision, June 14, 1941

Where a corporation and several individuals, who were at various times officers and managing directors thereof and formulated, directed and controlled its policies and practices or participated therein, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of their "Neo-Vim" or "Neo-Vem" medicinal preparation as a tonic, and of their "Hi-Ho Tooth Paste" for use on teeth and gums; by means of advertisements disseminated through the mails, in newspapers and periodicals, radio continuities, and circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature—

(a) Represented, directly or through implication that their said "Neo-Vim" or "Neo-Vem" was a competent and effective tonic which supplied the user with increased energy and vitality and increased the appetite, that it served to increase the quantity, and improve the quality, of the blood, and would increase the flow of gastric juices and otherwise aid digestion, and that it was a competent and effective treatment for indigestion;

Facts being, said product was not a competent or effective tonic, and had no such beneficial effects or therapeutic value except as an ordinary laxative; and

(b) Represented that their "Hi-Ho Tooth Paste" possessed unusual and superior qualities for brightening the teeth, kept the gums healthy and firm, would remove all stain, film, and discoloration from the teeth irrespective of cause, alter the natural or original color of the tooth enamel and make any teeth white and sparkling, and that it prevented impure breath and offensive breath odors;

Facts being said preparation was not a competent or effective agency for brightening the teeth except as an ordinary cleanser, and served no other purpose than as an ordinary dentifrice;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such advertisements were true, and of causing it, as a result of such belief, to purchase substantial quantities of their preparations:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Lewis C. Russell, trial examiner.

Mr. R. A. McOuat for the Commission.

Mr. Owen B. Sherwood, of Columbus, Ohio, for respondents.

[1] Amended and supplemental.

AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Neo-Vim Co., a corporation, and W. C. Pollard, A. L. Riaff, L. M. Jensen, Carl G. Rossel, Edwin L. Miller, and L. R. Dillow, individually and as officers of said corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its amended and supplemental complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Neo-Vim Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio and having its office and principal place of business at 400 North High Street, Columbus, Ohio.

Respondents, Riaff and Jensen, were until May 1939 officers and managing directors of the corporate respondent and formulated, directed, and controlled the policies and practices of the corporate respondent. The mailing address of each of said respondents is 400 North High Street, Columbus, Ohio.

Respondents, Pollard, Rossel, Miller, and Dillow, are now and for varying periods of time since March 1938 have been officers and managing directors of said corporate respondent and formulate, direct, and control the policies and practices of said corporate respondent. The mailing address of each of said respondents is 400 North High Street, Columbus, Ohio.

The respondents are now, or since March 1938 have been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing a medicinal preparation designated "Neo-Vim" or "Neo-Vem," recommended for use as a tonic, and a cosmetic designated Hi-Ho Tooth Paste, recommended for use on the teeth and gums. Respondents cause and have caused their said preparations, when sold, to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain and have maintained a course of trade in their said preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said products by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said products, by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce directly or indirectly the purchase of their said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, by radio continuities, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

A good tonic, to keep the system in good condition, may be just the thing to keep you well. Now, Neo-Vim is a tonic that is designed to aid in increasing appetite, to relieve that stuffiness after meals, to help digestion and also to help build red blood.

Are you feeling well right now—full of that pep and energy that is needed around these busy holidays? Perhaps you need a good tonic like Neo-Vim. This tonic is designed to relieve stomach distress, stuffiness after eating, increases appetite, and helps to build good red blood.

Maybe you are not feeling well right now—perhaps you are troubled with indigestion, have no appetite, and feel generally run down. Then—we'd say Neo-Vim will probably be a fine tonic for you because Neo-Vim will tone up your system by helping to restore appetite, will increase the flow of gastric juices, and will aid digestion and relieve that stuffy feeling after eating. It is mildly laxative and will help to make red blood, so necessary for good health.

Hi-Ho Tooth Paste * * * is so invigorating, keeps the gums healthy. Don't let dingy, discolored teeth or bad breath chase away your friends. Have a smile that your friends will envy by using Hi-Ho Tooth Paste regularly.

You might just add a little more to your brush and massage your gums too, it is certainly healthy and helps the gums stay firm, and once you have firm gums, your teeth are going to shine out like studded diamonds.

Hi-Ho toothpaste * * * has such a refreshing flavor that it sweetens the breath, so that you never need worry about offending.

PAR. 3. Through the use of the foregoing representations, and other representations similar thereto not specifically set forth herein, the respondents represent and have represented, directly or through inference that their medicinal preparation Neo-Vim or Neo-Vem is a competent and effective tonic which supplies the user with increased energy and vitality and increases the appetite; that it serves to increase the quantity of blood in the body and improves the quality of the blood; that it will increase the flow of gastric juices and otherwise aid digestion; that it is a competent and effective treatment for indigestion.

Respondents also represent in the manner aforesaid that their product Hi-Ho Tooth Paste possessed unusual and superior qualities for brightening the teeth; that it keeps the gums healthy and adds firmness to the gums; that said tooth paste will remove all stain, film, and discoloration from the teeth irrespective of the cause thereof, and will alter the natural or original color of tooth enamel and make any teeth white and sparkling; that it prevents impure breath and offensive breath odors.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid representations used and disseminated by the respondents in the manner above described are grossly exaggerated, misleading, deceptive, and untrue and constitute false advertisements. In truth and in fact respondents' product Neo-Vim or Neo-Vem is not a competent or effective tonic. It is wholly incapable of supplying the user with increased energy or vitality. It will not serve to increase the appetite. It will not increase the quantity of blood in the body nor will it improve the quality of the blood. It will not increase the flow of the gastric juices nor will it otherwise aid digestion. It is not a competent or effective treatment for indigestion. In truth and in fact respondents' preparation has no therapeutic value except as an ordinary laxative.

Respondents' product, Hi-Ho Tooth Paste, is not a competent or effective agency for brightening the teeth except insofar as its use as an ordinary cleanser of the teeth will effect such result. Said tooth paste will not remove stain, film, or discoloration, except those of a surface character, from the teeth. It will not serve to keep the gums healthy or add firmness to the gums. It will not prevent impure breath or offensive odors. In truth and in fact, said product serves no purpose other than as an ordinary dentifrice for the cleaning of the teeth.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading advertisements with respect to their preparations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said advertisements are true, and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' preparations.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on October 10, 1940, issued and subsequently served its amended complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Neo-Vim Co., a corporation, and W. C. Pollard, A. L. Riaff, L. M. Jensen, Carl G. Rossel, Edwin L. Miller, and L. R. Dillow, individually and as officers of said corporation, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said amended complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, in which answers respondents admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said amended complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, testimony and other evidence were introduced to show the extent to which Carl G. Rossel participated in the acts and practices charged in the amended complaint, before Lewis C. Russell, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said amended complaint, the answers thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and brief in support of the amended complaint, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Neo-Vim Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio and having its office and principal place of business at 400 North High Street, Columbus, Ohio.

Respondents, A. L. Riaff and L. M. Jensen, are individuals having their mailing address at 400 North High Street, Columbus, Ohio, and were, until May 1939, officers and managing directors of the corporate respondent and formulated, directed, and controlled the policies and practices of the corporate respondent.

Respondents, W. C. Pollard, Edwin L. Miller, and L. R. Dillow, are individuals having their mailing address at 400 North High Street, Columbus, Ohio, who are now, and for varying periods of time since May 1938, have been, officers and managing directors of said corporate respondent and formulate, direct, and control the policies and practices of said corporate respondent.

Respondent, Carl G. Rossel, is an individual having his mailing address at 400 North High Street, Columbus, Ohio, and prior to February 1940, was an officer of said corporate respondent, and as such officer participated in the formulation, direction, and control of the policies and practices of the corporate respondent.

The respondents, since March 1938, have been engaged in the business of selling and distributing a medicinal preparation designated "Neo-Vim" or "Neo-Vem" recommended for use as a tonic, and a cosmetic designated "Hi-Ho Tooth Paste" recommended for use on the teeth and gums. Respondents cause, and have caused, their said preparations, when sold, to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said products by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said products, by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce directly or indirectly the purchase of their said products in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, by radio continuities, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

A good tonic, to keep the system in good condition, may be just the thing to keep you well. Now, Neo-Vim is a tonic that is designed to aid in increasing appetite, to relieve that stuffiness after meals, to help digestion and also to help build red blood.

Are you feeling well right now—full of that pep and energy that is needed around these busy holidays? Perhaps you need a good tonic like Neo-Vim. This tonic is designed to relieve stomach distress, stuffiness after eating, increases appetite, and helps to build good red blood.

Maybe you are not feeling well right now—perhaps you are troubled with indigestion, have no appetite, and feel generally run down. Then—we'd say Neo-Vim will probably be a fine tonic for you because Neo-Vim will tone up your system by helping to restore appetite, will increase the flow of gastric juices, and will aid digestion and relieve that stuffy feeling after eating. It is mildly laxative and will help to make red blood, so necessary for good health.

Hi-Ho Tooth Paste * * * is so invigorating, keeps the gums healthy. Don't let dingy, discolored teeth or bad breath chase away your friends. Have a smile that your friends will envy by using Hi-Ho Tooth Paste regularly.

You might just add a little more to your brush and massage your gums too, it is certainly healthy and helps the gums stay firm, and once you have firm gums, your teeth are going to shine out like studded diamonds.

Hi-Ho toothpaste * * * has such a refreshing flavor that it sweetens the breath, so that you never need worry about offending.

PAR. 3. Through the use of the foregoing representations, and other representations similar thereto not specifically set forth herein, the respondents represent and have represented, directly or through inference, that their medicinal preparation Neo-Vim or Neo-Vem is a competent and effective tonic which supplies the user with increased energy and vitality and increases the appetite; that it serves to increase the quantity of blood in the body and improves the quality of the blood; that it will increase the flow of gastric juices and otherwise aid digestion; that it is a competent and effective treatment for indigestion.

Respondents also represent in the manner aforesaid that their product Hi-Ho Tooth Paste possesses unusual and superior qualities for brightening the teeth; that it keeps the gums healthy and adds firmness to the gums; that said tooth paste will remove all stain, film and discoloration from the teeth irrespective of the cause thereof; and will alter the natural or original color of tooth enamel and make any teeth white and sparkling; that it prevents impure breath and offensive breath odors.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid representations used and disseminated by the respondents in the manner above described are grossly exaggerated, misleading, deceptive, and untrue and constitute false advertisements. In truth and in fact respondents' product Neo-Vim or NeoVem is not a competent or effective tonic. It is wholly incapable of supplying the user with increased energy or vitality. It will not serve to increase the appetite. It will not increase the quantity of blood in the body nor will it improve the quality of the blood. It will not increase the flow of the gastric juices nor will it otherwise aid digestion. It is not a competent or effective treatment for indigestion. In truth and in fact respondents' preparation has no therapeutic value except as an ordinary laxative.

Respondents' product, Hi-Ho Tooth Paste, is not a competent or effective agency for brightening the teeth except insofar as its use as an ordinary cleanser of the teeth will effect such result. Said tooth paste will not remove stain, film, or discoloration, except those of a surface character, from the teeth. It will not serve to keep the gums healthy or add firmness to the gums. It will not prevent impure breath or offensive odors. In truth and in fact, said product serves no purpose other than as an ordinary dentifrice for the cleaning of the teeth.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading advertisements with respect to their preparations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said advertisements are true, and induces a portion of the purchasing public because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' preparations.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended complaint of the Commission and the answers of the respondents, in which answers respondents admit all material allegations of fact set forth in said amended complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearings as to the said facts, testimony, and other evidence before Lewis C. Russell, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, with reference to the extent of participation of the respondent, Carl G. Rossel, in the acts and practices charged in the amended complaint, the report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and brief in support of the amended complaint filed herein, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Neo-Vim Co., a corporation, and its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, and W. C. Pollard, A. L. Riaff, L. M. Jensen, Carl G. Rossel, Edwin L. Miller, and L. R. Dillow, individuals, and their respective agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of their medicinal preparation designated "Neo-Vim" or "Neo-Vem," or their cosmetic preparation designated "Hi-Ho Tooth Paste," or any other product of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference,

(a) That respondents' preparation Neo-Vim or Neo-Vem is a tonic; that its use will supply increased energy or vitality; that it will increase the appetite or flow of gastric juices; that it will increase the quantity of the blood or improve the quality of the blood; that said preparation constitutes a competent or effective treatment for indigestion; or that said preparation has any therapeutic value other than that possessed by an ordinary laxative;

(b) That respondent's preparation Hi-Ho Tooth Paste will remove stain, film, or discoloration from the teeth other than those of a surface character; that said preparation will serve to keep gums healthy or add firmness to the gums; that the use of said preparation will prevent impure breath or offensive odors; or that it is a competent or effective agency for brightening the teeth in excess of the results obtained from the use of any ordinary dentifrice.

(2) Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act of respondents' preparations Neo-Vim or Neo-Vem or Hi-Ho Tooth Paste, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof and respective subdivisions thereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

PITTSBURGH PLATE GLASS COMPANY, W. D. SNYDER, KARL HANSEN COMPANY, INC., KARL HANSEN, DAVID BERNHARDT PAINT & GLASS COMPANY, INC., FRED DITTMAN, EDMUND W. ULRICH, JOSEPH B. CRASTO, LLOYD B. CRASTO, JOSEPH B. CRASTO GLASS COMPANY, AND H. FLAUMHAFT

Docket 4304. Complaint, Sept. 6, 1940—Decision, June 14, 1941

Where a corporation, with principal place of business in Memphis, and two other corporations, with principal and only offices in New Orleans, engaged in selling and distributing glass and conducting a glazing contract business in the States comprising the New Orleans trade area, and three individuals, who were, respectively in charge of New Orleans branch of said first-named corporation, and officers in control of the affairs of the other two, and who determined, as herein concerned, the pricing policies of their respective companies; in competition with one another and with other distributors located in said area and elsewhere, except to the extent that competition was lessened and potential competition curtailed by acts and practices below described, and representing, in their aggregate participation in the distribution of plate, window, safety, rough rolled, wire, art, and structural glass, periodically and during times herein involved, an actual and potential preponderance of such business—

Agreed upon and carried out, from about 1932 through 1938 and from time to time, a common understanding and undertaking among themselves to establish and maintain the prices at which the various types of glass were to be and were sold by them to dealers, to the retail trade and to consumers in aforesaid area; and, with intent of making such understanding and undertaking effective and attempting to require compliance therewith by themselves and competitors—

(a) Held meetings at various times during period in question at which said understanding and undertaking was discussed, adopted and agreed to;

(b) From time to time issued and adhered to duplicate and uniform price lists for the sale of the various types of glass above set forth;

(c) Simultaneously, at times, changed the prices at which they sold said glass to purchasers; and

(d) From time to time took concerted action to maintain the prices agreed upon; and

Where said corporations and individuals, engaged as above set forth, and a fourth individual, with principal and only place of business in New Orleans, likewise engaged in conducting a glazing contracting business, in the New Orleans trade area, a corporation which succeeded to and carried on aforesaid individual's business, and a fifth individual, likewise engaged in glazing contracting, with principal office and only place of business in New Orleans; securing and seeking to secure glazing contracts within area in question, in competition with similar contractors (whose places of business were located in said area and elsewhere, and including those who purchase glass for jobs in said area from dealers and distributors located in States other than Louisiana), except to the extent that their competition was lessened and potential competition curtailed by acts and practices below described; and representing a potential preponderance, and at times during periods involved herein an actual preponderance, of business concerned—

Agreed upon and carried out, from the year 1933 through 1936, and from time to time, an agreement, understanding, or undertaking among themselves, with intent of lessening competition in glass contracting within said area; and in pursuance of their agreement, understanding, or undertaking—

(e) Apportioned the glazing contracting business in said city;

(f) Established the amount of the bids to be submitted respectively by them for supplying or installing glass in buildings or structures in area in question; and

(g) Exchanged information and held meetings for establishing and maintaining the amount of their respective bids on particular jobs and to allocate among themselves, as aforesaid, glazing contracts in area in question;

With capacity, tendency, and effect of establishing and maintaining prices at which glass was sold by distributors in aforesaid area, and of unreasonably lessening competition in the glass trade and distribution therein, and in the glazing contracting business in said area, of curtailing price competition among glass distributors therein, and of burdening and interfering therein with the normal and natural flow of trade in commerce in glass, and of injuring their competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and had a tendency unduly to hinder and prevent competition in the sale and distribution of glass and the glazing contracting business in commerce, to place in said distributors the power to control prices at which glass was sold in aforesaid area, and to place in said glazing contractors the power to control prices at which glazing contracts were made therein and unduly to restrict and restrain the sale and distribution of glass in said commerce, and constituted unfair methods of competition therein.

Mr. Fletcher G. Cohn and Mr. Allen C. Phelps for the Commission.

Mr. Leland Hazard and Mr. Joseph T. Owens, of Pittsburgh, Pa., for Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. and W. D. Snyder.

Mr. Charles J. Rivet, of New Orleans, La., for Karl Hansen Co., Inc. and Karl Hansen.

Legier, McEnerny & Waguespack, of New Orleans, La., for David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co., Inc., Fred Dittman and Edmund W. Ulrich.

Mr. John D. Nix, Jr., of New Orleans, La., for Joseph B. Crasto, Lloyd B. Crasto, and Joseph B. Crasto Glass Co.

Mr. Herman L. Midlo, of New Orleans, La., for H. Flaumhaft.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal

Trade Commission having reason to believe that the respondents herein named have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Charge I

PARAGRAPH 1. The words and terms set out in this paragraph have the following meanings as used in this complaint:

"Glass" means plate window, automobile, safety, art, and structural glass;

"Respondent distributors" refers to respondents Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., Karl Hansen Co., Inc., and David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co., Inc.;

"Respondent glazing contractors" refers to respondents Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., Karl Hansen Co., Inc., David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co., Inc., Joseph B. Crasto, Joseph B. Crasto Glass Co., and H. Flaumhaft;

"Glazing contracting business" means the business of contracting to sell and install glass in buildings and structures and also of selling glass therefor and installing the same therein;

"New Orleans trade area" means the area including, surrounding and adjacent to the city of New Orleans, La., in which glass is sold or delivered or supplied and installed in buildings or structures by respondent distributors and respondent glazing contractors, and includes many cities and localities in the States of Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi, and Texas.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Tennessee, with its office and principal place of business located at 534 Madison Avenue, Memphis, Tenn. This respondent is engaged in the business of selling and distributing glass and of conducting a glazing contracting business in many different States of the United States, including the States in the New Orleans trade area. It maintains and operates warehouses or jobbing branches located in several different States of the United States. Among said warehouses and jobbing branches so maintained and operated by this respondent is the New Orleans jobbing or distributing branch which sells and distributes glass in the New Orleans trade area and conducts its glazing contracting business in said area. Respondent's New Orleans branch is managed by respondent W. D. Snyder, who is an employee and the representative and agent of respondent Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., in the New Orleans trade area. The office and principal place of business of said New Orleans jobbing branch is 1500 Poydras Street, New Orleans, La.

PAR. 3. Respondent Karl Hansen Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Louisiana with its principal office at 1600 Poydras Street, New Orleans, La.

Respondent Karl Hansen is the principal stockholder and the president of said Karl Hansen Co., Inc. Respondent Karl Hansen Co., Inc., is engaged in selling and distributing glass and in the glazing contracting business in the New Orleans trade area. Said respondent is under the direction and management of respondent Karl Hansen.

PAR. 4. Respondent David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Louisiana with its principal office at 317–323 Camp Street, New Orleans, La. This respondent is engaged in selling and distributing glass in the New Orleans trade area and in the glazing contracting business in said area.

Respondent Fred Dittmann is the secretary-treasurer of respondent, David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co., Inc., and in active management of its business and policies.

Respondent Edmund W. Ulrich is the manager of the Glazing Contracting Division of respondent David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co., Inc., and in charge of its glazing contracting business.

PAR. 5. Respondent Joseph B. Crasto was until June 7, 1940, in the business of selling glass in the New Orleans trade area and in the glazing contracting business in said area, under the name and style of the Joseph B. Crasto Glass Co., with his office and principal place of business located at 2001 Adams Street, New Orleans, La. On June 7, 1940, the said Joseph B. Crasto was succeeded in the aforementioned business by Joseph B. Crasto Glass Co., a corporation which was organized on that date, and is now existing under the laws of the State of Louisiana, and having its principal place of business also at 2001 Adams Street, New Orleans, La.

Respondent Lloyd B. Crasto is acting manager and architect of the Joseph B. Crasto Glass Co. and participates in its management and in formulating its policies.

PAR. 6. Respondent H. Flaumhaft is engaged in the glass and glazing contracting business in the New Orleans trade area, with his principal office and place of business located at 321 Dryades Street, New Orleans, La.

PAR. 7. Respondent distributors and respondent glazing contractors, in the course and conduct of their respective businesses, purchase or obtain glass from the various manufacturers thereof, and cause said glass, so purchased or obtained, to be transported from the States of origin thereof, being States of the United States other than the State of Louisiana, to, into and through various States of the United States and into the State of Louisiana. Said respondent distributors resell and distribute said glass to dealers, glazing contractors, processors, and consumers or users thereof located in the various States of the New Orleans trade area; and the respondent glazing contractors contract for the supply and installation of such glass in buildings and structures and supply and install same in said structures in the New Orleans trade area. Said glass is ordinarily purchased or obtained from the manufacturer thereof by said respondent distributors with the intention, and for the purpose, of reselling and distributing the same to purchasers thereof, located in the States comprising the New Orleans trade area. Said respondent distributors, upon sales of glass being made to purchasers, deliver and transport, or cause to be delivered and transported, said glass, so shipped into the State of Louisiana, to the purchasers thereof located in the States comprising the New Orleans trade area. All of said respondent distributors and glazing contractors are, and have been since prior to 1932, engaged in commerce between and among some of the several States of the United States in the manner hereinbefore described.

PAR. 8. Respondent distributors are in competition with one another and with other glass distributors, whose places of business are located in States of the New Orleans trade area and elsewhere, in seeking to sell, and in the sale and distribution of, glass in the New Orleans trade area, except insofar as said competition has been hindered, lessened, restrained or restricted or potential competition among them or with others forestalled, by the unfair practices and methods hereinafter set forth.

PAR. 9. Respondent glazing contractors are in competition with one another and with other glazing contractors whose places of business are located in States of the New Orleans trade area and elsewhere, in the glazing contracting business in the New Orleans trade area, except insofar as said competition has been hindered, lessened, restrained, or restricted or potential competition among them or with others forestalled, by the unfair practices and methods hereinafter set forth.

Those competitors of respondent glazing contractors who do not sell or distribute glass, in the course and conduct of their businesses, in many instances, purchase glass for those jobs in the New Orleans trade area for which they have glazing contracts, from dealers and distributors who are located outside the State of Louisiana, which dealers and distributors as part of such purchases, ship such glass or cause the same to be shipped, into the State of Louisiana.

PAR. 10. Respondent distributors, together with respondents W. D. Snyder, Karl Hansen, Fred Dittmann, and Edmund W. Ulrich, since about 1932, have agreed and combined together, and have united in and pursued a common and concerted course of action and undertaking, among themselves and with others, to adopt, carry out, enforce and maintain in said New Orleans trade area certain monopolistic policies and trade practices, hereafter described, which said respondents agreed to, and did, adhere to, among themselves, and which they have attempted to and have, by coercion and compulsion, imposed upon other actual or potential glass distributors in said trade area, who were not permitted or did not desire to join such combination and course of action.

PAR. 11. The said monopolistic policies and trade practices referred to in the preceding paragraph, which were so formulated, adopted and put into effect, were the following:

1. A policy and practice of fixing and maintaining the prices at, and conditions under, which glass was sold by distributors to dealers in various types of glass, to the retail trade and to consumers in the New Orleans trade area;

2. A policy and practice of apportioning among said respondent distributors, the business of selling and distributing glass in the New Orleans trade area;

3. A policy and practice of preventing glass distributors and dealers competing with respondent distributors from buying glass at the manufacturers' quoted prices and of compelling them to purchase glass from respondent distributors at prices above such manufacturers' quoted prices;

4. A policy and practice of listing certain dealers purchasers as "Special Buyers" and granting to such purchasers price concessions not granted to competitors of said purchasers;

5. A general policy and practice of reducing or eliminating competition in the glass business in the New Orleans trade area and of tending to create and maintain a monopoly in such business in said area.

PAR. 12. For the purpose of making such prices and practices effective and of requiring compliance therewith by all competing distributors and dealers in glass in the New Orleans trade area and imposing the same on the purchasing public located therein, respondent distributors, acting in furtherance of, and in pursuance to, the general plan and policy above described, have done the following things:

1. Formulated, adopted, followed, carried out, enforced, imposed and made effective the policies, practices and methods described in the preceding paragraph;

2. Held meetings at which said policies, practices and methods were discussed, adopted and agreed to;

3. Sought and obtained promises and assurances of cooperation from one another in establishing and making effective the sales practices, policies and pricing methods hereinabove described;

4. Exchanged information with reference to their respective businesses and activities to be used in furtherance of the policies and methods referred to;

5. Issued and adhered to duplicate and uniform price lists for the sale of various types of glass;

6. Simultaneously changed the prices at which they sold glass to the purchasers thereof;

7. Supervised and investigated the practices and policies of competing distributors, and acted concertedly to maintain said prices agreed upon, to control markets and to coercively require recalcitrant distributors and dealers to recognize and conform to such practices and methods.

PAR. 13. The capacity, tendency, and effect of said agreement, combination, policies, and methods, and the acts and practices of said respondent distributors in pursuance thereof are and have been:

1. To tend to monopolize in the said respondent distributors the business of selling and distributing glass in the New Orleans trade area;

2. To tend to monopolize in respondent distributors the opportunity to purchase or obtain glass from the manufacturers thereof at the manufacturers' list prices;

3. To fix and maintain the prices at, and the conditions under, which glass is sold by distributors in the New Orleans trade area;

4. To prevent glass distributors located in States outside of those included in the New Orleans trade area from selling glass in said trade area;

5. To unreasonably lessen, eliminate, restrict, stifle, hamper, and suppress competition in the glass trade and distribution in the New Orleans trade area, and to deprive the purchasing and consuming public of the advantages in price, service, and other considerations which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal and unobstructed and free and fair competition in said trade and industry, and to otherwise operate as a restraint upon, obstruction to, and detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition in such trade and industry;

6. To suppress, eliminate, and discriminate against small distributors who are or have been engaged in, or desire to engage in, selling glass in the New Orleans trade area;

7. To obstruct and prevent establishment of new distributors of glass in said area;

8. To suppress and eliminate price competition among distributors in the sale of glass in said trade area;

9. To burden, hamper, and interfere with the normal and natural flow of trade and commerce in glass into, through and from the various States of the United States included in the New Orleans trade area; and to injure the competitors of individual respondent distributors by unfairly diverting business and trade from them, depriving them thereof and otherwise oppressing them;

10. To prejudice and injure glass distributors who do not conform to respondents' program or methods or who do not desire to conform to them, but are compelled to do so by the concerted action of respondents herein alleged.

Charge II

PARAGRAPH 1. The allegations of paragraphs 1 to 9, inclusive, hereinabove set forth in Charge I above, to the extent that they aver matters and things pertinent to the allegations hereafter made in this charge, are hereby incorporated herein as though fully set forth.

PAR. 2. Respondent glazing contractors, together with respondents W. D. Snyder, Karl Hansen, Fred Dittmann, and Edmund W. Ulrich, since about 1935 have agreed and combined together and have united in and pursued a common and concerted course of action and undertaking, among themselves and with others, to adopt, carry out, enforce, and maintain in said New Orleans trade area, certain monopolistic practices hereafter described, which said respondents have agreed to, and did adhere to, among themselves, and which they have attempted to, and have, by coercion and compulsion imposed upon other actual or potential glazing contractors, located both in said New Orleans trade area and elsewhere, who were not permitted to, or did not desire to, join such agreement and combination.

PAR. 3. The said monopolistic policies and trade practices referred to in the preceding paragraph which were so formulated, adopted, and put into effect were the following:

1. A policy and practice of precluding glazing contractors competing with respondent glazing contractors or desiring to compete with them, from bidding on contracts for the supply and installation of glass in buildings and structures being erected or repaired in said trade area;

2. A policy and practice of precluding such competing glazing contractors from supplying and installing glass in buildings and structures being erected or repaired in said trade area;

3. A policy and practice of apportioning among themselves the glazing contracting business in New Orleans;

4. A policy and practice of fixing the amounts of the bids submitted by them for supplying and installing glass in buildings and structures in the New Orleans trade area;

5. A policy and practice of agreeing upon the unit costs of labor, materials and other items to be used in the computation of bids to be submitted for supplying and installing glass in buildings and structures in the New Orleans trade area.

PAR. 4. For the purpose of making such policies and practices effective and of requiring compliance therewith by all glazing contractors, both in and outside the New Orleans trade area, and imposing the same on glass distributors, and contractors and builders of structures in said trade area, respondent glazing contractors, acting in furtherance of, and in pursuance to, the general plan and policy above described, have done the following things:

1. Formulated, adopted, followed, carried out, enforced, imposed and made effective the policies, practices, and methods described in the preceding paragraph;

2. Held meetings at which said policies, practices, and methods were discussed, adopted, and agreed to;

3. Sought, and obtained promises and assurances of cooperation from one another in establishing and making effective the practices, policies, and methods above described;

4. Exchanged information with reference to their respective businesses and activities to be used in furtherance of the policies, practices, and methods referred to;

5. Supervised and investigated the practices and policies of competing glazing contractors and acted concertedly to compel such glazing contractors to recognize and concede to respondent glazing contractors the alleged right to use the unfair policies, practices, and methods above set forth.

PAR. 5. The capacity, tendency, and effect of said agreement, combination, policies, and methods with respect to glazing contractors and the glazing contracting business, are, and have been, similar to those of the agreement, combination, policies, and methods set forth with reference to respondent distributors and the sale and distribution of glass in paragraph 13 of Charge I hereof, the pertinent allegations of which are hereby incorporated herein by reference, as though fully set forth.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 6th day of September 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents named in the caption hereof charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. All of said respondents have duly filed their answers in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respective respondents, and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel of the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument, the filing of briefs, or the filing of a report upon the evidence by a trial examiner for the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The words and terms set out in this paragraph have the following meaning as used in these findings as to the facts:

"Glass" means plate, window, safety, rough rolled, wire, art, and structural glass (but the term "glass" shall not include any service involved in the installation of automobile glass);

"Respondent distributors" refers to respondents, Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., Karl Hansen Co., Inc., and David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co., Inc.;

"Respondent glazing contractors" refers to respondents, Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., Karl Hansen Co., Inc., David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co., Inc., Joseph B. Crasto, Joseph B. Crasto Glass Co., and H. Flaumhaft;

"Glazing contracting business" means the business of contracting to sell and install glass in building and structures and also of selling glass therefor and installing the same therein;

"New Orleans trade area" means the area including, surrounding, and adjacent to the city of New Orleans, La., in which glass is sold or delivered or supplied and installed in the buildings or structures by respondent distributors and respondent glazing contractors, and includes many cities and localities in the southern sections of the States of Louisiana and Mississippi.

PAR. 2. Respondent Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Tennessee, with its office and principal place of business located at 534 Madison Avenue, Memphis, Tenn. This respondent is engaged in the business of selling and distributing glass and of conducting a glazing contract business in the States comprising the New Orleans trade area. Respondent's New Orleans branch is managed by respondent W. D. Snyder who is an employee, representative, and agent of respondent Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. in the New Orleans trade area, and as such directs the business policies and activities of said respondent in said area. The office and principal place of business of said New Orleans jobbing branch is 1500 Poydras Street, New Orleans, La.

PAR. 3. Respondent Karl Hansen Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Louisiana, with its principal and only office being located at 1600 Poydras Street, New Orleans, La.

Respondent Karl Hansen Co., Inc., is engaged in selling and distributing glass and in the glazing contracting business in the New Orleans trade area, and is under the direction and management of respondent Karl Hansen.

Respondent Karl Hansen is the principal stockholder and president of said Karl Hansen Co., Inc., and as such, directs the management and business policies of said respondent company.

PAR. 4. Respondent David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Louisiana with its principal and only office being located at 317–323 Camp Street, New Orleans, La. It is engaged in selling and distributing glass in the New Orleans trade area and in the glazing contracting business in said area.

Respondent Fred Dittman is the secretary-treasurer of respondent David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co., Inc., and directs the management and business policies of said respondent David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co., Inc.

Respondent Edmund W. Ulrich is the manager of the Glazing Contracting Division of respondent David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co.,

Inc., and has active charge of the glazing contracting business of said respondent.

PAR. 5. Respondent Joseph B. Crasto was, until June 7, 1940, engaged in the business of selling glass in the New Orleans trade area and in conducting the glazing contracting business in said area under the name and style of the Joseph B. Crasto Co., with his principal and only office being located at 2001 Adams Street, New Orleans, La. On June 7, 1940, said respondent Joseph B. Crasto was succeeded in the aforementioned business by Joseph B. Crasto Glass Co., a corporation, organized on that date, under the laws of the State of Louisiana, and having its principal and only place of business also at 2001 Adams Street, New Orleans, La.

Said respondent Joseph B. Crasto Glass Co., a corporation took over the business and assets of said Joseph B. Crasto and adopted, approved, and ratified the acts and practices, as hereinafter found, of said respondent Joseph B. Crasto.

Respondent Lloyd Crasto, who is referred to in the complaint as Lloyd B. Crasto, is the active manager of respondent Joseph B. Crasto Glass Co., a corporation, and participates in its management and in the formulating of its business policies.

PAR. 6. Respondent H. Flaumhaft, an individual, is engaged in the glass and glazing contracting businesses in the New Orleans trade area with his principal and only office and place of business being located at 321 Dryades Street, New Orleans, La.

PAR. 7. Respondent distributors and respondent glazing contractors, in the course and conduct of their respective businesses, purchase or obtain glass from the various manufacturers thereof, and cause said glass, so purchased or obtained, to be transported from the States of origin thereof, being States of the United States other than the State of Louisiana, to, into and through various States of the United States and into the State of Louisiana.

Said respondent distributors resell and distribute said glass to dealers, glazing contractors, processors, and consumers or users thereof located in the States of the New Orleans trade area; and the respondent glazing contractors contract for the supply and installation of such glass in buildings and structures in the said New Orleans trade area. Such glass is ordinarily purchased or obtained from a manufacturer thereof by said respondent distributors with the intention, and for the purpose, of reselling and distributing the same to purchasers thereof located in the States comprising the New Orleans trade area. Said respondent distributors, upon sales of glass being made to such purchasers, deliver, and transport, or cause to be delivered and transported to said purchasers, said glass so shipped into the State of Louisiana.

All of said respondent distributors and glazing contractors are, and have been, with the exception of respondent Joseph B. Crasto Glass Co., a corporation, since prior to 1932, engaged in commerce between and among the States of the New Orleans trade area in the manner hereinbefore described. Respondent, Joseph B. Crasto Glass Co., a corporation, has been engaged in such commerce since its organization in June 1940.

PAR. 8. Respondent distributors all sell and seek to sell glass within the New Orleans trade area to the purchasers thereof as do other glass distributors whose places of business are situated in States of the New Orleans trade area and elsewhere.

PAR. 9. Respondent distributors have been, and are, in competition with one another and with other glass distributors whose places of business are located in the States of the New Orleans trade area and elsewhere, in seeking to sell, and in the sale and distribution of glass in said area, except, to the extent as hereinafter found, said competition has been lessened and potential competition among them or with others has been curtailed, by the acts and practices hereinafter found.

PAR. 10. Respondent glazing contractors all secure, and seek to secure, glazing contracts within the New Orleans trade area as do other glazing contractors whose places of business are located in the States of the New Orleans trade area and elsewhere.

PAR. 11. Those competitors of respondent glazing contractors who do not sell or distribute glass in the course and conduct of their respective businesses, in many instances, purchase glass for those jobs in the New Orleans trade area for which they have glazing contracts, from dealers and distributors who are located in States outside of the State of Louisiana, which dealers and distributors as part of such purchases, ship such glass, or cause same to be shipped, from those other States of the United States, into the State of Louisiana.

PAR. 12. Respondent glazing contractors are in competition with one another and with other glazing contractors whose places of business are located in the States of the New Orleans trade area and elsewhere, in seeking to secure, and in securing, glazing contracts in said area, except, to the extent as hereinafter found, said competition has been lessened and potential competition among them or with others has been curtailed, by the acts and practices hereinafter found.

PAR. 13. The aggregate of the participation of the respondent distributors in the distribution of plate, window, safety, rough, rolled, wire, art, and structural glass, respectively, and, of the respondent glazing contractors in the glazing contracting business, in the New Orleans trade area, represents periodically a potential preponderance of such businesses respectively in said area; and said respondents did, in fact, at times during the periods hereafter mentioned enjoy such preponderance of such businesses respectively.

PAR. 14. From 1932 to August or September 1938, the respondent distributors held meetings among themselves, at which respondent Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. was represented by respondent W. D. Snyder, respondent Karl Hansen Co., Inc., by respondent Karl Hansen, and respondent David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co. by respondent Fred Dittmann, at which the said respondent distributors discussed the prices at which each would sell glass in the New Orleans trade area, and the discounts each would offer for the sale of glass in the various States in the New Orleans trade area. Following certain of their meetings, respondent distributors in 1938 sent letters at approximately the same time to the various purchasers of glass in the New Orleans trade area announcing identical prices and the same discounts. During the year 1938, respondent Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. mailed schedules of price changes to other respondents and to the trade in general in advance of the date that such schedules of prices of respondent Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. were to become effective. During said period, each respondent, in many instances, adopted as its or his individual price schedule, the new prices on the date same were to become effective, with the belief that the other respondents would do likewise. Each respondent distributor made efforts to ascertain whether the other respondents had followed such prices.

PAR. 15. The pricing policies of respondent Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. are determined by respondent W. D. Snyder, its manager, those of respondent Karl Hansen Co., Inc., by respondent Karl Hansen and those of David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co., Inc., by respondent Fred Dittmann.

PAR. 16. Respondent distributors, together with respondents, W. D. Snyder, Karl Hansen, and Fred Dittmann, from about the year 1932 through 1938, have, from time to time, agreed upon, and carried out, a common understanding and undertaking among themselves to establish and maintain the prices at which glass was to be sold, and was sold, by the said respondent distributors to dealers of the various types of glass, to the retail trade and to the consumers of glass in the New Orleans trade area.

PAR. 17. For the purpose, during the aforementioned period, of making such understanding and undertaking effective and of attempting to require compliance therewith by respondent distributors and competitive distributors and dealers of glass in the said New Orleans trade area, respondent distributors and respondents, W. D. Snyder, Karl Hansen, and Fred Dittmann, acting in furtherance thereof and in pursuance thereto, at various times during said period, held meetings at which said understanding and undertaking were discussed, adopted and agreed to; from time to time issued, and adhered to, duplicate and uniform price lists for the sale of the various types of glass hereinbefore defined; simultaneously, at times, changed the prices at which said respondent distributors sold such glass to the purchasers thereof; and, from time to time took concerted action to maintain the prices agreed upon.

PAR. 18. Respondent glazing contractors, held prearranged meetings from 1933 through 1936. Respondent Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. was represented at such meetings by respondent W. D. Snyder; respondent Karl Hansen Co., Inc., by respondent Karl Hansen; respondent David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co., Inc., by respondent Edmund W. Ulrich; respondent Joseph B. Crasto by himself or by respondent Lloyd Crasto, and respondent H. Flaumhaft by himself. These meetings were held intermittently. At such meetings held during the years 1935 and 1936, glazing contracts for work to be done in the New Orleans trade area were allocated among respondent glazing contractors, by said respondent glazing contractors. Meetings were also held by said respondent glazing contractors, represented by the aforementioned individual respondents during the year 1938 and the early part of 1939. The meetings were held for the purpose of discussing and comparing the bids to be submitted by the respective respondent glazing contractors on particular jobs in the New Orleans trade area. The meetings were discontinued during the year 1939 and have not been resumed.

PAR. 19. Respondent glazing contractors, together with respondents, W. D. Snyder, Karl Hansen, Edmund W. Ulrich, Joseph B. Crasto, and Lloyd Crasto, from the year 1933 through 1936, agreed upon and carried out from time to time a common understanding to apportion among respondent glazing contractors the glazing contracting business in New Orleans, and to establish the amount of the bids to be submitted respectively by said respondents on glazing contracting jobs in the New Orleans trade area.

PAR. 20. For the purpose, during the aforementioned period, of making the understanding or undertaking, hereinbefore found in paragraph 19, effective, of attempting to require compliance therewith by respondent glazing contractors, respondent glazing contractors and respondents, W. D. Snyder, Karl Hansen, Edmund W. Ulrich, Joseph B. Crasto, and Lloyd Crasto, acting in furtherance of, and in pursuance to, said understanding and undertaking did, at various times during said period, formulate, adopt, follow and carry out, said understanding and undertaking; held meetings at which said understanding and undertaking were discussed, adopted and agreed to; and exchanged information with reference to the amounts of their respective bids to be submitted by them respectively on particular jobs in the New Orleans trade area.

PAR. 21. The capacity, tendency, and effect of the acts and practices of all the respondents, as hereinbefore described, were to establish and maintain prices at which glass was sold by distributors in the New Orleans trade area, to unreasonably lessen competition in the glass trade and distribution in the New Orleans trade area, to unreasonably lessen competition in the glazing contracting business in said area, to curtail price competition among distributors in the sale of glass in said area, to burden and interfere with the normal and natural flow of trade in commerce in glass in said area, and to injure the competitors of respondent distributors and respondent glazing contractors in said area.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as hereinabove found are all to the prejudice of the public; have a tendency to unduly hinder and prevent competition, in the sale and distribution of glass and the glazing contracting business in commerce as "commerce" is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act; to place in respondent distributors the power to control the prices at which glass is sold in the New Orleans trade area; to place in respondent glazing contractors the power to control the prices at which glazing contracts are made in said area; to unduly restrict and restrain the sale and distribution of glass in said commerce; and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

clusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondents Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., a Tennessee corporation, Karl Hansen Co., Inc., a corporation, and David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co., Inc., a corporation, and their respective officers, directors, respresentatives, agents, and employees, together with the successors or assigns of each of said respondents, and the respondents, W. D. Snyder, individually and as manager of the New Orleans branch of the respondent Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., Karl Hansen, individually and as president of the Karl Hansen Co., Inc., and Fred Dittmann, individually and as secretary-treasurer of the respondent, David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co., Inc., directly, indirectly, or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the sale or distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, of plate, window, safety, rough rolled, wire, art, and structural glass, do forthwith cease and desist from entering into or carrying out any agreement, understanding or undertaking among themselves or between or among any two or more of them, or between or among any one or more of them and any competing corporation, corporations, person or persons, for the purpose, or with the effect, of restricting or restraining competition in the sale or distribution of such glass in said commerce and also;

1. From establishing or maintaining, or attempting to establish or maintain, pursuant to such an agreement, understanding or undertaking, the prices at which such glass is offered for sale, or sold, to dealers of the various types of glass, to the retail trade or to consumers, in the New Orleans trade area.

2. From holding meetings, pursuant to such an agreement, understanding, or undertaking, for the purpose, intent, or which have the effect, of establishing or maintaining, or attempting to establish or maintain, the prices at which such glass is sold or offered for sale in said area.

3. From exchanging information, pursuant to such an agreement, understanding or undertaking, with reference to their respective businesses and activities, where the purpose, intent, or effect of same is to establish or maintain the prices at which glass is sold, or offered for sale in said area.

4. From adhering to, or attempting to adhere to, pursuant to such an agreement, understanding, or undertaking, duplicate or uniform price lists for the sale of any of such types of glass within the said area.

5. From changing simultaneously, pursuant to such an agreement, understanding, or undertaking, the prices at which they sell, or offer to sell, such glass to purchasers thereof within the said area.

It is further ordered, That respondents Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., a Tennessee corporation, Karl Hansen Co., Inc., a corporation, David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co., Inc., a corporation, Joseph B. Crasto Glass Co., a corporation, and their respective officers, directors, representatives, agents, and employees, together with the successors or assigns of each of said respondents and respondents, W. D. Snyder, individually and as manager of the New Orleans branch of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., Karl Hansen, individually and as president of the Karl Hansen Co., Inc., Edward W. Ulrich, individually and as manager of the Glazing Contracting Division of the respondent, David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co., Inc., Joseph B. Crasto, individually or trading as Joseph B. Crasto Glass Co., Lloyd Crasto, individually and as architect of Joseph B. Crasto Glass Co., a corporation, and H. Flaumhaft, directly, indirectly or through any corporate or any other device in connection with the sale or distribution in commerce as "commerce" is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, of plate, window, safety, rough rolled, wire, art, and structural glass, or in connection with the entering into or the making of any glazing contracts within the New Orleans trade area, do forthwith cease and desist, from entering into, or carrying out, any agreement, understanding, or undertaking among themselves, or between or among any two or more of them, or between or among any one or more of them, and any other corporation or corporations which compete with respondents, Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., Karl Hansen Co., Inc., David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co., Inc., Joseph B. Crasto Glass Co., or with any competing person or persons, for the purpose, or with the effect, of lessening or curtailing competition in the entering into, or the making, of such contracts, within said area, and also:

1. From apportioning, or attempting to apportion, among themselves, pursuant to such an agreement, understanding or undertaking, the glazing contracting business in New Orleans, La.;

2. From establishing, or attempting to establish, pursuant to such an agreement, understanding or undertaking, the amount of the bids to be submitted respectively by them for supplying, installing or for supplying and installing, glass in buildings or structures in the New Orleans trade area;

3. From holding meetings, pursuant to such an agreement, understanding, or undertaking, for the purpose, intent, or which have the effect, of establishing, or maintaining, the amount of the respective bids which respondent glazing contractors are to submit, or have submitted, on particular jobs in said area;

4. From holding meetings, pursuant to such an agreement, understanding, or undertaking for the purpose, intent, or which have the effect, of allocating among respondent glazing contractors, glazing contracts for jobs within the said area;

5. From exchanging information, pursuant to such an agreement, understanding or undertaking, with reference to their respective businesses and activities, where the purpose, intent, or effect, of same is to establish or attempt to establish the amount of the bids to be submitted respectively by respondent glazing contractors for jobs within said area.

It is further ordered, That the respondents, Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., W. D. Snyder, Karl Hansen Co., Inc., Karl Hansen, David Bernhardt Paint & Glass Co., Fred Dittmann, Edmund W. Ulrich, Joseph E. Crasto, Lloyd Crasto, Joseph B. Crasto Glass Co., H. Flaumhaft, and each of them, shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

THE FIRESTONE TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY, AND FIRESTONE TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY

Docket 3983. Complaint, Jan. 2, 1940—Decision, June 18, 1941

Where a corporation long engaged in the manufacture, among other things, of automobile tires, and in interstate sale and distribution thereof through its own stores and through independent dealers, both of whom it supplied with price lists respectively designating and suggesting retail selling prices, and both of whom sold a substantial quantity of its tires at such prices, and also a substantial number at lesser prices to meet competition and by special sales;

In advertising its "Champion," "High Speed," "Convoy," and "Sentinel" tire (replaced in May 1939, by its "Standard" tire)—relatively priced in that order, the latter three at approximately 90 percent, 75 percent, and 65 percent of the "Champion" price subsequent to November 1, 1938—by advertising copy which it prepared and disseminated to its dealers, and by advertisements during nation-wide sales periods in a large number of newspapers, which were also inserted in whole or in part in numerous newspapers throughout the United States by a large number of independent dealers and company-owned stores—

(a) Represented, as typical, that its "Convoy" tire was offered at savings of 25 percent off the regular current retail selling price, through advertising "SAVE 25% with the New FIRESTONE CONVOY TIRE New High Quality at a New Low Price Priced to Save you Money," followed by list of sizes with prices, including as example, "6.00–16 $11.80";

Facts being that while said tires were being offered at a saving of 25 percent off the current retail list price of the higher-priced "High Speed" tire, list price of said 6.00–16 "Convoy" tire was itself $11.80, so that no saving whatsoever was involved by advertised sales price;

(b) Represented that it was offering its "Standard" tire for sale at savings of up to 50 percent, and that the designated savings in dollars were based upon the regular current selling prices thereof, through advertisement "BUY DURING Firestone BARGAIN DAYS For July 4th Save Up to 50% On Famous Firestone Standard Tires Amazing Savings," followed by list of sizes and prices including, as example, "Size 6.00–16 Former Price $14.35 Sale Price $7.98 You Save $6.37 Including Your Old Tire";

Facts being that while, at time in question, such tires were being offered at 50 percent off the retail list prices of "Standard" tires in effect prior to November 1, 1938, when production ceased until June 1939, and at 50 percent off the current list price of the higher-priced "High Speed" tire, they provided a dollar saving of only $2.37 and a percentage saving of only 22.89 percent off current list price of "Standard" tire; the advertised price did not take into account the customary trade-in allowance of 10 percent, allowing for which, dollar saving was only $1.34 per tire, and percentage saving only 14.38 percent, and savings, if computed upon the regular current retail selling price, rather than list, were even less;

(c) Represented that it was offering its "High Speed" tire at 25 percent off the current retail selling price, to a purchaser turning in his used tire, through advertisement "SMASHING TIRE SALE Think of it—Your first opportunity to buy the famous FIRESTONE High Speed Tire at these unheard of LOW PRICES 25% extra DISCOUNT with your old tire";

Facts being that, whereas prior to time of publication said tires were being offered at current list prices and customer was credited in part payment, with 10 percent trade-in allowance for his used tire, at time of publication he was required to turn in his used tire with no credit allowance therefor, making the reduction, in fact, not 25 percent, but only 16.8 percent; and

(d) Represented that by buying one "Standard" tire at list price and second at 50 percent off list price, various cash savings would be afforded the purchaser, by advertisement "SENSATIONAL LABOR DAY SALE On the Famous FIRESTONE STANDARD TIRES. The Thrift Sensation of 1939. How You Can Get One of these Amazing Tires at ½ PRICE. Buy One at List Price and Get the Next One at 50% Discount," followed by list of sizes and prices, including, as example, "FIRESTONE STANDARD Size 6.00 x 16 Price for The First Tire $10.35 Next Tire 50% Discount $5.18 Price For Two Tires $15.53 You Save $5.17. Above prices include your old tire * * *";

Facts being that the savings so set out were computed upon current list prices and not upon current retail selling prices; taking the 6.00 x 16 size as example and giving credit for the customary trade-in allowance, the regular selling price of two tires was $18.63, making the saving at the sale price of $15.53, $3.10 and not $5.17, as claimed;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public, which understood and believed that represented savings or discounts from list prices were reductions from regular retail selling prices of the same tires in effect immediately prior to such advertised sale, into an erroneous belief with respect to savings actually offered, and with effect of inducing it, because of such belief, to purchase said tires:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. William M. King for the Commission.

Mr. B. M. Robinson and Mr. Thomas S. Markey, of Akron, Ohio, for respondents.

COMPLAINT [1]

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., an Ohio corporation, and Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., a West Virginia corporation, herein referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

[1] Published as amended pursuant to stipulation dated June 10, 1941 to include par. 8 (a).

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Ohio and has its principal office and place of business in the city of Akron, State of Ohio.

The respondent, Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of West Virginia with its office and principal place of business located in the city of Akron, State of Ohio. It is a wholly owned subsidiary of the said The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. and acts as selling agent for said company.

PAR. 2. The respondent, The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., an Ohio corporation, is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution, among other products, of automobile tires and tubes and the respondent, Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., a West Virginia corporation, has at all times mentioned herein been the selling agency for said products. Said automobile tires and tubes are manufactured by the respondent The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. in factories owned and operated by it in the cities of Akron, Ohio, Los Angeles, Calif., and Memphis, Tenn.

The respondents act in cooperation and in conjunction with each other in performing the acts and practices hereinafter alleged.

In the course and conduct of their business, the respondents sell the said automobile tires and tubes by means of dealers located in the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause their automobile tires and tubes to be shipped from said factories, located in the several States as above described, to their dealers located in various other States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said automobile tires and tubes in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. The respondent The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. manufactures several grades of automobile tires and tubes, its tires being distinguished as follows:

1. "Champion Tire," which is said respondent's best grade or first line tire and is sold at retail at what is usually referred to in the industry as 100 level prices;

2. "High Speed Tire," which is sold at 90 level prices, or 90 percent of the retail price of the "Champion Tire";

3. The "Convoy" Tire, which is sold at 75 level prices, or 75 percent of the retail price of the "Champion Tire";

4. The "Standard" Tire, which is sold at 65 level prices, or 65 percent of the retail price of the "Champion Tire."

Prior to November 1, 1938, said respondent's "High Speed" was its first line tire, "Standard" its second line, "Convoy" its third line and "Sentinel" its fourth line.

In the sale of these various grades of tires, it is customary and usual for respondents' dealers to make an allowance of 10 percent of the purchase price of the various grades of tires for old or used tires turned in by the customer. Said respondents from time to time issue price lists designating the retail price or list price of their various grades of tires.

PAR. 4. For the purpose of inducing and stimulating the sale of their tires and tubes, the respondents from time to time conduct Nation-wide tire sales through their various dealers, during which sales they advertise and cause their various dealers to advertise in various newspapers and other periodicals having a general circulation, by means of which advertisements it is falsely represented that the respondents' tires are being sold at various purported discounts from the regular and usual price of such tires. Such sales are usually conducted immediately prior to Memorial Day, July 4, Labor Day, and at other periods during the year. The advertising copy used by various dealers of the respondents, in connection with such sales, is prepared by the respondents and submitted to such dealers for insertion in local newspapers and other advertising media.

PAR. 5. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive representations contained in the various advertisements, disseminated by respondents as aforesaid, is the following:

SAVE 25% With the New
FIRESTONE CONVOY TIRE
New High Quality at a
New Low Price
Priced to Save you Money

Then follows a list of sizes with prices, of which the following is an example:

6.00–16 $11.80

effect at the time of such advertisement was $11.80 and consequently the advertised price of $11.80 represents no saving whatsoever.

PAR. 6. Another and typical example of the false, misleading, and deceptive representations contained in the various advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, is the following:

BUY DURING
Firestone BARGAIN DAYS
For July 4th
Save Up to 50%
On Famous
Firestone Standard Tires
Amazing Savings

Then follows list of sizes with prices, of which the following is an example:

Size	Former Price	Sale Price	You Save
6.00–16	$14.35	$7.98	$6.37

Including Your Old Tire

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set forth herein, the respondents represent that their "Standard" tire is sold at a discount up to 50 percent and at certain specified savings in dollars. In truth and in fact, said "Standard" tire is not sold at a discount up to 50 percent or at dollar savings as stated in said advertisement, for the reason that the "former price" was not the list price in effect at time of said advertisement. For example, the list price of respondents' 6.00–16 "Standard" tire at time of advertisement was $10.35; the sale price in said advertisement is $7.98, thus affording a saving of $2.37 rather than $6.37 as advertised. Furthermore, none of the savings advertised amount to 50 percent when based upon the current list price. The alleged savings are further exaggerated in that they make no allowance for the customary and usual trade-in value of the customer's old tires.

PAR. 7. Another and typical example of the false, misleading, and deceptive representations contained in the various advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, is the following:

Special Sale
Firestone Convoy
Tubes
50% Off Regular
First Line Tube
List Price

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and other similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent that their "Convoy" tube is a first line tube and is being sold at 50 percent off. In truth, and in fact, said "Convoy" tube is not respondents' first line tube and is not sold at 50 percent off the list price of the "Convoy" tube, but instead the alleged savings are based wholly upon the list price of respondents' higher priced first line tube. The advertised savings are, therefore, entirely false and fictitious.

PAR. 8. Another and typical example of the false, misleading, and deceptive representations contained in the various advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, is the following:

SMASHING TIRE SALE
Think of It—Your first opportunity to buy the famous FIRESTONE High Speed
Tire at these unheard of LOW PRICES
25% extra DISCOUNT with your old tire.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent that their "High Speed" tire is sold at a 25 percent discount from the usual and customary price of said tire. In truth and in fact, the saving or discount to the purchaser on this sale is not 25 percent for the reason that no allowance is given for the used tire as is customary and usual. Giving effect to the 10 percent discount ordinarily and regularly allowed for used tires, the saving to the purchaser would amount to only 16.8 percent rather than 25 percent as advertised.

PAR. 8 (a). Another and typical example of the false, misleading, and deceptive representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated as aforesaid is the following:

SENSATIONAL LABOR DAY SALE
On The Famous
FIRESTONE STANDARD TIRES.
The Thrift Sensation of 1939.
How You Can Get One of these Amazing
Tires at ½ PRICE
Buy One at List Price and Get the Next
One at 50% Discount.

Then follows list of sizes and prices, of which the following is an example:

	FIRESTONE STANDARD
Size	Price for The First Tire	Next Tire 50% Discount	Price for Two Tires	You Save
6.00 x 16	$10.35	$5.18	$15.53	$5.17

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set forth herein, the respondent represents that by buying one of its "Standard" tires at list price and a second tire at one-half the list price, a discount of 50 percent is afforded on the second tire and certain savings in dollars are provided upon the purchase of two tires, for example, "$5.17 for size 6.00 x 16." Such purported discount and savings are exaggerated for the reason that they are based entirely upon the list price of said tires and not upon the regular retail selling prices. The regular retail selling prices of said tires are customarily substantially lower than the list prices due to part payment trade-in allowances for purchasers' old tires and other discounts and reductions brought about by competition. The actual savings afforded a purchaser upon the second tire is therefore substantially less than 50 percent and the dollar savings on two tires is substantially lower than the amounts designated in said advertisement.

PAR. 9. In the course and conduct of their business and in the same manner as hereinbefore described and set forth, respondents cause their said dealers to publish certain false advertisements respecting certain particular qualities and use of their tires. Among and typical of said advertisements is the following:

The only tires made that are safety proved on the Speedway for your protection on the Highway.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, the respondents represent that their tires offered to the purchasing public for use as regular equipment on passenger cars are "safety proved on the Speedway." By "Speedway" is meant the annual Memorial Day automobile race held at Indianapolis, Ind. In truth and in fact, the only tires manufactured and sold by respondents and used, tested or proved on the "Speedway" are specially constructed racing tires which are never sold for ordinary use, and the tires manufactured and sold by respondents to the general public for use on passenger cars are not "safety proved on the Speedway."

PAR. 10. Another example of the false, misleading and deceptive representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, is the following:

They have a scientifically designed tread which stops your car up to 25% quicker.

By means of said representations hereinabove set forth, the respondents represent that the nonskid features of their tires make it possible to stop a car equipped with their tires "up to 25% quicker," which is not the fact under all conditions and as compared to all other tires. In truth and in fact, no nonskid tire can be made to stop an automobile 25 percent quicker than any other nonskid tire, under all conditions.

PAR. 11. Another example of the false, misleading, and deceptive representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, is the following:

Because life depends on tire safety they choose Firestone Champion Tires—Firestone wins 20th consecutive victory in Indianapolis 500 mile race. A merciless sun beat down upon the Speedway as Wilbur Shaw drove to victory on Firestone Champion Tires. Never before in all the history of the motor car have tires been put to such a torturous test and never before has any tire so firmly established itself as a Champion in construction and performance as well as in name.

Wilbur Shaw, the 1939 winner. On May 30 Wilbur Shaw drove to his second victory in the 500 Indianapolis race on Firestone Champion Tires at an average speed of 115.03 miles per hour.

Appearing in said advertisement is a pictorial representation of a Firestone passenger car tire bearing the name "Champion" and imposed thereon a picture of a man in racing regalia designated as Wilbur Shaw, and a representation of racing cars and grandstand designed to represent an automobile race in progress.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, the respondents represent that Wilbur Shaw and other drivers used their "Champion" tires in the 1939 Indianapolis Memorial Day race. In truth and in fact, none of the drivers in said race used Firestone "Champion Tires," but instead used specially built Firestone racing tires, which tires are never offered for sale to the general public for use on passenger cars.

PAR. 12. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, misleading, and deceptive statements, representations and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to the sales prices of their automobile tires and tubes and the use and particular quality of their tires, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and that respondents' tires and tubes are sold at the saving or discount advertised, and have the particular qualities and are used for the particular purposes as stated in said advertisements, and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' automobile tires and tubes.

PAR. 13. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 2d day of January 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., a corporation, and Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., a corporation, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On May 29, 1940, the respondents filed their answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, pursuant to a stipulation entered into between the parties, it was agreed that, subject to the approval of the Commission, certain amendments might be made to the complaint, the respondent, The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., agreeing to said amendments but not admitting the charges as stated therein, and waiving the issuance and service upon it of an amended and supplemental complaint as well as the right to file an answer to the complaint so amended and supplemented, which stipulation has been approved, accepted, and filed. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondent and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission, may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding, without the filing of a report upon the evidence by the trial examiner. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint as amended, answer and stipulation as to the facts, such stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Ohio and has its principal office and place of business in the city of Akron, State of Ohio.

The respondent, Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., was a corporation organized under the laws of the State of West Virginia, with its office and principal place of business located in the city of Akron, State of Ohio. It was a wholly owned sales subsidiary of the said The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., but since June 30, 1938, has carried on no business whatsoever and was formally dissolved as a corporate entity by the Secretary of State of West Virginia on February 20, 1940.

PAR. 2. The respondent, The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., an Ohio corporation, is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution, among other products, of automobile tires and tubes. Said automobile tires and tubes are manufactured by the respondent, The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., in factories owned and operated by it in Akron, Ohio, and in factories of its wholly owned subsidiaries in Los Angeles, Calif., and Memphis, Tenn.

In the course and conduct of its business, the respondent, The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., sells said automobile tires and tubes to the purchasing public, through a large number of company-owned stores and to independent dealers, for resale, both company-owned stores and independent dealers being located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said respondent causes its automobile tires and tubes to be shipped from said factories, located in the several States as above described, to its dealers and company-owned stores located in various other States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Said respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said automobile tires and tubes in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. The respondent, The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., manufactures automobile tires which, insofar as the following group is concerned, and during respondent's fiscal year beginning November 1, 1938, were distinguished as follows:

1. "Champion" tire, listed and recommended to be sold at retail at list prices established from time to time by said respondent;

2. "High Speed" tire, listed and recommended to be sold at retail at approximately 90 percent of the price of the "Champion" tire;

3. The "Convoy" tire, listed and recommended to be sold at retail at approximately 75 percent of the price of the "Champion" tire;

4. The "Sentinel" tire, listed and recommended to be sold at retail at approximately 65 percent of the price of the "Champion" tire. In May 1939, the "Sentinel" tire was replaced by the "Standard" tire.

Prior to November 1, 1938, the four tires in the same relative price positions as above, were respectively "High Speed," "Standard," "Convoy," and "Sentinel."

The respondent, The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., issued price lists to its various retail stores, designating the retail selling prices of its tires, and also furnished price lists to its dealers containing suggested retail selling prices. The retail stores and dealers sell a substantial quantity of respondent's tires at the prices so designated in the price lists, and also sell a substantial number at lesser prices, such prices being brought about by reason of discounts to meet competition and by special sales. It was the practice of respondent to accept the purchasers' used tires in part payment on the purchase price of new tires; this practice, known in the industry as trade-in allowance, amounted to approximately 10 percent of the list price of new tires, during the periods respondent's advertisements as hereinafter set forth were published. The allowances for old tires turned in by the purchasers were based upon the value of said old tires. Except as offered at any particular time, said respondent's stores are not obligated to give a trade-in allowance for purchasers' used tires.

PAR. 4. During the year 1939, the respondent, The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., prepared and disseminated suggested advertising copy to its various dealers, and during Nation-wide sales periods, it advertised and recommended that its various dealers advertise, in a large number of newspapers having a general circulation, by means of which advertisements it was represented that the said automobile tires were offered for sale at various savings and discounts from the regular or list prices of such tires and at various savings from former prices. Such sales were held immediately prior to July Fourth, Labor Day, and at other periods during the year. Some such sales were also conducted in 1938.

A large number of independent dealers and company-owned stores inserted such advertising, in whole or in part, in numerous newspapers throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. Among and typical of the representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated by respondent as aforesaid, is the following:.

SAVE 25% With the New
FIRESTONE CONVOY TIRE
New High Quality at a
New Low Price
Priced to Save you Money

Then follows a list of sizes with prices, of which the following is an example:

The Commission finds that said respondent represented, through the use of the above statements and representations that its "Convoy" tire was offered for sale at savings of 25 percent off the regular current retail selling price of said tire.

At the time of publication of said advertisement in April 1938, "Convoy" tires were being offered for sale at a savings of 25 percent off the current retail list price of the higher priced "High Speed" tire, but not at a savings of 25 percent off the current retail list price of the "Convoy" tire. For example, the list price of the 6.00 x 16 "High Speed" tire in effect at the time of publication of the advertisement was $15.70; the advertised sale price of $11.80 represented a savings of 25 percent off the list price of the "High Speed" tire; however, the list price of the 6.00 x 16 "Convoy" tire at said time was $11.80 and therefore the advertised sales price represented no saving whatsoever off the list price of the said "Convoy" tire.

PAR. 6. Another and typical example of the representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated by respondent as aforesaid is the following:

BUYING DURING
Firestone BARGAIN DAYS
For July 4th
Save Up to 50%
On Famous
Firestone Standard Tires
Amazing Savings

Then follows list of sizes with prices, of which the following is an example:

Size	Former Price	Sale Price	You Save
6.00–16	$14.35	$7.98	$6.37
	Including Your Old Tire

The Commission finds that said respondent represented, through the use of the above statements and representations that it was offering its "Standard" tire for sale at savings of up to 50 percent from the regular current retail selling price of said tire and that the designated savings in dollars were based upon the regular current selling prices of said tire.

At the time of publication of said advertisement in June 1939, "Standard" tires were being offered for sale at up to 50 percent off the retail list prices of "Standard" tires in effect prior to November

1, 1938, on which date "Standard" tires were removed from respondent's line of products and not thereafter nationally advertised until June 1939, after respondent resumed production of "Standard" tires; "Standard" tires were in June 1939, being offered for sale at a savings of up to 50 percent off the current retail list price of the higher-priced "High Speed" tire, but not at a savings of up to 50 percent off the current retail list price of the "Standard" tire.

Prior to November 1, 1938, the "Standard" tire was listed and recommended to be sold at $14.35 for size 6.00 x 16; but at the time of publication of said advertisement the list price was $10.35. The advertised sale price of $7.98 provided the advertised saving of $6.37 off the list price of the "Standard" tire in effect prior to November 1, 1938, but provided a dollar saving of only $2.37 and a percentage saving of only 22.89 percent off the list price of said "Standard" tire in effect at the time of the publication of said advertisement. The advertised price did not take into account the usual and customary part-payment trade-in allowance of 10 percent credited to purchasers in the sale of new tires. Therefore, the dollar saving was only $1.34 per tire and the percentage saving was only 14.38 percent. None of the advertised sales prices afforded a discount of up to 50 percent based upon the list price of "Standard" tires in effect at the time of the publication of said advertisement. Should the savings be computed upon the regular current retail selling prices of such tires rather than upon list prices, the savings would be even less since the retail selling prices are often substantially less than the list prices.

PAR. 7. Another typical example of the representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated by respondent as aforesaid is the following:

SMASHING TIRE SALE
Think of it—Your first opportunity to buy the famous FIRESTONE High Speed
Tire at these unheard of LOW Prices
25% extra DISCOUNT with your old tire.

The Commission finds that said respondent represented, through the use of the above statements and representations that it was offering its "High Speed" tires at 25 percent off the regular current retail selling price of said tire and that a purchaser by buying said "High Speed" tire and turning in his used tire would receive a discount of 25 percent from the regular current retail selling price.

Prior to the time of publication of said advertisement, "High Speed" tires were being offered for sale at the current list price of said "High Speed" tires, and in part payment therefor the customer was credited with a 10-percent trade-in allowance for his used tire; at the time of publication of said advertisement the customer was required to turn in his used tire and was not credited with any allowance for said used tire. Since the purchaser was not credited with the usual 10 percent trade-in allowance for his used tire during the advertised sale, reduction in cash payment was only 16.8 percent.

PAR. 8. Another typical example of the representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated by respondent as aforesaid is the following:

SENSATIONAL LABOR DAY SALE

On the Famous

FIRESTONE STANDARD TIRES

The Thrift Sensation of 1939.

How You Can Get One of these Amazing

Tires at 1/2 PRICE

Buy One at List Price and Get the Next

One at 50% Discount.

Then follows list of sizes and prices, of which the following is an example:

FIRESTONE STANDARD

Size	Price for The First Tire.	Next Tire 50% Discount	Price for Two Tires	You Save

The Commission finds that said respondent represented, through the use of the above statements and representations that by buying one "Standard" tire at list price and second at 50 percent off list price that the savings designated in said advertisement would be afforded the purchaser.

By said advertisement, respondent offered its "Standard" tire for sale in pairs, the first tire at list price and the second tire at half of the list price. Such a combination sale did not, however, provide the savings set out in the advertisement for the reason that the designated savings were computed upon current list prices and not upon regular current retail selling prices. A substantial quantity of respondent's "Standard" tires were sold at prices lower than list prices, such lower prices being due to discounts to meet competition, special sales, and part payment trade-in allowances for purchasers' old tires. Taking size 6.00 x 16 as an example and giving credit for the customary 10 percent trade-in allowance for purchasers' old tires, the regular selling price of two tires, without taking into consideration reductions that might be brought about by competitive situations would be $18.63. The sale price of $15.53 would result in a saving of $3.10 rather than $5.17 as advertised.

PAR. 9. The Commission finds that substantial number of the purchasing public understand and believe that advertised savings or discounts are reductions from the regular retail selling prices charged for the same merchandise in the ordinary course of business immediately prior in point of time to such advertised sale; that they understand that "list prices," as used in tire advertising, referred to and meant the regular retail selling prices of the tires advertised for sale, and that any represented savings or discounts from such list prices were reductions from the regular retail selling prices of the same tires in effect immediately prior in point of time to such advertised sale.

PAR. 10. The use by the respondent, the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., of the foregoing statements, representations and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, has had the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into an erroneous and mistaken belief with respect to the savings and discounts actually offered, and induced a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase said respondent's automobile tires.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., a corporation, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondent The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve on the respondent The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of this proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in advertising in newspapers or other recognized advertising media, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its automobile tires and tubes to the general public, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the term "List Price" or any other term of similar import or meaning to designate, describe, or refer to prices which are not, in fact, the bona fide regular established selling prices of the tires or tubes advertised and offered for sale, as established by the usual and customary sales in the normal course of business.

2. Representing, directly or indirectly, that any specified amount is the customary, regular, or usual price of any tire or tube advertised and offered for sale when such amount is not, in fact, the bona fide actual selling price of such tire or tube as established by the usual and customary sales in the normal course of business.

3. Representing, directly or indirectly any specified amounts or percentages as savings or discounts which are not actual savings or discounts computed on the bona fide, usual, and customary selling price for such tires or such tubes in effect immediately prior in point of time to such representation.

4. Representing, directly or indirectly, that any specified savings or discounts are offered a purchaser upon the purchase of certain of its tires or tubes when such savings or discounts are computed upon the regular selling or list prices of its higher priced tires or tubes.

5. Representing, directly or indirectly, that a specified tire or tube is offered for sale when such tire or such tube is not so offered but instead another tire or tube of different kind or brand.

6. Representing, directly or indirectly, that specific savings or discounts are afforded a purchaser upon the purchase of tires or tubes when such savings or discounts do not take into account the trade-in allowances usually and customarily made to purchasers in the sale of such tires or such tubes in the ordinary course of business.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That the complaint be, and the same hereby is, dismissed as to the respondent Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., and that the charges as stated in paragraphs 7, 9, 10, and 11 of the complaint be, and they hereby are, dismissed without prejudice to the right of the Commission to proceed thereon in the future in any appropriate manner.

IN THE MATTER OF

THE GOODYEAR TIRE AND RUBBER COMPANY, AND THE GOODYEAR TIRE AND RUBBER COMPANY, INC.

Docket 3984. Complaint, Feb. 27, 1940[1]—Decision, June 18, 1941

Where a corporation, the wholly owned subsidiary and selling and distributing agent for a second corporation, manufacturer, with its subsidiaries, of several grades of automobile tires, engaged in the interstate sale and distribution thereof through a number of company-owned stores and to independent dealers located in various states, both of whom it supplied with price lists respectively designating and suggesting retail selling prices and both of whom sold a substantial quantity of its tires at such prices and also a substantial number at lesser prices to meet competition and by special sales, its sales program contemplating a trade-in allowance of approximately 10 percent of list prices for old tires; and said second corporation;

In advertising their "G–100 All-Weather," "G–3 All-Weather," "Marathon," and "Pathfinder" tires—Relatively priced in that order, the latter three at approximately 90 percent, 75 percent, and 65 percent of said "G–100 All-Weather" tire price—by means of suggested advertising copy prepared and disseminated by former to their dealers and by advertisements during Nation-wide sale periods immediately prior to July 4, Labor Day, and at other periods, and which were inserted by a large number of independent dealers and company-owned stores, in whole or in part, in numerous newspapers—

(a) Represented, as typical, that their "Pathfinder" tire was offered for sale at a discount of 50 percent from the regular current retail selling price thereof, with old tire, through advertising "Save on tires June 20th to July 4th 50% SAVING * * * Think of it. For ½ the cost of little known 'Standard Tires' you get the PATHFINDER * * *" followed by list of sizes with prices, including, as example, "6.00 x 16—$7.98 Net Prices Including Your Old Tire";

Facts being that while said tires were being offered for sale at 50 percent off the retail list price of the higher-priced "G–100 All-Weather" tire, retail list price of the 6.00–16 size of which, at time of said advertisement, was $15.95, it was not offering them at a discount of 50 percent off the retail list price of "Pathfinder" tire, which was $10.35; the advertised sales price of $7.98 consequently represented a saving of only 22.89 percent, and if effect were given to the customary part payment trade-in allowance, the saving would be only 14.38 percent;

(b) Represented that they were offering their "G–100" tire for sale at a discount of 50 percent, and that the list price of their "Pathfinder" tire was $15.95, through advertisements "Save On Tires June 27 to July 4 50% off G–100 list * * * You get the PATHFINDER * * *," followed by list of tire sizes with prices, including, as example, "6.00 x 16 Standard Equipment List Price $15.95. Pathfinder Sale Price $7.98. Net prices including your old tire";

[1] Amended and supplemental.

Facts being that their "G–100" tire, which was their standard equipment tire, and listed at $15.95, was not offered for sale, but instead the "Pathfinder" tire, listed at 65 percent of the price of the "G–100," was offered at 50 percent of the list price of the "G–100"; with result that the advertised sales price of $7.98 represented a saving of only 22.89 percent off the list price of $10.35 for the Pathfinder 6.00 x 16, and after taking into account the usual part payment trade-in allowance of 10 percent the actual saving was only 14.38 per cent;

(c) Represented that their "Marathon" tire was offered for sale at 40 percent off its regular current sale price through advertisements "40% OFF our Standard List * * * these Big Famous MARATHON Goodyear Tires at the Lowest Prices in History," followed by list of tire sizes with prices, including, for example, "6.00 x 16—$9.56. Net prices including your old tires";

Facts being that at the time of publication of said advertisement the standard list price of their 6.00 x 16 "Marathon" was $11.95, so that the advertised sales price of $9.56 represented a saving of only 20 percent and, with the usual trade-in allowance would be reduced to 11.15 percent;

(d) Represented that their "G–3 All-Weather" tire was offered for sale at a discount of 25 percent off their regular current retail selling price by advertisements readng "25% Discount On The Famous Goodyear 'G–3' All-Weather Tires * * * for 10 days and 10 DAYS ONLY, you can buy the world's most popular tire—the Goodyear 'G–3' All-Weather—at 25% OFF the regular list price" followed by list of tire sizes with prices, including as example "Sale Price 6.00 x 16—$10.75 Including your old tire";

Facts being while said advertised price of $10.75 was 25 percent off the list price of respondent's 6.00 x 16 "G–3 All-Weather" tire, it was not a discount of 25 percent since the purchaser was required to turn in his used tire for which no credit was given: and customary part payment trade-in allowance of 10 percent would provide an actual cash discount of 16.8 percent;

With the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public, which understood and believed that represented savings or discounts from list prices were reductions from regular retail selling prices of the same tires in effect immediately prior to such advertised sale, into an erroneous belief with respect to savings actually offered, and with effect, because of such belief, of causing it to purchase said automobile tires:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. William M. King for the Commission.

Mr. Lynn W. Baker, of Akron, Ohio, for respondents.

AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., a corporation, and The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its amended and supplemental complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Ohio and has its principal office and place of business in the city of Akron, State of Ohio.

The respondent, The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Inc., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Delaware and has its principal office and place of business in the city of Akron, State of Ohio. It is a wholly owned subsidiary of the said The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. and acts as selling agent for said company.

PAR. 2. The respondent, The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., an Ohio corporation, is now and for many years last past, has been engaged in the manufacture, sale and distribution, among other products, of automobile tires. Said automobile tires are manufactured by respondent in factories owned and operated by it in the cities of Akron, Ohio; Los Angeles, Calif.; Cumberland, Md.; Jackson, Mich. and Gadsden, Ala. The respondent, The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Inc., at all times mentioned herein has been the selling agency for said product.

The respondents act in cooperation and in conjunction with each other in performing the acts and practices hereinafter alleged.

In the course and conduct of their business, the respondents sell the said automobile tires by means of dealers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause their automobile tires to be shipped from said factories located in the several States as above described, to their dealers located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a course of trade in said automobile tires in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. The respondent, The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., an Ohio corporation, manufactures several grades of automobile tires which are distinguished as follows:

1. "G-100 All Weather Tire," which is the respondent's best grade or first-line tire and is sold at retail at what is usually referred to in the industry as 100 level prices;

2. "G-3 All Weather Tire," which is sold at 90 level prices, or 90 percent of the retail price of the "G-100 All Weather Tire";

3. The "Marathon" tire, which is sold at 75 level prices or 75 percent of the retail price of the "G–100 All Weather Tire";

4. The "Pathfinder" tire, which is sold at 65 level prices, or 65 percent of the retail price of the "G–100 All Weather Tire."

In the sale of these various grades of tires, it is customary and usual for respondents' dealers to make an allowance of 10 percent of the purchase price of the various grades of tires for old or used tires turned in by the customer. The respondents from time to time issue price lists designating the retail price or list price of its various grades of tires.

PAR. 4. For the purpose of inducing and stimulating the sale of their tires the respondents from time to time conduct Nation-wide tire sales through their various dealers, during which sale period they advertise and cause their various dealers to advertise in various newspapers and other periodicals having a general circulation, by means of which advertisements it is falsely represented that the respondents' tires are being sold at various purported discounts from the regular and usual price of such tires. Such sales are usually conducted immediately prior to Memorial Day, July Fourth, Labor Day, and at other periods during the year. The advertising copy used by the various dealers of the respondents, in connection with such sales, is prepared by the respondents and submitted to such dealers for insertion in local newspapers and other advertising media.

PAR. 5. Among and typical of the false, misleading and deceptive representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated by respondents as aforesaid is the following:

Save on Tires
June 20th to July 4th
50% SAVING
From Standard list on Big Husky Genuine
New Goodyear Tires
Think of it. For one half the cost of little known "standard tires" you get the PATHFINDER, made and guaranteed for life by GOODYEAR.

Then follows list of the sizes with prices, of which the following is an example:

6.00 x 16 $7.98
Net prices including your old tire.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent that their tire known as the "Pathfinder" is sold at a discount of 50 percent of the usual and customary price of said tire. In truth and in fact, said "Pathfinder" tire is not sold at a discount of 50 percent. For example, the standard list price of the 6.00 x 16 "Pathfinder" tire in effect at the time of such advertisement was $10.35, and consequently the advertised sale price of $7.98 represented a saving of 22.89 percent rather than 50 percent. Furthermore, the advertised saving makes no allowance for the trade-in value of the customer's old tire. Giving effect to the 10 percent trade-in value of old tires as is the usual and customary practice, this would further reduce the actual saving on said "Pathfinder" tire to 14.38 percent instead of 50 percent.

PAR. 6. Another and typical example of the false, misleading, and deceptive representations contained in the various advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, is the following:

Save on Tires
June 27th to July 4th
50% off G–100 List on Big Husky Genuine
New Goodyear Tires.
You get the PATHFINDER made and guaranteed for life by GOODYEAR.

Then follows list of tire sizes with prices, of which the following is an example:

Size	Standard Equipment List Price	Pathfinder sale price
6.00 x 16	$15.95	$7.98

Net prices including your old tire.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent that their best grade tires, known as "G–100," are being sold at a discount of 50 percent, and also that the list price of its fourth grade 65 level tire known as "Pathfinder" is $15.95. In truth and in fact, respondents' first-line tire known as "G–100" or "G–100 All Weather Tire" is not sold at such discount on said sale as advertised, but instead respondents' fourth-grade, or 65 level tire is sold for the advertised price. As an example, the advertisement lists tire size 6.00 x 16 as standard equipment list price of $15.95, and sale price of Pathfinder at $7.98. The price of $15.95 listed in said advertisement as the standard equipment list price is the list price for the "G–100 All Weather Tire," and the Pathfinder tire has never sold at said price but instead at the list price of $10.35. In effect, by said advertisement, the respondents sell the 65 level tire known as "Pathfinder," after taking into consideration the usual and customary discount of 10 percent for used tires, at a discount on said "Pathfinder" tire of only 14.38 percent, instead of the alleged 50 percent discount represented in said advertisement.

PAR. 7. Another and typical example of the false, misleading, and deceptive representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated by the respondents as aforesaid is the following:

40% OFF
our Standard List
Now you can get these Big
Husky Famous MARATHON Goodyear
Tires at the Lowest Prices in History.
June 22nd to July 4th.

Then follows list of tire sizes with prices, of which the following is an example:

6.00 x 16 $9.56
Net Prices including your old tires.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent that their tire known as the "Marathon" is sold at a discount of 40 percent off standard list price. In truth and in fact, said "Marathon" tire is not sold at a discount of 40 percent off list price. For example, the list price of the 6.00 x 16 "Marathon" tire in effect at the time of the sale was $11.95. The advertised sales price was $9.56, or a saving of only 20 percent. Moreover, the advertised price made no allowance for the usual and customary trade-in value of old tires. Giving effect to the customary allowance of 10 percent for used tires, the actual saving to the purchaser on such sale would be 11.15 percent, rather than 40 percent as advertised.

PAR. 8. Another and typical example of the false, misleading, and deceptive representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated by the respondents as aforesaid is the following:

25% Discount on the Famous Goodyear "G-3" All Weather Tires—Here's grand news for vacation budgets! For ten days and TEN DAYS ONLY, you can buy the world's most popular tire—the Goodyear "G3" All Weather—at 25% OFF the regular list price.

Then follows list of tire sizes with prices, of which the following is an example:

Sale Price 6.00 x 16 $10.75
Including your old tire.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent that their "G-3 All Weather Tire" is sold at a discount of 25 percent. In truth and in fact, the saving or discount to the purchaser on this sale is not 25 percent for the reason that no allowance is given for the used tire as is customary and usual, and after taking into consideration the 10-percent discount ordinarily and regularly allowed for used tires, the saving to the purchaser would amount to only 16.8 percent, rather than 25 percent as advertised.

PAR. 9. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, misleading, and deceptive statements, representations and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid with respect to the sales prices of its automobile tires has had and now has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and that the respondent's tires are sold at the saving or discount advertised and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's automobile tires.

PAR. 10. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 27th day of February, A. D. 1940, issued and thereafter served its amended and supplemental complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Inc., a corporation, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On May 1, 1940, the respondents filed their answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondents and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the filing of a report upon the evidence by the trial examiner. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint as amended, answer and stipulation as to the facts, such stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., properly designated, identified and described as The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Ohio and has its principal office and place of business in the city of Akron, State of Ohio. Said respondent, together with wholly-owned subsidiary companies, to wit: Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. of California; Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. of Michigan; and Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. of Alabama, are now, and for many years last past have been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of automobile tires and tubes. Said automobile tires and tubes are manufactured by said respondent and by its subsidiary companies above named in factories owned and operated by them in the cities of Akron, Ohio; Los Angeles, Calif.; Jackson, Mich.; and Gadsden, Ala.

PAR. 2. The respondent, The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Inc., properly designated, identified, and described as The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Inc., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Delaware and has its principal office and place of business in the city of Akron, State of Ohio. It is the wholly-owned subsidiary of the said The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., and is, and at all times herein mentioned was, the selling and distributing agent for said parent corporation and the other manufacturing subsidiary companies above enumerated. The said The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. at all times mentioned herein, by means of stock control, dominated and controlled the policies of said The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Inc., in the acts and practices hereafter set forth.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business the respondent, The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Inc., sells said automobile tires and tubes to the purchasing public by and through a number of company owned stores and to independent dealers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said respondent cause said automobile tires and tubes to be shipped from the factories, above enumerated, to such dealers and company owned stores located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. These respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said automobile tires and tubes in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. The respondent, The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., together with its wholly owned subsidiaries manufacture several grades of automobile tires, which insofar as the following group is concerned and during the times mentioned herein, were distinguished as follows:

1. "G–100 All Weather" tires, listed and recommended to be sold at retail at list prices issued from time to time by the respondent, The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Inc.

2. "G–3 All Weather" tire, listed and recommended to be sold at retail at approximately 90 percent of the price of "G–100 All Weather" tire.

3. The "Marathon" tire, listed and recommended to be sold at retail at approximately 75 percent of the price of "G–100 All Weather" tire.

4. The "Pathfinder" tire, listed and recommended to be sold at retail at approximately 65 percent of the price of the "G–100 All Weather" tire.

The respondent, The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Inc., issued price lists for the use of its various retail stores designating the retail selling prices of its various grades of tires. Such price lists are commonly referred to in the industry as "list prices." List prices were also furnished to said respondent's dealers as a suggested selling price of said tires. At the time mentioned herein the sales program of said respondent contemplated an allowance, referred to generally as a trade-in allowance, of approximately 10 percent of the list prices of new tires when the customers turned in their old tires to said stores or dealers. A substantial portion of said respondent's tires are sold at said list prices. A substantial portion of said tires are sold at prices less than said list prices, such lesser prices being brought about by reason of discounts to meet competition and by special sales. The allowances for old tires turned in by the purchasers were based upon the value of said old tires. Except as offered at any particular time, said respondent's stores are not obligated to give a trade-in allowance for purchasers' used tires.

PAR. 5. During the year 1939, the respondent, The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Inc., prepared and disseminated suggested advertising copy to its various dealers, and during nationwide sales periods, it advertised and recommended that its various dealers advertise in a large number of newspapers having a general circulation, by means of which advertisements it was represented that the said automobile tires were being sold at various savings and discounts from the regular or list prices of such tires. Such sales were held immediately prior to July Fourth, Labor Day, and at other periods during the year.

A large number of independent dealers and company owned stores inserted such advertising, in whole or in part, in numerous newspapers throughout the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 6. Among and typical of the representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated by respondents as aforesaid is the following:

Then follows list of the sizes with prices, of which the following is an example:

6.00 x 16 $7.98
Net prices including your old tire.

The Commission finds that said respondents represented, through the use of the above statements and representations, that their "Pathfinder" tire was offered for sale at a discount of 50 percent from the regular current retail selling prices of said tire with old tire.

At the time of the publication of said advertisement "Pathfinder" tires were being offered for sale at 50 percent off the retail list price of the "G–100 All Weather" tire, but not at a discount of 50 percent off the retail list price of said "Pathfinder" tire. As an example, the retail list price of the 6.00 x 16 "G–100 All Weather" tire in effect at the time of said advertisement was $15.95, and the retail list price of the "Pathfinder" tire of the same size was $10.35. The advertised sales price of $7.98 represented a saving of only 22.89 percent on the "Pathfinder" tire. If effect be given to the usual and customary part payment trade-in allowance credited to purchasers in the sale of new tires, the actual saving on said Pathfinder tire would be 14.38 percent.

PAR. 7. Among and typical of the representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated by respondents as aforesaid is the following:

Then follows list of tire sizes with prices, of which the following is an example:

Size	Standard Equipment List Price	Pathfinder Sale Price
6.00 x 16	$15.95	$7.98

Net prices including your old tire.

The Commission finds that said respondent represented, through the use of the above statements and representations, that they were offering their "G–100" tire for sale at a discount of 50 percent; and that the list price of their "Pathfinder" tire was $15.95.

Respondents' "G–100 All Weather" tire was its standard equipment tire at the time of the publication of this advertisement and was listed at $15.95. This tire was not offered for sale but instead the "Pathfinder" tire listed at 65 percent of the price of the "G–100" was offered at 50 percent of the list price of the "G–100." This did not result in a saving of 50 percent in the sale of the Pathfinder tire. As an example, the list price of the Pathfinder at said time was $10.35 for size 6.00 x 16. The advertised sales price of $7.98 represented a saving of only 22.89 percent. After taking into account the usual and customary part payment trade-in allowance of 10 percent the actual saving would be 14.38 percent.

6.00 x 16 $9.56
Net prices including your old tires.

The Commission finds that the respondents represented, through the use of the above statements and representations, that their "Marathon" tire was offered for sale at 40 percent off the regular current sale price of said tire.

At the time of the publication of said advertisement the standard list price of respondents' "Marathon" tire, taking size 6.00 x 16 as an example, was $11.95. The advertised sales price of $9.56 represented a saving of only 20 percent. Giving effect to the usual and customary part payment trade-in allowance would reduce the saving to 11.15 percent.

PAR. 9. Among and typical of the representations contained in the various advertisements by respondents as aforesaid is the following:

25% Discount on the Famous Goodyear "G-3" All Weather Tires—Here's grand news for vacation budgets! For ten days and TEN DAYS ONLY, you can buy the world's most popular tire—the Goodyear "G3" All Weather—at 25% OFF the regular list price.

Then follows list of tire sizes with prices, of which the following is an example:

Sale Price 6.00 x 16 $10.75
Including your old tire.

The Commission finds that the respondents represented, through the above statements and representations that their "G-3 All Weather" tire was offered for sale at a discount of 25 percent of the regular current retail selling price of said tire.

At the time of the publication of said advertisement the regular list price of respondents' "G-3 All Weather" tire for 6.00 x 16 was $14.35. While the advertised price of $10.75 was 25 percent off this price it was not a discount of 25 percent since the purchaser was required to turn in his used tire but no credit was given. Giving credit for the usual and customary part payment trade-in allowance of 10 percent would provide an actual cash discount of 16.8 percent.

PAR. 10. The Commission finds that substantial numbers of the purchasing public understand and believe that advertised savings or discounts are reductions from the regular retail selling prices charged for the same merchandise in the ordinary course of business, immediately prior in point of time to such advertised sales; that they understand and believe that "list prices," as used in tire advertising, referred to and meant the regular retail selling prices of the tires advertised for sale and that any represented savings or discounts from such "list prices" were reductions from the regular retail selling prices of the same tires, in effect immediately prior in point of time to such advertised sale.

PAR. 11. The use by the respondents of the foregoing statements, representations, and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid has had the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public as to the savings and discounts actually offered and the kind and brand of tires offered for sale, and induced a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase respondents' automobile tires.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended complaint of the Commission and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondents and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve on the respondents, findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of this proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., a corporation, and The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Inc., a corporation, their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in advertising in newspapers or other recognized advertising media, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of their automobile tires and tubes to the general public, in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the term "List Price" or any other term of similar import or meaning to designate, describe or refer to prices which are not, in fact, the bona fide regular established selling prices of the tires or tubes advertised and offered for sale, as established by the usual and customary sales in the normal course of business.

2. Representing, directly or indirectly, that any specified amount is the customary, regular or usual price of any tire or tube advertised and offered for sale when such amount is not, in fact, the bona fide actual selling price of such tire or such tube as established by the usual and customary sales in the normal course of business.

3. Representing, directly or indirectly, any specified amounts or percentages as savings or discounts which are not actual savings or discounts computed on the bona fide, usual and customary selling price for such tires or such tubes in effect immediately prior in point of time to such representation.

4. Representing, directly or indirectly, that any specified savings or discounts are offered a purchaser upon the purchase of certain of its tires or tubes when such savings or discounts are computed upon the regular selling or list prices of its higher priced tires or tubes.

5. Representing, directly or indirectly, that a specified tire or tube is offered for sale when such tire or such tube is not so offered but instead another tire or tube of different kind or brand.

6. Representing, directly or indirectly, that specific savings or discounts are afforded a purchaser upon the purchase of tires or tubes when such savings or discounts do not take into account the trade-in allowances usually and customarily made to purchasers in the sale of such tires or such tubes in the ordinary course of business.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

THE B. F. GOODRICH COMPANY

Docket 3985. Complaint, Jan. 2, 1940—Decision, June 18, 1941

Where a corporation long engaged in the manufacture of automobile tires and tubes and in their sale and distribution through its company-owned stores and independent dealers, both of whom it supplied with price lists respectively designating and suggesting retail selling prices, including in its sales program a statement to the effect that an allowance up to 10 percent on the list price of any tire might be made when the consumer turned in old tires, its tires being sold variously at list prices, at prices less than list brought about by discounts to meet competition and by special sales, and at budget prices which, when service charge was taken into consideration, were higher than list prices—

In advertising its "Life Saver Silvertown Tire," "Silver-town R–4 Tire," its "Standard" tire and its "Commander" tire—relatively priced in that order at 90, 75, and 65 percent of first named tire—during nation-wide sales conducted immediately prior to July Fourth and Labor Day and at other periods, by means of advertising copy which it prepared and submitted to dealers and which was inserted by them in a large number of newspapers of general circulation—

(a) Represented that its "Commander" tire was offered for sale at 50 percent off, and at savings designated, from the regular current retail selling prices, and that said "Commander" was its first quality tire, through advertising "GOODRICH COMMANDERS 50% OFF REGULAR TIRE PRICES," followed by list of sizes, with prices, including as example "6.00 x 16 Regular First Line Tire, Price $15.95 Special Goodrich Commander Price $7.97, You Save $7.98. These prices include your old tires. * * *";

Facts being that at the time of publication of such advertisement "Commander" tires, while they were offered for sale at 50 percent off the list price of the higher-priced first-line "Life Saver Silvertown Tire," were not at 50 percent off the list price of the "Commander," the list price of the 6.00 x 16 "Life Saver Silvertown" being $15.95, and that of the comparable "Commander" only $10.35, and the advertised saving consequently being 22.89 percent off the "Commander" price, which saving gave no credit for the customary trade-in allowance of 10 percent which would further reduce the actual saving on "Commander" tires to 14.25 percent; and the "Commander" was not, as claimed, its first-line tire;

(b) Represented that it was offering all grades of its tires at the price of two for one; that its "Commander" tires were being sold at half their regular current retail selling price; and that the "Commander" was its first-line or first-grade tire, by advertisements reading "Two for One—Yes, 2 Goodrich Tires for the price of 1 First Line Tire * * *" including "Regular First Line Tires Prices" for various sizes and the statement "These prices include your old tires";

Facts being that at the time of publication of said advertisement two "Commander" tires were offered for the current list price of one "Life-Saver Silvertown Tire" but not two for the regular price of one "Commander" tire, the current list price of which in the 6.00 x 16 size was $10.35 and not $15.95 as indicated; all grades or brands of its tires were not sold "2 for 1" and the advertised prices did not take into account the usual 10 percent trade-in allowance, giving effect to which would save 14.38 percent from the "Commander" list price upon the purchase of two "Commander" tires; and said "Commander" was not a first-line or first-grade tire, as claimed;

(c) Represented that all grades of its tires were being offered at 50 percent off current retail selling prices, and that by purchasing one tire at the advertised sale price and a second tire at half such price, a saving of 50 percent and designated dollar savings would be afforded from current retail prices, by the statement "50% OFF ON BRAND NEW GOODRICH TIRES Buy One Tire At Regular Price And You Get Second Tire at HALF PRICE!! * * *" followed by list of sizes with prices including, as example "6.00–16 Regular Goodrich Commander price $10.35, Second Tire for $5.18 You Save $5.17;"

Facts being that at the time of publication of such advertisement it was offering one "Commander" tire at current list price and a second tire at one-half the list price, which did not provide 50 percent off for the reason that it was necessary to pay the full list price for the first tire in order to secure the second tire for half the list price, thus making the saving on two tires only 25 percent; the dollar savings of $5.17 for size 6.00 x 16 were also based upon the sale of two tires rather than one and were computed upon the list price rather than on the regular retail price; the advertised saving did not take into account the usual 10 percent trade-in allowance, which would reduce the actual saving to $3.10 on two tires or $1.55 per tire, or a percentage saving of 16.64 percent; and all grades of its tires were not sold at one tire for the regular price and the second tire at one-half price;

(d) Represented that all grades of its tires were offered for sale at 40 percent off current retail selling prices, and that by purchasing one tire at the advertised price and a second tire at 40 percent less, a saving of 40 percent and a designated dollar savings would be afforded from the regular retail selling price, through advertising "40% OFF ON GOODRICH STANDARD TIRES * * * BUY ONE TIRE AT REGULAR PRICE AND YOU GET SECOND TIRE AT 40% DISCOUNT," followed by list of sizes with prices including, as example, "6.00-16 Regular Goodrich Standard Price $11.95, Second Tire For $7.17, You Save $4.78";

When, with said 50 percent claimed saving, the saving from list price applied only on the second tire so that the saving on two was only 20 percent instead of 40 percent; the dollar saving of $4.78 quoted was also based upon two tires rather than one and was computed upon the list price rather than the current retail selling price; and giving effect to the usual trade-in allowance of 10 percent would reduce the actual saving to $2.39 for two tires and $1.19 for one tire;

(e) Represented similarly that it was offering its "Silvertown Tires" at a discount of 25 percent and that by purchasing them during said sale a 25 percent saving and a designated dollar saving would be afforded from regular current retail selling prices;

Facts being that while the advertised saving of $3.59 for size 6.00 x 16 "Silvertown" tires was 25 percent off the list price of $14.35, the purchaser was required to turn in his used tire without any allowance therefor, allowance for which would result in a saving of 16.8 percent rather than 25 percent and a dollar saving of $2.16 rather than $3.59; and

(f) Represented that by paying a designated sales price for three "Commander" tires the fourth tire would cost only 1 cent, and that by buying four tires at the advertised sales price, the designated amounts would be saved from their current retail selling prices;

Facts being that while it was offering three "Commander" tires at list price and a fourth tire at 1 cent, the prices charged were list prices and not current retail sales prices, which are customarily substantially lower than list prices due to part payment trade-in allowances for old tires and other discounts and reductions due to competition, with the result that the cost of the fourth tire would be substantially more than 1 cent and the savings on the combination sale substantially less than designated in the advertisement;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public, which understands and believes that any represented savings or discounts from list prices were reductions from regular retail selling prices of the same tires in effect immediately prior to such advertised sale, with respect to the savings and discounts actually offered and the kind and grade of tires offered for sale, and effect of inducing a portion of such public, because of its erroneous belief, to purchase its automobile tires:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. William M. King for the Commission.

Mr. J. L. McKnight and Mr. F. C. Leslie, of Akron, Ohio, for respondent.

COMPLAINT[1]

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that The B. F. Goodrich Co., a corporation, herein referred to as respondent, has violated the provision of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, The B. F. Goodrich Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York and has its principal office and place of business in the city of Akron in the State of Ohio.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution, among other products, of automobile tires. Said automobile tires are manufactured by respondent in factories owned and operated by it in the cities of Akron, Ohio; Los Angeles, Calif.; and Oaks, Pa.

In the course and conduct of its business the respondent sells the automobile tires manufactured by it by means of dealers located in the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes its automobile tires to be shipped from its factories located in the several States as above described to its dealers located in various other States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said automobile tires in commerce among and between various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. The respondent manufactures several grades of automobile tires which are distinguished as follows:

1. "Life-Saver Silvertown Tire," which is the respondent's best grade of first-line tire and is sold at retail at what is usually referred to in the industry as 100 level prices;

2. "Silvertown R–4 Tire," which is sold at 90 level prices, or 90 percent of the retail price of the "Life-Saver Silvertown Tire";

3. The "Standard" tire, which is sold at 75 level prices, or 75 percent of the retail price of the "Life-Saver Silvertown Tire";

4. The "Commander" tire, which is sold at 65 level prices, or 65 percent of the retail price of the "Life-Saver Silvertown Tire."

In the sale of these various grades of tires, it is customary and usual for respondent's dealers to make an allowance of 10 percent of the purchase price of the various grades of tires for old or used tires turned in by the customer. The respondent from time to time issues price lists designating the retail price or list price of its various grades of tires.

PAR. 4. For the purpose of inducing and stimulating the sales of its tires the respondent from time to time conducts nation-wide tire sales through its various dealers, during which sale period it advertises and causes its various dealers to advertise in various newspapers and other periodicals having a general circulation, by means of which advertisements it is falsely represented that the respondent's tires are being sold at various purported discounts from the regular and usual price of such tires. Such sales are usually conducted immediately prior to Memorial Day, July Fourth, Labor Day, and at other periods during the year. The advertising copy used by the various dealers of the respondent, in connection with such sales is prepared by the respondent and submitted to such dealers for insertion in local newspapers and other advertising media.

PAR. 5. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated by respondent as aforesaid is the following:

GOODRICH
Fully Guaranteed COMMANDERS
50% OFF Regular Tire Prices

Then follows list of various sizes with prices, of which the following is an example:

Size	Regular First Line Price	Special Goodrich Commander Price	You Save
6.00 x 16	$15.95	$7.97	$7.98

These prices include your old tires.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents that its "Commander" tires are first-line tires in that the alleged savings of 50 percent are based upon the price of its first-line tires, when in truth and in fact its "Commander" tire is its fourth-line tire. For example, the respondent represents that the list price of its fourth grade 65 level tire known as "Commander," size 6.00 x 16, is $15.95 and that this tire is sold at a discount of 50 percent of the usual and customary price of said tire. In truth and in fact, the list price of said "Commander" tire is not $15.95 and it is not sold at a discount of 50 percent. The regular list price of the 6.00 x 16 "Commander" tire in effect at the time of said advertisement was $10.35 and consequently the advertised sale price of $7.97 represented 22.89 percent off rather than 50 percent off. Furthermore, the advertised saving makes no allowance for the trade-in value of the customer's old tire. Giving effect to the 10 percent trade-in value of the old tire, as is the usual and customary practice, this would further reduce the actual saving on said "Commander" tire to 14.38 percent instead of 50 percent.

PAR. 6. Another and typical example of the false, misleading and deceptive representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated as aforesaid is the following:

2 FOR 1
Yes, 2 Goodrich Tires for the Price of 1 First Line Tire

Then follows list of the various sizes with prices, of which the following is an example:

Size	Regular First Line Tire Price	Special Price Two Commander Tires
6.00 x 16	$15.95	$15.95

These prices include your old tires.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents that all grades of its tires are sold upon the basis of two for the price of one. Respondent further represents that its "Commander" tires are first-line tires usually sold at the list price of its first-line 100 level tires. For example, respondent represents that the list price of its fourth grade 65 level tires known as "Commander," size 6.00 x 16, is $15.95.

In truth and in fact, all grades of respondent's tires are not sold at two for the price of one. Its "Commander" tire is not a first-line 100 level tire and the regular list price of this tire in size 6.00 x 16 is not $15.95, but instead at the time of such advertisement said list price on such size "Commander" tire was $10.35. Furthermore, the sale price of two tires for the price of one does not give the purchaser the usual and customary discount of 10 percent of the purchase price as trade-in value of old tires turned in. The savings to the customer after taking into consideration the customary trade-in value of used tires is only 14.38 percent instead of 50 percent, as would appear in the sale of two tires for the price of one.

PAR. 7. Another and typical example of the false, misleading and deceptive representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated as aforesaid is the following:

50% OFF
On Brand New GOODRICH TIRES
Buy One Tire at Regular Price
And You Get Second Tire At HALF PRICE.

Then follows list of the various sizes with prices, of which the following is an example:

Size	Regular Goodrich Commander Price	Second Tire for	You Save
6.00 x 16	$10.35	$5.18	$5.17

These prices include your old tires.

Furthermore, the advertised saving makes no allowance for the trade-in value of the customer's old tire. Giving effect to the 10 percent trade-in value of old tires, as is the usual and customary practice, further reduces the actual saving to the purchaser to $3.10 on two tires or $1.55 on each tire, or a percentage saving of 16.64 percent.

PAR. 8. Another and typical example of the false, misleading and deceptive representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated as aforesaid is the following:

40% OFF
on
GOODRICH STANDARD TIRES
Buy One Tire at Regular Price
And You Get Second Tire At
40% Discount.

Then follows list of the various sizes with prices, of which the following is an example:

Size	Regular Goodrich Standard Price	Second Tire for	You save
6.00 x 16	$11.95	$7.17	$4.78

Prices include your old tires.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents that all grades of its tires are sold at 40 percent off, when in truth and in fact only its third-line 75 level tires known as "Standard" are so sold. Furthermore, its "Standard" tires are not sold at 40 percent off since it is necessary to buy one tire at the full price in order to purchase the second tire at 40 percent off, thus resulting in a percentage saving of 20 percent on the total purchase price rather than 40 percent and a dollar saving on the size 6.00 x 16 as set out above of $4.78 on two tires rather than one tire. Further, the advertised saving makes no allowances for the trade-in value of the customer's old tire. Giving effect to the 10 percent trade-in value of the old tires, as is the usual and customary practice, further reduces the actual saving to the purchaser to $2.39 for two tires or $1.19 on each tire.

PAR. 9. Another and typical false, misleading, and deceptive representation contained in the various advertisements disseminated as aforesaid is the following:

on Brand New Famous
GOODRICH SILVERTOWN TIRES

Then follows list of the various sizes with prices, of which the following is an example:

Size	Regular Goodrich Silvertown Price	You Save
6.00 x 16	$14.35	$3.59

These prices include your old tires.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents that its "Goodrich Silvertown Tires" are sold at a discount of 25 percent. In truth and in fact, the saving or discount to a purchaser on this sale is not 25 percent for the reason that no allowance is given for the used tire, as is customary and usual, and after taking into consideration the 10 percent discount ordinarily allowed for used tires, the saving to the purchaser would amount to only 16.8 percent rather than 25 percent as advertised.

PAR. 9 (a). Another and typical example of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated by the respondent, is the following:

1¢ TIRE SALE Buy Three GOODRICH COMMANDERS at Published List Price and Receive the 4th for 1¢ * * *
25% savings if you need only one or two tires * * *.

How to get a Tire for 1¢.

Then follows a list of sizes and prices, of which the following is an example:

Size	Published List Price of 3 Tires.	Price of 4th Tire.	You save on 4 Tires.
6.00 x 16	$35.85	1¢	$11.94

Above price for cash and include your old tires. * * *

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set forth herein, respondent represents that by buying three "Commander" tires at the published list price, a fourth tire will cost the purchaser only one cent, and that certain designated savings are afforded the purchaser upon the purchase of four tires, for example, $11.94 for size 6.00 x 16. Such purported savings are exaggerated and untrue for the reason that they are based entirely upon the list prices and not upon the regular retail selling prices. Respondent's regular retail selling prices of such tires are customarily substantially lower than the list prices due to part payment trade-in allowances and other discounts and reductions brought about by competition. The actual cost of the fourth tire would, therefore, be substantially more than one cent and the savings substantially less than those designated in the advertisement.

PAR. 10. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, misleading, and deceptive statements, representations and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid with respect to the sales prices of its automobile tires has had and now has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and that the respondent's tires are sold at the saving or discount advertised, and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's automobile tires.

PAR. 11. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 2d day of January 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, The B. F. Goodrich Co., a corporation, charging, it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On May 4, 1940, the respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, pursuant to a stipulation entered into between the parties, it was agreed that, subject to the approval of the Commission, certain amendments might be made to the complaint, the respondent agreeing to said amendments but denying the charges as stated therein and waiving the issuance and service upon it of an amended and supplement complaint as well as the right to file an answer to the complaint so amended and supplemented, which stipulation has been approved, accepted, and filed. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondent and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the filing of a report upon the evidence by the trial examiner. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint as amended, answer and stipulation, such stipulation as to the facts having been approved, accepted and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, The B. F. Goodrich Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York and has its principal office and place of business in the city of Akron in the State of Ohio.

PAR. 2. Said respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution, among other products, of automobile tires and tubes. Said automobile tires and tubes are manufactured by respondent in factories owned and operated by it in the cities of Akron, Ohio; Los Angeles, Calif.; and Oaks, Pa.

In the course and conduct of its business the respondent sells said automobile tires and tubes to the purchasing public through its company-owned stores and to independent dealers, for resale, both company-owned stores and independent dealers being located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said respondent causes its automobile tires and tubes to be shipped from said factories, located in the several States as above described, to its dealers located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said automobile tires and tubes in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent manufactures automobile tires which, insofar as the following group is concerned and at the time mentioned herein, were distinguished as follows:

1. "Life-Saver Silvertown Tire" was respondent's highest priced tire and was listed and recommended to be sold at retail at published list prices by respondent;

2. "Silvertown R–4 Tire" was listed and recommended to be sold at retail at a price which price was approximately 90 percent of the list price of the "Life-Saver Silvertown Tire";

3. "Standard" tire was listed and recommended to be sold at retail at a price, which price was approximately 75 percent of the list price of the "Life-Saver Silvertown Tire";

4. "Commander" tire was listed and recommended to be sold at retail at a price, which price was approximately 65 percent of the list price of the "Life-Saver Silvertown Tire."

The respondent issued price lists for the use of its various retail stores which designate the retail selling price of its various grades and sizes of tires. Such price lists are commonly referred to in the industry as "list prices." List prices are also furnished to respondent's dealers as a suggested retail selling price of its products. Respondent's sales program contains a statement that an allowance up to 10 percent of the list price of new tires may be made when the customer turns in his old tires to said stores or dealers. A substantial portion of respondent's tires are sold at said list price. A substantial portion of said tires are sold at prices less than said list, such lesser prices being brought about by reason of discounts to meet competition and by special sales. The allowance for old tires turned in by the customer is based upon the value of said old tires. A substantial portion of respondent's tires are sold at budget prices, which, when service charge is taken into consideration, are higher than said list prices. Except in compliance with an advertisement, respondent's stores are not obligated to give a trade-in allowance for customers' used tires.

PAR. 4. During the year 1939, for the purpose of inducing and stimulating the sale of its tires, the respondent conducted nationwide sales through its various stores and recommended such sales to its dealers, during which sales periods it advertised and recommended that its various dealers advertise in a large number of newspapers having a general circulation by means of which advertisements it was represented that the said automobile tires were offered for sale at various discounts and savings from the regular and list prices of said tires. Such sales were held and conducted immediately prior to July Fourth, and Labor Day, and at other periods during the year.

Advertising copy used by its various dealers in connection with such sales, was prepared by the respondent and submitted to such dealers for insertion in local newspapers and other advertising media. A large number of company-owned stores and independent dealers inserted such advertising, in whole or in part, in numerous newspapers throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The following photostatic copy is typical of the advertisements prepared and promulgated by the respondent during said period:

The Commission finds that said respondent represented, through the use of the above statements and representations, that its "Commander" tire was offered for sale at 50 percent off and at the savings designated in said advertisement, from the regular current retail selling prices of said tires; and that said "Commander" tire was respondent's first-line or first-quality tire.

At the time of the publication of this advertisement "Commander" tires were being offered for sale at 50 percent off the list price of the higher-priced first-line "Life-Saver Silvertown Tire" but not at 50 percent off the list price of the "Commander" tire. For example, the list price of the 6.00 x 16 "Life-Saver Silvertown Tire" was $15.95 and the list price of the "Commander" of the same size was $10.35. The advertised saving of $7.98, while 50 percent of the "Life-Saver Silvertown" price, was only 22.89 percent off the "Commander" price. The advertised saving gives no credit for the usual and customary part payment trade-in allowance of 10 percent credited to purchasers of new tires. Giving effect to such allowance would reduce the actual saving on "Commander" tires to 14.38 percent. Respondent's "Commander" tire was not its first-line tire.

PAR. 6. The following photostatic copy, page 325, is typical of the advertisements prepared and promulgated by the respondent during said period:

The Commission finds that said respondent represented, through the use of the above statements and representations, that it was offering all grades of its tires at the price of two for one; that its "Commander" tires were being sold at half the price of the regular current retail selling price of said tires; and that the "Commander" tire was respondent's first-line or first-grade tires.

At the time of the publication of this advertisement two "Commander" tires were offered for sale for the current list price of one "Life-Saver Silvertown Tire" but not two "Commander" tires for the regular price of one "Commander" tire. The current list price of the "Commander" tire for size 6.00 x 16 was $10.35, and for the same size "Life-Saver Silvertown Tire" it was $15.95. Two "Commander" tires were sold for $15.95 but not for $10.35. All grades or brands of respondent's tires were not sold upon the basis of two for one. The advertised sales prices did not take into account the usual and customary part payment trade-in allowance. Giving effect to a 10 percent trade-in allowance would afford a saving of 14.38 percent from the "Commander" list price upon the purchase of two "Commander" tires. The "Commander" tire was not a first-line or first-grade tire.

The Commission finds that said respondent represented, through the use of the above statements and representations, that all grades of its tires are being offered for sale at 50 percent off the regular current retail selling prices of said tires and that by purchasing one tire at the advertised sales price and a second tire at half such price a saving of 50 percent and the dollar savings designated in said advertisements would be afforded, from the regular current retail selling prices of said tires.

At the time of the publication of this advertisement respondent was offering one "Commander" tire at current list price and a second tire at one-half the list price. This did not provide 50 percent off, for the reason that it was necessary to pay the full list price for the first tire in order to secure the second tire for one half the list price. While the saving from the list price was 50 percent for the second tire, the saving on two tires was only 25 percent. The dollar savings of $5.17 for size 6.00 x 16 were also based on the sale of two tires rather than one and were computed upon the list price rather than the regular current retail selling price. The advertised saving does not take into account the usual and customary part payment trade-in allowance for used tires. Giving effect to the customary allowance of 10 percent would reduce the actual saving to $3.10 on two tires or $1.55 per tire, or a percentage saving of $16.64 percent. All grades of respondent's tires were not sold at one tire for the regular price and the second tire at half price.

PAR. 8. The following photostatic copy, page 328, is typical of the advertisements prepared and promulgated by the respondent during said period:

The Commission finds that said respondent represented, through the use of the above statements and representations, that all grades of its tires were offered for sale at 40 percent off the regular current retail selling price and that by purchasing one tire at the advertised price and a second tire at 40 percent off said price a saving of 40 percent and the dollar savings designated in said advertisement would be afforded, from the regular current retail selling prices on said tires.

At the time of the publication of this advertisement respondent was offering one "Standard" tire at current list price and a second tire at 40 percent off list price. This did not provide 40 percent off for the reason that it was necessary to pay the full list price for the first tire in order to secure the second tire at 40 percent off the list price. While the saving from list price was 40 percent for the second tire, the saving on two tires was only 20 percent. The dollar saving of $4.78 for size 6.00 x 16 was also based upon two tires rather than one and was computed upon the list price rather than the current retail selling price. The advertised saving also does not take into account the usual and customary part payment trade-in allowance for used tires. Giving effect to the usual allowance of 10 percent would reduce the actual savings to $2.39 for the two tires and $1.19 for each tire.

The Commission finds that said respondent represented, through the above statements and representations, that it was offering its "Silvertown Tires" at a discount of 25 percent and that by purchasing said tires during said sale a 25 percent saving and the designated dollar savings would be afforded, from the regular current retail selling prices of said tires.

At the time of the publication of this advertisement the list price of respondent's "Silvertown Tires" was $14.35 for size 6.00 x 16. The advertised saving of $3.59 is 25 percent off this price but is not a discount of 25 percent or a saving of $3.59, since the purchaser was required to turn in his used tire but no allowance was given. Giving credit for the usual and customary allowance of 10 percent would provide a saving of 16.8 percent rather than 25 percent and a dollar saving of $2.16 rather than $3.59.

PAR. 10. The following photostatic copy, page 331, is typical of the advertisements prepared and promulgated by the respondent during said period:

The Commission finds that said respondent represented, through the use of the above statements and representations, that by paying the designated sales price for three "Commander" tires, the fourth tire would cost only 1 cent and that by buying four tires at the advertised sales price the amounts designated would be saved from the regular current retail selling prices of said merchandise.

At the time the publication of this advertisement, the respondent was offering three "Commander" tires at list price and the fourth tire at 1 cent. Such a combination sale would not provide a price of 1 cent for the fourth tire and afford the designated savings set out in this advertisement, for the reason that the prices charged for the three tires are list prices and not the regular current retail sales prices. The regular current retail sales prices are customarily substantially lower than list prices due to part payment trade-in allowances for purchasers' old tires and other discounts and reductions brought about by competition. The cost price of the fourth tire would therefore be substantially more than 1 cent and the savings on the combination sale would be substantially less than those disignated in the advertisement.

PAR. 11. The Commission finds that substantial numbers of the purchasing public understand and believe that advertised savings or discounts are reductions from the regular retail selling prices charged for the same merchandise in the ordinary course of business immediately prior in point of time to such advertised sale; that they understand that "list prices" as used in tire advertising, referred to and meant the regular retail selling prices of the tires advertised for sale and that any represented savings or discounts from such list prices were reductions from the regular retail selling prices of the same tires in effect immediately prior in point of time to such advertised sale.

PAR. 12. The use by the respondent of the foregoing statements, representations and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to the sales prices of its automobile tires and with respect to the kind and quality of the tires offered for sale has had the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the savings and discounts actually offered and the kind and grade of tires offered for sale and induced a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's automobile tires.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondent and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure the Commission may issue and serve on the respondent findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of this proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, The B. F. Goodrich Company, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in advertising in newspapers or other recognized advertising media, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its automobile tires and tubes to the general public, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the term "List Price" or any other term of similar import or meaning to designate, describe or refer to prices which are not, in fact, the bona fide regular established selling prices of the tires or tubes advertised and offered for sale, as established by the usual and customary sales in the normal course of business.

2. Representing, directly or indirectly, that any specified amount is the customary, regular or usual price of any tire or tube advertised and offered for sale when such amount is not, in fact, the bona fide actual selling price of such tire or such tube as established by the usual and customary sales in the normal course of business.

3. Representing, directly or indirectly, any specified amounts or percentages as savings or discounts which are not actual savings or discounts computed on the bona fide, usual, and customary selling price for such tires or such tubes in effect immediately prior in point of time to such representation.

4. Representing, directly or indirectly, that any specified savings or discounts are offered a purchaser upon the purchase of certain of its tires or tubes when such savings or discounts are computed upon the regular selling or list prices of its higher priced tires or tubes.

5. Representing, directly or indirectly, that a specified tire or tube is offered for sale when such tire or tube is not so offered but instead another tire or tube of different kind or brand.

6. Representing, directly or indirectly, that specific savings or discounts are afforded a purchaser upon the purchase of tires or tubes when such savings or discounts do not take into account the trade-in allowances usually and customarily made to purchasers in the sale of such tires or such tubes in the ordinary course of business.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

SEARS, ROEBUCK & COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4033. Complaint, Feb. 15, 1940—Decision, June 18, 1941

Where a corporation long engaged in the manufacture, among other products, of automobile tires and tubes, and in interstate sale and distribution thereof through its retail stores located in various states; issuing list prices for the use of such stores which, while usually offering such products at certain savings and discounts from said list prices, did not usually sell its tires at prices so designated but varied prices at their discretion, under its authority, on the basis of such price lists, and which customarily made allowances of up to 25 percent of list prices of new tires as a trade-in allowance for purchasers' old tires;

In advertisements of its best grade "Allstate Safety Tread Tire," its "Allstate Non-Skid or Rib-Tread Tire"—also listed by it as a first line tire but sold for less than the former—its second grade "Allstate Standard Tire," and its third line "Allstate Crusader Tire" in connection with Nation-wide tire sales, prepared and published in various newspapers and other periodicals of general circulation by said retail stores under authority granted by it—in which advertisements, as more fully set out below, it made representations with respect to various discounts and savings from regular retail selling prices, from the list prices, and from competitors' list prices, and with respect to grade and quality of a certain tire—

(a) Represented, as illustrative, that insofar as the purported discounts might be interpreted as meaning a discount from the regular retail price, its "Crusader" tires were being sold at a discount or saving of 30 percent to 35 percent, by the statement "Save 30 percent to 35 percent on 'Fleet Tested' Allstate CRUSADER TIRES * * *," followed by list of sizes with prices;

Facts being that such purported savings were exaggerated and untrue for the reason they were not computed on the regular retail price or on any other current price of said tire and the advertised sale prices for the respective sizes of tires provided percentage savings based upon the list prices of 10.8 percent, 10.1 percent, 9.45 percent, 9.8 percent, 10.7 percent, and 10.1 percent, rather than the advertised saving of 30 percent to 35 percent, and if based upon the regular retail selling prices the percentage savings would be even less;

(b) Represented that a 25-percent trade-in allowance for old tires was an extra trade-in allowance and resulted in a 25 percent discount from the regular retail prices; when in fact such a trade-in allowance for old tires was always made, and by most of its stores, and therefore did not provide 25 percent discount from the regular retail selling price;

(c) Represented "HALF PRICE TIRE SALE Buy One All-State At Its Regular Price! Get another at HALF PRICE * * * these prices include the old tires," facts being it was not in effect offering to sell its tires on the basis of two for one and one-half the regular price of one, since a trade-in allowance for old tires was always made, and generally up to 25 percent of list price of new tires, and, computed upon such basis, the sales price of two tires, as designated in said advertisement, might be exactly the same as that charged in the usual course of business and constituted no savings or discounts from the regular price;

(d) Represented "Today and Tomorrow * * * a tube for 10¢ IN ADDITION to the lowest price of all time for Allstate Standards," followed by list of sizes with prices; facts being that the designated sales price required the purchaser to pay practically the full price for the tube in each instance, for the reasons that the prices shown were higher than the correct list prices currently in effect, and that the purchaser received no credit for his old tires although he was required to turn them in; the sales price of $9.59 advertised for tire and tube, taking, as illustrative, the 6.00 x 16, and using the correct list price and giving credit for a 25 percent trade-in allowance for old tires, required the purchaser to pay $1.30 for the tube rather than 10 cents;

(e) Representing certain designated prices as customary and usual retail selling prices of its "Non-Skid Allstate Tires" and that by paying such designated amounts and $3 for a second tire, certain stated savings would be provided on the purchase of two tires; when in fact the prices designated as regular prices were actually list prices, and in the locality in which such advertisement was published the regular retail selling prices of the particular tire were substantially lower than the prices designated in said advertisement, so that the actual savings were substantially less than those set out;

(f) Represented that certain savings were provided a purchaser of its tires computed upon the list price of competitors' tires, by advertising "YOU SAVE WHEN YOU BUY ALLSTATES! * * * Size 4-Ply 6.00-16 Comparative list price $14.05 Sears net price with old tire $8.95, You Save $5.10"; when, in truth and in fact, such purported savings were exaggerated in that they were based wholly upon list prices and not upon selling prices of competitors' tires; the regular retail selling prices of the major tire companies being customarily substantially lower than their list prices due to trade-in allowances and to other discounts and reductions brought about by competitive situations;

(g) Represented that by buying, for example, its 4.75 x 16 Allstate Rib Tread and Non-Skid Tires for $6.63, a saving of $3.77 was made from the "big tire companies" list price of $10.40; when in fact the comparison was made between the competitors' list price and its retail selling price, the major tire companies' retail prices being customarily substantially lower than their list prices, as above noted;

(h) Represented that a purchaser of tires of a major tire company at prices represented as "National List" would be required to pay 40 to 60 percent more for tires of comparable quality than its designated sales prices; facts being said competitor's "National List" were not regular and usual retail selling prices, but, as aforesaid, customarily higher than the latter;

(i) Represented that it was offering "ALLSTATE Safety Treads" at 50 percent off and at a saving of $7.97 for the 6.00 x 16 size; when in fact, the amount $15.95, designated as "List Price," was not the usual retail selling price which was substantially less, and the selling price was therefore not 50 percent off nor the saving as much as $7.97 when computed upon the regular selling price with old tires;

(j) Represented "40% off List Price Sears Fleet Tested CRUSADERS * * * 6.00 x 16 size $7.40 and your old tire"; facts being that the list price of the 6.00 x 16 "Crusader" at the time of publication of said advertisement was $9.35, and the stated sale price of $7.40 provided 20 percent off rather than 40 percent off as claimed; and

(k) Represented by such statements, among others, as "UP TO 35% TRADE-IN ALLOWANCE! Actually you save up to—45 percent—compared with other first-line tires present list prices! 3-Day Special 'Crusader' Sale Prices!" that the "Crusader" tire was a first-line or first-grade tire, facts being it was, as aforesaid, its third line or grade product;

(l) Represented further that certain specified savings were provided, based upon the list price of higher priced tires of its competitors; which would not, in fact, provide the represented saving since the list price of competitors' tires is not the usual or customary selling price;

With tendency and capacity to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public, which understands and believes represented savings and discounts from "list prices" to be reductions from the regular retail selling prices of the same tires in effect immediately prior to advertised sales, into the erroneous belief that aforesaid representations were true and that its tires and tubes were sold at the savings or discounts advertised, with the result that a portion of such public, because of its mistaken belief, purchased its said products:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. William M. King for the Commission.

Lederer, Livingston, Kahn & Adsit, of Chicago, Ill., and Mr. Donald Kane and Davies, Richberg, Beebe, Busick & Richardson, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

COMPLAINT [1]

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Sears, Roebuck & Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Sears, Roebuck & Co., is a corporation, organized, and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business located in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution, among other products, of automobile tires and tubes.

In the course and conduct of its business, the respondent sells and distributes said automobile tires and tubes to the purchasing public through and by means of various retail stores owned and operated by it and located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes said tires and tubes to be shipped and transported to said retail stores from States other than the States in which such stores are located. Respondent causes said tires and tubes when sold to be transported from its various local stores and other points of origin of shipment to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State from which such shipments originate. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said tires and tubes in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent sells several grades of automobile tires and tubes through its retail stores, its tires being distinguished generally as follows:

1. "Allstate Safety Tread Tires," which is respondent's best grade or first line tire;

2. "Allstate Non-Skid or Rib-Tread Tire," which is respondent's second grade or second line tire;

3. "Allstate Standard Tire," which is respondent's third grade or third line tire;

4. "Allstate Crusader Tire," which is respondent's fourth grade or fourth line tire.

In the sale and distribution of its said tires, through its retail stores, it is the established custom of respondent to make an allowance to a purchaser of new tires of not less than 25 percent of the purchase price of the new tires as a trade-in allowance for old tires. Respondent, from time to time, issues price lists designating the retail price of its various grades of tires. Respondent, however, does not sell its tires, at retail, in accordance with such list price but rather in accordance with a confidential list price furnished to all its retail stores.

PAR. 4. For the purpose of inducing and stimulating the sale of its tires and tubes, the respondent, from time to time, conducts nationwide tire sales through its various retail stores. In connection with such sales the respondent advertises in various newspapers and other periodicals having a general circulation, by means of which advertisements the respondent falsely represents that respondent's tires and tubes are being sold at various purported discounts and savings from the regular and usual price of such tires and tubes. Advertising copy to be used in connection with such sales is prepared by respondent at its main office in Chicago, Ill., and is forwarded by respondent to its retail stores and is used by said stores in whole or in part by insertion in local newspaper and other advertising media.

PAR. 5. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive representations contained in the various advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, is the following:

Save 30% to 35% on "Fleet Tested" Allstate CRUSADER TIRES. Prices as low as $4.95 for a 4.40 x 21 size

4.50 x 21 size	$5.35
4.75 x 19 size	5.75
5.25 x 17 size	6.45
5.50 x 17 size	7.10
6.00 x 16 size	8.05

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set forth herein, the respondent represents that its "Crusader" tires are being sold at a saving or discount of 30 percent to 35 percent. In truth and in fact such purported savings are greatly exaggerated and untrue for the reason that such savings are not computed on the regular list price of said tires in effect at the time of such advertisement. Such list prices for said tires in the order in which they appear in said advertisement were as follows: $5.55, $5.95, $6.35, $7.15, $7.95, and $8.59. The advertised sale prices for said tires provide the following percentage saving based upon the regular list price: 10.8 percent, 10.1 percent, 9.45 percent, 9.8 percent, 10.7 percent, and 10.1 percent rather than the advertised saving of 30 percent to 35 percent.

PAR. 6. Another and typical example of the false, misleading, and deceptive representations contained in the various advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, is the following:

SEARS—
25% OFF
3-Day Tire Sale—
Thursday, Friday and Saturday
25% Trade in allowance for your old, smooth, dangerous tires on new, safe
Guaranteed "Fleet Tested" ALLSTATE
Tires—Extra Trade in Allowance.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto, not specifically set forth herein, respondent represents that a 25 percent trade-in allowance for old tires is a 25 percent discount from usual price and is an extra trade-in allowance. In truth and in fact a 25 percent trade-in allowance for old tires is always allowed and therefore does not provide 25 percent discount from the usual price but represents only the regular selling price for respondent's tires, and does not constitute an extra trade-in allowance.

PAR. 7. Another and typical example of the false, misleading, and deceptive representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated as aforesaid, is the following:

AT SEARS—Another Smashing Tire Sale—HALF PRICE TIRE SALE. Buy One Allstate at its Regular Price! Get another at HALF PRICE. Rib-Tread or Non-Skid.

Then follows list of sizes and prices of which the following is an example:

Size	Reg. Price	2nd Tire	Two Tires
6.00 x 16	$13.50	$6.75	$20.25

These Prices Include Your Old Tires.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto, not specifically set forth herein, respondent represents that its Allstate tires are being offered at half price. In truth and in fact respondent does not sell its said tires at half price for the reason that it is necessary to purchase one tire at the full price in order to obtain one at half price. Morever, the advertised price represents no savings whatsoever to a purchaser, since no allowance is made for the customer's old tires. Taking the 6.00 x 16 tire as an example, the advertised sale price for two tires is $20.25. The regular list price for two tires of this size as shown by said advertisement is $27. Giving effect to the customary old tire allowance of 25 percent, the usual and customary selling price is $20.25 for two tires, or exactly the advertised sale price for two tires.

PAR. 8. Another and typical example of the false and misleading representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated as aforesaid is the following:

Today and tomorrow 10¢ BUYS A TUBE with Allstate Standard Tires at These Sensational Savings. We're set to sell a million dollars worth of tires in 1939. We've made commitments obligating us to hit that figure or take a huge loss. This is Sale Sensation No. 3—We can offer it for only 2 more days—a tube for 10¢ IN ADDITION to the lowest price of all time for Allstate Standards

5.25 x 17	$9.35	$1.15	$7.59
5.50 x 17	10.55	1.45	8.59
6.00 x 16	11.80	1.50	9.59
6.25 x 16	13.20	1.50	10.59
6.50 x 16	14.50	1.50	11.59

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set forth herein, respondent represents that the list price designated in said advertisement is the regular list price for Allstate Standard Tires and is the lowest price of all time for said tires; that by paying the designated price, with old tire, the purchaser is paying only 10 cents for a tube. In truth and in fact, the designated sales price requires the purchaser to pay practically the full price for the tube in each instance, for the reason that the various prices shown in said advertisement are higher than the correct list price in effect at the time of said advertisement and for the further reason that the purchaser receives no credit for his old tires, although he is required to turn them in at the time of the sale. The correct list prices for said tires in the order in which they appear in said advertisement are as follows: $8.65, $9.80, $11.05, $12.40, and $13.70. Giving credit for the customary allowance of 25 percent for old tires, the usual selling prices are as follows: $6.49, $7.35, $8.29, $9.30, and $10.28. Based on the advertised sales prices, the purchaser is, therefore, required to pay the following amounts for the various sized tubes: $1.10, $1.24, $1.30, $1.25, and $1.31, rather than 10 cents as stated in said advertisements.

PAR. 9. Another, and typical, example of the false and misleading representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated as aforesaid is the following:

7.00–16	19.75	3.00	22.75	16.75

old tire. Based upon such regular price, two tires would cost $19.14, whereas at the sale price advertised, two tires would cost $17.35, representing a saving of $1.79 instead of $11.35, as represented by the respondent in said advertisement.

PAR. 9 (a). For the purpose of inducing and stimulating the sale of its tires the respondent has conducted sales through its various retail stores. In connection with such sales various retail stores of the respondent, since March 21, 1938, have caused to be inserted in newspapers and other periodicals having a general circulation, certain advertisements, by means of which, representations have been made that respondent's tires were being offered for sale at certain discounts and savings from the list prices of its tires and at certain savings and discounts from the list prices of competitors' tires, and certain representations have been made with respect to the grade and quality of a certain tire. Such advertising matter was prepared and published by said retail stores under general authority granted by the respondent herein.

PAR. 9 (b). A typical example of the representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated as aforesaid is the following:

YOU SAVE WHEN YOU BUY ALLSTATES!

Sear's direct from factory plan of distribution, eliminating the profit and expenses of jobbers and dealers, enables SEARS to give you more tire value for Your money! * * *

Then follows list of sizes and prices of which the following is an example:

Size	Comparative	Sears net price	You
4-Ply	list price	with old tire	Save
6.00–16	14.05	8.95	5.10

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set forth herein, respondent represents that certain savings are provided a purchaser of its tires computed upon the list price of competitors' tires. In truth and in fact, such purported savings are exaggerated for the reason that they are based wholly upon the list prices and not upon the selling prices of competitors' tires. The regular retail selling prices of the major tire companies are generally and customarily substantially lower than their list prices due to trade-in allowances for purchasers' old tires and also due to other discounts or allowances as well as other reductions brought about by competitive situations.

PAR. 9. (c). Another and typical example of the representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated as aforesaid is the following:

Size 4.75 x 19
Standard List

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set forth herein, respondent represents that by buying, for example, its 4.75 x 16 Allstate Rib Tread and Non-Skid Tire for $6.63 a saving of $3.77 is made from the "Big tire companies" list price of $10.40. This is not the fact since the comparison is made between competitors' list price and respondent's retail selling price. The regular retail selling prices of the major tire companies are generally and customarily substantially lower than their list prices due to trade-in allowances for purchasers' old tires and also due to other discounts or allowances as well as other reductions brought about by competitive situations.

PAR. 9 (d). Another and typical example of the representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated as aforesaid is the following:

Then follows a list of sizes and prices of which the following is an example:

Size	National List	Sears Net Prices
6.00 x 16	14.05	8.95

trade-in allowances for purchasers' old tires and also due to other discounts or allowances as well as other reductions brought about by competitive situations.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set forth herein, respondent represents that it is offering said tires at 50 percent off and at a saving of $7.97 for the size 6.00 x 16 tire. This is not the fact since the amount $15.95, designated as "List Price," is not the usual retail selling price of said tire, such selling price being substantially less than the listed price. The selling price is, therefore, not 50 percent off nor is the saving as much as $7.97 when computed upon the regular selling price with old tires.

PAR. 9 (f). Another and typical example of the representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated as aforesaid, is the following:

40% Off List Price Sears Fleet Tested CRUSADERS * * * 6.00 x 16 size—7.40 and your old tire.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set forth herein, respondent represents that its "Crusader" tire is offered for sale at 40 percent off list price. This is not the fact. For example, the list price of the 6.00 x 16 "Crusader" tire at the time of the publication of said advertisement was $9.25. The sale price of $7.40 provided 20 percent off rather than 40 percent off as represented.

PAR. 9 (g). Another and typical example of the representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated as aforesaid is the following:

UP TO 35% TRADE-IN ALLOWANCE!

Actually you save up to—45%—compared with other first-line tires present list prices! 3-Day Special "Crusader" Sale Prices!

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set forth herein, respondent represents that the "Crusader" tire is a first-line or first-grade tire. This is not the fact. At the time of the publication of said advertisement respondent's "Crusader" tire was its third-line or third-grade tire and not its first-line or first-grade tire.

PAR. 10. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, misleading, and deceptive statements, representations, and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid with respect to the sales prices of its automobile tires and tubes has had and now has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and that the respondent's tires and tubes are sold at the saving or discount advertised and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's automobile tires and tubes.

PAR. 11. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 15th day of February 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent, Sears, Roebuck & Co., charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On April 15, 1940, the respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into between the Chief Counsel for the Commission and respondent whereby it was agreed that, subject to the approval of the Commission, the complaint might be amended, the respondent waiving the issuance and service of an amended and supplemental complaint, the filing of a supplemental answer to such amended complaint and admitting as true the additional allegations incorporated in the complaint by amendment and that they constituted deceptive and misleading representations. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondent and its counsel, Lederer, Livingston, Kahn, and Adsit, and Davies, Richberg, Beebe, Busick, and Richardson, and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without presentation of argument, the filing of briefs, or the filing of a report on the evidence by the trial examiner. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint as amended, answer and stipulations, said stipulations having been approved, accepted and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Sears, Roebuck & Co., is a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution, among other products, of automobile tires and tubes.

In the course and conduct of its business, the respondent sells and distributes said automobile tires and tubes to the purchasing public through and by means of various retail stores owned and operated by it and located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes said tires and tubes to be shipped and transported to said retail stores from States other than the States in which such stores are located. Respondent causes said tires and tubes when sold to be transported from its various local stores and other points of origin of shipment to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State from which such shipments originate. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said tires and tubes in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent has been selling several grades of automobile tires and tubes through its retail stores, its tires being generally distinguished as follows:

1. "Allstate Safety Tread Tires," which is respondent's best grade or first line tire;

2. "Allstate Non-Skid or Rib-Tread Tire," which respondent also represents as a first line tire but which is listed and sold for a less price than the "Allstate Safety Tread Tires;"

3. "Allstate Standard Tire," which is respondent's second grade, or second line tire;

4. "Allstate Crusader Tire," which is respondent's third grade, or third line tire.

The respondent issues price lists for the use of its various retail stores which price lists, without additional explanation, might be understood as designating the retail selling price of its various grades of tires. The retail stores do not usually sell respondent's tires at the prices so designated but vary the prices at their discretion under authority granted by the respondent, using such price lists as a basis for determining the sale prices at each particular store. In advertising to the purchasing public, however, it is generally represented by respondent's retail stores that such tires are being offered for sale at certain discounts and savings from the list price so issued by the respondent.

The Commission finds that a substantial portion of the purchasing public understands and believes that advertised savings or discounts are reductions from the regular retail sale prices charged for the same merchandise in the ordinary course of business immediately prior in point of time to such advertised sale; that they understand and believe that "list prices" as used by respondent's retail stores in advertising respondent's tires referred to and meant the regular retail sale prices of the tires advertised for sale and that any represented savings or discounts from such "list prices" were reductions from the regular retail sale prices of the same tires in effect immediately prior in point of time to such advertised sale.

PAR. 4. For the purpose of inducing and stimulating the sale of its tires and tubes, it is the established custom of respondent's retail stores to make allowances of up to 25 percent of the list price of the new tires as a trade-in allowance for the purchasers' old tires. For the same purpose, respondent conducts Nation-wide tire sales through its various retail stores. In connection with such sales the various retail stores of the respondent, since March 21, 1938, have caused to be inserted in various newspapers and other periodicals having a general circulation, as well as in local newspapers, advertisements, by means of which representations have been made that respondent's tires and tubes were being sold at various discounts and savings from the regular retail selling price of such tires and tubes, at certain discounts and savings from the list prices of its tires and at certain savings and discounts from the list prices of competitors' tires and certain representations with respect to the grade and quality of a certain tire. Such advertising was prepared and published by said retail stores under authority granted by the respondent herein.

PAR. 5. As illustrative of the representations employed by the retail stores of respondent in advertising certain stated discounts and savings from the regular retail selling prices, is the following:

Save 30% to 35% on "Fleet Tested" Allstate CRUSADER TIRES. Prices as low as $4.95 for a 4.40 x 21 size

4.50 x 21 size	$5.35
4.75 x 19 size	5.75
5.25 x 17 size	6.45
5.50 x 17 size	7.10
6.00 x 16 size	8.05

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, the respondent through one of its retail stores has represented, insofar as the purported discount may be interpreted as meaning a discount from the regular retail price, that its "Crusader" tires were being sold at a saving or discount of 30 percent to 35 percent. Such purported savings were exaggerated and untrue for the reason that such savings were not computed on the regular retail price or on any other price of said tires in effect at the time of such advertisement. The list prices for said tires in the order in which they appeared in said advertisements were as follows: $5.55, $5.95, $6.35, $7.15, $7.95, and $8.59. The advertised sale prices for said tires provided the following percentage saving based upon the list prices: 10.8 percent, 10.1 percent, 9.45 percent, 9.8 percent, 10.7 percent, and 10.1 percent rather than the advertised saving of 30 percent to 35 percent. If based upon the regular retail selling prices the percentage savings would be even less.

PAR. 6. As illustrative of the representations employed by the retail stores of respondent in advertising discounts or savings from list prices, when such advertised discounts or savings represented only the usual trade-in value of customers' old tires, is the following:

SEARS—
25% OFF

3-Day Tire Sale—
Thursday, Friday and Saturday
25% Trade in allowance for your old, smooth, dangerous tires on new, safe
Guaranteed "Fleet Tested" ALLSTATE
Tires—Extra Trade in Allowance.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, respondent, through some of its retail stores, represented that a 25 percent trade-in allowance for old tires is an extra trade-in allowance and results in a 25 percent discount from the regular retail price. A trade-in allowance for old tires is always made, and by most of respondent's stores, of up to 25 percent and therefore does not provide 25 percent discount from the regular retail selling price. Since a trade-in allowance up to 25 percent is usually given, it does not constitute an extra trade-in allowance.

PAR. 7. As illustrative of the representations employed by the retail stores of respondent in advertising savings and discounts from regular prices when the usual allowance for old tires was not taken into consideration, is the following:

At SEARS—Another Smashing Tire Sale—HALF PRICE TIRE SALE. Buy One Allstate at its Regular Price! Get Another at HALF PRICE. Rib-Tread or Non-Skid.

Then follows list of sizes and prices of which the following is an example:

Size	Reg. Price	2nd Tire	Two Tires
6.00 x 16	$13.50	$6.75	$20.25

These Prices Include Your Old Tires.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, respondent through some of its retail stores has represented that it was offering two Allstate Tires for one and one-half times the regular price of one such tire. The respondent was not offering to sell its tires on the basis of two tires for one and one-half the regular price of one such tire, since, a trade-in allowance for old tires is always made, and by most of the respondent's stores of up to 25 percent of the list price of the new tires. Computed upon this basis the sales price of two tires as designated in said advertisement may be exactly the same as that charged in the usual course of business and constitutes no saving or discount from the regular price of said tires.

PAR. 8. As illustrative of the representations employed by the retail stores of respondent in advertising various savings and discounts in sales of its tires and tubes, based upon the list price of its tires offered for sale, when such advertised list prices were not the true list prices in effect at the time of such sales, is the following:

Today and Tomorrow 10¢ BUYS A TUBE with Allstate Standard Tires at These Sensational Savings. We're set to sell a million dollars' worth of tires in 1939. We've made commitments obligating us to hit that figure or take a huge loss. This is Sale Sensation No. 3—We can offer it for only 2 more days—a tube for 10¢ IN ADDITION to the lowest price of all time for Allstate Standards.

5.25 x 17	$ 9.35	$1.15	$ 7.59
5.50 x 17	10.55	1.45	8.59
6.00 x 16	11.80	1.50	9.59
6.25 x 16	13.20	1.50	10.59
6.50 x 16	14.50	1.50	11.59

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, respondent through one of its retail stores represented that the list price designated in said advertisement was the regular list price for Allstate Standard Tires and was the lowest price of all time for said tires; that by paying the designated price, with old tire, the purchaser was paying only 10 cents for a tube. The designated sales price required the purchaser to pay practically the full price for the tube in each instance, for the reason that the various prices shown in said advertisement are higher than the correct list price in effect at the time of said advertisement and for the further reason that the purchaser received no credit for his old tires, although he was required to turn them in at the time of the sale. The correct list prices for said tires in the order in which they appeared in said advertisement were as follows: $8.65, $9.80, $11.05, $12.40, and $13.70. Taking size 6.00 x 16 as an example and using the correct list price of $11.05, the customary selling price, after giving credit for a 25 percent trade-in allowance for old tires, would be $8.29. The sales price of $9.59 for tire and tube would require the purchaser to pay $1.30 for the tube rather than 10 cents as advertised.

PAR. 9. As illustrative of the representations employed by the retail stores of respondent in advertising various discounts and savings in sales of its tires based on an advertised regular price, when such stated regular price was not the usual regular price because no allowance was made for customers' old tires, is the following:

7.00-16	19.75	3.00	22.75	16.75

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, the respondent represented that the prices designated in said advertisement as regular prices were the customary and usual retail selling prices of its "Non-Skid Allstate Tires" and that by paying the amounts designated in said advertisement and $3 for a second tire, the stated savings would be provided on the purchase of two tires. These stated savings are exaggerated and untrue since the prices designated as regular prices are actually list prices and not the regular retail selling prices. The regular retail selling prices of this particular tire in the locality in which this advertisement was published were substantially lower than the prices designated in said advertisement. The actual savings, therefore, were substantially less than those set out in said advertisement.

PAR. 10. As illustrative of the representations employed by the retail stores of respondent in advertising certain savings based upon the list price of competitors' tires is the following:

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and other similar thereto not specifically set forth herein, respondent represents that certain savings are provided a purchaser of its tires computed upon the list price of competitors' tires. In truth and in fact, such purported savings are exaggerated for the reason that they are based wholly upon the list prices and not upon the selling prices of competitors' tires. The regular retail selling prices of the major tire companies are generally and customarily substantially lower than their list prices due to trade-in allowances for purchasers' old tires and also due to other discounts or allowances as well as other reductions brought about by competitive situations.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set forth herein, respondent represents that by buying, for example, its 4.75 x 16 All-state Rib Tread and Non-Skid Tire for $6.63 a saving of $3.77 is made from the "big tire companies" list price of $10.40. This is not the fact since the comparison is made between competitors' list price and respondent's retail selling price. The regular retail selling prices of the major tire companies are generally and customarily substantially lower than their list prices due to trade-in allowances for purchasers' old tires and also due to other discounts or allowances as well as other reductions brought about by competitive situations.

PAR. 12. As illustrative of the representations employed by the retail stores of respondent in advertising discounts based upon the list prices of competitors' tires designated as "National List" is the following:

* * * Why pay 40% to 60% more when you can get guaranteed equal quality, guaranteed equal safety and guaranteed equal or longer wear—Have ALLSTATES put on your car now and be safe. * * *

Then follows list of sizes and prices of which the following is an example:

Size	National List	Sears Net Prices
6.00 x 16	14.05	8.95

PAR. 13. As illustrative of the representations employed by the retail stores of respondent in advertising a certain discount based upon the list price of its own tires is the following:

6.00 x 16	15.95	7.98	7.97

PAR. 14. As illustrative of the representations employed by the retail stores of respondent in advertising a certain discount from the list price of its own tires when the prices designated as list price were not the correct list prices at the time of the publication of said advertisement is the following:

40% Off List Price Sears Fleet Tested CRUSADERS * * * 6.00 x 16 size—7.40 and your old tire.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set forth herein, respondent represents that its "Crusader" tire is offered for sale at 40 percent off list price. This is not the fact. For example, the list price of the 6.00 x 16 "Crusader" tire at the time of the publication of said advertisement was $9.25. The sale price of $7.40 provided 20 percent off rather than 40 percent off as represented.

PAR. 15. As illustrative of the representations employed by the retail stores of respondent in describing the quality of a certain tire is the following:

UP TO 35% TRADE-IN ALLOWANCE!

Actually you save up to—45%—compared with other first-line tires present list prices! 3-Day Special "Crusader" Sale Prices!

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set forth herein, respondent represents that the "Crusader" tire is a first-line or first-grade tire. This is not the fact. At the time of the publication of said advertisement respondent's "Crusader" tire was its third-line or third-grade tire, and not its first-line or first-grade tire. Respondent further represents that certain specified savings are provided based upon the list price of higher priced tires of its competitors. This would not provide the represented saving since the list price of competitors' tires is not the usual or customary selling price, such selling price being ordinarily substantially lower than the list price.

PAR. 16. The use by the respondent of the foregoing misleading and deceptive statements, representations and advertisements, disseminated, as aforesaid, with respect to the sales prices of its automobile tires and tubes; the grade, kind or line of its tires and the prices of its competitors' tires has had the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and advertisements were true, and that the respondent's tires and tubes were sold at the savings or discounts advertised; that the grade, kind or line of its tires was as represented and the prices of its competitors' tires were as represented and induced a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's automobile tires and tubes.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondent and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Sears, Roebuck & Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its automobile tires and tubes to the general public in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the term "List Price" or any other term of similar import or meaning to designate, describe, or refer to prices which are not, in fact, the bona fide regular established selling prices of the tires or tubes advertised and offered for sale, as established by the usual and customary sales in the normal course of business.

2. Representing, directly or indirectly, that any specified amount is the customary, regular, or usual price of any tire or tube advertised and offered for sale when such amount is not, in fact the bona fide actual selling price of such tire or such tube as established by the usual and customary sales in the normal course of business.

3. Representing, directly or indirectly, any specified amounts or percentages as savings or discounts which are not actual savings or discounts computed on the bona fide, usual, and customary selling price for such tires or such tubes in effect immediately prior in point of time to such representation.

4. Representing, directly or indirectly, that any specified savings or discounts are offered a purchaser upon the purchase of certain of its tires or tubes when such savings or discounts are computed upon the regular selling or list prices of higher priced tires or tubes.

5. Representing, directly or indirectly, that a specified tire or tube is offered for sale when such tire or such tube is not so offered but instead another tire or tube of different kind or brand.

6. Representing, directly or indirectly, that any savings or discounts are afforded a purchaser upon the purchase of its tires or tubes when such savings or discounts are computed upon prices of competitors' tires or tubes unless the prices of respondent's tires or tubes and also those of its competitors are the regular current retail selling prices.

7. Representing, directly or indirectly, that a specified tire or tube is of a certain grade, kind, or line when such tire or tube is of a different grade, kind, or line.

8. Representing, directly or indirectly, that its tubes can be bought for a designated amount, or at a designated savings or discount, in combination with a tire or tires when the designated amounts, savings, or discounts in such combination offer are not computed upon the regular retail selling prices of each item in the combination.

9. Representing, directly or indirectly, that certain amounts are the prices of respondent's competitors' tires or tubes unless such amounts are the prices at which such competitors sell their tires or tubes in the ordinary and usual course of business.

10. Representing, directly or indirectly, that specific savings or discounts are afforded a purchaser upon the purchase of tires or tubes when such savings or discounts do not take into account the trade-in allowances usually and customarily made to purchasers in the sale of such tires or such tubes in the ordinary course of business.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

WESTERN AUTO SUPPLY COMPANY

Docket 4054. Complaint, Mar. 11, 1940—Decision, June 18, 1941

Where a corporation long engaged in the interstate sale and distribution, among other products, of automobile tires and tubes through its own retail stores located in various States; issuing price lists for its various grades of tires to its said stores, which did not, however, usually sell at the prices so designated but sold at lesser prices brought about by discounts from list prices and by trade-in allowances of 10 percent or more of the list price of new tires purchased for old tires;

In advertisements in connection with sales conducted through its said stores, in various newspapers and other periodicals of general circulation and by catalogs distributed by the stores, copy for which was prepared by it at its main office and forwarded to its retail stores and by them inserted in local newspapers and other advertising media, and in which, as indicated below, it represented that its products were being sold at purported discounts and savings from the regular retail prices—

(a) Represented by such statements as "20 PER CENT DISCOUNT Off Our Regular Low Prices! Davis DeLuxe Tires" followed by a list of sizes with prices, that by paying the sales price indicated for any particular size tire a saving or discount of 20 percent was provided, based upon the regular sales price; when in fact, such represented discount was untrue for the reason that the listed "Regular Price" made no allowance for the trade-in value of purchaser's old tires, which by the terms of said advertisement were required to be turned in; giving effect to the minimum trade-in allowance of 10 percent for used tires, the saving or discount was approximately 11 percent rather than 20 percent as advertised; and the savings were further exaggerated by reason of the fact that the prices designated as "regular prices" were actually the list prices, and therefore not the prices customarily charged;

(b) Represented that in the purchase of a Davis DeLuxe Tire during a particular sale, the purchaser received a Davis tube free and saved the difference between the advertised sales price of tire and tube and the listed price for nationally advertised tire and tube; the facts being that such savings were exaggerated and untrue in that the advertised price for its tire and tube made an allowance of 10 percent for purchaser's old tires, while the listed price for nationally advertised tire and tube made no such allowance, although it was customary for dealers to make a trade-in allowance of at least 10 percent; and the quoted prices of nationally advertised tires were the list prices rather than the selling prices, which latter are usually less than list prices without regard to the trade-in value of old tires;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public, which understands and believes that represented savings or discounts from "list prices" are reductions from the regular retail sales price of the same tires in effect immediately prior to such advertised sale, into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, and that its tires and tubes were sold at the saving or discount advertised, and with result of inducing a portion of such public, because of its mistaken belief, to purchase its said products:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. William M. King for the Commission.

Mr. E. A. TenBrook, of Kansas City, Mo., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Western Auto Supply Co., a corporation herein referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Western Auto Supply Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Missouri, with its principal office and place of business located at 2107 Grand Avenue in the city of Kansas City, State of Missouri.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution, among other products, of automobile tires and tubes.

In the course and conduct of its business, the respondent sells and distributes said automobile tires and tubes to the purchasing public through and by means of various retail stores owned and operated by it and located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes said tires and tubes to be shipped and transported to said retail stores from States other than the States in which such stores are located. Respondent causes said tires and tubes when sold to be transported from its various local stores and the points of origin of shipment, to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State from which such shipments originate. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said automobile tires and tubes in commerce among and between the States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent sells three grades of automobile tires and tubes through its retail stores, its tires being distinguished generally as follows:

1. "Davis DeLuxe Safety Grip Tire," which respondent designates as its premium and best grade tire;

2. "Davis DeLuxe Tire," which respondent designates as its first line tire;

3. "Davis Wearwell Tire," which is respondent's cheapest tire.

In the sale and distribution of its said tires, through its retail stores, it is the established custom of respondent to make an allowance to a purchaser of new tires of 10 percent or more of the purchase price of the new tires as a trade-in allowance for old tires. Respondent, from time to time, fixed the sales prices for its various grades of tires for the use of its retail stores.

PAR. 4. For the purpose of inducing and stimulating the sale of its tires and tubes, the respondent, from time to time, conducts sales through its various retail stores. In connection with such sales, the respondent advertises in various newspapers and other periodicals having a general circulation and by catalogues distributed by its retail stores. By means of such advertisements, the respondent falsely represents that its tires and tubes are being sold at various proported discounts and savings from the regular and usual price of such tires and tubes. Advertising copy to be used in connection with such sales is prepared by respondent at its main office in Kansas City, Mo., and is forwarded by respondent to its retail stores and is used by said stores by insertion in local newspapers and other advertising media.

PAR. 5. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated as aforesaid, is the following:

20% DISCOUNT
Off Our Regular Low Prices!
Davis DeLuxe Tires.

Tire Size	List Price Most 1st Quality Well Known Tires	Reg. Price 1st Quality Davis DeLuxe	Sale Price 1st Quality Davis DeLuxe
4.50-21	$11.10	$7.55	$6.04*
4.75-19	11.45	7.80	6.24*
5.00-19	12.50	8.40	6.72*
5.25-17	12.90	8.65	6.92*
5.50-17	14.65	9.80	7.84*
6.00-16	15.95	11.05	8.84*
6.50-16	19.35	13.55	10.84*

All Other Sizes—Similar Savings
*Includes trade-in of old tire.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents that by paying the sales prices indicated in said advertisement for any particular sized tire, a saving or discount of 20 percent is provided, based upon the regular sales price of said tire. In truth and in fact, such saving or discount is greatly exaggerated and untrue for the reason that the listed "Regular Price" makes no allowance whatsoever for the trade-in value of purchaser's old tires, which by the terms of said advertisement are required to be turned in at the time of said sale and purchase. Giving effect to the minimum trade-in allowance of 10 percent for used tires, the saving or discount is approximately 11 percent rather than 20 percent as advertised.

PAR. 6. Another and typical example of the false, misleading, and deceptive representations contained in the various advertisements disseminated as aforesaid, is the following:

FREE TUBE with every Davis DeLuxe. Plus: Low, Money-Saving Prices! Plus: Liberal Trade-In for Old Tires! Plus: Genuine First-Line Quality! Strictly FIRST-Line, FIRST Quality—BUILT SOLD and GUARANTEED as such!—yet we not only offer you Davis DeLuxe at about the regular price of most THIRD or FOURTH Line well-known tires—but (during this sale) will give you a fresh, new Davis tube for each new tire—and will make a liberal trade in allowance for your old tires. CHECK SAVINGS YOURSELF.

Then follows list of tire sizes and prices of which the following is an example:

Size	Published List Prices Most Nationally-Advertised First Line Tires (Plus Tubes)		Davis DeLuxe with Free Davis Tube
6.00–16	(15.95 plus 2.85)	18.80	$9.95*

*Includes trade-in of average tires. If yours are worth more, your cost on Davis DeLuxe may be even lower.

However, giving effect to the minimum allowance of 10 percent for trade-in value of old tires allowed to purchasers of nationally advertised tires, which in size 6.00–16 would be $1.59, the actual saving would be $7.26, rather than $8.85 as advertised. The advertised savings are further exaggerated in that the quoted prices of nationally advertised tires are the list prices rather than the actual selling prices, such selling prices being usually less than the list prices without regard to the trade-in value of old tires.

PAR. 7. In addition to the acts and practices hereinabove described, the respondent falsely represents the discount or saving at which its tires are sold by the use of fictitious list prices. As an example of this practice, the respondent, in connection with special sales of its tires, causes advertisements to be inserted in various newspapers, by which advertisements respondent represents that certain prices set out in such advertisements are the list prices of its tires in effect at the time of such sales, and further represents that certain definite savings are afforded purchasers of said tires at such sales, based upon the difference between the represented list prices and the special sales prices. In truth and in fact, such alleged savings are exaggerated and untrue for the reason that the stated list prices are fictitious, and are not the list prices usually and customarily charged by the respondent at or about the time of such sales.

PAR. 8. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, misleading, and deceptive statements, representations and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid with respect to the sales prices of its automobile tires and tubes, has had and now has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and that respondent's tires and tubes are sold at the saving or discount advertised, and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's automobile tires and tubes.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 11th day of March 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent, Western Auto Supply Co., charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Thereafter a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondent and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without presentation of argument, the filing of briefs or the filing of a report upon the evidence by the trial examiner. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved accepted and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and now being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Western Auto Supply Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Missouri, with its principal office and place of business located at 2107 Grand Avenue in the city of Kansas City, State of Missouri.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution, among other products, of automobile tires and tubes.

In the course and conduct of its business, the respondent sells and distributes said automobile tires and tubes to the purchasing public through and by means of various retail stores owned and operated by it and located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes said tires and tubes to be shipped and transported to said retail stores from States other than the States in which such stores are located. Respondent causes said tires and tubes when sold to be transported from its various local stores and the points of origin of shipment to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State from which such shipments originate. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said automobile tires and tubes in commerce among and between the States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. The respondent sells several grades of automobile tires and tubes which, at the time mentioned herein, were distinguished as follows:

1. "Davis DeLuxe Safety Grip Tire," which respondent designates as its premium and best grade tire;

2. "Davis DeLuxe Tire," which respondent designates as its first line tire;

3. "Davis Wearwell Tire," which is respondent's cheapest tire.

The respondent issues price lists for the use of its various retail stores which price lists, without additional explanation, might be understood as designating the retail selling price of its various grades of tires. The retail stores do not usually sell respondent's tires at the prices so designated but at lesser prices, such lesser prices being brought about by means of discounts from list prices and by allowances for old tires turned in by purchasers at the time of purchase of new tires. This trade-in allowance is equal to 10 percent or more of the list price of the new tires purchased. In advertising to the purchasing public since March 21, 1938, respondent has sometimes represented that its tires are being offered for sale at certain discounts and savings from the list prices above referred to.

The Commission finds that substantial portion of the purchasing public understands and believes that advertising savings or discounts are reductions from the regular retail sale prices charged for the same merchandise in the ordinary course of business immediately prior in point of time to such advertised sale; that they understand and believe that "list prices" as used by respondent's retail stores in advertising respondent's tires referred to and meant the regular retail sale prices of the tires advertised for sale, and that any represented savings or discounts from such "list prices" were reductions from the regular retail sale prices of the same tires in effect immediately prior in point of time to such advertised sale.

PAR. 4. For the purpose of inducing and stimulating the sale of its tires and tubes, the respondent, since March 21, 1938, has conducted sales through its various retail stores. In connection with such sales, the respondent advertised in various newspapers and other periodicals having a general circulation and by catalogs distributed by its retail stores. By means of such advertisements, the respondent has represented, since March 21, 1938, that its tires and tubes were being sold at various purported discounts and savings from the regular and usual price of such tires and tubes. Advertising copy to be used in connection with such sales was prepared by respondent at its main office in Kansas City, Mo., and forwarded by the respondent to its retail stores and was used by said stores by insertion in local newspapers and other advertising media.

PAR. 5. Among and typical of such representations contained in the various advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, is the following:

20% DISCOUNT

6.50-16	19.35	13.55	10.84*

*Includes trade-in of old tire.
All other sizes—Similar Savings.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents that by paying the sales prices indicated in said advertisement for any particular sized tire, a saving or discount of 20 percent is provided, based upon the regular sales price of said tire. In truth and in fact, such represented saving or discount is greatly exaggerated and untrue for the reason that the listed "Regular Price" makes no allowance whatsoever for the trade-in value of purchaser's old tires, which by the terms of said advertisement are required to be turned in at the time of said sale and purchase. Giving effect to the minimum trade-in allowance of 10 percent for used tires, the saving or discount is approximately 11 percent rather than 20 percent as advertised. The savings are further exaggerated by reason of the fact that the prices designated as "Regular Price" are actually the list price in effect at the time of said advertisement, and are therefore not the prices customarily charged for the tires in the usual course of business.

PAR. 6. Another typical example of such representations is the following:

FREE TUBE with every Davis DeLuxe. Plus: Low, Money-Saving Prices! Plus: Liberal Trade-In for Old Tires! Plus: Genuine First-Line Quality! Strictly FIRST-Line, FIRST Quality—BUILT SOLD and GUARANTEED as such!—yet we not only offer you Davis DeLuxe at about the regular price of most THIRD or FOURTH Line well-known tires—but (during this sale) will give you a fresh, new Davis tube for each new tire—and will make a liberal trade in allowance for your old tires. CHECK SAVINGS YOURSELF.

Then follows list of tire sizes and prices, of which the following is an example:

Size	Published List Prices Most Nationally-Advertised First Line Tires (Plus Tubes)		Davis DeLuxe with Free Davis Tube

*Includes trade-in of average tires. If yours are worth more, your cost on Davis DeLuxe may be even lower.

By means of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents that in the purchase of a Davis DeLuxe Tire during said sale, the purchaser receives a Davis tube free and saves the difference between the advertised sale price for tire and tube and the listed price for nationally advertised tire and tube. In truth and in fact, such savings are exaggerated and untrue for the reason that the advertised price for respondent's tire and tube makes an allowance of 10 percent for purchaser's old tires, while the listed price for nationally advertised tire and tube makes no such allowance, although it is customary and usual for dealers selling nationally advertised tires to make an allowance of at least 10 percent as the trade-in value for purchaser's old tires. Taking tire size 6.00–16 as an example, the listed price of nationally advertised, first line tire plus tube is $18.80, and the advertised selling price of respondent's Davis DeLuxe Tire and free tube is $9.95, indicating a saving of $8.85 to the purchaser. However, giving effect to the minimum allowance of 10 percent for trade-in value of old tires allowed to purchasers of nationally advertised tires, which in size 6.00–16 would be $1.59, the actual saving would be $7.26, rather than $8.85 as advertised. The advertised savings are further exaggerated in that the quoted prices of nationally advertised tires are the list prices rather than the selling prices, such selling prices being usually less than the list prices without regard to the trade-in value of old tires.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing misleading and deceptive statements, representations, and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid with respect to the sales prices of its automobile tires and tubes has had and now has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and advertisements are true, and that respondent's tires and tubes are sold at the saving or discount advertised, and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's automobile tires and tubes.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondent and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Western Auto Supply Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its automobile tires and tubes to the general public in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the term "List Price" or any other term of similar import or meaning to designate, describe or refer to prices which are not, in fact, bona-fide regularly established selling prices of the tires or tubes advertised and offered for sale, as established by the usual and customary sales in the normal course of business.

2. Representing, directly or indirectly, that any specific amount is the customary, regular or usual price of any tire or tube advertised and offered for sale when such amount is not, in fact, the bona-fide actual selling price of such tire or such tube as established by the usual and customary sales in the normal course of business.

3. Representing, directly or indirectly, any specified amounts or percentages as savings or discounts which are not actual savings or discounts computed upon the bona-fide usual and customary selling prices for such tires or such tubes in effect immediately prior in point of time to such representation.

4. Representing, directly or indirectly, that any savings or discounts are afforded a purchaser upon the purchase of its tires or tubes when such savings or discounts are computed upon prices of competitors' tires or tubes, unless the prices of respondent's tires or tubes and also those of its competitors' are the regular current retail selling prices.

5. Representing, directly or indirectly, that certain amounts are the prices of respondent's competitors' tires or tubes unless such amounts are the prices at which such competitors sell their tires or tubes in the ordinary and usual course of business.

6. Representing, directly or indirectly, that specific savings or discounts are afforded a purchaser upon the purchase of tires or tubes when such savings or discounts do not take into account the trade-in allowances usually and customarily made to purchasers in the sale of such tires or such tubes in the ordinary course of business.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

PELICAN STATE CANDY COMPANY, AND MAX J. PINSKI, INDIVIDUALLY AND AS OFFICER THEREOF, AND FORMERLY INDIVIDUALLY AND TRADING AS PELICAN STATE CANDY COMPANY AND ROYAL CHOCOLATES

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket. 4210. Complaint, July 31, 1940—Decision, June 18, 1941

Where a corporation and an individual, who was its president and principal stockholder and formulated, controlled, and directed its policies and practices, engaged in the manufacture of candy and the competitive interstate sale and distribution of assortments thereof which were so packed or assembled as to involve use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to consumers, typical assortments consisting of (1) a number of quarter, half, and one pound bars of pecan candy, value of each of which was in excess of 5 cents, for sale and distribution under a plan, as explained on punchboard supplied, by which purchasers of chances pushing certain numbers received a quarter- or half-pound bar, those pushing the last number in each of the four sections into which the board was divided received a pound of such candy, and others received for nickel paid nothing other than the privilege of making a punch; and (2) a package of candy, together with a push card for use in sale thereof, as thereon explained, under a plan by which the person selecting from 35 feminine names displayed on the card, the one corresponding to that concealed under the master seal received the candy, value of which was in excess of chance amount paid as determined by the particular number disclosed in the disk beneath the name selected—

Sold such assortments to wholesalers, jobbers, and, directly or indirectly, to retailers, by whom they were exposed and sold to the purchasing public, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their products in accordance with said sales plans, involving game of chance or sale of chance to procure candy at prices much less than normal retail price thereof, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who, unwilling to use such methods of chance or any other method contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by said sales plans and by the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell said candy in preference to that of aforesaid competitors, and with tendency and capacity unfairly to divert trade in commerce from such competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, as above set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, trial examiner.
Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr. for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Pelican State Candy Co., a corporation, and Max J. Pinski, individually and as an officer of Pelican State Candy Co., and as an individual formerly trading as Pelican State Candy Co. and Royal Chocolates, hereinafter referred to as respondents, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent Max J. Pinski, is an individual and for several years prior to July 1, 1939, traded as Pelican State Candy Co. and Royal Chocolates, with his office and principal place of business located at 523 Natchez St., New Orleans, La. Respondent Pelican State Candy Co. is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Louisiana on or about July 1, 1939, with its office and principal place of business formerly located at 523 Natchez Street, New Orleans, La. The corporate respondent is now located at 1301 North Rampart Street, New Orleans, La. The respondent Max J. Pinski is president and principal stockholder in the corporate respondent Pelican State Candy Co., and formulates, controls and directs the acts, practices, and policies of the said corporation. All of said respondents have participated, within the time hereinabove mentioned, in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged. Respondents are and have been engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers. Respondents cause and have caused said products, when sold, to be transported from their principal place of business in the city of New Orleans, La., to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various States of the United States other than Louisiana, and in the District of Columbia. There is and has been a course of trade by respondents in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are and have been in competition with other individuals and corporations and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed or assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Certain of said assortments are hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the methods used by respondents, and are as follows.

(a) One assortment consists of a number of one-quarter, one-half and one pound bars of pecan candy, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Said pecan candy is sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner: Sales are five cents each and when a punch is made from the board, a number is dislosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears a statement or statements informing prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitled the purchasers thereof to receive without additional cost, a one-quarter or one-half pound bar of pecan candy. The board is also divided into four sections and the person pushing the last number in each of the four sections, receives one pound of said candy. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the lucky numbers or the last punch in one of said sections receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The said bars of candy are worth more than five cents and the purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for one of the bars of pecan candy or the last punch in one of said sections receives the same for the price of five cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the said punch separated from the board. The said candy is thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

Respondents sell and distribute and have sold and distributed various assortments of candy along with punchboards involving a lot or chance feature, but such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

(b) Another of respondents' assortments consists of a package of candy, together with a device commonly called a push card. Said candy is sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of said push card in the following manner:

The push card bears 35 feminine names with ruled columns on the face thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 35 partially perforated disks on the face of which is printed the word "push." Each of such disks is set under one of the aforesaid feminine names. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed only when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the face of said card. The person selecting the feminine name corresponding to the one under the master seal, receives the aforesaid package of candy. The said package of candy is worth more than any of the prices paid for a chance to receive same. The push card bears a legend or instructions as follows:

NAME UNDER SEAL RECEIVES
THIS PACKAGE OF
DELICIOUS EASTER CANDY
Numbers 1 to 10
Pay Amount Punched
Numbers over 10 Pay only 10c

Sales of respondents' merchandise by means of said push card are made in accordance with the above described legend or instructions. Said candy is allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above described legend or instructions. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives the aforesaid package of candy or nothing, for the amount of money paid, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondents furnish and have furnished various other push cards for use in the same and distribution of their candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said candy by means of said other push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who directly or indirectly purchase respondents' said candy, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plans aforesaid. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their products in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said sales plans or methods in the sale of their candy and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plans or methods is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the methods and plans hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure candy at prices which are much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any methods involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their candy and in the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondents because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act the Federal Trade Commission on July 31, 1940, issued and on August 2, 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Pelican State Candy Co., a corporation, and Max J. Pinski, individually and as an officer of Pelican State Candy Co. and formerly individually and trading as Pelican State Candy Co. and Royal Chocolates, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On April 14, 1941, respondents filed their answer, in which answer they admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent Max J. Pinski, is an individual and for several years prior to July 1, 1939, traded as Pelican State Candy Co. and Royal Chocolates, with his office and principal place of business located at 523 Natchez Street, New Orleans, La. Respondent Pelican State Candy Co. is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Louisiana on or about July 1, 1939, with its office and principal place of business formerly located at 523 Natchez Street, New Orleans, La. The corporate respondent is now located at 1301 North Rampart Street, New Orleans, La. The respondent Max J. Pinski is president and principal stockholder in the corporate respondent Pelican State Candy Co., and formulates, controls and directs the acts, practices, and policies of the said corporation. All of said respondents have participated, within the time hereinabove mentioned, in doing the acts and things hereinafter found. Respondents are and have been engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers. Respondents cause and have caused said products, when sold, to be transported from their principal place of business in the city of New Orleans, La., to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various States of the United States other than Louisiana, and in the District of Columbia. There is and has been a course of trade by respondents in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are and have been in competition with other individuals and corporations and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed or assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Certain of said assortments are hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the methods used by respondents, and are as follows:

(a) One assortment consists of a number of one-quarter, one-half and one pound bars of pecan candy, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Said pecan candy is sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner: sales are 5 cents each and when a punch is made from the board, a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears a statement or statements informing prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchasers thereof to receive without additional cost, a one-quarter or one-half pound bar of pecan candy. The board is also divided into four sections and the person pushing the last number in each of the four sections, receives one pound of said candy. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the lucky numbers or the last punch in one of said sections receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The said bars of candy are worth more than 5 cents and the purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for one of the bars of pecan candy or the last punch in one of said sections receives the same for the price of 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the said punch separated from the board. The said candy is thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

Respondents sell and distribute and have sold and distributed various assortments of candy along with punchboards involving a lot or chance feature, but such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

(b) Another of respondents' assortments consists of a package of candy, together with a device commonly called a push card. Said candy is sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of said push card in the following manner:

The push card bears 35 feminine names with ruled columns on the face thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 35 partially perforated disks on the face of which is printed the word "push." Each of such disks is set under one of the aforesaid feminine names. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed only when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the face of said card. The person selecting the feminine name corresponding to the one under the master seal, receives the aforesaid package of candy. The said package of candy is worth more than any of the prices paid for a chance to receive same. The push card bears a legend or instructions as follows:

NAME UNDER SEAL RECEIVES
THIS PACKAGE OF
DELICIOUS EASTER CANDY
Numbers 1 to 10
Pay Amount Punched
Numbers over 10 Pay only 10¢

Sales of respondents' merchandise by means of said push card are made in accordance with the above described legend or instructions. Said candy is allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above described legend or instructions. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives the aforesaid package of candy or nothing, for the amount of money paid, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondents furnish and have furnished various other push cards for use in the sale and distribution of their candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said candy by means of said other push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who directly or indirectly purchase respondents' said candy, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plans aforesaid. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their products in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said sales plans or methods in the sale of their candy and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plans or methods is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the methods and plans hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure candy at prices which are much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondents, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any methods involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their candy and in the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondents because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the said facts, and the Commission, having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Pelican State Candy Co., its officers, and the respondent Max J. Pinski, individually, and trading as Pelican State Candy Co. and Royal Chocolates, or trading under any other name or names, the representatives, agents, and employees of said respondents, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing candy or any other merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of such candy or other merchandise to the public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme;

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices, either with assortments of candy or other merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing said candy or other merchandise to the public;

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

GENERAL GROCER COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SUBSEC. (c) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 4281. Complaint, Aug. 28, 1940—Decision, June 27, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the purchase of food stuffs at wholesale from sellers located in other States, and in the interstate sale and distribution thereof—

Received and accepted allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage in substantial amounts, through, usually, purchasing commodities at prices lower than those at which such commodities were sold to other purchasers by an amount reflecting all or a portion of the brokerage currently being paid by sellers of such commodities to their respective brokers for effecting sales to other purchasers:

Held, That such receipt and acceptance of allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage fees or commissions from sellers upon purchases of commodities were in violation of the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

Mr. John T. Haslett for the Commission.

Cobbs, Logan, Roos & Armstrong, of St. Louis, Mo., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the respondent named in the caption hereof, and hereinafter more particularly designated and described, since June 19, 1936, has violated and is now violating the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, section 13), hereby issues its complaint stating its charges with respect thereto as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent General Grocer Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware with its principal office and place of business located at 301 South Eighth Street, St. Louis, Mo. Respondent is engaged in the purchase, sale, and distribution of food products at wholesale.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its said business respondent purchases a substantial portion of its requirements from sellers located in States other than the State in which the respondent is located, pursuant to which purchased commodities are caused to be shipped and transported by the respective sellers thereof across State lines to the respondent.

PAR. 3. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the purchase of its requirements in interestate commerce, as aforesaid, respondent has received and accepted allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage in substantial amounts.

Usually, the receipt and acceptance of the aforesaid allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage is accomplished by respondent by purchasing commodities at prices lower than the prices at which such commodities are sold to other purchasers thereof by an amount which reflects all or a portion of the brokerage currently being paid by the sellers of such commodities to their respective brokers for effecting sales of such commodities to other purchasers.

PAR. 4. The receipt and acceptance of allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage by respondent as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof is in violation of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, the Clayton Act, as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, the Robinson-Patman Act (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), the Federal Trade Commission on the 28th day of August, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent General Grocer Co., a corporation, charging the respondent with violation of the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of the said act.

After the issuance and service of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts and expressly waiving the filing of briefs and oral argument, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, and being of the opinion that section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, has been violated by the respondent, now makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent General Grocer Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware with its principal office and place of business located at 301 South Eighth Street, St. Louis, Mo. Respondent is engaged in the purchase, sale and distribution of food products at wholesale.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its said business respondent purchases a substantial portion of its requirements from sellers located in States other than the State in which the respondent is located, pursuant to which purchased commodities are caused to be shipped and transported by the respective sellers thereof across State lines to the respondent.

PAR. 3. Since June 19, 1936, in connection with the purchase of its requirements in interstate commerce, as aforesaid, respondent has received and accepted allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage in substantial amounts.

Usually the receipt and acceptance of the aforesaid allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage are accomplished by respondent by purchasing commodities at prices lower than the prices at which such commodities are sold to other purchasers thereof by an amount which reflects all or a portion of the brokerage currently being paid by the sellers of such commodities to their respective brokers for effecting sales of such commodities to other purchasers.

CONCLUSION

In receiving and accepting allowances and discounts in lieu of brokerage fees or commissions from sellers upon purchases of commodities as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof, the respondent has violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and substitute answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts and expressly waives the filing of briefs and oral argument, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of section 2 (c) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, section 13).

It is ordered, That in purchasing commodities in interstate commerce, the respondent General Grocer Co., a corporation, its agents, employees, and representatives, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Accepting from sellers, directly or indirectly, any allowance for discount in lieu of brokerage fees or commissions in whatever manner or form said allowances, discounts, brokerage fees or commissions may be offered, allowed, granted, paid or transmitted; and

2. Accepting from sellers in any manner or form whatever, directly or indirectly, anything of value as a commission, brokerage fee, or other compensation, or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof, upon purchases of commodities made by the respondent.

It is further ordered, That the said respondent General Grocer Co., a corporation, shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth by the Commission.

IN THE MATTER OF

J. H. THORP & COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4310. Complaint, Sept. 12, 1940—Decision, June 28, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of various grades and types of textile fabrics—

Falsely represented in advertisements, price lists, on labels, and otherwise, through designations "sunfast," "tubfast," "washable," and "fadeless," that said fabrics respectively would not change or lose color, or otherwise deviate from their original color when exposed to the light of the sun; would not change color, "bleed," lose color, or otherwise deviate from their original colors and designs when washed or laundered; and would not similarly react when exposed to sunlight or laundering;

With tendency and capacity to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said statements were true, as a result of which a number of such public purchased its fabrics in substantial volume:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Robert Mathis, Jr. for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that J. H. Thorp & Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, J. H. Thorp & Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business at 250 Park Avenue, in the city of New York, and State of New York, and a branch office and place of business at 10 East Thirty-fourth Street, in the city of New York, and State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in business of selling and distributing various grades and types of textile fabrics. Respondent sells its products to members of the purchasing public situated in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes said products, when sold, to be transported from its places of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its products, in commerce, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase thereof by the public, respondent has stated in advertisements, in price lists, on labels, and otherwise, that certain of its fabrics are "sunfast," "tubfast," "fadeless," "washable."

PAR. 4. By the use in advertisements, in price lists, on labels, and otherwise, of the statement or representation that certain of its fabrics are "sunfast," respondent has represented that said fabrics will not change color when exposed to the light of the sun, by the use of statements or representations that certain of its fabrics are "tubfast" or "washable" respondent has represented that said fabrics will not change color, "bleed," lose color or otherwise deviate from their original colors and designs when washed or laundered; by the use of the statement that certain of its fabrics are "fadeless," respondent has represented that said fabrics will not change color, "bleed," lose color, or otherwise deviate from their original color and design when exposed to the light of the sun or washed or laundered.

PAR. 5. Respondent's statements and representations that its fabrics above referred to are "sunfast," "tubfast," "fadeless," or "washable" are false and misleading, for the reason that said fabrics stated to be "sunfast" will change color, lose color, or otherwise deviate from their original color when exposed to the light of the sun; said fabrics stated to be "tubfast" or "washable" will change color, "bleed," lose color, or otherwise deviate from their original colors and designs when washed or laundered; said fabrics stated to be "fadeless" will change color, "bleed," lose color, or otherwise deviate from their original colors and designs when exposed to the light of the sun or washed or laundered.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading statements has had, and now has, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements are true. On account of this erroneous and mistaken belief, so induced by respondent, a number of the purchasing and consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's fabrics.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act the Federal Trade Commission, on September 12, 1940, issued, and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent J. H. Thorp & Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On October 26, 1940, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, J. H. Thorp & Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business at 250 Park Avenue, in the city of New York, and State of New York, and a branch office and place of business at 10 East Thirty-fourth Street, in the city of New York, and State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing various grades and types of textile fabrics. Respondent sells its products to members of the purchasing public situated in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes said products, when sold, to be transported from its places of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its products in commerce, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase thereof by the public, respondent has stated in advertisements, in price lists, on labels, and otherwise, that certain of its fabrics are "sunfast," "tubfast," "fadeless," "washable."

PAR. 4. By the use in advertisements, in price lists, on labels, and otherwise of the statement or representation that certain of its fabrics are "sunfast," respondent has represented that said fabrics will not change color, lose color, or otherwise deviate from their original color when exposed to the light of the sun; by the use of statements or representations that certain of its fabrics are "tubfast" or "washable" respondent has represented that said fabrics will not change color, "bleed," lose color or otherwise deviate from their original colors and designs when washed or laundered; by the use of the statement that certain of its fabrics are "fadeless," respondent has represented that said fabrics will not change color, "bleed," lose color, or otherwise deviate from their original color and design when exposed to the light of the sun or washed or laundered.

PAR. 5. Respondent's statements and representations that its fabrics above referred to are "sunfast," "tubfast," "fadeless," or "washable" are false and misleading, for the reason that said fabrics stated to be "sunfast" will change color, lose color, or otherwise deviate from their original color when exposed to the light of the sun; said fabrics stated to be "tubfast" or "washable" will change color, "bleed," lose color, or otherwise deviate from their original colors and designs when washed or laundered; said fabrics stated to be "fadeless" will change color, "bleed," lose color, or otherwise deviate from their original colors and designs when exposed to the light of the sun or washed or laundered.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading statements has had, and now has, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements are true. On account of this erroneous and mistaken belief, so induced by respondent, a number of the purchasing and consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's fabrics.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, J. H. Thorp & Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, directors, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of its textile fabric products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing by the use of the word "sunfast" or any other word of similar import or meaning, that the colors of respondent's textile fabric products will not change color, or lose color, or otherwise deviate from their original color when exposed to the light of the sun.

2. Representing by the use of the terms "tubfast", or "washable", or any other term or terms of similar import or meaning, that respondent's textile fabric products will not "bleed" or lose color, or otherwise deviate from their original colors or designs when washed or laundered.

3. Representing by the use of the term "fadeless" or any other term or terms of similar import or meaning, that respondent's textile fabric products will not "bleed" or lose color, or otherwise deviate from their original colors or designs when washed or laundered, or exposed to the light of the sun.

4. Representing in any manner or by any means that the colors of respondent's textile fabric products will not change color, or will not fade, or will not deviate from their original color when exposed to the light of the sun, or when washed or laundered.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

H. W. LAY & COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4439. Complaint, Dec. 31, 1940—Decision, June 28, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the competitive interstate sale and distribution of food products, including assortments of nuts which were so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold to the consuming public, and included, as typical, a display card with twenty-seven 5-cent packages of nuts, three of which, however, had concealed within them slip of paper bearing the word "free," and were without cost to purchasers procuring same;

Sold such assortments to jobbers and, directly or indirectly, to retailers, by whom they were exposed and sold in accordance with said plan, involving game of chance to procure, without cost, package of nuts, and thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products, contrary to established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who, unwilling to use such or other method contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by its said sales plans and the element of chance involved therein and were thereby induced to buy and sell its products in preference to those of its said competitors, whereby trade was unfairly diverted to it from them and substantial injury was done to competition:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and its competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, trial examiner.

Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr., for the Commission.

Hirsch, Smith, Kilpatrick, Clay & Cody, of Atlanta, Ga., for respondent.

Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that H. W. Lay & Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Paragraph 1. Respondent H. W. Lay & Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Tennessee, with its principal office and place of business located at 444 Marietta Street, Atlanta, Ga. Respondent is now and has been for more than 1 year last past engaged in the sale and distribution of food products to jobbers and retail dealers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, its products when sold to be shipped and transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Georgia to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 1 year last past a course of trade by said respondent in such food products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is, and has been, in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, assortments of nuts so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the purchasing and consuming public.

One of said assortments consists of 27 packages of nuts mounted on a display card bearing the legend

ARE YOU LUCKY?
You May Get a Package FREE

and distributed in the following manner:

The said packages of nuts retail at the price of 5 cents each, but three of said packages have within the wrapper or package a printed slip of paper bearing the word "Free" and thereby advising the purchaser thereof that the said package of nuts is given to him without cost. The said printed slips of paper are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until said packages have been opened and the said slips removed therefrom. The purchasers who procure said packages containing said printed slips thus procure the same without cost rather than at the regular retail price of 5 cents each. The fact as to whether the purchasers of said packages of nuts in said assortment procure the same without cost or pay the regular price of 5 cents each therefor, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said packages of nuts, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its products and the sale of said products by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of packages of nuts to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure packages of said nuts without cost. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute products in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method which is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its products and by the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's products in preference to products of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivelent methods, and, as a result thereof, substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitutes unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on December 31, 1940, issued, and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent H. W. Lay & Co., Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent H. W. Lay & Co. is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Tennessee, with its principal office and place of business located at 444 Marietta Street, Atlanta, Ga. Respondent is now and has been for more than 1 year last past engaged in the sale and distribution of food products to jobbers and retail dealers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, its products when sold to be shipped and transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Georgia to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 1 year last past a course of trade by said respondent in such food products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is, and has been, in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, assortments of nuts so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the purchasing and consuming public.

One of said assortments consists of 27 packages of nuts mounted on a display card bearing the legend

ARE YOU LUCKY?
You May Get a Package FREE.

and distributed in the following manner:

The said packages of nuts retail at the price of 5 cents each, but three of said packages have within the wrapper or package a printed slip of paper bearing the word "Free" and thereby advising the purchaser thereof that the said package of nuts is given to him without cost. The said printed slips of paper are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until said packages have been opened and the said slips removed therefrom. The purchasers who procure said packages containing said printed slips thus procure the same without cost rather than at the regular retail price of 5 cents each. The fact as to whether the purchasers of said packages of nuts in said assortment procure the same without cost or pay the regular price of 5 cents each therefor, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed various assortments of food products involving a lot or chance feature, but such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said packages of nuts, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its products and the sale of said products by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of packages of nuts to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure packages of said nuts without cost. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute products in competition with respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method which is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its products and by the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's products in preference to products of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and, as a result thereof, substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent H. W. Lay & Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agent, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of nuts or nut products, or any other merchandise, in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing nuts or nut products, or any other merchandise, so packed and assembled that sales of such nuts or nut products, or other merchandise, to the general public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of dealers, or others, assortments of packages of nuts or nut products, or other merchandise, which are to be used, or may be used, to conduct a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of such nuts or nut products to the public.

3. Packing or assembling in the same assortment packages of nuts or nut products, or other merchandise, for ultimate sale to the public, which individual packages of nuts or nut products, or other merchandise, are of uniform appearance, but some of which contain coupons or slips notifying the purchaser that said packages are furnished without cost;

4. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

NATIONAL INSTITUTE, INC., DOING BUSINESS AS DIESEL ENGINES TRAINING, AND CLAYTON R. HASTINGS, SETH E. ROWDABAUGH AND JOHN C. SMITH

Docket 3417. Complaint, May 12, 1938—Decision, June 30, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of correspondence courses of study and instruction in various subjects, including one on Diesel engines, in sale of which it operated under trade name "Diesel Engines Training"; the president and general manager thereof, who was also a stockholder and director, and formulated, directed, and controlled its policies and practices; and a second individual who was secretary and treasurer thereof and also a stockholder and director and, subject to general supervision of the other, in general charge of its office;

In offering their course of instruction on Diesel engines by distributing circulars through the mails or distributing agencies in various sections of the country, and through 80 or more salesmen, supplied with certificates of identification and sales kit containing promotional and sales literature, who contacted and solicited those sending in the postage prepaid postal cards with which circulars aforesaid were accompanied, bearing the printed request to "Please send me information on how to secure a JOB in the DIESEL MOTOR and ENGINE INDUSTRY in the shortest possible time"; without specifically disclosing, as a rule, that a correspondence course was being offered, but presenting the matter so as to make it appear that the prospect was being afforded opportunity to apply for Diesel engine training, with only a limited number of applicants accepted from the particular vicinity—

(a) Represented that because of the great increase in the use of Diesel engines during recent years, unusual and unprecedented opportunities for employment in their operation and maintenance were available to persons completing their said course of study, and that their school was able to and did obtain employment for its students upon completion of said course, and that employment was assured or guaranteed upon such completion;

(b) Represented that their salesmen soliciting prospective students were themselves representatives of Diesel engine manufacturers, that their course of study was offered by or in connection or cooperation with such manufacturers, and that employment would be given to prospective students by such manufacturers upon the completion of their said course of study; and

(c) Represented that employment would be provided the student while he was pursuing their course of study;

The facts being that, while there had been, during recent years, substantial increase in the use of Diesel engines, such increase did not open up any unusual field for employment in either manufacture or transportation, employees who theretofore operated the form of power displaced by the Diesel engines being made use of to operate the new engine or equipment; it was impossible for said corporation and individuals to obtain employment for any substantial number or percentage of their graduates, and employment in no event could be insured or guaranteed; none of their agents was a representative of Diesel engine manufacturers, nor was their course offered by or in connection with such manufacturers, and no employment was provided their students while pursuing the course of study;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to their course of study and the opportunities for employment afforded thereby, and to cause it to purchase the course as a result of such erroneous belief, with result that trade was diverted unfairly to them from their competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas and Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiners.

Mr. R. A. McOuat for the Commission.

Mr. Seth E. Rowdabaugh, of Warsaw, Ind., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that National Institute, Inc., a corporation, doing business under the name and style of Diesel Engines Training, and Clayton R. Hastings, Seth E. Rowdabaugh and John C. Smith, individually and as officers of said corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent National Institute, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Indiana with its office and principal place of business at 408 Western Reserve Building in the city of Muncie in said State. Respondent Clayton R. Hastings, is the president of said corporation, respondent Seth E. Rowdabaugh is its vice president, and respondent John C. Smith, is its secretary-treasurer. The address of said Seth E. Rowdabaugh is Warsaw, Ind., while the address of the other officers named is the same as that of respondent corporation.

PAR. 2. Respondent, National Institute, Inc., is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, engaged under the name and style of Diesel Engines Training, in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States of a course of study and instruction on the subject of Diesel engines, which said course of study and instruction is given and pursued through the medium of the United States mail supplemented in some cases by a short period of instruction at Muncie. Said respondent corporation, in the course and conduct of said business under the said trade name and during the time aforesaid, caused and does now cause its said course of study and instruction to be transported from its said place of business in Indiana to, into and through States of the United States other than Indiana to the various purchasers thereof in such other States. The individual respondents are managers and stockholders of the corporate respondent, and direct and control its sales policies and business activities. The individual respondents participated and cooperated in the acts and practices herein charged.

PAR. 3. During the time above mentioned other individuals, firms and corporations in various States of the United States have been and are engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of courses of study and instruction on the subject of Diesel engines as well as in other trade subjects and various other kinds of courses, all of which are pursued by correspondence. Said respondent corporation has been, during the time aforesaid, in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, in the sale of their said course of study and instruction with such other individuals, firms, and corporations.

PAR. 4. Said respondents, directly or through representatives and agents designated and appointed by respondent corporation under and by the supervision and direction of its said officers, have made many misrepresentations to prospective students in soliciting the sale of and in selling said course of study and instruction, among which are the following:

1. That there is a great demand for graduates of the school conducted by respondents as aforesaid and that employment is available and assured upon completion of the course offered.

2. That the school operated by respondents as aforesaid has working arrangements with manufacturers of Diesel engines and other business concerns to place its graduates in employment upon completion of the course.

3. That said school will secure employment for the prospect solicited in the Diesel industry upon completion of the course offered and that it does secure such employment for its graduates as a regular thing.

4. That a job is guaranteed upon completion of the course offered.

5. That the agent soliciting the prospective student is a representative of a Diesel engine manufacturer and that such manufacturer will furnish the course of instruction offered and also employment on completion of the course.

6. That employment will be provided the student while he is pursuing the course offered.

PAR. 5. Respondent corporation and its officers, the individual respondents herein, have contributed to the foregoing misrepresentations made by representatives of said school and to the effect thereof on prospective students by exaggerated and misleading statements and representations in the printed matter and advertising literature of said school. Among such statements have been the following:

A great field is opening up in DIESEL MOTORS AND ENGINES . . .

DIESEL POWER is sweeping the world . . .

Now, due to the fast development of DIESEL POWER, a number of companies in the DIESEL MOTOR INDUSTRY are cooperating with us to prepare and recommend men to install, supervise, and maintain Diesel equipment . . .

Please send me information on how to secure a JOB in the DIESEL MOTOR and ENGINE INDUSTRY in the shortest possible time.

The misleading effects of the representations above quoted and of the misrepresentations made by the agents of said school are further aggravated and enhanced by the use of the name "Diesel Engines Tr." on the printed matter used by said school by means of which the nature of the business conducted by respondents is made ambiguous.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact there are no unusual demands for men with training such as that offered by respondents in the field for which such training is offered. Such demands as may exist in such field are met in great part by employers by placing men already in their employ in the openings that arise and training them in the work involved. Such opportunities as may exist for men who take respondents' training or training of similar kind and grade are in the field of mechanics, operating engineers, or trades where the pay involved is not in the so-called "big pay" field and in which the pay is comparable to that of mechanics, minor operating engineers, trades and the like. Employment is not generally available, nor is there any unusual number of new employees in the field for which respondents offer training, nor is such employment assured to the graduates of the school conducted by respondents. Respondents have no working arrangements with manufacturers of Diesel engines by which such manufacturers give employment to any appreciable number of the graduates of said school and no employment is furnished as a general thing to the graduates of said school upon completion of their courses. The school conducted by respondents does not guarantee jobs to its graduates and representations to that effect by the agents of said school are false and unwarranted. The sales agents employed by said school do not represent any manufacturer, nor is the course offered given in connection with any manufacturing establishment engaged in the manufacture of Diesel engines or kindred products. Neither is employment furnished while students are pursuing their courses by correspondence.

PAR. 7. The foregoing representations used by respondents as aforesaid in offering for sale and selling said course of study and instruction have had and now have the tendency and capacity to and do in fact mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations as set out in paragraphs 4 and 5 hereof are true, and to induce them to purchase the said course of study and instruction on account thereof. Thereby trade is diverted unfairly to the school conducted by respondents from competitors engaged in the sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of correspondence courses intended for preparing students thereof for various trades, positions, professions, and calling, including courses of the same general kind as that offered by the school conducted by respondents.

There are among the competitors of the school conducted by respondents those who in the sale of their respective courses of study and instruction do not similarly or in any manner misrepresent the same or matters pertaining thereto. As a result of respondents' said practices, as herein set forth, substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of the competitors of the school conducted by respondents and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 12, 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, National Institute, Inc., a corporation doing business under the name and style of Diesel Engines Training, and Clayton R. Hastings, Seth E. Rowdabaugh and John C. Smith, individually and as officers of said corporation, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by R. A. McOuat, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Seth E. Rowdabaugh, attorney for the respondents, before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and the testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and the exceptions thereto, and brief in support of the complaint (respondents not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent National Institute, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Indiana, with its office and principal place of business located at 408 Western Reserve Building, Muncie, Ind. Said respondent is now, and since 1936 has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of correspondence courses of study and instruction in various subjects, including a course on Diesel engines. In selling its course on Diesel engines said respondent operates under the trade name Diesel Engines Training.

In the course and conduct of its business said respondent causes, and since 1936 has caused, its courses of study, when sold, to be transmitted from its place of business in the State of Indiana through the United States mails to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said respondent maintains, and since 1936 has maintained, a course of trade in its courses of study in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Said respondent is now, and since 1936 has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of correspondence courses of study and instruction similar to the courses conducted by said respondent.

PAR. 3. Respondent Clayton R. Hastings is president and general manager of the corporate respondent and is also a stockholder and director in the corporation. He is in general charge of the operation of the business and formulates, directs, and controls the policies and practices of the corporation. The mailing address of said respondent is the same as that of the corporate respondent.

Respondent John C. Smith is secretary and treasurer of the corporation and is a stockholder and director therein. He is also the office manager of the corporation and, subject to the general supervision of respondent Hastings, is in general charge of the corporation's office. He has participated actively in the conduct of the business and in the practices of the corporation. The mailing address of said respondent is the same as that of the corporate respondent.

The corporate respondent and respondents Clayton R. Hastings and John C. Smith have all acted in conjunction and cooperation in carrying out the acts and practices hereinafter described.

Respondent Seth E. Rowdabaugh is vice president of the corporate respondent and is also its attorney. The Commission finds however that said respondent has had no active part in the business activities of the corporate respondent, and has not participated actively in the methods or practices hereinafter described. The postoffice address of said respondent is Warsaw, Ind.

The term "respondents" as hereinafter used will, unless the contrary is indicated, apply only to the corporate respondent and respondents Clayton R. Hastings and John C. Smith.

PAR. 4. Respondents offer primarily two courses of instructions, the first known as Diesel Engines Training and the second as Air Conditioning and Refrigeration Training. Formerly a civil service course of study was also offered but this was discontinued. Ordinarily, about 2,000 students are enrolled in the course in Diesel engines training. Respondents employ approximately 25 salaried employees, including five instructors in Diesel engines training.

PAR. 5. For the purpose of selling their course of instruction on Diesel engines, the respondents have organized numerous sales districts throughout the United States, with a district manager or superintendent in charge of each district. In the home office of respondents there is a general sales manager who has supervision over the district managers. The district managers are primarily charged with the employing of salesmen or solicitors to sell the courses of study, but the employing of all salesmen is subject to the approval and general supervision of the home office in Muncie, Ind., and all salesmen are under the general supervision and control of the respondents from the home office. Respondents presently have in their employ some 80 or more salesmen selling the course in Diesel training. As soon as a salesman is employed he is supplied by the respondents with a certificate of identification, and is also supplied with a sales kit containing various promotional and sales literature, including articles on Diesel engines, samples of the lessons supplied to students by the respondents, etc.

The course of study in Diesel engines training comprises 33 lessons to be studied by correspondence, together with 2 weeks training in respondents' place of business in Muncie, Ind. Eight to 12 months are usually required for the completion of the course. The cost of the course of instruction is $165.00, of which a small amount, usually $10.00, is paid by the student at the time he subscribes for the course. The remaining amount is paid in monthly installments. All salesmen of the respondents work entirely on a commission basis. They are allowed to retain a percentage of the down payment, and as subsequent payments are made by the students a part of such payments is paid over to the salesman by the respondents or credited to the salesman's account.

PAR. 6. The evidence shows, and the Commission finds, that the plan or method pursued by the respondents in the sale of their course of instruction on Diesel engines is substantially as follows: The first step in the sales campaign is the distribution of a circular among prospective purchasers of the course, this distribution being made by respondents through the mails or by means of distributing agencies located in various sections of the country. The circular bears the signature "Diesel Engines Tr." and originally read as follows:

IT TAKES POWER TO GET AHEAD

If you are dissatisfied with your chances of getting ahead and are anxious to do something about it, here is the solution to your problem. A great field is opening up in DIESEL MOTORS AND ENGINES for ambitious men between the ages of 18 and 50 who are mechanically inclined. DIESEL POWER is sweeping the world, and why shouldn't it? It is the most economical power known to man. Diesel engines will burn the very poorest grade of oil with relatively high efficiency.

For these and many other reasons, Diesel Power is rapidly and surely replacing every other form of power, and it is destined in a few years to be the PRIME motive power for driving generators, automobiles, airplanes, locomotives, trucks, buses, tractors, steamships, hoists, cranes, as well as a great many other kinds of machinery. Now, due to the fast development of Diesel Power, we are cooperating with various corporations to prepare and recommend men to install, supervise, and maintain Diesel equipment. Do you want one of these jobs? We must have men right away, or corporations that are promoting the Diesel industry will be seriously delayed. They cannot hope to make progress unless men are available who understand Diesel engineering. That is why we are making such an effort to fulfill our part in developing competent men for these jobs. Now, don't say you have never had a chance to get a good job if you fail to send in the enclosed card.

Therefore, it is reasonable to believe that those men who enter this great and fast growing industry will ultimately reach a goal that will surpass all others. All that it is necessary for you to do to find out how you may secure one of these positions that are open to you in this field is to fill out the enclosed card and drop it in the mail box. The card doesn't even require a stamp. DON'T DELAY! Send in this card AT ONCE.

After this circular had been in use for a year or more, respondents made certain changes in its language, but the substance remained essentially the same.

The circular is in all instances accompanied by a postal card on which postage is prepaid by respondents, and which is to be filled out and signed by those desiring further information with respect to Diesel Engines Training. The pertinent portion of this card reads as follows:

Please send me information on how to secure a JOB in the DIESEL MOTOR and ENGINE INDUSTRY in the shortest possible time.

When the card is received at the respondents' office in Muncie, Ind., the name of the sender, together with his address and other pertinent information, is forwarded by the respondents to the particular sales district in which the prospect resides, and this information is turned over to one of respondents' salesmen, who proceeds to contact the prospect and undertake to sell him the course of instruction.

PAR. 7. The record contains the testimony of numerous persons residing in various sections of the United States who were solicited by respondents' agents, and many of whom purchased the course of study as a result of such solicitation. The testimony of these witnesses shows, and the Commission finds, that among the statements and representations made by respondents through their agents to prospective purchasers were the following:

1. That because of the great increase in the use of Diesel engines during recent years, unusual and unprecedented opportunities for employment in the operation and maintenance of such engines are available to persons completing respondents' course of study.

2. That respondents' school is able to and does in fact obtain employment for its students upon completion of the course of study, and that employment is in fact assured or guaranteed upon completion of such course.

3. That the agents or salesmen soliciting prospective students are themselves representatives of Diesel engine manufacturers, that respondents' course of study is offered by or in connection or cooperation with such manufacturers, and that employment will be given to prospective students by such manufacturers upon the completion of respondents' course of study.

4. That employment will be provided the student while he is pursuing respondents' course of study.

The Commission further finds that the effect of certain of these oral representations made by the respondents through their agents was increased and accentuated by the circular referred to above. Especially is this true as to the representation with respect to the unusual opportunties for employment existing in the Diesel engine field for persons completing respondents' course of study, and the representation that respondents' course of study is offered by or in connection or cooperation with manufacturers of Diesel engines.

PAR. 8. No specific reference is made by respondents in either their circular or the postal card which accompanies it to a correspondence course of study, nor do respondents' agents usually disclose to the prospective purchaser that they are undertaking to sell such prospect a correspondence course of study. Rather, the matter is presented to the prospect in such manner as to make it appear that the prospect is being afforded an opportunity to "apply" for Diesel engine training. The prospect is frequently told by the agent that only a certain number of applicants for the training can be accepted from that particular vicinity. The document presented to the prospect for execution begins with the sentence, "Please accept my application for your complete Diesel engine training." This document however is, in fact, a contract under which the prospect subscribes for respondents' correspondence course of study and agrees to pay a stipulated amount therefor.

PAR. 9. The evidence shows, and the Commission finds, that while there has been during recent years a substantial increase in the use of Diesel engines, such increase has not resulted in opening up any unusual field for employment. The testimony of competent experts introduced as witnesses at the instance of the Commission discloses that almost invariably a Diesel engine purchased by a manufacturing plant simply takes the place of some other form of power formerly used by the purchaser, and that usually the employees who formerly operated the old equipment are used to operate the Diesel engine. After a limited amount of instruction such employees are fully capable of operating the Diesel engine, and it is usually unnecessary that any new persons be employed.

This is true in the field of transportation as well as in the field of manufacture. When a railroad changes from steam or some other form of motive power to Diesel engines, the same train crews who operated the old equipment are almost invariably used on the Diesel trains. Likewise, concerns substituting Diesel engines for gasoline engines in the operation of motor trucks and buses use their old employees to operate the new equipment. Usually an employee who has operated a truck or bus propelled by a gasoline motor is equally as competent to operate a truck or bus propelled by a Diesel engine. Shop crews who have maintained old equipment are ordinarily retained to maintain the Diesel equipment.

The Commission therefore finds that there is no factual basis for respondents' representation that great and unusual opportunities for employment in the Diesel engine field are open to graduates of respondents' school. While respondents may have been able, in exceptional cases, to find employment for a few of their graduates, it is impossible for respondents to obtain employment for any substantial number or percentage of their graduates. In no event can employment be assured or guaranteed.

The Commission further finds that none of respondents' agents or salesmen are representatives of Diesel engine manufacturers, nor is respondents' course of study offered by or in connection or cooperation with such manufacturers. No employment is provided respondents' students while they are pursuing the course of study.

PAR. 10. The Commission therefore finds that the representations made by the respondents through their advertising literature and through their agents and salesmen, as aforesaid, are grossly exaggerated, false, deceptive, and misleading.

PAR. 11. The Commission further finds that the use by the respondents of the acts and practices herein described has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to respondents' course of study and the opportunities for employment afforded thereby, and to cause such portion of the public to purchase respondents' course of study and instruction as a result of the erroneous and mistaken belief engendered by the respondents. In consequence, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of respondents National Institute, Inc., Clayton R. Hastings and John C. Smith, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the trial examiners upon the evidence and the exceptions thereto, and brief filed by R. A. McOuat, attorney for the Commission (no brief having been filed by respondents and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that certain of the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondents National Institute, Inc., a corporation, trading as Diesel Engines Training, or trading under any other name, its officers, and Clayton R. Hastings and John C. Smith, individually and as officers of said corporation, and said respondents' representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of their course of study or instruction on Diesel engines, do fourthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. That unusual or unprecedented opportunities for employment in the Diesel engine field are available to persons completing respondents' course of study.

2. That respondents obtain employment for their students upon the completion of respondents' course of study, or that employment is assured or guaranteed to such students.

3. That respondents' agents or salesmen are representatives of Diesel engine manufacturers.

4. That respondents' course of study is offered by or in connection or cooperation with Diesel engine manufacturers, or that employment will be given to respondents' students by such manufacturers.

5. That employment will be provided respondents' students while they are pursuing said course of study.

It is further ordered, That said respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That this proceeding be, and it hereby is, dismissed as to respondent Seth E. Rowdabaugh.

IN THE MATTER OF

ISIDORE HALPERIN AND MORRIS ORENSTEIN TRADING AS WELLWORTH SALES COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3470. Complaint, June 30, 1938—Decision, June 30, 1941

Where two individuals engaged in the competitive interstate sale and distribution of watches, cameras, china and silverware, clocks, cigarette lighters, jewelry, cosmetics, bedding, kitchenware, and other articles of merchandise—

(a) Made use of sales plan or method involving distribution of advertising or sales circulars and pull cards to prospective customers or representatives to induce them to sell said merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, under a plan by which the particular article of merchandise received by customer and price paid therefor were determined and disclosed by pull card tab selected and detached by him, and operator of card, after selling all articles listed thereon and remitting amounts charged therefor to said individuals, who thereupon shipped him the merchandise thus sold, was compensated by an article which they included for him as a premium, or at his option, by deduction of cash premium from amount remitted; and thus, notwithstanding inconsistent and subterfuge "NOTICE TO PURCHASERS" on said pull tab device, advising customer of privilege of buying given article at price shown, or declining it,—

Supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale and distribution of their said merchandise in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, involving game of chance to procure an article of merchandise at much less than its normal price, contrary to established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws, and in competition with many who, unwilling to use such or other method contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by their said sales method and by the element of chance involved therein and were thereby induced to buy and sell their merchandise in preference to that of their said competitors, whereby trade was unfairly diverted from such competitors to them;

(b) Made such false and misleading representations and statements in aforesaid advertising circulars as "Free gifts—valuable premiums without cost to you" and "Two extra surprise gifts free"; facts being that none of their articles of merchandise designated as premiums or gifts was given away "free," but instead was delivered as compensation for services rendered; the price thereof was included in that of other articles of merchandise which representatives had to sell, or procure the sale of, before receiving such premiums or gifts; and, for a number of premiums, certain sums of money had to be paid in addition to services rendered; and

(c) Made such false and misleading representations and statements therein as "42 pce. well-known silver tableware"; when in fact their merchandise designated as "silver tableware" was not made of solid silver, but of metal plated with silver;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of their products as a result of such erroneous belief, whereby trade was unfairly diverted from their competitors to them:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and their competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.

Mr. D. C. Daniel and Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr., for the Commission.

Nash & Donnelly, of Washington, D. C., and Mr. Arthur D. Herrick, of New York City, for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Isidore Halperin and Morris Orenstein, individually and trading as Wellworth Sales Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Isidore Halperin and Morris Orenstein, are copartners trading under the name of Wellworth Sales Co., with their principal office and place of business located at 46 East Broadway, New York, N. Y. Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of watches, cameras, china and silverware, clocks, cigaret lighters, jewelry, cosmetics, bedding, kitchenware, and other articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said products when sold to be shipped or transported from their place of business aforesaid to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are in competition with other individuals and partnerships and with corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

A portion of said sales circular consists of a list on which there are designated a number of items of merchandise and the prices thereof. Adjacent to the list is printed and set out a device commonly called a pull card. Said pull card consists of a number of tabs, under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached a tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them, but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values the regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise, as compared to the price the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles, induces members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid for same. The fact as to whether a purchaser of one of said pull card tabs receives an article which has greater value and a higher regular price than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said articles of merchandise a purchaser is to receive, and the amount of money which a purchaser is required to pay, are determined wholly by lot or chance.

When the person or representative operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all of the tabs or chances, collected the amounts called for, and remitted the said sums to the respondents, the said respondents thereupon ship to said representative the merchandise designated on said card, together with a premium for the representative as compensation for operating the pull card and selling the said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchasers of tabs from said pull card in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.

Respondents sell and distribute and have sold and distributed various assortments of said merchandise and furnish and have furnished various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plan or method varies in detail but the the above described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondents furnish the said pull cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondents' merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said method in the sale of their merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and which is in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the apparent normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method, or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondents' said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has the capacity and tendency to, and does, unfairly divert trade and custom to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their business, as hereinabove related, respondents cause and have caused various false, deceptive and misleading statements to appear in their advertising matter as aforesaid, of which the following are examples but are not all-inclusive:

Free Gifts—Valuable Premiums without cost to you

Select any gift from this folder that you desire. It will be yours at absolutely no cost

2 extra surprise gifts free
FREE—Choice of one of these extraordinary values—FREE

Others of said statements and representations appearing in respondents' said advertising matter are as follows:

All shipping charges are paid by us
We prepay all shipping charges right to your door
42 pce. well known silver tableware

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact, none of respondents' so-called premiums or gifts are given away "free" or without cost, but said premiums or gifts, which are represented as being "free" to said representatives, are either purchased with labor by them or the price of said premiums or gifts is included in the price of other articles of merchandise which the representatives must sell or procure the sale of before said premiums or gifts can be procured by them. For a number of premiums or gifts certain sums of money must be paid by said representatives in addition to the labor performed or services rendered. Respondents do not pay all shipping charges on their said products, but said representatives are required to pay certain specified sums of money as shipping charges on a number of respondents' said articles of merchandise.

When the word "silver" is used in describing a product, the purchasing public understands it to mean that the product is made of solid silver. The use of the word "silver" by respondents in describing their said tableware causes, and has caused, the purchasing public to believe that said tableware is made of solid silver. Respondents' said "silver" tableware is not made of solid silver, but, on the contrary, is made of inferior metal plated with silver.

PAR. 7. The use by respondents of the false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations set forth herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements and representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of said respondents' products as a result of such erroneous belief. There are, among the competitors of respondents as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who do not make such false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations concerning their products. By the statements and representations aforesaid, trade is unfairly diverted to respondents from such competitors, and, as a result thereof, substantial injury is being done, and has been done, by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on June 30, A. D., 1938, issued and subsequently served its complaint upon the respondents, Isidore Halperin and Morris Orenstein, individually and trading as Wellworth Sales Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by D. C. Daniel and L. P. Allen, Jr., attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Horace J. Donnelly, attorney for the respondents, before Randolph Preston, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and exceptions filed thereto, brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed by the respondents or oral argument requested), and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents Isidore Halperin and Morris Orenstein are copartners trading under the name Wellworth Sales Co., with their principal office and place of business located at 46 East Broadway, New York, N. Y. Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of watches, cameras, china and silverware, clocks, cigarette lighters, jewelry, cosmetics, bedding, kitchenware, and other articles of merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause, and have caused, said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their said business the respondents are engaged in competition with other individuals and partnerships and with corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business the respondents distribute advertising or sales circulars by the United States mails to prospective customers or representatives located in various States of the United States, for the purpose of inducing such customers to sell respondents' merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme commonly known as a pull card device. These circulars contain pictorial representations and descriptive matter with reference to merchandise offered as compensation for the sale of certain of respondents' merchandise, which merchandise is likewise described by pictorial representations, and otherwise, on said circulars. Each of said circulars contains what is commonly known as a pull card device.

Said pull card device consists of a number of tabs, under each of which are concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers and prospective purchasers are unable to ascertain which articles of merchandise they are to receive or the prices to be paid therefor until after the tabs are separated or removed from the said pull tab device. Adjacent to said device there is a list of the articles of merchandise and the prices thereof corresponding to the various articles of merchandise and the prices thereof, as concealed under said tabs. When a purchaser has detached a tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have retail values and regular prices greater than the prices so designated for them but are distributed to the consumer or purchaser for the price designated on the tab which he pulls or removes from said device. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise as compared to the prices the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles of merchandise induces members of the purchasing or consuming public to select and pull the tabs in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid therefor.

The specific article which the purchaser receives, the amount of money which is required to be paid, and the obtaining of an article of greater value than the prices designated therefor are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

When the person or representative operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all of the articles of merchandise listed under said tabs and has collected the amounts charged therefor, such sum is then remitted to the respondents and the respondents thereupon ship to said representative the merchandise sold by means of said device by said representative, together with a premium for the representative as compensation for operating the device and selling and distributing the said merchandise. Such premium is selected by said representative from articles of merchandise picturized in said sales or advertising circular. If the said representative so desires, he may deduct a cash premium in lieu of said merchandise premium. Said representative delivers the articles of merchandise to the purchaser thereof in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were removed or detached from the device as above described. The advertising circular containing such pull card device contains all of the instructions which are given to the representative for the operation of said pull card device and the obtaining of the merchandise and premiums from the respondents.

Immediately above said pull tab device, there appears the following:

NOTICE TO PURCHASERS—On the back of each slip is printed the price of an article. If after deliberation you decide that you want to buy the article pay the holder of this book the price shown on slip. If you do not want the article, you need not buy it.

The Commission finds that regardless of said notice the said articles of merchandise have been, and are, in fact, sold and distributed by means of said pull card device in accordance with the sales plan or method hereinabove described. The successful operation of respondents' sales plan is dependent upon the ability of the operator to sell all the articles listed so as to permit remittance of the required amount to the respondents in order to obtain the merchandise purchased. The purchaser knows the articles listed and the price to be paid therefor before he selects and removes the tab from the pull tab device. The element of chance is the amount of money to be expended and the specific article to be purchased. The operation of the plan strictly in accordance with the above "Notice to Purchasers" would not tend to net the operator a return sufficient to warrant completion of the plan and would thereby make the plan inoperative, and to this extent such notice is merely a subterfuge.

Furthermore, all the instructions received by the representative or operator are contained in the advertising circular forwarded by the respondents, and there is no direction as to what should be done in the event all of the articles of merchandise are not sold or information as to the premium or compensation which can be obtained by such representative or operator in the event a purchaser refuses to accept the article listed on the tab removed from the pull tab device. Instead, said circulars contain the following or some similar instruction:

You collect the purchase price from your friend and after you have sold the 23 articles in this manner detach and fill out the order blank and mail it to us with the $7.99 you have collected. Immediately upon receipt of your order we will send you the 23 articles, as well as your reward gift. The prices of the 23 articles range from 9¢ to 39¢—no more.

The order blank usually furnished by the respondents reads in part as follows:

After you have sold the 23 articles of merchandise and collected $7.99 fill out this blank stating the correct number of premiums you have selected * * *. Please ship at once, all charges prepaid, the 23 articles of merchandise I sold amounting to $7.99 and one of the valuable premiums.

PAR. 4. The Commission finds that the persons or representatives to whom respondents have furnished or distributed said sales or advertising circulars, containing said pull card device, use, and have used, the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondents' merchandise in accordance with the sales plan or method hereinabove described. Respondents have thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale and distribution of their said merchandise in accordance with the sales plan or method hereinabove described. Such merchandise has thus been sold or distributed by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, and respondents have reaped the benefits therefrom. The use by the respondents of said sales plan or method in the sale of their merchandise, and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 5. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the apparent normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with respondents in commerce among and between the various states of the United States are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or a sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondents' said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above described and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has a capacity and tendency to, and does, unfairly divert trade to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

PAR. 6. In addition to the acts and practices hereinabove described, the respondents also cause, and have caused, various false, deceptive, and misleading statements to appear in their various advertising circulars, of which the following are typical examples:

Free gifts—valuable premiums without cost to you.

Select any gift from this folder that you desire. It will be yours at absolutely no cost.

2 extra surprise gifts free.

FREE—Choice of one of these extraordinary values—FREE.

42 pce. well known silver tableware.

PAR. 7. The statements and representations hereinabove set out are false, deceptive, and misleading. None of respondents' articles of merchandise designated as premiums or gifts are given away "free," but, instead, said articles of merchandise which are represented as being "free" to said representatives are in fact delivered as compensation for services rendered, and the price thereof is included in the price of other articles of merchandise which the representatives must sell, or procure the sale of, before said premiums or gifts can be procured by them. For a number of premiums or gifts certain sums of money must be paid by said representative in addition to the labor performed or services rendered.

Respondents' merchandise designated as "silver tableware" is not made of solid silver but on the contrary is made of metal plated with silver.

PAR. 8. The use by the respondents of the false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations as set forth herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements and representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' products as the result of such erroneous belief, and as a result trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondents from their competitors who are likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondents, Isidore Halperin and Morris Orenstein, individuals trading as Wellworth Sales Co. or under any other trade name, and their respective agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of watches, cameras, china, silverware, clocks, cigarette lighters, jewelry, cosmetics, bedding, kitchenware and other articles of merchandise in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others pull cards or other devices which are to be used, or may be used, in the sale or distribution of said merchandise to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme;

2. Shipping, mailing, or transporting to agents or distributors or to members of the public, pull cards or other devices which are to be used, or may be used, in the sale or distribution of said merchandise to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme;

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme;

4. Using the term "free" or any other term of similar import or meaning to describe or refer to goods, wares, or merchandise which are given as compensation for services rendered;

5. Using the unqualified term "silver" to designate or describe tableware or other articles of merchandise which are only plated with silver.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

J. M. TAYLOR CO., INC., AND SAMUEL NITKE, CHARLES MYERS, AND ISADORE STEIN

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3567. Complaint, Aug. 31, 1938—Decision, June 30, 1941

Where an individual, acting through a corporate instrumentality engaged in the competitive interstate sale and distribution of electric razors, clocks, electric mixers, traveling bags, pen and pencil sets, Glolite lighters, highball glasses, and other articles of merchandise—

Furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involved the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise was sold or distributed to the ultimate consumer wholly by lot or chance, and distribution by mail and other means of certain literature and instructions including, among other things, push cards, for use, as typical, under a sales plan providing that a purchaser paid from 1 cent to 25 cents depending on the number disclosed by disk chosen, and that the person who, by chance, selected that 1 of 30 feminine names on card corresponding to name concealed under card's large master seal received a set of "6 Strip Tease Highball Glasses, valued at $7.50," as did the operator; and thus

Supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise, in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, involving game of chance to procure an article at much less than usual price thereof, contrary to established public policy of the United States Government, and in violation of criminal laws, and in competition with many who, unwilling to use such or other method contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by his said sales plan and the element of chance involved therein and were thereby induced to buy and sell his merchandise in preference to that of his said competitors, and trade was unfairly diverted to it from them:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and his competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

COMPLAINT

Inc., a corporation, and Samuel Nitke, Charles Myers, and Isadore Stein, individuals, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, J. M. Taylor Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its principal office and place of business located at 358 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Respondent, Samuel Nitke, an individual, is sole owner of J. M. Taylor Co., Inc. Respondent, Charles Myers, is an individual, and an employee of the corporate respondent. Respondent, Isadore Stein, is an individual, and is in charge of the actual operation of the business of the corporate respondent as an employee of said corporation. Respondents, Samuel Nitke and Charles Myers, formulate, control, and direct the practices and policies of J. M. Taylor Co., Inc. All of individual respondents have their offices at the same address as corporate respondent. Said respondents act together with and in cooperation with each other in doing the acts and things hereinabove alleged. Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of electric razors, clocks, electric mixers, traveling bags, pen and pencil sets, Glolite lighters, highball glasses, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business aforesaid to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade by said respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are and have been in competition with other corporations and individuals, and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof respondents, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing their merchandise in commerce, furnish and have furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The method or sales plan adopted and used by respondents was and is substantially as follows:

Respondents distribute and have distributed to the purchasing public in commerce certain literature and instructions including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, illustrations of their said products, and circulars explaining respondents plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards. One of respondents' push cards bear 30 feminine names with ruled columns on the reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 30 small, partially perforated disks on the face of which is printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically on the reverse side of the card. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal, and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the reverse side of said card. The push card bears legends or instructions as follows:

Name Under Seal Receives

6 STRIP TEASE HIGHBALL GLASSES

EACH GLASS DIFFERENT — $7.50 Value

(Cut) — This is what you see on the outside of the glass.

This is what happens when you turn the glass around or take a peep inside. — (Cut)

BE FIRST IN YOUR CROWD

A Floor Show In Every Drink

Numbers Under 25 Pay What You Draw
Numbers Over 25 Pay Only 25¢—No Higher

Respondents furnish said representatives with additional instructions to be used in connection with said push cards, some of which are as follows:

HOW TO OBTAIN YOUR STRIP TEASE GLASSES

This card consists of girls' names—beneath each name is a concealed number which shows the amount the person selecting that particular name is to pay for participating in this opportunity.

These concealed numbers range from 1 to 25. All numbers over 25 pay 25¢ only. For instance, if you punch number 1 you pay 1¢. If you punch number 10 you pay 10¢. If you punch number 25 you pay only 25¢. Remember, you pay nothing higher than 25¢—25¢ is the maximum cost (total $6.45).

When all names have been punched, you then remove the large seal and disclose the winner—the person who punched the corresponding name is awarded One (1) set of 6 Strip Tease Highball Glasses, valued at $7.50.

And, for your efforts, you also receive one set of 6 Strip Tease Highball Glasses, valued at $7.50.

Upon receipt of your order (see other side) with the $6.45, remittance (or we will ship C. O. D., F. O. B., New York), we will immediately ship you TWO (2) sets of 6 glasses in each (total 12 glasses), One (1) set or 6 glasses of which may be given the holder of the name under the large seal—the other set of 6 may be retained by you.

Sales of respondents' products by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above-described legends and instructions. Said prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legends and instructions. The said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lottery or chance.

Respondents furnish and have furnished various push cards, accompanied by said order blanks, instructions, and other printed matter, for use in the sale and distribution of their merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said push cards is the same as the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondents furnish the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondents' merchandise, in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said sales plan or method in the sale of their merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on August 31, A. D. 1938, issued and subsequently served its complaint upon the respondents, J. M. Taylor Co., Inc., a corporation, and Samuel Nitke, Charles Myers, and Isadore Stein, individuals, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by D. C. Daniel and L. P. Allen, Jr., attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by H. J. Donnelly, Jr., attorney for the respondents J. M. Taylor Co., Inc., and Samuel Nitke, before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answers thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiners upon the evidence and exceptions filed thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto and oral argument before the Commission, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Samuel Nitke is an individual having a place of business at 345 West Eighty-sixth Street, New York City, N. Y. On or about December 15, 1937, said respondent caused a corporation to be organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey known as J. M. Taylor Co., Inc., with its principal place of business at 358 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y., all the capital stock of which corporation being owned and controlled by said respondent Samuel Nitke. No meetings of stockholders were ever held or officers or directors elected for said corporation. Subsequent thereto, on October 7, 1938, said corporation was formally dissolved.

During the period of December 15, 1937, to October 7, 1938, said respondent, acting by and through said corporation J. M. Taylor Co., Inc., was engaged in the sale and distribution of electric razors, clocks, electric mixers, traveling bags, pen and pencil sets, Glolite lighters, highball glasses, and other articles of merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said respondent caused said products, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States. During the times mentioned herein, respondent has maintained a course of trade in said articles of merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his said business respondent has been in competition with other individuals and corporations and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like and similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his said business in soliciting the sale of and selling and distributing said merchandise in commerce, respondent furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involved the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, by which said merchandise was sold or distributed to the ultimate consumer thereof wholly by lot or chance. The method or sales plan adopted and used by said respondent was and is substantially as follows:

During the times mentioned herein said respondent distributed by United States mails and by other means in commerce, certain literature and instructions, including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, illustrations of his said products, and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling merchandise and allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards. One of respondent's push cards contained 30 feminine names, with ruled columns on the reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card had 30 small partially perforated disks, on the face of which was printed one of the feminine names printed alphabetically on the reverse side of the card. Concealed within each disk was a number, which was disclosed when the disk was pushed or separated from the card. The push card also had a large master seal, and concealed within the master seal was one of the feminine names appearing on the reverse side of said card. The push card bore legends or instructions as follows:

Name Under Seal Receives
6 STRIP TEASE HIGHBALL GLASSES
EACH GLASS DIFFERENT

$7.50 Value

(Cut) This is what you see on the outside of the glass.

This is what happens when you turn the glass around or take a peep inside. (Cut)

BE FIRST IN YOUR CROWD
A Floor Show In Every Drink

Numbers Under 25 Pay What you Draw
Numbers Over 25 Pay Only 25¢—No Higher

Respondent furnished said representatives with additional instructions to be used in connection with said push cards, some of which were as follows:

HOW TO OBTAIN YOUR STRIP TEASE GLASSES

This card consists of girls' names—beneath each name is a concealed number which shows the amount the person selecting that particular name is to pay for participating in this opportunity.

These concealed numbers range from 1 to 25. All numbers over 25 pay 25¢ only. For instance, if you punch number 1 you pay 1¢. If you punch number 10 you pay 10¢. If you punch number 25 you pay only 25¢. Remember, you pay nothing higher than 25¢—25¢ is the maximum cost (total $6.45).

When all names have been punched, you then remove the large seal and disclose the winner—the person who punched the corresponding name is awarded One (1) set of 6 Strip Tease Highball Glasses, valued at $7.50.

And, for your efforts, you also receive one set of 6 Strip Tease Highball Glasses, valued at $7.50.

Upon receipt of your order (see other side) with the $6.45, remittance (or we will ship C. O. D., F. O. B., New York), we will immediately ship you

TWO (2) sets of 6 glasses in each (total 12 glasses), One (1) set or 6 glasses of which may be given the holder of the name under the large seal—the other set of 6 may be retained by you.

Sales of respondent's products by means of said push cards were made in accordance with the above described legends and instructions. Said prizes or premiums were allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legends and instructions. The said articles of merchandise were thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lottery or chance.

Respondent furnished various push cards, accompanied by said order blanks, instructions and other printed matter, for use in the sale and distribution of his merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said push cards was the same as the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 4. The persons to whom respondent furnished the said push cards used the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise, in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 5. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

PAR. 6. The Commission further finds that there is no evidence that the respondents Charles Myers and Isadora Stein actively participated in the acts and practices charged in the complaint.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent Samuel Nitke, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of electric razors, clocks, electric mixers, traveling bags, pen and pencil sets, Glolite lighters, highball glasses, and other articles of merchandise in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, push cards or other devices which are to be used, or may be used, in the sale or distribution of said merchandise to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Shipping, mailing, or transporting to members of the purchasing public push cards or other devices which are to be used, or may be used, in the sale or distribution of said merchandise to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the complaint be dismissed as to the respondents J. M. Taylor Co., Inc., a corporation, and Charles Myers and Isadore Stein, individuals.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

PINE HILL LIME & STONE COMPANY, ET AL., AND HAL S. COVERT

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3591. Complaint, July 29, 1939 [1]—Decision, June 30, 1941

Where some 19 corporations and an individual, which produced a majority of the lime of all kinds and grades produced in the southeastern part of the United States, and somewhat less than a majority of the lime there sold, and, to the extent that they acted collusively, dominated the market for lime in the section in question; acting in concert with one another and through their paid secretary, who had represented them and others as district secretary under the National Recovery Administration, and, following the invalidation of the National Industrial Recovery Act, sought to carry on for them the system of non-competitive prices embodied in the Code for the industry;

Engaged in an unlawful combination and conspiracy among themselves with intent and effect of substantially suppressing and frustrating competition as to price and otherwise in the sale of lime in commerce among the various States in which they did business, and in furtherance of said end—

(1) Continued in effect among themselves aforesaid system of non-competitive delivered prices which was designed to, and in many instances did, prevent differences in the cost of freight delivery between various producers' plants and the respective places of delivery from creating any advantage to purchasers in delivered cost, irrespective of the producer involved, and which system was predicated upon the use of a number of basing points whereby all delivered prices were calculated as though shipments were made by rail from a single basing point, or points having the same freight rate, to respective destinations;

(2) Employed and operated a cooperative system of filing and exchanging, through said secretary, the base prices applicable to the respective basing points, it being understood and agreed among them that quotations and sales would be made only on a delivered price basis by adding to such common mill base price the rail freight on lime so shipped from the applicable basing point to destination, and thereby in effect carried over and continued in operation practices which had been carried on under the said N. R. A. Code, said secretary undertaking to carry out, so far as he was able, the services which he had rendered as district secretary under the N. R. A., and said various producers agreeing to send to his office their published quotations f. o. b. their respective plants, which he distributed along with other information to the other subscribers to such service or association;

(3) Employed and operated a cooperative system of calculating and circulating among themselves through said individual a compilation of freight rates from the respective basing points to various destinations in order to insure that differences in actual freight and in interpretation and application thereof

would not create differences in the delivered price at any given destination as quoted and charged by said producers;

(4) Fixed, established, and maintained uniform prices, terms, and conditions of sale at which they would sell lime to the purchasing public, and increased and fixed the price for delivery in carload lots of less than 15 tons, as compared with the price for larger carloads, by adding thereto a uniform premium;

(5) Agreed in many instances, among themselves or with said individual, that the prices, terms and conditions of sale, calculated as above and filed with him and distributed by him among the producers should be adhered to without deviation until other prices, terms and conditions were likewise filed and thus distributed, said individual endeavoring to induce, and inducing, producers seeking his advice as to whether they should meet lower prices quoted by non-member producers, not to meet said lower prices, or such prices filed with him by other producers herein involved;

(6) Collaborated and exchanged price information with trade associations of producers in other sections, said individual furnishing information relative to published base prices of competitors, freight rates, lime market conditions, and other similar matters, not only to his own subscribers, but also, through the secretaries of lime associations in "outside territory," to competitors located north of the Ohio River and west of the Mississippi, and keeping his subscribers and others advised of changes in freight rates and in the published prices for lime within and without the southeastern area herein concerned;

(7) Agreed among themselves and with said individual, and with certain other producers located in other sections, that when selling in "outside" territory, they would sell according to the delivered prices there prevailing, said secretary exchanging, in behalf of producers here concerned, information as to basing point prices, freight rates, etc., with those providing similar services for producers in other sections of the United States, with intent and effect of inducing reciprocal adherence to the delivered prices prevailing in all the respective districts;

(8) Made and carried out an agreement or understanding among themselves and with said individual that they would quote identical delivered prices, terms, and conditions of sale in sealed bids on invitations from municipalities, State and Federal Governments, and failed or refused to quote other than delivered prices or their equivalent in making such bids, and agreed with their respective dealer customers that the latter quote such prices when bidding on lime to be purchased by such Governments;

(9) Compiled and circulated lists of recognized jobbers and dealers who should be entitled to purchase lime at jobbers' and dealers' prices, terms and conditions of sale and agreed among themselves as to the amount of compensation to be allowed their respective dealers when bidding upon the requirements of municipalities, State and Federal Governments, and other large consumers, and agreed upon a uniform differential between the prices to dealers and those to contractors, amounting usually to 50 cents a ton to be deducted from the price quoted by such producers; and

(10) Made use of special meetings of their own and of said secretary as occasions for discussing, making, mending, and renewing agreements or understandings with respect to price and other matters, and delegated, as a practice, to said individual, function of forestalling and correcting any deviations from such agreements, and caused investigations of complaints to be made by said individual, to whom they reported same, and who was very active in suggesting to producers the necessity of maintaining the published prices and other matters in regard to which they had passed resolutions at their various meetings, from time to time issuing numerous notices and bulletins to them with respect to such matters;

With the result that producers whose plants were not located at any basing point frequently assessed and collected as freight charges from their customers sums of money which were greater than the actual freight expense thereon, and on sales made for local use assessed and collected such sums for "phantom" or non-existent freight; identical delivered prices were quoted and charged to any given destination within the area in question, and varying net prices were received by producers at their plants, depending upon the freight rate to the various points of destination which had to be absorbed; prices exacted from customers at or near a plant were the same as would have prevailed had purchaser taken delivery from plants more distant or in other States; municipalities, in response to requests for bids, as a result of the practice known as the "lowest combination," received identical bids; and in many instances, purchasers within the territory involved, had to pay higher, and much higher, prices for lime than purchasers at outside points, and, conversely, outside producers were enabled to ship to purchasers in said southeastern territory and obtain net mill prices which, after deduction of freight, were higher than the net prices obtained by them within a few miles of their respective plants; certain outside producers made a practice of adopting the same system of arriving at prices as that used by producers in southeastern territory; and while prices for lime were descreasing at certain points outside of said southeastern area, such prices in said area had increased since decision invalidating National Industrial Recovery Act:

Held, That said acts and practices, as above set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public; had a dangerous tendency to and did actually hinder and prevent price competition between and among the producers herein involved in the sale of lime in commerce; placed in them the power to control and enhance prices; increased the prices of lime paid by the purchasers and consequently those paid by the public; created in them a monopoly in the sale of lime and unreasonably restrained commerce therein; and constituted unfair methods of competition and unfair acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Charles F. Diggs and Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiners.

Mr. Curtis C. Shears and Mr. Merle P. Lyon for the Commission.

Mr. Abram F. Myers, of Washington, D. C., and Mr. Edgar Watkins and Mr. Allan Watkins, Jr., of Atlanta, Ga., for respondents.

Second Amended Complaint

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Pine Hill Lime & Stone Co., Southern States Lime Corp., Gager Lime Manufacturing Co., Knoxville Lime Manufacturing Co., Longview-Saginaw Lime Works, Inc., Cheney Lime & Cement Co., Ladd Lime & Stone Co., Virginia

Respondent Riverton Lime and Stone Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Virginia, with its principal office and place of business located at Riverton, Va. Said respondent owns and operates a lime manufacturing plant located at Riverton, Va.

Respondent Jesse Allen Lime Co. is a corporation with principal office and place of business at Burns, Tenn. Said respondent owns and operates a lime manufacturing plant located at Burns, Tenn.

Respondent George L. Scott, Sr., is an individual trading as Alabaster Lime Co., and maintains his office and place of business at Siluria, Ala. Said respondent owns and operates a lime manufacturing plant located at Siluria, Ala.

All of the respondents described in this paragraph are engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of lime used for agricultural, chemical and building purposes and are hereinafter referred to for convenience as "respondent lime producers."

PAR. 3. Respondent Hal S. Covert is an individual who maintains his office and place of business at the Arnold Hotel, in the city of Knoxville, within the State of Tennessee, and has since on or about June 30, 1935, acted as the paid representative and agent of respondent lime producers and of the lime producers and manufacturers located in the southeastern portion of the United States south of the Ohio River and east of the Mississippi River.

PAR. 4. All of said respondent lime producers have been for more than 3 years last past, and are now, engaged in the manufacture and distribution of agricultural, chemical, and building lime which they sell to their respective customers located in various States of the United States and cause said products when sold to be transported from their respective plants to purchasers located at various places in the several States of the United States other than the State where they are produced and from which they are shipped. Respondent lime producers sell their product direct to municipalities, State and Federal Governments and also to dealers, jobbers, and large contractors. Said respondent lime producers manufacture and sell a large majority of the total volume of agricultural, chemical, and building lime that is produced and sold in the southeastern part of the United States. To the extent that they act collusively and collectively in the production and pricing of their goods, respondent lime producers are in a position to dominate and manipulate the market in which Governmental agencies and unorganized purchasers must buy such goods in the southeastern part of the United States.

PAR. 5. Lime, the commodity with which this proceeding is concerned, is produced in a variety of qualities, has varied chemical constituents and is used for correspondingly varied purposes. Among the more important purposes for which it is used are as a building and construction material where it is widely in demand as an ingredient in mortar and plaster, as a bactericide, purifier and deodorant of municipal and other public water supplies, as an agricultural fertilizer and soil conditioner, as a plant insecticide and fungicide, and for miscellaneous household purposes.

PAR. 6. For more than 3 years last past respondents, their officers, agents, and employees, have engaged in a wrongful and unlawful combination and conspiracy among themselves, for the purpose and with the effect of substantially suppressing and frustrating competition as to price and otherwise in the sale of lime in commerce among the several States where respondent lime producers do business. To that end respondent by concerted action, agreement, and understanding among themselves and with others not joined herein as respondents, have adopted and carried out the following policies, rules, practices, and methods of competition:

(a) Respondents have continued in effect by agreement, understanding, and concerted action among themselves a system of non-competitive delivered prices that was embodied in an express agreement among them during the period that a Code for the industry was in operation under the National Industrial Recovery Act. Said system of delivered prices was designed to prevent differences in the cost of freight delivery between the various producers' plants and the respective places of delivery from creating any advantage or disadvantage to a purchaser in delivered cost without regard to which respondent lime producer the intending purchaser might apply. Said system of identical delivered prices was predicated upon the use of a number of so-called basing points whereby all delivered prices were calculated as though shipments were made by rail from a single point or points having a common freight rate to destination.

(b) Respondents have employed and operated a cooperative system of filing and exchanging among themselves the base prices applicable to the respective basing points, but it was understood and agreed among respondent lime producers that quotations and sales would be made only on a delivered price basis and by adding to such understood common basing point prices the rail freight from the applicable basing point to destination. Said system, understanding and agreement were likewise a continuation of an express agreement among respondents that existed under the Code during the period of the National Industrial Recovery Act. By understanding, agreement, and concerted action respondents continued to adhere to the specific basing points and basing point prices in effect under the Code until higher basing point prices could be and were established.

(c) Respondents have employed and operated a cooperative system of calculating and circulating among themselves a compilation of freight rates from the respective basing points to various destinations in order to insure that differences in the actual freight from actual shipping points to a given destination and differences in the interpretation and application of freight tariffs would not create differences in the delivered price at any given destination. Said system was likewise a continuation of a practice carried on under the express agreement that existed under the Code during the period of the National Industrial Recovery Act.

(d) Respondent lime producers have agreed among themselves and with respondent Covert that the prices, terms and conditions of sale filed with respondent Covert and distributed among the producers should be adhered to without deviation until after other prices, terms and conditions of sale were likewise filed and distributed. The prices to be charged were agreed upon by respondent lime producers at meetings with the understandings that such agreed prices would thereafter be filed with respondent Covert as a formality or even not filed at all. Printed price lists showing delivered prices at various delivery points were distributed by respondent Covert for use of respondent lime producers and were calculated according to the applicable basing point price and freight rates therefrom. Respondent lime producers have sought the advice and permission of respondent Covert as to whether they should meet lower prices quoted by non-respondent producers of lime. Respondent Covert has endeavored from time to time to induce respondent lime producers not to reduce their prices to meet the lower prices of non-respondent lime producers and not to meet lower prices filed with him by certain of respondent lime producers.

(e) Respondent lime producers have made and carried out an agreement among themselves and with respondent Covert that they would submit identical delivered prices, terms and conditions of sale in sealed bids on invitations from municipalities, State and Federal Governments and would refuse to quote other than delivered prices or their equivalent in making such bids.

(f) Respondent lime producers have delegated to respondent Covert the function of forestalling and correcting deviations from the price agreements and other agreements herein alleged that restrict competition among said producers. Pursuant to such delegation they have reported to respondent Covert suspected deviations from the prices and terms agreed upon and have caused him to make investigations of their complaints regarding such deviations. Respondents have discussed such deviations among themselves and with producers suspected or charged therewith for the purpose and with the effect of obtaining renewed adherence to the alleged agreements on and affecting prices. Both regular and special meetings of respondent lime producers and respondent Covert have been used by them as the occasion for discussing, making, amending, and renewing such agreements.

(g) Respondent lime producers have agreed among themselves upon a uniform premium or addition to the price to be charged for delivery in carload lots of less than 15 tons as compared with the price for larger carloads.

(h) Respondent lime producers have agreed among themselves, with respondent Covert, and with non-respondent lime producers located in other sections of the country that when selling into territory outside that where respondents' basing point prices controlled the delivered prices they would recognize, adopt, and sell according to the delivered prices prevailing in such territory. Respondent Covert on behalf of respondent lime producers has exchanged information as to basing point prices, freight rates from basing points and delivered prices with persons providing services similar to those of respondent Covert for the lime producers in other districts of the country for the purpose and with the effect of inducing reciprocal adherence to the delivered prices prevailing in the respective districts.

(i) Respondent lime producers have agreed among themselves as to what concerns should be recognized as jobbers and dealers and thereby entitled to purchase lime at jobbers' and dealers' prices, terms and conditions of sale; and have compiled and circulated lists of such recognized jobbers and dealers in order to facilitate the execution of said agreement. Respondent lime producers have agreed among themselves upon a uniform amount of compensation to be allowed their respective dealers when bidding upon the requirements of municipalities, State and Federal Governments and other large consumers, and have agreed upon a uniform differential between the prices to dealers and the price to contractors.

(j) Respondent lime producers have agreed with their respective dealer customers as to the prices to be quoted by such dealers when bidding on lime to be purchased by municipalities, State and Federal Governments and other large consumers.

(k) For the purpose and with the effect of making more difficult the detection and prevention of their unlawful combinations, agreements, and understandings herein alleged, respondents have destroyed documentary records and evidence of certain activities herein set forth or have avoided making such records and evidence.

PAR. 7. As a necessary result of respondents' agreement to use and their use of the above described basing point system of delivered prices, respondent lime producers whose plants are not located at any basing point have frequently assessed and collected sums of money from their customers in the guise of freight charges but in amounts that are greater than the actual freight expense incurred and on sales made for local use assess and collect such sums when there is no actual freight expense incurred.

PAR. 8. As an incident to and a necessary result of their agreed policy and practice of making delivered prices only and of making such prices identical notwithstanding differences in the actual freight from the various shipping points to given destinations, the respective respondent lime producers have habitually and systematically demanded, charged, accepted, and received larger sums of money per unit of product from their customers located near their respective plants than from their customers located at greater distances, have thereby forced their nearby customers to pay more to respondent lime producers per unit of product in order that more distant ones might pay less, have deprived their nearby customers of any price advantage by reason of their proximity to the place of production, and have thereby habitually and systematically discriminated in price among their respective customers in bad faith in order to suppress competition in price among respondent lime producers.

PAR. 9. By means of the aforesaid agreements, understandings, rules, policies, practices, and cooperative methods of competition, respondents have deprived purchasers and consumers of agricultural, chemical, and building lime of the advantages of normal competition that would otherwise exist among respondent lime producers. Respondents have thereby compelled unorganized purchasers to buy at prices and terms determined collectively and collusively by respondents and have artificially enhanced the amounts exacted from such purchasers above the amounts obtainable had there been no such determination. The amounts so exacted from public agencies constitute part of the financial obligations of government payable either with or without interest out of tax receipts.

PAR. 10. The above alleged acts and things done by respondents are all to the injury and prejudice of the public engaged in the purchase and resale of agricultural, chemical, and building lime, of competitors engaged in the production and sale thereof and of consumers of such commodities, and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair acts and practices in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of section 5 of an act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 16th day of September, A. D., 1938, issued its complaint against the respondents named in the caption hereof, and on the 11th day of January, A. D., 1939, and on the 29th day of July, A. D., 1939, issued its amended complaints, and caused said complaints to be served upon each of said respondents, charging them with unfair methods of competition and unfair acts and practices in interstate commerce, and with restricting and suppressing competition in the interstate sale of agricultural, building, and chemical limes, in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act. After the issuance of said complaints and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaints were introduced by Curtis C. Shears and Merle P. Lyon, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaints by Abram F. Myers, Edgar Watkins, and Allan Watkins, Jr., attorneys for the respondents, before Randolph Preston, trial examiner of the Commission, duly designated by it to take testimony and receive evidence in this proceeding, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaints, answers, testimony, and other evidence, the report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral argument on behalf of the Commission and of the respondents; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Pine Hill Lime & Stone Co. is a corporation, with its principal office and place of business in Pine Hill, Ky., where it owns and operates a lime manufacturing plant, where it produces chemical and construction lime.

Respondent Southern States Lime Corp. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Tennessee, with its principal office and place of business located in the city of Charleston, S. C. Said respondent owns and operates a lime manufacturing plant located at Crab Orchard, Tenn. It produces no agricultural lime.

Respondent Gager Lime Manufacturing Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Tennessee, with its principal office and place of business located at Room 605, Provident Building, in the city of Chattanooga, Tenn. Said respondent owns and operates a lime manufacturing plant located at Sherwood, Tenn.

Respondent Knoxville Lime Manufacturing Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Tennessee, with its principal office and place of business located in Knoxville, Tenn., where said respondent owns and operates a lime manufacturing plant. It produces no agricultural lime.

Respondent Longview-Saginaw Lime Works, Inc. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business located at 721 Chamber of Commerce Building, in the city of Birmingham, Ala. Said respondent owns and operates lime manufacturing plants located at Longview and Saginaw, Ala.

Respondent Cheney Lime & Cement Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Alabama, with its principal office and place of business located in the Martin Building, in the city of Birmingham, Ala. Said respondent owns and operates lime manufacturing plants located at Landmark and Greystone, Ala.

Respondent Ladd Lime & Stone Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Georgia, with its principal office and place of business located at Cartersville, Ga. Said respondent owns and operates a lime manufacturing plant located at Cartersville, Ga. It produces a high magnesium lime used only for structural purposes, as well as some agricultural lime.

Respondent Virginia Lime Products Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the State of Virginia, with its principal office and place of business located at Eagle Rock, Va. Said respondent owns and operates a lime manufacturing plant located at Eagle Rock, Va.

Respondent Kimbalton Lime Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Virginia, with its principal office and place of business located at Shawsville, Va. Said respondent owns and operates a lime manufacturing plant located at Shawsville, Va.

Respondent Eagle Rock Lime Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Maine, with its principal office and place of business located at Eagle Rock, Va. Said respondent owns and operates a lime manufacturing plant located at Eagle Rock, Va.

Respondent Williams Lime Manufacturing Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business located in the Hamilton National Bank Building, Knoxville, Tenn. Said respondent owns and operates a lime manufacturing plant located at Knoxville, Tenn., where it makes chemical lime.

Respondent Florida Lime Products Co., Inc. (named in the complaint as Florida Lime Co.), is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Florida, with its principal office and place of business located at Ocala, Fla. Said respondent owns and operates a lime manufacturing plant located at Ocala, Fla.

Respondent Dixie Lime Products Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Florida, with its principal office and place of business located at 19 North Main Street, in the city of Ocala, Fla. Said respondent owns and operates a lime manufacturing plant located at Ocala, Fla., where it produces a high calcium lime for structural and chemical uses and ground limestone for agricultural use.

Respondent Keystone Lime Works, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Alabama, with its principal office and place of business located in Keystone, Ala. Said respondent owns and operates a lime manufacturing plant located at Keystone, Ala.

Respondent M. J. Grove Lime Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Maryland, with its principal office and place of business located at Lime Kiln, Md. Said respondent owns and operates lime manufacturing plants located at Bonsville and Frederick, Md., and Stevensville, Va.

Respondent Ripplemead Lime Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Virginia, with its principal office and place of business located at Ripplemead, Va. Said respondent owns and operates a lime manufacturing plant located at Ripplemead, Va. It makes no agricultural lime.

Respondent Riverton Lime & Stone Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Virginia, with its principal office and place of business located at Riverton, Va. Said respondent owns and operates a lime manufacturing plant located at Riverton, Va., where it makes structural lime.

Respondent Jesse Allen Lime Co. is a corporation with its principal office and place of business at Burns, Tenn. Said respondent owns and operates a lime manufacturing plant located at Burns, Tenn., where it makes a high calcium structural and chemical lime.

Respondent George L. Scott, Sr. is an individual trading as Alabaster Lime Co. and maintains his office and place of business at Siluria, Ala. Said respondent owns and operates a lime manufacturing plant located at Siluria, Ala.

Respondent Green Bag Cement Co. of West Virginia is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of West Virginia, with its principal office and place of business located at Kenova, W. Va. Said respondent owns and operates lime manufacturing plants located at Lawton, Ky., and Kenova, W. Va. It makes building lime only, and its building lime is an adjunct to its main cement business and constitutes less than one-half of 1 percent of its total business.

All of the respondents described as lime manufacturers are engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of lime used for various purposes and are hereinafter referred to for convenience as "respondent lime producers."

As to respondent Green Bag Cement Co. of West Virginia, there is not sufficient evidence upon which to base an order to cease and desist. The references herein made to respondents as "lime producers" do not include the respondent Green Bag Cement Co. of West Virginia.

PAR. 2. Lime, which respondent lime producers manufacture, is produced in a variety of qualities, has varied chemical constituents and is used for correspondingly varied purposes. Among the more important purposes for which it is used are as a building and construction material where it is widely in demand as an ingredient in mortar and plaster, as a bactericide, purifier, and deodorant of municipal and other public water supplies, as an agricultural fertilizer and soil conditioner, as a plant insecticide and fungicide, and for miscellaneous household purposes.

Lime is a bulky, relatively cheap commodity, and consequently freight is an important and often the principal factor in the delivered cost. As regards its chemical constituency, lime is classified as high calcium lime and high magnesium lime. As regards its use, lime is classified as chemical, structural, and agricultural. Generally speaking, calcium lime is usable for all three purposes, although in some cases a high magnesium lime is preferred for building purposes. Magnesium lime is used primarily in construction work. Both compete with cement, gypsum, and the various masonry cements and mortar mixes.

PAR. 3. The respondent lime producers, considered collectively, have been for more than 3 years last past, and are now, engaged in the manufacture and distribution of lime of various kinds, qualities, and descriptions, which they sell to their respective customers located in various States of the United States and cause said products when so sold to be transported from their respective plants to purchasers located at various places in various States of the United States other than the State where the products so purchased were produced and from which shipped. In the course of said operations said respondent lime producers sell their products direct to municipalities, State and Federal Governments, and also to dealers, jobbers, and contractors, located in various States of the United States.

Respondent lime producers produce a majority of the lime of all kinds and grades produced in the southeastern part of the United States as herein elsewhere defined, but somewhat less than a majority of the lime sold in that region. Respondent Hal S. Covert admitted that respondent lime producers produced 42.2 percent of the total lime sold in the southeast area, 32.9 percent is produced by other non-respondent lime producers in the southeast, and shipments from all plants outside the southeastern area were 24.9 percent of the total.

To the extent that they act, and have acted, collusively and collectively in the production and pricing of their products as hereinafter set forth, respondent lime producers are in a position to dominate, and have dominated, the market in which governmental agencies and unorganized purchasers must buy such products in the southeastern part of the United States. The price rise from $8.50 to $9.00 per ton on hydrated lime simultaneously put into effect by respondent lime producers in September 1935, and the simultaneous price rise put into effect by a large number of respondent lime producers on January 15, 1940, illustrate the ability of respondent lime producers to manipulate and control the market in the southeastern part of the United States. A fixed base price of $9.00 per ton was maintained by respondent lime producers for a number of years beginning in September 1935.

PAR. 4. Respondent Hal S. Covert for the 5 years last past had an office in Knoxville, Tenn. From the approximate date of June 30, 1935, and until the approximate date of March 1, 1939, said Covert acted as the paid representative of the respondent lime producers and in conjunction with other lime producers in certain other portions of the United States. During the operation of the N. R. A. and prior to the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of U. S. v. Schechter, 295 U. S. 495, in the year 1935, which declared the N. R. A. unconstitutional, lime codes had apparently proved advantageous to the southeastern lime manufacturers, among whom were the said respondent lime producers. During said N. R. A. period the southeastern territory theretofore comprising districts 4, 10, and 11 of the National Lime Institute, also constituted the same numbered districts under the N. R. A. District 4 comprised the State of Virginia, Districts 10 and 11 the territory east of the Mississippi and south of the Ohio Rivers, exclusive of Virginia. Respondent Covert became, and continued to act as, secretary of the Districts Control Committee of the N. R. A. for said districts from and after March 4, 1934, and until its dissolution as aforesaid. After the termination of the N. R. A. he continued informally as secretary of substantially the same group of lime producers in the southeastern territory with the exception of a few concerns which immediately withdrew their support. Respondent Covert set out obtaining the consent of all the producers in said Districts 4, 10, and 11, to continue the N. R. A. activities or similar activities on a voluntary basis. He sent out, among other things, a circular asking said producers or manufacturers (the terms being used apparently interchangeably), to pledge themselves to aid him according to the plan he suggested for continuing the benefits of the N. R. A. Some producers responded and some did not. Respondent Covert succeeded in getting approximately 20 subscribers to his plan of operation who are the respondent lime producers named herein. They agreed to pay, and in most instances did pay, to him up to March 1, 1939, 5 cents per ton on all lime shipped by them and each of them, respectively, during the month preceding their said respective payments. There was a similar charge made under the N. R. A.

PAR. 5. For more than 3 years prior to the commencement of this proceeding, respondent lime producers, except Green Bag Cement Co. of West Virginia, their officers, agents and employees, engaged in a wrongful and unlawful combination and conspiracy among themselves, for the purpose and with the effect of substantially suppressing and frustrating competition as to price and otherwise in the sale of lime in commerce among various States in which said respondent lime producers do business. To that end said respondent lime producers, by concerted action, agreement, and understanding among themselves and with others not joined herein as respondents, adopted and carried out, among others, the following policies, rules, practices, and methods of competition, to wit:

Said respondents continued in effect by agreement, understanding, and concerted action among themselves a system of non-competitive delivered prices that was embodied in an express agreement among them during the period that a Code for the industry was in operation under the National Industrial Recovery Act. Said system of delivered prices was designed to prevent, and did in many instances prevent, differences in the cost freight delivery between various producers' plants and the respective places of delivery from creating any advantage or disadvantage to a purchaser or purchasers in delivered cost without regard to which of the respondent lime producers the intending purchaser or purchasers might apply. Said system of identical delivered prices was predicated upon the use of a number of so-called basing points as herein elsewhere named, whereby all delivered prices were calculated as though shipments were made by rail from a single basing point or points having a common or the same freight rate to respective destination or destinations.

Respondent lime producers employed and operated a cooperative system of filing and exchanging among themselves through respondent Covert the base prices applicable to the respective basing points, but it was understood and agreed among respondent lime producers that quotations and sales would be made only on a delivered price basis by adding to such understood or agreed common mill base prices the rail freight on said lime so shipped from the applicable basing point to destination.

This cooperative system of filing and exchanging among respondent lime producers the base prices applicable to the respective basing points through the medium of respondent Covert in effect carried over and continued in operation practices which had been carried on under the said N. R. A. code. Respondent Covert undertook to carry out, so far as he was able, the services which he had rendered as district secretary under the N. R. A. Up to March 1, 1939, the subscriber respondents to Covert's service agreed to send to Covert's office in Knoxville, Tenn., their published quotations on lime f. o. b. their respective plants, and Covert in return was to, and did, distribute this and other information to the other subscribers to the said service or association. Meetings of subscribers were called by respondent Covert at irregular but frequent intervals in various places in various States. Bulletins were sent out by Covert as a result of these meetings and the discussions had at these meetings, but no formal minutes and very few notes were kept of these proceedings.

Respondent lime producers also employed and operated a cooperative system of calculating and circulating among themselves through respondent Covert a compilation of freight rates from the respective basing points herein named to various destinations in order to insure that the differences in the actual freight from said respective shipping points to a given destination and differences in the interpretation and application of freight tariffs would not create differences in the delivered price at any given destination as quoted and charged by respondent lime producers.

Respondent lime producers in many instances agreed among themselves or with respondent Covert that the prices, terms, and conditions of sale filed with respondent Covert and distributed among the producers should be adhered to without deviation until other prices, terms, and conditions of sale were likewise filed and distributed among said respondent lime producers. Printed price lists showing delivered prices at various delivery points were distributed by respondent Covert for use of respondent lime producers and were calculated according to and upon the agreed base price plus the applicable freight rates from the nearest basing point theretofore agreed upon. Respondent lime producers in numerous instances sought the advice of their said representative, respondent Covert, as to whether they should meet lower prices quoted by non-respondent producers of lime. Said respondent Covert endeavored from time to time to induce, and has induced, respondent lime producers not to reduce their prices to meet the lower prices of non-respondent lime producers and not to meet lower prices filed with him by certain of respondent lime producers.

Information relative to published base prices of competitors, freight rates, lime market conditions, and other similar matters was furnished by respondent Covert not only to his own subscribers, but also, through the secretaries of lime associations in so-called "outside territory," to competitors located north of the Ohio River and west of the Mississippi. Covert published the delivered prices for lime in various sections of the country, together with changes in the market conditions and volume of sales, and kept his subscribers and others advised of changes in freight rates and in the published prices for lime within and without the southeastern area.

Respondent lime producers made and carried out an agreement or understanding among themselves and with respondent Covert that they would quote identical delivered prices, terms, and conditions of sale in sealed bids on invitations from municipalities, State and Federal Governments and failed or refused to quote other than delivered prices or their equivalent in making such bids.

Respondent lime producers have as a practice delegated to respondent Covert the function of forestalling and correcting any deviations from the price agreements and other agreements as herein referred to in order to restrict or eliminate price competition among said producers. Pursuant to such delegation they reported to respondent Covert suspected deviations from the prices and terms agreed upon and caused him to make investigations of their complaints regarding such deviations. Respondent lime producers discussed such deviations among themselves and with producers suspected or charged therewith for the purpose and with the effect, in part, of obtaining renewed adherence to the agreements on and affecting prices. Both regular and special meetings of respondent lime producers and respondent Covert have been used by them as the occasions for discussing, making, amending, and renewing such agreements or understandings.

Respondent Covert was very active in suggesting to respondent lime producers the necessity of maintaining the published prices and other matters in regard to which respondent lime producers had passed resolutions at the various meetings above referred to. He issued numerous notices and bulletins from time to time to respondent lime producers, directing or urging them to maintain their published prices and in some instances to ignore the cuts or reductions of other manufacturers, including some of the respondent lime producers. Typical of these is the following circular issued by respondent Covert:

Riverton base is still $8.50; Knoxville base is now $9.00, but the above earlier price will only apply as long as all manufacturers observe it.

He had practically a 100-percent response from respondent lime producers to the effect that they intended to observe the lime industry base prices and terms and would notify him of any proposed changes.

In December 1937 the respondent Riverton Lime & Stone Co. announced a reduction of $2.00 per ton on its lime. Respondent Covert at once took up with Judge A. C. Carson, an officer of the Riverton Co., the matter of restoring the price to $9.00, which respondent Riverton Co. shortly thereafter did.

On other occasions respondent Covert wrote letters or held consultations with other respondent lime producers with a view to maintaining the published prices.

On March 1, 1939, respondent lime producers and others organized the Southern Lime Institute, a corporation organized under the laws of Georgia.

Respondent lime producers agreed among themselves upon a uniform premium or addition to the price to be charged for delivery in less than carload lots of less than 15 tons as compared with the price for 15 or more ton carload lots, said premium being $1.00 per ton additional for all shipments of less than 15 ton carload lots.

Respondent lime producers agreed among themselves and with respondent Covert, and with certain non-respondent lime producers located in other sections of the country that when selling into territory, or sections of the United States outside of those where respondents' basing point prices controlled the delivered prices, they would recognize, adopt and sell according to the delivered prices prevailing in such other respective territories or sections. Respondent Covert on behalf of respondent lime producers exchanged information as to basing point prices, freight rates from basing points and delivered prices with persons providing services similar to those of respondent Covert for the lime producers in certain other districts or sections of the United States for the purpose and with the effect of inducing reciprocal adherence to the delivered prices prevailing in all of the respective districts, including the said southeastern territory in which respondent lime producers operate.

Respondent Covert and some of the respondent lime producers have undertaken or attempted to agree among themselves as to what concerns should be recognized as jobbers and dealers and thereby entitled to purchase lime at jobbers' and dealers' prices, terms, and conditions of sale; and have compiled and circulated lists of such recognized jobbers and dealers in order to facilitate the execution of said agreement.

Respondent lime producers made an agreement among themselves as to the amount of compensation to be allowed their respective dealers when bidding upon the requirements of municipalities, State and Federal Governments and other large consumers, and agreed upon a uniform differential between the prices to dealers and the price to contractors, said amount being usually 50 cents for each ton of lime when sold, deducted from the price quoted by respondent lime producers.

Respondent lime producers agreed with their respective dealer customers as to the prices to be quoted by such dealers when bidding on lime to be purchased by municipalities, State and Federal Governments, to wit, the price quoted the dealer by the respondent lime producer or producers.

PAR. 6. As a necessary result of respondents' agreement to use and their use of the above-described basing point system of delivered prices, respondent lime producers whose plants are not located at any basing point have frequently assessed and collected sums of money from their customers in the guise of freight charges but in amounts that are greater than the actual freight expense incurred by them and also on sales made for local use, assess and collect such sums when there is no actual freight expense incurred.

PAR. 7. The system or method of respondent lime producers, as hereinabove set out, results and has resulted in identical delivered prices being quoted and charged to any given destination within the area hereinbefore described. It also results and has resulted in varying net prices received by the producers at the plant depending upon the freight rate from the respective plants to the various and respective points of destination which had to be absorbed. Consumers of lime in Ocala, Fla., who purchase from the Dixie Lime Products Co., hereinafter called Dixie Co., and the Florida Lime Products Co., hereinafter called the Florida Co., (two of the respondents having plants located within a few miles of the city of Ocala, Fla.) pay the identical delivered prices for the lime so purchased, as the prices they would be charged by other lime producers located within the Keystone area consisting of the States of Florida, part of Georgia, and Alabama, as herein described; that is, the prices charged by the said Dixie Co. and the Florida Co. are the identical lime prices quoted at the Keystone, Ala., plant plus the freight rate from Keystone, Ala., to Ocala, Fla., or any other point of destination nearby the location of the said local plants. This practice is followed even though the actual delivery is made by truck or rail over a few miles journey from respondents' plant to point of destination at Ocala. As an illustration of how this practice enables a producer close to the point of delivery to collect "phantom freight," the net mill price realized by respondent Dixie Lime Products Co. in its sales to consumers at Tampa, Fla., amounted to $11.00 or more per ton during a period of years, when the base price was only $9.00 a ton, a clear net extra profit of $2.00 or more per ton due solely to its use of the "lowest combination" system followed by it in common with other respondent lime producers.

Nearby purchasers of lime from the Ladd Lime & Stone Co. located near Cartersville, Ga., pay the identical price for lime as they do, or would do, to respondent lime producers who are located anywhere within the said Keystone area, the said prices being arrived at in a similar manner to that made use of by the Dixie and Florida companies aforesaid. This same method of quoting and charging similar prices applies generally throughout the said Districts 10 and 11 herein elsewhere defined. The aforesaid prices are fixed and charged without regard to how far or how near the respondent lime producer quoting the price is located from the purchaser or purchasers and without regard to whether the actual freight rate from said points is less or more than the basing point freight rate from the said Keystone to the respective points of destination. The same methods obtain, and have obtained, as to sales by respondent lime producers in which basing points in the said southeastern area (other than Keystone) are made use of in computing the prices charged.

Respondent lime producers, whose plants are located in Virginia, when quoting prices in territories outside of Virginia and in the basing point areas of the Keystone, Sherwood, or Knoxville basing points aforesaid, always quote their uniform base price plus the freight from the nearest of the aforesaid bases to the point or points of destination. This practice is known in the lime trade as the "lowest combination."

PAR. 8. Respondent lime producers have continued in effect by agreement, understanding and concerted action among themselves a system of noncompetitive delivered prices. All of said producers have utilized a basing point system of pricing their products with the exception of agricultural lime sold through pickups to consumer purchasers at the location of the plant itself. Within the southeastern territory involved in this proceeding the basing points used are Riverton, Va., Knoxville, Tenn., Sherwood, Tenn., and Keystone, Ala., and the delivered prices to consumers or dealers are quoted as based upon the agreed prices at the different plants plus the freight rate from the nearest of the above basing points to points of delivery. As the "lowest combination" base price plus freight determined the delivered price of lime, identical prices were, in practically all cases, quoted to intending purchasers by the various respondent lime producers and other producers within and without the South. Some or all of respondent lime producers submitted identical bids to municipalities in the following instances:

In Knoxville, Tenn., in 1936, the four low bids submitted to the city of Knoxville were $9.288 per ton. The bids received by the city of Knoxville for several years were all identical, so finally the city did not ask for bids.

After the year 1936, the city of Tampa, Fla., bought lime on the open market because they got identical bids under the previous tenders. In 1934, there were eight identical bids at $12.42 per ton. In 1935, there were five identical bids by respondent lime producers at $12.62 per ton. In 1936, there were 15 identical bids at $13.12 per ton. One of the respondent companies in 1936 bid directly to the city of Tampa at $13.12 a ton and also through a local dealer at the same price in order to get double representation so that if the names were drawn out of a hat they would have a better chance. The practice in bidding on Tampa, Fla., requirements was to take the base mill price of the Keystone group and add the freight from Keystone, Ala., to Tampa, Fla.

The bids to the city of Atlanta for the year 1936 were all identical and the contract was awarded one car to each of 10 identical bidders to be ordered as needed. The 10 names were put in a hat and drawn out, one at a time.

In bids for the city of Miami, Fla., requirements for the year 1937, five low bids were identical at $14.36. For the year 1938, eight were identical at $14.89.

The bids for the supply of hydrated lime to the city of Charlotte, N. C., for water purification purposes were identical for 1936 and several years subsequently, and in 1936 the successful bidder was decided by placing the names of all bidders in a hat and a councilman drawing out one name, because they were identical.

The municipalities of Winston-Salem, N. C.; Durham, N. C.; Norfolk, Va.; and Cincinnati, Ohio, received identical bids from respondent lime producers for several years and said cities did not receive the benefit of price competition in the purchase of lime for said years.

It has been a practice of respondent lime producers to submit identical bids in other cities in the said southeastern territory.

Some of the respondent lime producers maintain their own traffic department where complete freight information is kept up to date and are not dependent on and do not use the freight rate information disseminated by respondent Covert.

Municipalities often prefer, and have preferred, to buy from local dealers who are taxpayers and voters of their respective municipalities although manufacturers occasionally quote directly. The bidding is generally done by and through local dealers. Such dealers were not allowed to or did not in fact quote prices below the price fixed for them by the manufacturer or respondent they represented. In the sale of municipal lime, the contracts are usually entered into between the city and the local dealer. The lime is shipped by manufacturer to the place designated by the city. The city then pays dealer who deducts 50 cents per ton and remits the balance to the manufacturer. As price uniformity prevailed, attention was in some instances paid by the municipalities to the quality of the different respondents' products. In passing upon bids submitted, there was in most instances a local ordinance or practice which required the municipal authorities involved to accept the lowest bid which met the specifications.

PAR. 9. In addition to the foregoing, there were other identical price changes made and practices followed by respondent lime producers as a result of the said agreements and understanding.

A resolution was passed at a meeting of respondent lime producers held in Atlanta, Ga., providing for the listing of all jobbers and distributors with Secretary Covert. A notice was sent out by respondent Covert announcing no jobbing commissions were to be given without supporting affidavits agreeing to strict adherence by respondent lime producers to published prices. Strict adherence was obtained to manufacturers' prices as is herein elsewhere set out in detail. There was an agreement at the meeting of respondent lime producers that resale commissions to dealers should be fixed at 50 cents per ton and 5 cents per barrel upon lime sold by dealers, agents or jobbers. This agreement was also generally followed by respondent lime producers.

In September 1935, there was a meeting held at Atlanta, Ga., called and attended by respondent lime producers or a majority of them. Shortly thereafter and as a result of action taken at said meeting, all respondent lime producers simultaneously raised their prices from $8.50 to $9.00 per ton for future deliveries. This agreed advance was thereafter followed by all respondent lime producers in making actual sales and remained in effect for some years as the consistent practice of all or a majority of respondent lime producers. There was some variation, however, in prices in the State of Virginia. In the latter part of December 1939, or in the early part of January 1940, the majority of the respondent lime producers published new base prices to be in effect immediately thereafter, to wit, January 15, 1940. The prices so published have remained in effect from that date to the date of the hearings in this proceeding. In substantially all instances this rise of base prices amounted to $1.00 over the price formerly charged by the respective lime producers.

PAR. 10. The said practices and methods as to the fixing and quoting of prices of lime by the respondent lime producers in Southeastern districts, as herein named, have also resulted in purchasers in many instances within said territory having to pay higher prices for lime than persons purchasing similar amounts of lime have had, or would have had, to pay at points located out of the said Southeastern territory. For example, lime which is produced in Florida a few miles from Ocala, as heretofore referred to, sells or has sold in Ocala for $14.00 a ton whereas lime was sold and delivered in the city of St. Louis for the years 1936 to 1940 at approximately $8.00 a ton with the trend of prices in said city sharply downward from and after January 1939. On and after January 1, 1940, lime similar to that which was sold at Ocala for $14.00 was sold to the city of St. Louis for $4.89, delivered. The Peerless Lime Company located near St. Genevieve, Mo., received a higher net mill price, to wit, $6.95 per ton, when bidding in the Southeastern territory and by reason of adopting the same methods as described aforesaid, than it received in making deliveries to nearby points in the neighboring State of Illinois, in which latter instance its net mill price was $5.15 per ton. As a result of the said method of price fixing herein elsewhere set out, Missouri lime producers can and do sell and ship to purchasers at Charleston, S. C., and certain other points in the Southeastern territory and have and do obtain a net mill price or prices that are, after deduction of freight, higher than the net price or prices obtained within a few miles of the location of their respective plants and as a further result certain producers outside of the Southeastern territory have made a practice of adopting, and have adopted in many instances, the same system of arriving at prices as that used by respondent lime producers as herein elsewhere described, in the said Southeastern territory. While prices for lime have been decreasing in and near St. Louis, Mo., and in other points outside of said Southeastern area, the lime prices in said Southeastern area have increased since the Schechter decision hereinbefore referred to.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public; have a dangerous tendency to and have actually hindered and prevented price competition between and among respondents in the sale of lime in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act; have placed in respondents the power to control and enhance prices; have increased the prices of lime paid by the purchasers thereof and consequently the prices paid by the public; have created in the respondents a monopoly in the sale of lime in such commerce; have unreasonably restrained such commerce in lime and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint and amended complaints of the Commission, the answers of respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before Randolph Preston, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and amended complaints, and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiner thereon, exceptions to said report, briefs of the attorneys for the Commission and respondents, and oral arguments by Curtis C. Shears and Merle P. Lyon, attorneys for the Commission, and by Abram F. Myers and Edgar Watkins, attorneys for the respondents, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that all of said respondents except Green Bag Cement Co. of West Virginia have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Pine Hill Lime & Stone Co., Southern States Lime Corporation, Gager Lime Manufacturing Co., Knoxville Lime Manufacturing Co., Longview-Saginaw Lime Works, Inc., Cheney Lime & Cement Co., Ladd Lime & Stone Co., Virginia Lime Products Co., Inc., Kimbalton Lime Co., Inc., Eagle Rock Lime Co., Williams Lime Manufacturing Co., Florida Lime Products Co., Inc., Dixie Lime Products Co., Keystone Lime Works, Inc.; M. J. Grove Lime Co., Ripplemead Lime Co., Inc., Riverton Lime & Stone Co., Jesse Allen Lime Co., corporations, George L. Scott, Sr., an individual, trading as Alabaster Lime Co., and Hal S. Covert, both separately and as representatives of each other, and their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through respondent Hal. S. Covert or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of lime in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from continuing, entering into, carrying out, or aiding or abetting the carrying out of, any agreement, understanding, combination or conspiracy between and among any two or more of said respondents or between any one or more of said respondents and any other persons, partnerships or corporations, for the purpose, or with the effect of restricting, restraining or monopolizing, or eliminating competition in, the purchase or sale in said commerce of such product, and from doing and performing by cooperative or concerted action, agreement or understanding between any two or more of them or between any one or more of them and other persons, partnerships or corporations, the following acts and things:

(a) Fixing, establishing, quoting, or maintaining delivered prices to any given point of delivery, predicated upon the use of basing points, by the use of which all delivered price quotations are calculated as though shipments are made by rail from a single point or points having a common freight rate to destination.

(b) Filing or exchanging among themselves or with others the base prices applicable to the respective basing points, and adhering or agreeing to adhere to specific basing points and specific basing point prices.

(c) Making quotations and sales of their said products upon a delivered basis only, with freight equalized from their respective shipping points, wherever the cost of their said products to any given buyer, when delivered from any point, is thereby made identical at any given destination, regardless of variations in freight from different places of production and shipment.

(d) Promising to adhere to filed prices, terms, and conditions of sale for their said products.

(e) Pursuant to any promise, assurance, or understanding, adhering to filed prices, terms, and conditions of sale in the making of quotations or sales of their said products.

(f) Fixing or establishing prices, terms, and conditions of sale at which they will sell lime to the purchasing public, and fixing or maintaining uniform prices, terms, and conditions of sale for such products.

(g) Compiling and circulating among themselves or others lists of freight rates from various basing points to various destinations in order to insure that differences in the actual freight from actual shipping points to a given destination and differences in the interpretation and application of freight tariffs will not create differences in the delivered price at any given destination.

(h) Submitting identical delivered price quotations, terms, and conditions of sale in sealed bids or other bids on invitations from municipalities, State or Federal Governments, or refusing to quote other than delivered prices or their equivalent in making such bids.

(i) Entering into, participating in, or carrying on, through respondent Hal S. Covert or under his auspices or direction, or through any central agency, meetings, or otherwise, discussions and exchanges of information concerning proposed or future prices, terms, and conditions of sale at which they will quote or sell lime to the purchasing public.

(j) Fixing or increasing the price to be charged for delivery in carload lots of less than 15 tons as compared with the price for larger carloads by adding thereto a uniform premium or surcharge.

(k) Collaborating or exchanging price information with trade associations composed of lime producers located in other sections of the United States, but who sell lime in the territory served by said respondent producers east of the Mississippi River and south of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers, for the purpose and with the effect of restricting and restraining competition as to prices, terms, and conditions of sale of said products in said territory.

(l) Collaborating or exchanging price information with trade associations composed of lime producers located in other sections of the United States, for the purpose and with the effect of recognizing, adopting, or selling their lime products according to delivered price quotations prevailing in other sections of the United States west of the Mississippi River and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers, when offering for sale or selling their said products in such "outside" territory and thereby restricting and restraining competition as to prices, terms and conditions of sale of said products in such "outside" territory.

(m) Exchanging information as to basing point price quotations, freight rates from basing points, and delivered price quotations with trade associations composed of lime producers located in other sections of the United States, for the purpose or with the effect of inducing reciprocal adherence to the delivered price quotations prevailing in the respective districts.

(n) Determining what concerns shall be recognized as dealers and jobbers and thereby entitled to purchase lime at jobbers' and dealers' prices, terms, and conditions of sale, or compiling or circulating lists of such recognized jobbers and dealers.

(o) Establishing or allowing uniform discounts, commissions, or compensation to their respective dealers when bidding upon the requirements of municipalities, State or Federal Governments or other large consumers, or establishing or allowing a uniform differential between the price to dealers and the price to contractors.

(p) Exchanging among themselves or with their dealer customers, in advance of the submission and opening of sealed bids on Federal, State and municipal requirements for lime products, the prices which they propose to quote in such bids.

(q) Fixing, establishing, or maintaining prices to be quoted by their dealer customers when bidding on lime to be purchased by municipalities, State or Federal Governments or other large consumers.

(r) Employing the respondent Hal S. Covert or any other person, partnership, or corporation, to act as an agency for putting into effect or carrying out, directly or indirectly, any of the policies, rules, practices, or methods of competition prohibited by this order; or adopting or taking any other concerted or cooperative action to carry out or make effective the acts and things prohibited by this order.

It is further ordered, That this proceeding be, and the same hereby is, dismissed as to respondent Green Bag Cement Co. of West Virginia.

It is further ordered, That the respondents, except Green Bag Cement Co., of West Virginia, shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

I. BURMAN, DOING BUSINESS AS BURTLEY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3665. Complaint, Dec. 16, 1938—Decision, June 30, 1941

Where an individual engaged in interstate sale and distribution of his "Marrilis" drug or cosmetic preparation for use in the removal of excess weight through application to the body, followed by immersion in a hot bath, and theory of which was that such coating closed the pores and prevented their taking into the body the usual amount of oxygen, and that the result and efforts of the body to supply its own oxygen from the system produced increased heat and heavy perspiration, leading to the burning up of fat and consequent reduction in weight;

In advertising his said product in newspapers of general circulation, advertising circulars and other pieces of advertising literature supplied to and distributed by department stores and other business establishment, to which he furnished demonstrators and sales persons to assist in the sale thereof, and in advertisements placed by said establishments in newspapers for which he supplied the copy or materials—

Represented, directly or by implication, that his preparation constituted an effective means and method whereby substantial reduction in body weight might be obtained, and that particular parts or areas of the body might be reduced in size and weight by application thereto without affecting other parts; and that preparation in question had been prepared or compounded by one of the world's leading cosmetic scientists;

The facts being that aforesaid theory upon which his product was based is not tenable, in that oxygen is not taken into the body through the skin in any appreciable amount, and it is impossible effectively to close or seal the pores through use of said preparation; said product was nothing more than an emollient ointment and possessed no value in removal of excess weight, favorable results apparently accomplished thereby being due to regulation of diet rather than use thereof; and while person referred to was a commercial chemist and consultant for certain cosmetic concerns, such facts did not constitute sufficient basis for representing him as one of the world's leading cosmetic scientists;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to said product and to cause it, because of the erroneous belief so engendered, to purchase substantial quantities thereof, with result that trade was diverted unfairly to him from his competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. John P. Bramhall, trial examiner.

Mr. R. A. McOuat for the Commission.

Mr. Maxwell Stettner, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that I. Burman, an individual trading and doing business as Burtley Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, I. Burman, is an individual trading and doing business as Burtley Co. with his office and principal place of business at 245 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. For more than 2 years last past, respondent has been, and still is, engaged in the business of preparing for sale and selling, under the trade name of "Marrilis," a drug or cosmetic to be used as an external application for the purpose of reducing weight of the human body. Respondent causes said preparation when sold to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the city of New York, State of New York, to purchasers thereof at their respective places of location in States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and during all the times herein mentioned has maintained, a course of trade in said preparation so sold by him in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent is engaged in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with other individuals, and with firms, partnerships, and corporations selling and distributing medicinal and other preparations and products designed and intended for, and used in, the treatment of obesity and the removal of excess weight from the human body. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not in any manner misrepresent their said preparations and products or the therapeutic properties thereof.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has and does now cause to be disseminated, false advertisements for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of respondent's said preparation. Said false advertisements were, and are, disseminated by use of the United States mails, and by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States. Various means have been, and are, used by the respondent to disseminate or cause the dissemination of said false advertisements for the purpose of inducing, or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce among and between the various States of the United States of respondent's said preparation. Among, and typical of, the statements and representations contained in said false advertisements so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

"WASH AWAY" Excess Weight

* * * No complicated directions, simply apply a thin coat over the entire body or only over the part to be reduced, such as the hips, thighs, legs, chin or any other "spot"—take a warm bath and relax in bed for a short period. That's all! * * *

The "Marrilis" Method of Weight Reducing, as prepared by one of the world's leading cosmetic scientists, is remarkable in its ease of application. * * * Elimination of waste matter, fatty particles and excess water by perspiration is a natural function of the body which "Marrilis" speeds up without the weakening results and the high temperatures formerly used. * * * "Marrilis" with the aid of the sun's rays, will bring on perspiration considerably faster, and aid in the elimination of waste and fat through the skin.

* * * Test cases have shown that it is possible to lose from one to four pounds after the first application. That fact, coupled with the additional security that it has been found to be absolutely harmless makes it a boon to those who are looking for a slim, svelte figure and for the special reduction of certain "spots."

PAR. 4. Through the use of said statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto, not herein set out, all of which purport to be descriptive of respondent's preparation and its effectiveness in reducing weight of the human body, respondent has represented that his preparation is prepared by one of the world's leading cosmetic scientists; that it will cause a definite and substantial loss of body weight at the "spot" applied; will reduce weight from 1 to 4 pounds after each treatment by naturally and scientifically eliminating fatty particles, surplus water and waste from the human body through the skin; and that tests have been made which demonstrate the truth of the foregoing representations.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations used and disseminated by the respondent in the manner above described, are grossly exaggerated, deceptive, misleading, and untrue, and constitute false advertisements, and induce or are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of respondent's preparation. In truth and in fact, "Marrilis" is not prepared by any leading cosmetic scientist; the use of said preparation will not cause any reduction in weight anywhere in the human body; the effectiveness of any weight-reducing system, scheme or method is not enhanced in any way by the use of respondent's product. "Marrilis" is composed of spermaceti, paraffin oils, ozokerite, petroleum oils, and petrolatum. Respondent's preparation, when applied to the skin, serves merely as an emollient ointment.

Respondent's claims as to the value of efficacy of said preparation in the treatment of obesity or the removal of excess weight of the human body are grossly exaggerated, false, and deceptive, and greatly exceed any claims as to the value and efficacy of said preparation which might truthfully be made.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, misleading, and deceptive statements, representations, and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid with respect to said preparation has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true and that respondent's said preparation possesses the properties claimed and represented and will accomplish the results indicated, and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said preparation.

As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from his competitors in said commerce who truthfully advertise the effectiveness in use of their respective preparations and products, as described in paragraph 2 hereof. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on December 16, 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent I. Burman, an individual, trading and doing business as Burtley Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by R. A. McOuat, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Maxwell Stettner, attorney for the respondent, before John P. Bramhall, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and the exceptions thereto, and brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief and oral argument and not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, I. Burman, is an individual trading and doing business as Burtley Co., with his office and principal place of business at 245 Fifth Avenue, New York City, N. Y. He is now, and since 1937 has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a drug or cosmetic preparation designated as "Marrilis" and intended to be used for the purpose of removing excess weight from the human body.

In the course and conduct of his business, the respondent causes, and since 1937 has caused, his preparation, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and since 1937 has maintained, a course of trade in his preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and at all times mentioned herein has been, in substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of medicinal preparations and other products designed and intended for the removal of excess weight from the human body.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his business, the respondent has advertised his product by various means, including the sending of letters, circulars, and other advertising material through the United States mails. He has also inserted advertisements in newspapers having a general circulation among and between various States of the United States. A further method used by the respondent has been the supplying to department stores and other business establishments of demonstrators and sales persons to assist in the sale of his product by such stores and other establishments. In connection with this method of operation the respondent has supplied such retail establishments with advertising circulars and other pieces of advertising literature, which have been distributed by such establishments among purchasers and prospective purchasers of respondent's product. Respondent has also cooperated with such retail establishments in the placing of advertisements in newspapers, the copy or materials for such advertisements being supplied to such establishments by the respondent. All of the advertisements disseminated and caused by the respondent to be disseminated were for the purpose of inducing and were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of respondent's product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Certain of the advertising material formerly used by the respondent in promoting the sale of his product was discontinued about March 1938. Among and typical of the representations used by respondent prior to March 1938 are the following:

No Diets, No Exercises, No Massages, No Steam Rooms

We have known women to lose from one to four pounds after each treatment easily, quickly and comfortably by naturally and scientifically eliminating fatty particles, surplus water and waste—the principal cause of excess weight.

Don't envy a SLIM figure. Slenderize healthfully with MARRILIS REDUCING METHOD. It reduces abdomen, double chin, legs, thighs, hips, arms. Test cases prove that it is possible to lose from 1 to 4 pounds after each application of "Marrilis" Ointment . . . and it is as simple as it is effective.

The "Marrilis" Method of Weight Reducing, as prepared by one of the world's leading cosmetic scientists, is remarkable in its ease of application. * * *. Elimination of waste matter, fatty particles and excess water by perspiration is a natural function of the body which "Marrilis" speeds up without the weakening results and the high temperatures formerly used * * *. "Marrilis" with the aid of the sun's rays will bring on perspiration considerably faster and aid in the elimination of waste and fat through the skin.

It's almost unheard of . . . A really effective reducing preparation at such a minimum expenditure. It's easy and comfortable to use . . . applied externally . . . no special skill necessary. Test cases have shown that it is possible to lose one to four pounds after the first application. It has been found to be absolutely harmless.

For Special Reduction of . . . Hips—Thighs—Abdomen—Legs—Twin Chins & Other "Spots."

It is, of course, best to use "Marrilis" over the entire body and induce elimination in its entirety. But if your problem is one where you merely desire to reduce in spots such as the legs, thighs, a bulging abdomen, the chin, or perhaps only the arms, then apply "Marrilis" to these parts only. Follow the same tub bath procedure as if the treatment was given to the entire body. * * *.

With the application of Marrilis system you can discard reducing girdles, corsets, hip reducers, bust reducers, etc. In a much shorter time a youthful figure is obtained with maximum of comfort. Elimination of waste matter, fatty particles and excess water by perspiration is a natural function of the body which "Marrilis" speeds up without the weakening results and the high temperatures formerly used.

Among and typical of the representations used by respondent subsequent to March 1938 are the following:

* * * No complicated directions, simply apply a thin coat over the entire body or only over the part to be reduced, such as the hips, thighs, legs, chin or any other "spot"—take a warm bath and relax in bed for a short period. That's all!

Don't Envy a SLIM Figure! Slenderize Healthfully with MARRILIS REDUCING METHOD

It Reduces

Abdomen	Double Chin
Legs	Thighs
Hips	Arms

Test cases prove that it is possible to lose from 1 to 4 pounds after each application of "Marrilis" Ointment . . . and it is as simple as it is effective.

That fact, coupled with the additional security that it has been found harmless, makes it a boon to those looking for a slim, svelte figure.

Applied to body before taking bath. Why not try it now and lose that excess poundage!

PAR. 4. The Commission finds that through the use of these representations, and others of a similar nature which are not specifically set forth herein, the respondent has represented, directly or by implication, that his preparation constitutes an effective means and method whereby substantial reduction in body weight may be obtained; that by the application of the preparation to particular parts or areas of the body, such parts or areas may be reduced in size and weight without affecting the weight of other parts of the body; and that the preparation has been prepared or compounded by one of the world's leading cosmetic scientists.

PAR. 5. Respondent's preparation is composed of spermaceti, paraffin oils, ozocerite, petroleum oils, and petrolatum. The directions prescribed by respondent for the use of the preparation are as follows:

Apply sparingly a very thin coat of "Marrilis" all over body, face and legs. Take a tub bath. Make certain the whole body is immersed, including wrists. The water does not have to be too hot . . . just comfortable. In perhaps five to ten minutes you will note that perspiration is freely flowing from the face. Stay in the bath another ten or fifteen minutes. Then, while still wet, wrap yourself in a sheet and go to bed. Keep warmly covered . . . Relax . . . (In which case the perspiration will continue) for about a half hour. After this, cool off gradually . . . You may now take another tub or shower washing off the perspiration and Marrilis from your entire body. Weigh and measure yourself before and after each treatment. For Sun Bathing apply over entire body wearing as little clothes as possible. Follow this with a shower or tub bath.

PAR. 6. The theory upon which respondent bases his claims for his product was outlined substantially as follows by one of the witnesses testifying in his behalf. By coating the body with a film of the preparation the pores of the skin are closed or sealed. The film inhibits or prevents the effective working of the pores and prevents the pores from taking into the body the usual or normal amount of oxygen. The body is compelled to make up for this loss of oxygen and it undertakes to supply its own oxygen from the system. It breaks up its own fat, which it burns as carbohydrates, and in this way supplies its own oxygen. This increased chemical activity produces increased heat in the body. The heart and circulation are stimulated to greater activity. There is a great pouring out of perspiration. It is this pouring out of perspiration and the burning up of the fat which produce the reduction in weight.

PAR. 7. The expert testimony introduced at the instance of the Commission shows, and the Commission finds, that this theory is not tenable. It is at variance with the consensus of generally accepted and recognized medical opinion. Oxygen is not taken into the body through the skin in any appreciable amount. Moreover, it is impossible effectively to close or seal the pores of the skin through the use of respondent's preparation.

PAR. 8. The attempted reduction of weight through the stimulation of perspiration is a frequent occurrence. To generate the heat required to stimulate perspiration, hot baths, steam rooms, electric cabinets, etc., are used. Any reduction of weight obtained in this manner, however, has been found to be only temporary, as an excessive thirst is developed by the patient during the process, and any weight which may have been lost is restored almost immediately by the drinking of large quantities of water or other beverages.

The consensus of medical opinion is that the external application of preparations such as respondent's is wholly ineffectual in reducing the weight of the body. The Commission is of the opinion from the evidence, and finds, that the use of respondent's preparation adds nothing to any results which might be obtained from the ordinary heat method of stimulating perspiration. The preparation is in fact nothing more than an emollient ointment. It possesses no value in the removal of excess weight from the body or from any particular part or area of the body.

Respondent introduced as witnesses two physicians, two physiotherapists, and a masseuse, all of whom testified that they had used respondent's preparation and had observed its effect upon others, and that the results obtained from its use were more substantial than the results usually obtained from the ordinary method of inducing perspiration through the application of heat alone. Several members of the public also testified that they had used the preparation and had obtained favorable results in the reduction of their weight. In practically all of these cases, however, there was more or less regulation of the diet in addition to the use of respondent's treatment, and the Commission is of the opinion that any reduction in weight obtained by the witnesses was due to the regulation of the diet rather than to the use of respondent's preparation. After careful consideration of this testimony, the Commission is of the opinion, and finds, that its probative value is insufficient to overcome the expert testimony introduced at the instance of the Commission and the consensus of medical opinion as disclosed by the record.

With respect to respondent's representation that his product was prepared or compounded by one of the world's leading cosmetic scientists, the evidence shows that this claim is based entirely upon the fact that the person referred to is a commercial chemist and is consultant for certain cosmetic concerns. The Commission is of the opinion, and finds, that these facts do not constitute a sufficient basis for respondent's claim.

PAR. 9. The Commission therefore finds that the representations of the respondent with respect to his preparation and its effectiveness in use, as set forth in paragraphs 3 and 4 hereof, are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading, and constitute false advertisements.

PAR. 10. The Commission further finds that the use by the respondent of these representations and advertisements has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to respondent's preparation and its effectiveness in use, and to cause such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's preparation as a result of the erroneous and mistaken belief so engendered. In consequence, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from his competitors.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent I. Burman, individually and trading as Burtley Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of his drug or cosmetic preparation designated "Marrilis," or any preparation of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference, that said preparation possesses any value in the removal of excess weight from the human body, or from any particular part or area of the body.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, individually and trading as Burtley Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Representing that said preparation has been prepared or compounded by one of the world's leading cosmetic scientists.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

PHILIP R. PARK, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3815. Complaint, June 9, 1939—Decision, June 30, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the competitive interstate sale and distribution of a dehydrated kelp product in powdered and tablet form designated respectively as "Granular Parkelp" and "Parkelp Tablets"; by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals and by circulars and leaflets, pamphlets and other advertising material and by radio broadcasts—

(a) Represented that its said preparation was rich in iodine, iron, calcium, and other minerals which were not present in land foods; would correct mineral deficiency, build resistance to mineral deficiency diseases, and furnish food minerals of value in combating goiter, anemia, and other mineral deficiency diseases; and contained iodine, iron, copper, calcium, phosphorus, sodium, potassium, magnesium, sulphur, and other minerals in quantities sufficient to have therapeutic value in the treatment and prevention of diseases or conditions resulting from a deficiency in such minerals, listing various diseases claimed to be thus caused; and

(b) Represented that the average diet of the American people is deficient in the minerals necessary for the proper functioning and health of the human body, and that vegetables such as lettuce, celery, asparagus, spinach, etc., are deficient in such necessary minerals;

Facts being that the only mineral appearing in its product in an amount that would be of therapeutic value was iodine; therapeutic value thereof was limited to the value of its iodine content, it being beneficial only in conditions resulting from an iodine deficiency and where administration of iodine was indicated; and its said preparation would not correct mineral deficiency, build up resistance to mineral deficiency diseases, or furnish food minerals other than iodine in quantities sufficient to combat such diseases; and, contrary to its claims, all the other minerals listed are present in varying amounts in land foods and their average diet contains as much as health requires;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasers into the erroneous belief that such misrepresentations were true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of its product, with result that trade was unfairly diverted from its competitors to it:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

As respects effect of seller's dehydrated kelp product on mineral deficiencies or its therapeutic value in the treatment or prevention of anemia or other mineral deficiency diseases in human beings, testimony with reference to certain biological tests made upon rats to determine effect of said product in cases of anemia, was of little or no probative value, it appearing that there was no testimony on the relationship between the effect of such tests upon rats as compared with humans, or the relationship between the amounts ingested by the rats under test as compared with the amount which would be ingested by human beings under the directions for use, and that while test in question was made specifically to determine effect of said product on anemia caused by an iron or copper deficiency, which commonly appears in rats fed exclusively on a diet of milk, anemia in humans caused by such a deficiency in the diet is very rare as compared with other recognized forms of said ailment.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves and Mr. John W. Addison, trial examiners.

Mr. Robert Mathis, Jr. for the Commission.

Mr. Daniel Dougherty, of Los Angeles, Calif., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Philip R. Park, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Philip R. Park, Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of California, with its principal place of business located at San Pedro, Calif. It is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a dehydrated kelp product in powdered and tablet form, designated, respectively, as Granular Parkelp and Parkelp Tablets, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, said products, when sold, to be transported from San Pedro, Calif., to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false and misleading advertising concerning its said product, by United States mail, by inserting the same in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by continuities broadcast from radio stations which have sufficient power to, and do, convey the program emanating therefrom to listeners located in various States of the United States other than the State in which said broadcasts originate, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product.

Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertising, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, are the following:

1. Parkelp is amazingly rich in iodine, iron, calcium and other food minerals which land foods lack.

2. Builds resistance to mineral deficiency diseases.

3. PALE GIRLS find sea plant better than rouge. Girls who lack colorful lips and cheeks should know that their blood stream needs more of certain minerals. No amount of rouge can bring beauty that is truly glamorous and sparkling.

The romantic story of kelp—the wonder plant of the sea—reveals that it is a veritable storehouse of iron, iodine and those other minerals needed to attain mineral-rich blood, rosy cheeks, red lips and sparkling eyes.

For an aid to natural beauty, eat kelp—in its pure form—not mixed with anything else.

4. Kelp is today recognized as nature's richest source of essential food minerals for combating goiter, anemia and other mineral deficiency diseases.

5. If you need food iodine, food manganese and calcium, you will find Parkelp an easy, economical way to add these food minerals to your diet.

6. It is interesting to know that lack of food minerals in such land-grown vegetables as lettuce, celery, asparagus, spinach, etc., which form a part of our daily diet, often results in deficiency conditions of the body. You can add these important minerals and vitamins to your diet in an easy and economical way. Try Parkelp, a pure, deep sea kelp product that brings you food minerals from the sea.

7. There is a new and pleasant way of correcting this mineral and vitamin deficiency by using Parkelp—a pure deep-sea kelp product.

8. Kelp—a natural sea plant that is a source of important food minerals.

9. Many of our land-grown vegetables are lacking in food minerals and Parkelp will help you restore those minerals to your diet.

10. Those of you who feel that you need more food iodine, food iron and other minerals in your diet, you will want to try Parkelp—a pure deep-sea kelp product that is amazingly rich in food minerals which many of our land foods lack.

PAR. 3. The respondent, through the use of the aforesaid representations and others not herein detailed, represents that the diet of the American people is deficient in the minerals necessary for the proper functioning and proper health of the human body; that vegetables such as lettuce, celery, asparagus, spinach, etc., are deficient in these necessary minerals; that by the use of respondent's product, as above described, the deficiency in iodine, iron, calcium, manganese and other minerals will be supplied; that the use of respondent's product will also correct the alleged vitamin deficiency of the human body; that it will prevent and relieve anemia; and that the use of the product is of great therapeutic value to all who will take it.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact the statements and representations of respondent hereinabove set out with respect to its product are false and misleading in the following respects: The only one of the minerals appearing in said product in an amount that would be of therapeutic value to anyone needing the minerals is iodine. The amount of minerals other than iodine contained in respondent's product is not sufficient to produce the results claimed in respondent's advertising. The diet of the American people is not deficient in the minerals mentioned in respondent's advertising, nor are the vegetables therein referred to deficient in such minerals. Respondent's product will not prevent and relieve anemia. Said product is refractory to digestion and the minerals therein contained are not made available for assimilation. Said product will not produce the general beneficial effects claimed by respondent.

PAR. 5. There are among the competitors of respondent many other corporations and individuals and firms that manufacture, sell, and distribute products and preparations which contain some or all of the minerals contained in respondent's product, or other preparations designed for similar uses, in commerce, as hereinabove set out, that do not misrepresent the therapeutic value or efficiency of their products.

PAR. 6. The use by respondent in its advertising matter and otherwise of the representations set forth in paragraph 2 hereof had, and has, a capacity and tendency to, and did, and does, deceive and mislead prospective purchasers and purchasers of its product into the belief that such representations are true.

On account of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs, a substantial portion of the purchasing public has been, and is, induced to purchase said product Parkelp from respondent, and thereby trade has been, and is, unfairly diverted to respondent from competitors named in paragraphs 1 and 5 hereof. As a result thereof injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on June 9, 1939, issued and subsequently served its complaint on the respondent, Philip R. Park, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Robert Mathis, Jr., attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Daniel Dougherty, attorney for the respondent, before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiners upon the evidence and exceptions filed thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (oral argument not having been requested) and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Philip R. Park, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of California, with its principal place of business located at San Pedro, Calif. It is now and for some time last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of a dehydrated kelp product in powdered and tablet form, designated respectively as "Granular Parkelp" and "Parkelp Tablets" in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Collumbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products when sold to be transported from San Pedro, Calif., to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business respondent is in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product by United States mails and by various other means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising material and by continuities broadcast from radio stations which have sufficient power to and do convey the programs emanating therefrom to listeners located in the various States of the United States other than the State in which said broadcasts originate are the following:

1. That respondent's preparation "Parkelp" is rich in iodine, iron, calcium, and other minerals which are not present in land foods;

2. That respondent's preparation will correct mineral deficiency, build resistance to mineral deficiency diseases, and furnish food minerals of value in combating goiter, anemia, and other mineral deficiency diseases;

3. That respondent's preparation contains iodine, iron, copper, calcium, phosphorus, sodium, potassium, magnesium, sulphur, and other minerals in quantities sufficient to have therapeutic value in the treatment and prevention of diseases or conditions resulting from a deficiency in such minerals;

4. That respondent's preparation has therapeutic value in the treatment or prevention of the following mineral deficiencies and the diseases and conditions which are alleged by the respondent to result therefrom:

(a) Iodine deficiency, which may cause goiter, skin diseases, low vitality, neuritis, nervousness, overweight, and rickets;

(b) Iron deficiency, which may cause anemia, headaches, weakness, and asthma;

(c) Copper deficiency, which may cause anemia;

(d) Calcium deficiency, which may cause stomach trouble, rickets, and eczema;

(e) Phosphorus deficiency, which may cause rickets, subnormal growth, and mental exhaustion;

(f) Sodium deficiency, which may cause stomach trouble, rheumatism, kidney disorders, and bladder disorders;

(g) Potassium deficiency, which may cause acidosis, heart disorders, and constipation;

(h) Magnesium deficiency, which may cause underweight and skin diseases;

(i) Sulphur deficiency, which may cause constipation, blood disorders, and liver disorders;

5. That the diet of the American people is deficient in the minerals necessary for the proper functioning and proper health of the human body and that vegetables such as lettuce, celery, asparagus, spinach, etc., are deficient in these necessary minerals.

PAR. 3. Respondent's product Parkelp is composed of the following mineral ingredients:

	Percent		Percent
Iodine	0.186	Magnesium	0.740
Calcium	1.050	Manganese	0.00044
Phosphorus	0.339	Sodium	3.98
Iron	0.037	Potassium	11.15
Copper	0.008	Chlorine	13.07

The respondent recommends that ½ to 1 teaspoonful be taken three times daily, preferably before meals, or 3 to 5 tablets of 5 grains each before or with meals if the product is used in tablet form. There is no difference in the constituent ingredients of Parkelp in the powder or tablet form.

PAR. 4. The Commission finds that under conditions of use the only mineral appearing in respondent's product in an amount that would be of therapeutic value is iodine. The therapeutic value of respondent's preparation is limited to the value of its iodine content and is beneficial only in those conditions resulting from an iodine deficiency and where the administration of iodine is indicated. There is not a sufficient amount of iron, copper, calcium, phosphorus, sodium, potassium, magnesium, or sulphur to have any therapeutic value in the treatment of any mineral deficiency or any disease or condition resulting from such mineral deficiency. All of these minerals are present in varying amounts in land foods and the average diet contains a sufficient amount of such minerals as are necessary for the proper functioning and health of the human body. Respondent's preparation will not correct mineral deficiency; will not build up resistance to mineral deficiency diseases, and will not furnish food minerals other than iodine in quantities sufficient to be of value in combating mineral deficiency diseases.

PAR. 5. On the subject of the therapeutic value of respondent's preparation Parkelp the respondent introduced in evidence testimony with reference to certain biological tests made upon rats to determine the effect of respondent's product in cases of anemia. There is no testimony on the relationship between the effect of such tests upon rats as compared with human beings, or the relationship between the amounts ingested by the rats under test as compared with the amount which would be ingested by human beings under the directions for use. Furthermore, the test is made specifically to determine the effect of Parkelp on anemia caused by an iron or copper deficiency which commonly appears in rats fed exclusively on a diet of milk. Anemia in human beings caused by a deficiency of iron or copper in the diet is very rare as compared with other forms of anemia recognized in human beings. Consequently the Commission is of the opinion and finds that the testimony with reference to the biological tests made by the respondent is of little or no probative value in connection with the effect of respondent's preparation on mineral deficiencies or the therapeutic value of its preparation in the treatment or prevention of anemia or other mineral deficiency diseases in human beings.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false advertisements and misleading representations has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's product. As a direct result thereof trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors who are likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission on the complaint of the Commission, answer of the respondent, testimony and other evidence before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiners upon the evidence and exceptions filed thereto and briefs filed herein and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent Philip R. Park, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of their products "Granular Parkelp" or "Parkelp Tablets," or any other product of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or by any means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference:

(a) That respondent's preparation has any therapeutic value in excess of that afforded by the iodine content thereof;

(b) That respondent's preparation contains iron, copper, calcium, phosphorus, sodium, potassium, magnesium, sulphur, or other minerals in quantities sufficient to have therapeutic value in the treatment or prevention of diseases or conditions resulting from a deficiency in such minerals or that it will build resistance to mineral deficiency diseases or furnish food minerals other than iodine in quantities sufficient to be of value in combating mineral deficiency diseases;

(c) That respondent's preparation contains minerals which are not present in land foods or that the average diet is deficient in the minerals necessary for proper functioning and health of the human body.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days from service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

Syllabus

IN THE MATTER OF

JOHN H. OESTERHAUS, TRADING AS FARMERS VACCINE & SUPPLY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4137. Complaint, May 21, 1940—Decision, June 30, 1941

Where an individual engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of his "Abortion Vaccine" to render cattle immune to Bang's Disease; by means of advertisements disseminated through the mails and numerous newspapers and periodicals of general circulation, and by circulars, pamphlets, and other advertising literature—

(a) Represented, directly or by implication, that by the injection of his vaccine into each animal of a herd of cattle the entire herd and each treated animal was rendered immune to Bang's Disease, that these results might be obtained in all cases regardless of the age of the animal and of whether it was infected with said disease at the time of treatment, that the use of said preparation gave lasting protection and that animals treated therewith, although later exposed, would not become infected, and that a substantial degree of protection was afforded within 2 weeks after treatment was administered;

The facts being that his said preparation, in common with practically all others on the market for treatment of disease in question, was made of "Strain 19," used generally by veterinarians and stockmen for prevention of such disease; the value and effectiveness of the vaccine were limited chiefly to cases of calves of from 4 to 8 months of age, the treatment not being generally recognized as effective in the case of mature cattle and being possibly harmful, and being also ineffective as to cattle already infected; immunity afforded was not in all cases permanent and was lost by a substantial percentage of animals after a certain period; and no substantial degree of protection was usually afforded within 2 weeks after treatment; and said individual, for a substantial period of time, made no change in his advertising material—to certain of which, however, he attached advisory notice—to comply with the regulation of the Department of Agriculture of May 26, 1938, requiring that such vaccines should be recommended only for treatment of calves from 4 to 8 months of age;

(b) Represented that abortion would be prevented in all females treated with the vacine and that such females would carry their calves for the full period, and might safely be bred at any time after treatment; and

(c) Represented that he guaranteed that a calf would be born to each breeding cow treated with the vaccine;

The facts being that the fact that a cow had received the treatment did not necessarily mean that abortion would be prevented, and that a period of 2 or 3 months should be allowed to elapse before such animals were bred, since time was needed to develop immunity, and in some cases there is a virulent reaction from the treatment which might produce the disease; and the only guaranty made in fact by said individual was that the purchase price of the vaccine would be refunded in cases where a calf was not born;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public, and to cause it, because of such erroneous belief, to purchase his said preparation, and with result that trade was diverted unfairly to him from his competitors, many of whom do not misrepresent their products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.

Mr. Randolph W. Branch for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that John H. Oesterhaus, an individual trading under the name of Farmers Vaccine & Supply Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is an individual trading and doing business under the name of Farmers Vaccine & Supply Co., and maintaining an office and principal place of business at 1619 West Sixteenth Street, Kansas City, Mo.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 2 years last past, engaged in the business of selling a certain preparation containing drugs, described by him as "Abortion Vaccine," and recommended by him for use as a means of rendering cattle immune to an ailment known as "Bang's Disease." Respondent causes said preparation, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Missouri to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, the respondent had disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said product; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among, and typical of, the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, and by circulars, pamphlets, catalogs, and other advertising literature are the following:

* * * inject * * * each animal in your herd.

IMMUNIZE YOUR HERD WITH ABORTION VACCINE.

* * * your heifer or cow is made immune against Bang's Abortion Disease.

* * * one dose of which gives lasting protection.

Our experience indicates that a considerable degree of protection is afforded within two weeks from the use of our Abortion Vaccine.

* * * an Immune Herd; which even though exposed later will not become infected.

Start now on your yearlings, heifers and two-year olds and vaccinate the balance as convenient.

* * * since 1932 * * * Abortion Vaccine has been used on the entire herd at once—heifers, open cows and bred cows at all stages of pregnancy, and the results on thousands of animals in hundreds of herds apparently justified the practice.

Abortion Vaccine will immune animals against Bang's Disease and result in full term calves * * *.

* * * end abortion losses from already infected animals.

Breeding may be commenced at any time you choose after vaccination * * *.

Now to prove our own faith in our Abortion Cure we are insuring you a calf from each cow.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondent has represented that by one injection of his abortion vaccine into each animal of a herd of cattle, the herd and each treated animal is rendered immune to Bang's Disease and will not, although later exposed, become infected therewith; that one dose does, in fact, give lasting protection; and that a considerable degree of protection is afforded in 2 weeks' time; that the product may be advantageously used and these results attained in all cases regardless of the age of the animals and of whether or not they are infected at the time of treatment; that all treated females will carry their calves for the full term; that treated females may be bred at any time after injection; that respondent guarantees a calf to be born to each female treated with his vaccine.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the use of the respondent's vaccine does not in all cases render animals to whom it is administered immune to, or protected against, Bang's Disease. Immunity is not attained in 2 weeks after treatment. When administered to uninfected mature cows, a considerable period, sometimes as long as 2 years, must elapse before immunity from the disease may be anticipated, and such immunity is not always attained; when administered to infected mature animals, the vaccine in no way contributes to the gaining of immunity which may result, however, from a natural recovery. The use of this vaccine on mature females will not assure or assist full term gestation and parturition of calves in any cases except those in which pregnancy occurs after immunity has been gained from the use of the vaccine. Abortion or premature birth may be due to other factors as well as to Bang's Disease. Treated, mature uninfected females should not, under the accepted principles of animal husbandry, be bred until a reasonable time has elapsed after treatment. Respondent's alleged guarantee that a calf will be born to each cow treated with his vaccine is not in fact such a guarantee, but merely an announced undertaking to refund the price of the vaccine if a treated cow does not bear a calf.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing, false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to his preparation disseminated as aforesaid has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representations are true and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's vaccine.

PAR. 7. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, in substantial competition with other individuals and with firms, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of abortion vaccines in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The United States Department of Agriculture, through its Bureau of Animal Industry, has, since 1934, been engaged in a program for the better control and ultimate eradication of Bang's Disease. Abortion vaccines, under the provisions of "An act making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June thirteenth, nineteen hundred and fourteen" (37 Stat. 832), may be legally manufactured only in establishments licensed by the Department of Agriculture. Respondent is not a manufacturer of vaccine, but his product is manufactured for him by a licensed establishment. Many of those engaged in the sale and distribution of such vaccine, as set forth in paragraph 7 hereof, are also licensed manufacturers thereof.

PAR. 9. On May 26, 1938, the said Department of Agriculture, through its Bureau of Animal Industry, as a part of its program mentioned in paragraph 8 hereof, ordered such licensed establishments to recommend the use of abortion vaccine only for the treatment of calves from 4 to 8 months of age, inclusive. Many licensed manufacturers complied with said order. Respondent, however, by means of various of the representations and statements set forth in paragraph 3 hereof, and others not specifically set out herein, has continued to recommend his vaccines for use regardless of the age of the animal.

PAR. 10. As a direct result of this recommendation by respondent, many members of the consuming public have purchased substantial amounts of respondent's vaccine, and in consequence trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing abortion vaccines who, in compliance with the order of the Department of Agriculture, recommend their vaccines for use only on calves from 4 to 8 months of age. As a result thereof, injury has been done and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 11. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce and unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 21, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent John H. Oesterhaus, an individual, trading as Farmers Vaccine & Supply Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Randolph W. Branch, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by the respondent, appearing in his own behalf, before William C. Reeves, trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and the testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and the exceptions thereto, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, John H. Oesterhaus, is an individual trading as Farmers Vaccine & Supply Co., with his office and principal place of business at 1619 West Sixteenth Street, Kansas City, Mo. Respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a certain drug preparation designated by him as "Abortion Vaccine" and intended for use as a means of rendering cattle immune to a certain ailment or disease known as "Bang's Disease."

In the course and conduct of his business respondent causes, and for more than 3 years last past has caused, his preparation, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Missouri to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in his preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, in substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of similar preparations and other preparations intended for the same purpose.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his business the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing the dissemination of, advertisements concerning his product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, advertisements concerning his product by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in such advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as herein set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in numerous newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation in various States of the United States, and by circulars, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

IMMUNIZE YOUR HERD WITH ABORTION VACCINE.

Simply inject one ample dose well under the skin on the side of neck of each animal in your herd; * * *.

We have shown you that Vaccine will save you more than twice what you pay in infected herds simply for the increased milk flow and the comparative freedom from afterbirth troubles alone. Besides this, and at no extra cost, your heifer or cow is made immune against Bang's abortion disease.

You can Control Infectious Abortion and have an immune herd in a short time best by using our Abortion Vaccine, one dose of which gives a lasting protection.

Our experience indicates that a considerable degree of protection is afforded within two weeks from the use of our Abortion Vaccine.

Dairymen should, however, start at once to build an immune herd—a herd that not only will be a Bang's Disease Free Herd, but which is much more important also an Immune Herd; which even though exposed later will not become infected.

Start now on your yearlings, heifers and two-year olds and vaccinate the balance as convenient.

Since 1932 in herds where abortion losses were heavy, and something had to be done, our Abortion Vaccine has been used on the entire herd at once—heifers, open cows and bred cows at all stages of pregnancy, and the results in thousands of animals in hundreds of herds apparently justified the practice.

* * * let us say again that the use of Abortion Vaccine will immune animals against Bang's disease and result in full term calves, but it will NOT make a reactor cow a non-reactor; at least not for a long time, sometimes 18 months to two years being required.

Abortion Vaccine, is an immunizing agent and as such its purpose is as much to prevent the spread of infection in a herd as to end abortion losses from already infected animals.

Breeding may be commenced at any time you choose after vaccination, but we like to wait a few weeks.

Now to prove to you our own faith in our Abortion Vaccine we are insuring you a calf from each cow.

PAR. 4. Through the use of these statements and representations, and others of a similar nature, the respondent has represented, directly or by implication, that by the injection of his vaccine into each animal of a herd of cattle the entire herd and each treated animal is rendered immune to Bang's Disease; that these results may be obtained in all cases, regardless of the age of the animal and regardless of whether the animal is infected with Bang's Disease at the time of the treatment; that the use of the preparation gives lasting protection and that animals treated with the preparation, although later exposed, will not become infected with the disease; that a substantial degree of protection is afforded within 2 weeks after the treatment is administered; that abortion will be prevented in all females treated with the vaccine and that such females will carry their calves for the full period of time; that females treated with the vaccine may safely be bred at any time after treatment; and that respondent guarantees that a calf will be born to each breeding cow treated with the vaccine.

PAR. 5. The evidence shows, and the Commission finds, that the disease or condition among cattle known as Bang's Disease is an infectious condition caused by certain organisms or bacteria. The principal and most harmful effect of the disease is that when it is present in a pregnant cow it is likely to cause an abortion; that is, cause the premature birth of the calf. In fact, while there are other causes of abortion among cows, probably the greater percentage of such cases are due to the presence of Bang's Disease.

PAR. 6. The method in general use among veterinarians and stockmen for the prevention of Bang's Disease is the injection of a vaccine known as "Strain 19." Respondent's preparation is made of this vaccine, as are practically all other preparations on the market which are intended for the treatment of this disease. It has been found however that the value and effectiveness of the vaccine are limited chiefly to the case of calves of from 4 to 8 months of age. The indiscriminate vaccination of entire herds of cattle with the vaccine is not recommended by veterinarians or stockmen generally. The treatment is not generally recognized as effective in the case of mature cattle, and in fact may prove harmful, in that the use of the vaccine for pregnant cows has the tendency to cause such cows to abort. The treatment is also ineffective as to cattle which are already infected with the disease. In dealing with herds of cattle the generally approved and recognized method of combating Bang's Disease, in addition to the vaccination of the young calves, is to test the members of the herd for the disease and to slaughter those found to be infected.

PAR. 7. The United States Department of Agriculture, through its Bureau of Animal Industry, has been engaged for a number of years in a program for the prevention, control, and ultimate eradication of Bang's Disease. Abortion vaccines may be legally manufactured only in establishments licensed by the Department of Agriculture. Respondent is not a manufacturer of vaccines, but he obtains his vaccine from a laboratory which is a licensed establishment. Many of respondent's competitors are also licensed manufacturers and manufacture the vaccines sold by them.

On May 26, 1938, the Department of Agriculture issued a regulation addressed to "Licensed Establishments and Others," which read in part as follows:

In order that in the marketing and use of bovine abortion vaccine there need be no interference with the Cooperative Control of Bang's Disease, it is hereby ordered: 1. That this vaccine shall be recommended only for the treatment of calves from four to eight months of age, inclusive. * * *

There was a general compliance with this regulation on the part of licensed manufacturers and others engaged in the sale of abortion vaccines. Respondent attached to certain of his advertising literature a notice calling attention to the regulation, but for a substantial period of time he made no change in the advertising material itself; that is, the advertising material continued to carry the representations referred to above.

PAR. 8. The evidence shows, and the Commission finds, that where respondent's preparation is effective the immunity afforded is not in all cases permanent. The period of time during which a vaccinated animal will retain its immunity varies, but a substantial percentage of animals will lose their immunity after the lapse of certain periods of time. No substantial degree of protection is usually afforded within 2 weeks after the treatment. While the immunizing process begins soon after the vaccination, several weeks must elapse in the usual case before any substantial degree of protection develops, the maximum degree of protection being reached about 3 months after the treatment.

The fact that a cow has received the treatment does not necessarily mean that abortion will be prevented and that she will be able to carry her calf for the full period. Nor may treated cows safely be bred at any time after treatment; a period of some 2 or 3 months should be allowed to elapse before such animals are bred. The reason for this is that the animal needs time to develop immunity. In some cases also there is a virulent reaction from the treatment and this reaction might produce the disease.

With respect to respondent's representation that he guarantees that a calf will be born to each breeding cow treated with the preparation, the evidence shows that respondent does not in fact guarantee that result. The only guaranty made by the respondent is that in those cases where a calf is not born the purchase price of the vaccine will be refunded to the purchaser.

PAR. 9. The Commission is therefore of the opinion, and finds, that the representations made by the respondent with respect to his preparation and its effectiveness are exaggerated and misleading, and constitute false advertisements.

PAR. 10. The Commission further finds that the use of these advertisements by respondent has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the therapeutic value of respondent's preparation and with respect to the effectiveness of the preparation, and to cause such portion of the public to purchase respondent's preparation as a result of the erroneous and mistaken belief so engendered. In consequence, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from his competitors, many of whom do not misrepresent the therapeutic value of effectiveness of their products.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves, trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and the exceptions thereto, and briefs filed by Randolph W. Branch, attorney for the Commission, and by the respondent, appearing in his own behalf (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, John H. Oesterhaus, individually and trading as Farmers Vaccine & Supply Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of his drug preparation designated "Abortion Vaccine," or any preparation of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference:

(a) That the use of said preparation upon entire herds of cattle will immunize such herds against the disease known as Bang's Disease, or that said preparation is effective in all cases;

(b) That the immunity afforded by said preparation against Bang's Disease is in all cases permanent;

(c) That said preparation affords in the usual case any substantial degree of protection against Bang's Disease within 2 weeks after its use;

(d) That by the use of said preparation abortion will be prevented in all cases, or that cows treated with said preparation will in all cases carry their calves for the full period of time;

(e) That cows treated with said preparation may safely be bred immediately after such treatment;

(f) That respondent guarantees that a calf will be born to each breeding cow treated with said preparation.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

HENRY M. SALISBURY AND FRANK R. JOHNSON, TRADING AS SMOKE CONDITIONER COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4166. Complaint, June 19, 1940—Decision, June 30, 1941

Where two individuals engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of their "Smoke Conditioner" cigarette holder; in advertising matter distributed by them, expressly and by implication—

Represented that their said product embodied entirely new and revolutionary principles in cigarette holders, never had a bad odor or taste, and prevented nicotine and irritating substances in the cigarette from reaching the smoker, and that use thereof promoted health by eliminating all deleterious substances from the smoke;

Facts being that said "Smoke Conditioner" was not new or revolutionary in its principle of operation; had, after use, both a bad odor and taste; would not prevent nicotine and other irritating substances from reaching the smoker, or promote health by the elimination of all deleterious substances from tobacco smoke; and use thereof eliminated only a small percent of nicotine and other aforesaid substances present in tobacco;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such misleading statements were true and into the purchase of their said product because of such mistaken belief:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas, trial examiner.

Mr. R. A. McOuat for the Commission.

Mr. Crichton Clarke, of New York City, for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Henry M. Salisbury and Frank R. Johnson, trading as Smoke Conditioner Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents Henry M. Salisbury and Frank R. Johnson are individuals trading as Smoke Conditioner Co. with their office and principal place of business at 254 West Thirty-first Street in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondents for more than 1 year last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States of a certain cigarette holder designated as Smoke Conditioner. In the course and conduct of their business, respondents caused their said cigarette holders to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, and in the furtherance of the sale of said product, respondents have made many misleading statements and representations relative to said cigarette holder by means of advertising matter circulated and distributed to purchasers and prospective purchasers located in various States of the United States. Among and typical of such misleading statements and representations contained in said advertising matter distributed as aforesaid, are the following:

Now "Smoke Conditioning," an entirely new and revolutionary principle in cigarette holders, is available with the Smoke Conditioner.

The Smoke Conditioner will remove—by condensation—substances from the cigarette smoke that are detrimental to your health—which ordinarily lodge in the cigarette, itself. This—its main objective—is only one of its outstanding advantages.

The Smoke Conditioner is made of a substance which never permits an objectionable or foul odor to arise, even after several packs of cigarettes have been smoked through it.

You owe it to yourself to get the utmost in pleasure—without any health hazards—from every cigarette you smoke. Buy a Smoke Conditioner today for your health's sake.

The scientific way to avoid excess nicotine cigarette "bite"—harsh irritants.

The Smoke Conditioner has two definite purposes—to cool cigarette smoke and to remove from it all irritating substances.

The Smoke Conditioner never has a bad odor or taste.

The aforesaid statements and representations together with similar statements appearing in respondents' advertising, but not herein set out, purport to be descriptive of respondents' cigarette holder, its functions and its effectiveness in use. In the manner and by the means aforesaid, respondents represent expressly and by implication that said "Smoke Conditioner" embodies entirely new and revolutionary principles in cigarette holders; that it never has a bad odor or taste; that it prevents nicotine and irritating substances in a cigarette from reaching the smoker; and that its use promotes health by eliminating all deleterious substances from the tobacco smoke.

PAR. 3. In truth and in fact, said "Smoke Conditioner" is not new or revolutionary in its principles of operation; it will, after use, have both a bad odor and taste; its use will not prevent nicotine and the irritating substances from reaching the smoker, nor will its use promote health by the elimination of all deleterious substances from tobacco smoke. The use of said holder eliminates only a small percentage of nicotine and other deleterious substances present in tobacco.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid acts and practices used by respondents in connection with the offering for sale and sale of their said cigarette holders have had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to and do mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true, and into the purchase of respondents' said cigarette holders because of said belief.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 19th day of June 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Henry M. Salisbury and Frank R. Johnson, individuals trading as Smoke Conditioner Co., charging them with use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Subsequently respondents filed their answer dated May 12, 1941, in which answer they admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and now being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents Henry M. Salisbury and Frank R. Johnson are individuals trading as Smoke Conditioner Co. with their office and principal place of business at 254 West Thirty-first Street in the city of New York, State of New York. For more than 1 year last past respondents have been engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States of a certain cigarette holder designated as Smoke Conditioner. In the course and conduct of their business, respondents have caused their cigarette holders to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, and in the furtherance of the sale of said product, respondents have made many misleading statements and representations relative to said cigarette holder by means of advertising matter circulated and distributed to purchasers and prospective purchasers located in various States of the United States. Among and typical of such misleading statements and representations contained in said advertising matter distributed as aforesaid are the following:

Now "Smoke Conditioning," an entirely new and revolutionary principle in cigarette holders, is available with the Smoke Conditioner.

The Smoke Conditioner will remove—by condensation—substances from the cigarette smoke that are detrimental to your health—which ordinarily would lodge in the cigarette, itself. This—its main objective—is only one of its outstanding advantages.

The Smoke Conditioner is made of a substance which never permits an objectionable or foul odor to arise, even after several packs of cigarettes have been smoked through it.

You owe it to yourself to get the utmost in pleasure—without any health hazards—from every cigarette you smoke. Buy a Smoke Conditioner today for your health's sake.

The scientific way to avoid excess nicotine cigarette "bite"—harsh irritants.

The Smoke Conditioner has two definite purposes—to cool cigarette smoke and to remove from it all irritating substances.

The Smoke Conditioner never has a bad odor or taste.

The aforesaid statements and representations, together with similar statements appearing in respondents' advertising, but not herein set out, purport to be descriptive of respondents' cigarette holder, its functions and effectiveness in use. Through the use of said statements and representations, respondents have engaged in the practice of falsely representing, expressly and by implication, that said "Smoke Conditioner" embodies entirely new and revolutionary principles in cigarette holders; that said Smoke Conditioner never has a bad odor or taste; that said Smoke Conditioner prevents nicotine and irritating substances in the cigarette from reaching the smoker; and that the use of the Smoke Conditioner promotes health by eliminating all deleterious substances from the tobacco smoke.

PAR. 3. Said representations are exaggerated, false and misleading. The Smoke Conditioner is not new or revolutionary in its principle of operation. It will, after use, have both a bad odor and taste. The use of the Smoke Conditioner will not prevent nicotine and other irritating substances from reaching the smoker. The use of the Smoke Conditioner will not promote health by the elimination of all deleterious substances from tobacco smoke. The use of said cigarette holder eliminates only a small percentage of nicotine and other deleterious substances present in tobacco.

PAR. 4. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false and misleading statements and representations in their advertising literature with respect to their said product has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such misleading statements and representations are true and into the purchase of respondents' product because of said erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and the answer of the respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that the said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Henry M. Salisbury and Frank R. Johnson, individually and trading as Smoke Conditioner Co. or under any other name or names and their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of cigarette holders now known as and sold under the name of "Smoke Conditioner," or any other similar product sold under the same name or any other name in commerce as "commerce" is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing that:

1. Said product embodies any new or revolutionary principles of operation in cigarette holders.

2. Said cigarette holder never has a bad odor or taste.

3. Said product prevents nicotine and irritating substances from reaching the smoker.

4. The use of said product promotes health.

5. Said product eliminates more than a small percentage of any deleterious substances present in tobacco.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall within 60 days after the service on them of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

ACME PREMIUM SUPPLY CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4198. Complaint, July 26, 1940—Decision, June 30, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the competitive interstate sale and distribution of aluminum ware, enamel ware, smoker sets, cigarette cases, lamps, glassware, fishing tackle, and other articles of merchandise—

(a) Supplied its customers with assortments of said merchandise together with Bingo sets, by means of which such merchandise was sold and distributed to the consuming public in a manner involving the operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme under a plan providing that a player securing, by chance, necessary numbers, as drawn by game's operator, to call "Bingo" became entitled to receive as prize one of said articles, value of which exceeded cost of participation to players; and thereby

Supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise, in accordance with aforesaid sales plan or method, involving game of chance to procure article of merchandise at much less than normal price thereof, contrary to established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who, unwilling to use such or other method contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by its said sales plan and the element of chance involved therein and were thereby induced to buy and sell its merchandise in preference to that of its said competitors, and trade in commerce was unfairly diverted to it from them; and

(b) Sold and distributed devices commonly known as push cards and punchboards, separate and apart from any other merchandise, including (1) push cards and punchboards with the legends or instructions printed on the face thereof explaining the manner in which they were to be used in the sale of various specified articles of merchandise, and that purchasers punching disks in the cards and thereby revealing certain lucky numbers received articles of merchandise without additional cost, at prices much less than the normal retail price, and that others received nothing for their money other than the privilege of making a punch; and (2) similar devices bearing no instructions or legends thereon but having blank spaces provided therefor on which purchasers placed instructions of the same import as those printed on the aforesaid devices;

With result that—

(1) Many who sold or distributed candy, cigars, and other articles of merchandise in commerce bought said push card and punchboard devices and packed and assembled assortments comprised of various articles of such merchandise, together with such cards and boards, and retail dealer buyers of such assortments, either as direct or indirect purchasers, and retailers who made up their own assortments, exposed same to purchasing public and sold and distributed such articles through use of said push cards or punchboards and in accordance with sales plans as above described;

involving game of chance or sale of a chance to procure articles in question at prices much less than normal retail price thereof, and the teaching and encouraging of gambling among members of the public; all to the injury thereof, and contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in violation of criminal laws;

(2) Many members of the purchasing public, because of element of chance involved in sale and distribution of said merchandise by means of said push cards and punchboards, and many retailers, were thereby induced to deal or trade with manufacturers, wholesalers, and jobbers selling and distributing their merchandise, together with said devices, in competition with many who, faced with alternative of descending to use of said cards and boards or other similar devices which they were under a powerful moral compulsion not to use, or suffer loss of substantial trade, did not thus sell and distribute their products, because of element of chance or lottery features therein involved, and because such practices were contrary to public policy of the United States; and refrained from supplying to or placing in hands of others such cards, boards, or any other similar devices for such use; whereby substantial trade was unfairly diverted from said competitors to those purchasing and using its said devices; and

(3) It supplied thereby to and placed in the hands of others, through such sale or distribution of said push cards and punchboards, means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in the sale or distribution of merchandise to members of public, and means and instrumentalities for engaging in unfair methods of competition and unfair acts and practices:

Held, (1) That such acts and practices in selling and distributing assortments of merchandise, together with said "Bingo" sets, as above set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein; and

(2) That its acts and practices in selling and distributing said push card and punchboard devices, separate and apart from any other merchandise, to dealers for use in sale and distribution of their products, under circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. J. V. Mishou for the Commission.

Mr. Albert E. Hausman and Mr. Otto F. Karbe, of St. Louis, Mo., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Acme Premium Supply Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Acme Premium Supply Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Wisconsin with its principal office and place of business located at 3139 Olive Street, St. Louis, Mo. Respondent is now and for more than 2 years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of aluminum ware, enamel ware, smoker sets, cigarette cases, lamps, glassware, fishing tackle, and other articles of merchandise. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in St. Louis, Mo., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than the State of Missouri and in the District of Columbia. There is now and for more than 2 years last past has been a course of trade by respondent in said merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals, and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of said business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, the respondent in selling and distributing its said merchandise has supplied its customers with assortments of said merchandise together with certain paraphernalia known as Bingo sets, by means of which said merchandise is sold and distributed to the consuming public in a manner which involves the operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. One of said Bingo sets consists of a tally sheet, containing 75 numbers; a number of Bingo cards on each of which appear 24 numbers arranged in a square, the numbers on the said cards corresponding to the numbers on the tally sheet; and a number of small wooden blocks on each of which appears a number, the numbers on the said blocks also corresponding with the numbers on the tally sheet. Each of said Bingo cards has a different group of numbers thereon, and one of said cards appears substantially as follows:

START BY PLACING GRAIN OF CORN IN "CENTER" 37 FIVE NUMBERS ACROSS ANY LINE WINS

WHEN YOU GET
5 GRAINS IN A ROW
YELL OUT LOUD—
B I N G O

2	21	34	52	75
15	30	39	47	61
4	17	CENTER	58	73
12	28	35	54	62
5	20	37	60	74

By means of said Bingo set, said merchandise is distributed to the purchasing public in substantially the following manner: Respondent's customer, or someone designated by such customer, acts as an operator in the sale or distribution of said merchandise. The operator of the Bingo set places in the hands of each participant one of the said Bingo cards, and each participant pays the operator a designated sum of money for the privilege of participating in the distribution of each of said articles of merchandise. The operator then places the said wooden blocks in a container and so mixes them that the numbers thereon are concealed until one of said wooden blocks is withdrawn from the container by the operator. In the center of the participant's Bingo card is a square marked "CENTER" and each participant places a marker thereon before the aforesaid drawing of said numbers is begun. The operator then proceeds with the drawing of numbers from the aforesaid mixing container and calls out the number appearing on each wooden block as said block is withdrawn from said container and the person on whose card such number appears places one of said markers over such number. This same procedure is followed until one of the participants has succeeded in marking five numbers on said card, which numbers form a straight line across the card, either horizontally, vertically or diagonally. The sequence or distribution of the numbers which control the placing of the markers is determined wholly by chance. Upon marking the last of said five numbers the participant calls out the word "Bingo." The marked numbers are called out by the operator who checks the same with the numbers on said tally sheet, and if such numbers have been correctly marked the participant is entitled to and receives one of said articles of merchandise as a prize. The other participants receive nothing for their money. This same procedure is repeated until all of said articles of merchandise or prizes have been distributed. The articles of merchandise therein vary but each of said articles of merchandise is of greater value than the amount paid by each participant for participation in the distribution of said merchandise as above described. The said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent has sold and distributed various Bingo sets and other devices for use in the sale and distribution of his merchandise to the consuming public by lot or chance, but the principle of operation in connection with each of said Bingo sets or devices is similar to the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. The persons who have purchased either directly or indirectly, respondent's said assortments of merchandise, together with said Bingo sets, have used said Bingo sets in selling and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan or method. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plan or method hereinabove described. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale and distribution of its merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said sales plan or method or any sales plan or method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other sales plan or method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise, and by the element of chance involved therein, and have been and are induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent sales plans or methods. The use of said sales plan or method by respondent because of said game of chance has the tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent sales plans or methods.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as hereinabove alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Count 2

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Acme Premium Supply Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Wisconsin with its office and principal place of business located at 3139 Olive Street, St. Louis, Mo. Respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of devices commonly known as push cards and punchboards to dealers in various other articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent causes and has caused said devices, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in St. Louis, Mo., to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in various States of the United States other than the State of Missouri and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade by said respondent in such push cards and punchboards, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, to dealers push cards and punchboards so prepared and arranged as to involve games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when used in making sales of merchandise to the consuming public. Respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed, many kinds of said push cards and punchboards, but all of said push cards and punchboards involve the same chance or lottery features, when used in connection with the sale or distribution of merchandise and vary only in detail.

Many of said push cards and punchboards have printed on the faces thereof certain legends or instructions that explain the manner in which said devices are to be used or may be used in the sale or distribution of various specified articles of merchandise. The prices of the sales on push cards and punchboards vary in accordance with the individual device. Each purchaser is entitled to one punch or push from the device, for the amount of money paid, and when a push or punch is made a disk or printed slip is separated from the push card or punchboard and a number is disclosed. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the push or punch completed. Certain specified numbers entitle purchasers to designated articles of merchandise. Persons securing lucky or winning numbers receive articles of merchandise without additional cost at prices which are much less than the normal retail price of said articles of merchandise. Persons not obtaining one of the lucky or winning numbers receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of making a push or punch from said card or board. The articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the consuming or purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Others of said push card and punchboard devices have no instructions or legends thereon but have blank spaces provided therefor. On those push cards and punchboards the purchasers thereof place instructions or legends which have the same import and meaning as the instructions or legends placed by the respondents on said push card and punchboard devices first hereinabove described. The only use to be made of said push card and punchboard devices, and the only manner in which they are used by the ultimate purchasers thereof, is in combination with other merchandise so as to enable said ultimate purchasers to sell or distribute said other merchandise by means of lot or chance as hereinabove alleged.

PAR. 3. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute, and have sold and distributed, candy, cigarettes, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, purchase and have purchased respondent's said push card and punchboard devices and pack and assemble, and have packed and assembled, assortments comprised of various articles of merchandise, together with said push card and punchboard devices. Retail dealers who have purchased said assortments, either directly or indirectly, or retail dealers who have purchased said devices direct from respondent and made up their own assortments, have exposed the same to the purchasing public and have sold or distributed said articles of merchandise by means of said push cards and punchboards in accordance with the sales plans as described in paragraph 2 hereof. Because of the element of chance involved in connection with the sale and distribution of said merchandise by means of said push cards and punchboards, many members of the purchasing public have been induced to trade or deal with retail dealers selling or distributing said merchandise by means thereof. As a result thereof, many retail dealers have been induced to deal with or trade with manufacturers, wholesale dealers and jobbers who sell and distribute said merchandise, together with said devices. Said persons, firms, and corporations have many competitors who sell or distribute like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said competitors are faced with the alternative of descending to the use of said push card and punchboard devices, or other similar devices, which they are under a powerful moral compulsion not to use in connection with the sale or distribution of their merchandise, or to suffer the loss of substantial trade. Said competitors do not sell or distribute their merchandise by means of push card and punchboard devices, or similar devices, because of the element of chance or lottery features involved therein, and because such practices are contrary to the public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws, and such competitors refrain from supplying to, or placing in the hands of, other push card and punchboard devices, or any other similar devices, which are to be used, or which may be used in connection with the sale or distribution of the merchandise of such competitors to the general public by means of a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise. As a result thereof, substantial trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia has been unfairly diverted from said competitors who do not sell or use said devices to persons, firms, and corporations who purchase and use said devices of the respondent.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public through the use of, or by means of, such devices in the manner above alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof, and teaches and encourages gambling among members of the public, all to the injury of the public. The use of said sales plans or methods in the sale of merchandise, and the sale of merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plans or methods, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and in violation of criminal laws, and constitutes unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

The sale or distribution of said push card and punchboard devices by the respondent, as hereinabove alleged, supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in the sale or distribution of merchandise. The respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of said persons, firms, and corporations the means of, and the instrumentalities for, engaging in unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as hereinabove alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on July 26, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Acme Premium Supply Corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granting respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening proceedure and further hearings as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than the State of Missouri and in the District of Columbia. There is now and for more than 2 years last past has been a course of trade by respondent in said merchandise in commerce between and among the various states of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations, and with individuals, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of said business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, the respondent in selling and distributing its said merchandise has supplied its customers with assortments of said merchandise, together with certain paraphernalia known as Bingo sets, by means of which said merchandise is sold and distributed to the consuming public in a manner which involves the operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. One of said Bingo sets consists of a tally sheet, containing 75 numbers; a number of Bingo cards on each of which appear 24 numbers arranged in a square, the numbers on the said cards corresponding to the numbers on the tally sheet; and a number of small wooden blocks on each of which appears a number, the numbers on the said blocks also corresponding with the number on the tally sheet. Each of said Bingo cards has a different group of numbers thereon, and one of said cards appears substantially as follows:

START BY PLACING GRAIN OF CORN IN "CENTER"		37		FIVE NUMBERS ACROSS ANY LINE WINS WHEN YOU GET 5 GRAINS IN A ROW YELL OUT LOUD— B I N G O
15	30	39	47	61
4	17	CENTER	58	73
12	28	35	54	62
5	20	37	60	74

By means of said Bingo sets, said merchandise is distributed to the purchasing public in substantially the following manner: Respondent's customer, or someone designated by such customer, acts as an operator in the sale or distribution of said merchandise. The operator of the Bingo set places in the hands of each participant one of the said Bingo cards, and each participant pays the operator a designated sum of money for the privilege of participating in the distribution of each of said articles of merchandise. The operator then places the said wooden blocks in a container and so mixes them that the numbers thereon are concealed until one of said wooden blocks is withdrawn from the container by the operator. In the center of the participant's Bingo cards is a square marked "CENTER" and each participant places a marker thereon before the aforesaid drawing of said numbers is begun. The operator then proceeds with the drawing of numbers from the aforesaid mixing container and calls out the number appearing on each wooden block as said block is withdrawn from said container and the person on whose card such number appears places one of said markers over such number. This same procedure is followed until one of the participants has succeeded in marking five numbers on said card, which numbers form a straight line across the card, either horizontally, vertically or diagonally. The sequence or distribution of the numbers which control the placing of the markers is determined wholly by chance. Upon marking the last of said five numbers the participant calls out the word "Bingo." The marked numbers are called out by the operator who checks the same with the numbers on said tally sheet, and if such numbers have been correctly marked the participant is entitled to and receives one of said articles of merchandise as a prize. The other participants receive nothing for their money. This same procedure is repeated until all of said articles of merchandise or prizes have been distributed. The articles of merchandise vary but each of said articles of merchandise is of greater value than the amount paid by each participant for participation in the distribution of said merchandise as above described. The said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent has sold and distributed various Bingo sets and other devices for use in the sale and distribution of his merchandise to the consuming public by lot or chance, but the principle of operation in connection with each of said Bingo sets or devices is similar to the the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. The persons who have purchased either directly or indirectly, respondent's said assortments of merchandise, together with said Bingo sets, have used said Bingo sets in selling and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan or method. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plan or method hereinabove described.

The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale and distribution of its merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said sales plan or method or any sales plan or method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other sales plan or method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise, and by the element of chance involved therein, and have been and are induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent sales plans or methods. The use of said sales plan or method by respondent because of said game of chance has the tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent sales plans or methods.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of its business, the respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of devices commonly known as push cards and punchboards separate and apart from any other merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent causes and has caused said devices, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in St. Louis, Mo., to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in various States of the United States other than the State of Missouri and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for some time last past a course of trade by said respondent in such push cards and punchboards in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

and distributed, to dealers push cards and punchboards so prepared and arranged as to involve games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when used in making sales of merchandise to the consuming public. Respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed, many kinds of said push cards and punchboards, but all of said push cards and punchboards involve the same chance or lottery features, when used in connection with the sale or distribution of merchandise and vary only in detail.

Many of said push cards and punchboards have printed on the faces thereof certain legends or instructions that explain the manner in which said devices are to be used or may be used in the sale or distribution of various specified articles of merchandise. The prices of the sales on push cards and punchboards vary in accordance with the individual device. Each purchaser is entitled to one punch or push from the device, for the amount of money paid, and when a push or punch is made a disk or printed slip is separated from the push card or punchboard and a number is disclosed. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the push or punch completed. Certain specified numbers entitled purchasers to designated articles of merchandise. Persons securing lucky or winning numbers receive articles of merchandise without additional cost at prices which are much less than the normal retail price of said articles of merchandise. Persons not obtaining one of the lucky or winning numbers receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of making a push or punch from said card or board. The articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the consuming or purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Others of said push card and punchboard devices have no instructions or legends thereon but have blank spaces provided therefor. On those push cards and punchboards the purchasers thereof place instructions or legends which have the same import and meaning as the instructions or legends placed by the respondent on said push card and punchboard devices first hereinabove described. The only use to be made of said push card and punchboard devices, and the only manner in which they are used by the ultimate purchasers thereof, is in combination with other merchandise so as to enable said ultimate purchasers to sell or distribute said other merchandise by means of lot or chance as hereinabove found.

PAR. 7. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute, and have sold and distributed, candy, cigarettes, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, purchase and have purchased respondent's said push card and punchboard devices and pack and assemble, and have packed and assembled. assortments comprised of various articles of merchandise, together with said push card and punchboard devices. Retail dealers who have purchased said assortments, either directly or indirectly, or retail dealers who have purchased said devices direct from respondent and made up their own assortments, have exposed the same to the purchasing public and have sold or distributed said articles of merchandise by means of said push cards and punchboards in accordance with the sales plans as described in paragraph 6 hereof. Because of the element of chance involved in connection with the sale and distribution of said merchandise by means of said push cards and punchboards, many members of the purchasing public have been induced to trade or deal with retail dealers selling or distributing said merchandise by means thereof. As a result thereof, many retail dealers have been induced to deal with or trade with manufacturers, wholesale dealers, and jobbers who sell and distribute said merchandise, together with said devices. Said persons, firms, and corporations have many competitors who sell or distribute like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said competitors are faced with the alternative of descending to the use of said push card and punchboard devices, or other similar devices, which they are under a powerful moral compulsion not to use in connection with the sale or distribution of their merchandise, or to suffer the loss of substantial trade. Said competitors do not sell or distribute their merchandise by means of push cards and punchboard devices, or similar devices, because of the element of chance or lottery features involved therein, and because such practices are contrary to the public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws, and such competitors refrain from supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others push card and punchboard devices, or any other similar devices, which are to be used, or which may be used, in connection with the sale or distribution of the merchandise of such competitors to the general public by means of a lottery, game of chance, or gift enterprise. As a result thereof, substantial trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia has been unfairly diverted from said competitors who do not sell or use said devices to persons, firms, and corporations who purchase and use said devices of the respondent.

PAR. 8. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public through the use of, or by means of, such devices in the manner above found, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof, and teaches and encourages gambling among members of the public, all to the injury of the public. The use of said sales plans or methods in the sale of merchandise, and the sale of merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plans or methods, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and in violation of criminal laws, and constitutes unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

The sale or distribution of said push card and punchboard devices by the respondent, as hereinabove found, supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries, games of chance, or gift enterprises in the sale or distribution of merchandise. The respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of said persons, firms, and corporations the means of, and the instrumentalities for, engaging in unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent in selling and distributing its said assortments of merchandise, together with Bingo sets, as hereinabove found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and the aforesaid acts and practices of respondent in selling and distributing said push card and punchboard devices separate and apart from any other merchandise to dealers for use in the sale and distribution of said dealer's merchandise, as hereinabove found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the substitute answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and the conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Acme Premium Supply Corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of aluminum ware, enamel ware, smoker's sets, cigarette cases, lamps, glassware, fishing tackle, or any other articles of merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of such merchandise to the public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others any merchandise, together with Bingo sets, punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery devices which said Bingo sets, punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others Bingo sets, punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices, either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said Bingo sets, punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

4. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others punchboards, push or pull cards or other lottery devices which are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing any merchandise to the public.

5. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

DENISTON COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4219. Complaint, Aug. 6, 1940—Decision, June 30, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture and in the interstate sale of lead head roofing nails, including types designated as "drive screw" and "ring shank"; in advertising in circulars and in trade publications—

(a) Represented and implied that the holding power of its "drive screw" and "annular ring" nails was approximately four times that of the straight shank nails, facts being that while such nails may have more holding power than other, they do not have four times, or even twice, holding power of said other; and

(b) Represented and implied that its "drive screw" shank nail would afford greater holding power than any other type of lead head nail, facts being that, while such nail, as well as same type made by its competitors, might have greater holding power than other types of lead head nails under certain conditions of use, they did not have such holding power under all conditions:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Clark Nichols for the Commission.

Parker & Carter, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Deniston Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Deniston Co., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business at 4856 South Western Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture and sale of lead head roofing nails of various kinds, one type being designated by the respondent as "drive screw" and another type being designated "ring shank." Respondent causes said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located at various points in the several States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce between and among the several States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business in said commerce as aforesaid and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its roofing nails designated "drive screw" and "ring shank," respondent has circulated among prospective purchasers of said products through advertisements in the form of circulars and advertisements placed in trade publications, many statements concerning the claimed superiority and efficiency of its said nails over those manufactured and sold by competitors in said commerce. Among the statements so used and circulated among prospective purchasers by the respondents are the following:

The holding power of drive screw and annular ring nails is approximately 4 times that of the straight shank nail.

* * * * * * *

The drive screw shank gives the nail greater holding power than any other lead head nail made.

Through the use of the foregoing statements, and others of similar import and meaning not set out herein, the respondent represents and implies that the holding power of its "drive screw" nail and the holding power of its "ring shank" nail is approximately four times that of the straight shank nail; that a nail provided with the "drive screw" shank will afford greater holding power than any other type of lead head nail and that both the "drive screw" nail and the "ring shank" nail possess a substantial superiority in holding power over all competitive products.

PAR. 3. The above and foregoing representations and implications are false, misleading, and deceptive, for in truth and in fact, the holding power of respondent's "drive screw" nail or respondent's "ring shank" nail is not four times that of the straight shank nail. Respondent's "drive screw" shank nail will not afford greater holding power than all other types of lead head nails. The comparative superiority and holding power claimed by the respondent for both types of its nails is greatly in excess of any superiority that does exist between either of said types of nails and straight shank nails and other competitive nails.

PAR. 4. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading representations and implications respecting its said product as to the holding power and superiority of its product over all other types of lead head nails, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that such representations and implications are true, and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such mistaken and erroneous belief, to purchase said product.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 6th day of August 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Deniston Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of an answer by respondent thereto, a stipulation as to the facts was entered into between Parker and Carter, attorneys of record for respondent, by Leslie M. Carter on behalf of respondent, and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel of the Federal Trade Commission, in which it is provided that the Commission may proceed upon such statement of facts, including the inferences which may be drawn therefrom, to make its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and to enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument, the filing of briefs, or the filing of a trial examiner's report upon the evidence.

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved by the Commission, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Deniston Co., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal place of business at 4856 South Western Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now and for more than 2 years last past has been engaged in the manufacture and sale of lead head roofing nails of various kinds, one type being designated by the respondent as "drive screw" and another type being designated as "ring shank."

Respondent also makes and sells a type known as "plain barbed." Respondent causes said products when sold to be transported from its place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located at various points in the several States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business in said commerce, as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its roofing nails designated "drive screw" and "ring shank," respondent has circulated among prospective purchasers of said products, advertisements in the form of circulars and statements placed in trade publications, in which it claims superiority and efficiency for its said nails over those manufactured and sold by competitors in said commerce. Among the statements so used and circulated among prospective purchasers by the respondent are the following:

The holding power of drive screw and annular ring nails is approximately 4 times that of the straight shank nails.

The drive screw shank gives the nail greater holding power than any other lead head nail made.

PAR. 3. Through the use of the first of the foregoing quoted statements, the respondent represents and implies that the holding power of its "drive screw" and "annular ring" nails is approximately four times that of a straight shank nail.

The first of the above quoted statements is exaggerated, false, and misleading, because, while the "drive screw" and the "annular ring" nails may have more holding power than straight shank nails they do not have four times the holding power or even twice the holding power of the straight shank nails.

Through the use of the second of the foregoing statements, the respondent represents and implies that its "drive screw" shank nail will afford greater holding power than any other type of lead head nail.

The second statement above quoted is exaggerated, false, and misleading, because, while the "drive screw" nail made by the respondent as well as the drive screw type of nail made by respondent's competitors may have greater holding power than other types of lead head nails under certain conditions of use, they do not have such greater holding power under all conditions of use.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission, upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondent herein and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Deniston Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale and the sale and distribution of its lead head roofing nails, in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from, directly or indirectly:

1. Representing in any manner, that the holding power of its drive screw and annular ring nails is approximately four times that of the straight shank nail, or any other number of times in excess of the true ratio of the holding power of such nails.

2. Representing in any manner, that its drive screw shank nail has greater holding power than any other type of lead head nail, under all conditions of use.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

HOWARD S. WEAVER, TRADING AS WEAVER REAL ESTATE APPRAISAL TRAINING SERVICE

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4353. Complaint, Oct. 22, 1940—Decision, June 30, 1941

Where an individual engaged in interstate sale and distribution of correspondence home study courses in rural and city real estate appraisal training; in offering his said courses through his sales representatives, advertisements in newspapers and magazines of general circulation, printed matter and radio broadcasts—

(a) Represented and implied that the demand for land appraisers greatly exceeded the supply, and that land appraising was an uncrowded field lacking qualified men, through such statements as "Never before was the demand so great and the shortage so acute," and "At present the appraisal field is using thousands of unskilled, untrained men who should be replaced—and are being replaced * * * with competent, qualified trained men as rapidly as they are available"; and

(b) Represented and implied that various Government loan agencies, as well as private industry, were seeking men trained by him, that the Civil Service Commission was holding examinations for land appraisers from time to time with salaries up to $3,800 obtainable, that men trained by him were earning $175 to $300 monthly, and that choice money-making positions were available to them;

The facts being that, while in some instances in certain locations, services of competent appraisers were not available, there were more appraisers with field experience than could be gainfully employed; occupation in question does not, of itself, insure choice money-making opportunities; it was not true that loan agencies or private industry were seeking men trained by him, and that institutions acquainted with his school commended it most highly and were eager to get his graduates (notwithstanding his training was highly thought of by some who employed such graduates); and while Civil Service Commission had held examinations in recent years for real-estate appraisers, considerable experience was required, with exception of examination for Junior Appraiser for Land Banks, for which, however, graduation from said individual's school alone would not qualify the graduate; choice money-making positions were not available to his graduates, he did not have jobs to offer and was not in a position to guarantee earnings in any amount; and

(c) Represented that only a limited number of students were to be selected for training, and that each student was to receive his individual assistance and guidance; and

(d) Represented and implied that the tuition fee was less than half the regular tuition charge, through statement that, in view of his confidence in students securing "one of the many positions available on completing the course," he asked payment of less than half of the low fee in two installments, with balance to be paid when employment was secured as field-man, appraiser or supervisor;

The facts being number of students permitted to enroll was not limited, said individual did not give his personal attention and care to every student, work of correction of papers being entrusted to two assistants, who did not refer to him answers deemed correct, each student, however, during the course of training receiving at least two personal letters from him; and course was not sold for less than half the regular tuition fee but regular full tuition fee was charged;

With effect of leading purchasers and prospective purchasers into the belief that aforesaid representations were true, and of inducing them to purchase and pursue his courses of study on account of such belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Robert S. Hall, trial examiner.

Mr. Wilbur N. Baughman and Mr. L. E. Creel, Jr. for the Commission.

Mr. A. L. Vonck, of Kansas City, Mo., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Howard S. Weaver, an individual, trading under the name Weaver Real Estate Appraisal Training Service, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Howard S. Weaver, is an individual, trading under the name Weaver Real Estate Appraisal Training Service, with his office, and principal place of business at 2322 East Forty-ninth Street, Kansas City, State of Missouri.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and for several years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of home-study courses in rural and city real-estate appraisal training. Said courses of study and instruction are pursued by correspondence through the medium of the United States mail. He causes said courses, together with books and material used in connection therewith, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Missouri to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said courses in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent, in soliciting the sale of, and in selling, his said courses of study and instruction, and in the distribution thereof in said commerce, has made numerous false and misleading statements and representations with reference to said courses of study by one or more of the following methods, to wit: through his sales representatives engaged in soliciting the sale of such courses; through advertising matter published in newspapers and magazines circulated among the general public; through printed matter distributed among prospective students, enrolled students and others located in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and through radio broadcasts to members of the public generally. Among and typical of such false and misleading statements and representations made by or through one or more of the said methods are the following:

Here's good news for ambitious men from 25 to 55. Right now when most industrial and professional fields are overcrowded there is an actual lack of trained men to act as farm land appraisers, field men and town and city residence and business property appraisers * * * To meet this great shortage of trained men the Weaver Real Estate Appraisal Training Service was founded.

Never before was the demand so great and the shortage so acute.

At present the appraisal field is using thousands of unskilled, untrained men who should be replaced—and are being replaced—with competent, qualified, trained men as rapidly as they are available.

The real estate appraisal field offers to trained men choice money-making opportunities.

The New Federal Housing Bill passed by Congress will cause the F. H. A. to be greatly expanded and thousands of new appraisers will be needed by this agency and other financial institutions cooperating with the F. H. A.

The United States Government Loan Agencies, the Major insurance companies, banks, trust companies all need hundreds of (appraisers) * * * In a circular recently issued by the Government for Civil Service applicants, form number 2279, positions as land appraisers were listed at $5,800 per year, associate land appraisers $3,200 and assistant land appraisers $2,600. * * * The natural question is, how does one fit himself for such a secure, well-paid position? The answer to that is easy—you can get such a training right in your own home through the Weaver Real Estate Appraisal Training Service.

Institutions who know the Weaver school commend it most highly and are eager to get Weaver trained men.

WANTED—Men to train for farm land appraisers * * * earn $175 to $300 monthly * * * write Weaver Real Estate Appraisal Training Service.

To make certain that you do fully grasp all points you will find a set of questions with each lesson that you answer and return to us, Mr. Weaver personally scanning these and correcting you if you are wrong on any points. This personal service has a rather sharp limit to it. That is, Mr. Weaver can give his personal attention and care to only so many students. When that point is reached no fresh enrollments can be accepted.

Here then is your big opportunity. The course can be taken in 6 to 12 weeks right in your own home, and so sure is Mr. Weaver that you will fit one of the many positions available on completing the course that you are asked to pay less than half of the low fee in two installments. The balance is to be paid only when you secure employment as field man, appraiser, or supervisor.

By the means and in the manner aforesaid, the respondent represents and implies that the demand for land appraisers greatly exceeds the supply. The prospective student, and the public generally, is led to believe that land appraising is an uncrowded field, lacking qualified men; with the various loan agencies of the Federal Government, as well as private industry, being on the lookout for Weaver trained men. Respondent further represents and implies that the Civil Service Commission is holding examinations for land appraisers, from time to time, and that salaries up to $5,800 are obtainable. Weaver trained men are represented as earning $175 to $300 monthly, and that choice money-making opportunities are available. The prospective student is induced to enroll on the representation that only a limited number are selected for training; that each student receives the individual assistance and guidance of Mr. Weaver, the head of the school; and that the tuition fee is less than half the regular tuition charged.

PAR. 4. The foregoing statements and representations are false, misleading, and deceptive. In truth and in fact there is not a lack of appraisers, nor does the demand exceed the supply. The appraisal field is not using thousands of unskilled, untrained men, who are being replaced by competent, trained men as rapidly as they are available. As a matter of fact, there are already more appraisers with field experience than can be gainfully employed and such an occupation does not of itself assure choice money-making opportunities.

The various loan agencies of the United States Government do not need additional or newly trained appraisers, and lucrative earnings cannot be assured; nor is there a demand in private industry for appraisers which will assure lucrative earnings.

Furthermore, the Civil Service Commission has not held an appraisal examination in recent years, as represented by respondent; and graduating from respondent's school, in and of itself, would not qualify the graduate to take such examination, if and when held.

It is not a fact that institutions which know the Weaver School commend it most highly and are eager to get Weaver trained graduates; but the facts are that the respondent daily contacts large business houses in an effort to get them to employ the graduates of his school, with only limited success. The respondent does not have jobs to offer, and is not in position to guarantee earnings of $175 to $300 monthly, or in any amount. The number of students permitted to enroll is not limited as represented; nor does the respondent personally scan and correct all answers or give his personal attention and care to every student. The course is not sold for less than half as represented, but the regular full tuition fee is charged.

PAR. 5. The foregoing acts and practices used by respondent in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of his said courses of study and instruction, as hereinbefore set out, have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations as herein alleged, are true, and to induce them to purchase and pursue such courses of study and instruction on account thereof.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on October 22, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Howard S. Weaver, an individual trading under the name Weaver Real Estate Appraisal Training Service, charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the said act, and on November 13, 1940, the respondent filed his answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, at a regularly scheduled hearing, counsel for the respondent and counsel for the Commission entered into a stipulation whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts read into the record at said hearing might be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of, and in opposition to, the charges stated in the complaint. Respondent also waived the filing of a report on the evidence by the trial examiner, brief, and his right to request oral argument. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer and stipulation and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Howard S. Weaver, is an individual trading under the name Weaver Real Estate Appraisal Training Service, with his office and principal place of business at 2322 East Forty-ninth Street, Kansas City, Mo.

PAR. 2. The respondent is now and for several years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of home study courses in rural and city real estate appraisal training. Said courses of study and instruction are pursued by correspondence through the medium of the United States mail. He causes said courses, together with the books and material used in connection therewith when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Missouri to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent in soliciting the sale of, and in selling, his said courses of study and instruction, and in the distribution thereof in said commerce, has made numerous statements and representations with reference to said courses of study by one or more of the following methods, to wit: through his sales representatives engaged in soliciting the sale of such courses; through advertising matter published in newspapers and magazines circulated among the general public; through printed matter distributed among prospective students, enrolled students and others located in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and through radio broadcasts to members of the public generally. Among and typical of such statements and representations made by or through one or more of the said methods are the following:

Here is good news for ambitious men from 25 to 55. Right now when most industrial and professional fields are overcrowded there is an actual lack of trained men to act as farm land appraisers, field men and town and city residences and business property appraisers * * * to meet this great shortage of trained men the Weaver Real Estate Appraisal Training Service was founded.

At present the appraisal field is using thousands of unskilled, untrained men who should be replaced—and are being replaced * * * with competent, qualified trained men as rapidly as they are available.

The real estate appraisal field offers to trained men choice money-making opportunities.

The new Federal Housing Bill passed by Congress will cause the Federal Housing Authority to be greatly expanded and thousands of new appraisers will be needed by this agency and other financial institutions cooperating with the F. H. A.

The United States Government loan agencies, the Major insurance companies, banks, trust companies, all need hundreds of (appraisers) * * * In a circular recently issued by the Government for Civil Service applicants (Form No. 44279), positions as Land Appraisers were listed at $3,800 per year; Associate Land Appraisers, $3,200 and Assistant Land Appraisers, $2,600 * * * the natural question is how does one fit himself for such a secure, well paid position? The answer to that is easy—you can get such a training right in your own home through the Weaver Real Estate Appraisal Training Service.

Institutions who know the Weaver School commend it most highly and are eager to get Weaver trained men.

WANTED—men to train for farm land appraisers * * * earn $175 to $300 monthly * * * Write Weaver Real Estate Appraisal Training Service.

To make certain that you do fully grasp all points you will find a set of questions with each lesson and return to us. Mr. Weaver personally scanning these and correcting you if you are wrong on any point. This personal service has a rather sharp limit to it. That is, Mr. Weaver can give his personal attention and care to only so many students. When that point is reached no fresh enrollments can be accepted.

Here then is your big opportunity. The course can be taken in 6 to 12 weeks right in your own home and so sure is Mr. Weaver that you will get one of the many positions available on completing the course that you are asked to pay less than half of the low fee in two installments. The balance is to be paid only when you secure employment as field-man, appraiser or supervisor.

PAR. 4. By the means and in the manner aforesaid, the respondent represented and implied that the demand for land appraisers greatly exceeded the supply; that land appraising was an uncrowded field, lacking qualified men; that various loan agencies of the Government, as well as private industry, were seeking men trained by respondent; that the Civil Service Commission was holding examinations for land appraisers from time to time, and that salaries up to $3,800 were obtainable; that men trained by respondent were earning $175 to $300 monthly, and that choice money-making positions were available to them.

The respondent further represented that only a limited number of students were to be selected for training; that each student was to receive the individual assistance and guidance of respondent, the head of the school, and that the tuition fee was less than half the regular tuition charge.

In truth and in fact there was not and is not a lack of appraisers, nor has the demand exceeded the supply. However, there have been instances in certain locations in which prospective employers sought to secure the services of competent appraisers and in certain instances such appraisers were not available. The appraisal field is not using thousands of unskilled men who are being replaced by competent trained men wherever they are available. There are already more appraisers with field experience than can be gainfully employed and such an occupation does not of itself insure choice money-making opportunities.

PAR. 5. The various loan agencies of the United States Government do not need additional or newly trained appraisers and lucrative employment can not be assured; nor is there demand in private industry for appraisers which will assure lucrative earnings. The Civil Service Commission has in recent years held examinations for real-estate appraisers, as represented by the respondent but the applicants for such examinations were required to have had considerable experience in actual appraisal work except that examinations have been called by the Civil Service Commission for Junior Appraiser for Land Banks who were not required to have had actual experience in real-estate appraisal work. Graduation from respondent's school in and of itself would not qualify the graduate to take such examination.

PAR. 6. It is not a fact that institutions which know the respondent's school commend it most highly and are eager to get respondent's graduates. The respondent daily contacts large business houses in an effort to get them to employ the graduates of his school with only limited success. However, there are among the institutions so contacted several who think highly of the training of the respondent's school and have employed graduates from the school. The respondent does not have jobs to offer and is not in position to guarantee earnings of from $175 to $300 a month or in any amount. The number of students permitted to enroll is not limited as was represented; nor does the respondent personally scan and correct all answers or give his personal attention and care to every student. The respondent employs two assistants among whose duties is the work of correcting the lessons of the students. If, in the opinion of these employees the answers given are correct, they are not referred to respondent for attention. However, when, in the opinion of these employees the answers to the questions are incorrect they are then referred to respondent for correction. During the course of training each student receives at least two personal letters from Mr. Weaver. The course was not sold for less than half the regular tuition fee as was represented, but the regular full tuition fee was charged.

PAR. 7. The foregoing acts and practices used by respondent in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of his said course of study and instruction, as hereinbefore set out, have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, lead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the belief that such representations as herein alleged are true; and to induce them to purchase and pursue such courses of study and instruction on account thereof.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid advertising material was used by respondent during the year 1939 but its use has since been discontinued.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent and a stipulation as to the facts entered into on the record herein, and the Commission having duly considered the record and having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Howard S. Weaver, an individual trading as Weaver Real Estate Appraisal Training Service, or under any other trade name, and his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of home study courses in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. That there is a lack of real-estate appraisers available for employment or that the demand for such appraisers exceeds the supply.

2. That the real-estate appraisal field is using thousands of unskilled, untrained men who are being replaced by competent trained men as rapidly as they are available.

3. That the various loan agencies of the United States Government and private lending agencies need additional or newly trained appraisers.

4. That lucrative earnings can be assured trained real-estate appraisers.

5. That institutions generally, which know the respondent's school, commend it most highly or are eager to get respondent's graduates.

6. That he can assure or guarantee earnings in any amount to graduates of his school.

7. That the number of students permitted to enroll in his school is limited.

8. That he personally corrects all written lessons of his students.

9. That his course of study is sold for less than half the regular tuition fee charged.

10. That graduation from his school in and of itself, qualifies one for a Government position as a real-estate appraiser.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

PLOMB TOOL COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4384. Complaint, Nov. 23, 1940—Decision, June 30, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of tools and other articles of merchandise to wholesalers, jobbers, and retailers, and in advertising same and its sales plan or method for resale thereof to purchasing public by means of printed cards, circulars, samples, and personal solicitation—

Furnished, together with its said products, various club plans which involved resale thereof to purchasing public by use of game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery, and under which, as illustrative, through plan of fixed weekly payments for specified number of weeks, and weekly drawings, certain members received $25 worth of its tools for $1, $2, $3, etc., in accordance with chance drawing of particular member's name at first, second, and succeeding weekly drawings, all others paying full amount, and which included, at the end of the period, drawing for a grand prize, to which all members of the club were eligible; and thereby

Supplied to and placed in the hands of retailers means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise through their exposure and sale of same to purchasing public in accordance with such plans, under which the amount the ultimate purchaser paid for products, and fact as to which club member received final award, was determined wholly by lot or chance, and which involved game of chance to procure articles of merchandise at much less than normal retail price; contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws, and in competition with many who, unwilling to adopt and use such or any method contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by its said sales plan and element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell its merchandise in preference to that offered and sold by its competitors who did not use the same or an equivalent method, and with effect of unfairly diverting trade in commerce to it from its said competitors, to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That said acts and practices, as above set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr. and Mr. J. V. Mishou for the Commission.
Mr. William Hawes Smith, of Los Angeles, Calif., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal

Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Plomb Tool Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Plomb Tool Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, with its principal office and place of business located at 2209 Santa Fe Avenue, Los Angeles, Calif. Respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of tools and other articles of merchandise. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of California to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than the State of California and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in said merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold its said merchandise to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers, along with a sales plan or method by which the said merchandise is to be, and is, resold to the purchasing public. Said plan or method involves the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme in the sale and distribution of said merchandise to the ultimate purchasers thereof. Respondent has advertised its said merchandise and its said sales plan or method by means of printed cards, circulars, samples of said merchandise, and by personal solicitation. The sales plan or method as suggested and advertised by respondent is substantially as follows:

The sales plan or method is described as the "Tool Club." Each club has a fixed number of members, usually 100. Each member of a club pays a fixed amount each week, usually $1, for a period not to exceed a given number of weeks, usually 25 weeks. At the end of the first week a drawing is held and the member whose name or number is drawn receives from the retail dealer his choice of $25 worth of respondent's tools, for the payment of 1 week's dues, and such winner or member then is dropped from the club. Each succeeding week the same procedure is followed and thus one member receives tools as aforesaid for the payment of 1 week's dues, another for 2 weeks' dues, another for 3 weeks' dues, and so on to the end of the fixed period. At that time all remaining members receive $25 worth of tools, but such members have paid the full contract price therefor. Also, at the end of the fixed period a drawing is held for a grand prize to which all the members of the club are eligible. Thus, the amount which an ultimate purchaser pays for the tools and the fact as to which club member receives the final award is determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes and has furnished various "Club Plans" for use in the sale and distribution of its merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said "Club Plans" is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who directly or indirectly purchase respondent's said merchandise expose for sale and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan or method. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of its merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance, or the sale of a chance, to procure articles of merchandise at a price which is much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance, or the sale of a chance to win something by a chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise, and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to the respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method. As a result thereof injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on November 23, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Plomb Tool Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On December 18, 1940, the respondent filed its original answer in this proceeding. Subsequently, on May 12, 1941, the respondent filed a motion to withdraw its original answer and file in lieu thereof a substitute answer dated May 12, 1941, in which it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Plomb Tool Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, with its principal office and place of business located at 2209 Santa Fe Avenue, Los Angeles, Calif. Respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of tools and other articles of merchandise. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of California to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than the State of California and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in said merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold its said merchandise to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers, along with a sales plan or method by which the said merchandise is to be, and is, resold to the purchasing public. Said plan or method involves the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme in the sale and distribution of said merchandise to the ultimate purchasers thereof. Respondent has advertised its said merchandise and its said sales plan or method by means of printed cards, circulars, samples of said merchandise, and by personal solicitation. The sales plan or method as suggested and advertised by respondent is substantially as follows:

The sales plan or method is described as the "Tool Club." Each club has a fixed number of members, usually 100. Each member of a club pays a fixed amount each week, usually $1, for a period not to exceed a given number of weeks, usually 25 weeks. At the end of the first week a drawing is held and the member whose name or number is drawn receives from the retail dealer his choice of $25 worth of respondent's tools, for the payment of 1 week's dues, and such winner or member then is dropped from the club. Each succeeding week the same procedure is followed and thus one member receives tools as aforesaid for the payment of 1 week's dues, another for 2 weeks' dues, another for 3 weeks' dues, and so on to the end of the fixed period. At that time all remaining members receive $25 worth of tools, but such members have paid the full contract price therefor. Also at the end of the fixed period a drawing is held for a grand prize to which all the members of the club are eligible. Thus, the amount which an ultimate purchaser pays for the tools and the fact as to which club member receives the final award is determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes and has furnished various "Club Plans" for use in the sale and distribution of its merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said "Club Plans" is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who directly or indirectly purchase respondent's said merchandise expose for sale and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan or method. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of its merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance, or the sale of a chance, to procure articles of merchandise at a price which is much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance, or the sale of a chance to win something by a chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise, and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to the respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method. As a result thereof, injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Plomb Tool Co., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of tools or any other merchandise in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others tools or any other merchandise, together with a sales plan or method involving the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme by which said merchandise is to be, or may be, sold to the purchasing public.

2. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

HY-PHEN CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4418. Complaint, Dec. 14, 1940—Decision, June 30, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of its "Hy-Phen" medicinal preparation; in advertisements in newspapers, by radio continuities, and other advertising media, directly or by implication;

Represented that its said preparation would prevent colds and was a cure or remedy therefor; and was a competent and effective treatment for various ailments and conditions including toothache, earache, neuralgia, twitching nerves, after-extraction pains, aching muscles, rheumatic pains, and women's periodic pains, which would relieve the pain attendant upon such conditions more quickly and for a longer period of time than any other preparation; and that it was unqualifiedly safe for use;

Facts being that the therapeutic properties of its said preparation were limited to those of an analgesic, affording only temporary relief from painful symptoms and having no curative action upon the underlying factors causing pain; ingredients in said preparation were similar to those found in many other like preparations, and it had no special properties which would permit it to relieve pain more quickly or for a longer time than many other such preparations; its effectiveness in the treatment of the conditions listed was limited to furnishing temporary relief from their painful symptoms, it had no therapeutic value in treatment of such conditions as migraine headaches, headaches due to infection, pain caused by abscessed tooth, and others, and use thereof was not entirely free from danger, due to its drug content;

With result of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such false representations were true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of its said product:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. John M. Russell for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Hy-Phen Corporation, a corporation (successor to Bradley's Laboratory, Inc., a corporation), hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Hy-Phen Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of West Virginia with its office and principal place of business at Matoaka, W. Va.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and has been for more than 2 years last past, engaged in the business of selling and distributing a medicinal preparation described as Hy-Phen intended as a treatment for various ailments of the human body.

Respondent causes its said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its said place of business in the State of West Virginia to purchasers located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among, and typical of, the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers, by radio continuities, and other advertising literature, are the following:

Thousands of people have found that they can avoid colds the year around by using Hy-Phen pain and cold tablets.

Nothing else seems to stop a cold like Hy-Phen.

* * * stop toothache and after extraction pain * * *, quickly and pleasantly by taking one or two Hy-Phen tablets.

Neuralgia? twitching nerves? Stop them quickly and for a longer period with Hy-Phen.

Hy-Phen for simple headache, toothache, earache, head colds, neuralgic pain and aching muscles. * * * relieves pain quicker and longer.

TWO HY-PHEN TABLES * * * will relieve that headache or cold almost immediately * * * will help ward off headaches * * *.

HYPHEN * * * "Safety First" * * * effective in relieving pain * * * Women everywhere have found they can always rely on Hyphen tablets. Doctors, lawyers, dentists, miners, all find Hyphen tablets indispensable in easing pain.

Hyphen tablets will quickly and safely relieve you.

Hy-Phen does not contain any dangerous or habit-forming drugs; may we ask that you safeguard your health and be insured against pain at all times by keeping a package of Hyphen handy.

For quickest relief simple Headaches, Cold, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatic Pains and Women's Periodic Pains.

Hy-Phen being a tablet, reaches the point of absorption before dissolving giving you the full effect of its medicines. That is why Hy-Phen gives you quicker and long-lasting relief.

Bradley's Lab., Matoaka, West Virginia, * * * HY-PHENS FOR HEADACHES!

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and in statements and representations not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of said preparation, respondent represents directly or by implication: that its said preparation will prevent colds; that it is a cure or remedy for colds; that said preparation is a competent and effective treatment for toothache, earache, neuralgia, twitching nerves, after extraction pains, aching muscles, rheumatic pains, women's periodic pains, and that it will relieve the pain attendant upon such conditions more quickly and for a longer period of time than any other preparation. Respondent further represents that said preparation is unqualifiedly safe for use.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. The use of said preparation will not prevent colds and the preparation itself does not constitute a cure or remedy for colds. The therapeutic properties of respondent's product are limited to that of an analgesic only affording temporary relief from painful symptoms, and would have no curative action upon the underlying factors that cause pain. The ingredients of this preparation are similar to those found in many other like preparations, and this preparation has no special therapeutic properties which would permit it to relieve the pain more quickly or for a longer period of time than many other preparations on the market. The effectiveness of this preparation in the treatment of colds, toothache, earache, neuralgia, twitching nerves, after extraction pains, and women's periodic pains is limited to furnishing temporary relief to the symptoms of pain in some instances, and it would have no therapeutic value in the treatment of such conditions as migraine headaches, infectious diseases, headaches due to infection, pains due to abscessed teeth, or pains from pressure on nerves. By reason of the existence of acetophenetidin, caffeine, and hyoscyamus in this preparation, its administration is not entirely free from danger.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's preparation.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 14th day of December 1940, issued, and on the 16th day of December 1940, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent Hy-Phen Corporation, a corporation (successor to Bradley's Laboratory, Inc., a corporation), charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Hy-Phen Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of West Virginia with its office and principal place of business at Matoaka, W. Va.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and has been for more than 2 years last past, engaged in the business of selling and distributing a medicinal preparation, described as Hy-Phen, intended as a treatment for various ailments of the human body.

Respondent causes its said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its said place of business in the State of West Virginia to purchasers located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among, and typical of, the false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers, by radio continuities, and other advertising media, are the following:

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and in statements and representations not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of said preparation, respondent represents directly or by implication: that its said preparation will prevent colds; that it is a cure or remedy for colds; that said preparation is a competent and effective treatment for toothache, earache, neuralgia, twitching nerves, after extraction pains, aching muscles, rheumatic pains, women's periodic pains, and that it will relieve the pain attendant upon such conditions more quickly and for a longer period of time than any other preparation. Respondent further represents that said preparation is unqualifiedly safe for use.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. The use of said preparation will not prevent colds and the preparation itself does not constitute a cure or remedy for colds. The therapeutic properties of respondent's preparation are limited to that of an analgesic only affording temporary relief from painful symptoms, and said preparation has no curative action upon the underlying factors that cause pain. The ingredients of respondent's preparation are similar to those found in many other like preparations, and said preparation has no special therapeutic properties which would permit it to relieve pain more quickly or for a longer period of time than many other such preparations on the market. The effectiveness of respondent's preparation in the treatment of colds, toothache, earache, neuralgia, twitching nerves, after-extraction conditions, and women's periodic conditions is limited to furnishing temporary relief from the painful symptoms of such conditions. Said preparation has no therapeutic value in the treatment of such conditions as migraine headaches, infectious diseases, headaches due to infection, pains caused by abscessed teeth, or pressure on nerves. The use of said preparation is not entirely free from danger due to the fact that it contains acetophenetidin, caffeine, and hyoscyamus.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's preparation.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Hy-Phen corporation, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of its preparation designated Hy-Phen, or any product of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from, directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisements (a) by means of the United States mails or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent, directly or through inference:

That the use of said preparation will prevent colds; that it is a cure or remedy for colds; that it has any therapeutic properties other than an analgesic affording temporary relief from painful symptoms, or that it will have any curative action upon the underlying factors that cause pain; that it contains any ingredients or possesses any special therapeutic properties which cause it to relieve such painful symptoms more quickly or for a longer period of time than many other preparations on the market; that the extent of its effectiveness in the treatment of colds, toothaches, earaches, after-extraction conditions, and women's periodic conditions is any more than to furnish temporary relief from the painful symptoms thereof; that it has any therapeutic value in the treatment of such conditions as migraine headaches, infectious diseases, headaches due to infection, pains caused by abscessed teeth or by pressure on nerves; or that its use is entirely free from danger.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisements by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisements contain any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

P. D. MEADORS AND M. M. MEADORS, TRADING AS MEADORS MANUFACTURING COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4473. Complaint, Mar 21, 1941—Decision, June 30, 1941

Where two individuals engaged in the manufacture and in the competitive interstate sale and distribution of candy and nut products, including certain assortments, which were so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprise or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to consumers, a typical assortment consisting of (a) 150 assorted pink or white candy-covered gum balls concealed in a hollow cardboard container for sale under a plan by which purchasers of balls, at 1 cent each, who punched the white balls received that gum only, while those punching a pink ball received in addition a 5-cent candy bar; and (b) 32 packages of peanuts packed in a carton bearing a label reading "* * * Prize in Every Package. A Silver Dime in One * * *," under which plan the facts as to whether a purchaser received nothing but a package of peanuts and a prize of insignificant value, or a package with a 10-cent prize included therein, were determined wholly by lot or chance;

Sold such assortments to wholesalers and jobbers, and, directly or indirectly to retailers by whom they were exposed and sold to the purchasing public in accordance with said sales plan, involving game of chance to procure candy at less than its regular retail price, and package of nuts, with money in addition, contrary to the established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who, unwilling to use such or any method contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by their said sales plans and the element of chance involved therein and were thereby induced to buy and sell their products in preference to those of their said competitors, and with tendency and capacity to divert trade in commerce unfairly from such competitors to them:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr., for the Commission.

Blythe & Bonham, of Greenville, S. Car., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that P. D. Meadors and M. M. Meadors, individually and trading as Meadors Manufacturing Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, P. D. Meadors and M. M. Meadors, are individuals trading and doing business as Meadors Manufacturing Co., with their office and principal place of business located at 533 South Main Street, Greenville, S. C. Respondents are now and for more than 1 year last past have been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of candy and nut products to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said candy and nut products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the city of Greenville, S. C., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than South Carolina and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 1 year last past a course of trade by respondents in such candy and nut products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are and have been in competition with other individuals and firms and with corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and nut products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of candy and nuts so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Two of said assortments are hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and are as follows:

This assortment consists of 150 assorted candy covered gum balls. One hundred and twenty-eight of said balls are white colored and 22 of said balls are colored pink. Said balls are concealed in a hollow cardboard container so that they may be punched from the container, one at a time. Sales are made in the following manner. Purchases are 1 cent each. Persons who punch the white balls of gum receive that gum only; persons who punch one of the pink balls are given, in addition, a five-cent bar of candy. The balls are so concealed in the container that the purchaser cannot determine until after the punch is made whether he will receive a white or pink ball; or whether he will receive nothing but the white ball, or the pink ball and a 5-cent bar of candy. The candy is thus distributed to the purchasers of punches from the container wholly by chance.

Respondent has also packed certain assortments of peanuts described as follows:

The peanuts are packed in a carton containing 32 packages. Upon a label fastened to said carton appears the following legend: "Meadors Prize Peanuts, Prize in Every Package. A Silver Dime in One. Meadors Manufacturing Company, Greenville, South Carolina."; and distributed in the following manner:

The said packages of peanuts retail at the price of 5 cents each. In each of 31 of the said packages of peanuts there is packed a small novelty of a value of less than 1 cent. The other package contains a dime (10 cents). All of said packages of peanuts are sealed and the purchaser thereof is unable to determine until after the packages have been opened whether he will receive the novelty merchandise of a value of less than 1 cent or a 10-cent piece. The fact as to whether the purchaser of a package of peanuts receives nothing but the peanuts and a prize of insignificant value or whether he receives the peanuts plus 10 cents (twice the purchase price) is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondents' candy or nuts, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plans aforesaid. Respondents thus supply to, and place in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their products in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said sales plans or methods in the sale of their products and the sale of said products by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plans or methods is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy and packages of nuts to the purchasing public by the methods or sales plans hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure candy at less than the retail regular prices of said candy and a sum of money in addition to a package of said nuts. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute products in competition with respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method which is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their products and by the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' products in preference to products of said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondents because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on March 21, 1941, issued, and on March 22, 1941, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents P. D. Meadors and M. M. Meadors, individually and trading as Meadors Manufacturing Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On April 11, 1941, the respondents, through their attorneys, filed their answer, in which answer they admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint. Subsequently the respondents, through their attorneys, waived the filing of a brief and oral argument. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, P. D. Meadors and M. M. Meadors, are individuals trading and doing business as Meadors Manufacturing Co., with their office and principal place of business located at 533 South Main Street, Greenville, S. C. Respondents are now and for more than 1 year last past have been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of candy and nut products to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said candy and nut products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the city of Greenville, S. C., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than South Carolina and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 1 year last past a course of trade by respondents in such candy and nut products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are and have been in competition with other individuals and firms and with corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and nut products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of candy and nuts so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Two of said assortments are hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and are as follows:

This assortment consists of 150 assorted candy covered gum balls. One hundred and twenty-eight of said balls are white colored and 22 of said balls are colored pink. Said balls are concealed in a hollow cardboard container so that they may be punched from the container, one at a time. Sales are made in the following manner. Purchases are 1 cent each. Persons who punch the white balls of gum receive that gum only; persons who punch one of the pink balls are given, in addition, a 5-cent bar of candy. The balls are so concealed in the container that the purchaser cannot determine until after the punch is made whether he will receive a white or pink ball; or whether he will receive nothing but the white ball, or the pink ball and a 5-cent bar of candy. The candy is thus distributed to the purchasers of punches from the container wholly by chance.

Respondent has also packed certain assortments of peanuts described as follows:

The peanuts are packed in a carton containing 32 packages. Upon a label fastened to said carton appears the following legend: "Meadors Prize Peanuts, Prize in Every Package. A Silver Dime in One. Meadors Manufacturing Company, Greenville, South Carolina."; and distributed in the following manner:

The said packages of peanuts retail at the price of 5 cents each. In each of 31 of the said packages of peanuts there is packed a small novelty of a value of less than 1 cent. The other package contains a dime (10 cents). All of said packages of peanuts are sealed and the purchaser thereof is unable to determine until after the packages have been opened whether he will receive the novelty merchandise of a value of less than 1 cent or a 10-cent piece. The fact as to whether the purchaser of a package of peanuts receives nothing but the peanuts and a prize of insignificant value or whether he receives the peanuts plus 10 cents (twice the purchase price) is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondents' candy or nuts, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plans aforesaid. Respondents thus supply to, and place in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their products in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said sales plans or methods in the sale of their products and the sale of said products by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plans or methods is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy and packages of nuts to the purchasing public by the methods or sales plans hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure candy at less than the retail regular prices of said candy and a sum of money in addition to a package of said nuts. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute products in competition with respondents, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method which is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their products and by the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' products in preference to products of said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondents because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and respondents having thereafter waived the filing of brief and oral argument, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, P. D. Meadors and M. M. Meadors, individually and trading under the name of Meadors Manufacturing Co., or trading under any other name, their representatives, agents, and employees, jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy, nuts, or nut products or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of such merchandise to the public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others any devices, schemes or plans either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said devices, schemes, or plans are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing such merchandise to the public.

3. Packaging or assembling any merchandise which is ultimately to be sold to the public in such a manner that cash or other prizes or awards are distributed to the purchasers thereof by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

4. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall within 60 days after service upon them of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

JACOB SCHACHNOW, TRADING AS MODERN HAT WORKS

MODIFIED CEASE AND DESIST ORDER

Docket 2047. Order, July 3, 1941

Modified order, pursuant to provisions of Section 5 (i) of Federal Trade Commission Act, in proceeding in question, in which (1) Commission, on November 2, 1940, 31 F. T. C. 1256, made its findings and conclusion and issued cease and desist order, and (2) Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, on April 2, 1941, in Jacob Schachnow, trading as Modern Hat Works v. Federal Trade Commission, 32 F. T. C. 1875, not reported in Federal Reporter, issued its decree modifying said order and directing Commission to modify the same in accordance therewith—

Requiring respondent, his representatives, etc., in connection with offer, etc., in commerce, of hats, to cease and desist from representing that hats composed in whole or in part of used or second-hand materials are new or composed of new materials, by failure to stamp on the sweat bands, in conspicuous and legible terms which cannot be removed, etc., a statement to such effect, as in order set forth, and subject to proviso thereof; and to cease and desist from representing in any manner that hats made in whole or in part from old, used, or second-hand materials are new or composed of new materials.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding coming on for further hearing before the Federal Trade Commission and it appearing that on November 2, 1940, the Commission made its findings as to the facts and concluded therefrom that the respondent had violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and issued and subsequently served its order to cease and desist; and it further appearing that on April 2, 1941, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit issued its decree modifying the aforesaid order of the Commission and directed the Commission to modify its aforesaid order to cease and desist in accordance with said decree.

Now, therefore, Pursuant to the provisions of subsection (i) of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act the Commission issues this its modified order to cease and desist in conformity with said court decree.

It is ordered, That respondent Jacob Schachnow, an individual trading as Modern Hat Works, or trading under any other name or names, his representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of hats in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that hats composed in whole or in part of used or second-hand materials, are new or are composed of new materials by failure to stamp on the sweatbands thereof, in conspicuous and legible terms which cannot be removed or obliterated without mutilating the sweatbands, a statement that said products are composed of second-hand or used materials (e. g., "Second-Hand," "Used" or "Made-Over"), provided that if sweatbands are not affixed to such hats then such stamping must appear on the bodies of such hats in conspicuous and legible terms which cannot be removed or obliterated without mutilating said bodies.

2. Representing in any manner that hats made in whole or in part from old, used, or second-hand materials are new or are composed of new materials.

IN THE MATTER OF

BERLAND SUPPLY COMPANY, INC., ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3861. Complaint, July 27, 1939—Decision, July 9, 1941

Where three corporations engaged in manufacture of glassware, including tableware such as tumblers, highball glasses, etc., and in interstate sale and distribution thereof to purchasers, among others, in the Milwaukee trade area, in substantial competition with each other and other manufacturers except insofar as such competition had been hindered or restricted and potential competition forestalled as below set forth; an individual, agent, of one of said manufacturers, and a corporation, agent, of the other two, engaged in the sale of their products in aforesaid area; four corporations dealing at wholesale, in glassware, among other things, with places of business in Milwaukee; and two individuals with places of business therein, engaged in sale of hotel and restaurant supplies, including glassware, and charter members, along with the four corporate wholesalers before referred to, of a corporation organized in 1933 as "Hotel, Restaurant & Tavern Equipment Association," in connection with the enforcement of the National Industrial Recovery Act; in substantial competition with each other and other wholesalers except insofar as such competition had been hindered or restricted and potential competition forestalled, as hereinafter set forth—

(a) Combined and conspired together and with each other, and cooperated, to cut off supply of glassware of a certain concern when latter, organized as "Badger Cash and Carry Stores" to engage in sale of liquors, tobacco, and cigars, thereafter undertaking sale of glassware at wholesale in trade area in question, cut the resale prices of such ware below those of said wholesalers; forming and participating in a plan for the elimination of said "Cash and Carry Stores" as competitor, under which said wholesalers contacted factory representatives of the aforesaid manufacturers, and former notified their principals, following which said manufacturers refused to sell to said competitor; and

Where said "Hotel, Restaurant & Tavern Equipment Association" and its wholesaler members, pursuant to the aforesaid conspiracy and combination—

(b) Concertedly wrote letters and used other means of persuasion to, and did, enlist the cooperation of said manufacturers who cooperated with them and others and monopolized trade in commerce in glassware in city in question;

With the result that at least one wholesaler of glassware was unable to purchase supplies from said three manufacturers or their agents, and was thereby handicapped in the conduct of his business; interstate sales were curtailed; elimination of at least one wholesaler tended to stabilize wholesale prices of glassware at levels inconsonant with free competition, competition in the wholesaling of such ware in said trade area was suppressed, and trade was restrained; and

Where said glass manufacturers, pursuant to said conspiracy and combination, and acting in concert with said association and its wholesaler members—

(c) Canceled or refused to accept orders for glassware from said "Cash and Carry Stores" for resale by latter in Milwaukee trade area, in competition with such wholesalers;

With the result that competition between said "Cash and Carry Stores" and said wholesalers was unduly restrained; competition by and between said manufacturers was unduly suppressed; and interstate commerce in glassware restrained:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. Edward E. Reardon, trial examiner.

Mr. Lynn C. Paulson for the Commission.

Mr. Jack A. Berland, of Milwaukee, Wis., for Berland Supply Co., Inc., I. Shapiro, Inc., Louis M. Mintz, and W. A. Reinemann.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Berland Supply Co., Inc., S. J. Casper, Inc., I. Shapiro, Inc., Louis M. Mintz, trading as Mintz Supply Co., W. A. Reinemann, trading as Hotel and Restaurant Supply Co., National Beverage Distributing Co., Anchor-Hocking Glass Co., West Virginia Glass Specialty Co., and Indiana Glass Co., Roseware, Inc., W. H. Peterson, Hotel, Restaurant & Tavern Equipment Association, and its members, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are now, using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined by said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Berland Supply Co., Inc., is a Wisconsin corporation with its principal office and place of business at 1914 Vliet Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

Respondent S. J. Casper, Inc., is a Wisconsin corporation with its principal office at 845 North Plankinton Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis.

Respondent I. Shapiro, Inc., is a Wisconsin corporation with its principal office at 334 West Juneau Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis.

Respondent Louis M. Mintz is an individual trading and doing business as Mintz Supply Co., with offices at 144 South First Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

Respondent W. A. Reinemann is an individual trading and doing business as Hotel and Restaurant Supply Co., with offices at 315 West Juneau Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis.

Respondent National Beverage Distributing Co., is a Wisconsin corporation with its principal office at 1134 North Water Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

Respondent Anchor-Hocking Glass Co. is an Ohio corporation with its main plant and principal office at Lancaster, Ohio.

Respondent West Virginia Glass Specialty Co. is a West Virginia corporation with its principal office at Weston, W. Va.

Respondent Indiana Glass Co. is an Indiana corporation with its principal office at Dunkirk, Ind.

Respondent Roseware, Inc., is a Wisconsin corporation with its principal office at 772 North Milwaukee Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

Respondent, W. H. Peterson, is an individual. His principal office is at 334 Commerce Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

Respondent Hotel, Restaurant & Tavern Equipment Association is an incorporated trade association which includes as its members, persons, firms, or corporations engaged in the hotel, restaurant, and tavern equipment industry. It was organized in 1933 for the purpose of promoting the mutual interests of its members. It was incorporated in the State of Wisconsin. It operates through its board of directors and other officers.

PAR. 2. Respondents Berland Supply Co., Inc., I. Shapiro, Inc., S. J. Casper, Inc., Louis M. Mintz, doing business as Mintz Supply Co., W. A. Reinemann, doing business as Hotel & Restaurant Supply Co., and National Beverage Distributing Co. are engaged in the sale of glassware and other hotel, restaurant and tavern supplies at wholesale and retail in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and the surrounding trade area, which includes the State of Wisconsin and parts of adjoining States.

Respondents Anchor-Hocking Glass Co., West Virginia Glass Specialty Co., and Indiana Glass Co. are engaged in the manufacture and sale of glassware.

Respondent Roseware, Inc., is a factory representative for respondents West Virginia Glass Specialty Co. and Indiana Glass Co., and is engaged in the sale of glassware at wholesale and retail in the city of Milwaukee, Wis., and the surrounding trade area.

Respondent W. H. Peterson is a factory representative for respondent Anchor-Hocking Glass Co., and is engaged in the sale of glassware at wholesale and retail in the city of Milwaukee, Wis., and the surrounding trade area.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, respondents Berland Supply Co., Inc., S. J. Casper, Inc., I. Shapiro, Inc., Louis M. Mintz, trading as Mintz Supply Co., W. A. Reinemann, trading as Hotel and Restaurant Supply Co., Roseware, Inc., W. H. Peterson, and National Beverage Distributing Co., have purchased and do purchase various products from the producers and manufacturers thereof located at various points throughout the United States for resale in the city of Milwaukee, and the surrounding trade area, and have sold and shipped, and do cause to be sold and shipped these products to various individuals located at points in the State of Wisconsin and in the adjoining States; and when said purchases are made, and as part thereof, said producers and manufacturers regularly have shipped or caused to be shipped said products from their respective points of location in the several States of the United States other than the State of Wisconsin to the said respondents.

In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, respondent manufacturers Anchor-Hocking Glass Co., West Virginia Glass Specialty Co. and Indiana Glass Co. have sold and shipped, or caused to be sold and shipped, and do sell and ship, or cause to be sold and shipped, their products from the States in which they are located to other States within the United States and the District of Columbia.

Respondent Hotel, Restaurant & Tavern Equipment Association is not engaged in interstate commerce, but is engaged in carrying out certain unlawful methods as alleged herein, which directly and substantially affect competition among its members.

All of the respondents, in the aforementioned manner, maintained, and still do maintain, a course of trade in said products in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. Prior to 1938, respondent wholesalers were in active and substantial competition with each other and with other wholesalers and jobbers in the city of Milwaukee, Wis., and the surrounding trade area. Respondent manufacturers sold and shipped glassware to said respondent wholesalers and jobbers in competition with each other and with other manufacturers and producers, and sold and shipped glassware to said other wholesalers and jobbers who were in active competition with the said respondent wholesalers and jobbers.

PAR. 5. During 1938, respondents entered into and thereafter carried out and are still carrying out an understanding, agreement, combination, and conspiracy to prevent, suppress, hinder, and lessen competition in the sale and distribution of said glassware products in commerce in the aforesaid territory. To carry out the aforesaid purposes, the respondents have done, and do among others, the following acts and things:

1. Conspired, combined, cooperated, and bargained amongst themselves to cut off the source of supply of at least one competing jobber and make it impossible for said jobber to purchase merchandise in the same markets as its competitors.

2. Respondent wholesalers cooperated with each other and with respondent factory representatives, Roseware, Inc., and W. H. Peterson, of the respondent manufacturers and producers, and concertedly wrote letters and did other acts to enlist the cooperation of the respondent manufacturers to the end that at least one jobber, who was in active competition, and but for the said acts and practices alleged herein would be in active competition with said respondent wholesalers and respondent factory representatives aforesaid, would be unable to obtain supplies of glassware, which said designated wholesaler had theretofore been able to obtain in like manner, and from the same sources of supply as the respondent wholesalers.

3. Respondent manufacturers directly and through their factory representatives, respondents Roseware, Inc., and W. H. Peterson, bargained, combined, conspired, and cooperated with the said respondent wholesalers and have refused, and do refuse, to fill orders and ship their products to at least one jobber designated by respondent wholesalers in pursuance of the aforesaid agreement, combination, conspiracy, and undertaking, and for no lawful reason.

4. Directly or through their agents in cooperation with one another have maintained and do maintain membership in respondent Hotel, Restaurant & Tavern Equipment Association, and have made and do make use of the respondent association in furtherance of their purpose to restrict and restrain full and free competition in the glassware wholesale and retail markets in the aforesaid trade area, being the city of Milwaukee, the State of Wisconsin, and parts of adjoining States.

5. Used and engaged, in concert and cooperation with one another, other acts and coercive methods and practices in promoting, establishing, and carrying out the foregoing combination, conspiracy, confederation, and undertaking.

PAR. 6. The combination, conspiracy, confederation, and undertaking so entered into and carried out by said respondents, and the acts and things done thereunder and pursuant thereto as hereinabove alleged resulted and result in the suppression, hindrance, and lessening of competition in the sale and distribution of glassware products in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and more particularly in the aforesaid trade area, to the prejudice and injury of respondents' competitors and of the public. The acts and practices of the respondents, as aforesaid, have resulted and result in the undue enhancement of prices of glassware products to the using public, and the public has been and is deprived of the benefits of the competition that did exist in the glassware market in the city of Milwaukee, Wis., and the surrounding trade area, and which would have continued to exist but for the aforesaid acts and practices.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on July 27, 1939, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents named in the caption hereof charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of answers thereto by all the respondents except respondent Hotel, Restaurant & Tavern Equipment Association, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Lynn C. Paulson, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by W. C. Miller, attorney for respondent Anchor Hocking Glass Corporation (named Anchor-Hocking Glass Co. in the complaint) before Edward E. Reardon, a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answers thereto, the testimony and other evidence, the report of the trial examiner thereon and exceptions to said report and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto and oral argument by the attorney for the Commission and attorneys for respondents and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Anchor Hocking Glass Corporation, West Virginia Glass Specialty Co., Inc. (named Virginia Glass Specialty Co. in the complaint), and Indiana Glass Co., are corporations having their principal places of business, respectively, in Lancaster, Ohio; Weston, W. Va.; and Dunkirk, Ind.; under the laws of which States, respectively, they were organized and are existing as corporations.

Each of the above three respondent corporations is and has been engaged in the manufacture of glassware including glassware known as tableware, consisting of tumblers, drinking glasses, whiskey glasses, table glasses, and highball glasses, and they are and have been respectively, engaged in the sale of such glassware to purchasers located in Wisconsin and in other States to whom they have caused their glassware, when so sold, by them, to be transported, in commerce, to the purchasers from their respective places of business referred to above.

Each of the above three respondent corporations, in the sale of their glassware, in commerce, are and have been in substantial competition with each other and with other glass manufacturers who are and have been engaged in the sale in commerce of similar glassware, except insofar as said competition has been hindered, lessened, restricted, or restrained, and potential competition among them forestalled by the understandings and agreements among them and the acts and things done in pursuance thereto, as hereinafter set forth.

The Anchor Hocking Glass Corporation does business of about $100,000 a year in the sale of tableware in the Milwaukee trade area. The gross sales of glassware by the West Virginia Glass Specialty Co., Inc., in the Milwaukee, Wis., trade area for the 3 years 1937, 1938, and 1939 amounted to the total sum of about $36,000, and the Indiana Glass Co. is also a large seller of glassware in the Milwaukee, Wis., trade area.

PAR. 2. The respondent W. H. Peterson, for several years prior to March 1938 was engaged as a salesman of the Great Northern Products Co. of Chicago, the agent for several States of the Anchor Hocking Glass Corporation, in the sale of its glassware, and since March 1, 1938, he has been and still is the factory agent of the Anchor Hocking Glass Corporation with the authority of his principal to select its customers subject to its approval of all orders taken by him for the purchase of its glassware.

The respondent, Roseware, Inc., is and has been since prior to 1936, the factory agent, respectively, of the respondents West Virginia

Glass Specialty Co., Inc., and of the respondent Indiana Glass Co. in the sale of their glassware in Milwaukee, Wis., and in the surrounding territory known as the Milwaukee trade area, which includes places in the adjacent State of Michigan. Roseware, Inc., had authority to select customers subject to the approval of these companies.

PAR. 3. The respondents S. J. Casper Co., Inc., (named in the complaint, S. J. Casper, Inc.); I. Shapiro, Inc., National Beverage Distributing Co.; and Berland Supply Co., Inc., are Wisconsin corporations and they are and have been wholesale dealers, among other things, in glassware, with their respective places of business in Milwaukee, Wis.

Respondents Louis M. Mintz, trading as Mintz Supply Co., and W. A. Reinemann, trading as Hotel and Restaurant Supply Co., are and have been engaged in the business of the sale of hotel and restaurant supplies, including glassware, with their respective places of business in Milwaukee, Wis., and the six wholesale dealers mentioned herein are and have been in substantial competition with each other and with other wholesale dealers in glassware in Milwaukee, Wis., and in the Milwaukee trade area above mentioned, except insofar as said competition has been hindered, lessened, restricted, or restrained, and potential competition among them forestalled by the understandings and agreements among them and the acts and things done in pursuance thereto, as hereinafter set forth.

PAR. 4. Respondent, Hotel, Restaurant & Tavern Equipment Association, is a corporation organized in 1933 under the laws of Wisconsin to operate in connection with the enforcement of the N. I. R. A. Act, under the N. R. A. Its charter members included the respondent wholesale dealers mentioned above in paragraph 3 hereof. S. J. Casper, president of respondent S. J. Casper Co., Inc., is and has been at all times president of the Association; I. Shapiro, president of respondent I. Shapiro, Inc., is and has been at all times its treasurer; and Jack Berland, Esq., counsel in this proceeding for respondents, Berland Supply Co., Inc., I. Shapiro, Inc., Louis M. Mintz, and W. A. Reinemann, is and has been at all times the secretary of the respondent Hotel, Restaurant & Tavern Equipment Association.

PAR. 5. In 1933, the Badger Cash & Carry Stores, a Wisconsin corporation, engaged in the business of the sale of liquors, tobacco, and cigars in Milwaukee, Wis., and in 1936 began the sale of glassware, as a wholesale dealer, in the Milwaukee, Wis., trade area. It purchased supplies of glassware from the respondent glass manufacturers at certain times in 1936 and subsequent thereto, among others, from the Anchor Hocking Glass Corporation, on September 21, 1936, in October and November 1937, and on January 31, 1938. In 1936 it also purchased some glassware from the respondent West Virginia Glass Specialty Co., Inc., and from the respondent Indiana Glass Co. The last purchase of glassware the Badger Cash & Carry Stores made from West Virginia Glass Specialty Co., Inc., was on September 16, 1937, and its last purchase from the Indiana Glass Co. was made on January 6, 1938.

PAR. 6. Early in 1938, or shortly theretofore the Badger Cash & Carry Stores cut the resale prices of its glassware below the resale prices of the above-mentioned respondent wholesale dealers in Milwaukee who learned of this price-cutting through their customers and from advertising circulars distributed by the Badger Cash & Carry Stores to the retail trade.

The respondent wholesale dealers proceeded to cut off the Badger Cash & Carry Stores sources of supply. They indicated plainly to Roseware, Inc., that they would boycott Roseware, Inc., the Indiana Glass Co., and the West Virginia Glass Specialty Co., Inc., unless sales to Badger Cash & Carry Stores were stopped. The president of Roseware, Inc., thereupon contacted every one of the respondent wholesale dealers and persuaded them temporarily from taking steps to carry out the threatened boycott.

On January 21, 1938, respondents S. J. Casper Co., Inc.; I. Shapiro, Inc.; Berland Supply Co., Inc.; and the National Beverage & Distributing Co., by their respective presidents; and W. A. Reinemann trading as the Hotel and Restaurant Supply Co.; and Louis M. Mintz, trading as Mintz Supply Co., wrote to the respondent Anchor Hocking Glass Corporation stating that, as members of the Hotel, Restaurant & Tavern Equipment Association, they were calling the Hocking Corporation's attention to the price-cutting activities and other practices employed by the Badger Cash & Carry Stores in the sale of the Hocking Corporation's products as shown by a circular which they enclosed in the letter revealing price-cutting of the Hocking Glass Corporation's products and stating that they felt that such price-cutting should be discouraged for the welfare of the entire industry and that they were appealing to the Anchor Hocking Glass Corporation for its cooperation to that end.

On January 27, 1938, only a few days after the wholesale dealers sent their letter above mentioned to the Anchor Hocking Glass Corporation, the West Virginia Glass Specialty Co., Inc., received a telegram from Roseware, Inc., its factory agent, stating that it was imperative that an order of January 5, 1938, for glassware still unde-livered to the Cash & Carry Stores be canceled and on January 29, 1938, the West Virginia Glass Specialty Co., Inc., received a letter from Roseware, Inc., confirming the above-mentioned telegram and in explanation thereof to the effect that the cancellation requested was because of the price-cutting by the Cash & Carry Stores together with the action of the respondent wholesale dealers including the writing of the letter by them of January 21, 1938, to the Anchor Hocking Glass Corporation.

In its letter of January 29, 1938, to its principal the West Virginia Glass Specialty Co., Inc., Roseware, Inc., asked the Glass Co., to cooperate in refusing to sell glassware to the Cash & Carry Stores. The West Virginia Glass Specialty Co., Inc., canceled the Cash & Carry order of January 5, 1938, and in a letter dated February 1, 1938, advised Roseware, Inc., of its action and that they would cooperate with Roseware, Inc., in refusing to fill orders from the same source and for that purpose would not answer any correspondence from the Cash & Carry Stores but would turn all letters and orders which they received back to Roseware, Inc., to be handled by the latter.

PAR. 7. Respondent Anchor Hocking Glass Corporation on January 29, 1938, acknowledged receipt of the letter of January 21, 1938, from the respondent Hotel, Restaurant & Tavern Equipment Association, which was signed by the respondent wholesale dealers as already set forth above, and the Anchor Hocking Glass Corporation sent a copy of the letter received from the respondent wholesale dealers to its agent at Chicago who forwarded the letter to respondent Peterson, the Hocking Corporation's factory agent at Milwaukee. Thereupon on February 5, 1938, Peterson replied to the Hocking Corporation's agent at Chicago that it would be more profitable to cooperate with the respondent wholesale dealers than to sell the Cash & Carry Stores but that at the same time he suggested that two of the wholesale dealers whose names he mentioned should give the Hocking Corporation more business in certain glassware in consideration of the cooperation of the Anchor Hocking Glass Corporation.

On February 12, 1938, the Anchor Hocking Glass Corporation made further reply to the letter of January 21, 1938, from the Hotel, Restaurant & Tavern Equipment Association in which the Hocking Corporation stated that their factory agent, respondent Peterson, could be depended on to cooperate with them if they would in turn reciprocate by favoring the Hocking Corporation somewhat more than they had in the past. Thereafter, the Anchor Hocking Glass Corporation and its factory agent respondent Peterson refused to fill orders for glassware which they received from the Cash & Carry Stores.

PAR. 8. Subsequent to the sending of the letter of January 21, 1938, by the respondent wholesale dealers to the Anchor Hocking Glass Corporation, the Indiana Glass Co. was informed of that letter by its factory agent Roseware, Inc., who stated the substance thereof in a letter dated January 29, 1938, to the Indiana Glass Co. and further stated that it had assured all the jobbers that the situation would be handled in a very satisfactory manner both by the Indiana Glass Co. and Roseware, Inc. Roseware, Inc., also stated in its letter of January 29, 1938, to the Indiana Glass Co. that the Cash & Carry Stores asked the price of a certain item of the Indiana Glass Co.'s glassware and that it quoted them a price on that item which was 50 cents per dozen over the then existing price for that item.

The letter of Roseware, Inc., closed with the statement to the Indiana Glass Co. that it did not want to take upon itself to refuse to sell the Cash & Carry Stores, as a representative of the Indiana Glass Co., without the latter's authority and asked the advices of the Indiana Glass Co. on the matters contained in its letter.

The Indiana Glass Co. replied to the above letter of Roseware, Inc., dated January 29, 1938, in a telephone conversation when the president of the Indiana Glass Co. called the president of Roseware, Inc., on the telephone on another matter. The president of the Indiana Glass Co. was fully informed as to the circumstances in Milwaukee and being fully informed knew that Roseware, Inc., was refusing to accept orders from the Badger Cash & Carry Stores. He told the president of Roseware, Inc., that he had authority to act as he saw fit. The president of Roseware, Inc., indicated to the Badger Cash & Carry Stores on more than one occasion that its orders were no longer welcome and would not be filled. The Badger Cash & Carry Stores wanted to secure merchandise manufactured by the Indiana Glass Co. but was unable to do so. The president of Roseware, Inc., made it plain to the Badger Cash & Carry Stores that it would not fill orders placed by it by such means as misrepresenting current prices and misrepresenting the time necessary for filling orders, and the Indiana Glass Co. had a policy of not selling to the purchasing public when orders were sent directly to it. Respondents Indiana Glass Co. and Roseware, Inc., refused to fill orders for glassware received from the Cash & Carry Stores.

PAR. 9. The respondent glass manufacturing companies and the respondent wholesale dealers conspired, and combined together and with each other and cooperated together to cut off the purchase of a supply of glassware for resale by the Cash & Carry Stores with the purpose and intent unduly to restrain the Cash & Carry Stores from purchasing merchandise for resale in the same markets as its competitors, the respondent wholesale dealers in the trading area of Milwaukee, Wis., and with the effect directly and unduly to hinder and to restrain the interstate commerce in glassware by glass manufacturers with wholesale dealers in the Milwaukee, Wis., trade area.

A plan to eliminate Badger Cash & Carry Stores as a competitor in the sale of glassware was conceived. Respondent wholesalers notified the factory representatives and they in turn notified their principals. For their part, the manufacturing companies refused to sell. The agents of the manufacturers were active in getting the plan underway, and they made contacts with each other and with the respondent wholesalers and helped to persuade their principals to do their part in making the plan effective.

Pursuant to the conspiracy, combination, and cooperation, the respondent Hotel, Restaurant and Tavern Equipment Association and its members, the respondent wholesale dealers, concertedly wrote letters and used other means of persuasion to enlist the cooperation of the respondent glass manufacturers and the respondent glass manufacturers cooperated with the other respondents and monopolized trade in commerce in glassware in the city of Milwaukee. As a result of this combination, at least one wholesaler of glassware was unable to purchase supplies from the three respondent manufacturers or their agents and was therefore handicapped in the conduct of his business. The refusals to sell and fill orders in themselves constituted a curtailment of interstate sales and the elimination of at least one wholesaler tended to stabilize wholesale prices of glassware products at levels inconsonant with free competition. Competition in the wholesaling of glassware in the city of Milwaukee and the surrounding trade area was suppressed and trade was restrained as a result of the combination, conspiracy, and cooperation entered into and carried out among and between the various respondents and the acts and practices done pursuant thereto.

Pursuant to the said conspiracy, combination, and cooperation of the respondents, the respondent glass manufacturers in concert with the respondent Association and its members, the respondent wholesale dealers, canceled or refused to accept orders for glassware from the Cash & Carry Stores for resale by the latter in the Milwaukee, Wis., trade area in competition with the respondent wholesale dealers, and as a result of the above acts and practices of the respondents, competition between the Cash & Carry Stores and the respondent wholesale dealers was unduly restrained, competition by and between respondent glass manufacturers was unduly suppressed, and interstate trade and commerce in glassware was restrained.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent Hotel, Restaurant & Tavern Equipment Association and of its members, the respondent wholesale dealers, and of the respondent glass manufacturers, Anchor Hocking Glass Corporation, West Virginia Glass Specialty Co., Inc., and the Indiana Glass Co. were each and all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST [1]

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answers of respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before Edward E. Reardon, a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, the report of the trial examiner thereon and the exceptions to said report, brief in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto and oral argument by counsel for the Commission and counsel for respondents and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents Berland Supply Co., Inc.; S. J. Casper Co., Inc.; I. Shapiro, Inc.; Louis M. Mintz, trading as Mintz Supply Co.; W. A. Reinemann, trading as Hotel and Restaurant Supply Co.; National Beverage Distributing Co.; Anchor-Hocking Glass Corporation; West Virginia Glass Specialty Co., Inc.; Indiana Glass Co.; Roseware, Inc.; W. H. Peterson; and Hotel, Restaurant & Tavern Equipment Association and its members, their officers, directors, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through

[1] By order dated November 10, 1941, the Commission, having duly considered the request for modification of respondent Anchor-Hocking Glass Corporation, made a modified order, effect of which was to change the first two paragraphs of the original order, as above published, leaving unchanged the balance thereof, as follows, to wit:

It is ordered, That respondents Berland Supply Company, Inc.; S. J. Casper Company, Incorporated; I. Shapiro, Inc.; Louis M. Mintz, trading as Mintz Supply Company; W. A. Reinemann, trading as Hotel and Restaurant Supply Company; National Beverage Distributing Company; Anchor-Hocking Glass Corporation; West Virginia Glass Specialty Company; Indiana Glass Company; Roseware, Inc.; W. H. Peterson; and Hotel, Restaurant & Tavern Equipment Association and its members, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of glassware in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist:

From continuing, entering into, or assisting each other in carrying out, any conspiracy, agreement, understanding, cooperative plan, program, concert or common course of action among said respondents, between any two or more of them, or between the officers, agents, and employees of any two or more of them:

(a) To refuse to sell glassware to any person, partnership, or corporation; etc.

any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of glassware in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist:

From combining, conspiring, agreeing, or cooperating among themselves, or between any two or more of them, or with others, or from entering into or carrying out any agreements or understandings, or formulating or participating in any cooperative plan or program with the effect or the tendency of suppressing, hindering, restraining, or interfering with competition:

(a) To refuse to sell glassware to any person, partnership or corporation;

(b) To cut off the source or sources of supply of any person, partnership, or corporation or hinder, impede, or handicap any person, partnership, or corporation in its efforts to obtain supplies of glassware for sale or resale in trade and commerce, or to otherwise deprive any person, partnership, or corporation of an opportunity to compete in the sale or resale of glassware.

(c) To determine or designate who shall be a wholesaler of glassware and who shall not be in Milwaukee and the surrounding trade area or in any other trade area in the United States;

(d) To coerce or persuade any wholesaler, retailer, or dealer of glassware to refrain from engaging in price competition in the sale and distribution of glassware in commerce;

(e) To limit the number of persons, partnerships, or corporations who may participate in trade and commerce in glassware or to limit or proscribe or seek to limit or proscribe the rights of any such person, partnership, or corporation to conduct trade and commerce according to its own free will.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon them of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

SISCO-HAMILTON COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4471. Complaint, Mar. 13, 1941—Decision, July 9, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the competitive interstate sale and distribution thereof, including certain assortments which were so packed and assembled as to involve use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to consumers, a typical assortment consisting of 24 boxes of chocolate candy, together with a push card for use in sale and distribution thereof, as thereon explained, by a plan under which customer paid for a box from 1 to 32 cents, depending upon the number he secured by chance—

Sold such assortments to wholesalers, jobbers, and retailers, by whom said candy was exposed and sold to purchasing public in accordance with such sales plan, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its candy, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws, and in competition with many who, unwilling to use method involving a game of chance or other method contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With the result that many persons were attracted by said sales plan or method and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell its candy in preference to that of its said competitors, and with effect of unfairly diverting trade in commerce to it from them:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. J. V. Mishou for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Sisco-Hamilton Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Sisco-Hamilton Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 514 South Loomis

Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now and for more than 6 years last past has been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of candy. Respondent causes and has caused said candy, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia. There is now and for more than 6 years last past has been a course of trade by respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment consists of 24 boxes of chocolate candy together with a device commonly called a push card. The push card bears 24 small partially perforated disks, on the face of each of which is printed the word "Push." Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The purchaser pays in cents the amount of the number punched from the said card, to and including the No. 32. Purchasers punching numbers over 32 pay only 32 cents. The purchasers aforesaid receive one of said boxes of chocolate candy for the amount of money expended. The numbers are effectively concealed within the said disks until same are pushed or separated from the card. The push card bears a legend or instructions as follows:

EVERY PUNCH WINS

1¢ to 32¢

Nos. 1 to 32 Pay What You Punch
Nos. Over 32 Pay Only 32¢

NO HIGHER

EVERY PLAY WINS
A BOX OF CHOCOLATES

Sales of respondent's merchandise by means of said push card are made in accordance with the above described legend or instructions. The amount said purchasers are to pay for said boxes of candy is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes and has furnished various other push cards for use in the sale and distribution of its candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said candy by means of said push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who directly or indirectly purchase respondent's candy expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its candy in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its candy, and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a box of candy at a price which is much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute candy in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by responent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's said candy in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent, who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on March 13, 1941, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Sisco-Hamilton Co., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint respondent filed its answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Sisco-Hamilton Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 514 South Loomis Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now and for more than 6 years last past has been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of candy. Respondent causes and has caused said candy, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia. There is now and for more than 6 years last past has been a course of trade by respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment consists of 24 boxes of chocolate candy together with a device commonly called a push card. The push card bears 24 small partially perforated disks, on the face of each of which is printed the word "Push." Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The purchaser pays in cents the amount of the number punched from the said card, to and including the No. 32. Purchasers punching numbers over 32 pay only 32 cents. The purchasers aforesaid receive one of said boxes of chocolate candy for the amount of money expended. The numbers are effectively concealed within the said disks until same are pushed or separated from the card. The push card bears a legend or instructions as follows:

EVERY PUNCH WINS

1¢ to 32¢

Nos. 1 to 32 Pay What You Punch

Nos. Over 32 Pay Only 32¢

NO HIGHER

EVERY PLAY WINS

A BOX OF

CHOCOLATES

Sales of respondent's merchandise by means of said push card are made in accordance with the above-described legend or instructions. The amount said purchasers are to pay for said boxes of candy is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes and has furnished various other push cards for use in the sale and distribution of its candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said candy by means of said push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who directly or indirectly purchase respondent's candy expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its candy in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its candy, and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above found involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a box of candy at a price which is much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute candy in competition with the respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's said candy in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent, who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Sisco-Hamilton Co., its officers, representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing candy or any other merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of such candy or other merchandise to the public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices either with assortments of candy or other merchandise or separately which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said candy or other merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

IRVING COHN, TRADING AS IRVIN NOVELTY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4464. Complaint, Feb. 11, 1941—Decision, July 10, 1941

Where an individual engaged in the competitive interstate sale and distribution of candy and novelty merchandise, including certain assortments so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers, typical assortments consisting of (1) 2 cedar chests filled with candy, together with a punchboard for use in sale thereof to consuming public, as explained thereon, under a plan by which the two customers securing the 2 winning numbers from the 200 concealed on the board, received said chests and candy, value of which was in excess of the 5 cents paid, and of (2) hair brush and push card, under a plan by which the purchaser of a chance at 10 cents, selecting from the feminine names displayed on the card that corresponded to the name concealed under the master seal received said brush—

Sold such assortments to dealers and retailers by whom they were exposed and sold to the purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products, involving sale of a chance to procure an article at much less than its normal retail price; contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws, and in competition with many who, unwilling to use said or any sales method involving chance or any other sales plan contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With the result that many dealers in and ultimate consumers of said merchandise were attracted by said sales plans and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy his merchandise in preference to that of his said competitors, and with effect of unfairly diverting trade to him from them; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Hutton, Clark & Hutton, of Danville, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Irving Cohn, individually and trading as Irvin Novelty Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Irving Cohn is an individual trading as Irvin Novelty Co., with his principal place of business located at 125½ East Main Street, Danville, Ill. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and novelty merchandise to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise when sold to be transported from his said place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 1 year last past a course of trade by respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with corporations and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers various assortments of candy and other merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof.

One of said assortments consists of two cedar chests filled with candy, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Said cedar chests and candy are distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner: The sales are 5 cents each and when a punch is made from the board a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of punches there are on the board (200) but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears the statement or statements informing prospective purchasers as to which numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a cedar chest and candy. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the numbers calling for one of the cedar chests and candy receives nothing for his money. The cedar chests and candy are worth more than 5 cents each and the purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for said chest receives the same for the price of 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the number punched or separated from the board. The cedar chests and candy are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Another of said assortments consists of a device commonly known as a push card together with a hair brush. The push card bears 15 feminine names, with ruled columns on the side for writing the name of the purchaser opposite the feminine name selected. Under each of the 15 feminine names said push card has a small perforated disk, on the face of which is printed the word "push." Each purchaser pays 10 cents for the privilege of selecting one of the names and pushing the corresponding disk. The push card also has a large master seal and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the face of said card. The name under the master seal is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers and is not revealed until the seal has been broken after all of the disks are pushed. The person selecting the feminine name corresponding with the one under the master seal receives the hair brush. The purchasers of the pushes under the other feminine names receive nothing. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives an article of merchandise or nothing for the amount of money paid is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed various other assortments of candy and merchandise involving a lot or chance feature but the sales plan or methods by which said merchandise is distributed are similar to the ones hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who directly or indirectly purchase respondent's said candy or other merchandise expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans or methods. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plans or methods in the sale of his candy or other merchandise and the sale of said candy or other merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plans or methods is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said sales plans or methods or any sales plans or methods involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other sales plans or methods that are contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many dealers in and ultimate consumers of said merchandise are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent sales plans or methods. The use of said sales plans or methods by repondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent sales plans or methods and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on February 11, 1941, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Irving Cohn, individually and trading as Irvin Novelty Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Irving Cohn is an individual trading as Irvin Novelty Co., with his principal place of business located at 125½ East Main Street, Danville, Ill. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and novelty merchandise to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise when sold to be transported from his said place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, a course of trade by respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with corporations and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. The Commission finds that in the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers various assortments of candy and other merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof.

One of said assortments consists of two cedar chests filled with candy, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Said cedar chests and candy are distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner: The sales are 5 cents each and when a punch is made from the board a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with one and continue to the number of punches there are on the board (200) but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears the statement or statements informing prospective purchasers as to which numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a cedar chest and candy. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the numbers calling for one of the cedar chests and candy receives nothing for his money. The cedar chests and candy are worth more than 5 cents each and the purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for said chest receives the same for the price of 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the number punched or separated from the board. The cedar chests and candy are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Another of said assortments consists of a device commonly known as a push card together with a hair brush. The push card bears 15 feminine names, with ruled columns on the side for writing the name of the purchaser opposite the feminine name selected. Under each of the 15 feminine names said push card has a small perforated disk, on the face of which is printed the word "push." Each purchaser pays 10 cents for the privilege of selecting one of the names and pushing the corresponding disk. The push card also has a large master seal and concealed with the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the face of said card. The name under the master seal is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers and is not revealed until the seal has been broken after all of the disks are pushed. The person selecting the feminine name corresponding with the one under the master seal receives the hair brush. The purchasers of the pushes under the other feminine names receive nothing. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives an article of merchandise or nothing for the amount of money paid is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed various other assortments of candy and merchandise involving a lot or chance feature but the sales plan or methods by which said merchandise is distributed are similar to the ones hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. The Commission finds that retail dealers who directly or indirectly purchase respondent's said candy or other merchandise expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan or methods. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove described. The use by respondent of said sales plan or methods in the sale of his candy or other merchandise and the sale of said candy or other merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plans or methods is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The Commission finds that the sales of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with respondent, as above described, are unwilling to adopt and use said sales plans or methods or any sales plans or methods involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other sales plans or methods that are contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many dealers in, and ultimate consumers of, said merchandise are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his merchandise and the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent sales plans or methods. The use of said sales plans or methods by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent sales plans or methods and, as a result thereof, substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Irving Cohn, individually and trading as Irvin Novelty Co., or trading under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy and novelty merchandise, or any other merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of said merchandise to the public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others assortments of any merchandise, together with push or pull cards, punchboards or other devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards or other devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other devices are to be used or may be used in the sale or distribution of said merchandise to the public at retail.

4. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

BEN GORDON (ALSO KNOWN AS BENJAMIN GORDON) AND LOUIS GORDON, TRADING AS BENGOR PRODUCTS COMPANY AND GOLF PRODUCTS COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4479. Complaint, Mar. 29, 1941—Decision, July 10, 1941

Where two individuals engaged in interstate sale and distribution of various commodities including two medicinal preparations, one designated as "Dupree Pills" and as "Dr. Gordon's Single Strength Pills," and the other as "Dupree Pills Double Strength" and as "Dr. Gordon's Double Strength Pills"; by means of advertisements disseminated through the mails and by various other means—

(a) Represented, falsely, directly or through implication, that their said preparations constituted competent and effective treatments for amenorrhea and dysmenorrhea; and

(b) Failed to reveal facts material in the light of such representations, and that, due to presence in said preparations of certain drugs, use thereof under the conditions prescribed in aforesaid advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, might result in gastro-intestinal disturbances, catharsis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion and hemorrhage, and in cases of pregnancy might result in uterine infection, blood poisoning, and other serious conditions;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations were true, and, because of such mistaken belief thus engendered, to induce the public to purchase substantial quantities of their said preparations:

Held, That said acts and practices, as above set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. R. P. Bellinger for the Commission.

Mr. Samuel J. Ernstoff, of New York City, for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Ben Gordon (also known as Benjamin Gordon) and Louis Gordon, trading as Bengor Products Co. and as Golf Products Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Ben Gordon (also known as Benjamin Gordon) and Louis Gordon, are individuals trading as Bengor Products Co. and as Golf Products Co., with their principal place of business at 878 Broadway, New York, N. Y., from which address they conduct business under the above trade names.

PAR. 2. The respondents are now, and for more than 2 years last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various commodities, among which are two medicinal preparations, one being designated as Dupree Pills, and as Dr. Gordon's Single Strength Pills, and the other as Dupree Pills Double Strength and as Dr. Gordon's Double Strength Pills.

In the course and conduct of their business respondents cause their said medicinal preparations, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their said medicinal preparations in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said products by the United States mails, and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said products, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails and by insertions in catalogs and other advertising literature are the following:

DUPREE PILLS

(Single Strength)

A combination of Tansy, Cotton Root, Apiol and Pennyroyal.

Each------ 25¢ Dozen------ $2.75

DUPREE PILLS

(Double strength)

A specially prepared regulator, scientifically compounded for Amenorrhea and Dysmenorrhea, 24 pills to a box. Each box 85¢.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the foregoing representations and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent, directly or through inference, that their said preparations constitute competent and effective treatment for amenorrhea and dysmenorrhea. These representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading, in that neither of said preparations constitutes a competent or effective treatment for amenorrhea or dysmenorrhea.

PAR. 5. The advertisements disseminated by the respondents, as aforesaid, constitute false advertisements for the further reason that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained in such advertisements, and fail to reveal that the use of said preparations under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious injury to health. The preparation Dupree Pills contains, among other ingredients, the drugs extract cotton root bark, extract black hellebore, aloe, oil of tansy, and oil of savin. The preparation Dupree Pills Double Strength contains, among other ingredients, the drugs ergotin, extract cotton root bark, extract black hellebore, aloe, and oil of savin. Such drugs are present in said preparations in quantities sufficient to cause serious injury to health if said preparations are used under the conditions referred to above.

The use of said preparations under such conditions may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances, catharsis, nausea and vomiting, with pelvic congestion and congestion of the uterus, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage, and in those cases where said preparations are used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy, such use may result in uterine infection, with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures, and even to the blood stream, causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of said false and misleading advertisements with respect to their preparations has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the representations in said advertisements are true and that said preparations are safe for use, and the tendency and capacity to induce the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' preparations as a result of the erroneous and mistaken belief engendered by said advertisements.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on March 29, 1941, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Ben Gordon (also known as Benjamin Gordon) and Louis Gordon, trading as Bengor Products Co. and as Golf Products Co., charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On April 29, 1941, the respondents filed their answer, in which answer they admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Ben Gordon (also known as Benjamin Gordon) and Louis Gordon, are individuals trading as Bengor Products Co. and as Golf Products Co., with their principal place of business at 878 Broadway, New York, N. Y., from which address they conduct business under the above trade names.

PAR. 2. The respondents are now, and for more than 2 years last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various commodities, among which are two medicinal preparations, one being designated as Dupree Pills, and as Dr. Gordon's Single Strength Pills, and the other as Dupree Pills Double Strength and as Dr. Gordon's Double Strength Pills.

In the course and conduct of their business respondents cause their said medicinal preparations, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their said medicinal preparations in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said products by the United States mails, and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said products, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails and by insertions in catalogs and other advertising literature are the following:

DUPREE PILLS

(Single Strength)

A combination of Tansy, Cotton Root, Apiol and Pennyroyal.

Each------ 25¢ Dozen------ $2.75

DUPREE PILLS

(Double Strength)

A specially prepared regulator, scientifically compounded for Amenorrhea and Dysmenorrhea, 24 pills to a box. Each box 85¢.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the foregoing representations and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent, directly or through inference, that their said preparations constitute competent and effective treatments for amenorrhea and dysmenorrhea. These representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading, in that neither of said preparations constitutes a competent or effective treatment for amenorrhea or dysmenorrhea.

PAR. 5. The advertisements disseminated by the respondents, as aforesaid, constitute false advertisements for the further reason that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained in such advertisements, and fail to reveal that the use of said preparations under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious injury to health. The preparation Dupree Pills contains, among other ingredients, the drugs extract cotton root bark, extract black hellebore, aloe, oil of tansy, and oil of savin. The preparation Dupree Pills Double Strength contains, among other ingredients, the drugs ergotin, extract cotton root bark, extract black hellebore, aloe, and oil of savin. Such drugs are present in said preparations in quantities sufficient to cause serious injury to health if said preparations are used under the conditions referred to above.

The use of said preparations under such conditions may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances, catharsis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion and congestion of the uterus, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage, and in those cases where said preparations are used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy, such use may result in uterine infection, with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures, and even to the blood stream, causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of said false and misleading advertisements with respect to their preparations has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the representations in said advertisements are true and that said preparations are safe for use, and the tendency and capacity to induce the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' preparations as a result of the erroneous and mistaken belief engendered by said advertisements.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Ben Gordon (also known as Benjamin Gordon) and Louis Gordon, trading as Bengor Products Co. and as Golf Products Co., or trading under any other name or names, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of their two medicinal preparations, the one designated as Dupree Pills and as Dr. Gordon's Single Strength Pills, the other as Dupree Pills Double Strength and as Dr. Gordon's Double Strength Pills, or any preparation of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference, that respondents' said preparations constitute a competent and effective treatment for amenorrhea or dysmenorrhea; or that said preparations are safe and harmless; or which advertisement fails to reveal that the use of said preparations may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances with pelvic congestion and congestion of the uterus leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage and that the use of said preparations in cases of pregnancy may result in uterine infection extending to other pelvic and abdominal structures and to the blood stream causing septicemia or blood poisoning.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparations, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof, or which advertisement fails to reveal that the use of said preparations may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances with pelvic congestion and congestion of the uterus leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage and that the use of said preparations in cases of pregnancy may result in uterine infection extending to other pelvic and abdominal structures and to the blood stream causing septicemia or blood poisoning.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 10 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing stating whether they intend to comply with this order, and, if so, the manner and form in which they intend to comply; and that within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, said respondents shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

WILLIAM E. EVANS, TRADING AS PIONEER MATTRESS COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4483. Complaint, Apr. 5, 1941—Decision, July 10, 1941

Where an individual engaged in the manufacture and interstate sale and distribution of mattresses through advertising letters and cards bearing purported signatures of certain women's clubs, prepared subject to his approval and mailed by a New York advertising agency to addresses of numerous prospective purchasers supplied by him, and also through circulars, letters, cards, and other advertising material, and through tags and labels attached to his products, and otherwise—

(a) Represented that his said mattresses had been designed, sponsored or recommended by a physician, and were the products of a certain competitor long engaged in manufacture and sale of nationally advertised and widely and favorably known mattresses, through use of words "Dr." and "Simmons" in such statements as "Dr. Simmons Spring-filled Mattress * * ," " * * Dr. Simmons Inner-Spring mattress is nationally known * * *" notwithstanding the fact his said mattresses were not designed, sponsored, or recommended by any physician and were not the product of the Simmons Co.;

(b) Represented that his said mattresses were approved or sponsored by women's clubs or organizations through use of various purported offers and such statements as "HAS BEEN APPROVED BY US" and "THE WORLD'S BEST INNER-SPRING MATTRESS" over such names as "American Good Housekeeper Club" and "The Great Northern Women's Club," and "Recommended by the leading Women's Clubs * * *"; the facts being that such names were wholly fictitious, their purported addresses being the address of the advertising agency referred to;

(c) Misrepresented the customary or regular retail prices of his products through placing on tags and labels attached to certain mattresses, and inserting in advertising material, "$39.50," notwithstanding fact mattresses in question never sold at any price approximating said amount, but were customarily offered and sold at retail for about $10.95;

(d) Represented that his prices were special or reduced prices or applicable for a limited time only, or for advertising purposes, or represented only cost of manufacture, and that prospective purchasers were selected and might obtain his products at prices less than those at which they were customarily sold, through such statements as "LAST OPPORTUNITY! CAMPAIGN CLOSES * * * DR. SIMMONS SPRING-FILLED MATTRESS MADE BY Pioneer Mattress Company * * *," and "HAS BEEN APPROVED BY US. This mattress retails for $39.50. During this campaign you can buy one for $10.95 if you will phone or write them at once, as your name was selected to get one at the actual manufacturers cost. * * * AMERICAN GOOD HOUSEKEEPERS CLUB * * ," and " * * I recently had the pleasure of selecting your name to receive a beautiful new Dr. Simmons Health Inner-Spring Mattress for advertising purposes, and have instructed The Pioneer Mattress Company, Spartanburg, S. C., to deliver this mattress to you at $10.95 which is the actual manufacturers cost. This mattress retails for $39.50. * * * THE GREAT NORTHERN WOMEN'S CLUB," and "* * * Your name carrying Number 9380, by the American Good Housekeepers Club, * * * has been selected to receive one of our beautiful new * * * Mattresses for advertising purposes * * *" and other similar statements; facts being the prices at which his said products were offered were as aforesaid, his regular and customary retail prices, and names of purchasers were not selected on any particular basis, but merely formed part of the general mailing lists used by said individual and his said advertising agency; and

(e) Represented that his said mattresses were made entirely of new and unused materials and were germ and vermin proof, through such statements as "* * * We absolutely guarantee the mattress to be all new material * * *" and, in advertising, "CLEAN, NEW, SANITARY, GERM AND VERMIN PROOF * * ," and, on the label, " * * contains all new materials"; facts being, in many cases his said products were made of used or second-hand materials, and were neither germ nor vermin proof;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to his products, and to induce it to purchase substantial quantities thereof as a result of such erroneous belief:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Jesse D. Kash for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that William E. Evans, an individual trading as Pioneer Mattress Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent William E. Evans is an individual trading and doing business under the name of Pioneer Mattress Co., with his office and principal place of business located at 980 Church Street, in Spartanburg, S. C.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of mattresses. Respondent causes his said products, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of South Carolina to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in his said mattresses in commerce among and between the various States in the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his products, the respondent entered into an agreement with an advertising or mailing agency located in the city of New York, under which agreement such agency prepared form of advertising letters and cards and forwarded such forms to the respondent at his place of business in Spartanburg, S. C., for approval. The respondent had letters and cards printed from such forms and sent such letters and cards to said advertising agency, which proceeded to mail them to numerous prospective purchasers of respondent's products, the names and addresses of such prospective purchasers being supplied to said agency by the respondent. These advertising letters and cards bore the signatures of certain purported women's clubs, namely "American Good Housekeepers Club" and "The Great Northern Women's Club."

Among and typical of the statements and representations appearing in such advertising material are the following:

PAR. 5. Through the use of the foregoing representations, and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondent has represented that his said mattresses are designed, sponsored or recommended by a physician; that the prospective purchaser's name has been selected or chosen on some basis, and that by reason thereof such prospective purchaser is given an opportunity to obtain one of respondent's mattresses at a special or reduced price which represents the actual cost of manufacture of such mattress; that such offer is open for a limited time only; that such offer is made in connection with a special advertising campaign; that respondent's mattresses are made entirely of new and unused materials; that such mattresses are germ proof and vermin proof; that such mattresses are approved or recommended by various women's clubs.

PAR. 6. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's mattresses are not designed, sponsored, or recommended by any physician. The use by the respondent of the legend "Dr." to designate his mattresses is within itself misleading and deceptive. The names of prospective purchasers are not selected or chosen on any particular basis, but such names merely form a part of general mailing lists used by the respondent and by the respondent's advertising agency as aforesaid. The prices at which respondent's mattresses are offered for sale are not special or reduced prices, nor do they represent only the cost of the manufacture of such mattresses. Such prices are in fact the regular and customary retail prices of respondent's mattresses. Such offers are not limited as to time, nor are they made in connection with any special advertising campaign.

In many cases respondent's mattresses are not made entirely of new or unused materials, but are made of used or second-hand materials. Respondent's mattresses are neither germ proof nor vermin proof. They are not approved or recommended by any women's club. In truth and in fact, the names of the purported women's clubs appearing in respondent's advertising are wholly fictitious, the purported addresses of such clubs being the address of respondent's advertising agency.

PAR. 7. A further practice on the part of respondent is the use of fictitious price markings in connection with his products, such markings being placed on tags and labels attached to said products, and also inserted in other advertising material. Among and typical of such price markings is the legend "$39.50" which the respondent uses in connection with certain of his mattresses. Through the use of this legend, the respondent represents that the customary retail price of said mattress is $39.50. This representation is false and misleading, in that said mattresses have never been sold at retail for $39.50 or for any price approximating such amount. In truth and in fact, the price at which said mattresses are customarily offered for sale and sold at retail in the normal and regular course of business is only about $10.95.

PAR. 8. One of the competitors of the respondent, namely, Simmons Co., has for many years manufactured and sold mattresses under the trade name "Simmons." Such mattresses have been nationally advertised under such trade name and are widely and favorably known among members of the purchasing public. The use by the respondent of the name "Simmons" to designate his products serves as a representation to the public that respondent's mattresses are the product of the Simmons Co. In truth and in fact, respondent's mattresses are not the product of said Simmons Co., and the use by the respondent of the name "Simmons" to designate such mattresses constitutes a false and misleading representation.

PAR. 9. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid acts and practices has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to respondent's products, and to induce such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's products as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

PAR. 10. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on April 5, 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent William E. Evans, an individual trading as Pioneer Mattress Co., charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Subsequently, respondent filed his answer in which he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent William E. Evans is an individual trading and doing business under the name of Pioneer Mattress Co., with his office and principal place of business located at 980 Church Street, in Spartanburg, S. C.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of mattresses. Respondent causes his said products, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of South Carolina to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in his said mattresses in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his products, the respondent entered into an agreement with an advertising or mailing agency located in the city of New York, under which agreement such agency prepared forms of advertising letters and cards and forwarded such forms to the respondent at his place of business in Spartanburg, S. C., for approval. The respondent had letters and cards printed from such forms and sent such letters and cards to said advertising agency, which proceeded to mail them to numerous prospective purchasers of respondent's products, the names and addresses of such prospective purchasers being supplied to said agency by the respondent. These advertising letters and cards bore the signatures of certain purported women's clubs, namely, "American Good Housekeepers Club" and "The Great Northern Women's Club."

PAR. 4. In addition to the foregoing representations, the respondent has made other representations to prospective purchasers of his products, such representations being disseminated by means of circulars, letters, cards, and other advertising material distributed among prospective purchasers, by means of tags and labels attached to respondent's products, and by other means.

Among and typical of the statements and representations appearing in such advertising material are the following:

PAR. 5. Through the use of the foregoing representations, and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondent has represented that his said mattresses are designed, sponsored, or recommended by a physician; that the prospective purchaser's name has been selected or chosen on some basis, and that by reason thereof such prospective purchaser is given an opportunity to obtain one of respondent's mattresses at a special or reduced price which represents the actual cost of manufacture of such mattress; that such offer is open for a limited time only; that such offer is made in connection with a special advertising campaign; that respondent's mattresses are made entirely of new and unused materials; that such mattresses are germ proof and vermin proof; that such mattresses are approved or recommended by various women's clubs.

PAR. 6. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's mattresses are not designed, sponsored, or recommended by any physician. The use by the respondent of the legend "DR." to designate his mattresses is within itself misleading and deceptive. The names of prospective purchasers are not selected or chosen on any particular basis, but such names merely form a part of general mailing lists used by the respondent and by the respondent's advertising agency as aforesaid. The prices at which respondent's mattresses are offered for sale are not special or reduced prices, nor do they represent only the cost of the manufacture of such mattresses. Such prices are in fact the regular and customary retail prices of respondent's mattresses. Such offers are not limited as to time, nor are they made in connection with any special advertising campaign.

In many cases respondent's mattresses are not made entirely of new or unused materials, but are made of used or second-hand materials. Respondent's mattresses are neither germ proof nor vermin proof. They are not approved or recommended by any women's club. In truth and in fact, the names of the purported women's clubs appearing in respondent's advertising are wholly fictitious, the purported addresses of such clubs being the address of respondent's advertising agency.

PAR. 7. A further practice on the part of respondent is the use of fictitious price markings in connection with his products, such markings being placed on tags and labels attached to said products, and also inserted in other advertising material. Among and typical of such price markings is the legend "$39.50" which the respondent uses in connection with certain of his mattresses. Through the use of this legend, the respondent represents that the customary retail price of said mattress is $39.50. This representation is false and misleading, in that said mattresses have never been sold at retail for $39.50 or for any price approximating such amount. In truth and in fact, the price at which said mattresses are customarily offered for sale and sold at retail in the normal and regular course of business is only about $10.95.

PAR. 8. One of the competitors of the respondent, namely, Simmons Co., has for many years manufactured and sold mattresses under the trade name "Simmons." Such mattresses have been nationally advertised under such trade name and are widely and favorably known among members of the purchasing public. The use by the respondent of the name "Simmons" to designate his products serves as a representation to the public that respondent's mattresses are the product of the Simmons Co. In truth and in fact, respondent's mattresses are not the product of said Simmons Co., and the use by the respondent of the name "Simmons" to designate such mattresses constitutes a false and misleading representation.

PAR. 9. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid acts and practices has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to respondent's products, and to induce such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's products as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, William E. Evans, individually and trading as Pioneer Mattress Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of mattresses in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word "Doctor" or the abbreviation "Dr." to designate, describe or refer to respondent's products, or otherwise representing that respondent's products are designed, sponsored, or recommended by any physician.

2. Using the word "Simmons," alone or in conjunction or connection with any other word or words, to designate, describe or refer to respondent's products, or otherwise representing that respondent's products are products of the concern known as Simmons Company.

3. Soliciting the purchase of respondent's products through the use of offers which purport to have originated with women's clubs or organizations sponsoring respondent's products.

4. Representing that respondent's products are approved or recommended by any women's club or organization.

5. Representing as the customary or regular retail prices of respondent's products prices which are in excess of the prices at which such products are regularly and customarily sold by respondent at retail in the normal and usual course of business.

6. Representing that the prices at which respondent offers his products for sale are special or reduced prices, or that such prices are applicable for a limited time only, or that such prices are for advertising purposes, or that such prices represent only the cost of the manufacture of such products, when in fact such prices are the usual and customary prices at which respondent sells his products at retail in the normal and usual course of business.

7. Representing that the names of prospective purchasers which are taken from general mailing lists are "selected," and that such prospective purchasers may obtain respondent's products at prices less than the prices at which such products are customarily sold.

8. Representing that products which contain any used or second-hand materials are made entirely of new or unused materials.

9. Representing that respondent's products are germ proof or vermin proof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

REFRIGERATION & AIR CONDITIONING INSTITUTE, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3811. Complaint, Oct. 31, 1939[1]—Decision, July 11, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of a course of study in refrigeration and air conditioning, which consisted primarily of a series of lessons to be pursued at home, followed by a period of shop training and instruction at its school in Chicago;

In advertising, through newspapers of wide circulation and extensively by means of radio programs, for the purpose, primarily, of arousing the interest of prospective purchasers and of causing them to make inquiries of it for additional information, and by oral representations of its field representatives or agents, through whom it conducted actual solicitation of prospective purchasers—

(a) Represented, directly or by implication, that there was a great and unusual demand for new employees, and that as many as 5,000 or more new employees per year were needed in the refrigeration and air conditioning industry, that unusual and extraordinary opportunities for employment were open to persons completing its course of study, and that employment in said industry was assured to such persons;

The facts being that, while there are opportunities for employment in said industry, there is no unusual or extraordinary demand for employees therein, instruction and training in subject being offered also by many other correspondence schools, as well as universities and colleges, and the industry and the trade unions also supplying additional workers; even assuming that the industry could absorb 5,000 new workers a year, it was doubtful, in view of the large number of persons seeking to enter it, that the major portion of its 2,000 annual graduates would be able to obtain employment, and in no event could such graduates be assured thereof; and

(b) Represented that its said school was under the direction and supervision of the industry and was conducted in cooperation therewith;

Facts being that, while it maintained as a part of its organization a group of individuals holding responsible positions in the industry, and known as its "Board of Governors," which, at bi-monthly meetings, discussed various school matters and offered suggestions and criticisms, the work of such "Board," generally speaking, was advisory only: it did not undertake to direct or supervise in detail operations of the school, and the companies with which its individual members were connected fell far short of constituting the entire industry, though occupying prominent places therein; and while certain individuals in the industry had evinced interest in the school and cooperated with it to a limited extent, there had been no cooperative action by it as such, and no member thereof had contributed in any way to its financial support;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public, and to cause it, as a result of the erroneous belief thus engendered, to purchase its course of study, whereby trade was diverted unfairly to it from its competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas, Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, and Mr. John W. Addison, trial examiners.

Mr. William L. Pencke for the Commission.

Mr. Richard S. Oldberg, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

AMENDED COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Refrigeration & Air Conditioning Institute, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its amended complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Refrigeration & Air Conditioning Institute, Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business at 2150 Lawrence Avenue in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 4 years last past, engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States of courses of study and instruction in the subjects of air conditioning and refrigeration and subjects connected therewith or incident thereto, which said courses of study and instruction are pursued by correspondence through the medium of the United States mail. Respondent, in the course and conduct of said business during the time aforesaid caused and does now cause its said courses of study and instruction together with books and material connected therewith to be transported from its said place of business in Illinois to, into and through States of the United States other than Illinois to the purchasers thereof in such other States.

PAR. 3. During the time above mentioned, other individuals, firms, and corporations in various States of the United States have been and are engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of courses of study and instruction in air conditioning and refrigeration and in subjects pertaining to various trades, callings, and pursuits and in preparation for work and positions of various kinds, all of which said courses of study and instruction are given and pursued either in whole or in part by means of correspondence through the medium of the United States mail. Respondent has been, during the time aforesaid, in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States in the sale of its said courses of study and instruction with such other individuals, firms, and corporations.

PAR. 4. Respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling its said courses of study and instruction, has made numerous misleading representations by one or more of the following methods, to wit: through its representatives engaged in soliciting the sale of such courses; in advertising matter caused by respondent to be published in newspapers and magazines circulated among the general public, including prospective students, in various States of the United States; in printed matter circulated by respondent by mail or otherwise to prospective students, enrolled students and others in various States of the United States; in radio broadcasts to members of the public generally. Among such misleading representations made by or through one or more of the said methods are representations that import or imply:

1. That the person solicited has been specially selected to take the course offered and that all those solicited and enrolled are specially selected.

2. That jobs are available for students who complete respondent's instruction and that such students are given preference in available jobs by members of the industries involved by actual employment.

3. That laboratory work given at respondent school may be taken by the student upon completion of the home study regardless of whether payments have been made in full.

4. That immediate enrollment is necessary in order to secure the training offered or that opportunity to enroll will not be available later because enrollment will not then be accepted.

5. That starting pay that may be expected by students who finish respondent's course is higher than it is in fact.

6. That little previous education is necessary in order to successfully pursue and finish the course offered or that apparent educational deficiencies will not be a bar thereto.

7. That the manufacturers whose officials have endorsed or commended respondent's course have agreed to give employment to respondent's graduates or a large part thereof.

8. That the salesman or other representative of respondent will call back and assist the student solicited in his studies.

9. That respondent's so-called Board of Governors, composed of officers or employees of certain manufacturers, is in full charge of respondent school; that it is in direct and actual charge of the work of instruction; that it is appointed by and acts on behalf of the industry or the so-called endorsers as a whole; or that its status is other than it is in fact.

10. That the student solicited may elect and arrange to spend extra time at the laboratory of respondent school in addition to that regularly provided.

11. That the manufacturers in the industry whose officers or employees have given letters commending respondent's course actually sponsor the school or contribute financially to the upkeep of the same or to the cost of instruction.

12. That the size of the institution conducted by respondent is greater than it is in fact; that respondent school occupies the entire space in the buildings depicted in its literature and advertisements; and that a certain building so depicted in some of its literature is actually built and in use.

13. That the school operated by respondent was founded by or is operated by the industries involved, or by the concerns whose officials have endorsed the same.

14. That the industries involved absorb and will absorb all of the graduates of respondent school or that approximately 5,000 graduates of the school can and will be so absorbed annually.

15. That all the openings for employment arising and existing annually in the industries involved of the kind for which respondent's training qualifies its students will be filled by graduates of respondent school or that respondent has been authorized by said industries to prepare and furnish men for all of such openings.

16. That all of respondent's graduates have found employment in the industries involved.

17. That respondent school does and will obtain jobs for its graduates.

18. That a refund will be made of money paid by students who sign respondent's enrollment blanks if the students are unable to proceed with the training or cannot assimilate the same or that payments will be suspended during unemployment or other events preventing the continuance of payments, or, if the student desires to discontinue the course after starting, further payments will be canceled.

19. That the contract caused by respondent to be presented to and signed by prospective students is a mere application for the training offered and not a contract and is merely preliminary and of no further binding effect on those signing the same.

20. That there is a great demand for men in the industries involved or that the demand is much greater than it is in fact.

21. That respondent school is the only one of the kind having endorsements from manufacturers or their representatives.

22. That by enrolling in respondent school, the student is accepting the chance of a lifetime and that by graduating therefrom his future is assured.

23. That the home study course conducted by respondent is the only one of the kind having shop training in connection therewith.

24. That the training given by respondent qualifies students thereof as engineers in the fields involved and that by taking respondent's training jobs as engineers can be procured.

25. That the employment opportunities stressed by respondent in its advertising matter and by its salesmen are in the manufacturing plants in the industries involved.

26. That the number of students accepted by respondent is limited to the number of openings for employment in the industries involved and available to those who graduate.

27. That the value or cost of laboratory equipment in respondent school is greater than it is in fact.

28. That transportation cost of the student to and from Chicago for laboratory training is paid by respondent.

29. That a so-called limited quota of enrollments is employed by respondent and applied to restrict the number thereof so that those who finally graduate will not exceed the demand for such graduates in the industries involved.

30. That respondent school is the official training agency of the refrigeration and air conditioning industries.

31. That all of certain listed manufacturers had officially endorsed respondent's training.

32. That respondent school solicits and enrolls only a comparatively small number of students.

PAR. 5. Among the statements of respondent in its radio broadcasts, advertising matter or literature, circulated or published at one time or another as aforesaid, which import or imply one or more of the foregoing representations or which encourage such representations by its salesmen or furnish a background therefor, are the following:

* * * In fact, in the last three years, Air Conditioning installations have increased more than FOURTEEN HUNDRED PERCENT! BUT, with this wonderful growth, a serious problem has arisen, for now the Industry finds that there are not enough trained men available to carry on its work. PAR. 6. In truth and in fact—no special selection is or has been made of prospective students who are interviewed by respondent's salesmen and solicited to enroll for training by them, but generally speaking, all who make inquiry in response to respondent's advertising efforts, as aforesaid, are interviewed and solicited to enroll; generally speaking, jobs in the industries involved are not available for all students who complete respondent's instruction or for the great majority thereof, nor do members of such industries, generally speaking, give preference to respondent's graduates by furnishing them employment; respondent requires payment in full before students are eligible to take laboratory training and does not permit such training to be taken until payment has been made in full; in order to be accepted by respondent, it is not necessary or required that prospective students enroll immediately when first called upon by respondent's representatives; the subjects involved in respondent's training not only require a considerable degree of intelligence and the ability to concentrate and study systematically and persistently but also require some knowledge of chemistry, physics, and high school mathematics, which have not ordinarily been acquired by students having little previous education or only a common school education; the so-called endorsing manufacturers have not and do not furnish employment to all of respondent's graduates or to a large part thereof but only in a comparatively few instances; it is not a part of respondent's system of training for the salesmen or other representatives of respondent to call back and assist students in their work; respondent's so-called board of governors is not in direct charge of respondent school or of its instruction and does not govern the school, but acts in a mere advisory capacity; neither does said board represent the industry as a whole or the so-called endorsing manufacturers as a group; but only the individual concerns with which the members thereof are connected; respondent does not provide for or permit the taking of extra laboratory work but only provides that given to all students in regular course; respondent's so-called endorsing manufacturers do not sponsor respondents school or contribute to the upkeep of the same or to the cost of instruction; the buildings occupied by respondent school and depicted in its advertising matter as such are not entirely occupied by respondent but are also occupied by other associated schools; one picture of a building, formerly used by respondent in its advertising matter, was from a drawing of a proposed building that was never built; respondent school was not founded by nor is it operated by the industries involved or by the concerns whose officials have endorsed the same; the industries involved have not and do not absorb all of respondent's graduates or approximately 5,000 of them annually; all openings for employment in the industries involved are not filled by respondent's graduates nor is respondent authorized by said industries to prepare and furnish men for such openings as may exist; all of respondent's graduates have not found employment in the industries involved; respondent does not in practice obtain jobs for its students but merely attempts to assist therein; respondent does not make a practice of refunding money paid by students who are unable to proceed with the training or who find that they cannot assimilate the same, nor are payments generally suspended during students' unemployment or other events preventing the continuance of payments, nor are further payments canceled as a general practice when students desire to discontinue the course, but, in practice, respondent generally attempts to collect the amounts called for on all contracts or to make some compromise settlement thereon; the so-called application signed by students is a contract for the payment of the price of the course in full, including transportation to and from Chicago, and becomes final upon acceptance by respondent without further action or election by the applicants involved; there is not now, nor has there been for the last year or 2 at least, any great demand for men in the refrigeration and air conditioning industries or for new men not already connected therewith or that is not capable of being principally supplied through regular channels in the industries involved; respondent school is not the only school of the kind that has endorsements from manufacturers; it is incorrect and greatly exaggerated to represent that by enrolling in respondent school one is accepting the chance of a lifetime and that by graduating therefrom one's future is assured; respondent school is not the only one of the kind having shop training in connection therewith; respondent's training is not such as to qualify graduates thereof as "engineers" under the usual acceptance of that term nor engineering training in the sense that students thereof receive the same kind and grade of training as given in colleges and universities granting degrees in engineering but is in the nature of a trade school offering training tending to qualify students for jobs as mechanics or service men; comparatively few of respondent's graduates have found employment in manufacturing plants of the industries involved; the quota of students fixed by respondent as the limit of enrollments is not such that those who graduate are in fact absorbed by employment in the industries involved; the represented value of respondent's laboratory equipment is based on alleged retail price valuation of the equipment involved, rather than on actual present value or cost to respondent since the equipment was purchased at prices greatly below the alleged retail prices on which such represented valuation is fixed; transportation cost to and from Chicago for laboratory work is furnished and paid in advance by the student as a part of the charge made by respondent for the training; the so-called limited quota of enrollments is not employed and applied by respondent so as to result in supplying only enough graduates who find or receive employment in the industries concerned but leaves out of account all other sources of supply of new employees in such industries and is grossly large and unreasonable if a really substantial percentage of respondent's enrollees should graduate; respondent school is not the official training agency of the refrigeration and air conditioning industries nor of the so-called endorsing manufacturers as a group; not all of the manufacturing concerns listed by respondent in its advertising matter as having endorsed its training had officially endorsed the same but some so listed were concerns that had not given official endorsement thereof and any endorsements involved were merely the personal acts of individuals connected therewith; respondent's enrollments are not small when considered on a total and yearly basis but are based on an annual quota of approximately 20,000 enrollments and made to appear small, restrictive, and selective by dividing such total quota into areas extending over the entire United States and then breaking down these divisions into monthly quotas.

PAR. 7. The foregoing acts and practices used by respondent in connection with the offering for sale and sale of its said courses of study and instruction have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations, as herein alleged, are true, and to induce them to purchase and pursue such courses of study and instruction on account thereof. Thereby trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from competitors engaged in the sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of correspondence courses in air conditioning and refrigeration as well as from those engaged in such sale of correspondence courses in subjects pertaining to various trades, callings and pursuits and in preparation for work and positions of various kinds. There are among the competitors of respondent those who in the sale of their respective courses of study and instruction do not similarly or in any manner misrepresent the same or matters pertaining thereto. As a result of respondent's said practices, as herein set forth, substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on June 7, 1939, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Refrigeration & Air Conditioning Institute, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Thereafter, on October 31, 1939, the Commission issued and subsequently served its amended complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaints and the filing of respondent's answers thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaints were introduced by William L. Pencke, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaints by Richard S. Oldberg, attorney for the respondent, before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and the testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the original and amended complaints, the answers thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiners upon the evidence and the exceptions thereto, briefs in support of the complaints and in opposition thereto, and oral argument before the Commission; and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Refrigeration & Air Conditioning Institute, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 2150 Lawrence Avenue, in the city of Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and since 1935 has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of correspondence courses of study and instruction in refrigeration and air conditioning.

Respondent causes, and since 1935 has caused, its courses of study and instruction, when sold, to be transmitted from its place of business in the State of Illinois through the United States mails and by other means to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and since 1935 has maintained, a course of trade in its courses of study and instruction in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and since 1935 has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of correspondence courses of study and instruction in the subjects of refrigeration and air conditioning.

PAR. 3. Respondent's course of study consists primarily of a series of lessons to be pursued by the student in his home. Upon the completion of the series of lessons a period of shop training and instruction is given the student at respondent's school in Chicago. Originally, this shop training was limited to 2 weeks but subsequently it was increased to 4 weeks. Twelve to 18 months are usually required for the completion of the entire course of study.

In the course and conduct of its business and for the purpose of promoting the sale of its course of study, respondent inserts advertisements in newspapers having a wide circulation and also advertises extensively by means of radio programs. These newspaper and radio advertisements are primarily for the purpose of arousing the interest of prospective purchasers in respondent's course of study, and of causing such prospective purchasers to make inquiry of respondent for additional information with respect to the course.

The actual solicitation of prospective purchasers is conducted by respondent almost entirely through agents or solicitors located in various sections of the United States, these agents being designated by respondent as field representatives. For the purpose of contacting prospects and selling them the course of study, respondent has divided the United States into numerous sales districts, with field representatives located in each of these districts. Respondent customarily has in its employ approximately 150 field representatives, all of whom are compensated on a commission basis.

Among and typical of the statements and representations made by the respondent in its newspaper advertisements and radio programs are the following:

[Newspaper advertisements]

Also—more than 70 of the leading manufacturers in this industry are "officially" endorsing and recommending R-A-C-I training because they know that under such supervision, any man taking it is going to be trained exactly as they want him trained.

Again!—Isn't it reasonable to suppose that after "officially" endorsing this Training that these same 70 manufacturers—and their thousands of distributors and dealers, everywhere—will give our graduates the preference when they have jobs to fill, everything else being equal, of course.

And trained men are needed—don't overlook that—hundreds of them, in fact. But first they must be trained—and trained right. That's our job. And that's the reason for this ad—we are looking for men who are really interested.

Because of our pledge to these manufacturers to be extra careful we are accepting for training only men of good character, fair education, and with some mechanical ability.

* * * * * * *

Wanted immediately—several men to train under direct supervision of factory engineers, appointed under arrangement with leading manufacturers. Those qualifying will be prepared by Refrigeration and Air Conditioning Institute * * *.

* * * * * * *

Fifty leading manufacturers in the industry cooperated with us in making possible a complete training program that prepares for ACTUAL JOBS and includes a national placement service.

The type of training is offered that employers in this industry want their men to have. Its success is proven by the fact that all of the graduates in the Chicago District are already employed in permanent, good pay jobs. All tools and equipment furnished without charge.

* * * * * * *

To our knowledge the Training offered by the Refrigeration & Air Conditioning Institute, of Chicago, IS THE ONLY ONE IN THE ENTIRE AIR CONDITIONING FIELD THAT IS ACTUALLY DIRECTED AND SUPERVISED BY ENGINEERS AND EXECUTIVES WORKING RIGHT IN THE INDUSTRY.

[Radio continuities]

* * * In fact, in the last three years, Air Conditioning installations have increased more than FOURTEEN HUNDRED PERCENT! But, with this wonderful growth, a serious problem has arisen, for now the Industry finds that there are not enough trained men available to carry on its work. Recent surveys show that from five to seven thousand ADDITIONAL trained men will be needed EVERY YEAR for the next TEN years * * * To meet this demand a nation-wide training program, officially endorsed and recommended by more than a hundred leading manufacturers, is now being carried on, to create the new type craftsman so badly needed * * * MEN ARE BEING SELECTED FOR THIS TRAINING, NOW! * * *

* * * * * * *

As I understand it, this training program is directed and supervised by engineers and executives working right in the industry. Is that true?

Yes, that's right! And these men were actually appointed by the presidents of some of the manufacturers who endorse this program for the very purpose of directing and supervising the training, to make sure the men taking it are trained. Preliminary instruction is followed by practical shop work in what are probably the largest and most modern shops of their kind in the world! AND MEN ARE BEING SELECTED FOR THIS TRAINING, NOW!

* * * * * * *

As you probably know, refrigeration and air conditioning is one of the fastest growing businesses in America * * * but do you know also that so rapid has been its growth that there are not enough trained men to carry on the work of estimating, planning, installing and service engineering? That's the situation right now. Consequently fifty of the leading manufacturers in the field are cooperating with the Refrigeration and Air Conditioning Institute in a training program that will prepare the men needed for this work.

* * * * * * *

PAR. 4. The Commission finds that through the use of these statements and representations and others of a similar nature, and through oral representations made by respondent's field representatives to prospective purchasers, respondent has represented, directly or by implication, that there is a great and unusual demand in the refrigeration and air conditioning industry for new employees; that as many as 5,000 or more new employees per year are needed in the industry; that unusual and extraordinary opportunities for employment in the industry are open to persons completing respondent's course of study, and that employment in the industry is assured to such persons; that respondent's school is under the direction and supervision of the industry, and is conducted in cooperation with the industry.

PAR. 5. There is a sharp conflict in the testimony on the question as to the number of new employees which the refrigeration and air conditioning industry may reasonably be expected to absorb each year, and on the question as to the opportunities for employment which are open to graduates of respondent's school. Testifying at the instance of the Commission were a number of witnesses who were well qualified to express an opinion on the subject and some of whom held high positions in the industry. These witnesses were of the opinion that the industry could not absorb 5,000 new employees per year or any number approaching that figure.

A number of well qualified witnesses for the respondent were of the contrary view, their opinion being that the industry should be able to use 5,000 new employees annually for some years to come. Several of respondent's witnesses held important positions with concerns engaged in the manufacture of refrigeration and air conditioning equipment. While these latter witnesses were optimistic in their views on the possibilities for employment in the industry, their testimony failed to show that anything more than a negligible number of respondent's graduates had been employed in the manufacturing plants represented by the witnesses. In fact, it was only in exceptional and isolated instances that respondent's graduates had found employment with these companies. Nor was there any testimony indicating that any substantial number of respondent's graduates had obtained positions with the sales agencies and service concerns throughout the country which sell and service the products of these manufacturers.

In connection with its school, respondent maintains an employment service to assist its graduates in obtaining positions. From a survey made by respondent in 1938, it appears that only about 26 percent of respondent's graduates had been able to obtain employment in the industry, and a similar survey made in 1939 indicated that not more than 35 percent had been successful in that respect. A third survey presented a more favorable picture. Between October 1939 and June 1940, 1,090 persons graduated from respondent's school, and this survey indicated that during the same period, 1,099 graduates had found employment in the industry. This latter figure, however, included persons who had graduated during previous years as well as those who had graduated during this particular period. There is no indication in the record as to how many of the positions obtained by the 1,099 persons were of a permanent nature and how many were only temporary.

A factor which tends to limit the opportunities for employment open to respondent's graduates is that the trade or labor unions themselves maintain trade schools for apprentices, and by means of these schools the trade unions in many cases supply all of the new men needed for work of this character. A further factor is that in the field of home refrigeration there has been a decided tendency among manufacturers during recent years to enclose their machines in hermetically sealed containers, with the result that when in need of service or repair such machines cannot be attended to by local service men but must be returned to the manufacturer.

Approximately 2,000 students are graduated from respondent's school each year. Not only are there many other correspondence schools offering instruction and training similar to that offered by respondent, but many universities and colleges also offer courses of instruction and training in this field. The industry itself and the trade unions supply an additional number of workers. Even if it be assumed that the industry can absorb approximately 5,000 new workers per year, it is doubtful, in view of the large number of persons seeking to enter the industry, that the major portion of respondent's graduates would be able to obtain employment.

The Commission is therefore of the opinion from the evidence that while there are opportunities for employment open in the refrigeration and air conditioning industry, there is no unusual or extraordinary demand for employees in the industry. In no event can respondent's graduates be assured of employment.

PAR. 6. Respondent's claim that its school is directed and supervised by the refrigeration and air conditioning industry is based upon the fact that the school maintains as a part of its organization a group composed of individuals holding responsible positions in the industry. This group is known as the school's "Board of Governors" and usually consists of five members. At the meetings of the board, which are held every 2 months, various matters in connection with the school are discussed, and suggestions and criticisms are offered by the members of the board. Generally speaking, the work of the board is of an advisory nature only. The board does not undertake to direct or supervise in detail the operations of the school. The companies with which the individual members of the board are connected, while occupying prominent places in the industry, fall far short of constituting the entire industry.

The Commission finds that there is no substantial basis for respondent's representation that its school is conducted in cooperation with the industry. Certain individuals in the industry have evinced interest in the school, and have cooperated with it to a limited extent, but there has been no cooperative action by the industry as such. No member of the industry has contributed in any way to the financial support of the school.

PAR. 7. The Commission therefore finds that the claims and representations of the respondent with respect to its school and with respect to the opportunities for employment open to the graduates of its school, as set forth in paragraphs 3 and 4 herein, are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and deceptive.

PAR. 8. The Commission further finds that the use by the respondents of these representations has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public, and to cause such portion of the public to purchase respondent's course of study as a result of the erroneous and mistaken belief so engendered. In consequence thereof, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the original and amended complaints of the Commission, the answers of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaints and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by William L. Pencke, attorney for the Commission, and by Richard S. Oldberg, attorney for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Refrigeration & Air Conditioning Institute, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of its correspondence courses of study and instruction in refrigeration and air conditioning, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that there is a great or unusual demand in the refrigeration and air conditioning industry for new employees.

2. Representing that unusual or extraordinary opportunities for employment in said industry are open to persons completing respondent's course of study, or that employment in said industry is assured to such persons.

3. Representing that respondent's school is under the direction or supervision of said industry, or that respondent's school is conducted in cooperation with said industry.

It is further ordered, That said respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

HOLLYWOOD RACKET MANUFACTURING COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3931. Complaint, Oct. 19, 1939—Decision, July 11, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in interstate sale and distribution of tennis, badminton, and squash rackets, in the course of which business it purchased and imported from Japan unfinished tennis rackets which were there made according to its specifications, and which it further processed and completed in accordance with the particular specifications of the order to be filled; in course of aforesaid processing—

(a) Completely removed, obliterated, and covered up the words "Made in Japan" which appeared upon handle of the racket when imported, and imprinted thereon its name, "Hollywood Racket Mfg. Co.," and made use in its advertising material of legends "Hollywood Rackets" and "Hollywood Racket Mfg. Co.," without disclosing that said rackets were made in Japan, either upon the products themselves or in any of its advertising; and

Where said corporation, engaged as aforesaid in the purchase and importing of unfinished tennis rackets, the handles of which required further processing in addition to that given the rackets described above—

(b) Sold said rackets, likewise, with no disclosure in advertising or otherwise that they were originally made in Japan and imported into this country;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public, familiar with domestic manufacturers' long-established custom of marking products of foreign origin, into the erroneous belief that said rackets were products wholly made in the United States, for which it had a decided preference over those made in Japan or many other foreign countries, with result that a substantial portion of said public purchased its said products, and with effect of placing in the hands of unscrupulous and uninformed dealers a means and instrumentality whereby such dealers were enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public:

Held, That such acts and practices, as above set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas and Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiners.

Mr. Maurice C. Pearce for the Commission.

Mr. Robert W. Fulwider, of Los Angeles, Calif., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Hollywood Racket Manufacturing Co., Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Hollywood Racket Manufacturing Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California. It has its principal office and place of business at 7462 Melrose Avenue, city of Hollywood, State of California.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of tennis, badminton, and squash rackets. Respondent causes its said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of California to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. At all times mentioned herein, respondent has maintained a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent uses constituent parts and materials of both foreign and domestic origin in its aforesaid rackets. Such foreign parts and materials, when imported and received by the respondent, bear marks and imprints indicating the country of their origin. Among such foreign-made parts used by respondent are racket frames which are imported from the country of Japan and which bear the mark "Made in Japan."

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business, it has been and is the practice of respondent to lacquer such imported racket frames and place thereon a leather grip as well as stringing said racket frames. In such processes the mark "Made in Japan" is obliterated or concealed, and such rackets are then sold and distributed by the respondent in commerce aforesaid without any marking thereon to inform members of the purchasing public that the frames of said rackets are of Japanese or foreign origin.

PAR. 5. A further practice of the respondent in connection with the sale and distribution of its said rackets is to stamp or imprint upon such rackets the legend "Hollywood Racket Mfg. Co." Respondent also issues and distributes among prospective customers catalogues, circulars, price lists, and other advertising material which contain legends representing that such rackets are manufactured at the respondent's place of business in Hollywood, Calif., and that such rackets are wholly of domestic origin and manufacture rather than foreign origin and manufacture. Among and typical of such representations is the following: "Hollywood Rackets, Tennis, Badminton, Squash, Hollywood Racket Mfg. Co., Hollywood, California."

In truth and in fact such rackets are not wholly of domestic origin and manufacture, as the frames thereof which constitute the basic part of such rackets are made in Japan.

PAR. 6. For many years last past there has been obtained among manufacturers in the United States an established custom and practice of marking products of foreign origin in such manner as to indicate that such products are in fact of foreign rather than domestic origin. The purchasing public is familiar with and relies upon such custom and practice and when products bear no marking indicating that they are of foreign origin, the purchasing public assumes that such products are of domestic origin.

PAR. 7. There is among the members of the purchasing public a decided preference for products which are manufactured in the United States over products manufactured in Japan or any other foreign country.

PAR. 8. The practices of respondent in obliterating or obscuring from its racket frames the legend "Made in Japan" and in imprinting on its rackets the legend "Hollywood Racket Mfg. Co." and in using in its advertising material the legends "Hollywood Rackets" and "Hollywood Racket Mfg. Co., Hollywood, California," without disclosing that the frames of such rackets are made in Japan, have the tendency and capacity to and do mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent's rackets are wholly of domestic origin and manufacture. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief, engendered as herein set forth, a substantial portion of the purchasing public are induced to and do purchase respondent's products.

By the use of the practices herein set forth, the respondent has also placed in the hands of unscrupulous or uninformed dealers a means and instrumentality whereby such dealers have been and are enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on October 19, A. D. 1939, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Hollywood Racket Manufacturing Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by William L. Pencke and C. Robert Mathis, Jr., attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Robert W. Fulwider, attorney for the respondent, before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, briefs, in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto and oral arguments before the Commission; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Hollywood Racket Manufacturing Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California. It has its principal office and place of business at 7462 Melrose Avenue, city of Hollywood, State of California.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of tennis, badminton, and squash rackets. Respondent causes its said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of California to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. At all times mentioned herein, respondent has maintained a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business the respondent purchases and imports unfinished tennis rackets made in Japan according to the specifications of the respondent. These specifications include the selection, cutting, and bending of the wood, gluing, the preparation of the bend and handles, pallets, and overlays, which are then applied and shaped and the racket drilled. When such rackets are imported into the United States they bear upon the handle thereof the legend "Made in Japan." Such rackets are further processed by the respondent when received by it. This processing consists of the application of wood filler and several coats of lacquer, trimming with windings, and application of trade-marks or brands. The handles of such rackets are covered with leather and the entire racket tested for balance and drilled or weighted in accordance with the particular specifications of the order to be filled. In the course of this processing the words "Made in Japan" which appeared upon the handle of the racket when imported are completely removed, obliterated, and covered up. These rackets are usually sold unstrung, except in some instances where the dealer or purchaser does not have facilities for stringing such rackets. On the tennis rackets so described appears the name "Hollywood Racket Mfg. Co." The respondent also publishes circulars and other advertising material bearing the notations "Hollywood Rackets" and "Hollywood Racket Mfg. Co." The respondent does not disclose that such tennis rackets are made in Japan, either upon said tennis rackets or in any of its advertising literature.

At or about the time of the filing of the complaint herein or shortly prior thereto, the respondent began the purchase and importation of unfinished tennis rackets, the handles of which require further processing by shaping, gluing on of additional overlays, and weighting. With the addition of this further processing the same procedure is followed as hereinabove described in the finishing and marking of such rackets. These rackets are likewise sold by the respondent without any disclosure in advertising or otherwise that said rackets were originally manufactured in Japan and imported into this country.

PAR. 4. For many years last past, there has obtained among manufacturers in the United States an established custom and practice for marking products of foreign origin in such a manner as to indicate that such products are, in fact, of foreign, rather than domestic, origin. The purchasing public is familiar with, and relies upon, such custom and practice, and when products bear no marking indicating that they are of foreign origin the purchasing public assumes that such products are of domestic origin.

There is among the members of the purchasing public a decided preference for products which are manufactured in the United States over products manufactured in Japan or any other foreign countries.

PAR. 5. The practices of the respondent in obliterating or obscuring from its racket frames the legend "Made in Japan" and in imprinting on its rackets the legend "Hollywood Racket Mfg. Co." and in using in its advertising material the legends "Hollywood Rackets" and "Hollywood Racket Mfg. Co." without disclosing that the frames for such rackets are made in Japan, have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent's rackets are wholly of domestic origin and manufacture. As the result of such erroneous and mistaken belief, engendered as herein set forth, a substantial portion of the purchasing public are induced to, and do, purchase respondent's products.

By the use of the practices herein set forth the respondent has also placed in the hands of unscrupulous and uninformed dealers a means and instrumentality whereby such dealers have been, and are, enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, answer of the respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, and the report of the trial examiners thereon, briefs filed herein and oral argument before the Commission, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Hollywood Racket Manufacturing Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, directors, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of tennis, badminton, and squash rackets in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the name "Hollywood Racket Mfg. Co." or any other name of similar import or meaning on labels or in advertising of tennis, badminton, or squash rackets or other similar products, without clearly disclosing the foreign origin of such products.

2. Representing, in any manner whatsoever, that respondent's products are made in the United States when, in fact, such products are manufactured in whole or in part in Japan or any other foreign country.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

BERTRAM A. STRAUSS, TRADING AS COLUMBIA PENCIL COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4083. Complaint, Apr. 4, 1940—Decision, July 11, 1941

Where an individual engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of pencils; by circulars, letterheads, and other advertising material—

(a) Represented, prior to stipulation entered into with Commission to cease and desist such representations, that he made and manufactured his said products and owned and operated or directly and absolutely controlled the plant or factory in which same were manufactured, through such statements as "* * * direct from the factory at a saving of 33⅓%," etc., when in fact he did not manufacture the pencils he sold; and

(b) Represented his concern as "Manufacturers of Pencils for all Purposes," through statements to that effect, facts being that, while he was a manufacturer of the mechanical pencils which he offered and sold, he was not a manufacturer of the other types thus dealt in, purchasing his supplies of crayon pencils from others, and buying lead pencils from manufacturer thereof in completed form except for painting and adding of ferrule and eraser which he proceeded to do:

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial number of dealers and members of the purchasing public, who have a marked preference for dealing directly with manufacturers, by reason of their belief that thereby lower prices and other advantages may be obtained, into the erroneous belief that said representations were true, and into purchase of a substantial quantity of said products, whereby trade was unfairly diverted to said individual from his competitors, among whom there are many who manufacture their products and others who do not manufacture same or represent themselves as manufacturers; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, as above set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. John W. Addison and Mr. Lewis C. Russell, trial examiners.

Mr. Jesse D. Kash for the Commission.

Mr. Joseph Strauss, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Bertram A. Strauss, individually and trading as Columbia Pencil Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Bertram A. Strauss is an individual trading and doing business as Columbia Pencil Co., with his office and principal place of business at 29 West Seventeenth Street, New York, State of New York.

Respondent is now and for more than 2 years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of pencils, including ordinary lead pencils and mechanical or automatic pencils. Respondent causes his products when sold by him, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his said business, the respondent has been and is in substantial competition with other individuals and with firms and corporations also engaged in the sale and distribution of pencils in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among such competitors are many who manufacture their products and others who do not manufacture their products but who do not represent themselves to be manufacturers.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his said products, respondent has made false and misleading representations that he is a manufacturer and that his said products are manufactured by him, such representations being made by means of circulars, letterheads, billheads, and other advertising material distributed among prospective purchasers. Among and typical of such false and misleading representations are the following:

FAMOUS
COLUMBIA PENCILS

Direct from the factory at a saving of 33⅓%.

Here is our story. We are selling thousands of business concerns throughout the country, and we want you to become one of our customers.

It is our notion that a straight line is the shortest, quickest, and most economical route from the factory to the ultimate consumer. Every time a product makes a detour at a distributor, a special factory representative or dealer, the COST GOES UP—and YOU pay it. Therefore, we have taken the middlemen by the seats of their trousers and tossed them out. We hope you don't mind.

Columbia Pencil Company, Manufacturers of Pencils for All Purposes.

In truth and in fact, respondent is not a manufacturer and does not manufacture any of his said pencils. With the exception of his mechanical or automatic pencils, respondent purchases all of his pencils outright from manufacturers or from wholesalers and jobbers. As to such mechanical or automatic pencils, respondent purchases the parts from other parties and merely assembled such parts at his place of business.

PAR. 4. There is a marked preference on the part of dealers and the purchasing public for dealing with the manufacturer of products direct, such preference being due to a belief on the part of such dealers and the purchasing public that thereby lower prices and other advantages may be obtained.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading representations has the tendency and capacity to and does mislead and deceive a substantial number of dealers and members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true and into the purchase of a substantial quantity of respondent's products. As a result, trade is diverted unfairly to respondent from his competitors, and in consequence substantial injury has been done, and is being done by respondent, to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on April 4, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Bertram A. Strauss, an individual, trading as Columbia Pencil Co., charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by the attorney for the Commission and in opposition thereto by the attorney for the respondent before examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner, and brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Bertram A. Strauss is an individual doing business under the name and style of Columbia Pencil Co., with his principal place of business at 29 West Seventeenth Street, New York, N. Y. Respondent for a number of years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of pencils.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business respondent has transported or caused to be transported from his place of business in the State of New York pencils of various types sold by him to purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and has maintained a constant course of trade in such pencils in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. For the purpose of inducing the purchase of his said products respondent has, by means of circulars, letterheads, and other advertising material distributed among prospective purchasers, made various representations in connection with the sale of such pencils. Respondent commenced his present business in 1931 and in 1936 and prior thereto made representations such as:

FAMOUS
direct from the factory at a saving of 33⅓%

Here is our story: We are selling thousands of business concerns throughout the country, and we want you to become one of our customers.

It is our notion that a straight line is the shortest, quickest, and most economical route from the factory to the ultimate consumer. Every time a product makes a detour at a distributor, a special factory representative or dealer, the COST GOES UP—and YOU pay it. Therefore, we have taken the middlemen by the seats of their trousers and tossed them out. We hope you don't mind!

At the time such representations were being made respondent did not manufacture the pencils offered for sale and sold by him. By stipulation to cease and desist entered into with the Federal Trade Commission and approved on August 3, 1936, respondent agreed to cease and desist from the use of representations such as those set out above or of any other statements of similar meaning "so as to import or imply that the said Bertram A. Strauss makes or manufactures said products or that he actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory wherein said products are made or manufactured."

In 1939 respondent, by the aforesaid means, made and circulated representations such as:

COLUMBIA PENCIL CO.
Manufacturers of Pencils for all Purposes

PAR. 4. At the time respondent represented himself to be a manufacturer of pencils for all purposes he was engaged in offering for sale and selling crayon pencils, lead pencils, and mechanical pencils. Respondent did not, and does not now, manufacture the crayon pencils sold by him but purchases his supplies of such products from others. The lead pencils offered for sale and sold by respondent are purchased by him from a manufacturer thereof in completed form except that they are unpainted and have no ferrule and eraser. Respondent proceeds to paint or lacquer the pencils so purchased and add ferrules and rubber erasers thereto.

With respect to mechanical pencils sold and offered for sale by respondent, respondent purchases plastic tubing in pieces several feet in length which his employees cut into appropriate lengths and subject to various drawing and forming processes by which pencil barrels and caps for mechanical pencils are produced. The ferrules and clips for such pencils are made by respondent's employees from brass strips and then attached to and made a part of the barrel and cap produced as stated above. To complete the pencil a mechanical action for holding the necessary lead is purchased from others and inserted in the barrel. A connecting link is provided between the cap and barrel and an eraser and leads are supplied. This is substantially the process followed by other manufacturers of mechanical pencils.

In the circumstances stated the Commission finds that the respondent is a manufacturer of mechanical pencils offered for sale and sold by him but is not a manufacturer of the other types of pencils which he offers for sale and sells.

PAR. 5. Respondent has been, and is, in substantial competition with other individuals and with firms and corporations also engaged in the sale and distribution of pencils in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among such competitors are many who manufacture their products and others who do not manufacture their products but who do not represent themselves to be manufacturers.

PAR. 6. There is a marked preference on the part of dealers and the purchasing public for dealing directly with the manufacturer of products purchased, such preference being due to a belief on the part of such dealers and the purchasing public that thereby lower prices and other advantages may be obtained.

PAR. 7. The use by respondent of the false and misleading representations as aforesaid has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial number of dealers and members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true and into the purchase of a substantial quantity of respondent's products. As a result trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from his competitors and in consequence substantial injury has been done, and is being done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto taken before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, report of the trial examiner, and brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent Bertram A. Strauss, individually, and trading as Columbia Pencil Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of pencils of any type in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing directly or indirectly, by the use of the words or terms "manufacturer," "direct from the factory," or any other words or terms of similar import or meaning, that respondent is the manufacturer of any such product which is not in fact manufactured in a plant owned and operated or directly and absolutely controlled by him.

It is further ordered, That respondent shall, within 60 days after the service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

REX DRUG COMPANY, AND LOUIS PODROFSKI, INDIVIDUALLY AND TRADING AS REX DRUG COMPANY, AND AS AN OFFICER THEREOF

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4312. Complaint, Oct. 10, 1940—Decision, July 11, 1941

Where a corporation and an individual, who was president and treasurer thereof and directed and controlled its policies and practices, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of various medicinal preparations, including one designated "Rex Perio Pills," for treatment of delayed menstruation; by means of advertisements disseminated through the mails, in periodicals, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature; in cooperation with one another—

(a) Represented, directly or by implication, that their said preparation constituted a competent and effective treatment for delayed, scanty, and painful menstruation, and that it was safe and harmless;

The facts being it was not a competent or effective treatment for said condition, and was not safe or harmless, in that it contained certain drugs, use whereof under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, might result in gastro-intestinal disturbances and excessive congestion and hemorrhage of the pelvic organs, and, where used to interfere with pregnancy, might result in uterine infection and blood poisoning or other serious and irreparable injury to health; and

(b) Failed to reveal facts material in the light of such representations, and that the use of said preparation under prescribed or usual conditions might result in said serious and irreparable injury;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the belief that their said preparation possessed properties which it did not in fact possess, and that it was safe and harmless, when such was not the fact, and with result, that, because of such belief, said public purchased substantial quantities of their preparation:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, trial examiner.

Mr. William L. Taggart for the Commission.

Jacobson, Merrick, Nierman & Silbert, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Rex Drug Co., a corporation and Louis Podrofski, individually and trading as Rex Drug Co., and as an officer of Rex Drug Co., a corporation, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Rex Drug Co. is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 201 East Thirty-fifth Street, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent Louis Podrofski is an individual trading as Rex Drug Co. with his principal office and place of business located at 201 East Thirty-fifth Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Podrofski is also president and treasurer of the corporate respondent Rex Drug Co. and directs and controls the policies and practices of the corporate respondent.

The respondents have acted in conjunction and cooperate with each other in carrying out the acts and practices hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now and for more than 2 years last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of various medicinal preparations, including a preparation designated Rex Perio Pills, intended for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation. Respondents cause and have caused their said preparation, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a course of trade in their said preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in periodicals and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature are the following:

Ladies * * * For abnormally Delayed Periods. REX PERIO PILLS used for many years by many women all over the country for the relief of ABNORMALLY DELAYED, SCANTY, and PAINFUL MENSTRUATION PERIODS, when due to unnatural causes.

Rex Perio Pills have given timely relief to many considerably past due, abnormally delayed periods and are praised highly by many women all over the country because they were not disappointed in their time of need, and for this reason tell one another how good they are for relief of abnormal, unnatural delay.

This non-foeticidal compound is composed of time tested ingredients, such as have been in use by many physicians in their practice for many years. It contains no opiates, no dope, no narcotic, no habit forming drugs, so why take a chance and maybe experience the fretfulness and jitters that are often caused by unnatural delay? Order a box of Rex Perio Pills at once and see for yourself the satisfactory relief they may bring you, which is just what women want, not flashy and exaggerated claims.

We cannot begin to tell you about the many satisfied customers we have all over the country and about the wonderful relief and satisfaction they report from these pills, in their time of need. Nothing we can say about the satisfactory relief these pills afford will be nearly as convincing as your using them yourself would be, and so sure are we that they will prove their satisfaction to you, that we make this liberal offer of your money back in full on the first box, if they fail to prove satisfactory.

You must agree with us that nothing could be more fair to you, and in no other way except by trying them could you experience the satisfaction their fine ingredients, carefully compounded, will afford you, at this fretful trying time, when you really need something excellent. Then too, absolute privacy is assured when ordering from us. No prying eyes or gossipy tongues to know your business.

Some women keep these pills always on hand and take a few just before the due time, so as to help obtain the relief of a full, unsuppressed period, free from abnormal delay, which is so desirable. * * *

PAR. 4. Through the use of the foregoing statements and representations, and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondents have represented, directly or through inference, that their said preparation constitutes a competent and effective treatment for delayed, scanty, and painful menstruation, and that said preparation is safe and harmless.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact respondents' preparation does not constitute a competent or effective treatment for delayed, scanty, or painful menstruation. Said preparation is not safe or harmless, as it contains the drugs ergotin, extract of black hellebore, aloes, and oil of savin, in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health, if said preparation is used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Such use of said preparation may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances, such as catharsis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, congestion of the uterus, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage, and in those cases where said preparation is used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy, such use may result in uterine infection, with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures and even to the blood stream, causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

Such use of said preparation may also produce a severe circulatory condition by the constriction of the blood vessels and contraction of the involuntary muscles, often with poisonous effects upon the human system, and tending to cause abortion in some instances, and may result in severe toxic conditions such as hemorrhagic diarrhea and in some instances producing a gangrenous condition of the lower limbs, resulting possibly in loss of limbs or in other serious and irreparable injury to health.

PAR. 6. The advertisements disseminated by respondents as aforesaid constitute false advertisements for the further reason that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained therein, and fail.to reveal that the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations with respect to their said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents' preparation possesses properties which it does not in fact possess, and that said preparation is safe and harmless, when such is not the fact. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief the purchasing public has been induced to purchase, and has purchased, substantial quantities of respondents' preparation.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 10th day of October

1940, issued, and on the 12th day of October 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Rex Drug Co., a corporation, and Louis Podrofski, individually and trading as Rex Drug Co., and as an officer of Rex Drug Co., a corporation, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Rex Drug Co. is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 201 East Thirty-fifth Street, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent Louis Podrofski is an individual trading as Rex Drug Co. with his principal office and place of business located at 201 East Thirty-fifth Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Podrofski is also president and treasurer of the corporate respondent Rex Drug Co. and directs and controls the policies and practices of the corporate respondent.

The respondents have acted in conjunction and cooperate with each other in carrying out the acts and practices hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now and for more than 2 years last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of various medicinal preparations, including a preparation designated Rex Perio Pills, intended for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation. Respondents cause and have caused their said preparation, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a course of trade in their said preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said product by means of the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said product in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by means of the United States mails, by advertisements in periodicals and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature are the following:

PAR. 4. Through the use of the foregoing statements and representations, and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondents have represented, directly or by implication, that their said preparation constitutes a competent and effective treatment for delayed, scanty, and painful menstruation, and that said preparation is safe and harmless.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact respondents' preparation does not constitute a competent or effective treatment for delayed, scanty, or painful menstruation. Said preparation is not safe or harmless, as it contains the drugs ergotin, extract of black hellebore, aloes, and oil of savin, in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health, if said preparation is used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

PAR. 6. The advertisements disseminated by respondents as aforesaid constitute false advertisements for the further reason that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained therein, and fail to reveal that the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations with respect to their said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents' preparation possesses properties which it does not in fact possess, and that said preparation is safe and harmless, when such is not the fact. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief the purchasing public has been induced to purchase, and has purchased, substantial quantities of respondents' preparation.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondents, in which answer the respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Rex Drug Co., a corporation, and its officers, and Louis Podrofski, as an officer of said corporation, and as an individual trading as Rex Drug Co., or trading under any other name or names, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of their medicinal preparation known as Rex Perio Pills, or any other medicinal preparation or product of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or by implication, that said preparation constitutes a competent or effective treatment for delayed, scanty, or painful menstruation, or that said preparation is safe or harmless; or which advertisement fails to reveal that the use of said preparation may cause gastro-intestinal disturbances and excessive congestion and hemorrhage of the pelvic organs, and in cases of pregnancy, may cause uterine infection and blood poisoning.

2. Disseminating or causing to be be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof, or which advertisement fails to reveal that the use of said preparation may cause gastro-intestinal disturbances and excessive congestion and hemorrhage of the pelvic organs, and in cases of pregnancy, may cause uterine infection and blood poisoning.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall within 10 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing, stating whether they intend to comply with this order, and, if so, the manner and form in which they intend to comply; and that within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, said respondents shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

MOTOR TIRE RETREAD COMPANY, INC., BENJAMIN DUCHEN, LILLIAN HOLLOWICH AND JOHN M. WEINER, AS OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS OF MOTOR TIRE RETREAD COMPANY, INC., ALSO TRADING AS NATION WIDE TIRE COMPANY, CENTRAL TIRE & RETREADING EXCHANGE, ETC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4325. Complaint, Sept. 30, 1940—Decision, July 12, 1941

Where a corporation and an individual, who was president and director thereof, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of used tires which had been retreaded or recapped for use on automobiles, trucks, and buses; to obtain salesmen for their products—

(a) Represented, through newspaper advertisements and through their "crew managers," that salesmen employed by them received a commission of 10 percent on all orders obtained by them, which amount salesmen collected from purchaser as a deposit at the time order was taken, that their salesmen were further credited with a bonus of 5 percent on each order accepted and paid for in full by purchaser, and that they would also pay all expenses incurred by the salesman for oil and gasoline used in operation of his automobile, provided his sales totaled a specified minimum varying from $200 to $250 per week; and

(b) Represented, through their said "crew managers," that the $5 so-called "bond deposits" required of the salesmen for the sample kits which the "crew managers" supplied to them, and which contained cross-section tire specimens represented by said corporation as being samples of and representative of the tires sold by them, would be refunded to the salesmen after they had been in their employ for three weeks;

The facts being that their salesmen did not receive, in all cases, the deposit of 10 percent collected by them on each order, but in the event the remainder of the purchase price of tires ordered was not paid by purchasers, said deposit was deducted from future earnings of the salesman, and in many cases they did not pay their salesmen a bonus on sales paid for by customers; they did not pay salesmen expense incurred for oil and gasoline used in operation of their automobiles, even though said salesmen's aggregate weekly sales might total specified minimum above referred to; did not, in many cases, refund to salesmen so-called "bond deposit" after the salesmen had been in their employ for 3 weeks, or at any other time; and the cross-section tire specimens in aforesaid sample kits were not, in fact, representative of the tires actually sold and delivered to purchasers, which were far inferior to such purported samples; and

Where said corporation and individual, to induce purchase of their said products, by means of letters, order blanks, and other written or printed material and through oral representations made by their crew managers and salesmen—

(c) Represented that the tires purchased from them would be identical with the samples displayed to prospective purchaser by their agents, that the carcasses used in their retreaded or recapped tires were less than 1 year old, that their tires would be free from boots and patches, and that tires ordered by purchaser would be shipped to him from points in the vicinity in which he was located, thereby effecting a substantial saving in freight, and that they were the manufacturers of the tires sold by them;

The facts being they made a practice of shipping to purchasers inferior and, in many cases, worthless tires or tires of different size, kind or make from those ordered; they had no way of knowing the age of said "carcasses," and in many instances the tires were older than represented; their tires frequently contained boots and patches; shipments were not made from points in purchaser's vicinity except near Chicago, and the freight rate was often much higher than represented; and they were not the manufacturers of the tires sold by them; and (d) Represented that they would ship tires to purchasers on consignment, and that their said tires were sold under a warranty that they would replace their passenger tires within 6 months or their truck tires within 3 months, at one-half the prevailing prices, should such tires prove defective; that their tires were suitable for the purpose for which purchased; and that they would give many miles of service in the normal course of usage at a fraction of the cost of a like amount of service from new tires;

The facts being they did not ship tires on consignment, but made shipments thereof only on C. O. D. basis or bill of lading with sight draft attached, the tires being fully wrapped when delivered and purchasers therefore being unable to make inspection thereof before payment of the balance due thereon and acceptance of merchandise; they failed and refused, in many cases, to make good their said warranty that they would replace tires that proved defective at half price; in many instances their tires were not suitable for the purpose for which they were purchased, and purchaser did not obtain any service whatsoever therefrom; cost of service, where any was obtained from their tires, was generally in excess of the cost of obtaining a like amount of service from new tires; and, as aforesaid, the purported tire samples furnished their said agents, and used by them in soliciting sales were far superior to the tires actually sold; and

Where said corporation and individual, to obtain orders from persons who had had previous unsatisfactory experience with them—

(e) Made use of various trade names and purported addresses, which they placed on samples, order blanks, and advertising material supplied to their agents, and represented, through said agents, that the purported business carried on under such names had no connection with them or with the business carried on by them under other trade names;

When, in truth and in fact, all orders obtained by them under any of said trade names, or under their corporate name, were received at and filled from their said place of business in Chicago;

With the effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial number of prospective salesmen into accepting employment by them, and a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the purchase of substantial quantities of their said products:

Held, That such acts and practices, as above set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. J. R. Phillips, Jr. for the Commission.
Mr. David Auerbach, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Motor Tire Retread Co., Inc., a corporation, and Benjamin Duchen, Lillian Hollowich, and John M. Weiner, individually and as officers and directors of Motor Tire Retread Co., Inc., said corporate and individual respondents also trading as Nation Wide Tire Co., Central Tire and Retreading Exchange, Standard Brand Retread Tire Co., Zephyr Tire Co., and Retread Tire Distributors, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Motor Tire Retread Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, having its office and principal place of business at 2441 South Indiana Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondents Benjamin Duchen, Lillian Hollowich, and John M. Weiner are president, secretary, and treasurer, respectively, and members of the Board of Directors of the respondent Motor Tire Retread Co., Inc., and formulate and control its business policies and practices. All of said individual respondents have offices and places of business at 2441 South Indiana Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondents Motor Tire Retread Co., Inc., Benjamin Duchen, Lillian Hollowich, and John M. Weiner, are also trading and doing business under various trade names, including Nation Wide Tire Co., Central Tire and Retreading Exchange, Standard Brand Retread Tire Co., Zephyr Tire Co,. and Retread Tire Distributors as well as under the name of the corporate respondent. The business conducted under said various trade names is conducted from 2441 South Indiana Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

The respondents Motor Tire Retread Co., Inc., a corporation, Benjamin Duchen, Lillian Hollowich, and John M. Weiner, have acted in concert and in cooperation each with the other in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for more than 2 years last past have been, engaged in selling and distributing used tires which have been retreaded or recapped. Said retreaded or recapped tires are for use on automobiles, trucks, and buses. Respondents cause said retreaded or recapped tires, when sold by them, to be transported from their said place of business in Chicago, Ill., to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said retreaded and recapped tires in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, and for the purpose of obtaining salesmen for their products and thus to further the sale of such products, the respondents have made many false and misleading representations to prospective agents and salesmen, such representations being made through advertisements in newspapers and through certain representatives of respondents designated as "crew managers."

Among and typical of such false and misleading representations are the following: that salesmen employed by the respondents receive as compensation a commission of 10 percent on all orders obtained by them, which amount the salesman collects from the purchaser as a deposit at the time the order is taken; that respondents' salesmen are also credited with a bonus of 5 percent on each order accepted and paid for in full by the purchaser; that respondents will also pay all expenses incurred by the salesman for oil and gasoline used in the operation of the salesman's automobile, provided the sales of the salesman total a specified minimum varying from $200 to $250 per week.

Respondents, through their said crew managers, supply each of their salesmen with a sample kit for which the salesman is required to pay over to the respondents a so-called bond deposit of $5. Respondents represent to the salesmen that such deposit will be refunded to them after they have been in the employ of the respondents for a period of 3 weeks. Such sample kits contain cross-section tire specimens which are represented by the respondents to be samples of, and representative of, the tires sold by respondents.

PAR. 4. The foregoing representations are false and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondents' salesmen do not receive in all cases the deposit of 10 percent collected by them on each order, but such commission is contingent upon the payment by the purchasers of the remainder of the purchase price of the tires ordered. In the event such balance is not paid by the purchaser, said deposit of 10 percent is deducted by respondents from the future earnings of the salesman. In many cases respondents do not pay their salesmen a bonus of 5 percent or any other bonus on the sales made by them which are accepted and paid for by customers. Respondents do not pay the expense incurred by their salesmen for oil and gasoline used in the operation of the salesmen's automobiles, even though the aggregate weekly sales of such salesmen may total the specified minimum above referred to.

In many cases respondents do not refund to their salesmen the so-called bond deposit of $5 after the salesmen have been in respondents' employ for a period of three weeks, nor do respondents make such refund at any other time. The cross-section tire specimens in said sample kits are not, in fact, samples of nor representative of the tires sold by respondents. The tires actually sold and delivered to purchasers are far inferior to such purported samples.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said products, respondents have also made many false and misleading representations to prospective purchasers concerning their said tires, such representations being made by means of letters, order blanks, and other written or printed material, and by means of oral representations made by respondents' crew managers and salesmen. Among and typical of such false and misleading representations are the following:

1. That the tires purchased from the respondents will be identical in kind, size, make, and quality with the samples displayed to the prospective purchaser by respondents' agents.

2. That the carcasses used by the respondents in their retreaded or recapped tires are less than 1 year old.

3. That respondents' tires will be free from boots and patches.

4. That the tires ordered by the purchaser will be shipped to the purchaser from points in the vicinity in which the purchaser is located, and that thereby a substantial saving in freight will be effected.

5. That respondents are the manufacturers of the retreaded or recapped tires sold by them.

6. That respondents will ship tires to purchasers on consignment.

7. That the respondents' retreaded or recapped tires are sold under a warranty that respondents will replace their passenger tires within 6 months or their truck tires within 3 months, should such tires prove defective, at one-half of the prevailing prices of such tires.

8. That respondents' tires are suitable for the purpose for which they are purchased, and that they will give many miles of service in the normal course of usage at a fraction of the cost of a like amount of service from new tires.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representations made by the respondents, as aforesaid, are false and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondents do not ship to purchasers tires of the same quality or size or kind or make as the samples displayed by their agents and ordered by the purchaser, but make a practice of shipping inferior and, in many cases, worthless tires or tires of different size, kind, or make than those ordered. Respondents have no way of knowing the age of the carcasses used in the retreaded or recapped tires sold by them, and in many instances the tires are older than represented.

Respondents' tires are not free from boots and patches, but in many instances contain boots and patches. Shipments are not made from points in the vicinity in which the purchaser is located, except in the vicinity of Chicago, Ill., and the freight rate is often much higher than it is represented to be by respondents' agents. Respondents are not the manufacturers of the tires they sell.

Respondents do not ship tires on consignment. They make shipments of their tires only on the basis of C. O. D. or bill of lading with sight draft attached, and when said tires are delivered they are fully wrapped and the purchasers are unable to make an inspection of such tires before payment of the balance due thereon and acceptance of the merchandise. In many cases respondents fail and refuse to make good their said warranty that they will replace, at half price, tires that prove defective.

In many instances respondents' tires are not suitable in any manner for the purpose for which they are purchased, and the purchaser thereof does not obtain any service whatsoever from said tires. In those cases where any service is obtained from respondents' tires the cost of such service is generally in excess of the cost of obtaining a like amount of service from the use of new tires.

PAR. 7. All samples, order blanks, and other advertising and sales material and supplies used by respondents' agents in soliciting sales are supplied to such agents by the respondents. Included in such material and supplies are the purported tire samples, hereinbefore referred to, which are represented to prospective purchasers by respondents' agents as being representative of the tires sold by the respondents. In truth and in fact, such purported samples are in no way representative of the tires actually sold by the respondents, but are far superior thereto.

PAR. 8. A further misleading and deceptive practice on the part of respondents is the use of various trade names and purported addresses, in order that respondents may be able to obtain, under certain of such names, orders from persons who have had previous unsatisfactory experience with respondents under other of such names. Respondents supply to their agents samples, order blanks, and advertising material carrying certain of such trade names and addresses, and respondents represent, through their said agents, that the purported business carried on under such names has no connection with respondents or with the business carried on by respondents under other of respondents' trade names. In truth and in fact, all orders obtained by the respondents under any of said trade names, or under the name of the corporate respondent, are received at and filed from respondents' said place of business at 2441 South Indiana Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents have had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive a susbtantial number of prospective salesmen into accepting employment by the respondents, and a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' products.

PAR. 10. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on September 30, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents named in the caption hereof, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint respondents filed answer thereto. Subsequently respondent Benjamin Duchen, in his individual capacity and as an officer and director of respondent Motor Tire Retread Co. Inc., and said corporate respondent Motor Tire Retread Co., Inc., were granted permission to withdraw their answers and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. In connection with said substitute answer respondent Benjamin Duchen filed an affidavit with respect to respondents John M. Weiner and Lillian Hollowich as individuals and as officers and directors of the said corporate respondent. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the said complaint, substitute answer and affidavit; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Motor Tire Retread Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, having its office and principal place of business at 2441 South Indiana Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondents Benjamin Duchen, Lillian Hollowich, and John M. Weiner are president, secretary, and treasurer, respectively, and members of the board of directors of the respondent Motor Tire Retread Co., Inc. However, the individual respondents Lillian Hollowich and John M. Weiner, although officers and members of the board of directors of said corporate respondent, have taken no part in the operation of said business, the formulation of the policies of the corporate respondent, nor have they engaged in any of the acts and practices of said corporate respondent as hereinafter found and set forth. At the time of the incorporation of said company they permitted their names to be used to comply with the legal requirements with respect thereto, but have never participated to any greater extent in the affairs of the corporation. The respondents Motor Tire Retread Co., Inc., and Benjamin Duchen are also trading and doing business under various trade names, including Nation Wide Tire Co., Central Tire and Retreading Exchange, Standard Brand Retread Tire Co., and Zephyr Tire Co., as well as under the name of the corporate respondent. The business under said various trade names is conducted from 2441 South Indiana Avenue, Chicago, Ill. The respondent Benjamin Duchen also maintains an office and place of business at the same address. Hereafter when the word "respondents" is used in these findings the same shall refer to Motor Tire Retread Co., Inc., a corporation, Benjamin Duchen and Motor Tire Retread Co., Inc., trading as Nation Wide Tire Co., Central Tire and Retreading Exchange, Standard Brand Retread Tire Co. and Zephyr Tire Co.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for more than 2 years last past have been, engaged in selling and distributing used tires which have been retreaded or recapped. Said retreaded or recapped tires are for use on automobiles, trucks, and busses. Respondents cause said retreaded or recapped tires, when sold by them, to be transported from their said place of business in Chicago, Ill., to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said retreaded and recapped tires in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, and for the purpose of obtaining salesmen for their products and thus to further the sale of such products, the respondents have made many false and misleading representations to prospective agents and salesmen, such representations being made through advertisements in newspapers and through certain representatives of respondents designated as "crew managers."

Among and typical of such false and misleading representations are the following: that salesmen employed by the respondents receive as compensation a commission of 10 percent on all orders obtained by them, which amount the salesman collects from the purchaser as a deposit at the time the order is taken; that respondents' salesmen are also credited with a bonus of 5 percent on each order accepted and paid for in full by the purchaser; that respondents will also pay all expenses incurred by the salesman for oil and gasoline used in the operation of the salesman's automobile, provided the sales of the salesman total a specified minimum varying from $200 to $250 per week.

Respondents, through their said crew managers, supply each of their salesmen with a sample kit for which the salesman is required to pay over to the respondents a so-called bond deposit of $5. Respondents represent to the salesmen that such deposit will be refunded to them after they have been in the employ of the respondents for a period of 3 weeks. Such sample kits contain cross-section tire specimens which are represented by the respondents to be samples of, and representative of, the tires sold by respondents.

PAR. 4. The foregoing representations are false and misleading In truth and in fact, respondents' salesmen do not receive in all cases the deposit of 10 percent collected by them on each order, but such commission is contingent upon the payment by the purchasers of the remainder of the purchase price of the tires ordered. In the event such balance is not paid by the purchaser, said deposit of 10 percent is deducted by respondents from the future earnings of the salesman. In many cases respondents do not pay their salesmen a bonus of 5 percent or any other bonus on the sales made by them which are accepted and paid for by customers. Respondents do not pay the expense incurred by their salesmen for oil and gasoline used in the operation of the salesmen's automobiles, even though the aggregate weekly sales of such salesmen may total the specified minimum above referred to.

In many cases respondents do not refund to their salesmen the so-called bond deposit of $5 after the salesmen have been in respondents' employ for a period of three weeks, nor do respondents make such refund at any other time. The cross-section tire specimens in said sample kits are not, in fact, samples of nor representative of the tires sold by respondents. The tires actually sold and delivered to purchasers are far inferior to such purported samples.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said products, respondents have also made many false and misleading representations to prospective purchasers concerning their said tires, such representations being made by means of letters, order blanks, and other written or printed material, and by means of oral representations made by respondents' crew managers and salesmen. Among and typical of such false and misleading representations are the following:

1. That the tires purchased from the respondents will be identical in kind, size, make, and quality with the samples displayed to the prospective purchaser by respondents' agents.

2. That the carcasses used by the respondents in their retreaded or recapped tires are less than 1 year old.

3. That respondents' tires will be free from boots and patches.

4. That the tires ordered by the purchaser will be shipped to the purchaser from points in the vicinity in which the purchaser is located, and that thereby a substantial saving in freight will be effected.

5. That respondents are the manufacturers of the retreaded or recapped tires sold by them.

6. That respondents will ship tires to purchasers on consignment.

7. That the respondents' retreaded or recapped tires are sold under a warranty that respondents will replace their passenger tires within 6 months or their truck tires within 3 months, should such tires prove defective, at one-half of the prevailing prices of such tires.

8. That respondents' tires are suitable for the purpose for which they are purchased, and that they will give many miles of service in the normal course of usage at a fraction of the cost of a like amount of service from new tires.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representations made by the respondents, as aforesaid, are false and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondents do not ship to purchasers tires of the same quality or size or kind or make as the samples displayed by their agents and ordered by the purchaser, but make a practice of shipping inferior and, in many cases, worthless tires or tires of different size, kind, or make than those ordered. Respondents have no way of knowing the age of the carcasses used in the retreaded or recapped tires sold by them, and in many instances the tires are older than represented.

Respondents' tires are not free from boots and patches, but in many instances contain boots and patches. Shipments are not made from points in the vicinity in which the purchaser is located, except in the vicinity of Chicago, Ill., and the freight rate is often much higher than it is represented to be by respondents' agents. Respondents are not the manufacturers of the tires they sell.

Respondents do not ship tires on consignment. They make shipments of their tires only on the basis of C. O. D. or bill of lading with sight draft attached, and when said tires are delivered they are fully wrapped and the purchasers are unable to make an inspection of such tires before payment of the balance due thereon and acceptance of the merchandise. In many cases respondents fail and refuse to make good their said warranty that they will replace, at half price, tires that prove defective.

In many instances respondents' tires are not suitable in any manner for the purpose for which they are purchased, and the purchaser thereof does not obtain any service whatsoever from said tires. In those cases where any service is obtained from respondents' tires the cost of such service is generally in excess of the cost of obtaining a like amount of service from the use of new tires.

PAR. 7. All samples, order blanks, and other advertising and sales material and supplies used by respondents' agents in soliciting sales are supplied to such agents by the respondents. Included in such material and supplies are the purported tire samples, hereinbefore referred to, which are represented to prospective purchasers by respondents' agents as being representative of the tires sold by the respondents. In truth and in fact, such purported samples are in no way representative of the tires actually sold by the respondents, but are far superior thereto.

PAR. 8. A further misleading and deceptive practice on the part of respondents is the use of various trade names and purported addresses, in order that respondents may be able to obtain, under certain of such names, orders from persons who have had previous unsatisfactory experience with respondents under other of such names. Respondents supply to their agents samples, order blanks, and advertising material carrying certain of such trade names and addresses, and respondents represent, through their said agents, that the purported business carried on under such names has no connection with respondents or with the business carried on by respondents under other of respondents' trade names. In truth and in fact, all orders obtained by the respondents under any of said trade names, or under the name of the corporate respondent, are received at and are filled from respondents' said place of business at 2441 South Indiana Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents have had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial number of prospective salesmen into accepting employment by the respondents, and a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents Motor Tire Retread Co., Inc., a corporation, and Benjamin Duchen, individually and as an officer and director of the said corporate respondent, in which answer said respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents Motor Tire Retread Co., Inc., a corporation, trading as Nation Wide Tire Co., Central Tire and Retreading Exchange, Standard Brand Retread Tire Co., Zephyr Tire Co., or trading under any other name or names, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and Benjamin Duchen, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of retreaded or recapped automobile, truck, and bus tires in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that any specified commissions or bonuses are paid salesmen for the sale of respondents' products in excess of those actually paid.

2. Representing that repayment will be made to salesmen for expenses arising in soliciting business or that refund of deposit for sample kit will be made unless said repayments and refunds are actually made.

3. Exhibiting to customers or prospective customers as representative of tires sold or offered for sale samples of recapped or retreaded tires which are substantially superior in quality to tires actually delivered.

4. Shipping tires that are not the same quality, size, make, or kind as those ordered.

5. Representing that the carcasses of retreaded or recapped tires are less than any stated age or that tires repaired with boots or patches are not so repaired.

6. Representing that respondents manufacture the retreaded or recapped tires sold or offered for sale by them.

7. Representing that tires will be shipped to purchasers on consignment when such is not the fact.

8. Representing that tires are sold under a warranty against defects unless all the terms and conditions of such warranty are strictly complied with.

9. Representing that tires ordered by purchasers will be shipped from any point other than the actual point of shipment.

10. Representing that tires which are not suitable for the purpose for which they are advertised are suitable for such purpose, or that respondent's tires give service at a lower cost per mile than new tires, when such is not the fact.

11. Representing that the business carried on under trade names has no connection with and is not a part of the business of respondents or with the business of respondents carried on under other trade names.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That this proceeding be, and the same hereby is, closed as to the respondents Lillian Hollowich and John M. Weiner, without prejudice to the right of the Commission, should future facts so warrant, to reopen the same and to proceed thereon in accordance with its regular procedure.

IN THE MATTER OF

HELENA RUBINSTEIN, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4254. Complaint, Aug. 21, 1940—Decision, July 14, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture and interstate sale and distribution of its "Town and Country Face Powder," "Eye Lash Grower Cream," "Eye Lash Cream and Darkener," and "Egg Complexion Soap" cosmetic preparations; by means of advertisements disseminated through the mails, newspapers, and periodicals and other advertising literature—

(a) Represented, directly and by implication, that face powder generally tends to draw out and absorb the natural moisture of the skin, making it dry, parched, and susceptible to lines and premature aging, and that ordinary powder particles swell because of absorption of skin moisture and clog the pores, causing enlarged pores, blackheads, and blemishes; that its said powder was moisture-proof and did not absorb natural moisture of the skin or clog the pores, and that use thereof would prevent the skin from becoming dry and parched, prevent lines and premature aging, and prevent or remove enlarged pores, blackheads, and blemishes;

Facts being that the primary purpose of face powder is to absorb excess moisture and cover shiny skin, such absorption resulting from the capillary effect of the minute spaces between adjacent particles of powder without expansion or increase in the bulk thereof; face powder, of itself, will not cause enlarged pores, blackheads, or blemishes as the result of any swelling of particles within the pores; its said representations with respect to the pre-expanded quality of its face powder and its moisture-proof qualities had no scientific basis, and use thereof would not prevent lines or premature aging or prevent or remove enlarged pores, blackheads, or blemishes because of any pre-expanded quality or "balsamizing process," by which said face powder was, purportedly, pre-expanded and saturated with moisture before reaching the consumer;

(b) Represented, further, that its "Eye Lash Grower Cream" had special properties which would be effective in causing eyelashes to grow, and that its "Eye Lash Cream and Darkener" had special properties which would prevent eyelashes from breaking; when in fact such products had no value in promoting growth of eyelashes or preventing their breaking, respectively; and

(c) Represented that its "Egg Complexion Soap" would benefit the complexion through the presence of eggs therein and purified the skin;

Facts being the egg content of said soap was of no value to the complexion, and would not purify the skin in excess of cleansing the surface thereof;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of such representations were true, and to induce it to purchase said cosmetic preparations because of such belief, thus engendered:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Lewis C. Russell, trial examiner.
Mr. John M. Russell for the Commission.
Mr. Henry M. Flateau, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Helena Rubinstein, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Helena Rubinstein, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, having its office and principal place of business at 715 Fifth Avenue in the city of New York, in said State.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and for more than 2 years last past has been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of certain cosmetic preparations. Respondent sells its said products to purchasers situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes said products, when sold by it, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in its said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said products by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said products; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said products, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among, and typical of, the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, and other advertising literature, are the following:

1. Representations made with reference to "Town and Country Face Powder";

HELENA RUBINSTEIN'S NEW

TOWN & COUNTRY FACE POWDER

A Really Different Powder

* * * Mme. Rubinstein * * * realized the risks that women take with face powder * * * These risks * * * are: (1) Face Powder tends to draw out and absorb the natural moisture of the skin—leaving the skin dry and parched, susceptible to lines and premature aging. (2) When a powder particle absorbs precious skin moisture, it swells—as a grain of wheat swells in contact with water. Particles resting in the opening of a pore will press, as they swell against the walls of the pore—eventually causing enlarged pores, blackheads—even blemishes.

Mme. Rubinstein has felt * * * the only way to eliminate these dangers completely was to create a powder on an entirely new principle—a moisture-resisting principle. * * *

Mme. Rubinstein conceived a second brillant process. Town and Country Face Powder, before it is balsamized, is pre-expanded! It is exposed to compressed moisture so that every particle absorbs all the moisture it can hold. In other words, it is expanded fully before it touches your skin. Next it is reduced to exquisite fineness—and then balsamized. The result is a powder that is proof against drying the skin * * * enlarging the pores, * * * the onslaughts of weather—and permanent * * *.

Face Powder * * * the balsamizing and pre-expanding processes to make it moisture proof.

Helena Rubinstein announces * * * all of her face powders are made moisture proof.

2. Representations made with reference to "Eye Lash Grower Cream:"

Eye Lash Grower * * * for lovely long lashes.

3. Representations made with reference to "Eye Lash Cream and Darkener";

Eye Lash Cream and Darkener, * * * Makes the lashes dark, silky, luxuriant looking.

Eye Lash Cream and Darkener—makes the lashes dark and silky. Prevents them from breaking.

4. Representations made with reference to "Egg Complexion Soap";

Egg Complexion Soap. * * * Purifies the skin. Made of eggs and soothing oils.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and other similar statements and representations not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of respondent's said cosmetic preparations and their effectiveness when used, respondent directly and by implication represents that face powder generally tends to draw out and absorb the natural moisture of the skin, making the skin dry, parched, and susceptible to lines and premature aging; that ordinary powder particles swell because of absorption of skin moisture and clog the pores, causing enlarged pores, blackheads, and blemishes; that respondent's cosmetic preparation Town and Country Face Powder does not absorb natural moisture of the skin and is moisture proof, and does not clog the pores; that the use of this preparation will prevent the skin from becoming dry and parched, prevent lines and premature aging and prevent or remove enlarged pores, blackheads, and blemishes. Respondent further represents that its cosmetic preparation Eye Lash Grower Cream has special properties which will be effective in causing eye lashes to grow, and that its Eye Lash Cream and Darkener makes the lashes dark, silky, and luxuriant looking and has special properties which will be effective in preventing eye lashes from breaking. Respondent further represents that its Egg Complexion Soap will benefit the complexion through the presence of eggs therein and that such product purifies the skin

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading. In truth and in fact the primary purpose of the use of face powder is to absorb excess moisture and to cover shiny skin. Such absorption of excess moisture results from the capillary effect of the minute spaces between adjacent particles of powder without expansion or increase in bulk of such powder. Face powder, of itself, will not cause enlarged pores, blackheads, or blemishes as a result of any swelling of particles within the pores. The representations made by the respondent with reference to the pre-expanded quality of its face powder and its moisture-proof qualities has no scientific basis and the use of said product will not prevent lines or premature aging or prevent or remove enlarged pores, blackheads, or blemishes because of any pre-expanded quality or balsamizing process. Respondent's preparation Eye Lash Grower Cream has no properties which would be of any value in promoting the growth of eye lashes and has no effect upon the growth of eye lashes, and its Eye Lash Cream and Darkener will not make the lashes dark, silky, or luxuriant looking, or prevent them from breaking. The egg content of Egg Complexion Soap is of no value to and will not benefit the complexion. Said soap will not purify the skin in excess of cleansing the surface thereof.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that all of such statements and representations are true, and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public to purchase respondent's cosmetic preparations because of such erroneous and mistaken belief engendered as above set forth.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 21st day of August 1940, issued, and on the 22d day of August 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent herein, Helena Rubinstein, Inc., a corporation, charging it with using unfair and deceptive acts or practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On the 9th day of November 1940, the respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts, signed and executed by the respondent and Richard P. Whiteley, Assistant Chief Counsel for the Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the filing of a report upon the evidence by the trial examiner, the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Helena Rubinstein, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, having its office and principal place of business at 715 Fifth Avenue in the city of New York, in said State.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of certain cosmetic preparations, to wit, "Town and Country Face Powder," "Eye Lash Grower Cream," "Eye Lash Cream and Darkener," and "Egg Complexion Soap." Respondent sells its said products to purchasers situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes said products, when sold by it, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and has caused the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said products by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said products; and respondent has also disseminated, and has caused the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said products, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly the purchase of its said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among, and typical of, the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, and other advertising literature, are the following.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations. disseminated as aforesaid, has had the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that all of such statements and representations are true, and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public to purchase respondent's cosmetic preparations because of such erroneous and mistaken belief engendered as above set forth.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon, and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Helena Rubinstein, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of its cosmetic preparations designated Town and Country Face Powder, Eye Lash Grower Cream, and Eye Lash Cream and Darkener, or any preparations of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement:

(a) Represents, directly or through inference, that said preparation Town and Country Face Powder does not absorb natural moisture of the skin, or that it is moisture-proof; that it will prevent lines or premature aging, or that it will prevent or remove enlarged pores, blackheads, or blemishes;

(b) Uses the word "Grower," or any other word of similar import, to designate or describe said preparation Eye Lash Grower Cream, or otherwise represents that said preparation has any effect upon the growth of eyelashes;

(c) Represents, directly or through inference, that said preparation Eye Lash Cream and Darkener will prevent eyelashes from breaking;

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparations, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, as aforesaid, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of respondent's soap product designated Egg Complexion Soap, or any product of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Representing that the egg content of said soap has any beneficial effect upon the skin, or that said soap purifies the skin in excess of cleansing the surface thereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

STETSON CHINA COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4477. Complaint, Mar. 26, 1941—Decision, July 14, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of dinnerware, including chinaware and glassware; by means of cards, letters, circulars, and other printed and written matter circulated generally among dealers and supplied to them for distribution to the purchasing public; directly or by implication—

(a) Represented that certain of its said products were a reproduction of expensive imported chinaware; and

(b) Represented that the prices at which such products were offered for sale represented special or reduced prices which were much less than those at which they were customarily offered and sold, through such statements as "Lady Evette Set. You may have one of these test sets at only $9.95 for the entire 54 pieces, service for 8. This set was made to retail regularly at $16.75. The complete 100-piece service is being specially priced at $19.95 which is $10 less than the regular retail price";

The facts being said chinaware was not a reproduction of imported or expensive chinaware, but was of ordinary grade and quality, and the prices at which they were offered for sale were the regular retail prices at which they were customarily offered and sold; $9.95 was the customary retail price of the set in question which never sold for $16.75, and the price of $19.95 on the larger set did not represent any saving, but was the customary retail price;

With the effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of purchasing public with respect to its products, and of placing in the hands of uninformed or unscrupulous dealers a means whereby they were enabled to mislead and deceive such public, and of causing substantial portion thereof to purchase substantial quantities of said products because of the erroneous belief thus engendered:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. B. G. Wilson for the Commission.

Mr. J. L. Kaufmann, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Stetson China Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Stetson China Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business at 1801 West Seventy-fourth Street, Chicago, Ill.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, engaged in the business of selling and distributing dinnerware, including chinaware, glassware, and other tableware, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent causes and has caused its said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its products, the respondent has disseminated false and misleading statements and representations with respect to the character, quality, and prices of its products, such representations being made by means of cards, letters, circulars, and other printed and written matter circulated generally among dealers and supplied to dealers for distribution to the purchasing public. Among and typical of the false and misleading representations so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

A fine reproduction of very expensive imported china.

Lady Evette Set. You may have one of these test sets at only $9.95 for the entire 54 pieces, service for eight. This set was made to retail regularly at $16.75.

The complete 100-piece service is being specially priced at $19.95 which is $10 less than the regular retail price.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the foregoing statements and representations, and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents directly or by implication that certain of its said products are a reproduction of expensive imported chinaware, and that the prices at which such products are offered for sale represent special or reduced prices which are much less than the prices at which such products are customarily offered for sale and sold in the usual and normal course of business.

PAR. 5. The foregoing statements and representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, the chinaware so designated is not a reproduction of imported or expensive chinaware, but is chinaware of ordinary grade and quality. The prices at which said products are offered for sale do not represent special or reduced prices but are the regular retail prices at which such products are customarily offered for sale and sold in the normal and usual course of business. The set of chinaware offered for sale at $9.95 has never sold for $16.75 but the customary retail price of such chinaware has been and is only $9.95. The price of $19.95 on the 100-piece set of said chinaware does not represent a saving of $10 or any other amount from the regular retail price of such chinaware, but in fact the customary retail price of such set of chinaware is and has been $19.95.

PAR. 6. This practice on the part of respondent serves also to place in the hands of uninformed or unscrupulous dealers a means and instrumentality whereby such dealers are enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public with respect to the value and customary retail prices of respondent's products.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the acts and practices herein set forth has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the character, quality, and value of respondent's products, and to cause the purchasing public to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's products as a result of the erroneous and mistaken belief so engendered.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 26th day of March 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Stetson China Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint the respondent filed its answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in the complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Stetson China Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business at 1801 West Seventy-fourth Street, Chicago, Ill.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, engaged in the business of selling and distributing dinnerware, including chinaware, glassware, and other tableware, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent causes and has caused its said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its products, the respondent has disseminated by means of cards, letters, circulars, and other printed and written matter circulated generally among dealers and supplied to dealers for distribution to the purchasing public various representations with respect to the character, quality, and prices of its products. Among and typical of the representations so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

A fine reproduction of very expensive imported china.

Lady Evette Set. You may have one of these test sets at only $9.95 for the entire 54 pieces, service for eight. This set was made to retail regularly at $16.75.

The complete 100-piece service is being specially priced at $19.95 which is $10.00 less than the regular retail price.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the foregoing statements and representations, and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents directly or by implication that certain of its said products are a reproduction of expensive imported chinaware, and that the prices at which such products are offered for sale represent special or reduced prices which are much less than the prices at which such products are customarily offered for sale and sold in the usual and normal course of business.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, the chinaware so designated is not a reproduction of imported or expensive chinaware, but is chinaware of ordinary grade and quality. The prices at which said products are offered for sale do not represent special or reduced prices but are the regular retail prices at which such products are customarily offered for sale and sold in the normal and usual course of business. The set of chinaware offered for sale at $9.95 has never sold for $16.75 but the customary retail price of such chinaware has been and is only $9.95. The price of $19.95 on the 100-piece set of said chinaware does not represent a saving of $10 or any other amount from the regular retail price of such chinaware, but in fact the customary retail price of such set of chinaware is and has been $19.95.

PAR. 6. This practice on the part of respondent serves also to place in the hands of uninformed or unscrupulous dealers a means and instrumentality whereby such dealers are enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public with respect to the value and customary retail prices of respondent's products.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the acts and practices herein set forth has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the character, quality, and value of respondent's products, and to cause the purchasing public to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's products as a result of the erroneous and mistaken belief so engendered.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptve acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Stetson China Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of chinaware, glassware, and other tableware in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing as the customary or regular retail prices or values of respondent's products prices and values which are in excess of the prices at which such products are regularly and customarily sold at retail in the normal and usual course of business.

2. Representing that the prices at which respondent's products are offered for sale constitute a discount to the purchaser, or that such prices are special or reduced prices, when in fact such prices are the usual and customary prices at which such products are offered for sale in the normal and usual course of business.

3. Representing that respondent's chinaware is a reproduction of expensive imported chinaware.

4. Representing that the character, grade, or quality of respondent's products are other than the actual character, grade, or quality of such products.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

WILBERT W. HAASE COMPANY, INC., NATIONAL AFFILIATION OF WILBERT VAULT MANUFACTURERS, AND ITS MEMBERS, ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3808. Complaint, June 6, 1939—Decision, July 15, 1941

Where three corporations and three individuals engaged variously in the licensing of others to construct and sell concrete burial vaults made under letters patent, in the manufacture of supplies and materials for such vaults and of the vaults themselves, and in interstate sale and distribution thereof, to wit:

I. A corporation which (1) was engaged in licensing others to construct and sell its Wilbert vaults, and in the lease or sale to such licensees of various materials and supplies for use in said manufacture, and, under the trade name of "National Affiliation of Wilbert Vault Manufacturers," in conducting advertising programs to promote the sale of its vaults, (2) sold, and furnished without charge, to its eighty-odd licensees located in many of the States, advertising brochures, pamphlets, advertising mats, circulars, catalogs, leaflets, printed, and illustrated materials, and placed advertisements of its said vaults in magazines and other publications of general circulation, (3) sold and distributed, also, to its licensees, miniature Wilbert vaults for display completely submerged in water, with arrangement for lighting and inspection of the interior, with the intent of causing purchasers to believe that said vaults had the characteristics below represented and (4) undertook, through periodical inspections of the plants of licensees, to maintain similar standards of manufacturing by all;

II. A corporation which was engaged as licensee of former in making and selling said vaults, and also in manufacturing or providing the materials and supplies leased or sold by former to other licensees; an individual who was president of and majority stockholder in both said corporations, and in active charge of their businesses; and a second individual who was secretary and treasurer of former corporation and actively engaged in the conduct of its business and of aforesaid advertising program; and

III. A corporation engaged as licensee of first concern in the manufacture and sale of said vaults, and an individual similarly engaged as licensee, which caused advertising materials to be transported from the Chicago place of business of said first-named licensing concern and from their places of business in Maryland, to prospective customers;

In said advertising material, circulated and displayed by said corporations and individuals, furnished by the licensees to their undertaker customers, and displayed by them to the purchasing public, and in other advertising materials prepared and circulated by the licensees themselves—

(a) Represented said Wilbert vaults as asphalt, through such statements as "Asphalt Waterproof Vault," and in the marking and designation thereof made use of phrase "Wilbert Asphalt Waterproof Inner Vault" in large letters, with words "United with Reinforced Concrete Outer Vault" in type so small as frequently to be illegible, and referred to the ⅜-inch asphalt lining attached to the concrete portion of the vault, as an "inner vault," and sometimes to the vault itself as a "Dual Vault";

Facts being vault in question was of concrete lined with asphalt, and not, as implied, made in major part, if not entirely, of the more expensive asphalt, and said asphalt lining thereof was not, as implied, separately suitable for use as a burial chamber, nor was the entire product a dual vault;

(b) Represented that their said vault was "breakproof" and that "earth weight will not crush it," that it was sweatproof and constituted an eternal, dry, underground mausoleum;

Facts being concrete, in thickness used in said vaults, will permit slow passage of water, tending to carry with it chemicals from the soil, and gradually to separate from the inner surface any asphalt or bituminous material attached thereto; deterioration of concrete may be quite rapid in soils containing an alkali and dependent also upon a variety of other conditions, including quality of the concrete, amount of moisture, etc.; and vault in question, under varying conditions of interment, would not be either air-tight or waterproof eternally or for 50 years, or for any other fixed period of time, but might easily fail and permit entrance of water, as in fact occurred in some instances within a few years; and product in question had no distinctive feature making it sweatproof, but did have a tendency to permit progressive passage of water into the interior between protruding metal parts and the concrete;

(c) Represented that their vault was guaranteed "Insured for Fifty Years," as airtight and water resisting, watertight if cover was properly placed and sealed, and as against being crushed by earth weight, and that said guarantee was insured by one of the large insurance companies;

The facts being that the insurance in question, as respects insurer, was based on fact or assumption that chance of disinterment was remote, and as respects various vault concerns and individuals herein involved, was primarily a sales plan, and not, as implied, an insurance of the manufacturers' guarantee for the benefit of purchasers of vaults, but was for the benefit of the licensees and to reimburse them for any payments they might be required to make as a result of the guarantee as issued by them; and advertising thereof failed to disclose that the insurance might be canceled at any time by either said licensing company or the insurer, implying that it was primarily for the benefit of purchasers and was unqualified for the full period of 50 years; and

(d) Stated that the well-known insurance company in question had "investigated every phase of the Wilbert organization before accepting the responsibility of underwriting Wilbert Vault Guarantees," and that "Their acceptance is a remarkable endorsement of the vault and the organization behind it";

Facts being that no such investigation was made, and acceptance of underwriting risk by said insurance company did not constitute such an endorsement, being based, as above indicated, not upon probable performance of the vault, but principally upon the fact that in the normal course there would be relatively few disinterments;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such false advertisements were true, and of causing it, because of such belief, to purchase large numbers of said vaults, whereby trade was unfairly diverted to them from their competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.

Mr. Curtis C. Shears and Mr. William L. Pencke for the Commission.

Mr. Eugene Meacham, of Washington, D. C., and Mr. Harold C. Osburn and Mr. Bernard W. Vinissky, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the respondents in the caption hereof and hereinafter more particularly designated and described, have violated, and are now violating, the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. (a) Respondent Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business at 1015 Troost Avenue, Forest Park, Ill. It is owner of certain letters patent of the United States relating to the construction, manufacture, and use of a certain kind or kinds of cement burial vaults used to encase or enclose coffins in the burial of the dead. Said patented vaults are hereinafter designated and referred to as Wilbert vaults. Said respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the business of licensing other corporations, individuals, partnerships, and firms to construct and sell Wilbert vaults made and manufactured under said patents and in selling and distributing certain supplies, services, and materials, hereinafter more fully designated and described, to said licensees. It grants licenses under said patents to some 80 manufacturers of Wilbert vaults located throughout the United States under a licensing agreement. Said licensing agreement provides, in part, that the licensees shall have the right to manufacture and sell said Wilbert vaults in a specified territory designated therein. The licensee agrees to manufacture said vaults in accordance with specifications as contained in said letters patent governing same, and to purchase or rent from respondent Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., the metallic molds, asphalt cooker, reinforcing for covers and boxes, handles, clevices, rods, asphalt and asphalt paint, Wilbert stenciling and decorating devices, an electric spraying outfit and all other materials used in the construction of said Wilbert vaults excepting cement, sand, and gravel. Respondent Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., will be hereinafter designated and referred to as licensor. Said licensor sells, supplies, and renders certain services to said licensee manufacturers of said Wilbert vaults, including the selling, renting and supplying of various materials, equipment, tools, forms, brochures, advertising mats, circulars, letters, booklets, pamphlets, catalogs, leaflets, and other printed and illustrated materials, and other supplies, hereinafter designated and referred to as supplies, services, and materials, used in connection with the manufacture, promotion, sale, and use of said Wilbert vaults under said licensing agreements, and incident to and connected with purchasing, manufacturing, sales promotion, advertising, planning, publication and insurance of said Wilbert vaults, directly or indirectly for said licensees. Said license agreement provides for a royalty on each vault sold by a licensee. Licensor, directly or indirectly, conducts a national advertising service for the benefit of its licensees, who are hereinafter more fully described and designated.

(b) Respondent, National Affiliation of Wilbert Vault Manufacturers, is an unincorporated association having its principal place of business at 1015 Troost Avenue, in the city of Forest Park, State of Illinois. It is hereinafter referred to as the "association" and its members are burial vault manufacturers located in various sections of the United States, engaged in the manufacture of said Wilbert vaults under said licensing agreements based on said letters patent held by said licensor. Said licensor is the operating agency for said association and, as such, acts on behalf of said association in conducting among other services a national advertising campaign, directly or through said association in promoting the sale of said Wilbert vaults.

(c) Respondent members of said association are about 80 in number and they are located in various sections of the United States. Said members are corporations, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the business of manufacturing said Wilbert vaults. All of the members of said association are not known to the Commission. Those of its officers and representative members who are known and who can be conveniently reached are specifically named as respondents herein. All the other members of said association are hereby made respondents without being individually named because they constitute a class or group too numerous to be brought before the Commission in this proceeding without manifest inconvenience and delay. The following named representative members of said association are made respondents herein both individually and in their said representative capacity: American Vault Works, Inc., an Illinois corporation, having its principal place of business at 1015 Troost Avenue, Forest Park, Ill.; Baltimore Concrete Products Co., a Maryland corporation, trading and doing business under the name and style of Baltimore Wilbert Vault Works, with its principal place of business located at 3025 Cold Spring Lane, Baltimore, Md.; Leo Wolfkill, an individual trading and doing business under the name and style of Washington Vault Works, having his principal place of business at Rockville, Md. Respondent members of the association, both named and unnamed, are hereinafter collectively referred to as "licensees." Membership in said association is obtained solely by virtue of said licensing agreements entered into by and between said members and said licensor.

(d) Respondent American Vault Works, Inc., one of said licensees and a member of said association, is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois having its office and principal place of business at the same local address in the city of Forest Park, State of Illinois, as respondent licensor. It is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling in interstate commerce said Wilbert vaults and manufacturing forms, equipment, supplies, and materials used in the making of said Wilbert vaults under said licensing agreements for said licensor. Said licensor, in turn, sells and distributes said forms, equipment, supplies, and materials to and among said licensees located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

(e) Respondent Wilbert W. Haase is an individual having his office at 1015 Troost Avenue, Forest Park, Ill. He is, and for some time last past has been, the president of respondent licensor and of respondent American Vault Works, Inc., and is and has been majority stockholder of such corporate respondents and in active charge of their businesses, controlling and directing their acts, practices, and policies. He organized or caused to be organized respondent association and directly or indirectly controls and directs its acts, practices, and policies. Sydney L. Schultz is an individual having his office at 1015 Troost Avenue, Forest Park, Ill. He is, and for some time last past has been, secretary and treasurer of the respondent licensor and secretary of respondent association, and has been actively engaged in the conduct of the businesses of said respondents.

PAR. 2. Respondent association and many of its members, including respondent licensees named herein individually and in a representative capacity, in the usual course and conduct of their respective businesses, are engaged in interstate commerce, transporting and causing to be transported said Wilbert vaults and burial supplies, equipment, advertising matter, and other materials used in the promotion, sale, distribution and use of said Wilbert vaults from the respective States of their production to the respective consumers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said licensor, in the regular course and conduct of its business, acting for and on behalf of the association and its members in its merchandising and advertising activities referred to in paragraph 1 hereof, is engaged in selling and distributing said materials, supplies, and services and causing the same to be transported from the State of Illinois to, through and into other States of the United States wherein the various licensees are located. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade in said Wilbert vaults and said materials, supplies, and services by said respondents in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of their businesses respondents are now, and for several years last past have been, in active and substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the manufacture, sale, and transportation in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of steel, stone, concrete, cement, and other vaults and supplies, services, and materials used in connection with the manufacture, sale, and distribution of said vaults, used in the burial of the dead.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their businesses as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents in soliciting the sale, selling, and reselling said Wilbert vaults, and said supplies, materials, and services, and as an incident to and a means of inducing and procuring the sale of said Wilbert vaults are now causing, and for some time last past have caused, advertisements and advertising matter relating to said vaults to be inserted, published, and displayed in magazines, newspapers, circulars, pamphlets, letters, stationery, booklets, forms, catalogs, leaflets, and other printed and illustrated material circulated or distributed among prospective purchasers of such vaults, and they have affixed advertising matter to vaults, buildings, trucks, and other media for dissemination of information, directly or indirectly to the public, all of which said advertising matter is hereinafter designated and referred to as "advertising." Said licensor cooperates and has cooperated with said licensees in the sale of said Wilbert vaults in said commerce as aforesaid through advertising circulated among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and which said licensor has caused directly or through said association to be inserted, published, and displayed in publications circulated throughout the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said licensor also supplies advertising mats and other advertising matter to licensees, who, in turn, cause and have caused said mats and other advertising matter to be inserted, published, and displayed in various publications, circulated as aforesaid. Licensor also sells and distributes directly or indirectly said advertising to said licensees. Said licensees, in turn, furnish said advertising to their undertaker customers for use in aid of the sale of said Wilbert vaults to the ultimate purchasers thereof. Said undertakers publish, distribute, display, and expose said advertising directly or indirectly to the ultimate purchasing public. In the aforesaid manner said licensor, said association and its members and said licensees, have cooperated with each other and acted together in distributing said advertising and advertising matter under the control and direction as aforesaid of Wilbert W. Haase and Sydney L. Schultz. All of said respondents are now, and have been, acting in concert in promoting the sale of said Wilbert vaults in the manner and through the methods herein alleged.

PAR. 4. Respondents, in advertising or causing said advertising to be published, distributed, displayed, or exposed, as aforesaid, are making and have made many false and misleading representations, in and through such media, to the effect that said Wilbert vaults, when manufactured, are made and constructed, in whole or in part, of asphalt; consist of an inner vault of asphalt united with an outer vault of reinforced concrete; are waterproof, airtight, and of enduring, break-proof strength, and are guaranteed for 50 years. Another representation is and has been made by or through the means of tests and demonstrations which were and are calculated, and have had and now have the tendency and capacity, to and do in fact mislead and deceive the consuming public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said Wilbert vaults are waterproof and airtight at the time of burial, that they will endure as waterproof and airtight under actual burial conditions, and that every said vault manufactured by any of said licensees affords eternal or long enduring protection to bodies encased or enclosed therein, against contact with water and other destructive agents in the soil where said Wilbert vault is interred.

Among and typical of said representations used and caused to be used by said respondents are the following:

1. Wilbert Waterproof Burial Vaults.

The burial vault with an insured guarantee.

Wilbert vault guarantees insured for 50 years.

Eternal.

Dry Underground Mausoleum.

Insured guarantees—Wilbert Vault Manufacturers provide a liberal and well-defined waterproof and break-proof vault guarantee that is insured for a period of 50 years by the Aetna Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn., Incorporated 1819.

Wilbert Waterproof Dual Vault.

We hereby guarantee * * * WILBERT ASPHALT WATERPROOF INNER VAULT UNITED WITH REINFORCED CONCRETE OUTER VAULT * * * that said vault interred in said cemetery is airtight and water-resistant; that earth weight will not crush it, no water from the outside will enter it after cover has been properly placed and sealed.

The Aetna Insurance Company investigated every phase of the Wilbert organization before accepting the responsibility of underwriting Wilbert Burial Vault guarantees. Their acceptance is a remarkable endorsement of the vault and the organization behind it.

2. Wilbert Asphalt Waterproof Vault.

Wilbert Asphalt Waterproof Burial Vault.

Thick Asphalt Inner Vault.

Pure cast Asphalt for Waterproof protection; reinforced concrete scientifically moulded for enduring strength.

When you explain asphalt protection to your client and sell a Wilbert vault with its insured guarantee, you have accomplished the ultimate for his "PEACE OF MIND" and your own Wilbert Waterproof Burial Vault.

3. Mr. Haase's supreme desire was to produce a vault that would give full protection regardless of varying conditions of burial. Taking a tip from the ancient Egyptian embalmers he started experimenting with asphalt. Realizing that pure asphalt must have a supporting agent, he decided to unite a thick cast asphalt inner vault to an outer vault of enduring concrete, a material which he knew would stand the test of time.

In addition to the advertisements and representations hereinabove set out, miniature vaults are sold and distributed by licensor to said licensees for advertising purposes. These miniature vaults are constructed in substantially the same manner as said Wilbert vaults and like said Wilbert vaults contain licensor's trade-mark moulded into the side and ends of same. Said licensees who purchase said miniature vaults display them or cause them to be displayed submerged in water with an arrangement provided for the lighting, inspection, and testing of their interiors by prospective ultimate purchasers of same, for the purpose of leading said ultimate purchasers to believe that said Wilbert vaults have the characteristics listed above in this paragraph under actual burial conditions. Respondents instruct their undertaker customers to make said test and demonstration and it is often made by said undertaker customers for said purpose.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, the statements and representations set forth in paragraph 4 hereof are false and misleading in that respondents' vaults and so-called inner vaults are not waterproof and eternally dry, nor do they insure enduring strength, nor are they always waterproof, airtight or breakproof at the time of installation or for a period of 50 years or any other stated period of time; the so-called inner vault is not itself a vault nor is it composed of thick asphalt, nor is the vault properly described and designated as an asphalt vault.

Said miniature vaults are not displayed under nor subjected to actual burial conditions. The tests and demonstrations referred to above are misleading and deceptive for the reason that the same physical conditions do not prevail when the tests are being made as would and do prevail when the vaults of the respondents are buried in the ground and such tests do not prove that said vaults are airtight, waterproof, or watertight.

Said representations regarding insured guarantees infer absolute protection but in truth and in fact the master policy insuring said licensor for the benefit of said licensees contains two or more saving clauses, one conditional upon the cover being properly placed and sealed, and another retaining to the insurance company the right to cancel said master policy if losses under said policy amount to more than 25 percent of the total premium paid for same, all of which is not disclosed to the ultimate consuming public. Disinterment after burial is so rare as to make the said certificate of guarantee worthless to the vast majority of purchasers of respondents' said vaults for the reason that no opportunity is afforded them in which to ascertain whether the vault is waterproof or not.

The term waterproof as used by respondents in their advertising as aforesaid means to the consuming public a watertight vault, a vault which will not permit water to enter it, and respondents' said vault is not waterproof as the term is so understood by the consuming public, and water will seep into it through the joints and the walls thereof, when used in the burial of the dead.

No test has been made or can be made to prove that said vaults will endure eternally or for 50 years from disintegration, electrolysis, oxidation, corrosion, and erosion, under all burial conditions. The so-called asphalt inner vault cast as a part of said Wilbert vault is now and has been constructed of an approximate thickness of $\frac{3}{8}$ of an inch of asphalt. Respondents, who directly or indirectly manufacture, sell, and distribute said Wilbert concrete vaults with asphalt inner lining do not know that a specific vault buried in a particular place is waterproof, airtight and breakproof at the time of interment; and morever respondents do not know that a certain vault buried in a particular place will endure as a waterproof, airtight and breakproof structure for a period of 50 years, or for any long-enduring period.

PAR. 6. The use by respondents of the foregoing advertisements, statements, representations, tests, and demonstrations and others similar thereto in advertising, soliciting, and offering for sale and selling said Wilbert vaults, and said supplies, services, and materials used in connection with the advertising, sale, and use of said vaults, as herein set out, was and is calculated to and has had and now has the tendency and capacity to and does in fact, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid representations are true, and induces them to purchase said vaults on account of said erroneous and mistaken belief. Thereby trade has been and is now unfairly diverted to said licensees from competitors engaged in the sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia who do not make use of similar misrepresentations with respect to their products of the same general kind as those offered by respondents.

As a result of respondents' said practices, as herein set out, substantial injury has been and is now being done by said respondents to the public and to competitors engaged in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. The above alleged acts and practices of respondents are each and all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of competitors of respondents and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on June 6, 1939, issued and subsequently served its complaint upon the respondents named in the caption hereof charging them with unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission and in opposition thereto by attorneys for respondents, before Randolph

Preston, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral argument by counsel; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, having its principal place of business at 1015 Troost Avenue, Forest Park, Ill. This respondent is the owner of certain United States letters patent relating to the construction and manufacture of concrete burial vaults. For a number of years respondent has been, and is now, engaged in the business of licensing individuals, partnerships, and other corporations to construct and sell concrete burial vaults manufactured under said letters patent, and in the lease or sale to such licensees of various materials and supplies used in or in connection with the manufacture of concrete burial vaults which are designated and described as "Wilbert" vaults.

Respondent National Affiliation of Wilbert Vault Manufacturers, alleged in the complaint to be an unincorporated association, has no officers, by-laws, or formal organization, and is in fact a trade name and style used by respondent Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., individually and in cooperation with its licensees, in conducting advertising programs for the benefit of itself and of its licensees in promoting the sale of Wilbert vaults. Some advertising material is sold to licensees by Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., and other such material is furnished to licensees without specific charge therefor. Advertisements to publicize Wilbert vaults and induce their purchase are placed by Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., and by licensees in magazines and other publications circulating in and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. This advertising program is in part supported by royalty payments of licensees and in part by a further payment by such licensees of 25 cents per vault sold, which payments are directly devoted to advertising carried on under the aforesaid name of National Affiliation of Wilbert Vault Manufacturers.

Respondent American Vault Works, Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, having its principal place of business at 1015 Troost Avenue, Forest Park, Ill. This respondent has been, and is now, engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling Wilbert vaults as a licensee of respondent Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., and in addition manufacturers or otherwise provides the materials and supplies leased or sold by respondent Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., to other licensees.

Respondent Wilbert W. Haase, an individual, has been, and is now, president of respondent Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., and of respondent American Vault Works, Inc., and has been, and is now, the holder of a majority of the stock in both of said corporate respondents and has been and is, in active charge of their respective businesses, controlling and directing their policies, acts, and practices.

Respondent Sidney L. Schultz, an individual, has been, and is now, secretary and treasurer of respondent Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., and has been, and is now, actively engaged in the conduct of its business and in the conduct of the advertising program carried out under the name of National Affiliation of Wilbert Vault Manufacturers in aid of and in cooperation with the other respondents and other licensees not specifically named in said complaint.

Respondent Baltimore Concrete Products Co. is a corporation organized under and doing business by virtue of the laws of the State of Maryland, having its principal place of business at 3025 Cold Spring Lane, Baltimore, Md. This respondent in its capacity as a licensee of respondent Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., trades under the name and style of Baltimore Wilbert Vault Co. and is engaged, among other things, in the manufacture, offering for sale, and sale of Wilbert vaults.

Respondent referred to in the caption hereof as Leo Wolfkill is in fact Lee A. Wolfkill, an individual having his place of business in Rockville, Md., and trading under the name and style of Washington Vault Works, is a licensee of respondent Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., and is engaged, among other things, in the manufacture, offering for sale, and sale of Wilbert vaults.

PAR. 2. Respondent Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., trading under its own name and under the name and style of National Affiliation of Wilbert Vault Manufacturers, sells and also furnishes without charge to its licensees, some 80 in number, located in many States of the United States, various advertising brochures, pamphlets, advertising mats, circulars, catalogs, leaflets, printed and illustrated materials for the use of such licensees in promoting and inducing the sale of Wilbert vaults, and causes such materials to be transported from its place of business to licensees in other States of the United States, and causes advertisements intended to, and which do, promote and induce the sale of Wilbert vaults to be inserted in magazines and other publications having circulation in and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. This respondent, in conjunction with respondent American Vault Works, Inc., sells and causes to be transported from Illinois through and into other States of the United States various materials and supplies sold to licensees for use in or in connection with the manufacture of Wilbert vaults and maintains a constant course of trade in commerce in such materials and supplies in and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents Baltimore Concrete Products Co., a corporation, trading as Baltimore Wilbert Vault Co., and Lee A. Wolfkill, an individual trading as Washington Vault Works, cause brochures, circulars, letters, pamphlets, leaflets, and ther printed and illustrated materials intended to promote their sales of Wilbert vaults to be transported from the place of business of Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., in Illinois and from their respective places of business in Maryland to customers and prospective customers in other States and in the District of Columbia, and further cause to be transported from their respective places of business in Maryland into other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia Wilbert vaults manufactured and sold by them to purchasers in such other States and in the District of Columbia. Said respondents maintain a course of trade in commerce in and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of said advertising materials and Wilbert vaults.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, in order to induce the purchase of Wilbert vaults, respondents circulate and display the advertising material heretofore referred to and the licensees of respondents in turn furnish said advertising material to their undertaker customers and prospective customers for use in aiding and promoting the sale of Wilbert vaults to the ultimate purchasers thereof, and such advertising material is distributed, displayed, and exposed to the purchasing public. In addition to the advertising materials purchased from or furnished by Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., licensees also prepare and circulate advertising representations of their own with respect to Wilbert vaults.

Among and typical of the representations made and caused to be made or used by respondents are:

Wilbert Waterproof Burial Vaults.

THE BURIAL VAULT WITH AN INSURED GUARANTEE.

Wilbert Vault Guarantees Insured For Fifty Years.

Eternal, Dry Underground Mausoleum.

Insured Guarantees—Wilbert Vault Manufacturers provide a liberal and well defined waterproof and breakproof vault guarantee that is insured for a period of fifty years by the Aetna Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn., Incorporated 1819.

Wilbert Waterproof Dual Vault.

WE HEREBY GUARANTEE * * * Wilbert Asphalt Waterproof Inner Vault United with Reinforced Concrete Outer Vault * * * that said vault interred in said cemetery is Air Tight and Water Resisting, that earth weight will not crush it, and that no water from the outside will enter it after the cover has been properly placed and sealed.

The Aetna Insurance Company investigated every phase of the Wilbert organization before accepting the responsibility of underwriting Wilbert Vault Guarantees. Their acceptance is a remarkable endorsement of the vault and the organization behind it.

Wilbert Asphalt Waterproof Vault.

Wilbert Asphalt Waterproof Burial Vault.

Thick Asphalt Inner Vault.

Pure Cast Asphalt for Waterproof protection; Reinforced Concrete scientifically molded for enduring strength.

When you explain asphalt protection to your client and sell a Wilbert Vault with its Insured Guarantee, you have accomplished the ultimate for his "PEACE OF MIND" and your own.

Mr. Haase's supreme desire was to produce a vault that would give full protection regardless of the varied conditions of burial. Taking a tip from the ancient Egyptian embalmers, he started experimenting with asphalt. Realizing that pure asphalt must have a supporting agent, he decided to unite a thick cast asphalt inner vault to an outer vault of enduring concrete; a material which he knew would stand the test of time.

In addition to representations such as those set out above, miniature vaults are sold and distributed by respondent Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., to its licensees for advertising purposes. These vaults are constructed in substantially the same manner as the adult size Wilbert vaults. They are intended to be, and are, displayed by the licensees and by their customers to prospective purchasers in the condition of being completely submerged in water with an arrangement provided for lighting and inspection of the interior thereof. This advertisement or demonstration is intended to cause prospective purchasers to believe that Wilbert vaults have the characteristics which they are represented to have.

PAR. 4. The terms of the license granted by Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., for the manufacture of Wilbert vaults provides that licensees secure equipment and supplies other than the Portland cement, sand, and gravel or crushed stone for use in the manufacture of such vaults from the licensor, and by periodical inspections of the plants of licensees the licensor attempts to maintain similar standards of manufacturing by all licensees. The Wilbert burial vault in substance consists of a box of sufficient size to hold a casket and having a separate top or cover, both box and cover being made of reinforced concrete and having an inner lining of asphalt. In general the method of manufacture is to construct the vaults in two pieces, one the box and the other the top or cover. The procedure in making the box is to set up metal forms in an inverted position leaving a 3/8-inch space between inner and outer forms which is poured full of hot asphalt. When cool the outer part of the form is removed, the surface of the asphalt is treated with a solvent, the reinforcing metal put in position, and an outer form put in place, leaving a space between the asphalt and the outer form of 1½ inches on the sides and 2½ inches at the top which, when the box is placed in the expected position, is the bottom. This space is then filled with concrete which is vibrated for the purpose of increasing its density, and when the concrete has set the inner and outer forms are removed, the outer surface pointed up, painted with an asphalt compound and the vault put aside for a curing period. The purpose of using a solvent on the asphalt inner lining prior to pouring the concrete around it is to create a bond between the asphalt and the concrete and cause the asphalt to adhere firmly to the concrete. The top or cover is made by a similar process. Before delivery of the vault to a purchaser its exterior is painted with bronze or other paint for decorative purposes.

In order to assist in moving the vault, suitable metal handles are placed in position before the concrete is poured so that they are imbedded in and become a part of the vault. For the purpose of making a tight joint between the box and the top or cover, they are cast with a tongue along the top edge of the sides and ends of the box and a groove along the edge of the cover intended to fit the tongue on the box. The groove is filled with asphalt, usually in three layers, the first being of a firmer consistency than the succeeding layers, and the top is intended to be accurately placed over the sides of the box in order that the weight of the cover and the earth placed upon it will gradually force the tongue and groove together and the asphalt will create a seal between the two parts of the vault. Where the regulations of the cemetery permit, it is the practice of the licensor to have a licensee or an employee attend to the placement of the top of the vault at the time of burial in order to assure, so far as possible, the sealing of the top to the box in the manner intended.

PAR. 5. The annual volume of business in Wilbert vaults manufactured by the some 80 licensees approximate $2,500,000. Out of the thousands of Wilbert vaults sold each year relatively few are disinterred, and consequently it is seldom that the condition of the vault after it has been put into use is accurately ascertained. There have been, however, a number of disinterments of Wilbert vaults, some of which were found to be in excellent condition and some of which were not. The first so-called Wilbert vault was manufactured about 1928 and various modifications were made during a period of several years. Wilbert vaults of the type now being made have been sold for approximately 6 or 7 years. As a result the disinterments which have occurred were of vaults that have been in use for a relatively short period of time. Among the disinterments in which Wilbert vaults were found to be in good condition was one which had been underground for about 32 months, and on removal from a wet grave and opening the interior of the vault was found to be dry; another was disinterred at Waldheim, Forest Park, Ill., after having been underground some 8 months, and on removal from a wet grave the interior of the vault showed no evidence of dampness; another was disinterred at River View Cemetery, Essex, Conn., after having been underground for some 8 months and the interior of the vault was dry and in good condition; and there were other similar instances. Among the instances of disinterments where a failure of the Wilbert vault had occurred was one at Mount Carmel Cemetery, Hillside, Ill., which had been underground some 14 months, and upon disinterment the cover of the vault was found to be cracked and the vault itself contained a large quantity of water; a disinterment of a vault at Middletown, Conn., which had been underground some 11 months disclosed cracks in the top of the vault, a quantity of water in it, and the asphalt inner lining separated from the concrete and collapsed upon the casket; a disinterment of a vault at Holy Cross Cemetery, Yearden, Pa., which had been underground some 19 months, disclosed that the top of the vault had cracked and collapsed toward the center; and other similar instances have been found. Respondents contend by way of explanation for failures of the Wilbert vaults that in some instances they have resulted because of the custom in some localities of making several interments one above the other in the same grave, thus placing more weight upon the vault than it was originally designed to bear; that in others they resulted from the vaults being manufactured by a licensee who had just commenced the production of Wilbert vaults and the cause of failures was subsequently corrected; and that in the instance where the asphalt inner lining was found to be separated from the concrete it was probably caused by failure of the licensee to use respondents' solvent preparation on the asphalt inner lining before casting the concrete about it.

PAR. 6. Considerable expert testimony was introduced by the Commission and by the respondents bearing upon whether or not Wilbert vaults are airtight, sweatproof, waterproof, and subject to being crushed by earth weight, and whether such vaults afford eternal or long-enduring protection, constitute a dry underground mausoleum, or will endure without failure for 50 years or any other fixed period of time. There is much direct conflict between the testimony of the expert witnesses produced by the Commission and those produced by the respondent.

The Commission finds that concrete is not an airtight material and in the thickness used in Wilbert vaults will permit the slow passage of water. Water passing through the concrete has the tendency to carry with it certain chemicals in the soil in which it may be interred and such water and chemicals in solution tend to gradually separate from the inner surface of the concrete any asphalt or bituminous material which may have been attached thereto and to cause such material to buckle away from that surface or crack if the temperature is low. In the absence of the support given by being attached to other material the asphalt used in Wilbert vaults will not permanently support itself but will gradually flow in response to the pull of gravity. Placing a waterproofing material such as asphalt on the inner surface of a cement structure instead of on the side exposed to water is not a good practice. The maintenance of a Wilbert vault in a substantially airtight and waterproof condition is dependent upon the accomplishment of a complete seal between the two parts of the vault at the time of interment, upon the asphalt lining remaining securely attached to the interior of the vault, upon the concrete portion of the vault remaining unbroken by earth pressure or deterioration resulting from conditions encountered when interred, and upon other conditions. Any failure of the concrete portion of the vault will result also in failure of the asphalt inner lining and such inner lining may also fail as a result of water penetration of the concrete portion of the vault without an actual structural failure thereof.

Concrete is susceptible to deterioration, and in soils containing an alkali, which condition exists in many parts of the United States, this deterioration may be quite rapid, and deterioration may be caused by alternate freezing and thawing in the presence of moisture. The use of reinforcing materials such as are placed in the Wilbert vault adds little, if anything, to the strength of the vault, its principal value being to prevent the concrete from falling apart if fractured. The resistance to deterioration of concrete buried in the earth is determined by the quality of the concrete, the type of soil, the amount of moisture, temperatures to which subjected, and other factors which vary widely throughout the country. There is a limit to the resistance of the vault to earth pressure, as demonstrated by the vault failures hereinbefore mentioned. The quality of any concrete structure is greatly affected by the quality, quantity, and type of materials used, and by the manner in which it is made and cured after manufacture. How long any given vault will endure without cracking, crushing, or otherwise failing is necessarily dependent not only upon the vault itself but upon whether it is placed in a favorable or unfavorable situation after interment, and it is concluded that the Wilbert vault under varying conditions of interment would not invariably be either airtight or waterproof, eternally or for 50 years or any other fixed period of time, and that if the concrete happened to be of poor quality or the vault interred under unfavorable conditions it might easily fail and permit the entrance of water, as is shown to have actually occurred, within a period of a few years or less.

It is further found that the Wilbert vault has no distinctive feature making it sweatproof, in that the condition referred to as sweating is caused by condensation of moisture to as sweating is caused by condensation of moisture in the air upon a surface with which it is in contact as a result of changing temperatures. The metal parts of the Wilbert vault which protrude on the outside of said vault are, when interred, exposed to conditions which cause rusting and will rust, creating a tendency to permit the progressive passage of water between them and the concrete into the interior of the vault.

Respondents in their advertising and sales representations refer to the 3/8-inch inner lining made of asphalt and attached to the concrete portion of the Wilbert vault as an "inner" vault, and sometimes to the vault itself as a "dual" vault. The term "vault" in the connection used by respondents imports and implies a burial chamber suitable for the purpose intended. The 3/8-inch asphalt lining of the Wilbert vault is not separately suitable or adapted for use as a burial chamber and reference to it as an inner vault, or to the entire Wilbert vault as a dual vault, is misleading and has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive.

Respondents frequently in marking and designating the Wilbert vault use the phrase "Wilbert Asphalt Waterproof Inner Vault" in large letters with thereunder the words "United with Reinforced Concrete Outer Vault" in type so small as frequently to be illegible.

Respondents, in order to induce the purchase of Wilbert vaults, have advertised and represented such vaults as "Asphalt Waterproof Vaults" and such references are misleading and deceptive in that in substance the Wilbert vault is a concrete vault lined with asphalt, whereas the term "Asphalt Waterproof Vault" imports and implies that the entire vault is in major part, if not entirely, made of asphalt, which is a substantially more expensive material than concrete.

PAR. 7. Respondent Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., in February 1938 entered into an arrangement with the Aetna Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn., respecting indemnification for losses under a guarantee of Wilbert burial vaults and subsequently entered into contracts with its licensees under which a standard form of guarantee would be issued to purchasers of Wilbert vaults warranting:

* * * that said vault interred in said cemetery is Air Tight and Water Resisting, that earth weight will not crush it, and that no water from the outside will enter it after the cover has been properly placed and sealed. Should this vault, after proper installation, be crushed by earth weight, or if water should enter it, then the National Affiliation of Wilbert Vault Manufacturers will pay actual damages to repair or replace vault, casket, and clothing to a maximum gross cost not to exceed $500.00. The National Affiliation of Wilbert Vault Manufacturers hereby reserve the right to inspect and pass on all replacements made in accordance with its promise hereinbefore stated, * * *.

The contract between respondent Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., and Aetna Insurance Co., provided that the latter would indemnify the former, for the benefit of its licensees within the limits of the contract, for such sum or sums as they might be required to pay under the terms of the above guarantee. This contract of insurance contains a provision:

If at any time the losses paid hereunder should amount to more than 25% of the total paid premium, this Company retains the right to cancel any and all certificates of insurance issued hereunder (in accordance with the provisions thereof). Pro rata return premium, if any, shall be allowed the Assured on demand on all certificates cancelled by this Company.

The policy also contains a provision premitting cancelation by the assured.

The above-stated form of guarantee signed by respondent Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., and by the manufacturing licensee, accompanied by a so-called certificate of insurance under the master policy above mentioned, is issued to purchasers of Wilbert vaults and the licensee pays a premium of 1 percent of the sale price of each vault, except that the minimum in any event is 50 cents, and in addition the licensee pays certain costs in connection with each certificate so issued. The contract of insurance contains a provision permitting the insurer to pay any loss to the Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., or to the holder of the certificate with respect to which the loss occurred. Each certificate issued to a purchaser contains the statement that the insurer under the terms of the master policy "retains the right to cancel this Certificate by delivering or mailing sixty (60) days written notice of such cancellation to such Certificate holder."

An official of the Aetna Insurance Co. testified with respect to the considerations taken into account before the issuance of the policy to Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., in part as follows:

Q. Did you personally or any one in your company to your knowledge, believe the Wilbert vault would remain waterproof, air-tight and moisture proof for 50 years?

A. I do not know as I cannot speak for the others and not being an engineer, myself, I do not know as that was given a great deal of thought at the time.

Q. What was given the most thought with relation to the issuance of the policy?

A. That the chance of disinterment was rather remote and on the law of averages we could make a little money on them.

Q. That was true whether the vaults performed for 50 years or not?

A. Yes.

So far as respondents are concerned the arrangement for insuring against loss on the guarantee issued by the manufacturing licensee was considered primarily as a sales plan or means of inducing and promoting the sale of Wilbert vaults, and such insurance has been featured in the advertising representations of respondents. Certain advertising representations made or procured to be made by respondents to purchasers or prospective purchasers of Wilbert burial vaults refer to the above-described insurance as "Wilbert Vault Guarantees Insured for Fifty Years," "The Burial Vault with an Insured Guarantee"; and similar representations import and imply that the manufacturers' guarantee has been insured for the benefit of purchasers of Wilbert vaults, whereas the contract with the Aetna Insurance Co. provides for indemnification of respondent Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., for the benefit of its licensees, for any payments they are required to make as a result of the guarantees issued by them and, as aforesaid, any such payment may at the election of the insurer be made to Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., or to the certificate holder. Said advertising representations do not disclose the fact that the insurance may be canceled at any time by Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., or that upon certain contingencies it may be canceled by the insurer, and in either event the so-called certificates of insurance issued to purchasers may then be canceled; but such representations import and imply that the insurance is primarily for the benefit of purchasers of Wilbert vaults and is unqualified to the extent of the guarantee for the full period of 50 years.

Respondents further advertise and represent that "The Aetna Insurance Co. investigated every phase of the Wilbert organization before accepting the responsibility of underwriting Wilbert Burial Vault guarantees. Their acceptance is a remarkable endorsement of the vault and the organization behind it." An official of the Aetna Insurance Co. testified that his company did not investigate "every phase of the Wilbert organization before accepting the responsibility of underwriting Wilbert burial vault guarantees." It is concluded from the above-quoted testimony and other evidence that the acceptance of the underwriting risk by the insurance company did not constitute "a remarkable endorsement of the vault" and such acceptance was based not upon the probable performance of the vault but principally upon the fact that in normal course relatively few disinterments might be expected to occur.

PAR. 8. The use by respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid with respect to Wilbert burial vaults has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true and that said Wilbert burial vaults possess the qualities claimed and represented and cause a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase large numbers of said Wilbert burial vaults. As a result trade has been unfairly diverted to respondents from their competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto taken before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments of counsel, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act:

It is ordered, That respondents Wilbert W. Haase Co., Inc., a corporation, American Vault Works, Inc., a corporation, and Baltimore

Concrete Products Co., a corporation trading as Baltimore Wilbert Vault Co., their officers representatives, agents, and employees; and Lee A. Wolfkill, referred to in the caption hereof as Leo Wolfkill, an individual trading as Washington Vault Works, Wilbert W. Haase, an individual, and Sidney L. Schultz, an individual, and their representatives, agents, and employees, either jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of burial vaults designated as Wilbert vaults, or any substantially similar burial vaults, in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing directly or by implication:

1. That such burial vaults composed in major part of concrete or materials other than asphalt are "asphalt" vaults.

2. That such burial vaults are "dual" vaults or that the asphalt inner lining of such vaults is an "inner vault" either by the use of the terms stated or any other term or terms of similar import or meaning.

3. That any such vault is "breakproof," or that "earth weight will not crush it," either by the use of the terms stated or any other term or terms importing or implying that such vaults are not subject to being broken or crushed under any conditions of interment.

4. That any such vault is "sweatproof"; or that any such vault constitutes an "eternal, dry underground mausoleum," either by the use of the terms stated or by in any manner representing, importing, or implying that such vault under any burial conditions will remain in sound waterproof condition, eternally or permanently, for 50 years or for any fixed or stated period of time.

5. That "the Aetna Insurance Co. investigated every phase of the Wilbert organization" before entering into a contract of insurance with respect to such vaults or that the issuance of the insurance "constitutes a remarkable endorsement of the vault," either by the use of the terms stated or any other term or terms of similar import or meaning.

6. That insurance of the guarantee of such vaults under which any protection to the vault purchaser may be terminated at the will of respondents or, upon certain contingencies, by the insurer constitutes insurance of such guarantee for 50 years or for any other fixed or stated period of time.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall, within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

NATIONAL GRAIN YEAST CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914, AND OF SUBSECS. (a) AND (c) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 3903. Complaint, Sept. 29, 1939—Decision, July 16, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture of bakers' yeast, and in the competitive interstate sale and distribution thereof—

(a) Discriminated in price between competing purchasers of its products of like grade and quality, by giving and allowing some purchasers different prices than those given and allowed other purchasers competitively engaged in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products, in thus selling its said product at differentials amounting, in some instances to 7 percent and upward, and conferring thereby upon favored customers substantial benefits, which were vital factors in competition;

(b) Discriminated in price between competing purchasers of its products by delivering to certain of them large quantities of yeast without specific charge, in addition to the yeast sold to them, while concurrently selling yeast to other purchasers at the same price for the product billed, but without delivering free additional quantities, so that the actual cost to those favored was less by 5 percent or more than the actual cost to non-favored customers; and favored customers were substantially and competitively benefited;

(c) Discriminated in price between competing purchasers by granting to certain of them cash discounts of 1 to 2 percent not granted to others who paid in the same manner and within the same time;

Result of which discriminations in price had been and might be substantially to lessen competition in the line of commerce concerned, and might be to injure, destroy, or prevent competition in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products between its purchasers who received the benefits of such discriminations and those who did not;

Held, That such discriminations in price violated subsection (a) of section 2 of an act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936; and

Where said corporation, engaged as aforesaid—

(d) Made monthly payments to various bakers' associations upon sales to members, pursuant to its policy and practice of contracting with such associations for the sale of yeast to their members at fixed prices, and for payment of commission or brokerage thereon, which inured to the benefit of the members through dividends paid them by their associations, notwithstanding no services of any sort were rendered to it by them in connection with such sales or purchases of yeast:

Held, That said commission or brokerage payments, as above set forth, violated subsection (c) of section 2 of an act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936; and

Where said corporation, engaged as aforesaid—

(e) Systematically gave and offered to give gratuities consisting of liquors, cigars, meals, money, and other personal property and entertainment of various kinds to employees of baker customers and prospective customers of it and of its competitors, secretly and without the knowledge and consent of their employers, with the purpose of inducing said employees themselves to purchase, or to induce them to influence their respective employers to purchase, its products, and to refrain, respectively, from purchasing those of its competitors;

With capacity and tendency to induce the purchase of its products by various bakers, and with effect of diverting trade from competitors to it, with resulting injury to competition in commerce:

Held, That said acts and practices in giving money and things of value, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and of its competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. P. C. Kolinski for the Commission.

Mr. Harold Goldman, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes" (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13 of the Clayton Act) as amended, and by virtue of said authority vested in it by said acts, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that National Grain Yeast Corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said Federal Trade Commission Act and subsections (a) and (c) of section 2 of said Clayton Act as amended, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. National Grain Yeast Corporation is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its principal office and place of business located at 810 Mill Street, Belleville, N. J.

PAR. 2. Respondent, since June 19, 1936, has been and now is engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of bakers' yeast. In the course and conduct of such sale and distribution it causes said yeast to be shipped and transported in commerce from its plant in the State of New Jersey to the purchasers thereof in and among the various States of the United States, and there is and has been at all times herein mentioned a current of trade and commerce in respondent's yeast between the State wherein respondent's plant is located and various other States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Said respondent in the course and conduct of its business since June 19, 1936, has been and is now in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing bakers' yeast in commerce.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid the respondent has been and now is discriminating in price between different purchasers of its said product of like grade and quality, by giving and allowing certain purchasers of bakers' yeast used in the manufacture of bread and allied products, different prices than given or allowed other of its said purchasers competitively engaged one with the other, in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products within the various States of the United States. To illustrate, during the year of 1937 respondent sold 208,400 pounds of bakers' yeast to Krug Baking Co., 138 Ninety-fourth Avenue, Jamaica, Long Island, N. Y., at 11 cents per pound, and during the same period sold Dugan Brothers, Two Hundred and Twenty-second Street and Ninety-eighth Avenue, Queens, Long Island, N. Y., a competitor, 329,850 pounds of bakers' yeast at 10 cents per pound, less 1 percent, thus affording the last mentioned purchaser a saving of $3,628.35 during said period, upon the basis of the price charged the first-mentioned purchaser. Also during the same period respondent sold Mersels Darling Bread Co., 565 Barry Street, Bronx, N. Y., 23,420 pounds of bakers' yeast at 13 cents per pound, and sold Pechter Baking Co., One Hundred and Seventy-third Street and Park Avenue, Bronx, N. Y., a competitor, 40,927 pounds of bakers' yeast at 11 cents per pound, thus affording the last-mentioned purchaser a saving of $818.54 during said period, upon the basis of price charged to first-mentioned purchaser.

PAR. 5. Further discrimination in price between different competing purchasers of its products is brought about as a result of respondent delivering large quantities of bakers' yeast to certain of its purchasers for which no specific charge is made, in addition to yeast actually sold and delivered to these same purchasers for which a specific price is charged, thus reducing the cost to said favored customers of the yeast actually purchased, while at the same time other purchasers competitively engaged in the sale of bread and allied products with the said favored purchasers and paying the same price per pound for said product, are not furnished such additional yeast. To illustrate, during the month of November 1936, Saperstein, 676 Allerton Avenue, Bronx, N. Y., purchased 350 pounds of yeast at 13 cents per pound and in addition to said purchased yeast respondent delivered 290 pounds of yeast for which no charge was made, while during the same period Lang's, 691 Allerton Avenue, Bronx, N. Y., a competitor, purchased 342 pounds of bakers' yeast at 13 cents per pound and respondent delivered no additional yeast to said purchaser without charge.

PAR. 6. Respondent further discriminates in price between competing purchasers by granting cash discounts of 1 percent to 2 percent to certain of its purchasers which are not granted to others who pay in the same manner and within the same time as those receiving such discounts.

PAR. 7. The effect of such discrimination in price as set forth in paragraphs 4, 5, and 6 hereof has been or may be substantially to lessen competition in the line of commerce in which respondent and its competitors are engaged, and may be to injure, destroy, or prevent competition in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products between those of respondent's purchasers who receive the benefits of such discriminations and competing purchasers who do not receive such benefits.

PAR. 8. The foregoing alleged acts and practices are in violation of subsection (a) of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended.

Count 2

PARAGRAPH 1. The allegations of paragraphs 1, 2, and 3 of Count 1 are hereby incorporated as though fully set forth.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent pursues a policy and practice of contracting with various bakers' associations under the terms of which contracts the said respondent sells its bakers' yeast to the members of said associations at prices fixed in said contracts and makes monthly payments to said associations of a commission or brokerage upon the sale to said members; that said payments so made inure to the benefit of the members of said associations through the payment of dividends to the members by the associations; that no services of any sort or character are rendered by said associations to respondent in connection with such sale or purchase of said yeast.

PAR. 3. The foregoing alleged acts and practices are in violation of subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended.

Count 3

PARAGRAPH 1. The allegations of paragraphs 1, 2, and 3 of Count 1 are hereby incorporated as though fully set forth.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business respondent during a period of more than 3 years last past has systematically given and offered to give gratuities consisting of liquor, cigars, meals, money, and other personal property and entertainment of various kinds to employees of bakers, both its customers and prospective customers and its competitors' customers and prospective customers, secretly and without the knowledge and consent of their employers, with the design and purpose of inducing said employees to purchase respondent's product and to refrain from purchasing the product of its competitors or to induce said employees to influence their respective employers to purchase the product of respondent and to refrain from purchasing that of respondent's competitors.

PAR. 3. The acts and practices of respondent as herein set forth are calculated to and have the capacity and tendency to induce the purchase of respondent's product by various bakers and have tended to divert trade and have diverted trade from competitors of respondent, to the respondent herein.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes," the Clayton Act, as amended by an Act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, the Robinson-Patman Act (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), the Federal Trade Commission on September 29, 1939, issued and on September 30, 1939, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the party respondent named in the caption hereof, charging it with violating the provisions of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and with violating the provisions of subsection (a) and (c) of section 2 of said Clayton Act, as amended. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations set forth in said complaint, with the exception of the illustrations therein set forth regarding specific price discriminations, and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and a stipulation as to certain facts, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, and being of the opinion that section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and subsections (a) and (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, have been violated by the respondent, now makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, National Grain Yeast Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey with its principal office and place of business located at 810 Mill Street, Belleville, N. J.

PAR. 2. Respondent, since June 19, 1936, has been and now is engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of bakers' yeast. In the course and conduct of such sale and distribution it causes its said yeast to be shipped and transported, in commerce, from its plant in the State of New Jersey to the purchasers thereof in and among the various States of the United States, and there is and has been at all times since the above date a current of trade and commerce in respondent's yeast between the State of New Jersey and various other States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Since June 19, 1936, respondent in the sale and distribution of its bakers' yeast has been, and now is, in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing bakers' yeast, in commerce.

PAR. 4. Respondent, since June 19, 1936, has discriminated in price and is now discriminating in price between different competing purchasers of its products of like grade and quality by giving and allowing some purchasers of its bakers' yeast used in the manufacture of bread and allied products different prices from those given and allowed other of its said purchasers competitively engaged one with the other in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products. In some instances respondent sold bakers' yeast of like grade and quality and in like quantities to competing customers at different prices wherein the differential between such prices amounted to 7 percent and upwards.

Par. 5. Respondent has discriminated, and is further discriminating, in price between different purchasers of its products competitively engaged in the sale of bread and allied products by delivering large quantities of its bakers' yeast, without specific charge therefor, to certain purchasers in addition to its bakers' yeast actually sold and delivered to these purchasers, thereby substantially reducing the average cost of its said yeast to such purchasers. Respondent concurrently sells its said yeast to other purchasers but does not deliver in addition to the quantities purchased yeast for which no specific charge is made, with the result that while both classes of purchasers may be charged the same price for yeast sold and billed, the actual cost to those who receive additional yeast without specific charge therefor, is less, by 5 percent or more, than the actual cost to the nonfavored customers.

PAR. 6. Respondent's acts and practices as set forth in paragraphs 4 and 5 constitute discriminations in price between its customers, and the benefits of such discriminations in price to the favored customers were substantial in nature and constituted material and vital factors of competition.

PAR. 7. Respondent has discriminated, and is now further discriminating, in price between competing customers by granting cash discounts of 1 percent to 2 percent to certain of its purchasers which are not granted to other purchasers who pay in the same manner and within the same time as those receiving such discounts.

PAR. 8. The effect of such discriminations in price described in paragraphs 4, 5, and 7 above has been and may be substantially to lessen competition in the line of commerce in which respondent and its competitors are engaged and may be to injure, destroy, or prevent competition in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products between those of respondent's purchasers who receive the benefits of such discriminations and competing purchasers who do not receive such benefits.

PAR. 9. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent pursues a policy and practice of contracting with various bakers' associations under the terms of which contracts the said respondent sells its bakers' yeast to the members of said associations at prices fixed in said contracts and makes monthly payments to said associations of a commission or brokerage upon the sales to said members. The payments made to said associations inure to the benefit of the members of such associations through the payment of dividends to the members by the associations. No services of any sort or character are rendered by said associations to respondent in connection with such sales or purchases of said yeast.

PAR. 10. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent, during a period of more than 3 years last past, has systematically given and offered to give gratuities consisting of liquors, cigars, meals, money, and other personal property and entertainment of various kinds to employees of bakers, both its customers and prospective customers, and its competitors' customers and prospective customers, secretly and without the knowledge and consent of their employers, with the design and purpose of inducing said employees to purchase respondent's product and to refrain from purchasing the product of its competitors or to induce said employees to influence their respective employers to purchase the product of respondent and to refrain from purchasing that of respondent's competitors.

PAR. 11. The acts and practices of respondent as set forth in paragraph 10 are calculated to, and have the capacity and tendency to, induce the purchase of respondent's products by various bakers, and have tended to, and do, divert trade from competitors of respondent to the respondent, with resulting injury to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The discriminations in price by respondent as hereinabove set out, and the commission or brokerage payments made under the conditions found, violate subsections (a) and (c), respectively, of section 2 of an act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936 (the Robinson-Patman Act); and the acts and practices of respondent in giving money and things of value under the circumstances found as aforesaid are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the substitute answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of said complaint with the exception of the illustrations therein set forth regarding specific price discriminations and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and a stipulation of facts filed herein, and the Commission being of the opinion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and subsections (a) and (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion, which findings as to the facts and its conclusion are hereby made a part hereof.

It is ordered, That the respondent, National Grain Yeast Corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or indirectly, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of bakers' yeast in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Clayton Act, do forthwith cease and desist from the discriminations in price as found in paragraphs 4, 5, and 7 of the findings of fact or from otherwise discriminating in price between different purchasers of bakers' yeast of like grade and quality where the effect of such discriminations may be substantially to lessen competition or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with respondent or any such purchaser unless the differential in price in any such discrimination makes only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from differing methods or quantities in which such commodities are to such purchasers sold or delivered.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, National Grain Yeast Corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the sale of bakers' yeast in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Clayton Act, do forthwith cease and desist:

1. From paying or allowing, directly or indirectly, in any manner or fashion or under any guise whatever, any commission, brokerage, or other compensation, or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof, to associations of bakers or to any of their officers, representatives, agents, or employees upon or in connection with the purchase of bakers' yeast made by members of such associations.

2. From paying or granting anything of value as a commission, brokerage, or other compensation, or any allowance or discount in lieu thereof to any purchaser on purchases for such purchaser's account or to an agent, representative or other intermediary therein where such intermediary is acting in fact for or in behalf, or is subject to the direct or indirect control, of such purchaser of respondent's goods.

It is further ordered, That respondent, National Grain Yeast Corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or indirectly, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of bakers' yeast in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from giving or paying money or other things of value to employees of its customers or prospective customers, without the knowledge or consent of such customers, as payments for having induced or recommended the use of respondent's yeast by their employers, or for the purpose of inducing such employees to purchase or to recommend the purchase of respondent's yeast for use by their employers.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, National Grain Yeast Corporation, shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

A. M. DRUCKMAN, DOING BUSINESS AS LINCOLN CHAIR & NOVELTY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4445. Complaint, Jan. 10, 1941—Decision, July 16, 1941

Where an individual engaged, as pretended manufacturer, in offer and interstate sale and distribution to retailers, of wooden furniture and allied items which he caused to be transported from the factories where made, bearing labels and shipping tags of Lincoln Chair & Novelty Co., trade name employed by him, and shipped to purchasers under his bill of lading;

In advertisements in trade magazines, catalogs, and circulars distributed to retailers, recognizing a preference on the part of purchasers for dealing directly with a manufacturer—

(a) Represented and implied that said Lincoln Chair & Novelty Co., made the merchandise in question, and that it maintained, controlled or operated factories for such purposes in Massachusetts, New York, Indiana, and Missouri, through such statements as "We make a complete line of: Sunroom Suites, Dinette Suites," etc., and "FACTORIES: Gardner, Mass., Jamestown, N. Y., Richmond, Ind., Springfield, Mo.," and "* * * shipped f. o. b. our New York State Plant" or "* * * our Missouri Plant"; and

(b) Represented that the offices for such factories were located at its business address in New York City, through such statements as "EXECUTIVE OFFICES. 146 West 46th Street, New York, N. Y." following or adjacent to enumeration of its supposed factories, and statements in catalogs and circulars that, while all merchandise was shipped f. o. b. factory, all correspondence and orders were to be directed to the executive offices in New York City;

Facts being the merchandise thus advertised was not made by such Lincoln Chair & Novelty Co., he did not own, operate, or control any furniture factories making it, and was not connected with any which maintained executive offices at his business address in New York City;

With effect of causing a substantial number of the purchasing public to believe that he was the manufacturer of the merchandise offered and sold by him, whereby many prospective purchasers had been and were likely to be influenced and induced to purchase from him the products so represented:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the injury and prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Eldon P. Schrup for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that A. M. Druckman, an individual, trading and doing business under the name and style of Lincoln Chair & Novelty Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent A. M. Druckman, an individual, is a furniture distributor trading and doing business under the name and style of Lincoln Chair & Novelty Co., with his office and place of business located at 146 West Forty-sixth Street, New York, N. Y.

Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the business of the offering for sale and the sale to retail dealers of wooden furniture and allied items made in and obtained from factories not owned, controlled, or operated by the respondent.

Respondent's method of doing business is to offer such merchandise for sale under the name of the Lincoln Chair & Novelty Co. as the maker, in advertisements inserted in trade magazines having interstate circulation and in catalogs and circulars distributed through the mails by respondent, to retail dealers located throughout the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent, in response to and in fulfillment of orders thereby obtained and caused to be transmitted to respondent's New York business address, causes such merchandise, when sold, to be transported from the factory or factories wherein made, to the purchasers of the same located in a State or States other than the State or States wherein such shipments originated or in the District of Columbia.

Merchandise so advertised, offered for sale, and sold by respondent and shipped to purchasers by said factories on respondent's order, bears the labels and shipping tags of the Lincoln Chair & Novelty Co. and is shipped under respondent's bill of lading. Said merchandise, upon shipment, is billed to the respondent by said factories and the respondent in turn then bills his customers.

Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said wooden furniture and allied items in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent in the conduct of his business in the course of trade in commerce as aforesaid, has inserted and caused to be inserted in trade magazines having interstate circulation various advertisements containing, among other things, with reference to the merchandise offered for sale and sold by the Lincoln Chair & Novelty Co., the following statements:

* * * * * * *

We make a complete line of:

Sunroom Suites	Boudoir Chairs
Dinette Suites	Cricket Chairs
Bedroom Suites	Juvenile Chairs
Tables	Novelties

(Picture of Table and specifications)

PAR. 3. Respondent, in the conduct of his business in the course of trade in commerce as aforesaid, has distributed and caused to be distributed through the mails and otherwise to retail dealers located throughout the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia certain catalogs and circulars advertising the merchandise offered for sale and sold by the Lincoln Chair & Novelty Co., and containing, among others, with reference to said merchandise, the following statements:

Most of the numbers in this circular are made at our plant at Gardner, Mass., although we are illustrating a few numbers that are made at our associate plants located in Missouri and New York States.

* * * * * * *

These items are shipped f. o. b., our New York State Plant.

* * * * * * *

These items are shipped f. o. b., our Missouri Plant.

Said catalogs and circulars also state that while all merchandise is shipped f. o. b., factory, all correspondence and orders are to be directed to our executive offices in New York City.

PAR. 4. Respondent through and by the use of the statements hereinabove set forth in paragraphs 2 and 3, supra, and by means of other statements similar thereto not specifically set out herein, represents and implies and causes to be represented and implied to prospective purchasers and purchasers of the merchandise so advertised, offered for sale and sold by respondent, that the Lincoln Chair & Novelty Co. makes such merchandise; that said company maintains, controls, or operates factories for such purpose in Massachusetts, New York, Indiana, and Missouri, and that the executive offices for said factories are located at the respondent's business address, 146 West Forty-sixth Street, New York, N. Y.

The statements, representations, and implications made and caused to be made by respondent as aforesaid, are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact the merchandise so advertised, offered for sale and sold by respondent is not made by the Lincoln Chair & Novelty Co., nor does respondent or said company own, operate, or control any furniture factories wherein the said merchandise is made. Further, the respondent or the Lincoln Chair & Novelty Co. is not connected with nor are there any furniture factories who maintain their executive offices at respondent's business address at 146 West Forty-sixth Street, New York, N. Y., for respondent has at such address only a small office or offices wherein respondent's business transactions are carried on in the manner and method as hereinbefore described.

PAR. 5. Respondent's aforesaid statements, representations, and implications made and disseminated as aforedescribed have had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial number of prospective purchasers and purchasers into the erroneous and mistaken belief and impression that the statements, representations, and implications as contained in respondent's said advertisments in trade magazines and in respondent's said catalog and circular advertisements are true, and many of such prospective purchasers and purchasers have been and are likely to be thereby influenced and induced, both directly and indirectly, to purchase from respondent the merchandise so advertised.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the respondent and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on January 10, 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, A. M. Druckman, an individual, trading and doing business under the name and style of Lincoln Chair & Novelty Co., charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint the respondent filed his answer thereto, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, A. M. Druckman, an individual, is a furniture distributor trading and doing business under the name and style of Lincoln Chair & Novelty Co., with his office and place of business formerly located at 146 West Forty-sixth Street, New York, N. Y., but now at 142 East Thirty-second Street, New York, N. Y.

Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in offering for sale and selling wooden furniture and allied items to retail dealers located throughout the United States. Respondent offers such merchandise for sale as a manufacturer thereof under the name Lincoln Chair & Novelty Co. In response to and in fulfillment of orders obtained, respondent causes such merchandise when sold to be transported from the factory or factories where such merchandise is manufactured to the purchasers thereof located in States other than the State wherein such shipments of merchandise originate and in the District of Columbia.

Merchandise so advertised, offered for sale, and sold by respondent and shipped to purchasers by said factories on respondent's order, bears the labels and shipping tags of the Lincoln Chair & Novelty Co. and is shipped under respondent's bill of lading. Said merchandise, upon shipment, is billed to the respondent by said factories and the respondent in turn then bills his customers.

Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said wooden furniture and allied items in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent, in the conduct of his said business in commerce as aforesaid, has inserted in trade magazines circulated among retailers various advertisements containing, among other things, the following representations and statements:

* * * * * * *

We make a complete line of:

Sunroom Suites	Boudoir Chairs
Dinette Suites	Cricket Chairs
Bedroom Suites	Juvenile Chairs
Tables	Novelties

(Picture of Table and specifications)

* * * * * * *

Jamestown, N. Y.
Richmond, Ind.
Springfield, Mo.

LINCOLN CHAIR & NOVELTY CO.
EXECUTIVE OFFICES.
146 West 46th Street, New York, N. Y.

PAR. 3. Respondent, in the conduct of his said business in said commerce as aforesaid, has distributed and caused to be distributed through the mails and otherwise to retail dealers located at various points in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia certain catalogs and circulars advertising said merchandise which contain, among others, the following representations and statements:

Most of the numbers in this circular are made at our plant at Gardner, Mass., although we are illustrating a few numbers that are made at our associate plants located in Missouri and New York states.

These items are shipped f. o. b., our New York State Plant.
These items are shipped f. o. b., our Missouri Plant.

Said catalogs and circulars also state that while all merchandise is shipped f. o. b. factory, all correspondence and orders are to be directed to the executive offices in New York City.

PAR. 4. Respondent through and by the use of the statements hereinabove set forth, and by means of other statements similar thereto not specifically set out herein, represents and implies to prospective purchasers and purchasers of the merchandise so advertised, offered for sale, and sold by respondent, that the Lincoln Chair & Novelty Co. makes such merchandise; that said company maintains, controls, or operates factories for such purpose in Massachusetts, New York, Indiana, and Missouri, and that the executive offices for said factories are located at the respondent's business address in New York City.

The statements, representations, and implications made and caused to be made by respondent as aforesaid are deceptive, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact the merchandise so advertised, offered for sale, and sold by respondent is not made by the Lincoln Chair & Novelty Co., nor does respondent or said company own, operate, or control any furniture factories wherein the said merchandise is made. The respondent is not connected with any furniture factory which maintains executive offices at respondent's business address in New York City.

PAR. 5. The Commission concludes from the elaborate plan followed by respondent to conceal from his customers the fact that he is not the manufacturer of products offered for sale and sold by him that he recognizes a preference on the part of purchasers for dealing directly with a manufacturer and, therefore, the inducing value of his false representations that he is the manufacturer of the products offered for sale and sold by him. The acts and practices of respondent have had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead a substantial number of the purchasing public and cause them to believe that respondent is the manufacturer of the merchandise offered for sale and sold by him. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief many prospective purchasers and purchasers have been, and are likely to be, influenced and induced thereby to purchase from respondent the products so advertised and represented.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent as herein described are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent A. M. Druckman, an individual, trading and doing business under the name and style of Lincoln Chair & Novelty Co., or any other name, his agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of furniture in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing directly or by implication:

1. That respondent is the manufacturer of products which are not made or manufactured in a plant owned and operated or directly and absolutely controlled by him.

2. That respondent's business address is the executive office of factories located elsewhere.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

REPUBLIC YEAST CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SUBSEC. (A) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 4367. Complaint, Oct. 30, 1940—Decision, July 18, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture of bakers' yeast, and in the competitive interstate sale and distribution thereof—

(a) Discriminated in price between competing purchasers of its said product of like grade and quality, through different prices allowed or extended, making use, among other things, of a pricing policy under which its said yeast was sold to customers competitively engaged in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products, who purchased approximately equivalent quantities and at concurrent periods of time, at prices of 10, 11, 12, 13, and 14 cents per pound;

(b) Discriminated in price between purchasers by furnishing to certain of them free of charge with their purchases, large quantities of its yeast in varying amounts, so that customers purchasing quantities ranging from 78 pounds to 1,554 pounds at prices ranging from 12 to 10 cents secured their yeast at actual costs ranging from 3.4 to 5.8 cents; while contemporaneously selling its yeast to other customers, competitively engaged with those thus favored, at prices of 10, 11, and 12 cents a pound, but with no free product furnished therewith; and

(c) Discriminated between competing purchasers by granting to certain of them cash discounts of 1 or 2 percent, which it did not grant to others who paid in the same manner and within the same time as those so favored;

Result of which discriminations in price, under which beneficiaries were given substantial advantages constituting vital factors in competition, and not falling within the saving provisos of the Act in question, might be substantially to injure competition in the line of commerce involved, and also to injure competition between those of its purchasers in the baking industry who received the discriminatory benefits and those who did not:

Held, That said corporation, by so discriminating in price between different competing purchasers of its said bakers' yeast of like grade and quality violated the provisions of section 2 (a) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

Mr. P. C. Kolinski for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the party respondent named in the caption hereof and hereinafter more particularly designated and described, since June 19, 1936, has violated and is now violating the provisions of subsection (a) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges with respect thereto as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Republic Yeast Corporation is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, having its principal office and plant located at 740 Frelinghuysen Avenue, Newark, N. J. Prior to December 1, 1939, respondent's corporate name was Brass Yeast Corporation.

PAR. 2. Respondent since June 19, 1936, has been and is now engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of bakers' yeast. In the course and conduct of such sale and distribution it causes said yeast to be shipped and transported in commerce from its plant in the State of New Jersey to purchasers thereof in and among the various States of the United States and there has been at all times herein mentioned a current of trade and commerce in respondent's yeast between the State wherein respondent's plant is located and various other States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Said respondent in the course and conduct of its business since June 19, 1936, has been and is now in substantial competition with other corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in manufacturing, selling, and distributing bakers' yeast in commerce.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid the respondent has been and now is discriminating in price between different purchasers of its said product, of like grade and quality, by giving and allowing certain purchasers of bakers' yeast used in the manufacture of bread and allied products, different prices than given or allowed other of its said purchasers competitively engaged with such favored purchasers in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products within the various States of the United States. Among the methods used by respondent in accomplishing such discrimination has been a pricing policy under which its product has been sold to customers competitively engaged, in approximately equivalent quantities and at concurrent periods of time at prices of 10, 11, 12, 13, and 14 cents per pound.

PAR. 5. Further discrimination in price between different competing purchasers of its product is brought about as a result of respondent making free delivery of large quantities of bakers' yeast to certain of its purchasers. Such receipt of free yeast reduces the cost to such favored purchasers of the yeast purchased by them, while at the same time other purchasers competitively engaged with said favored purchasers and paying the same price per pound for said product are not furnished such additional free yeast. In accomplishing this discrimination respondent has made free deliveries of yeast ranging in amount per customer from 20 pounds to 1,121 pounds per month. In the case of some of these free deliveries, the cost of yeast has been reduced to favored purchasers in this manner: One customer purchasing 247 pounds of yeast at 12 cents per pound received 316 additional pounds of yeast free of charge, reducing the cost per pound of yeast actually purchased to 5.2 cents; another customer purchasing 1,554 pounds of yeast at 10 cents per pound received 1,121 additional pounds of yeast free of charge, reducing the cost per pound of yeast actually purchased to 5.8 cents; another customer purchasing 78 pounds of yeast at 12 cents per pound received 193 additional pounds of yeast free of charge, reducing the cost per pound of yeast actually purchased to 3.4 cents; and another customer purchasing 158½ pounds of yeast at 11 cents per pound, received 248 additional pounds of yeast free of charge, reducing the cost per pound of yeast actually purchased to 4.2 cents. At the time of these free deliveries of yeast, respondent sold yeast to other of its customers competitively engaged with those receiving free deliveries of yeast at price of 10, 11, and 12 cents per pound, and did not accompany such sales with deliveries of free yeast.

PAR. 6. Respondent further discriminates in price between competing purchasers by granting cash discounts of 1 percent and 2 percent to certain of its purchasers which are not granted to other purchasers who pay in the same manner and within the same time as those receiving such discounts.

PAR. 7. The effect of such discriminations in price as set forth in paragraphs 4, 5, and 6 hereof may be substantially to injure competition in the line of commerce in which respondent and its competitors are engaged, and also to injure competition with those of respondent's purchasers in the baking industry who receive the benefits of such discriminations.

PAR. 8. The foregoing alleged acts and practices are in violation of subsection (a) of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes"—the Clayton Act—as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936—the Robinson-Patman Act—(U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), the Federal Trade Commission, on the 30th of October 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Republic Yeast Corporation, charging it with violation of the provisions of subsection (a) of section 2 of the said act as amended. After the issuance and service of said complaint the respondent filed its answer, in which it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts.

Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Republic Yeast Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its principal office and place of business located at 740 Frelinghuysen Avenue, Newark, N. J.

PAR. 2. Respondent, since June 19, 1936, has been and now is engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of bakers' yeast. In the course and conduct of its said business it causes its said yeast to be shipped and transported in commerce from its plant in the State of New Jersey to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States, and there is, and has been at all times since the above date, a current of trade and commerce in respondent's yeast between the State of New Jersey and various other States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Respondent, since June 19, 1936, in the sale and distribution of its bakers' yeast, has been and now is in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the business of manufacturing bakers' yeast and selling and distributing same to the purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of origin of such shipments.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, the respondent has been, and now is, discriminating in price between different purchasers of its said product of like grade and quality, by giving and allowing certain purchasers of its bakers' yeast, used in the manufacture of bread and allied products, different prices than given or allowed other of its said purchasers competitively engaged with such favored purchasers in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products within the various States of the United States. Among the methods used by respondent in accomplishing such discrimination has been a pricing policy under which its product has been sold to customers competitively engaged, in approximately equivalent quantities and at concurrent periods of time, at prices of 10, 11, 12, 13, and 14 cents per pound.

PAR. 5. Respondent, since June 19, 1936, has further discriminated and now discriminates in price between purchasers of its products, by furnishing to certain of its customers referred to in paragraph 4 hereof, free of charge with their purchases, large quantities of its yeast; such receipt of free yeast reduces the cost to such favored purchasers of the yeast purchased by them, while at the same time other purchasers, competitively engaged with said favored purchasers and paying the same price per pound for said product, are not furnished such additional free yeast. In accomplishing this discrimination, respondent has furnished, free of charge to its favored customers, yeast ranging in amounts per customer from 20 pounds to 1,121 pounds per month, and the cost of yeast to customers so favored has been reduced in the following manner:

One customer purchasing 247 pounds of yeast at 12 cents per pound, received 316 additional pounds of yeast free of charge, reducing the cost per pound of yeast actually purchased to 5.2 cents;

Another customer purchasing 1,554 pounds of yeast at 10 cents per pound, received 1,121 additional pounds of yeast free of charge, reducing the cost of yeast actually purchased to 5.8 cents;

Another customer purchasing 78 pounds of yeast at 12 cents per pound received 193 additional pounds of yeast free of charge, reducing the cost of yeast actually purchased, per pound to 3.4 cents;

Another customer purchasing 158½ pounds of yeast at 11 cents per pound, received 248 additional pounds of yeast free of charge, reducing the cost per pound of yeast actually purchased to 4.2 cents.

At the time of furnishing yeast free of charge, respondent sold yeast to other of its customers referred to in paragraph 4 hereof, who were competitively engaged with those receiving the free yeast, at prices of 10, 11, and 12 cents per pound, and did not furnish free yeast with such sales.

PAR. 6. Respondent has further discriminated and now discriminates between purchasers referred to in paragraph 4 hereof, by granting cash discounts of 1 percent or 2 percent to certain of said purchasers which it does not grant to other of its said purchasers who pay in the same manner and within the same time as those receiving such discounts.

PAR. 7. Respondent's acts and practices as set forth in paragraphs 4, 5, and 6 hereof, constitute discriminations in price between its said customers and the advantages given the beneficiaries of such discriminations were and are substantial in nature and constitute material and vital factors in competition.

PAR. 8. The effect of such discrimination in price as set forth in paragraphs 4, 5, and 6 hereof, may be substantially to injure competition in the line of commerce in which the respondent and its competitors are engaged, and also to injure competition between those of respondent's purchasers in the baking industry who receive the benefits of such discriminations and those purchasers who are not so favored.

PAR. 9. The respondent does not contend, either in its answer or otherwise, that the discrimination charged in the complaint and admitted in its answer come within any of the provisos or exceptions contained in said act of Congress (title 15, sec. 13, of the Clayton Act as amended).

CONCLUSION

The respondent, Republic Yeast Corporation, having by its answer admitted the material facts charged in the complaint, the Commission concludes that said respondent, by discriminating in price between different competing purchasers of its bakers' yeast of like grade and quality, in the manner set forth in paragraphs 4, 5, and 6 hereof, has violated and is violating the provisions of section 2 (a) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13).

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of section 2 (a) of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13).

It is ordered, That the respondent Republic Yeast Corporation, its officers, directors, representatives, agents, and employees, jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of bakers' yeast in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Clayton Act, do forthwith cease and desist:

From the discriminations in price as found in paragraphs 4, 5 and 6 of the findings of fact, or otherwise discriminating in price between different purchasers of its bakers' yeast of like grade and quality, where the effect of such discrimination may be substantially to lessen competition, or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with respondent or any such purchaser, unless the differential in price in any such discrimination makes only due allowance for difference in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from different methods or quantities in which said commodities are to such purchasers sold or delivered.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Republic Yeast Corporation, shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist herein set forth.

IN THE MATTER OF

EDUCATORS ASSOCIATION, INC., ET AL.

MODIFIED CEASE AND DESIST ORDER

Docket 3139. Order, July 23, 1941

Modified order, pursuant to provisions of section 5 (i) of Federal Trade Commission Act, in proceeding in question, in which (1) Commission, on March 9, 1939, 28 F. T. C. 1006, made its findings and conclusion, and issued cease and desist order, and (2) Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, on March 24, 1941, in Educators Association, Inc., et al. v. Federal Trade Commission, 118 F. (2d) 562, 32 F. T. C. 1870, issued its decree modifying paragraph (1) of said order and affirming all other paragraphs thereof, and directed Commission to modify its order accordingly—

Requiring respondent corporation, its officers, etc., and various other individuals, individually and trading under trade name and style of Educators Association, their representatives, etc., in connection with offer, etc., in commerce, of a students' reference book entitled "The Volume Library," forthwith to cease and desist from (1) using the words "Educators Association" as a corporate or trade name, or otherwise in aforesaid connection, etc., except when qualified as in said order set forth; (2) representing to prospective representatives that they will refund deposits or pay any specific sums of money or salaries to them without adequately and fully disclosing all terms and conditions; and (3) representing or implying that they or their representatives, etc., are connected in any manner with public schools, etc., or that said or other similar publication is prescribed as a textbook or required to be used in connection with school work.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding is coming on for further hearing before the Federal Trade Commission, and it appearing on March 9, 1939, the Commission made its findings as to the facts herein and concluded therefrom that the respondents had violated the provisions of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and issued and subsequently served its order to cease and desist; and it further appearing that on March 24, 1941, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit issued its decree modifying paragraph 1 of the aforesaid order of the Commission, and affirming all other paragraphs of the aforesaid order, and directed the Commission to modify its aforesaid order to cease and desist in accordance with the aforesaid decree;

Now, therefore, Pursuant to the provisions of subsection (i) of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Commission issues this its modified order to cease and desist in conformity with the said court decree.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Educators Association, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and the respondents, Leo L. Tully, Oron E. Richards, and Donald W. Henry, individually and as officers of Educators Association, Inc., Miss Marian A. Miller, Mrs. B. M. Gambert, Mrs. Marie C. Hostler, Mr. J. E. Stronks, Mr. H. Lyle Goldsberry, Mr. J. R. Hostler, Mr. J. P. Tully, Mrs. M. W. Lees, Mrs. Bessie Morrell, each individually, and trading under the trade name and style of Educators Association, their representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of a students' reference book entitled "The Volume Library," in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, forthwith cease and desist:

1. From using the words "Educators Association" as a corporate or trade name, or otherwise, in connection with the offering for sale or sale of "The Volume Library" or other books distributed for profit: Provided however, That the petitioners may continue to offer for sale and sell said book or books under the trade-name "Educators Association" so long only as they shall in each instance of the use of said trade-name in spoken, written, or printed form, or by radio broadcast, accompany said trade-name with a statement of equal conspicuousness and in immediate connection and conjunction therewith in the following words, to wit: "Commercial Distributors of The Volume Library": And Provided Further, That in each instance of the use of the corporate name "Educators Association, Inc." in carrying on its said corporate business, whether in spoken, written, or printed form, or by radio broadcast, said corporate name shall be accompanied with a statement of equal conspicuousness and in immediate connection and conjunction therewith in the following words, to wit: "Commercial Publishers of The Volume Library."

2. Representing to prospective representatives that they will refund deposits or pay any specific sums of money or salaries to such representatives until and unless they fully and adequately disclose all of the terms and conditions upon which refunds or payments are actually made.

3. From representing or implying that they or their representatives, agents, or canvassers are connected in any manner with public schools or other educational institutions, or that said Volume Library, or any other and similar publication, is prescribed as a text book or required to be used in connection with school work.

IN THE MATTER OF

DAVID S. WRIGHT, DOING BUSINESS AS LAKE SHORE SEED COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3994. Complaint, Jan. 19, 1940—Decision, July 23, 1941

Where an individual engaged in packaging, and in competitive interstate sale and distribution of, vegetable and garden seeds, in the course of which he required from leading supplier-growers, from which he purchased, invoices showing high laboratory tests in all cases and, in addition, submitted seeds to the National Seed Laboratory for testing and made tests himself in mechanical germinators and in the fields, all of which tests showed high germinal powers; reselling, along with new seed, seed which he had theretofore sold to dealers and which he took off their hands at the end of the season—

(a) Represented that seeds contained in certain packages would germinate in approximate percentages through causing to be stamped upon or attached thereto statements of their germination percentage and the month and year of the test on which such percentage was based; and

(b) Represented also that his seeds would meet or exceed the published standard percentage of germination established by certain States in which he sold the same;

When in fact many of his said packages contained seeds of a much lower percentage of germination than that represented on packages or otherwise, as disclosed by various tests conducted by the States in question over a period of years, and action taken by said States with respect thereto;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that his seeds would germinate in the percentages represented, and into purchase thereof, in consequence of such belief, to the injury and prejudice of the public, whereby trade was unfairly diverted to him from his competitors who do not misrepresent the germination percentages of their seeds; to their substantial injury:

Held, That such acts and practices constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.
Mr. Morton Nesmith for the Commission.
Woodin & Woodin, of Dunkirk, N. Y., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that David S. Wright, an individual, doing business as Lake Shore Seed Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, David S. Wright, is an individual doing business as Lake Shore Seed Co., with his principal office and place of business located in the city of Dunkirk, State of New York.

PAR. 2. The respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in packing and distributing vegetable and garden seed. Respondent causes said vegetable and garden seed, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. At all times mentioned herein, respondent has maintained a course of trade in said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Other persons, firms, associations, and corporations have been and are engaged in offering for sale and selling, and transporting in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, like and competitive seed, and respondent is engaged in substantial competition with such concerns in the sale and distribution of such seed in commerce, as herein set forth.

PAR. 3. Respondent purchases vegetable and garden seed from various growers and, at his place of business in New York, packs such seed in small paper packages. The packages are then placed on wooden racks owned by respondent and are distributed to various local merchants in States other than the State of New York.

Certain of the States of the United States, including some of those in which respondent distributes and sells his seed, require by statute or statutes that vegetable seed sold in such States in addition to other requirements must contain a statement on the package as to the approximate percentage of germination and the month and year of the test on which the percentage is based, unless the germination percentage is equal to or higher than the percentage established for that particular variety of seed by the State authorities. A seed is considered to have germinated when it has developed into a normal seedling which might be expected to continue its development in soil under favorable conditions.

Respondent has caused to be stamped upon or attached to certain of the packages of seed distributed by him statements as to the germination percentage thereof and the month and year of the test on which such percentage is based. This stamping, or affixing, of such statement on the packages, constitutes a representation by the respondent that the seed will meet or exceed the published standard percentage of germination permitted by the respective States for that particular year. Further, the stamping, or affixing, of such statement on the package is a representation by the respondent that the seed contained therein will germinate in the approximate percentages as stamped thereon.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact many packages of respondent's seed sold by him as aforesaid, do not, and did not, possess the percentage of germination stated on the packages, but contained seed of a much lower percentage of germination.

PAR. 5. The acts and practices of the respondent, as herein set forth, have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent's seed will germinate in the percentages as represented, and that his seed has a higher percentage of germination than the actual germination of the seed under recognized tests and within recognized tolerances or allowances. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief so engendered, a substantial portion of the purchasing public have been, and are, induced to purchase respondent's seed, thereby unfairly diverting trade to the respondent from his aforesaid competitors who do not make false or misleading statements and representations concerning the germination percentage of their seed. As a result substantial injury has been done by respondent to such competitors in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

By use of such practices the respondent has also placed in the hands of uninformed or unscrupulous dealers a means and instrumentality whereby such dealers have been, and are, enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

tices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Morton Nesmith, attorney for the Commission, and evidence in opposition to the allegations of the complaint was introduced by G. W. Wooding, attorney for respondent, before Randolph Preston, duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, the report of the trial examiner thereon, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent David S. Wright is an individual, doing business as Lake Shore Seed Company, with his principal place of business located in the city of Dunkirk, in the State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of packing, selling, and distributing vegetable and garden seeds, and causes his products, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent, at all times mentioned herein, has maintained a course of trade and commerce in said products between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. During all of the time referred to herein, respondent has been in substantial competition with other persons, firms, associations, and corporations engaged in the offering for sale and the sale and distribution in commerce between and among various States of the United States of products of a similar nature to those sold by the respondent.

PAR. 4. Respondent purchases the vegetable and garden seeds sold by him from various growers, and packs such seed in small paper packages, some of which are placed on wooden racks owned by respondent, and when so packed are transported to various local merchants throughout the State of New York. Respondent also sells and distributes his products to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States.

At the close of the planting season, respondent's dealer customers are authorized to return the unsold seeds to respondent and receive credit therefor, and more than 50 percent of each year's sales of seed are picked up by respondent's salesmen and returned to respondent, who cleans the seeds and separates them from the chaff, and the same seed, together with new seed, are resold the next season.

PAR. 5. A number of the States into which respondent ships his products, during all the time herein referred to, have had statutes relating to the sale and distribution of vegetable and garden seeds, which require the authorities of such States to establish standards as to the percentage of germination of the seeds sold in such States. Said statutes also provided that each package of seeds sold within the State shall contain thereon the approximate percentage of germination and the month and year of the test on which the percentage is based, unless the germination percentage is equal to, or higher than, the percentage established for that particular variety of seed by the State authorities.

PAR. 6. Respondent purchases the seeds sold by him from the leading growers of the world, and requires invoices showing that the laboratory tests were in all cases high; in addition, respondent has submitted such seeds to the National Seed Laboratory for testing, and report from this Laboratory shows that the seeds have high germinal powers. Respondent has also tested seed sold by him in mechanical germinators and also in the field. Such tests showed the seed to have high germinal powers.

PAR. 7. Respondent in certain instances has caused to be stamped upon, or attached to, the packages of seed distributed by him, statements of the germination percentage thereof and the month and year of the test on which such percentage is based. The stamping or affixing of such statement on the packages constitutes a representation by respondent that the seeds contained in such packages will germinate in the approximate percentages stated on such packages. The respondent has also represented that his seeds will meet or exceed the published standard percentage of germination established by certain States in which he has sold such seeds. In fact, many packages of respondent's seeds sold by him as aforesaid did not and do not possess the percentage of germination represented on the packages thereof, or otherwise, but contained seeds of a much lower percentage of germination.

Findings

PAR. 8. The Department of Agriculture of the State of Virginia, in the year 1933, secured 128 samples of respondent's products from retail dealers located in said State, and after testing same found that 71.09 percent of the seed was equal to or better than the Virginia standard; 22.6 percent was more than 10 percent below the Virginia standard, and 2.34 percent showed less than 20 percent of germination.

The following table shows the results of tests made for the years 1935 to 1940, inclusive by the Department of Agriculture of the State of Virginia:

Year	Number of samples	Equal to or better than Virginia standards	More than 10 percent below Virginia standards	Less than 20 percent germination
		Percent	Percent	Percent
1935	649	67.95	28.35	9.09
1936	233	12.88	83.69	13.73
1937	258	61.63	36.82	3.49
1938	114	73.68	24.56	2.63
1939	287	50.17	48.08	10.45
1940	105	19.05	80.00	13.33

As the result of these tests, the Department wrote respondent:

> It is our sincere hope that if it is your policy to continue to attempt to put out seed of this quality, that you forego any further effort in this State.

The Department seized a number of packages of respondent's seeds, because of their consistently poor showing as to germination.

The Department of Agriculture of the State of Michigan, in 1938, tested 245 samples of respondent's seeds, to determine their germinal power. The tests showed that in but 16.8 percent were the samples up to the standard of germination set by said department. It was also shown that respondent's seeds were inferior to the seeds of the 34 other concerns which were tested at the same time. The other tests ranged in results from 100 percent to 35.3 percent.

The said department, in the year 1938, seized certain seed distributed by respondent, because they did not comply with the State's requirement as to standard percentage of germination.

The Department of Agriculture of the State of West Virginia, during the years 1934 to and including 1939, made numerous tests of respondent's seeds to determine their germinal power. A test, made in 1939, showed that seed represented by respondent as of 90 percent germination had only 18 percent. In another instance, the claim made by respondent was 70 percent and the test showed only 31 percent; another test showed that for a claim of 72 percent there was only 31 percent.

In 1939, the testing of 65 samples of respondent's product showed that 70 percent were low in the germination stated on the packages, and 30 percent showed the germination claimed. In the year 1934–35, tests showed that of the 70 percent claimed in the case of respondent's seeds, only 31 percent was shown by the tests. In the year 1936–37, 250 samples of respondent's seeds were tested, and in 67 percent of the tests it was shown that the germination was lower than that stated on the packages. Tests made in 1937–38 showed that the germination was lower than that stated on respondent's packages in 83.33 percent of the product tested, and that in 13.6 percent the correct germination was stated on the package. In 1939, 67.69 percent of respondent's products were found to be lower in germination than as stated on the packages, and on only 32.31 percent of the packages was the true germination stated.

As a result of the tests made by the State of West Virginia, the Commissioner of Agriculture of that State, on April 15, 1938, addressed a letter to the respondent which reads:

> Regarding my letter of April 2, 1938, our Laboratory reports, having completed 46 germination tests on Lake Shore Seed Company's seed collected from dealers throughout the State, show the percentage of germination so low and, in fact, so much below the guarantee of germination as represented in your sworn statement making application for registration, and the labels on seeds placed on sale in the State of West Virginia, as to clearly render a misstatement and to be worthless for seeding purposes. * * *
>
> By virtue of the authority vested in me as Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of West Virginia, by Chapter XIX, Article XVI of the Code of West Virginia, it becomes my duty to cancel and withdraw all Certificates of registration of the Lake Shore Seed Company. You will take due notice thereof and govern yourself accordingly.
>
> This order made effective this the 15th day of April, 1938.

PAR. 9. The acts and practices of the respondent as herein set forth have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the respondent's seeds will germinate in the percentages as represented, and that his seeds have a higher percentage of germination than the actual germination of the seed under recognized tests and within recognized tolerances or allowances and as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief so engendered, a substantial portion of the purchasing public have been and are induced to purchase respondent's seed, to the injury and prejudice of the public. As a further result of said acts and practices of the respondent, trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from his competitors who do not make false or misleading statements and representations concerning the germination percentage of their seeds, and respondent's said acts and practices have resulted in substantial injury to such competitors in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, David S. Wright, individually, or doing business or trading under the name Lake Shore Seed Co., or any other name or style, his agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of vegetable and garden seed, in commerce as "commerce" is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing by means of statements appearing on, or attached to, the paackages containing his seed, that the germination percentage of such seed is greater than the actual germination percentage, or making such representation by means of letters, circulars, or other advertising matter, or by any other means.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

NASSIF CANDY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4025. Complaint, Feb. 7, 1940—Decision, July 23, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of candy and confectionery products, including certain candy assortments so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to consumers, a typical assortment consisting of small pieces of caramel candy of uniform size and shape, medium sized candy bars, and a three-section push card, for use in sale and distribution thereof under a plan, as explained thereon, by which person securing by chance one of certain numbers in each section, for cent paid, was entitled to one of said candy bars, person making last punch in each section receiving two of said bars, and all others received a caramel—

Sold such assortments to wholesalers, jobbers, and directly or indirectly to retailers, by whom they were exposed and sold to the purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan involving chance to procure without additional cost, additional or larger pieces of candy, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in sale of its products, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in violation of criminal laws, and in competition with many who, unwilling to use any method involving a game of chance to win by chance, or one contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With the result that many persons were attracted by said sales plan and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell its candy in preference to that of aforesaid competitors, thereby unfairly diverting trade in commerce to it from said competitors; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, as above set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitiors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. J. V. Mishou for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Nassif Candy Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Nassif Candy Co. is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of West Virginia, with its principal office and place of business located at 2004 Main Street, Wheeling, W. Va. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and confectionery products to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of Wheeling, W. Va., to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various States of the United States other than West Virginia, and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 1 year last past a course of trade by respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent and is as follows:

This assortment consists of small pieces of caramel candy of uniform size and shape and medium sized candy bars, the latter to be given as premiums, together with a device commonly called a push card. The push card is divided into three sections and each of said sections contains 50 partially perforated disks on the face of which is printed the word "push." Concealed within each of the said disks is a number which entitles the purchaser thereof to additional and larger pieces of candy when said number corresponds with any of the numbers set out in the legend at the top of said card. The last disk pushed out of each section also entitles the purchaser thereof to additional bars of candy. The sales are 1 cent each and those not securing a winning number receive one of the smaller pieces of caramel candy. The said card bears a legend or statement as follows:

1¢	JOBBER'S ADVERTISER	1¢
PER SALE	Nos. 2, 5, 8, 11, 16, 19, 24, 27, 30, 33, 36, 39, 42, 45, 48, 51	PER SALE

Each Receive ONE CANDY BAR

ALL OTHER NUMBERS RECEIVE ONE CARAMEL

LAST PUNCH IN EACH SECTION RECEIVES 2 CANDY BARS.

Notice—This is not a gambling device. Every punch receives full value. Extra awards for advertising Sales of respondent's candy by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above legend. The numbers aforesaid are effectively concealed until a purchase has been made and the disk separated or removed from said card. The said larger pieces of candy are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed various assortments of candy along with push cards involving a lot or chance feature, but such assortments and push cards are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said candy, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of such sales plan or method in the sale of its candy and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the method and plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure additional or larger pieces of candy without additional cost. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its candy and in the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on February 7, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Nassif Candy Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Thereafter, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Nassif Candy Co. is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of West Virginia, with its principal office and place of business located at 2004 Main Street, Wheeling, W. Va. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and confectionery products to wholesale dealers, jobbers and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of Wheeling, W. Va., to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various States of the United States other than West Virginia, and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 1 year last past a course of trade by respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is now, and has been in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its said business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent and is as follows:

This assortment consists of small pieces of caramel candy of uniform size and shape and medium sized candy bars, the latter to be given as premiums, together with a device commonly called a push card. The push card is divided into three sections and each of said sections contains 50 partially perforated disks on the face of which is printed the word "push." Concealed within each of the said disks is a number which entitles the purchaser thereof to additional and larger pieces of candy when said number corresponds with any of the numbers set out in the legend at the top of said card. The last disk pushed out of each section also entitles the purchaser thereof to additional bars of candy. The sales are 1 cent each and those not securing a winning number receive one of the smaller pieces of caramel candy. The said card bears a legend or statement as follows:

1¢ PER SALE	JOBBER'S ADVERTISER	1¢ PER SALE
	Nos. 2, 5, 8, 11, 16, 19, 24, 27, 30, 33, 36, 39, 42, 45, 48, 51
	Each Receive ONE CANDY BAR
	ALL OTHER NUMBERS RECEIVE ONE CARAMEL
	LAST PUNCH IN EACH SECTION RECEIVES 2 CANDY BARS

Notice—This is not a gambling device. Every punch receives full value. Extra awards for advertising

Sales of respondent's candy by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above legend. The numbers aforesaid are effectively concealed until a purchase has been made and the disk separated or removed from said card. The said larger pieces of candy are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed various assortments of candy along with push cards involving a lot or chance feature, but such assortments and push cards are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said candy, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of such sales plan or method in the sale of its candy and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the method and plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure additional or larger pieces of candy without additional cost. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondent, as above described, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method which is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its candy and in the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Nassif Candy Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy and confectionery products or any other merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of said merchandise to the public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others assortments of any merchandise, together with push cards or other devices, which said push cards or other devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

3. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others push cards or other devices, which said push cards or other devices are to be used or may be used in the sale or distribution of said merchandise to the public at retail.

4. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION, INC., AND PAUL KLINE

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4195. Complaint, July 25, 1940—Decision, July 24, 1941

Where a corporation and an individual, who was its principal stockholder and managed and controlled its business, engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of correspondence courses in accounting and business law under a plan by which it circularized public accountants throughout the country with a view to having an accountant in each locality secure names of prospective students, to whom it sent advertising matter, employing the accountants to assist groups of its students and compensating them according to the number of students in the respective group—

(a) Made use of corporate name including words "American Institute of Business Administration, Inc.", on its letterheads and in advertising matter circulated to prospective students, accountants, and others, when in fact it was not an Institute, but was engaged in a private commercial enterprise;

With effect of creating the erroneous impression that it was a national organization of business executives, administrators, accountants, or other special groups of representative business, or the medium of an organization through which instruction or training was given as a public service;

(b) Augmented aforesaid misleading impression through such statements, on letterheads and printed matter as "Local chapters in principal cities of the United States * * *,"

(c) Further increased said misleading impression through describing its form of application for instruction as "Application for Membership," designating its enrolled students as "members" and its study groups as "local chapters"; and

(d) Represented that its activities were national and international in scope, through such statements as aforesaid, and "Representatives in principal cities of the United States, Canada, Porto Rico, Cuba, Philippine Islands," "* * * during the twelve years it has been in operation several thousand accountants throughout the United States, Canada, Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippine Islands have participated," and "* * * students all over the United States and Canada," facts being it had less than 100 pupils in the spring of 1938, and, some 2½ years later, about 21 located in six States and Porto Rico.

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Lewis C. Russell and Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiners.

Mr. William L. Pencke for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that American Institute of Business Administration, Inc., a corporation, and Paul Kline, individually and as President of American Institute of Business Administration, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, American Institute of Business Administration, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business at 126 Liberty Street in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondent, Paul Kline, is president and principal stockholder of the respondent corporation with his principal office and place of business at the aforesaid address, and he formulates, controls, and directs the policies and practices of said corporation.

PAR. 2. Respondent, American Institute of Business Administration, Inc., is now and has been for more than 2 years last past engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States of courses of study and instruction in accounting, business law, and Federal taxation, which are pursued by correspondence through the medium of the United States mails. The respondent corporation, in the course and conduct of said business during the time aforesaid, causes its said courses of study and instruction to be transported from its said place of business in New York to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of New York. There is now, and has been at all times hereinafter mentioned, a course of trade in said courses of instruction so sold and distributed by said corporate respondent in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Said corporate respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling its said courses of study and instruction, makes use of its corporate name "American Institute of Business Administration, Inc.," on letterheads and on advertising and printed matter circulated to students, prospective students, public accountants and other members of the general public in various States of the United States. The use of said name in such connection is misleading in that it has the tendency and capacity to create the erroneous impression that said respondent is a national organization of business executives, administrators, accountants, or other special group of representatives of business or that said respondent is the medium of such an organization through which instruction or training is given as a public service. Said misleading impression is further augmented by statements and phrases on letterheads and printed matter circulated as aforesaid of which the following is an example:

LOCAL CHAPTERS
In Principal Cities of the United States, Puerto Rico, Cuba

which import or imply that said corporate respondent is the parent head of nationally organized local groups of business executives, administrators, accountants, or other special representatives of business and that the whole comprises an organized "Institute" of such groups for the promotion of instruction as a means of improving the standards of such business groups and the qualifications of the members thereof.

Such misleading impression is further increased by the description of said respondent's application for instruction as an "Application for Membership" and of the enrolled students as "members" and the study groups as "Local Chapters," as well as by other means and descriptive phrases indicating an organization of members of a particular phase of business.

PAR. 4. Said corporate respondent further represents or has represented in the connection and by the means aforesaid that its activities are national in extent, that it has organized groups of students in all parts of the United States, and that they are international in scope with students in various foreign countries, by statements and phrases of which the following are examples:

Local Chapters in Principal Cities of United States, Puerto Rico, Cuba.

Representatives in the principal cities of the United States, Canada, Puerto Rico, Cuba, Philippine Islands.

* * * The plan operates through an international organization * * * * * * during the twelve years it has been in operation several thousand accountants throughout the United States, Canada, Puerto Rico, Cuba, Hawaii and Philippines have participated.

* * * students all over the United States and Canada.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact respondent corporation is not a national organization of business executives, administrators, accountants, or other special group of representatives of business and neither is said respondent the medium of such an organization through which instruction or training is given as a public service. The so-called "Local Chapters" consist of groups of students who have contracted for the instruction offered by said respondent and who meet at certain times to consult with a paid so-called "Local Advisor." The relations of such students with each other and with said respondent and with the so-called "Local Advisor" have none of the characteristics or features of membership in an organization as usually understood. The so-called "Application for Membership," when executed and accepted is merely a contract for instruction and for the payment of money therefor. Said individual respondent, Paul Kline, is the sole active participant in the activities of said corporate respondent. When local study groups are formed, a local accountant or other person is employed to meet occasionally with such students and assist and advise them in their studies. The instruction is given entirely by correspondence by said corporate respondent. Said local representatives also assist in the enrollment of students. Said corporate respondent is not an organized "Institute" of representatives of business executives, administrators, accountants, or other special representatives of business or of local groups of such representatives for the purpose of promoting instruction as a means of improving the standards of such business groups and the qualifications of the members thereof, but is purely and solely a commercial undertaking operated by the said respondent, Paul Kline, through the medium of said corporate respondent, American Institute of Business Administration, Inc.

The representations in regard to the extent of said business as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof are and have been misleading in that they are or were greatly exaggerated or not true and accurate statements of fact at the time they were made and used as aforesaid. At no single period of time during the existence of said school were students enrolled in all principal cities of the United States or in the majority of such cities. The activities of said school have not been national in extent nor have groups of students been organized in all parts of the United States at any one time. Neither have such activities been international in scope with students in various foreign countries, but the number of students in foreign countries have been comparatively few and at times there have been no students in foreign countries.

PAR. 6. The foregoing acts and practices used by respondents in connection with the offering for sale and sale of said course of study and instruction have had the tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations, as herein alleged, are true, and to induce them to purchase and pursue such courses of study and instruction on account thereof.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 25th day of July, A. D. 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents named in the caption hereof, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of answers by the respondents, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by William L. Pencke, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by respondent Paul Kline, attorney for respondents, before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answers thereto, the testimony and other evidence, the report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent American Institute of Business Administration, Inc., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York on June 13, 1928. Its principal office was located at 126 Liberty Street, in the city and State of New York. Respondent Paul Kline is president of said corporation, its principal stockholder and, while it was carrying on the business for which it was organized, was in active management and control of said business. His office and principal place of business is located at 126 Liberty Street, in the city and State of New York.

PAR. 2. The corporate respondent, from the date of its incorporation until May 19, A. D. 1940, was engaged in the business of selling courses of instruction in accounting and business law intended for home study under the direction of said respondent, by correspondence, and during the period in which it was so engaged it caused the courses of instruction and lesson materials sold by it to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States.

PAR. 3. The practice of said respondent in the conduct of its business as a correspondence school differs from the methods usually employed by such schools in that students were not solicited directly, but public accountants throughout the country were circularized by respondent, with the view of having an accountant in each locality secure the names of prospective students, to whom advertising matter was then sent by the respondent. Tuition fees of students thus secured were paid directly to the corporate respondent, and the necessary lesson materials were furnished by said respondent. Accountants were employed by respondent in various States of the United States where groups of students designated by it as "chapters" were respectively located, to assist and counsel such students. The services of accountants so employed were paid for by respondent according to the number of students in the respective groups.

PAR. 4. The corporate respondent, in soliciting the sale of and in selling its said courses of study and instruction, made use of its corporate name "American Institute of Business Administration, Inc.," on its letterheads and in advertisements and other advertising matter circulated to students and prospective or potential students, accountants, and other members of the general public located in various States of the United States. The use of said name in such connection is misleading, and has had the tendency and capacity to create, and did create, the erroneous impression that said respondent is a national organization of business executives, administrators, accountants, or other special group of representative business, or that said respondent is the medium of an organization through which instruction or training is given as a public service. Such misleading impression induced by the respondent is further augmented by its statements and by various letterheads and printed matter circulated by it, of which the following is an example: "Local chapters in principal cities of the United States, Porto Rico, Cuba"—and which import or imply that said corporate respondent is the parent head of nationally organized local groups of business executives, administrators, accountants, or other special representatives of business, and that the whole comprises an organized "institute" of such groups for the promotion of intruction as a means of improving the standards of such business groups and the qualifications of the members thereof. Said respondent was not an Institute, but was engaged in a private commercial enterprise.

Such misleading impression was further increased by the description of its form of application for instructions as an "Application for Membership," and the designation of its enrolled students as "members" and the study groups as "local chapters."

PAR. 5. The respondent corporation has further represented by the means aforesaid, that its activities were national in extent and that it had organized groups of students in all parts of the United States; that such groups were international in scope, with students in various foreign countries; and said respondent has made statements and phrases of which the following are examples:

Local chapters in principal cities of the United States, Porto Rico, Cuba;
Representatives in principal cities of the United States, Canada, Porto Rico, Cuba, Philippine Islands;
* * * the plan operates through an international organization * * *;
* * * during the twelve years it has been in operation several thousand accountants throughout the United States, Canada, Porto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippine Islands have participated;
* * * students all over the United States and Canada.

In the spring of 1938 the corporate respondent had less than 100 pupils; in the latter part of 1940 it had about 21 pupils, who were located in Florida, New Hampshire, Washington, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Nevada, and Porto Rico.

PAR. 6. Under the laws of the State of New York, the corporate respondent was required to obtain a Certificate of Approval from the University of the State of New York before doing business in the State, and such certificates have to be renewed annually. Approval was withheld from the corporate respondent until the word "Institute" was deleted from its name, and on May 19, 1940, this was done and the word "School" was substituted for the word "Institute," since when said respondent has been known as the "American School of Business Administration.

On the 31st day of July 1938, all of the material, supplies, and equipment of the corporate respondent were destroyed by fire, since which time respondent has been inactive except for the attempt to service existing courses.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

spondents, the testimony and other evidence introduced before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, the report of the trial examiners thereon and exceptions to said report, and briefs filed in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondents, American Institute of Business Administration, Inc., and Paul Kline, individually and as president of American Institute of Business Administration, Inc., have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent American Institute of Business Administration, Inc., a corporation, its officers, directors, agents, representatives, and employees, and respondent Paul Kline, individually and as president of American Institute of Business Administration, Inc., his agents, representatives, and employees, directly or indirectly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the business of selling courses of instruction in accountancy and business law, or other educational course or courses intended for home study under the direction of said respondents or either of them, by correspondence or otherwise, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the term "Institute" as a part of the name of the corporate respondent, or using such term in any other manner to describe or refer to the aforesaid business activities of respondents or either of them.

2. Representing, by use of the word "chapters," or by any other designation, that the corporate respondent is the parent head of nationally organized local groups of business executives, administrators, accountants, or other special representatives of business.

3. Representing, in any manner, that their activities are national, or international, in scope, or conducted through a national or an international organization, or that students of their courses of instruction are enrolled throughout the United States and Canada, or that they have representatives in the principal cities of the United States, Canada, Porto Rico, Cuba, and the Philippine Islands.

4. Designating the application form for the enrollment of students as "Application for Membership" and the students as "members."

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

D. STEFAN WROBLEWSKI ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4196. Complaint, July 25, 1940—Decision, July 24, 1941

Where an individual and three corporations, which he used to carry on his business activities, engaged in the competitive interstate sale and distribution of various medicinal, toilet, and cosmetic preparations; sold under variety of designations such as "Kalwaryjskie Wino Lecznicze," "Ampo-Lin," "Reginol," etc., by means of advertisements disseminated through the mail, in newspapers and periodicals, radio continuities, circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature—

(a) Falsely represented that its "Kalwaryjskie Wino Lecznicze," so-called medicinal wine, was a cure or remedy and a competent and effective treatment for stomach ailments and disorders, including sour stomach, gas on stomach and indigestion, headaches, constipation, listlessness, general weakness of the human system, sluggishness, skin eruptions and blemishes, wrinkles, bad breath, loss of energy, sallow skin, dizziness, colds, fever and chills; and that it would eliminate poisons from the system and serve as a tonic to build up the general health; the facts being that it would not do more than serve as a bitter tonic and appetizer, the laxative properties of which might assist in the temporary relief of constipation;

(b) Represented that its "Ampo-Lin" liniment constituted a competent and effective treatment for rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, arthritis, sciatica, strained and aching muscles, bruises, and swellings, and that its "Reginol" was a cure or remedy for corns and would prevent their return; facts being the former had no therapeutic value in excess of that of a local counterirritant tending to decrease pain in simple neuralgia and muscular aches and pains, and, while use of the latter might assist in the removal of corns, it would not prevent their return;

(c) Represented that "Masc Ratunek" or "Ratunek Salve" was a competent and effective treatment for sharp pains in the back and in the bones and body generally; and that their "Kalwa" was such a treatment for coughs, hoarseness, catarrh of the throat, smoker's cough, grippe, whooping cough, and other similar ailments; facts being the former had no therapeutic value other than as a local counterirritant tending to decrease simple neuralgia and muscular aches and pains, and the latter was not a treatment for the conditions set forth, in excess of constituting an expectorant which might aid in the removal of phlegm in coughs due to colds and mild throat irritations and in smoker's cough;

(d) Represented that their "Wuzi-Wuzi" was a competent and effective treatment for all headaches and for fever, and was safe and harmless, and that their "Krople-Kobiece" or "Women's Drops" was of substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of ailments and disorders peculiar to women; the facts being former was not a treatment for fever, possessed no therapeutic value in the treatment of headaches in excess of such temporary relief as might be afforded by its analgesic properties, and was not safe or harmless by virtue of containing drugs which are habit forming, and were present in quantities sufficient to cause injury to health if taken in excessive or too frequent doses or over extended periods of time, and said "Drops" possessed no therapeutic value in treatment of women's ailments and would not accomplish more than to serve as a bitter appetizer;

(e) Represented that their said "Sparoton Tablets" were a cure or remedy for grippe, colds and chills, and fever; and that their "Dunski Wyskok" would cure dandruff, stop and prevent falling hair and cause it to grow; the facts being that neither product constituted such a cure or remedy or accomplished the results claimed;

(f) Falsely represented that their said "Krem Mlodosci No. 1" would prevent and heal sunburn, roughness of the face, neck and hands, and eliminate perspiration odors; that their "Krem Mlodosci No. 2" would remove pimples, blemishes, freckles, and all impurities from the complexion; that their "Vitamin F Krem" would remove wrinkles and blemishes from the face, rejuvenate fading, worn skin, renew complexions, regardless of their condition, and revive the skin; and that their "Puder Ksiazecy" protected the skin against atmospheric changes; and

(g) Failed to reveal in their said advertisements that use of their "Wuzi-Wuzi" headache and fever treatment under prescribed, customary, or usual conditions might cause injury to health of the user; and

Where said individual and corporations, engaged as aforesaid—

(h) Falsely represented through use of the word "laboratories" in their trade names and advertisements that they owned or operated a laboratory wherein their products were compounded and tested;

(i) Implied that said individual was a physician and that their preparations were compounded by one possessing training and experience in the medical profession; facts being he had had no training or experience in the practice of medicine, held no medical degree, and was not licensed to practice; and

(j) Made use in their advertisements of testimonials represented as having been supplied by persons who had received benefits from use of their preparations; when in fact such purported testimonials were prepared by themselves or by their employees;

With effect of misleading and deceiving members of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that such representations were true, and into purchase of substantial quantities of said products by reason thereof, whereby trade was diverted unfairly from their competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of their competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. R. P. Bellinger for the Commission.

Evans & Evans, of New York City, for Margie Wroblewski Hartman and Norman Hartman.

COMPLAINT

and trading as D. Wroblewski & Co., and as D. S. Wroblewski, Inc., and as Daferu Drug Co., Ltd., and as Wroblewski Drug Co., Inc., and as Kalwaryjskie Laboratories, Inc., and as D. Wroblewski & Co., Ltd.; and D. Wroblewski & Co., a corporation; D. S. Wroblewski, Inc., a corporation; Daferu Drug Co., Ltd., a corporation; Wroblewski Drug Co., Inc., a corporation; Kalwaryjskie Laboratories, Inc., a corporation; and D. Wroblewski & Co., Ltd., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents D. Stefan Wroblewski, Margie Wroblewski, and Norman Hartman are individuals trading as D. Wroblewski & Co., and as D. S. Wroblewski, Inc., and as Daferu Drug Co., Ltd., and as Wroblewski Drug Co., Inc., and as Kalwaryjskie Laboratories, Inc., and as D. Wroblewski & Co., Ltd.

Respondents D. Wroblewski & Co., D. S. Wroblewski, Inc., Daferu Drug Co., Ltd., Wroblewski Drug Co., Inc., Kalwaryjskie Laboratories, Inc., and D. Wroblewski & Co., Ltd., are corporations organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York.

All of the respondents have their office and principal place of business at 55 Keap Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Respondent D. Stefan Wroblewski, is an officer of, and the principal stockholder in, all of the corporate respondents and directs, dominates, and controls their acts, practices, and policies. Said corporate residents are in effect the property of the said individual respondent and are used by him as a means to carry on his business activities.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for more than 5 years last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various medicinal and cosmetic preparations, causing said preparations, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a course of trade in their said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among the preparations sold and distributed by the respondents as aforesaid are the following:

A so-called medicinal wine designated as "Kalwaryjskie Wino Lecznicze"; a liniment designated "Ampo-Lin"; a preparation for corns designated as "Reginol"; a salve called "Masc Ratunek"; a cough syrup called "Kalwa"; a so-called fever reducer and headache powder designated "Wuzi-Wuzi"; a preparation purported to be a remedy for ailments peculiar to women, designated as "Krople-Kobiece" or "Women's Drops"; a tablet known as "Sparoton," represented as a treatment for fever and the grippe; a preparation known as "Dunski Wyskok," intended to be used as a shampoo and for various scalp diseases; facial creams called "Krem Mlodosci No. 1," "Krem Mlodosci No. 2," and "Vitamin F Krem"; and a face powder called "Puder Ksiazecy."

PAR. 3. Respondents are now, and at all times mentioned herein have been, in substantial competition with other individuals and corporations and with firms and partnerships, engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of medicinal and cosmetics preparations designed and intended for the same purposes as those for which the respondents' preparations are recommended.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said products by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said products; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said products by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, by radio continuities, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

(a) That said produce, "Kalwaryjske Wino Lecznize," is a cure or remedy and a competent and effective treatment for stomach ailments and disorders including sour stomach, gas on stomach and indigestion, headaches, constipation, listlessness, general weakness of the human system, sluggishness, skin eruptions and blemishes, wrinkles, bad breath, loss of energy, sallow skin, dizziness, colds, fever and chills; that said product will eliminate poisons from the system, and will serve as a tonic to build up the general health;

(b) That said product, "Ampo-Lin," is a competent and effective treatment for rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, arthritis, sciatica, strained and aching muscles, bruises, and swellings;

(c) That said product, "Reginol," is a cure or remedy for corns, and that the use of said product will prevent the return of the corn;

(d) That said product, "Masc Ratunek" or "Ratunek Salve," is a competent and effective treatment for sharp pains in the back and in the bones and body generally;

(e) That said product, "Kalwa," is a competent and effective treatment for coughs, hoarseness, catarrh of the throat, smoker's cough, grippe, whooping cough, and other similar ailments;

(f) That said product, "Wuzi-Wuzi," is a competent and effective treatment for all headaches and for fever, and that said preparation is safe and harmless;

(g) That said product, "Krople-Kobiece" or "Women's Drops," is of substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of ailments and disorders peculiar to women, and the pains and nervousness caused by such ailments;

(h) That said product, "Sparoton Tablets" is a cure or remedy for grippe, colds and chills and fever;

(i) That said product, "Dunski Wyskok," will cure dandruff, will stop and prevent falling hair and will cause the growth of hair;

(j) That said product, "Krem Mlodosci No. 1," will prevent and heal sunburn, roughness of the face, neck and hands, and will eliminate odors resulting from perspiration; that "Krem Mlodosci No. 2" will remove pimples, blemishes, freckles, and other imperfections, and remove all impurities from the complexion, and that "Vitamin F Krem" will remove wrinkles and blemishes from the face, rejuvenate fading, worn skin, renew complexions, regardless of their condition, and will revive the skin;

(k) That said product, "Puder Ksiazecy," protects the skin against atmospheric changes.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact respondents' preparations do not possess the properties and qualities, and are not capable of producing the results, claimed by respondents.

(a) Said product designated "Kalwaryjskie Wino Lecznicze" is not a cure or remedy, or a competent or effective treatment for stomach ailments or disorders, sour stomach, gas on stomach, indigestion, headaches, listlessness, general weakness of the human system, sluggishness, skin eruptions or blemishes, wrinkles, bad breath, loss of energy, sallow skin, dizziness, colds, fever, or chills. Said preparation is not a cure or remedy for constipation, nor has it any therapeutic value in the treatment of constipation, except insofar as its laxative properties may assist in the temporary evacuation of the bowels. Said preparation will not eliminate poisons from the system, nor will it serve as a tonic to build up the general health.

(b) Said product designatel "Ampo-Lin" does not constitute a competent or effective treatment for rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, arthritis, sciatica, strained or aching muscles, bruises or swellings.

(c) Said product designated "Reginol" is not a cure or remedy for corns. While the use of said product may assist in the removal of corns, said product will not prevent the return of the corn.

(d) Said product designated "Masc Ratunek" or 'Ratunek Salve" does not constitute a competent or effective treatment for pains in the back or in the bones or in the body generally.

(e) Said product designated "Kalwa" is not a competent or effective treatment for coughs, hoarseness, catarrh of the throat, smoker's cough, grippe, whooping cough or other similar ailments.

(f) Said product designated "Wuzi-Wuzi" is not a competent or effective treatment for fever, nor does it possess any therapeutic value in the treatment of headaches in excess of such temporary and palliative relief as may be afforded by its analgesic properties. Moreover said preparation is not safe or harmless, as it contains the drugs acetanilid and acetphenetidin, which are habit-forming, and which are present in said preparation in quantities sufficient to cause injury to health if taken in excessive doses, or in too frequent doses, or over extended periods of time.

(g) Said product designated "Krople-Kobiece" or "Women's Drops" possesses no therapeutic value in the treatment of ailments or disorders peculiar to women, nor will the use of said product afford relief from any pains or nervousness caused by such ailments.

(h) Said product designated "Sparoton Tablets" is not a cure or remedy for grippe, colds, chills or fever.

(i) Said product designated "Dunski Wyskok" is not a cure or remedy for dandruff nor will it stop or prevent falling hair nor will it cause the growth of hair.

(j) Said product designated "Krem Mlodosci No. 1" will not prevent or heal sunburn or roughness of the face, neck, or hands, nor will it eliminate odors resulting from perspiration. The product designated "Krem Mlodosci No. 2" will not remove pimples, blemishes, freckles, or other skin imperfections, nor will it remove any impurities from the complexion. The product "Vitamin F Krem" will not remove wrinkles or blemishes from the face, nor will it rejuvenate fading, worn skin, nor will it renew the complexion or revive the skin.

(k) Said product designated "Puder Ksiazecy" will not protect the skin against atmospheric changes.

PAR. 6. Said advertisements with respect to the product "Wuzi-Wuzi" are false also in that they fail to reveal that the use of said product under the conditions prescribed in said advertisement or under such conditions as are customary or usual may cause injury to the health of the user.

PAR. 7. The respondents also represent, by the use of the word "Laboratories" in certain of their trade and corporate names and through advertisements disseminated as aforesaid, that they own or operate a laboratory in connection with their said business and that their products are compounded and tested in such laboratory. In truth and in fact the respondents do not own or operate any laboratory in connection with their business.

PAR. 8. The use by the respondents of the word "Laboratories" in certain of their trade and corporate names as aforesaid, constitutes within itself a false and misleading representation that the respondents own or operate a laboratory in connection with their said business.

PAR. 9. In their advertisements as aforesaid the respondents refer to the respondent D. Stefan Wroblewski as "Doctor" Wroblewski, thus implying that said respondent is a physician and that respondents' preparations are compounded by one possessing knowledge, training, and experience in the medical profession. In truth and in fact said respondent is not a physician and has had no special training or experience in the practice of medicine, nor does said respondent hold any medical degree, or any license to practice medicine.

PAR. 10. In their said advertisements the respondents have also used purported testimonials represented as having been supplied by persons who had received benefit from the use of respondents' preparations. In truth and in fact said purported testimonials were prepared by respondents or by their employees and did not originate with members of the public who had used such preparations.

PAR. 11. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' products because of such erroneous and mistaken belief. As a result trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their said competitors, and in consequence substantial injury has been done and is being done by the respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 12. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 25th day of July, A. D. 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, D. Stefan Wroblewski, Margie Wroblewski Hartman (referred to in the complaint as Margie Wroblewski), and Norman Hartman, individually and trading as D. Wroblewski & Co., and as D. S. Wroblewski, Inc., and as Daferu Drug Co., Ltd., and as Wroblewski Drug Co., Inc., and as Kalwaryjskie Laboratories, Inc., and as D. Wroblewski & Co., Ltd., and D. Wroblewski & Co. of America, Inc., a corporation (referred to in the complaint as D. Wroblewski & Co.), D. S. Wroblewski, Inc., a corporation, Daferu Drug Co., Inc., a corporation (referred to in the complaint as Daferu Drug Co., Ltd.), The Wroblewski Drug Co., Limited, a corporation (referred to in the complaint as Wroblewski Drug Co., Inc.), Kalwaryjskie Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, and D. Wroblewski & Co., Ltd., a corporation (referred to in the complaint as D. Wroblewski & Co., Ltd.), charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On August 31, 1940, the individual respondent, Norman Hartman, filed his answer, on September 3, 1940, the individual respondent named in the complaint as Margie Wroblewski filed her answer, and on September 19, 1940, all other respondents filed their answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondent D. Stefan Wroblewski, individually and as president of the corporate respondents D. S. Wroblewski, Inc., Daferu Drug Co., Inc., and D. Wroblewski & Co., Ltd., and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. The respondents therein specifically waived the filing of a trial examiner's report upon the evidence. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answers and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent D. Stefan Wroblewski is an individual who is now or has been trading as D. Wroblewski & Co., and as D. S. Wroblewski, Inc., and as Daferu Drug Co., Ltd., and as Wroblewski Drug Co., Inc., and as Kalwaryjskie Laboratories, Inc., and as D. Wroblewski & Co., Ltd.

The correct corporate name of the respondent named in the complaint as D. Wroblewski & Co. was D. Wroblewski & Co. of America, Inc., and this corporation was legally dissolved by the Secretary of State of the State of New York on December 15, 1937, since which time it has not been in existence. The correct corporate name of the respondent named in the complaint as Wroblewski Drug Co., Inc., was The Wroblewski Drug Co., Ltd., and this corporation was legally dissolved by the Secretary of State of the State of New York on December 15, 1938, since which time it has not been in existence. The corporation, Kalwaryjskie Laboratories, Inc., named in the complaint as a respondent, was legally dissolved by the Secretary of State of the State of New York on December 15, 1939, since which time it has not been in existence. The correct corporate name of the respondent named in the complaint as Daferu Drug Co., Ltd., is Daferu Drug Co., Inc. The correct corporate name of the respondent named in the complaint as D. Wroblewski & Co., Ltd., is D. Wroblewski & Co., Ltd. The respondent Dafer Drug Co., Inc., D. Wroblewski & Co., Ltd., and D. S. Wroblewski, Inc., are corporations, organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York. The said corporate respondents and the individual respondent, D. Stefan Wroblewski, have their office and principal place of business at 55 Keap Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. Respondent D. Stefan Wroblewski is an officer of and the sole stockholder in and owner of the said corporate respondents, and directs, dominates, and controls their acts, practices, and policies. The said corporate respondents are in fact the property of the said individual respondent and are or have been used by him as a means to carry on his business activities.

The correct name of the individual respondent Margie Wroblewski is Margie Wroblewski Hartman; she is the wife of the individual respondent Norman Hartman, and the sister of the individual respondent D. Stefan Wroblewski. The said respondents Margie Wroblewski Hartman and Norman Hartman allowed their names to be used by the respondent D. Stefan Wroblewski in the formation and organization of the corporate respondent D. Wroblewski & Co., Ltd., on March 21, 1938, but such action by them was merely as an accommodation to the said D. Stefan Wroblewski, and the said respondents, Margie Wroblewski Hartman and Norman Hartman, have never at any time had any business relationship or connection with the said D. Stefan Wroblewski or any of the corporate respondents herein, other than in the use of their names at the time and in the manner mentioned above, and they do not now have nor have they ever had any voice in the control, management, conduct, or operation of the advertising or other business methods and activities of the individual respondent D. Stefan Wroblewski or any of the corporate respondents named herein; and they do not now have and have never had any interest, either financial or otherwise, in the said business or businesses.

PAR. 2. The said respondents D. Stefan Wroblewski, D. S. Wroblewski, Inc., Daferu Drug Co., Inc., and D. Wroblewski & Co., Ltd., are now, and for several years last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of various medicinal and cosmetic preparations, causing said preparations, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a course of trade in their said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among the preparations sold and distributed by the respondents as aforesaid are the following:

A so-called medicinal wine designated as "Kalwaryjskie Wino Lecznicze"; a liniment designated "Ampo-Lin"; a preparation for corns designated as "Reginol"; a salve called "Masc Ratunek"; a cough syrup called "Kalwa"; a so-called fever reducer and headache powder designated "Wuzi-Wuzi"; a preparation purported to be a remedy for ailments peculiar to women, designated as "Krople-Kobiece" or "Women's Drops"; a tablet known as "Sparoton," represented as a treatment for fever and the grippe; a preparation known as "Dunski Wyskok," intended to be used as a shampoo and for various scalp diseases; facial creams called "Krem Mlodosci No. 1," "Krem Mlodosci No. 2," and "Vitamin F Krem"; and a face powder called "Puder Ksiazecy."

PAR. 3. The said respondents are now, and at all times mentioned herein have been, in substantial competition with other individuals and corporations and with firms and partnerships, engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of medicinal and cosmetic preparations designed and intended for the same purposes as those for which the said respondents' preparations are recommended.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business the said respondents have disseminated and have caused the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said products by means of the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said products; and said respondents have also disseminated and have caused the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said products by various means for the purpose of inducing and which were likely to induce and have induced, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among the false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by means of the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, by radio continuities and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

(a) That said product, "Kalwaryjskie Wino Lecznicze," is a cure or remedy and a competent and effective treatment for stomach ailments and disorders including sour stomach, gas on stomach and indigestion, headaches, constipation, listlessness, general weakness of the human system, sluggishness, skin eruptions and blemishes, wrinkles, bad breadth, loss of energy, sallow skin, dizziness, colds, fever and chills; that said product will eliminate poisons from the system, and will serve as a tonic to build up the general health;

(b) That said product, "Ampo-Lin" is a competent and effective treatment for rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, arthritis, sciatica, strained and aching muscles, bruises and swellings;

(c) That said product, "Reginal," is a cure or remedy for corns, and that the use of said product will prevent the return of the corn;

(d) That said product, "Masc Ratunek" or "Ratunek Salve," is a competent and effective treatment for sharp pains in the back and in the bones and body generally;

(e) That said product, "Kalwa" is a competent and effective treatment for coughs, hoarseness, catarrh of the throat, smoker's cough, grippe, whooping cough, and other similar ailments;

(f) That said product, "Wuzi-Wuzi," is a competent and effective treatment for all headaches and for fever, and that said preparation is safe and harmless;

(g) That said product, "Krople-Kobiece" or "Women's Drops," is of substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of ailments and disorders peculiar to women, and the pains and nervousness caused by such ailments;

(h) That said product, "Sparoton Tablets" is a cure or remedy for grippe, colds and chills and fever;

(i) That said product, "Dunski Wyskok," will cure dandruff, will stop and prevent falling hair and will cause the growth of hair;

(j) That said product, "Krem Mlodosci No. 1," will prevent and heal sunburn, roughness of the face, neck and hands, and will eliminate odors resulting from perspiration; that "Krem Mlodosci No. 2" will remove pimples, blemishes, freckles, and other imperfections, and remove all impurities from the complexion, and that "Vitamin F Krem" will remove wrinkles and blemishes from the face, rejuvenate fading, worn skin, renew complexions, regardless of their condition, and will revive the skin;

(k) That said product, "Puder Ksiazecy," protects the skin against atmospheric changes.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact respondents' preparations do not possess the properties and qualities, and are not capable of producing the results claimed by respondents.

(a) Said product designated "Kalwaryjskie Wino Lecznicze" is not a cure or remedy, or a competent or effective treatment for stomach ailments, or disorders, sour stomach, gas on the stomach, indigestion, headaches, listlessness, general weakness of the human system, sluggishness, skin eruptions or blemishes, wrinkles, bad breath, loss of energy, sallow skin, dizziness, colds, fever, or chills. Said preparation will not eliminate poisons from the system, nor will it serve as a tonic to build up the general health, but only as a bitter tonic and appetizer, the laxative properties of which may assist in the temporary relief of constipation by the evacuation of the bowels.

(b) Said product designated "Ampo-Lin" does not constitute a competent or effective treatment for rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, arthritis, sciatica, strained or aching muscles, bruises or swellings, and has no therapeutic value, in excess of that of a local counter-irritant, tending to decrease pain in simple neuralgia and muscular aches and pains.

(c) Said product designated "Reginol" is not a cure or remedy for corns. While the use of said product may assist in the removal of corns, said product will not prevent the return of the corn.

(d) Said product designated "Masc Ratunek" or "Ratunek Salve" does not constitute a competent or effective treatment for pains in the back or in the bones or in the body generally, and has no therapeutic value, other than as a local counter-irritant, tending to decrease pain in simple neuralgia and muscular aches and pains.

(e) Said product designated "Kalwa" is not a competent or effective treatment for coughts, hoarseness, catarrh of the throat, smoker's cough, grippe, whooping cough or other similar ailments, in excess of constituting an expectorant which might aid in the removal of phlegm, in coughs due to colds and mild throat irritations, and in smoker's cough.

(f) Said product designated "Wuzi-Wuzi" is not a competent or effective treatment for fever, nor does it possess any therapeutic value in the treatment of headaches in excess of such temporary and palliative relief as may be afforded by its analgesic properties. Moreover, said preparation is not safe or harmless, as it contains the drugs acetanilid and acetphenetidin, which are habit-forming, and which are present in said preparation in quantities sufficient to otherwise cause injury to health if taken in excessive doses, or in too frequent doses, or over extended periods of time.

(g) Said product designated "Kropel-Koblece" or "Women's Drops" possesses no therapeutic value in the treatment of ailments or disorders peculiar to women, nor will the use of said product afford relief from any pains or nervousness caused by such ailments, nor accomplish more in any case than to serve as a bitter appetizer.

(h) Said product designated "Sparoton Tablets" is not a cure or remedy for grippe, colds, chills or fever.

(i) Said product designated "Dunski Wyskok" is not a cure or remedy for dandruff, nor has it any therapeutic value in the treatment of dandruff in excess of the removal of loose dandruff scales. It will not stop or prevent falling hair, nor will it cause the growth of hair.

(j) Said product designated "Krem Mlodosci No. 1" will not heal sunburn or roughness of the face, neck of hands, nor will it eliminate odors resulting from perspiration. The product designated "Krem Mlodosci No. 2" will not remove pimples, blemishes, freckles, or other skin imperfections, nor will it remove any impurities from the complexion. The product "Vitamin F Krem" will not remove wrinkles or blemishes from the face, nor will it rejuvenate fading, worn skin, nor will it renew the complexion or revive the skin.

(k) Said product designated "Puder Ksiazecy" will not protect the skin against atmospheric changes.

PAR. 6. Said advertisements with respect to the product "Wuzi-Wuzi" are false also in that they fail to reveal that the use of said product under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may cause injury to the health of the user.

PAR. 7. The said respondents also represent, by the use of the word "Laboratories" in certain of their trade names and through advertisements disseminated as aforesaid, that they own or operate a laboratory in connection with their said business and that their products are compounded and tested in such laboratory. In truth and in fact the said respondents do not own or operate any laboratory in connection with their business.

PAR. 8. The use by the said respondents of the word "Laboratories" in certain of their trade names as aforesaid, constitutes within itself a false and misleading representation that the said respondents own or operate a laboratory in connection with their said business.

PAR. 9. In their advertisements as aforesaid the said respondents refer to the respondent D. Stefan Wroblewski as "Doctor" Wroblewski, thus implying that said respondent is a physician and that respondents' preparations are compounded by one possessing knowledge, training, and experience in the medical profession. In truth and in fact said respondent is not a physician and has had no special training or experience in the practice of medicine, nor does said respondent hold any medical degree, or any license to practice medicine.

PAR. 10. In their said advertisements the said respondents have also used purported testimonials represented as having been supplied by persons who had received benefit from the use of respondents' preparations. In truth and in fact said purported testimonials were prepared by said respondents or by their employees and did not originate with members of the public who had used such preparations.

PAR. 11. The use by the said respondents of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, had the tendency and capacity to, and did, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations were true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' products because of such erroneous and mistaken belief. In consequence thereof trade has been diverted unfairly to said respondents from their competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of said respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answers of the respondents, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the individual respondent D. Stefan Wroblewski and the corporate respondents D. S. Wroblewski, Inc., Daferu Drug Co., Inc. (referred to in the complaint as Daferu Drug Co., Ltd.), and D. Wroblewski & Co., Ltd. (referred to in the complaint as D. Wroblewski & Co., Ltd.) and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon said respondents findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent D. Stefan Wroblewski, individually and trading as D. Wroblewski & Co., and as D. S. Wroblewski, Inc., and as Daferu Drug Co., Inc., and as Wroblewski Drug Co., Inc., and as Kalwaryjskie Laboratories, Inc., and as D. Wroblewski & Co., Ltd., or trading under any other name or names or through any corporate or other device, and the respondents D. S. Wroblewski, Inc., a corporation, Daferu Drug Co., Inc., a corporation, and D. Wroblewski & Co., Ltd., a corporation, their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of respondents' medicinal and cosmetic preparations designated as "Kalwaryjskie Wino Lecznicze," "Ampo-Lin," "Reginol," "Masc Ratunek" or "Ratunek Salve," "Kalwa," "Wuzi-Wuzi," "Krople-Kobiece" or "Women's Drops," "Sparoton Tablets," "Dunski Wyskok," "Krem Mlodosci No. 1," "Krem Mlodosci No. 2," "Vitamin F. Krem," and "Puder Ksiazecy," or any preparations of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or by implication:

(a) That said preparation "Kalwaryjskie Wino Lecznicze" is a cure or remedy or a competent or effective treatment for stomach ailments or disorders, sour stomach, gas on stomach, indigestion, headaches, listlessness, general weakness of the human system, sluggishness, skin eruptions or blemishes, wrinkles, bad breath, loss of energy, sallow skin, dizziness, colds, fever, or chills; that said preparation will eliminate poisons from the system; that it serves as a tonic to build up the general health, or that it has any value as a tonic other than as a bitter and appetizer, the laxative properties of which may assist in the temporary relief of constipation by the evacuation of the bowels;

(b) That said preparation "Ampo-Lin" constitutes a competent or effective treatment for rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, arthritis, sciatica, strained or aching muscles, bruises or swellings; that it has any therapeutic value except insofar as its properties as a local counter-irritant may tend to decrease pain in simple neuralgia and in muscular aches and pains;

(c) That said preparation "Reginol" is a cure or remedy for corns or will prevent the return of corns; that it has any therapeutic value in the treatment of corns in excess of assisting in the temporary removal thereof;

(d) That said preparation "Masc Ratunek" or "Ratunek Salve" constitutes a competent or effective treatment for pains in the back or in the bones or in the body generally; that it has any therapeutic value except insofar as its properties as a local counter-irritant may tend to decrease pain in simple neuralgia and in muscular aches and pains;

(e) That said preparation "Kalwa" possesses any therapeutic value in the treatment of coughs, hoarseness, catarrh of the throat, smokers' cough, grippe, whooping cough, or other similar ailments, except insofar as its expectorant properties may aid in the removal of phlegm in coughs due to colds and mild throat irritations, and in smokers' cough;

(f) That said preparation "Wuzi-Wuzi" is a competent or effective treatment for fever, or that it possesses any therapeutic value in the treatment of headaches in excess of such temporary and palliative relief as may be afforded by its analgesic properties; that said preparation is safe or harmless; or which advertisement with respect to said preparation fails to contain a warning against the frequent and continued use of said preparation and against excessive dosage

(provided, however, that such advertisement need contain only a statement that said preparation should be used only as directed on the label thereof, when such label contains a warning against the frequent and continued use of said preparation and against excessive dosage);

(g) That said preparation "Krople-Kobiece" or "Women's Drops" possesses any therapeutic value in the treatment of ailments or disorders peculiar to women, or that it will afford relief from any pains or nervousness caused by such ailments or disorders; that said preparation possesses any therapeutic value in excess of that of a bitter appetizer;

(h) That said preparation "Sparoton Tablets" is a cure or remedy for grippe, colds, chills, or fever;

(i) That said preparation "Dunski Wyskok" is a cure or remedy for dandruff, or that it has any therapeutic value in the treatment of dandruff in excess of the removal of loose dandruff scales; that it will stop or prevent falling hair or cause the growth of hair;

(j) That said preparation "Krem Mlodosci No. 1" will heal sunburn or roughness of the face, neck, or hands, or that it will eliminate odors resulting from perspiration; that said preparation "Krem Mlodosci No. 2" will remove pimples, blemishes, freckles, or other skin imperfections, or that it will remove any impurities from the complexion; that said preparation "Vitamin F Krem" will remove wrinkles or blemishes from the face, that it will rejuvenate fading, worn skin, or that it will renew the complexion or revive the skin.

(k) That said prepartion "Puder Ksiazecy" will protect the skin against atmospheric changes.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of any of said preparations, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof; or which advertisement with respect to said preparation "Wuzi-Wuzi" fails to contain a warning against the frequent and continued use of said preparation and against excessive dosage (provided, however, that such advertisement need contain only a statement that said preparation should be used only as directed on the label thereof, when such label contains a warning against the frequent and continued use of said preparation and against excessive dosage).

It is further ordered, That said respondents, their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, as aforesaid, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of their said preparations in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

(a) Using the word "Laboratories" or any other word of similar import, as a part of any of respondents' trade or corporate names, or otherwise representing that respondents own or operate a laboratory;

(b) Using the word "Doctor" or the abbreviation "Dr." or any other word or abbreviation of similar import, to designate, describe or refer to said individual respondent D. Stefan Wroblewski, or otherwise representing that said respondent is a physician;

(c) Using testimonials purporting to have been received from purchasers of respondents' preparations, but which in fact were prepared by the respondents, their employees, representatives, or agents.

It is further ordered, That this proceeding be closed as to the individual respondents Margie Wroblewski Hartman (referred to in the complaint as Margie Wroblewski) and Norman Hartman, and the corporate respondents The Wroblewski Drug Co., Limited (referred to in the complaint as Wroblewski Drug Co., Inc.), and Kalwaryjskie Laboratories, Inc., and D. Wroblewski & Co. of America, Inc., referred to in the complaint as D. Wroblewski & Co.), without prejudice to the right of the Commission, should the facts so warrant, to reopen the proceeding and resume trial thereof in accordance with the Commission's regular procedure.

It is further ordered, That respondents D. Stefan Wroblewski, D. S. Wroblewski, Inc., Daferu Drug Co., Inc., and D. Wroblewski & Co., Ltd., shall within 10 days after the service upon them of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing stating whether they intend to comply with this order and, if so, the manner and form in which they intend to comply; and that within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, said respondents shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

THERMALAID METHOD, INC., AND CHARLES H. McFARLAND

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4078. Complaint, Apr. 2, 1940—Decision, July 25, 1941

Where a corporation and an individual, who was its president and manager, engaged in the manufacture and interstate sale and distribution of their "Thermalaid" electrical device for ailments of the prostate gland by the application of heat to adjacent areas; by means of advertisements disseminated through the mails, in newspapers and periodicals, circulars, pamphlets, and other advertising literature—

Represented, directly and by implication, that use of their device provided a cure or remedy for all prostate gland disorders, ranging from milder forms of prostatitis due to irritation to a complete state of hypertrophy (enlargement), or atrophy (hardening) of the gland, that use of said device constituted a competent and effective treatment for such conditions, and would prolong vigorous years of life and recuperate vitality and sex virility;

Facts being, it did not provide a cure for such disorders, or an effective treatment therefor in excess of the benefit that might be expected from local application of heat in cases of acute or chronic prostatitis in its milder forms, and was of no value in prolonging vigorous life or recuperating virility;

With effect of misleading a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, and of inducing it because of such mistaken belief, to purchase said device:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Morton Nesmith for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Thermalaid Method, Inc., a corporation, and Charles H. McFarland, an individual, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Thermalaid Method, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio. Respondent Charles H. McFarland is the president of respondent corporation Thermalaid Method, Inc., and is actively engaged in the management and conduct of its business. Both respondents have their principal office and place of business at Franklin and Morris Avenues in the city of Steubenville, State of Ohio. The respondent Thermalaid Method, Inc., is a successor corporation to the Electro Thermal Co., having acquired by purchase or lease all of the assets, including inventories, accounts receivable, patents, trade-marks, plant, and building previously occupied by the Electro Thermal Co.

PAR. 2. The respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been, engaged in the business of manufacturing, offering for sale and selling an electrical device designated as Thermalaid for the treatment of the prostate gland and ailments or debilities arising therefrom by the application of heat to the area adjacent to said prostate gland. Respondents have caused and still cause said device when sold to be transported from their place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers thereof located at various points in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. At all times mentioned herein respondents have maintained a course of trade in said device in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said product; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among, and typical of, the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are, among others, the following:

There is no question that is more universally occupying the attention of the middle-aged man of today than this: "How may I prolong the vigorous years of my life and recuperate the vitality and sex virility I feel gradually slipping away?"

So little is known by the average man regarding sex-hygiene and the biologic laws governing his sex-life, that when he begins to be harassed with annoying symptoms of distress in the pelvic region or lower extremities, he adds to his physical debility the mental torture engendered by fear of "lost manhood."

The statement that "A man is just as old as his Prostate" is literally as well as figuratively true, for the prostate, like the other pelvic glands of the body, is an organ of internal as well as external secretion.

Due to the erroneous impression caused by innumerable advertisements of patent medicines, many men attribute backache, frequency or difficulty of urination, pain in the lower extremities, and many other symptoms of pelvic disorders to a disturbance in the kidneys or bladder or to sciatica when frequently the seat of trouble is in the prostate gland. And even though the effects are manifested in one of many forms, treatment applied at the point of manifestation often effects no results, simply because the source of the difficulty goes unattended, and to eradicate any disorder, one must treat it at its source.

The fact that many reliable medical authorities tell us that over 65% of all men past fifty years of age suffer from some form of prostatic trouble is sufficient reason for our having dwelt so at length regarding this part of the pro-genital system. And with the proper exercise of personal hygiene and immediate attention of any symptoms of distress, many acute conditions of this gland may be completely remedied before they become chronic.

Do you know that over 40%, yes, nearly 50%, of the American men past forty cannot even reproduce their kind?

Prostatitis covers a wide field, ranging from the milder forms of irritation to a complete state of hypertrophy (enlargement) or atrophy (hardening). In fact, many men do not even know that they have a prostate gland until they are almost ready for a prostatectomy (the removal of the prostate gland by excision), having misread the symptoms of the disordered gland and taken treatments for bladder or kidney trouble instead.

Sex weaknesses and lost manhood, when due to prostate trouble, have been found to respond beautifully to application of the infra-red radiation and thermal-energy when applied directly in the area of the prostate by the "Thermalaid".

Much is said about glands these days. Experimenters are taking the glands of animals and feeding them to patients with the hope of doing for the patients what the patient's own glands should have done.

But isn't it much more desirable to have our own glands in health and working properly than to depend upon the glands of the lower animals?

So we come to you with Thermalaid, a convenient means of applying vitalizing, dry, electrically generated, thermic energy, directly in the area of the inflamed prostate, in a continuous manner, correctly.

The late forties and fifties are approached by many men with a more or less certain uneasiness. Rather unconsciously they become aware of shortcomings—resistance may be lowered; little incidents are magnified; we find ourselves cross and irritable; things at home are no longer just right, the coffee isn't good, things we once cherished and looked forward to with high anticipation become more like a duty and even then are attempted with uncertainty.

Just think how good you would feel if the frequency of urination was relieved—if the backache that has bothered you for a long time was more comfortable—if you could do your work without that tired listless feeling, so often resulting from broken rest. Only a safe, convenient and comfortable method would appeal to your good judgment. THERMALAID is just that method. Thermalaid releases to the prostate through the rectum wall those long rays of infra-red radiation so soothing and comforting. This type of therapy is strikingly successful with inflammatory conditions of the prostate.

The potency, logic, simplicity and economy of the THERMALAID are among its highest endorsements and warrant your immediate trial. Much of life's happiness may often be restored in the Autumn and much of your lost confidence may often be regained. * * *

PAR. 4. By the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent, directly and by implication, that the use of their device "Thermalaid" provides a cure or remedy for all prostate gland disorders ranging from milder forms of prostatitis due to irritation, to a complete state of hypertrophy (enlargement) or atrophy (hardening) of the gland, and that the use of such device constitutes a competent and effective treatment therefor. By said means the respondent further represents that the use of said device "Thermalaid" will prolong vigorous years of life and recuperate the vitality and sex virility.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid statements and representations used and disseminated by the respondents as hereinabove described are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the use of respondents' device "Thermalaid" does not provide a cure or remedy for prostate gland disorders, or provide a competent and effective treatment therefor in excess of the benefit that might be expected through the local application of heat in cases of acute or chronic prostatitis in its milder forms. Said device has no therapeutic value in the treatment of the state of hypertrophy or atrophy of the prostate gland. Such device is of no value in prolonging vigorous years of life, and will not recuperate vitality or sex virility.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to their device and those not specifically set out herein has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true and to induce a portion of the purchasing public because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase said device.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 2d day of April 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the said respondents' Thermalaid Method, Inc., a corporation, and Charles H. McFarland, an individual, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. The respondents filed no answer. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondents and Richard P. Whiteley, Assistant Chief Council for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Thermalaid Method, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio. Respondent Charles H. McFarland is the president of said corporation and has been actively engaged in the management and conduct of its business. Both Thermalaid Method, Inc., and Charles H. McFarland have as their principal office and place of business a factory or plant at Franklin and Morris Avenues, in the city of Steubenville, State of Ohio. Thermalaid Method, Inc., is a successor corporation to The Electric Thermal Co., having acquired by purchase or lease all of the assets, including inventories, accounts receivable, patents, trade-marks, and plant and building previously occupied by The Electro Thermal Co.

PAR. 2. Both the Thermalaid Method, Inc., and Charles H. McFarland have been for more than 1 year last past engaged in the business of manufacturing, offering for sale, and selling an electrical device designated as "Thermalaid" for the treatment of the prostate gland and ailments or debilities arising therefrom, by the application of heat to the area adjacent to the prostate gland. Said respondents have caused said device when sold to be transported from their place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers thereof located at various points in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. At all times mentioned herein they have maintained a course of trade in said device in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business the respondents have disseminated and have caused the dissemination of false advertisements concerning the product Thermalaid by United States mails, and by various other means in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of this device; and they have also disseminated and caused the dissemination of false advertisements concerning this device by various means for the purpose of inducing and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of this device in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are, among others, the following:

There is no question that is more universally occupying the attention of the middle-aged man of today than this: "How may I prolong the vigorous years of my life and recuperate the vitality and sex virility I feel gradually slipping away?"

So little is known by the average man regarding sex-hygiene and the biologic laws governing his sex-life, that when he begins to be harassed with annoying symptoms of distress in the pelvic region or lower extremities, he adds to his physical debility the mental torture engendered by fear of "lost manhood."

The statement that "A man is just as old as his Prostate" is literally as well as figuratively true, for the prostate, like the other pelvic glands of the body, is an organ of internal as well as external secretion.

Due to the erroneous impression caused by innumerable advertisements of patent medicines, many men attribute backache, frequency or difficulty of urination, pain in the lower extremities, and many other symptoms of pelvic disorders to a disturbance in the kidneys or bladder or to sciatica when frequently the seat of trouble is in the prostate gland. And even though the effects are manifested in one of many forms, treatment applied at the point of manifestation often effects no results, simply because the source of the difficulty goes unattended, and to eradicate any disorder, one must treat it at its source.

The fact that many reliable medical authorities tell us that over 65% of all men past fifty years of age suffer from some form of prostatic trouble is sufficient reason for our having dwelt so at length regarding this part of the progenital system. And with the proper exercise of personal hygience and immediate attention of any symptoms of distress, many acute conditions of this gland may be completely remedied before they become chronic.

Do you know that over 40%, yes, nearly 50%, of the American men past forty cannot even reproduce their kind?

Prostatitis covers a wide field, ranging from the milder forms of irritation to a complete state of hypertrophy (enlargement) or atrophy (hardening). In fact, many men do not even know that they have a prostate gland until they are almost ready for a prostatectomy (the removal of the prostate gland by excision), having misread the symptoms of the disordered gland and taken treatments for bladder or kidney trouble instead.

Sex weaknesses and lost manhood, when due to prostate trouble, have been found to respond beautifully to application of the infra-red radiation and thermal-energy when applied directly in the area of the prostate by the "Thermalaid."

Much is said about glands these days. Experimenters are taking the glands of animals and feeding them to patients with the hope of doing for the patients what the patient's own glands should have done.

But isn't it much more desirable to have our own glands in health and working properly than to depend upon the glands of the lower animals?

So we come to you with Thermalaid, a convenient means of applying vitalizing, dry, electrically generated, thermic energy, directly in the area of the inflamed prostate in a continuous manner, correctly.

The late forties and fifties are approached by many men with a more or less certain uneasiness. Rather unconsciously they become aware of shortcomings—resistance may be lowered; little incidents are magnified; we find ourselves cross and irritable; things at home are no longer just right, the coffee isn't good, things we once cherished and looked forward to with high anticipation become more like a duty and even then are attempted with uncertainty.

PAR. 4. By the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the Thermalaid Method, Inc., and Charles H. McFarland, respondents, represent directly and by implication that the use of their device "Thermalaid" provides a cure or remdy for all prostate gland disorders ranging from milder forms of prostatitis due to irritation to a complete state of hypertrophy (enlargement), or atrophy (hardening) of the gland, and that use of such device constitutes a competent and effective treatment therefor. By said means the respondents further represent that the use of said device "Thermalaid" will prolong vigorous years of life and recuperate the vitality and sex virility.

PAR. 5. The foregoing statements and representations used and disseminated by the respondents as hereinabove described are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the use of respondents' device "Thermalaid" does not provide a cure or remedy for prostate gland disorders, or provide a competent and effective treatment therefor in excess of the benefit that might be expected through the local application of heat in cases of acute or chronic prostatitis in its milder forms. This device has no therapeutic value in the treatment of the state of hypertrophy or atrophy of the prostate gland. Such device is of no value in prolonging vigorous years of life, and will not recuperate vitality or sex virility.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to their device, and those not specifically set out herein, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and to induce a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase this device.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein set out, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondents herein and Richard P. Whiteley, Assistant Chief Counsel for the Commission, which provides among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondents herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Thermalaid Method, Inc., a corporation and its officers, and respondent, Charles H. McFarland, an individual, and the aforesaid respondents' respective representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of a therapeutic device sold under the name, Thermalaid, or any device of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisements

(a) by means of the United States Mails, or

(b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent, directly or through inference,

(1) That the use of Thermalaid will prolong the vigorous years of one's life and recuperate one's vitality or sex virility.

(2) That the use of Thermalaid will provide a competent and effective cure or remedy for prostatic gland disorders.

(3) That the use of Thermalaid will provide a cure for all types of prostatic trouble.

(4) That the use of Thermalaid constitutes a competent or effective treatment for hypertrophy (enlargement or added growth) or atrophy (hardening) of the prostate gland.

(5) That sex weaknesses and loss of manhood, when due to prostate trouble, will be benefited by the use of Thermalaid.

(6) That the use of Thermalaid will provide any relief from prostate gland disorders in excess of the benefit that might result from the local application of heat in cases of acute or chronic prostatitis in its milder forms.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisements by any means for the purpose of inducing or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said Thermalaid, which advertisements contain any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

ORGANIZATION SERVICE CORPORATION, HERBERT S. BLAKE, THOMAS B. JORDAN, ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4351. Complaint, Oct. 17, 1940—Decision, July 25, 1941

Where five corporations constituting the largest manufacturers in the United States of pins, metal paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, and occupying, together, a predominant position in the interstate sale and distribution thereof, and which were members of the Metal Paper Fasteners Institute and the Pin Manufacturers' Institute (membership of which in 1938 made and sold approximately 64.76 percent of all the paper clips manufactured and sold in the United States, 96.18 percent of the fasteners, and 100 percent of the pins used as office supplies), and made bids and secured orders from various governmental agencies, and were in competition among themselves and with other manufacturers of similar products except as below set forth;

Acting between and among themselves and by means of said so-called institutes of a corporation (1) which was engaged in the business of organizing such trade groups under the announced policy of improving the articles made by the members, improving use and consumption of such articles, and disseminating useful market and other legal information, (2) president and general counsel of which issued instructions to the secretaries of such institutes as to procedure to be followed by them, (3) vice president of which was secretary of the institutes in question, and (4) expenses of which corporation were paid by assessments levied against the members of the institutes, based on business done; and with the aid and cooperation of aforesaid individuals, acting individually and as president and vice president of said Organization Service Corporation, and with the latter acting also as secretary of the two institutes—

Entered into and carried out an understanding, agreement, or combination among themselves to fix and maintain, and to adhere to, uniform prices to be charged for the sale of said manufacturers' office pins, paper clips, and fasteners; and, pursuant thereto and in furtherance thereof—

(a) Agreed to, and did, maintain and adhere to substantially uniform price lists on comparable pins, paper clips, and fasteners made by them, and to change, and did change, simultaneously, prices at which such products were sold or offered by themselves, directly, or as principals of their respective distributing agents;

(b) Sponsored, called and held conferences of representatives of the members in question and of other members, at the time of the quarterly meetings of the institutes of said corporation, shortly after which they issued price lists containing substantially uniform prices for their products, to become effective on approximately the same dates for the following quarterly period, exchanged price lists freely as a common practice, and in the majority of instances sold their products at the prices stated therein; with intent and effect of carrying out and making effective such agreement, etc.; and

(c) Employed and made use of said institutes and secretary thereof, through practice of addressing to said secretary, on form prepared and furnished by said Organization Service Corporation, inquiry to ascertain whether or not a suspected low price which had come to the attention of the inquiring member as being not in conformity with the members' substantially uniform price lists, had in fact been quoted, and, if so, by whom, following which the various members were circularized on similarly prepared forms and inquiring member was advised as to results of the inquiry thus initiated by him; and

Where said corporation and its aforesaid officers, acting through its said institutes—

Aided and abetted aforesaid members of such institutes in the enforcement of such agreement, by having the members report to the corporation, which thereupon compiled and disseminated among them statistical information concerning prices charged by members on consummated sales, including information showing members' shipments for a specific period, and advising each member as to his relative position to the whole industry, and by making inquiries pertaining to prices, conditions or terms of completed sales, and also inquiries for members with respect to sales made at, or suspected as having been made at, unusually low prices;

Capacity, tendency, and effect of which acts and practices were to fix and maintain prices at, and conditions under which the products in question were sold or offered for sale throughout the United States; to unreasonably eliminate and restrain competition in said products, thus depriving the consuming public of advantages in price, service, and other considerations which they would receive under conditions of normal unobstructed and fair competition; and to interfere with the normal flow of trade and commerce in pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and had a tendency to unduly hinder and prevent competition in the sale and distribution of such products in commerce, to place in said manufacturing members the power to control the prices at which they were thus sold, and to unduly restrict and restrain their sale and distribution therein, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Fletcher G. Cohn for the Commission.

Tibbetts, Lewis, Lazo & Welch, of New York City, for Organization Service Corporation, Herbert S. Blake, Thomas B. Jordon, Noesting Pin Ticket Co., Inc., and Vail Manufacturing Co.

Mr. Francis T. Reeves and Mr. Mark L. Sperry, 2d, of Waterbury, Conn., for Scovill Manufacturing Co.

Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardiner & Reed, of New York City, for F. Kelly Co.

Mr. A. Lewis Spitzer, of New York City, for William Prym, Inc.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the corporations, firms, and individuals hereinafter named, described and referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Organization Service Corporation is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 74 Trinity Place, New York, N. Y.

Respondent Herbert S. Blake, an individual, is an attorney at law in whose offices, situated at 74 Trinity Place, New York, N. Y., is located the office and principal place of business of respondent Organization Service Corporation, of which respondent he is the president and counsel.

Respondent Thomas B. Jordan, an individual whose place of business is likewise located at 74 Trinity Place, New York, N. Y., is vice president of respondent Organization Service Corporation, and also is secretary of the Metal Paper Fastener Institute and the Pin Manufacturers' Institute of respondent Organization Service Corporation, the nature and purpose of which institutes will be set forth more fully hereinafter.

Among the members of said respondent Organization Service Corporation, who are also members of either or both of the aforementioned "Institutes" of respondent Organization Service Corporation, and all of whom are engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of pins, paper clips, and fasteners which are used as office supplies, are the following respondents:

Scovill Manufacturing Co., a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Connecticut, with its principal office and place of business located at 109 Mill Street, Waterbury, Conn.; the said respondent operates as one of its divisions, The Oakville Co., which is located at Oakville, Conn., and which is engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of pins, paper clips, and fasteners which are used as office supplies;

Noesting Pin Ticket Co., Inc., a corporation organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business being located at 728 East One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Street, New York, N. Y.;

Vail Manufacturing Co., a corporation existing and doing business by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business being located at 900 East Ninety-fifth Street, Chicago, Ill.;

F. Kelly Co., a corporation organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of Connecticut, with its principal office and place of business being located at Derby, Conn.;

William Prym, Inc., a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business being located at 2102 Forty-fourth Street, Long Island City, N. Y.

The above-named respondents, Scovill Manufacturing Co., operating a division known as the Oakville Co., Noesting Pin Ticket Co., Inc., Vail Manufacturing Co., F. Kelly Co. and William Prym, Inc., hereinafter referred to as "respondent members," do not constitute the entire membership of the Metal Paper Fastener Institute and the Pin Manufacturers' Institute of respondent Organization Service Corporation, but are the largest manufacturers of pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, who are members of said respondent Organization Service Corporation, and dominate and control, in conjunction with respondents Herbert S. Blake and Thomas B. Jordan, the affairs and policies of said institutes.

PAR. 2. Respondent Organization Service Corporation is engaged in the business of organizing trade groups, which it calls "Institutes," with the announced policy of said respondent being to improve the articles manufactured by the members of said Institutes through the improving of the standards of said articles, etc., to improve the use and consumption of said articles and to disseminate useful market and other legal information.

The Metal Paper Fastener Institute of respondent Organization Service Corporation, to which respondent members belong, is comprised of manufacturers of paper clips and fasteners; the Pin Manufacturers' Institute of respondent Organization Service Corporation, to which respondent members belong, is comprised of manufacturers of pins. The members of these two Institutes of respondent Organization Service Corporation represent approximately 100 percent of all the pin manufacturers in the United States, 90 percent of the manufacturers of fasteners, and 70 percent of the manufacturers of clips.

PAR. 3. The salaries of Herbert S. Blake and Thomas B. Jordan and the expenses of respondent Organization Service Corporation are paid by means of assessments levied against the members of the Institutes comprising respondent Organization Service Corporation, based on the amount of business done by each manufacturing member of said Institutes, each such member, including respondent members of the Metal Paper Fastener Institute and the Pin Manufacturers' Institute of respondent Organization Service Corporation, reports to said respondent, the dollar value and the number of thousands of the different articles made by each of said respondent members.

PAR. 4. The Institutes of respondent Organization Service Corporation, to which respondent members belong, meet every 3 months, the meetings being held at either the Biltmore or Commodore Hotels of New York City in the winter and the Westchester Country Club of Rye, N. Y., in the summer.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, each of the respondent members manufacture pins, paper clips, and fasteners, used as office supplies, and sells and distributes said products to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and as part of said sales, ships or causes to be shipped, said products to said purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the States of origin of said shipments, and in the District of Columbia. All of said respondent members have maintained, and still maintain, a current of trade and commerce in the said pins, paper clips, and fasteners manufactured by them, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 6. Respondent Organization Service Corporation, its officers and employees, and respondents Herbert S. Blake and Thomas B. Jordan aided, abetted, furthered, cooperated with, and were instrumentalities of and parties to the understanding, agreement, combination and conspiracy hereinafter set out, and actively participated in the performance of the acts and things set forth herein in paragraphs 10 and 11.

PAR. 7. All of said respondent members, in the course and conduct of their respective businesses, request, secure, and make bids and secure orders from various governmental agencies, national, State, and local, through and by means of distributing agents, for the pins, paper clips, and fasteners manufactured by said respondent members; the offers, for the sale of the pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies in compliance with the bids so received by said agents, are made by these distributing agents solely and entirely upon instructions received and given them by said respondent members concerning the prices to be offered in compliance with said bids, with the respondent members acting as the undisclosed principals of said agents.

PAR. 8. All of said respondent members are in competition between and among themselves and with other manufacturers of pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies in making, and seeking to make, sales of the pins, paper clips, and fasteners manufactured by said respondents to the purchasers thereof, either directly or through and by means of the aforementioned agents, except insofar as this competition has been hindered, lessened, restricted, restrained, or forestalled by their acts, practices, and methods hereinafter particularly described and set forth.

PAR. 9. Respondent members, acting between and among themselves, or through and by means of the Metal Paper Fastener Institute or the Pin Manufacturers' Institute of respondent Organization Service Corporation, and by other means and methods, have, since about 1936, entered into and thereafter carried out, and are still carrying out, an understanding, agreement, combination and conspiracy, for the purpose and intent, and with the effect, of unlawfully restricting, restraining, monopolizing and suppressing, and eliminating, competition in the sale and offers of sale, of pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, in trade and commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 10. Pursuant to said understanding, agreement, combination, and conspiracy, and in furtherance thereof, said respondent members, acting in this manner and by the methods herein set out, have done and performed, and still do and perform, among other acts and things, the following:

1. Agreed to fix and maintain, and have fixed and maintained, uniform prices for the sale of pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, which are manufactured by said respondent members;

2. Agreed to maintain, and have maintained, identical price lists on comparable pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, which are manufactured by said respondent members;

3. Agreed to change, and have changed, simultaneously the prices at which comparable pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, which are manufactured by said respondent members, are sold and are to be offered for sale, either by themselves directly, or as undisclosed principals through their respective distributing agents;

4. Agreed to submit, and have submitted, as undisclosed principals acting through their respective distributing agents, or by other means or methods, identical or uniform bids for the sale of pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, to various governmental purchasing agencies including those of the United States Government;

5. Used, and are now using, other unlawful means and methods in restricting, suppressing, preventing, and eliminating competition in the sale, bids for the sale, and offers of sale of pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 11. For the purpose of making effective the aforementioned understanding, agreement, combination, and conspiracy, and of requiring compliance therewith and observance thereof by all of the respondent members, the other members of the aforementioned Institutes of respondent Organization Service Corporation and other competitive manufacturers of pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, said respondent members, among other acts and things, have done the following:

1. Investigated and consulted with each other, with other members of the aforesaid Institutes of respondent Organization Service Corporation and with other competitive manufacturers of pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, through and by means of respondent Organization Service Corporation, the Pin Manufacturers' Institute, and Metal Paper Fastener Institute of respondent Organization Service Corporation, respondent Thomas B. Jordan or by other means or methods, for the purpose and intent, and with the result, of determining the prices charged or to be charged by said respondent members, acting either directly or as undisclosed principals of their distributing agents, by the other members and by other competing manufacturers, for the pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, which are manufactured by said respondent members and their competitors;

2. Interchanged, through and by means of respondent Organization Service Corporation, Metal Paper Fastener Institute, and the Pin Manufacturers' Institute of said respondent, and through and by means of respondent Thomas B. Jordan and through other means and methods, monthly statistics showing the value of the shipments of pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies manufactured by members of said Institutes;

3. Supervised, through and by means of respondent Organization Service Corporation, Metal Paper Fastener Institute, and the Pin Manufacturers' Institute of said respondent, and through and by means of respondent Thomas B. Jordan and by other means and methods, the activities of the members of said Institutes and competing manufacturers of pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, for the purpose and intent, and with the effect, of securing adherence by the respondent members and their competitors, to prices, terms, and conditions of sale agreed upon by said respondent members in the manner hereinbefore described, and more particularly to prevent and prohibit the quotation and sale by respondent members or their competitors, regardless of whether or not they are members of said Institutes, of lower competitive prices for the sale of pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies;

4. Offered uniform bids to governmental agencies, including those of the United States Government, and to other prospective purchasers, either directly or as undisclosed principals through and by means of their distributing agents.

PAR. 12. Each of said respondent members has acted, and now acts, in concert and in cooperation with one or more of the other respondent members by means of and through respondent Organization Service Corporation, Metal Paper Fastener Institute, the Pin Manufacturers' Institute of respondent Organization Service Corporation, the officers, representatives, and agents of said respondent Organization Service Corporation, or by and through other means and methods, in doing and performing the acts and practices hereinabove alleged, in furtherance of said understanding, agreement, combination, and conspiracy.

PAR. 13. The capacity, tendency, and effect of said understanding, agreement, combination and conspiracy, and the acts and practices of respondents in pursuance thereof, are and have been:

1. To monopolize in respondent members and the other members of the aforementioned Institutes the business of selling and distributing pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, throughout the United States;

2. To fix and maintain the prices at, and the conditions under, which said pins, paper clips, and fasteners are sold or offered for sale, either directly by the manufacturers thereof or by undisclosed distributing agents, throughout the United States;

3. To prevent competitive manufacturers of said pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, who are not members of the aforementioned Institutes, from selling said products throughout the United States;

4. To unreasonably lessen, eliminate, restrain, stifle, hamper, and suppress competition in the sale and offering for sale of said products throughout the United States, and thus deprive the purchasing and consuming public of the advantages in price, service, and other considerations which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal and unobstructed and free and fair competition in the sale and offering for sale of said products, and to otherwise operate as a restraint upon, obstruction and deterrent to, the freedom of fair and legitimate competition in such trade and industry;

5. To suppress, eliminate, and discriminate against competing manufacturers of said products who are not members of respondent Organization Service Corporation, but who are and have been engaged in, or desire to be engaged in, the selling of said products throughout the United States;

6. To obstruct and prevent the establishment of new manufacturers of said products throughout the United States;

7. To suppress and eliminate price competition among distributing agents in the sale and offers for sale of said products throughout the United States;

8. To burden, hamper, and interfere with the normal and natural flow of trade and commerce in pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, into, through and from the various States of the United States, and to injure the competitors of the members of the aforementioned Institutes by unfairly diverting business and trade from them, depriving them of trade, and otherwise oppressing them;

9. To prejudice and injure manufacturers of pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, who do not conform to respondent members' program or those of respondent Organization Service Corporation and the Metal Paper Fastener Institute, and the Pin Manufacturers' Institute of said respondent Organization Service Corporation, or who do not desire to conform with them, but are compelled to do so by the concerted action of the respondents hereinabove alleged.

PAR. 14. The above alleged acts, practices, methods, and things done by respondents are all to the prejudice of the public; have a dangerous tendency to hinder and prevent, and have actually hindered and prevented price competition, between and among members of the aforesaid Institutes of respondent Organization Service Corporation and other manufacturers of pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, in the sale of said products in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; have placed in the members of the aforesaid Institutes the power to control and enhance prices for pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies; have unreasonably restrained said commerce in such products, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 17th day of October 1940, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents named in the caption hereof charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, in violation of the provisions of said act. All of said respondents have duly filed their answers in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts, signed and executed by the respective respondents, and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel of the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument, the filing of briefs or the filing of a report on the evidence by a trial examiner for the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answers, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Organization Service Corporation is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 74 Trinity Place, New York, N. Y.

Respondent Herbert S. Blake, an individual, is an attorney at law, whose offices, situated at 74 Trinity Place, New York, N. Y., are located in the office and principal place of business of respondent Organization Service Corporation, of which respondent, he is the president and counsel.

Respondent Thomas B. Jordan, an individual whose place of business is likewise located at 74 Trinity Place, New York, N. Y., is vice president of respondent Organization Service Corporation, and also is secretary of the Metal Paper Fastener Institute and the Pin Manufacturers' Institute of respondent Organization Service Corporation, the nature and purpose of which Institutes will be set forth more fully hereinafter.

Among the members of either or both of the aforementioned "Institutes" of respondent Organization Service Corporation, and all of whom are engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of pins, paper clips, and fasteners which are used as office supplies, as hereinafter set out in paragraph 7, are the following respondents:

Scovill Manufacturing Co., a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Connecticut, with its principal office and place of business located at 99 Mill Street, Waterbury, Conn.; the said respondent operates as one of its divisions, The Oakville Co.,

which is located at Oakville, Conn., and which is engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of pins, paper clips, and fasteners which are used as office supplies;

Noesting Pin Ticket Co., Inc., a corporation organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business being located at 728 East One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Street, New York, N. Y.;

Vail Manufacturing Co., a corporation existing and doing business by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business being located at 900 East Ninety-fifth Street, Chicago, Ill.;

F. Kelly Co., a corporation organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of Connecticut, with its principal office and place of business being located at Derby, Conn.;

William Prym, Inc., a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business being located at 50 East Forty-second Street, New York, N. Y.

The above-named respondents, Scovill Manufacturing Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent "Scovill," operating a division known as the Oakville Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent "Oakville," Noesting Pin Ticket Co., Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent "Noesting," Vail Manufacturing Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent "Vail," F. Kelly Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent "Kelly," and William Prym, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent "Prym," all of which respondents are hereinafter referred to as "respondent members," do not constitute the entire membership of the Metal Paper Fastener Institute and the Pin Manufacturers' Institute of respondent Organization Service Corporation.

Said respondent members are the largest manufacturers in the United States of pins, metal paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, and combined together, they occupy a predominant position in the sale and distribution of such products in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

The respondent members also are engaged in the manufacture and sale of products other than pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies.

PAR. 2. Respondent Organization Service Corporation is engaged in the business of organizing trade groups, which it calls "Institutes," with the announced policy of said respondent being to improve the articles manufactured by the members of said Institutes through the improving of the standards of said articles, etc., to improve the use and consumption of said articles and to disseminate useful market and other legal information.

The Metal Paper Fastener Institute of respondent Organization Service Corporation, to which respondent members belong, is comprised of manufacturers of paper clips and fasteners; the Pin Manufacturers' Institute of respondent Organization Service Corporation, to which respondent members belong, is comprised of manufacturers of pins.

In the year 1938 the members of the two Institutes manufactured and sold approximately 64.76 percent of all the paper clips manufactured and sold in the United States; 96.18 percent of the fasteners, and 100 percent of the pins, used as office supplies.

The said Metal Paper Fastener Institute and Pin Manufacturers' Institute were organized by respondent Organization Service Corporation. A form of the contract entered into and carried out by and between each and all of respondent members and respondent Organization Service Corporation reads as follows:

AGREEMENT, made in duplicate this 14th day of September, 1936, between:

OAKVILLE COMPANY DIVISION

SCOVILL MANUFACTURING COMPANY

a corporation, having its principal place of business at:

Waterbury, Connecticut

hereinafter called the Subscriber, and a New York corporation, having its principal place of business at No. 74 Trinity Place, New York, N. Y., hereinafter called the Corporation.

ORGANIZATION SERVICE CORPORATION

WHEREAS, the Corporation is engaged in managing trade organizations; in serving industrial groups through collecting, compiling and furnishing to its Subscribers industrial statistics; in planning and supervising simplification and standardization of manufactured products; and in directing economic research, and

WHEREAS, the Subscriber is engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling one or more of the following products: Paper Clips and Paper Fasteners, and together with other manufacturers of similar products, is desirous of securing from the Corporation its services, as above described, in connection with the METAL PAPER FASTENER INDUSTRY,

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the premises and of the mutual covenants herein contained, the parties hereto agree as follows:

(1) The Corporation will establish and maintain a department to collect, compile and furnish to the Subscriber such weekly and monthly statistical reports, tables and charts as may be desired by the Subscriber, pertaining to the Subscriber's business as may be required by the Corporation for the compilation of such statistical reports.

(2) The Corporation will cause to be established an "Institute" to be constituted of the several Subscribers hereto, to be known as the "METAL PAPER FASTENER INSTITUTE," and will manage such Institute under the direction of its members.

(3) The Corporation will hold at designated times and places in New York City, meeting of such Institute for the purpose of discussing economic subjects, statistical tabulations and other matters of interest to the Subscribers, and will have its representative present at all such meetings.

(4) The Corporation will employ the services of MR. THOMAS B. JORDAN to serve as Secretary of the Institute, who will devote all required time and attention to the interests of the members of the Institute in connection with such office.

(5) The Charge of the Corporation to each of the Subscribers for its aforesaid services shall be on the basis of one-half (½) of 1 percent upon the Subscriber's total shipments, expressed in dollar value, of Paper Clips, Paper Fasteners and related products as reported to the Institute each calendar month during the life of this Agreement.

Within the first ten days of each month, the Subscriber shall pay to the Corporation the amount billed to the Subscriber in accordance with the foregoing, and the record of shipments for the second month previous to the date of each bill rendered, shall be used as the basis for billing. For initial billing, prior to the inauguration of a statistical reporting plan, the reports made on past sales shall be used.

It is understood, however, that the total monthly charge of the Corporation to all the Subscribers shall not be less than Four Hundred and Sixteen and 66/100 ($416.66) Dollars and the Corporation shall vary the base charge of one-half (½) of one (1) percent to the extent necessary to keep the total charge to all Subscribers within the aforesaid minimum limit.

(6) The service charge provided for in Paragraph 5 shall not cover extraordinary expenses of the Institute; such as, actual out-of-pocket disbursements of any of the Corporation's representatives when outside New York City on business for the Subscribers, long distance telephone calls, telegrams, luncheon expenses at meetings of the Institute, nor other special expenses that may be authorized or directed by a general meeting of the Members.

Such extraordinary expenses may be incurred by the Corporation only when authorized or directed at a general meeting of the Institute, and when so authorized or directed they shall be paid by the members ratably, to reported sales, upon presentation by the Corporation of proper bills of account.

(7) The term of the Agreement shall be one (1) year, commencing the first day of February 1936, and shall be extended automatically from year to year after January 31, 1937, unless thirty days prior to January 31, 1937 and/or each January 31st thereafter, the Subscriber shall give notice in writing to the Corporation of intention to terminate the agreement at the end of the then year of subscription.

It is agreed, however, that the Subscriber may resign from the Institute at any time, upon presentation in writing of good and sufficient reasons for such action, and from and after the date of such resignation, all obligations of the Subscriber hereunder shall cease, except the obligation to pay the Subscriber's proportionate part of the charges and expenses defined in this Agreement for the period ending January 31, 1937, or any extended period.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties have caused this Agreement to be executed in duplicate, this 14th day of September, 1936.

OAKVILLE COMPANY DIVISION
SCOVILL MANUFACTURING COMPANY
By: BENNETT BRONSON, Vice Pres.
ORGANIZATION SERVICE CORPORATION
By: HERBERT S. BLAKE, Pres.

PAR. 3. The Secretary of both the said Institutes, respondent Thomas B. Jordan, is also vice president of the respondent Organization Service Corporation. Respondent Herbert S. Blake, an individual, is an attorney at law, whose offices, situated at 74 Trinity Place, New York, N. Y., are located in the office and principal place of business of respondent Organization Service Corporation, of which respondent he is the president and counsel. The said Institutes have no separate and distinct letterheads so that letters from the said respondent Thomas B. Jordan, as Secretary of said Institutes, are written on the letterheads of respondent Organization Service Corporation. Respondent Herbert S. Blake as president and counsel of respondent Organization Service Corporation, issues instructions to the secretaries of the said Institutes regarding the procedure to be followed by them in the conduct of the operations of said Institutes of respondent Organization Service Corporation. Substantially all of the various forms used or employed by said Institutes are prepared and are furnished by said respondent Organization Service Corporation.

PAR. 4. The said Institutes are managed and directed by respondent Organization Service Corporation, acting through and by means of respondents Herbert S. Blake and Thomas B. Jordan, and said respondents, Organization Service Corporation, Herbert S. Blake, and Thomas B. Jordan are responsible for the acts and practices hereinafter found, which were, and are, performed by said Institutes.

PAR. 5. Part of the salaries of respondents Herbert S. Blake and Thomas B. Jordan and the expenses of respondent Organization Service Corporation are paid by means of assessments levied against the members of the Institutes, based on the amount of business done by each member of said Institutes. The assessments levied against respondent members are based upon the business each does in the manufacture of pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies.

PAR. 6. The Institutes of respondent Organization Service Corporation, to which respondent members belong, meet every 3 months, the meetings being held at either the Biltmore or Commodore Hotels of New York City in the winter and the Westchester Country Club of Rye, N. Y., in the summer.

PAR. 7. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, respondents Scovill, Vail, and Noesting manufacture pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, respondent Prym manufactures such pins and paper clips, and respondent Kelly such fasteners, and each sells and distributes said products to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and as part of said sales, ships or causes to be shipped, said products to said purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the States of origin of said shipments, and in the District of Columbia. All of said respondent members have maintained, and still do maintain, a current of trade and commerce in the said pins, paper clips, and fasteners manufactured by them, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. All of said respondent members, in the course and conduct of their respective businesses, request, secure, and make bids and secure orders, from various governmental agencies, national, State, and local, through and by means of distributing agents, for the pins, paper clips, and fasteners manufactured by said respondent members; the offers, for the sale of the pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, in compliance with the bids so received by said agents, are made by these distributing agents, in most instances, upon instructions received and given them by said respondent members concerning the prices to be offered in compliance with said bids, with the respondent members acting as the undisclosed principals of said agents.

Said respondent members have never presented bids to the United States Government through the medium of any agents, to the end and purpose that there should be no disclosure to the Government of the agency relationship existing between said respondent members and their respective agents.

PAR. 9. All of said respondent members are in competition between and among themselves and with other manufacturers of pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, in making, and seeking to make, sales of said products manufactured by them to purchasers thereof, either directly or through and by means of their respective agents, except insofar as this competition has been hindered, lessened, restricted, restrained, or forestalled by the acts, practices, and methods hereinafter found.

PAR. 10. Since about the year 1936, representatives of respondent members have, during, or at the time of the quarterly meetings of the Metal Paper Fastener Institute and the Pin Manufacturers' Institute of respondent Organization Service Corporation, discussed among themselves and with representatives of other members of said Institutes, ways and means of stabilizing the prices for pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, and in the course of said discussions, these representatives have exchanged information as to the prices, terms, and conditions of sales which have been made or were to be made by the members of said Institutes, for such products. Within a short time after such quarterly meetings of said Institutes, respondent members have issued price lists, containing substantially uniform prices for such products, which prices were to become effective in each instance approximately on the same dates, for the following quarterly period of the year. Respondent members have exchanged freely, as a common practice, their respective price lists for such products, and in a majority of instances, the respondent members have sold such products at the prices stated in their respective price lists.

PAR. 11. Since about the year 1936, respondent members, acting cooperatively and as members of the Metal Paper Fastener Institute and the Pin Manufacturers' Institute of respondent Organization Service Corporation, have employed and used said Institutes and respondent Thomas B. Jordan, as the secretary of said Institutes for the performance of the following acts to aid them in carrying out and enforcing the agreement, understanding, and combination among them, hereinafter found in paragraph 12:

In many instances, when it comes to the attention of one of respondent members that pins, paper clips, or fasteners have been sold by a member of one of said Institutes at a price which such respondent member believes is not in conformity with the price lists of the members, which price lists in general are substantially uniform, the respondent member sends, on a form prepared and furnished by respondent Organization Service Corporation, to respondent Thomas B. Jordan, as the secretary of said Institutes, an inquiry to ascertain whether or not such a low price was quoted, and, if so, by whom; respondent Thomas B. Jordan, as secretary of the Institutes, then circularizes, on forms prepared and furnished by respondent Organization Service Corporation, the various manufacturers of such products who are members of the Institutes, including the other respondent members, for the purpose of securing this information and reporting it back, on a form prepared and furnished by respondent Organization Service Corporation, to the inquiring member. This same procedure was followed, in many instances, prior to 1939, when one of the respondent members learned of an unusually low price or prices having been paid by the various governmental agencies, and also, in many instances, prior to 1939, when a respondent member learned that a bid has been accepted from an agent for such products whose principal was unknown which bid such respondent member believed was unusually low. In the latter instance, the various manufacturers of the particular product involved, who were members of the said Institutes, were circularized by respondent Thomas B. Jordan, as secretary of the said Institutes of respondent Organization Service Corporation, for the purpose of finding out the identity of the principal of said agent.

Respondent Organization Service Corporation collects, on forms furnished and prepared by said respondent, figures showing shipments made for a specific prior period by all members of the two Institutes, which enables the said respondent Organization Service Corporation to furnish each member of the said Institutes information as to the relative position of the particular member to the whole industry, but without telling the member of the relative positions of the other members of the industry.

PAR. 12. It follows from the foregoing facts, heretofore found in paragraphs 10 and 11, that respondent members, acting between and among themselves and through and by means of the Metal Paper Fastener Institute and the Pin Manufacturers' Institute of respondent Organization Service Corporation, and with the aid and cooperation of respondents Herbert S. Blake and Thomas B. Jordan, acting both individually, and as president and vice president, respectively, of respondent Organization Service Corporation, and respondent Thomas B. Jordan, acting as secretary of the aforesaid Institutes, have, since about 1936, entered into, and thereafter carried out, and still are carrying out, an understanding, agreement or combination between and among themselves to fix and maintain and to adhere to, uniform prices to be charged for the sale of the pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, which are manufactured by said respondent members; that pursuant to, and in furtherance of, such an agreement, understanding, or combination, said respondent members have agreed to maintain, and have maintained, and still do maintain and adhere to substantially uniform price lists on comparable pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies which are manufactured by them, and likewise have agreed to change, and have changed, and still do change simultaneously, the prices at which said products are sold, or offered for sale, by themselves directly or as principals of their respective distributing agents.

PAR. 13. Further, it follows from the foregoing facts, heretofore found in paragraphs 10 and 11, that, pursuant to, and in furtherance of the said agreement, understanding and combination heretofore found in paragraph 12, said respondent members, in conjunction, and in cooperation, with, and by means of, respondents, Organization Service Corporation, Herbert S. Blake and Thomas B. Jordan, acting as president and vice president, respectively, of respondent Organization Service Corporation, and respondent Thomas B. Jordan, acting as Secretary of the aforesaid Institutes, have sponsored, called and held, formal and informal meetings or conferences, during, or at the times of the quarterly meetings of the aforesaid Institutes of respondent Organization Service Corporation, at which there were discussions among the representatives of respondent members and those of other members of said Institutes, with the intent, purpose, and effect, of carrying out, and making effective, said agreement, understanding and combination.

PAR. 14. It still further follows from the foregoing facts, especially those heretofore found in paragraph 11, that respondents, Organization Service Corporation, Herbert S. Blake and Thomas B. Jordan, acting through and by means of the aforesaid Institutes of respondent Organization Service Corporation, aided and abetted, respondent members in the enforcement of, and in an effort to make effective, the said agreement, understanding and combination heretofore found in paragraph 12, by having respondent members report, as aforesaid to respondent Organization Service Corporation, and then having said respondent collect, audit, compile, disseminate and exchange among the members of said Institutes, statistical information or data concerning prices which had been charged by the members of these Institutes on consummated sales by said members of pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, and also by making inquiries pertaining to prices, conditions, or terms of completed sales and by making the inquiries for members of said Institutes pertaining to prices, conditions or terms of completed sales, in the manner heretofore found in paragraph 11.

PAR. 15. The capacity, tendency, and effect of the acts and practices of all the respondents, as hereinbefore found and described, were, and are, to fix and maintain the prices at, and the conditions under which, pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies are sold, or are offered for sale, either directly by the manufacturers thereof or by the distributing agents of said manufacturers, throughout the United States; to unreasonably lessen, eliminate, restrain, stifle, hamper, and suppress competition in the sale, and offering for sale, of the said products throughout the United States, and thus deprive the purchasing and consuming public of the advantages in price, service, and other considerations which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal, unobstructed, free and fair competition in the sale, and offering for sale, of said products; and to otherwise operate as a restraint upon, obstruction and deterrent to, the freedom of fair and legitimate competition in such trade and industry; and to burden, hamper, and interfere with the normal and natural flow of trade and commerce in pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies, into, through, and from, the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as hereinabove found are all to the prejudice of the public; have a tendency to unduly hinder and prevent competition in the sale and distribution of pins, paper clips, and fasteners used as office supplies in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; to place in respondent members the power to control the prices at which said products are sold in said commerce; to unduly restrict and restrain the sale and distribution of said products in said commerce; and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That respondents, Scovill Manufacturing Co., Noesting Pin Ticket Co., Inc., Vail Manufacturing Co., F. Kelly Co., and William Prym, Inc., separately and as members of the Metal Paper Fastener Institute and the Pin Manufacturers' Institute of respondent Organization Service Corporation, and each of them, and their respective successors and assigns, officers, agents, directors, and employees, directly and indirectly, or through or by means of respondent, Organization Service Corporation, or any other association or organization of like purport, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, or through or by means of respondents, Herbert S. Blake or Thomas B. Jordan, or any other party or parties, or through or by any other means or method, and respondent Organization Service Corporation its successors and assigns, officers, directors, agents, and employees, and respondent Herbert S. Blake, both individually and as president of respondent Organization Service Corporation, and respondent Thomas B. Jordan, both individually and as vice president of respondent Organization Service Corporation and as secretary of the Metal Paper Fastener Institute and the Pin Manufacturers' Institute of respondent Organization Service Corporation, shall all, and each of them in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of pins, paper clips, or fasteners used as office supplies in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, forthwith cease and desist, by agreement, combination, or understanding, express or implied, between or among themselves or with officers, or by concerted action which results from any such agreement, combination, or understanding:

1. From fixing, establishing, maintaining, or adhering to the prices to be charged for any or all of such products.

2. From changing simultaneously the prices to be charged for any or all of such products.
