Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF

EDWARD C. ROSE, INDIVIDUALLY AND TRADING AS ROSSE PRODUCTS COMPANY

Docket 4428. Complaint, Dec. 20, 1940—Decision, July 25, 1941

Where an individual engaged in interstate advertisement, sale, and distribution of his "Rosse Rheuma Tabs" medicinal preparation; by means of advertisements disseminated through the mails and otherwise, including numerous purported quotations from testimonials—

Represented, directly and by implication, that his said product was a cure or remedy for rheumatism, rheumatic pains, and sensitive joints and constituted a competent and effective treatment therefor, and that it would relieve the pain attendant upon such conditions for a longer period of time than any other preparation;

Facts being it was nothing more than a laxative and diuretic with mild analgesic properties, had no therapeutic value in the treatment of said ailments and conditions, in excess of furnishing temporary relief from the symptoms of pain, and had no special properties which would permit it to relieve pain more quickly or for a longer period of time than many other similar preparations;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such false representations were true, and of inducing it, because of such belief, to purchase his said preparation:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. John W. Carter, Jr. for the Commission.

IN THE MATTER OF

MAJESTIC CHINA COMPANY, INC., ART CHINA COMPANY, HERMAN SIEGEL, SIGMUND GLADSTONE AND JOHN LINDSEY, TRADING AS ART CHINA COMPANY, AND JOHN H. FEINNE, TRADING AS WINDSOR CHINA COMPANY

Docket 3748. Complaint, Mar. 29, 1939—Decision, July 29, 1941

Where two corporations and four individuals, who controlled and directed their policies and practices, engaged, incident to their offer and sale to retailers of a business or sales stimulator plan, in interstate sale of chinaware to be distributed by retailers as premiums, in substantial competition with others who do not misrepresent their business or disparage their competitors' products; orally and through stationery, contracts, correspondence, and advertising media circulated generally—

(a) Represented that they owned and operated or directly controlled a pottery plant or factory located at Sebring, Ohio, wherein they manufactured the chinaware they sold, and that one of said two corporations was a wholly owned subsidiary of a concern operating a pottery plant at said point;

When in fact none of them was engaged in manufacturing such chinaware, all of which they purchased from said Sebring concern, in which none of them had any financial or other interest, and of which corporation in question was not a wholly owned subsidiary, said Sebring concern having no interest therein or in the business of said corporations and individuals, other than sale of its products thereto, and its representations to the trade, made at their instance and in cooperation with them that some of individuals concerned were its direct salesmen being false; and, with intent of diverting business from a certain competitor to themselves, and well knowing falsity thereof—

(b) Represented that such competitor's representative was no longer in business, and that the competitor itself was in the hands of "finance concerns"; and

(c) Represented that said competitor had been selling inferior chinaware of second grade quality, while representing their own as of a superior grade, as a result whereof a customer canceled negotiations with such competitor, whose product was in fact of first quality;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such false representations were true, and of causing it because of such mistaken belief, to purchase their sales stimulator plan and chinaware in preference to those of competitors, whereby trade was unfairly diverted from such competitors to them:

Held, That such acts and practices, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Edward E. Reardon, trial examiner.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Majestic China Co., Inc., a corporation, Art China Co., a corporation, Herman Siegel, Sigmund Gladstone, John Lindsey, sometimes known as Jack Lindsey and John H. Feinne, hereinafter referred to as respondent, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Majestic China Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Indiana, with its office and principal place of business in the Building and Loan Tower Building in the city of South Bend, Ind.

Respondent Art China Co. is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Indiana, with its office and principal place of business in the Citizens Bank Building in the city of South Bend, Ind.

Respondent Herman Siegel is an individual and is an officer of the corporate respondents Majestic China Co., Inc., and Art China Co. Sigmund Gladstone is an individual and in the employment of the corporate respondent Majestic China Co., Inc., and is an officer of the corporate respondent Art China Co. John Lindsey, sometimes known as Jack Lindsey, is an individual and in the employment of the corporate respondent Majestic China Co., Inc., and is an officer of the corporate respondent Art China Co. Respondent John H. Feinne is an individual and an officer of the corporate respondent Majestic China Co., Inc.

Respondents Herman Siegel, Sigmund Gladstone, and John Lindsey, sometimes known as Jack Lindsey, also trade in their own right under the trade name Art China Co. Respondent John H. Feinne also trades in his own right under the trade name Windsor China Co.

The above-named individual respondents control and direct the acts, policies, and practices of said corporate respondents, and all of said respondents, in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged, have acted together and in cooperation with each other. The individual respondents maintain their offices and place of business in the city of South Bend in the State of Indiana.

PAR. 2. All of said respondents are now, and for more than a year last past have been, engaged in the business of offering for sale and selling to retailers a so-called business or sales stimulator plan, a part of which consists of chinaware to be distributed by said retailers as premiums. Respondents cause said chinaware products, when sold in connection with said so-called sales or business stimulator plan to be transported from the factory where such products are manufactured located at Sebring, Ohio, to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the several States of the United States other than the State of Ohio and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a constant course of trade in said chinaware products so sold and distributed by them in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business in said commerce as aforesaid, respondents are in active and substantial competition with other corporations, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of chinaware products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

There are, among said competitors, many who do not in any way misrepresent the nature of their business or make any false or disparaging statements, concerning the products of their competitors.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said so-called sales or business stimulator plan and the chinaware products used in connection therewith, respondents have, verbally and by means of their stationery, contracts, correspondence and through advertising media circulated generally throughout the United States, made many representations as to the nature of their business and said so-called sales or business stimulator plan and the chinaware products used in connection therewith, and concerning the business status and the products of their competitors.

Among and typical of the representations so made and used by the respondents are, in substance, the following:

1. That the respondents will distribute a designated number of circulars and coupons through house-to-house canvassers in the vicinity or locality of the retail dealer to whom they sell said so-called sales or business stimulator plan and the chinaware products used in connection therewith.

2. That respondents or some of them own and operate or directly control a pottery or factory located at Sebring, Ohio, wherein the chinaware products offered for sale and sold by them are manufactured.

3. That respondent Majestic China Co., Inc., is a wholly owned and operated subsidiary of Royal China, Inc., a corporation operating a china pottery or factory at Sebring, Ohio, and that respondent Majestic China Co., Inc., maintains a branch warehouse in the City of South Bend, Ind.

4. That certain of respondents' competitors engaged in the sale and distribution of a similar sales or business stimulator plan, including chinaware products to be used in connection therewith as premiums, are no longer engaged in the sale and distribution of such plan but are engaged in an entirely different line of business.

5. That the chinaware products distributed by certain of respondents' said competitors, who are likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of a sales or business stimulator plan using chinaware products in connection therewith as premiums, are "seconds" and inferior in quality, and that the pottery or factory wherein such chinaware products are manufactured is not reliable.

PAR. 5. The representations so made and used by the respondents in connection with the offering for sale and sale of their said so-called sales or business stimulator plan and the chinaware products used in connection therewith are false, misleading, and deceptive and unfairly defame and disparge the products and businesses of certain of their competitors. In truth and in fact, in many instances where sales of said plan have been secured through the representation that circulars and coupons will be distributed in the vicinity or locality of the retailer purchasing same, respondents have failed and refused to distribute such circulars or coupons. None of said respondents has ever owned and operated, or directly or indirectly controlled, a pottery or factory located at Sebring, Ohio, or at any other point where the chinaware products offered for sale and sold by them are manufactured. Respondent Majestic China Co., Inc., has never been a subsidiary of, nor has it ever had any connection with, Royal China, Inc., of Sebring, Ohio, except as a purchaser of products from Royal China, Inc. The respondent Majestic China Co., Inc., has never owned, operated, or maintained a warehouse or branch warehouse in South Bend, Ind., or at any other point. In truth and in fact, the competitors referred to by the respondents as being no longer engaged in the sale and distribution of said so-called sales or business stimulator plan, and the chinaware products used in connection therewith as premiums, are still engaged in such business and are in active and direct competition with the respondents in offering for sale and selling said plan and said chinaware products. The products of those competitors of the respondents, which are described and referred to by them as being "seconds" and inferior in quality, are not of the grade, class, or quality of chinaware products which are commonly referred to and described as "seconds" and are not inferior in quality to the products offered for sale and sold by the respondents but are of the same grade, class, and quality. The pottery or factory wherein the chinaware products which are sold by competitors in connection with the sales plan in competition with respondents, and which are described and referred to by the respondents as "seconds" or as inferior in quality to the products sold by the respondents, are made is a reliable pottery or factory which is so recognized by the industry.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and represenations in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of their said plan and said products in said commerce as aforesaid, has had and now has a tendency and capacity to, and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false, deceptive, and misleading representations are true, and that respondents will distribute a designated number of circulars and coupons in the vicinity or locality of the retail dealer purchasing such plan; that respondents manufacture the chinaware products offered for sale and sold by them; that respondent Majestic China Co., Inc., is a subsidiary of Royal China, Inc., and operates a branch warehouse at South Bend, Ind.; that certain of respondents' competitors are no longer engaged in business, and that the chinaware products offered for sale and sold by said competitors are "seconds" or inferior in quality and that the manufacturer thereof is not reliable and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' said plan and chinaware products.

As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to respondents from their competitors in said commerce as described in paragraph 3 hereof who do not in any way misrepresent the nature of their business or make any false or disparaging statements concerning the products or businesses of their competitors, to the injury of said competitors and to the injury of the public.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act the Federal Trade Commission on the 29th day of March, A. D. 1939, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents named in the caption hereof, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of answers by all respondents, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by John M. Russell, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Harry Bell and Samuel Feiwell, attorneys for respondents, before Edward E. Reardon, a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answers thereto, the testimony and other evidence, the report of the trial examiner, and brief in support of the complaint; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

PAR. 4. Respondents, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their so-called sales or business stimulator plan and the chinaware used in connection therewith, have orally and by means of their stationery, contracts, correspondence, and through advertising media circulated generally throughout the United States made many false and misleading statements and representations as to the nature of their business, and concerning the business status and the products of their competitors. Among and typical of such statements and representations are the following:

1. That they or some of them own and operate or directly control a pottery plant or factory located at Sebring, Ohio, wherein the chinaware offered for sale and sold by them is manufactured.

2. That respondent Majestic China Co., Inc., is a wholly owned subsidiary of Royal China, Inc., a corporation operating a pottery plant at Sebring, Ohio.

Respondents purchase all of the chinaware sold by them from Royal China, Inc., which company manufactures said chinaware at its plant located at Sebring, Ohio.

PAR. 6. None of the respondents own any stock in Royal China, Inc., or have any financial or other interest in said company. Respondent Majestic China Co., Inc., is not a wholly owned subsidiary of Royal China, Inc. Royal China, Inc., owns no stock of the respondent Majestic China Co., Inc., or of the respondent Art China Co. nor has it any financial or other interest in either of respondent corporations or in the business of any of the respondents other than selling its products to said respondents. Royal China, Inc., at the instance of respondents John H. Feinne, Herman Siegel, John Lindsey, and Sigmund Gladstone and in cooperation with said respondents, in soliciting the sale of chinaware to respondent's trade, represented to such trade that said respondents or some of them were its direct salesmen, when in fact neither of said respondents were ever salesmen for said company.

PAR. 7. Independent Merchants Guild, one of respondents' competitors, which is represented by Joseph C. Sommers, is engaged in selling a so-called business or sales stimulator plan and chinaware to be used in connection therewith to customers located in various States of the United States. The C. A. Pearson Co., located in St. Paul, Minn., for about 4 years used the so-called business or sales stimulator plan of the said Independent Merchants Guild and purchased from said Independent Merchants Guild the chinaware used in connection therewith. In May or June, A. D. 1937, respondent Sigmund Gladstone, acting on behalf of all of the respondents, called upon E. F. Cedarholm, president and general manager of the C. A. Pearson Co., and endeavored to sell said company respondents' so-called business or sales stimulator plan and chinaware to be used in connection therewith and, upon being told that the Pearson Co. was using the business or sales stimulator plan and chinaware of the Independent Merchants Guild, stated that Sommers was no longer in business and that the Independent Merchants Guild was in the hands of "finance concerns" and that Sommers and the Independent Merchants Guild had been selling inferior chinaware that was of second grade quality. At the time said statements were made and ever since that time the Independent Merchants Guild and Joseph C. Sommers were actively engaged in their regular business as herein set forth, which fact was known to the respondent Sigmund Gladstone at the time he made the statements hereinabove referred to. The said statements were made by him for the purpose of diverting business from the Independent Merchants Guild to respondent Majestic China Co. Respondent Sigmund Gladstone's statement concerning the quality of the chinaware sold by the Independent Merchants Guild was untrue and said respondent well knew at the time he made said statement that same was untrue.

The Independent Merchants Guild purchases all of the chinaware used and sold by it from the manufacturer thereof, the Stetson China Co. Before any chinaware is shipped to the Independent Merchants Guild, it is examined by the superintendent of the Stetson China Co. and all of the chinaware so shipped is what is known as first grade or first class. The C. A. Pearson Co., during the 4 years it purchased chinaware from Independent Merchants Guild, never had any complaints from any of its customers concerning said chinaware and no flaws were ever found in any of same, which was always first grade. The general manager of the largest china company in the world examined the chinaware of the Independent Merchants Guild and found it to be of the first quality.

The Downer Grocery Co. conducts its wholesale grocery business in Parkersburg, W. Va. Respondent John H. Feinne, acting on behalf of all of the respondents, called upon this company for the purpose of selling it respondent Majestic China Co.'s so-called business or sales stimulator plan and chinaware to be used in connection therewith and stated that the Independent Merchants Guild's chinaware was of an inferior grade while that of his company was of a superior grade. As a result of these statements the Downer Grocery Co. canceled its contemplated negotiations with the Independent Merchants Guild.

PAR. 8. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false, deceptive, and misleading representations are true and that respondents manufacture the chinaware offered for sale and sold by them, that respondent Majestic China Co., Inc., is a subsidiary of Royal China, Inc., that certain of respondents' competitors are no longer engaged in business and that the chinaware products offered for sale and sold by said competitors are "seconds" or inferior in quality and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase respondents' business or sales stimulator plan and chinaware used in connection therewith in preference to making such purchases from their competitors, and as a result thereof trade has been unfairly diverted from such competitors to the respondents.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answers of respondents, testimony, and other evidence taken before Edward E. Reardon, a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, the report of the trial examiner thereon and brief in support of the complaint, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondents Majestic China Co., Inc., and Art China Co., their officers, directors, representatives, agents, and employees, and respondents Herman Siegel, Sigmund Gladstone, and John Lindsey, sometimes known as Jack Lindsey, individually and as officers and employees of the Majestic China Co., Inc., and trading as Art China Co., or trading under any other trade name, and respondent John H. Feinne, individually and as an officer of Majestic China Co., Inc., and trading as Windsor China Co., or trading under any other trade name, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of their business or sales stimulator plan and chinaware in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing in any manner that respondents, or any one or more of them, own and operate or control a pottery or factory wherein chinaware products are manufactured unless and until such respondent or respondents own and operate or directly and absolutely control the pottery or factory wherein such products are manufactured.

2. Representing that respondent Majestic China Co., Inc., is a wholly owned subsidiary or a subsidiary of Royal China, Inc., or has any connection therewith other than that of a purchaser and distributor of the products of Royal China, Inc.

3. Representing that competitors of respondents, or of any one or more of respondents, have discontinued certain business activities when such competitors are engaged in such business activities.

4. Representing that products of such competitors are "seconds" or are inferior to first quality merchandise, when such products are of first quality.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

LOUIS ESTRIN, CHARLES ESTRIN, SIDNEY ESTRIN, ESTHER ESTRIN AND BELLE ESTRIN, TRADING AS HUDSON FUR DYEING COMPANY

Docket 3951. Complaint, Nov. 15, 1939—Decision, July 29, 1941

Where five partners engaged, in New Jersey, as successors to similarly named corporate business, in dyeing, for fur dealers, garment manufacturers, and others in New York City, rabbit furs or peltries under process which was intended to and did result in a product simulating genuine seal, and Hudson seal, or, as generally understood in the trade, seal-dyed muskrat—

Stamped each peltry dyed by them with the words "Hudseal Dyed Coney," unless otherwise directed, and supplied with each 50 peltry lot—the number usually required for a coat—to be attached to garments made therefrom, cloth labels bearing the inscription "HUDSEAL Seal-Dyed Coney Trade Mark Reg. * * * Super Quality," and cardboard tags similarly inscribed, for the better grade, and tags bearing the words "SATINSEAL Registered Seal Dyed Coney Hudseal Process" with similar lots of poorer quality;

With result that a substantial proportion of the purchasing public were caused to believe that such contraction of words "Hudson Seal" was intended to mean Hudson seal or muskrat fur dyed to resemble seal, and with tendency to cause members of the purchasing public, confused thereby, to call upon the sales person for an explanation of the terms used, thus placing in the hands of others an instrumentality whereby they might mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that garments thus labeled were made from peltries of seal or muskrat or other animals more desirable than rabbit peltries, and that they were of greater value and better quality than rabbit furs:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Lewis C. Russell, trial examiner.
Mr. Joseph C. Fehr for the Commission.
Koehler, Angenblick & Freedman, of Newark, N. J., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Louis Estrin, Charles Estrin, Sidney Estrin, Esther Estrin, and Belle Estrin, individuals, trading as Hudson Fur Dyeing Co. have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Louis Estrin, Charles Estrin, Sidney Estrin, Esther Estrin, and Belle Estrin, are now and for more than 1 year last past have been engaged in the business of processing and dyeing rabbit peltries under the trade name of Hudson Fur Dyeing Co. with their principal office and place of business located at 29 Congress Street in the city of Newark, in the State of New Jersey.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business the respondents are engaged in the sale and distribution of rabbit peltries dyed to imitate seal in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and also in the processing and dyeing of rabbit peltries to imitate natural seal for various customers. In the conduct of this business, the respondents cause said customers who are located in various States of the United States other than the State of New Jersey, to ship rabbit peltries from their various points of location to respondents for processing and dyeing. When rabbit peltries are processed and dyed by the respondents, said respondents attach to said peltries labels or tags of the Hudson Fur Dyeing Co. and also furnish labels or tags to be attached to the finished garments, which labels and tags so attached and furnished are hereinafter more fully described. When said peltries are so processed and dyed the respondents ship said peltries, together with such labels and tags from their place of business in the State of New Jersey to purchasers or customers located in various other States of the United States.

Respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a course of trade in said peltries processed by them and in labels to be attached to the finished garments in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, as aforesaid, respondents furnish labels and tags to purchasers or customers for used on finished garments made from such peltries and also cause labels or tags to be placed on the peltries processed by them, as hereinabove described, upon which labels, and tags appear the following representations:

HUDSEAL
(Seal Dyed Coney)
Trade Mark Reg.
* * *
Super Quality

The word "HUDSEAL" is printed in type 6/16" to 10/16" high, while the term "Seal Dyed Coney" is printed in type 2/16" high, surrounded by a border. There is no difference in the color of the lettering of any of the lines.

Upon another tag or label furnished and used by respondents on many of their said peltries appear the following representations:

SATINSEAL
REGISTERED
Seal Dyed Coney
* * *
Hudseal Process

On this tag the words "Seal Dyed Coney" are also in substantially less conspicuous type than the word "SATINSEAL."

PAR. 4. There is a preference on the part of the purchasing public for fur products made from peltries of seal because of their superior qualities such as pliability, durability, and luster.

By the use of tags or labels as set out above which prominently display the word "HUDSEAL" with the term "Seal Dyed Coney" in substantially smaller letters, an impression is created in the minds of the purchasers and prospective purchasers of the finished products that said garments are "Hudson Seal" and are composed of seal peltries.

In the same manner the use of the word "SATINSEAL" in large, conspicuous letters with the qualifying term "Seal Dyed Coney" in substantially smaller letters, as well as the use of the words "Hudseal Process" on said labels or tags, creates an impression in the minds of the purchasing public that the finished garments so labeled and tagged are composed of seal peltries.

The term "Seal Dyed Coney" as used by the respondents in connection with the term "Hudseal" or "Satinseal" is not sufficiently known to the purchasing public to be readily recognized as describing rabbit peltries. The term "Satinseal" is a coined or trade name which is not known to the public and would have no special meaning other than that garments so designated were composed of seal peltries.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact the peltries so dyed bearing the labels and designations, as hereinabove set out, are rabbit peltries dyed to imitate seal. Said rabbit peltries are inferior to the peltries of seal, in appearance, pliability, durability, and in the luster of the fur.

PAR. 6. By the use of this practice of furnishing false and misleading labels and tags to customers and causing them to be placed upon peltries, the respondents place in the hands of uninformed or unscrupulous retail dealers and manufacturers a means and instrumentality whereby said dealers and manufacturers may deceive or mislead members of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that fur garments made from rabbit peltries are in fact composed of seal peltries.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false and misleading statements and representations on their labels and tags, as above set out, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that garments containing the labels or tags supplied by the respondents are composed of seal peltries. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of garments containing respondents' labels and tags.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on November 15, 1939, issued and thereafter served its complaint in the above-entitled proceeding upon the respondents, Louis Estrin, Charles Estrin, Sidney Estrin, Esther Estrin, and Belle Estrin, individuals trading as Hudson Fur Dyeing Co., charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Joseph C. Fehr, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Bernard Freedman, attorney for the respondents, before Lewis C. Russell, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral argument of counsel; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents Louis Estrin, Charles Estrin, Sidney Estrin, Esther Estrin, and Belle Estrin have since April 1938 constituted a partnership doing business under the name Hudson Fur Dyeing Co., with their principal place of business at 29 Congress Street, Newark, N. J. This partnership succeeded to the business of Hudson Fur Dyeing, Inc., a New Jersey corporation which had its place of business at the same address. Respondents have been, and are now, engaged in the business of dyeing rabbit furs for various fur dealers, garment manufacturers, and others who have their places of business in New York, N. Y.

PAR. 2. Respondents' customers in New York in some instances deliver to respondents in New Jersey rabbit furs which they wish dyed, and in other instances respondents receive such furs from customers in New York and transport them to their place of business in New Jersey. After said peltries are dyed they, together with certain tags and labels furnished by respondents as hereinafter more fully set out, are transported by respondents from their place of business in New Jersey to the respective places of business of their customers in New York. Respondents maintain a constant course of trade in commerce in said peltries, tags, and labels between the States of New York and New Jersey.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business respondents stamp each peltry which they dye, unless the customer otherwise directs, with the words "Hudseal Dyed Coney." With each lot of 50 dyed peltries (50 peltries being the number usually necessary for the manufacture of a coat) respondents supply for the future use of their customers certain cardboard tags intended to be attached by their customers to garments when made from such peltries and a cloth label intended to be attached to such garment. The cloth label bears the following inscription:

HUDSEAL
Seal-Dyed Coney
Trade Mark Reg.
Super Quality

The word "Hudseal" appears in large letters and the remainder of the words on such label are in letters of much smaller size. The cardboard tag is similarly inscribed except the word "Registered" appears thereon instead of the term "Trade Mark Reg." Upon receipt by respondents peltries are graded and the better grade, when dyed, are segregated into lots, usually of 50 each, and with each such lot respondents furnish one each of the above-described tags and labels. The poorer quality peltries when dyed are also segregated into similar lots and with each such lot is furnished a cardboard tag bearing the words:

SATINSEAL
Registered
Seal Dyed Coney
Hudseal Process

Some of the manufacturers who make garments from peltries dyed by respondents attach the above-described labels and tags to completed garments which are subsequently sold to members of the purchasing public. There is no separate specific charge made by respondents for the tags and labels, the charge therefor being included in the respondents' charges for dyeing the peltries.

PAR. 4. Respondents' process of dyeing rabbit peltries is intended to, and does, result in a product which when made into a garment for sale to members of the purchasing public simulates in appearance genuine seal and Hudson seal. Hudson seal is a term generally understood in the fur trade to mean seal-dyed muskrat fur. This term is understood by a substantial portion of the purchasing public to mean genuine seal or muskrat fur dyed to resemble seal. Rabbit peltries dyed to simulate genuine seal or Hudson seal (seal-dyed muskrat) are considered by the fur trade and by the consuming public generally to be inferior to either of the products which such seal-dyed rabbit peltries simulate, and there is a preference on the part of the purchasing public for genuine seal or Hudson seal (seal-dyed muskrat) as compared with seal-dyed coney.

Many members of the purchasing public are not sufficiently familiar with furs to rely upon their own judgment with respect thereto, and consequently must, and do, rely upon the representations of manufacturers of or dealers in the fur garments offered for sale. The word "Hudseal" is a contraction of the words "Hudson Seal," and when used on tags and labels attached to fur garments simulating genuine seal and Hudson seal (seal-dyed muskrat) causes a substantial proportion of the members of the purchasing public to believe that it is intended to mean Hudson seal. The term "Hudseal" as used by respondents in connection with the words "Seal Dyed Coney" is contradictory and creates confusion and uncertainty in the minds of members of the purchasing public as to whether the garment so designated is seal, Hudson seal (seal-dyed muskrat), or in fact seal-dyed coney. This confusion and uncertainty tends to cause such members of the purchasing public to call upon the sales person displaying such garment for an explanation of the terms used and thus places in the hands of others an instrumentality whereby they may mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that the garments thus labeled are made from seal peltries, muskrat peltries, or peltries of other animals more desirable than rabbit peltries, and that they are of greater value and better quality than rabbit furs.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto taken before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of the complant and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments of counsel, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondents Louis Estrin, Charles Estrin, Sidney Estrin, Esther Estrin, and Belle Estrin, individuals trading as Hudson Fur Dyeing Co., or trading under any other name, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the dyeing or dressing, branding, labeling, tagging, or advertising in any manner of rabbit peltries distributed or transported by them in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word "Hudseal" as a trade name, trade-mark, or otherwise, or any other word or words signifying or connoting Hudson seal, either separately or in connection or conjunction with any other word or words, to designate or describe dyed rabbit peltries.

2. Describing peltries in any other way than by the use of the correct name of the fur as the last word of the description, and when any dye or blend is used simulating another fur, the true name of the fur so dyed or treated must appear as the last word of the description and must be immediately preceded by the word "dyed" or "blended" compounded with the name of the simulated fur.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

NATIONAL DISTILLERS PRODUCTS CORPORATION

Docket 4425. Complaint, Dec. 19, 1940—Decision, July 30, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture, as a by-product from grain left after distillation of whiskey of a semisolid poultry feed supplement variously designated as "Produlac Brand Semi-Solid Distillers Grains Mash," "Semi-Solid Produlac," and "Produlac," and in interstate sale and distribution thereof; by means of letters, circulars, and reprints of testimonial letters, transmitted through the mail and otherwise—

Represented, directly or by implication, that poultry rations frequently are inadequate and must be supplemented by the addition of vitamins and nutritional factors represented as being contained in its said product, and that the use thereof as a supplement to a diet or ration, regardless of whether said diet or ration already contained a sufficient quantity of necessary food elements, would result in a substantial increase of egg production, healthier poultry, high percentage of hatchability of eggs, and a decrease in the mortality rate, as well as other advantages;

Facts being its said product was but one of a class of dried grain after-distillation remnants made as a by-product in whiskey distilleries and sometimes referred to as "stillage" or "distillery slop," and did not contain vitamins and other nutritional factors sufficient to assure aforesaid advantages, which are the result of many factors, such as breed of poultry, general care, feeding, and general health of the flock, in addition to diet; and there is no scientific or other basis for its claim that poultry rations are frequently inadequate or must be supplemented by the addition of vitamin and nutritional factors said to be contained in its product, or that its said product made an excellent replacement or substitute for green feeds or creates a better appetite;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that aforesaid representations were true, and to cause many members of the public, because of said belief thus engendered, to purchase its said product:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. D. E. Hoopingarner for the Commission.

Breed, Abbott & Morgan, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that National Distillers Products Corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, National Distillers Products Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Virginia, with its executive offices at 120 Broadway, New York, N. Y., and a distillery and factory at Cincinnati, Ohio, in which it prepares and from which it ships into various States of the United States a poultry feed supplement, hereinafter described. Respondent now is, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of said poultry feed supplement variously designated as "Produlac Brand Semi-Solid Distillers Grains Mash," "Semi-Solid Produlac, and Produlac." Said product is a byproduct made from grain used in the distillation of whiskey commonly referred to as "distillery slop."

In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent causes its said product, when sold, to be transported from its plant and factory in the State of Ohio to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said product, respondent has made unwarranted, grossly exaggerated, and misleading representations with respect to the nature and efficacy of its said product. Such representations have been and are being made by means of letters, circulars and reprints of testimonial letters, transmitted by mail and otherwise throughout the various States of the United States (except into and in certain States where respondent has been compelled by requirement of statutes relating to poultry feeds to modify its said representations). Among and typical of such unwarranted, grossly exaggerated, and misleading representations are the following:

Semi-Solid Produlac is a most appetizing, supplementary feed with specific conditioning and stimulating values which are particularly valuable for poultry, ducks and turkeys. It assures greater egg production, increased hatchability, and decreased mortality. With chicks, poults and ducklings, quicker and better gains, improved quality, with better livability follow its feeding.

Semi-Solid Produlac is most appetizing and makes the balance of the ration more palatable. Its simulating factors cause the greater assimilation of the nutrients in the ration which naturally results in increased egg production, higher percentage of hatchability, and faster, more economical gains with increased vitality in growing birds. The improved health and increased vitality of the flock is quite apparent. It possesses specifically acting properties which will restore to normal production birds producing at low levels.

PRODULAC is an appetizing supplementary feed with conditioning and stimulating properties which are valuable for poultry, ducks and turkeys. Greater egg production, increased hatchability and decreased mortality have resulted from its use. With chicks, turkey poults and ducklings, quicker and better gains, improved quality and better livability have followed its feeding.

PRODULAC is appetizing. It makes the balance of the ration more palatable. Its stimulating values have caused increased egg production, higher percentage of hatchability and faster, more economical gains and increased vitality in growing birds.

It can, therefore, be quickly appreciated that PRODULAC, not only due to its appetizing nutritional factors but particularly because of its important biological value, is an effective supplement to the basic feedstuffs. Bear in mind that its potency of Vitamins A, B, C, E, and the increasingly important Vitamin G, makes for the better health and vitality of the flock, decreased mortality, greater production and reproduction, thus producing better operating results and larger profits.

and the following representations respecting and claims for its said product:

Great Palatability which creates improved appetite.

Has invariably increased production of eggs.

Has increased hatches to over 90%.

Has maintained flocks in constant better health.

Place it before the birds twice daily for 10 to 15 minutes. An improvement in the health of the birds, increased egg production and larger hatches will soon be noted.

High biological value due to its content of Vitamins A, B, C, E and G.

Has produced broilers of more uniform weight and of superior quality at less cost.

Has increased hatchability—in some cases to over 90%.

Has maintained flocks in better health.

Great palatability which helps to create better appetite.

Makes an excellent replacement for green feeds.

Respondent also represents that its product is recommended by certain State authorities and experiment stations.

Through its said circulation and use of the foregoing representations and others of similar import and meaning not herein set out, respondent represents and implies that poultry rations generally are inadequate and must be supplemented by the vitamins and nutritional factors represented and implied as being contained in sufficient quantities or percentages in its said product; and represents and implies that the addition of its said product as a supplement to a diet or ration already containing the necessary food elements and vitamins results in substantially increased egg production, better health, hatchability of eggs, decreased mortality, and other advantages set forth in its said representations.

PAR. 3. The above and foregoing representations and implications are unwarranted, grossly exaggerated, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's said product is merely one of a class of dried grain after-distillation remnants, a byproduct of distillation, referred to and commonly called "distillery slop," and it does not have the qualities and efficacy claimed for it by said aforedescribed representations and implications, in that the quantity and percentage of vitamins contained therein are not sufficient to produce the results claimed. The claimed results are not produced by any one factor but are the result of many contributing factors, including breed, general care, general feeding, general health of flock, and many other factors in addition to diet. There is no scientific basis for the representation that respondent's product makes an excellent replacement for green feeds or a substitute therefor, and its use does not generally create better appetite or augment the desire for food. Said product is not recommended by any State authority or experiment station.

PAR. 4. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid acts, practices, and methods in connection with the sale and distribution of its said product in said commerce has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations and implications are true, and causes many members of the purchasing public, because of said mistaken and erroneous belief, engendered as aforesaid, to purchase respondent's said product.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on December 19, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent, National Distillers Products Corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondent through its counsel, Breed, Abbott & Morgan, and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and stipulation, and said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, National Distillers Products Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Virginia, with its executive offices at 120 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

For more than 2 years last past respondent has been and is now engaged in the manufacture of various products prepared as byproducts from grain left after the distillation of whiskey manufactured by respondent. The product which is the subject matter of this action is a semisolid poultry feed supplement variously designated as "Produlac Brand Semi-Solid Distillers Grains Mash," "Semi-Solid Produlac, and Produlac." Said semisolid poultry feed supplement is prepared at a distillery and factory owned and maintained by respondent at Cincinnati, Ohio, from which said product is shipped into various States of the United States.

For more than 2 years last past in the course and conduct of its business, respondent has been and now is causing its said product to be transported from its said distillery and factory in the State of Ohio to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said product in commerce among and between various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent has made, published, and caused to be published, by means of letters, circulars, and reprints of testimonial letters, transmitted by mail and otherwise throughout various States of the United States, certain advertising matter containing the following statements, claims, and representations, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce the purchase of its said product:

Semi-Solid Produlac is a most appetizing, supplementary feed with specific conditioning and stimulating values which are particularly valuable for poultry, ducks and turkeys. It assures greater egg production, increased hatchability, and decreased mortality. With chicks, poults and ducklings, quicker and better gains, improved quality, with better livability, follow its feeding.

Semi-Solid Produlac is most appetizing and makes the balance of the ration more palatable. Its stimulating factors cause the greater assimilation of the nutrients in the ration which naturally results in increased egg production, higher percentage of hatchability, and faster, more economical gains with increased vitality in growing birds. The improved health and increased vitality of the flock is quite apparent. It possesses specifically acting properties which will restore to normal production birds producing at low levels.

PRODULAC is an appetizing supplementary feed with conditioning and stimulating properties which are valuable for poultry, ducks and turkeys. Greater egg production, increased hatchability and decreased mortality have resulted from its use. With chicks, turkey poults and ducklings, quicker and better gains, improved quality and better livability have followed its feeding.

PRODULAC is appetizing. It makes the balance of the ration more palatable. Its stimulating values have caused increased egg production, higher percentage of hatchability and faster, more economical gains and increased vitality in growing birds.

It can, therefore, be quickly appreciated that PRODULAC, not only due to its appetizing nutritional factors but particularly because of its important biological value, is an effecive supplement to the basic feedstuffs. Bear in mind that its potency of Vitamins A, B, C, E, and the increasingly important Vitamin G, makes for the better health and vitality of the flock, decreased mortality, greater production and reproduction, thus producing better operating results and larger profits.

Great Palatability which creates improved appetite.

Has invariably increased production of eggs.

Has increased hatches to over 90%.

Has maintained flocks in constant better health.

Place it before the birds twice daily for 10 to 15 minutes. An improvement in the health of the birds, increased egg production and larger hatches will soon be noted.

High biological value due to its content of Vitamins A, B, C, E, G.

Has produced broilers of more uniform weight and of superior quality at less cost.

Has increased hatchability—in some cases to over 90%.

Has maintained flocks in better health.

Greater palatability which helps to create better appetite.

Makes an excellent replacement for green feeds.

PAR. 3. Through the aforesaid statements and others of similar import not set out herein, respondent has represented or implied that poultry rations frequently are inadequate and must be supplemented by the addition of the vitamins and nutritional factors represented as being contained in respondent's said product; that the use of respondent's product as a supplement to a diet or ration, regardless of whether the diet or ration already contains a sufficient quantity of the necessary food elements and vitamins, will result in a substantial increase of egg production, healthier poultry, higher percentage of hatchability of eggs, and a decrease in the mortality rate and will produce the other advantages mentioned in the aforesaid statements.

PAR. 4. Respondent's product is but one of a class of dried grain after-distillation remnants manufactured in whiskey distilleries as a byproduct of whiskey distillation and sometimes referred to as "stillage" or "distillery slop." Said product does not, in and of itself, contain a quantity and percentage of vitamins and other nutritional factors sufficient in themselves to assure increased egg production, healthier poultry, higher percentage of hatchability of eggs, decreased mortality rate, and the other advantages set forth in respondent's said advertising matter.

Increased egg production, better health of poultry, higher percentage of hatchability of eggs and a decreased mortality rate, and the other advantages mentioned in said advertising matter as resulting from the use of respondent's product, are not the result of just one factor but are the result of many contributing factors, including breed of poultry, general care, feeding, and the general health of the flock and many other factors, in addition to diet.

There is no scientific or other basis for a claim, representation or implication by respondent that poultry rations are frequently inadequate, or that poultry rations in general must be supplemented by the addition of the vitamin and nutritional factors represented as being contained in respondent's said product. There is also no scientific or other basis for the representation that respondent's product makes an excellent replacement for green feeds or a substitute therefor, and there is no scientific basis for the claim, representation, or implication that its use creates a better appetite or augments the desire of poultry for food,

PAR. 5. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid statements in connection with the sale and distribution of its said product in commerce, as aforesaid, has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations and implications are true and to cause many members of the public, because of said mistaken and erroneous belief, engendered as aforesaid, to purchase respondent's said product.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondent herein and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent National Distillers Products Corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of its semisolid poultry feed supplement sold as "Produlac Brand Semi-Solid Distillers Grains Mash" and "Semi-Solid Produlac" and "Produlac," or any product of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under said name or under any other name or names, do forthwith cease and desist from representing directly or by implication that when fed to poultry such product:

1. Increases egg production, or produces broilers of more uniform weight and superior quality at less cost, or results in faster and more economical growth of poultry and larger profits to the producer.

2. Improves the health and vitality of growing poultry, or increases the hatchability of eggs, or decreases mortality.

3. Increases the appetite and the ability of such poultry to assimilate foods.

4. Is an effective substitute for green feeds.

It is further ordered, That respondent do forthwith cease and desist from disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, any advertisement which contains, directly or by inference, any of the representations prohibited in the preceding paragraphs of this order.

It is further ordered, That respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

THE C. F. SAUER COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SUBSECS. (a) AND (d) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 3646. Complaint, Sept. 29, 1939[1]—Decision, July 31, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture of mayonnaise and salad dressing in its Greenville, S. C., plant, and in manufacture, packaging, or compounding of extracts, spices, tea, pepper, drugs, insecticides, and other commodities at its Richmond, Va., plant, and in interstate sale and distribution of such products to wholesale grocers, retail chain grocers, and retail grocers;

(a) Sold its food product of like grade and quality, for use, consumption and resale within the United States, to some purchasers at higher prices than those charged to competing purchasers, and at differentials varying from approximately 5 percent to 25 percent and such that the net price in some cases was lower to the retail chain grocer than to the wholesale grocer to such an extent that the former sold products at retail at a price lower than that at which the wholesaler could purchase such products from it, and such that purchasers charged the lower prices resold products at prices which were only slightly higher than, as low as, or lower than, those at which competing resellers were able to purchase said products from it, so that the latter were unable to resell except at a loss or at insufficient profit, such products, with the result that such material price differences did and might injure, prevent, or destroy competition:

Held, That said discriminations in price were in violation of subsection (a) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act; and

Where said corporation, in consideration of and as compensation for advertising services and facilities contracted to be furnished or furnished by some customers in connection with the handling and sale of said food products—

(b) Contracted to pay and paid various sums, or in lieu thereof contracted to issue and issued credit memoranda in amounts varying from 5 to 10 percent of the net prices charged by it, while issuing no credit memoranda to other customers, competitive with those compensated as aforesaid, which were willing and able to furnish such services and facilities, and in some instances offered to do so, but offers of which were refused by it:

Held, That said payments and allowances, as above set forth, were in violation of subsection (d) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

Before Mr. John W. Addison, trial examiner.
Mr. Edward S. Ragsdale for the Commission.
Mr. Simon Michelet, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

AMENDED COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the party respondent, named in the caption hereof and hereinafter more particularly designated and described, since June 19, 1936, has violated and is now violating the provisions of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), hereby issues its amended complaint, stating its charges with respect thereto as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, C. F. Sauer Co., is a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the State of Virginia, with its principal office and place of business located at 2,000 West Broad Street, in the city of Richmond, State of Virginia. The respondent is engaged in manufacturing, selling, and distributing numerous grocery products, and owns and operates two manufacturing plants, one located in Greenville, S. C., and one located in Richmond, Va. Mayonnaise and salad dressing are manufactured at respondent's plant located in Greenville, and are sold and distributed from said plant, and from respondent's plant at Richmond. Extracts, spices, tea, pepper, drugs, insecticides and other commodities are manufactured, processed and packaged at, and are sold and distributed from respondent's plant located at Richmond.

The respondent has sold, and sells, its commodities, in general, to three groups of customers: wholesale grocers, retail chain grocers, and retail grocers.

Respondent facilitates its sales by the use of a large staff of traveling salesmen, numbering approximately 70, who travel in the various States of the United States securing orders, which are forwarded to the home office in Richmond, Va., for execution. Many additional orders are secured from customers through the mails after solicitation by salesmen and others.

PAR. 2. Since June 19, 1936, in the course and conduct of its business, the respondent has been and is now manufacturing the aforesaid commodities, in the aforesaid plants, and has sold, shipped, and does now sell and ship, such commodities in commerce between and among the various States of the United States from the States in which its factories are located, across State lines to purchasers thereof located in States other than the States in which respondent's said plants are located.

PAR. 3. Since June 19, 1936, while engaged, as aforesaid, in commerce among the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia, the respondent has been, and is now, in the course of such commerce, directly and indirectly discriminating in price between different purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality, which commodities are sold for use, consumption, and resale within the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia, in that the respondent has been, and is now, selling such commodities to some purchasers at a higher price than the price at which such commodities are sold to other purchasers generally competitively engaged with the favored purchasers.

Respondent effects said discriminations by granting and allowing larger discounts and rebates from list prices and lower net prices to some of such purchasers than to others. The extent of said discriminations in price varies from differentials of approximately 5 percent to differentials of approximately 33 percent, depending upon the commodity sold and the customer, or either.

PAR. 4. Dixie Home Stores is a corporation organized and existing, since approximately May 1937, under the laws of the State of South Carolina. It is engaged in business as a retail grocery chain, and has its principal place of business, purchasing agent, and warehouse in Greenville, S. C. It has purchased and received delivery of approximately $6,000 worth of commodities from respondent each month from approximately May 1937 to date, which commodities are destined to be and are distributed by Dixie Home Stores through its own facilities to approximately 170 retail grocery stores which it owns and operates. A large number of said stores are located in all sections of South Carolina and in the western section of North Carolina, and a few are located in the northeastern section of Georgia. Each of said stores is in competition in those areas with other persons, firms, partnerships, and corporations, who are similarly engaged in the grocery business and purchase commodities of like grade and quality from respondent.

Dixie Home Stores was organized and brought into existence about May 1937 by merging and consolidating two retail grocery chains, namely, Dixie Stores and Home Stores, each of which, prior to consolidation and merger, was an independent corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of South Carolina. Home Stores had its principal place of business at Columbia, S. C., and Dixie Stores had its principal place of business at Greenville, S. C., in which latter city Dixie Home Stores now has its similar facilities and respondent has one of its plants.

Each of said corporations maintained its purchasing agent and warehouse at their respective principal places of business, where each purchased and received delivery of approximately $3,000 worth of commodities from respondent each month from June 19, 1936, to approximately May 1937, which commodities were destined to be and were distributed by each, respectively, to approximately 85 retail grocery stores which each owned and operated. The approximate 85 retail grocery stores of the Home Stores were located in the central and southern sections of South Carolina and in the northeastern section of Georgia, while the approximate 85 retail grocery stores of Dixie Stores were located in the northern and western sections of South Carolina, and the western section of North Carolina. These stores, although now owned and operated by Dixie Home Stores, retain their respective names as Home Stores and as Dixie Stores in the communities where located.

Approximately the same net prices, discounts, and other allowances granted by respondent to Dixie Home Stores, as hereinafter alleged in paragraph 8, and in exhibit A, were granted and allowed by respondent to Dixie Stores and to Home Stores, respectively, prior to consolidation, although respondent sold to Dixie Stores and to Home Stores, respectively, only approximately one-half the dollar quantity of commodities now sold to Dixie Home Stores. The Home Stores and the Dixie Stores through their respective retail stores were, and the Dixie Home Stores through its retail stores were and are, in competition, in the area where each of such stores is located, with other purchasers of respondents commodities who pay higher net prices and receive smaller discounts and other allowances than said Home Stores, Dixie Stores, and Dixie Home Stores.

PAR. 5. Approximately the same net prices, discounts, and other allowances alleged in paragraph 8 and in exhibit A to have been granted and allowed by respondent to Thomas & Howard Co.'s have been, and are being, granted and allowed by respondent to approximately 12 firms and their branches, each of which is engaged in the wholesale grocery business and the names and locations of which are as follows:

1. Thomas & Howard Co. of Columbia, S. C., with branches at Camden, Newberry, and Darlington, S. C.;

2. Thomas & Howard Co. of Greenville, S. C., with a branch at Seneca, S. C.;

3. Thomas & Howard Co. of Charleston, S. C., with a branch at Allendale, S. C.;

4. Thomas & Howard Co. of Chester, S. C.;

5. Thomas & Howard Co. of Spartanburg, S. C.;

6. Thomas & Howard Co. of Sumter, S. C.;

each of which is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of South Carolina;

7. Thomas & Howard Company, Inc., of Charlotte, N. C., with branches at Salisbury, and Rocky Mount, N. C.;

8. Thomas & Howard Company of Hickory, N. C.;

each of which is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of North Carolina;

9. Thomas & Howard Co. of Durham, N. C.;
10. Thomas & Howard Co. of Greensboro, N. C.;

each of which is organized and does business as a partnership;

11. Timberlake Grocery Co. of Thomasville, Ga.;
12. Christiansburg Canning Co. of Pulaski, Va.

The Timberlake Grocery Co. was organized and is doing business as a corporation under the laws of the State of Georgia, and The Christiansburg Canning Co. was organized and is doing business under the laws of the State of Virginia; and each of which is referred to, and known by the trade as Thomas & Howard Co.'s, although they do not use the words "Thomas & Howard Co." in the respective names under which they do business.

Each of said firms purchase from approximately $3,000 worth to approximately $35,000 worth of commodities from respondent each year, and the aggregate of the purchases of all of said firms is approximately $300,000 worth per year. Respondent solicits orders from each of said firms and its branches individually, at their respective and geographically separated places of business, from purchasing officers who purchase exclusively for their respective firms; and respondent delivers commodities when purchased to their respective individual warehouses located at their respective places of business.

Each of said firms is a separate, distinct, and independent legal and business entity, doing business with respondent as aforesaid, yet the basis upon which respondent grants the same net prices, discounts, and other allowances to each of said firms and its branches is that respondent considers and treats the purchases of all of them collectively as constituting the purchases of a single purchaser, and grants to each of said firms and its branches the net prices, discounts and other allowances which respondent has determined are applicable to a single purchaser who purchases approximately $300,000 worth of said commodities a year upon solicitation at and delivery to a single point. Although respondent has no such purchaser buying such a volume under such circumstances, respondent uses a hypothetical purchaser purchasing under such circumstances as a standard in granting said preferences to Thomas & Howard Co.'s and in refusing to grant similar preferences to other and competing purchasers, who, as individual firms, do not and cannot purchase such a volume, under such circumstances, but who do purchase as great a volume of commodities in a year as many of said firms.

When said firms are considered as a single purchaser, they do a volume of business which constitutes a substantial portion of the entire wholesale grocery business in the States where located, and they are so strategically located geographically in those States as to blanket those areas. Each of said Thomas & Howard Co.'s and branches are in competition, in the area where located, with other purchasers from respondent who are similarly engaged in the distribution of grocery commodities and who are charged and who pay higher net prices and receive smaller net discounts and other allowances than said Thomas & Howard Co.'s and branches; and some of the customers of each of said Thomas & Howard Co.'s and branches are in competition, in the areas where such customers are located, with customers of such other distributors. When all of said Thomas & Howard Co.'s and branches are treated as a single purchaser and each is accorded the terms of sale which respondent has determined are applicable to such a hypothetical purchaser, each of said firms and its branches exerts in its competitive area the same power that could be exerted by such hypothetical firm if located in each of such areas.

PAR. 6. Rose-Phillips Co. is a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the State of South Carolina, having its principal place of business at Greenwood, S. C., and engages in the wholesale grocery business, buying groceries, vegetables, fruits, and other varieties of food and household commodities and selling such commodities to retail grocery stores, some of which are in competition with some of the retail grocery stores of Dixie Home Stores. It serves a large part of the trade area served by Thomas & Howard Co., of Newberry, S. C., and to a limited extent it serves the trade area served by Thomas & Howard Co. of Spartanburg, S. C., and Thomas & Howard Co. of Greenville, S. C. Rose-Phillips Co. was a purchaser of respondent's products on June 19, 1936, and continued to be a purchaser of respondent's products for some time thereafter. Rose-Phillips Co. ceased to purchase commodities from respondent some months after June 19, 1936, when respondent refused to grant and allow to said company the same net prices, discounts and other allowances which respondent granted and allowed to competitors of said company, namely, the Thomas & Howard Co.'s, and to competitors of said company's customers, namely, Home Stores, Dixie Stores, and Dixie Home Stores. The foregoing allegations with respect to Rose-Phillips Co. are equally applicable to many other of respondent's customers and former customers.

PAR. 7. Some of said discriminations in prices are effected through the use by respondent of three price lists. Each of said price lists states the prices at which the respondent instructs its salesmen and representatives to quote certain commodities, some of which are on each list. As to some commodities which appear on each list, a different price is stated in each list, one list stating the lowest price, another list stating a higher price, and another list stating the highest price at which such commodities are sold. Such lists are effective concurrently, but each list is used in quoting prices to only certain customers, the customers quoted from each list being mutually exclusive. Respondent furnishes one or more of such lists to some of its salesmen and representatives together with the names of the customers to be quoted therefrom. The majority of respondent's customers are quoted prices from the list containing the highest prices; a smaller number of customers are quoted from the list containing prices lower than those contained in the first; and the smallest number of customers are quoted from the list containing the lowest prices. Respondent secures the enforcement of such policy by threatening to discharge and discharging any salesman who deviates therefrom by quoting a customer from any list other than the one specified by the respondent or who informs a customer of the existence of a list price lower than the list price specified by respondent to be quoted to that customer.

PAR. 8. Specific illustrations of said discriminations are as follows, to wit: Respondent sold miscellaneous spices of like grade and quality to the following purchasers at the following prices; to Dixie Home Stores at a net price of 40 cents per dozen packages; to Milner Stores, which is a retail grocery chain located in various sections of North Carolina, at a net price of 50 cents per dozen packages; to McGee & Bleckley, Anderson, S. C., Rose-Phillips Co. of Greenwood, S. C., and many other wholesale grocers, at a net price of 60 cents per dozen packages. Respondent, therefore, sold such spices to Dixie Home Stores at a price which is 20 percent less than the price to Milner Stores, and more than 33 percent less than the price to McGee & Bleckley, Rose-Phillips Co. and many others; and to Milner Stores at a price approximately 17 percent less than the price at which it sold such spices to McGee & Bleckley and many other purchasers.

Respondent sold Sauer's Salad Dressing of like grade and quality, in pint sizes to the following purchasers at the following prices: to Dixie Home Stores at a net price of $1.65 per dozen; to Rose-Phillips Co., and many others, at a net price of $2.01 per dozen. Respondent, therefore, sold such salad dressing to Dixie Home Stores at a price which is approximately 18 percent less than the price to Rose-Phillips Co. and many other purchasers.

Respondent sold No. 5 Vanilla of like grade and quality to the following purchasers at the following prices: to the Thomas & Howard Co.'s at a net price of $1.45 per dozen; to Augusta Grocery Co., of Augusta, Ga., Seneca Grocery Co., Rose-Phillips Co., Talmage Bros., & Co., Inc., of Athens, Ga., and many others, all of whom are wholesale grocers, at a net price of $1.67. Respondent, therefore, sold such extracts to said Thomas & Howard Co.'s at more than 13 percent less than to Augusta Grocery Co., Seneca Grocery Co., Rose-Phillips Co., Talmage Bros. & Co., Inc., and many other purchasers. Further illustration of said discriminations are shown in a comparative table, marked "Exhibit A," attached to and hereby made a part of this complaint. Each of the firms listed in exhibit A are or have been purchasers of respondent. In each specific illustration of respondent's discriminations in prices alleged above, and in exhibit A, the sales to the favored and the unfavored purchasers accruing during an interval of time during which there was no upward or downward movement in the prices of said commodities.

PAR. 9. The effect of the discriminations in prices as hereinbefore set forth may be substantially to lessen competition in the sale and distribution of the said commodities in the respective lines of commerce in which respondent and its customers are engaged, and has been, and may be, to injure, destroy, or prevent competition in the sale and distribution of said commodities with the respondent and with its customers who receive the benefits of such discriminatory prices.

PAR. 10. Such discriminations in prices by respondent between different purchasers of goods of like grade and quality in interstate commerce in the manner and form aforesaid are in violation of the provisions of section 2 (a) of the act described in the preamble hereof.

PARAGRAPH 1. Paragraphs 1, 2, 4, 5, and 6 of count 1 are hereby referred to, and by that reference incorporated herein as fully and completely as they would be if set forth herein verbatim.

PAR. 2. While engaged in commerce in the conduct of its business, and in the course of such commerce, as above alleged and described, respondent is now and has been, subsequent to June 19, 1936, engaged in manufacturing, processing, and packaging such commodities for sale, and selling such commodities to customers competitively engaged with each other in the handling, offering for sale, and sale of such commodities to consumers, and to others for resale to consumers; and the respondent contracts to pay and pays to some, but not all, of such customers, and to representatives of some, but not all, of such customers for the benefit of the customers represented, valuable consideration, in the form of credit memoranda, checks, and otherwise, in consideration of and as compensation for transportation and advertising services and facilities, contracted to be furnished and furnished by and through such customers directly, and by such customers acting through such representatives in connection with the handling, offering for sale, and sale of said commodities as have been theretofore sold by respondent to them.

PAR. 3. Respondent makes such payments as compensation for advertising services and facilities in connection with the offering for sale, and sale of such commodities on at least two bases, namely:

1. On a basis of a percentage of the net cost of the commodities purchased;

2. On a basis of a definite fixed sum, the amount of which is not calculable by any determinable method.

Such payments are not available on proportionally equal terms to all customers competing in the distribution of such commodities, in that:

1. The same was not available, for example, to the following customers of respondent: J. Drake Edens, Columbia, S. C.; Standard Grocery Co., Greenwood Jitney Jungle, Inc., Miller Stores, all of Greenwood, S. C.; and P. P. Pearson and Williams Piggly Wiggly Store of Gastonia, N. C.

2. With reference to payments calculated on the basis of a percentage of the net cost of the commodities purchased, respondents grant to some of such customers receiving such payments a greater percentage than to others, and to some of such customers such percentage is not available at all. For example, respondent sells Dukes Mayonnaise in pint sizes to Thomas & Howard Cos. and grants them payment of 5 percent and 5 percent; and also to Dixie Home Stores; Lipscomb & Russell Co. of Greenville, S. C.; McGee & Bleckley and Anderson Hardware Co. of Anderson, S. C.; Augusta Grocery Co., of Augusta, Ga.; Talmage Bros. & Co., Inc., of Athens, Ga.; The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., of Charlotte, N. C., and many others, and grants them payments of only 5 percent.

Respondent sells Sauer's Salad Dressing and miscellaneous spices to Dixie Home Stores, and grants it payments of 5 percent; and also to Lipscomb Russell Co., McGee & Bleckley, Anderson Hardware Co., Augusta Grocery Co., Copeland Grocery Co., of Elberton, Ga., Seneca Grocery Co., of Seneca, S. C., and many others, and grants them no payments on such purchases.

3. With reference to the payments made on a basis of a definite fixed sum, the amount of which is not calculable on any determinable basis; the respondent grants to some of such customers receiving such payments a greater sum than to others, and to some of such customers, such payments are not available at all.

For example, the respondent pays to the following customers directly and through the representatives of such customers for the benefit of the customers represented:

Charlotte, N. C.:
Retail Grocers Association	$40 per month.
Independent Food Dealers Association	$25 per month.
Washington, D. C.:
Nation-Wide Stores	5 percent on net purchases.
District Grocery Stores	$40 per month.
Richmond, Va.:
Monogram Food Stores	5 percent on net purchases.
Richmond Food Stores	Do.
Sunny South Stores	$380 per year.

The payments made to customers directly or to the representatives of such customers for their benefit on a percentage basis as illustrated above are set out for the purpose of comparison.

Further illustrations as to the amounts of such payment made to competing customers of respondent as compensation for advertising services and facilities are set out in exhibit A.

PAR. 4. Respondent pays compensation to some of such customers for transportation services and facilities in connection with the handling of such commodities by making deductions from invoice prices on the face of the invoice, and such deductions are made under the following circumstances.

As a general practice and policy, the prices which respondent quotes and which appear on its invoices include the cost of transportation by common carrier to customers, and a common carrier is usually employed which receives its lawful charges from respondent or from the customer. When a customer pays the transportation charges to the common carrier, such charges are deducted from the invoice prices at the time the customer makes remittance to respondent.

Some of respondent's customers use trucks to deliver merchandise from their respective places of business to purchasers who are located in the neighborhood of Greenville, S. C., and Richmond, Va., in which cities respondent's plants are situated. Sometimes respondent's customers have trucks in those cities for the purpose of receiving goods from suppliers and transporting them to their respective places of business, and such goods do not require the total capacity of such trucks.

In order to aid some of such customers to utilize or to more fully utilize such trucks on their return trip, respondent has delivered to such customers at the door of its plants, since June 19, 1936, commodities purchased by them for transportation by such customers to their rsepective places of business; and in consideration of and compensation for such handling of such commodities, respondent, as above alleged, deducts from the invoice prices a sum equal to the common carrier charges for such transportation.

Under such circumstances, the cost of such handling to such purchasers, who transport their own purchases, was and is substantially less than the tariff charges by common carrier for the same services and facilities; and the savings thus effected result in a lower per unit cost for such commodities to such customers than the cost to customers to whom purchases are transported by common carrier. Other such customers similarly situated have requested respondent to so handle such commodities as they have purchased from respondent, and to receive such payments as compensation therefor, but respondent has denied such request, and their purchases are transported to them by common carrier.

In that such payments for transportation services and facilities have been and are granted to some such customers and denied to others, such payments are not available on proportionately equal terms to all customers competing in the distribution of such commodities.

PAR. 5. Such acts of respondent since June 19, 1936, in interstate commerce, in the manner and form aforesaid, in paying and contracting to pay valuable consideration to and for the benefit of some customers for services and facilities furnished by and through such customers, in connection with the handling, sale, and offering for sale of commodities theretofore sold to them by respondent without such payments being available on proportionately equal terms to all other competing customers is in violation of the provisions of section 2 (d) of the Robinson-Patman Act, further described in the preamble hereof.

REPORTS, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes" (the Clayton Act, U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936, and by virtue of the authority vested in the Federal Trade Commission by the aforesaid act, the Federal Trade Commission duly issued and served its complaint upon the respondent, The C. F. Sauer Co., charging it with violating the provisions of subsections (a) and (d) of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act. After the respondent had answered, hearings were held and evidence introduced on behalf of the Federal Trade Commission. Thereafter the Federal Trade Commission duly issued and served on the respondent its amended complaint in this proceeding charging violations of the provisions of subsections (a) and (d) of section 2 of the said Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act. The respondent in due course filed its answer to such amended complaint, admitting certain allegations and denying other allegations of said amended complaint.

After the issuance of said amended complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto and without the taking of any testimony pursuant thereto, a stipulation as to the facts was entered into between W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, and Simon Michelet, the duly authorized attorney for The C. F. Sauer Co. In the said stipulation as to the facts counsel for the respondent waived the taking of further evidence, the filing of the trial examiner's report, and all other intervening procedure, and expressly waived the filing of briefs and oral argument.

Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said amended complaint, the answer thereto, and the stipulation as to the facts, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, The C. F. Sauer Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Virginia with its principal office and place of business located at 2000 West Broad Street, in the city of Richmond, State of Virginia. The C. F. Sauer Co. operates plants at Richmond, Va., and Greenville, S. C. Mayonnaise and salad dressing are manufactured at respondent's plant located at Greenville, S. C., and are sold and distributed from said plant and from respondent's plant at Richmond, Va.; extracts, spices, tea, pepper, drugs, insecticides, and other commodities are manufactured, packaged, or compounded and are sold and distributed from the respondent's plants located at Richmond, Va.

The respondent has sold its food products to three general groups of customers; namely, wholesale grocers, retail chain grocers, and retail grocers.

PAR. 2. Since June 19, 1936, in the course and conduct of its business, the respondent has sold the aforesaid food products, manufactured, packed, and compounded in the aforesaid plants, to purchasers located in States other than the States in which said plants are located; and such food products so sold were shipped and caused to be transported by respondent from said plants across State lines to such purchasers.

PAR. 3. Since June 19, 1936, while engaged in commerce as aforesaid, the respondent has sold such food products of like grade and quality, for use, consumption, and resale, within the United States to some purchasers at higher prices than the prices charged to competing purchasers.

Illustrations of such sales at different prices are as follows:

1. During April of 1937 or May and June of 1938, respondent sold and shipped its Sauer's Salad Dressing to Dixie Home Stores, retail grocers who do business in North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia, at a net price of $2.70 per dozen quarts and $1.65 per dozen pints, and respondent concurrently sold and shipped said salad dressing to a number of other and competing purchasers among whom was the Mutual Distributing Co., of Asheville, N. C., also a retail grocer, at an invoice price of $3.80 per dozen quarts and $2.35 per dozen pints, from which invoice prices the respondent granted and allowed discounts of 10 percent and 5 percent, making net prices to the said purchaser of $3.25 per dozen for quarts and $2.01 per dozen for pints.

2. During April of 1937 or May and June of 1938, respondent sold and shipped its Sauer's Salad Dressing to said Dixie Home Stores, retail grocers, doing business in North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia, at a net price of $2.70 per dozen quarts and $1.63 per dozen pints, and respondent concurrently sold and shipped said salad dressing to Rose-Phillips Co., Greenwood, S. C., Seneca Grocery Co., Seneca, S. C., and McGee & Bleckley, Anderson, S. C., all of whom are wholesale grocers, whose customers compete with said Dixie Home Stores, at invoice prices of $3.80 per dozen quarts and $2.35 per dozen pints, from which invoice prices the respondent granted and allowed discounts of 10 percent and 5 percent to the wholesale grocers named, making net prices to the said purchasers of $3.25 per dozen for quarts and $2.01 per dozen for pints.

3. During March or August and September of 1937, respondent sold and shipped its miscellaneous packaged spices to Dixie Home Stores, retail grocers doing business in North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia, at an invoice price of 40 cents per dozen 10-cent-size packages, and respondent concurrently sold and shipped, during the same month, said spices to a large number of other and competing retail purchasers, among whom was Horn's Cash Store of Forest City, N. C., Mutual Distributing Co. of Asheville, N. C., and K. E. Simpson of Rutherfordton, N. C., at an invoice price of 70 cents per dozen 10-cent-size packages, from which price respondent granted and allowed a discount of 10 percent and 5 percent, making a net price of 60 cents per dozen packages.

Sales of such food products by respondent to some purchasers at higher prices than to other competing purchasers were not limited to the food products, the purchasers, or to the dates set forth in the above illustrations; but since June 19, 1936, in each trade area served, respondent sold some of such food products to one or a few purchasers at higher prices than the same food products were concurrently sold to other and competing purchasers, and the extent of the differentials between such prices varied from differentials of approximately 5 percent to differentials of approximately 25 percent, depending upon the food products sold and the purchaser, or either.

For example: The respondent sold some of its food products in the same trade area, to retail chain grocers and to wholesale grocers. Respondent's net price on some such food products was lower to the retail chain grocer than to the wholesale grocer, to such an extent that the retail chain grocer could and did sell such food products at retail at a price lower than such wholesale grocer could purchase such food products of like grade and quality from respondent.

PAR. 4. The differentials between the prices charged for some such food products by respondent to such competing purchasers was sufficient to permit the purchasers charged the lower prices to resell, and such purchasers did so resell, such food products at prices only slightly higher than, as low as, or lower than the prices at which competing resellers were able to purchase such food products from respondent. Purchasers paying the higher prices for such food products were unable to resell them except at a loss, at no profit, or at a profit insufficient, those commodities alone considered, to warrant continued or anything but passive resale effort. The Commission concludes that price differences such as those herein described are, in the circumstances of this case, material in that the effect thereof upon competition among purchasers and with favored purchasers was, and may be, to injure, prevent, or destroy such competition.

PAR. 5. In consideration of and as compensation for advertising services and facilities contracted to be furnished or furnished by some customers in connection with the handling, offering for sale, and sale of such food products, respondent contracted to pay, and paid, various sums, or in lieu thereof contracted to issue, and issued, credit memoranda in amounts equal to that percentage of the net prices charged by respondent for such food products which is set forth opposite the customers' names in the column entitled "Amount of Credit Memorandum"; and where no such percentage figure is shown, no such credit memoranda were issued by respondent in any amount to such customers, although such customers were competitive with the compensated customers and were ready, willing, and able, and in some instances offered, to furnish such services and facilities, which said offers were refused by respondent.

The following tabulation shows the amount of the credit memoranda granted some customers on purchases of some food products, such allowance being based on a percentage of the net purchase price of such food products, in comparison to a smaller allowance or no allowance granted to competitors of such purchasers who also purchased such food products during the same specified time.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid discriminations in price and the aforesaid payments and allowances by the respondent, as herein found, are in violation of subsections (a) and (d) of section 2 of an act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes" (the Clayton Act, U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent thereto, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondent herein and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of subsection (a) and subsection (d) of section 2 of an act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes" (the Clayton Act, U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936.

It is ordered, That respondent The C. F. Sauer Co., a corporation, its officers, directors, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in the sale of mayonnaise, salad dressing, extracts, spices, tea, pepper, insecticides, or other of its products in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the aforesaid Clayton Act, do forthwith cease and desist:

1. From discriminating, directly or indirectly, in the price of any such products of like grade and quality by selling any such product or products to any purchaser at a price or prices materially different from those at which sales are made to any other purchaser where those buying at such different prices compete in the resale of such product or products, or where the effect is, or may be, to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with any favored purchaser or his customers.

2. From otherwise discriminating in price, either directly or indirectly, among different purchasers of any such product or products of like grade and quality in any manner prohibited by section 2 (a) of the said Clayton Act as amended.

It is further ordered, That said respondent, its officers, directors, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the sale of any of respondent's aforesaid products in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the said Clayton Act, do forthwith cease and desist from paying, or contracting to pay, or granting or allowing, anything of value to or for the benefit of any customer as compensation or in consideration for any advertising, promotive, or other services or facilities furnished by, or through, such customer in connection with the processing, handling, sale, or offering for sale of any such product or products, unless such payments or allowances are available on proportionally equal terms to all other customers competing in the distribution of such products.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

INTER-STATE CIGARETTE MERCHANDISERS ASSOCIATION ET AL.

Docket 4388. Complaint, Nov. 26, 1940—Decision, July 31, 1941

Where an unincorporated trade association, together with its membership of five associations of operators of automatic cigarette vending machines, engaged in such business in the metropolitan area of New York City, and in New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, and Massachusetts, who purchased such machines from manufacturers and distributors and installed them in various types of retail establishments, such as restaurants, taverns, gasoline stations, etc., by agreement with proprietors thereof; controlling between 85 and 90 percent of the business in the territory concerned and enabled, through their aforesaid associations, more effectively to influence such trade for the enhancement of their own profits, and in active and substantial competition with each other and with others except as below set forth; and with the officers, directors, and members of said organizations—

Acting in concert to monopolize business in their respective territories, by means of (1) campaigns designed to force all operators controlling an appreciable number of locations, to join the associations, (2) demands that manufacturers refuse to sell machines to nonmembers, (3) appointment of committees to induce manufacturers to stop selling direct to "locations" and to promise not to create new operators or to sell nonmembers, or to induce nonmembers to join the association, (4) association agreements to purchase from the four leading manufacturers a specified number of machines annually in consideration of manufacturers' agreement not to create new operators or sell nonmembers, (5) threatening with boycott and, in many instances, boycotting, machines of noncooperating manufacturers, and (6) use of the combined power of all the associations in various ways to intimidate and coerce manufacturers as aforesaid—

Entered into and carried out understandings, agreements, and conspiracies between and among themselves for the purpose of restraining and eliminating competition in the purchase, distribution, and installation of automatic cigarette vending machines in interstate commerce; and, in pursuance thereof—

(a) Established and attempted to establish the members of said associations as a preferred class for the purpose of having manufacturers and distributors confine the sale and distribution of automatic cigarette machines to such member operators exclusively;

(b) Interfered with efforts of competitors of said member operators to obtain such machines;

(c) Required, induced, and compelled manufacturers and distributors, by promises and threats, not to sell or ship machines to competitors of said member operators, and to confine the sale and distribution thereof to said member operators; and

(d) Threatened to and did boycott manufacturers and distributors selling machines to competitors of said member operators;

With result that manufacturers were forced to comply with the requirements of the various associations and created no new operators in their territories, refused to sell to locations or to wholesale dealers who sold to locations, and to nonmembers of associations, and that, in certain territories, manufacturers refusing to abide by their agreements not to create new operators in consideration of an association's undertaking to purchase a definite quantity of their machines annually, were boycotted by the association members:

Held, That such acts and practices, as above set forth, were all to the prejudice of competitors of said member operators and of the public, had a dangerous tendency to and actually did hinder and prevent competition in the sale of automatic cigarette vending machines, unreasonably restrained commerce in said machines, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Daniel J. Murphy for the Commission.

Parker, Chapin & Flattau, of New York City, for respondents.

PAR. 14. The capacity, tendency and effect of the aforesaid understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies and the acts and practices engaged in and performed pursuant thereto and in furtherance thereof are, and have been:

(a) To unduly and unlawfully restrain, lessen, injure, and suppress competition in the sale of automatic cigarette vending machines which are sold to the purchasers thereof for shipment into the various States where the respondents are located;

(b) To unduly and unlawfully impede, hinder, and prevent certain manufacturers, producers, and sellers of automatic cigarette vending machines from selling such machines for shipment from the various States where the said manufacturers, producers, and sellers are located into the various States where the respondent operators are located;

(c) To unduly and unlawfully restrain, lessen, injure, and suppress competition in the sale and purchase of automatic cigarette vending machines which are shipped in commerce into the various States where the respondents are located from the various States where the manufacturers, producers, and sellers of such machines are located;

PAR. 16. The acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of competitors of respondents and of the public; have a dangerous tendency to and have actually hindered and prevented competition in the sale of automatic cigarette vending machines in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act; have unreasonably restrained such commerce in automatic cigarette vending machines, and have a dangerous tendency to create in the respondents a monopoly in the sale of automatic cigarette vending machines, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

The above-named respondent officers, directors, and members do not constitute the entire membership of said respondent association but are representative members thereof, respectively.

PAR. 7. Those hereinabove specifically named respondents as officers, directors, and members of the said respondent organizations and associations do not constitute the entire list or number of such officers, directors, or members, but are typical and representative thereof.

PAR. 8. Said operators of automatic cigarette vending machines, members of said organizations and associations and respondents herein, in the course and conduct of their business, have purchased and are now purchasing automatic cigarette vending machines from manufacturers, producers, and distributors in various States; said respondent operators, by agreement with proprietors, install such machines in various types of retail establishments in which the sale of cigarettes is contemplated, i. e., restaurants, taverns, grills, barrooms, gasoline stations, etc.; the places where such machines are installed are commonly known in the trade as "locations"; the said respondent operators have caused and are now causing automatic cigarette vending machines to be shipped and transported in commerce to the places of business and to the locations of such purchasing respondents from points in States other than the States in which such respective points of destination are located.

In the course and conduct of their respective businesses heretofore described, except to the extent to which competition in the purchase of automatic cigarette vending machines has been restrained, lessened, injured, and suppressed by the undertakings, agreements, and other facts hereinafter referred to, the respondent operators of automatic cigarette vending machines have been, and are now, in active and substantial competition with each other and with other operators of such machines in the purchase and location of such machines.

Said respondent operators of automatic cigarette vending machines, members of the said respondent organizations and associations hereinabove described, constitute a large and important part of the operators of automatic cigarette vending machines in the several States of the United States in which the members of respondent organizations and associations are engaged in business; and such members constitute a group so large and influential in the trade as to be able to control and influence the flow of trade and commerce in automatic cigarette vending machines within, to, and from the several States wherein the said respondent operators are engaged in business. Said members as allied and banded together in associations and organizations are enabled thereby to more effectively exercise control and influence of such trade and commerce for the promotion and enhancement of their own volume of trade and profits.

PAR. 9. The automatic cigarette vending machine industry came into existence about 10 years ago, and is composed of operators and manufacturers. An operator of cigarette vending machines is one who purchases the machines from the manufacturer and solicits proprietors of various types of retail businesses, such as poolrooms, barrooms, restaurants, or other places, for permission to install one or more of said machines on the premises of the owners, upon the agreement that the operator shall service said machines with the various nationally advertised brands of cigarettes, for which privilege and said service the operator agrees to allow the owner of the premises a commission of anywhere from ½ to 1 cent on each package of cigarettes sold through said machine while on the premises of the owner. The establishment where such a machine is placed is, in the parlance of the operator, called a "location" or "stop." The operator purchases his cigarettes either direct from the manufacturer or from a wholesale tobacco dealer. He employs one or more so-called service men, who in New York City are members of a labor union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, who from time to time call at the locations, taking with them the various brands of cigarettes which they use in servicing said machines, thereby keeping them supplied with the necessary merchandise for resale. These service men, in addition to keeping the machine supplied with cigarettes, also collect the money deposited therein by purchasers and, after accounting to the owners of the locations for their commissions, return the balance to their employer, the operator. The number of locations in which an operator has installed machines ranges from 20 to 5,000.

Prior to the organization of the various respondent associations, the number of locations which an operator had at any one time fluctuated. This was due to competition among the various operators for these locations, since in the majority of cases the machine was installed and was permitted to remain on location only at the will of the location owner. The competition consisted, among other things, of an offer of more commission per package of cigarettes, the payment of a bonus or rental privilege in addition to the payment of a commission, the offer of various types of premiums such as free matches, attractive electric illumination, clocks, or a more efficient or more attractive looking machine.

PAR. 10. For more than 3 years last past there have been, and are now, several manufacturers, producers, and sellers of automatic cigarette vending machines, the four principal ones being Rowe Manufacturing Co., Inc., New York, N. Y. (which, in addition to manufacturing and selling said machines, also operates its own machines through a number of subsidiary companies in the various territories where respondent operators are located); Arthur H. Du Grenier Co., Haverhill, Mass.; U-Need-A-Pak Products Co., Brooklyn, N. Y.; and National Vendors, Inc., St. Louis, Mo. The places of business of the various manufacturers of such machines were, and are now, located in States other than the States where the respondent operators of automatic cigarette vending machines have their places of business; said manufacturers, producers, and sellers have been, and are now, engaged in the business of manufacturing, and selling such machines which they have been, and are now, shipping in commerce between and among the several States of the United States, and have been, and are now, selling large quantities of such machines to the respondent operators or their agents and shipping such machines in commerce to said purchasers into the various States of the United States other than the States where said manufacturers, producers, and sellers have their places of business. Except to the extent to which competition between said manufacturers, producers, and sellers in the manufacture and sale of such machines, and in the sale thereof for shipment in commerce into the various States of the United States other than the States where said manufacturers, producers, and sellers have their places of business, has been restrained, lessened, injured, and suppressed by the understandings, agreements, and other factors hereinafter referred to, the said manufacturers, producers, and sellers, in the course and conduct of their respective businesses as aforesaid, have been, and are now, engaged in active and substantial competition with each other in the manufacture and sale of such machines, and in the sale thereof for shipment in commerce into the various States of the United States, and in the sale thereof to the respondent operators or their agents, and to competitors of respondent operators for shipment to said respondent operators and competitors of respondent operators in commerce into the various States of the United States.

PAR. 11. The manufacturers have been constantly endeavoring to improve the efficiency of their machines and by reason thereof have from time to time manufactured different types and models. As a more efficient model was manufactured and distributed, operators who had purchased previous models which had become obsolete exchanged the obsolescent model for the new model and received as a credit on the purchase price of the new machine a certain amount as a trade-in allowance. In many instances the operator, instead of exchanging the obsolescent models, sold them to operators who made a practice of purchasing and operating only used machines. The manufacturers likewise distributed the old models taken in trade to other operators or to some individual or firm which desired to enter the operating business with used machines.

Since the organization of the various respondent associations, the respondents have engaged in a concerted and cooperative effort and have adopted rules designed to prohibit manufacturers from selling their machines direct to locations, to new operators, or to operators who are not members of the associations. The respondents have conducted campaigns designed to force all nonmember operators, who at the time controlled an appreciable number of locations, to join the associations, and where such nonmember operators have refused to join the respondents have requested and demanded of manufacturers that the said manufacturers should refuse to sell such machines to such nonmembers. As occasion required, they have appointed committees from among their membership whose duty it was to call upon manufacturers for the purpose of inducing them to stop selling direct to locations, to promise or agree not to create new operators, not to sell to nonmembers of the associations, or to agree to endeavor to induce nonmembers to join the association. On divers occasions the various associations have entered into contracts, agreements, or understandings whereby the associations each agreed to purchase from the four manufacturers a specified number of machines each year in consideration of the agreement, understanding, or promise on the part of manufacturers not to create new operators or not to sell to nonmembers. Where manufacturers have refused or failed to carry out their agreement not to sell direct to locations, not to create new operators, or not to sell to nonmembers, said associations have refused to carry out the agreement to purchase from said manufacturers, have threatened to boycott said manufacturers' machines, and in many instances the members of said associations have boycotted said manufacturers and have refused to purchase machines from said manufacturers.

PAR. 12. The respondent The Cigarette Merchandisers Association, Inc., adopted a constitution, bylaws, and trade practice rules which have been revised from time to time. The objects of the said respondent association as set forth in the preamble of its constitution are as follows:

The objects and purposes of this organization shall be to foster trade and commerce in the automatic cigarette vending machine business; to reform abuses relative thereto; to diffuse accurate information in regard to the standing of customers and other matters; to procure uniformity and certainty in the customs and usages of trade; to settle equitably and justly differences between its members; to promote a more enlarged and friendly intercourse among automatic cigarette vendors; to hold meetings and social gatherings for the better realization of these purposes; and to promote a better understanding and relationship of its members towards each other; to create a code of fair competition in the operation of cigarette vending machines; to exchange such information as will improve the conditions of members.

The trade practice rules of the said respondent association include the following:

SECTION 3. The members are prohibited from purchasing additional cigarette machines when such are made by any manufacturer or vendor who sells, or permits the sale of such machines to individual locations in competition with the operators.

Complaints against members for violating any of the association rules are referred by the president of the association to the grievance committee:

which Committee holds hearings thereon and decides the complaint and reports their decision to the Association. The Association may mete out such punishment for noncompliance with such decision as to them may seem just and proper, under the circumstances, after an opportunity has been given to the offending member to defend himself before the Association. The action of the Association in such matters is final.

The rules and regulations, objects, purposes, and policies of the association were constantly brought to the attention of the manufacturers of automatic cigarette vending machines through committees which were appointed from time to time to call upon said manufacturers. For example, on June 25, 1936, such a committee was appointed. On August 17, 1936, the following resolution was proposed and adopted:

"That a committee be appointed to call on the manufacturers of cigarette vending equipment in order to determine their intentions toward cooperating with the Association." It was decided, after discussion, that Mr. Miller should first call upon these manufacturers and then, at a later date, Mr. Bloom, Mr. Orowitz, and Mr. Berger would follow up with another call.

At the meeting held on November 27, 1936, the following report was made by a member of such committee:

the results of a combined meeting between representatives of the C. M. A. and the Cigarette Machine Manufacturers, which was held at the Hotel New Yorker several weeks ago at which time the Mills Manufacturing Co., Rowe Mfg. Co., and the U-Need-A-Pak Company assured the operators of their willingness to cooperate with them in every way possible in formulating policies for the benefit of the industry.

On March 25, 1937, such a committee was appointed to call upon National Vendors, Inc., in order to secure its cooperation with the plans and policies of the association. The said committee made its report at a meeting of the association on April 8, 1937. At said meeting held April 8, 1937, a committee was appointed to join with a committee of New Jersey operators in calling upon Stewart-McGuire. A minute of said meeting is as follows:

It was further suggested that this committee as appointed join with a committee of New Jersey operators in calling upon Stewart-McGuire. Mr. Stein, Manager of the New Jersey Association, stated that such a committee of Jersey operators would be appointed at their next regular meeting, to be held Tuesday, April 13th, 1937, and it was decided that after this, a date convenient to all parties concerned would be selected for such a joint meeting. Mr. Berger, speaking for the Rowe Manufacturing Company, advised the membership that his firm was ready and willing to adopt any plan agreeable to the other manufacturers that might lead to stronger cooperation between the manufacturer and the operator and result in their mutual benefit. Mr. Yolen, representing the Mills Novelty Company, assured the membership of the Association that his firm would also cooperate in every possible manner with the operators and adopt any plan agreeable to other manufacturers. Mr. Willens, representing the Uneeda-Pack Manufacturing Company, assured the membership likewise.

A joint conference between manufacturers and operators was held October 13, and October 19, 1937, at the Hotel Commodore, New York City. A report of said meeting was presented at the following regular meeting of the association.

The activities of the association, through its committees appointed by it to call upon manufacturers and impress upon them the necessity of cooperating with the association in its efforts, were successful; manufacturers have cooperated to the fullest extent, in consequence of which very few new operators of vending machines have been created in this territory since 1937. Where a new operator has been created, it was done with the consent of the association. At the present time approximately 90 percent of the cigarette vending machines in operation in the metropolitan area of New York City are owned or controlled by members of the association. This has enabled the association to direct most of its efforts toward elimination of competition from nonmembers of the association, as well as elimination of competition between their members for one another's locations. The latter was accomplished first by the adoption of various restrictions and the imposition of penalties upon members who refused or failed to adhere to rules and regulations, and by the creation of a separate corporation whose sole function was to assist the members in eliminating competition from nonmembers, principally by paying a bonus to a member for each location he could show was taken away from a nonmember.

The manager of the association, in a letter to the members dated September 20, 1937, stated as follows:

You are all aware of the competitive conditions prevailing throughout the industry at the present time, due principally to the number of new operators who have recently entered the field. Unfortunately, most of these operators are not in sympathy with the objects and policies of CIGARETTE MERCHANDISERS ASSOCIATION and as a consequence are the cause of creating discord in many sections. Unless their activities are controlled, it is very possible that the reforms accomplished by CIGARETTE MERCHANDISERS ASSOCIATION during the past year will be seriously affected and our future effort towards continuing our good work hampered. Even though the effect of this competition has not as yet been felt by all of you, your wholehearted attention and cooperation should be given, so that it may be controlled before becoming widespread throughout the territory covered by CIGARETTE MERCHANDISERS ASSOCIATION. To this end, we ask that you make it a special point to be present at the coming meeting, so that we may have the benefit of your views and opinions in considering this problem and in deciding upon a means to cope with it. In this respect, I might advise that the National Association has already decided upon a preliminary course of action, with which we will acquaint you at the coming meeting.

At a meeting of the association held March 10, 1938, the following report was made of a discussion concerning the question and practicability of a central buying agency. It was proposed to favor only those manufacturers who would agree not to sell to nonmembers. Mr. Levy expressed the opinion that this is in the nature of a boycott. The situation was likened by Mr. Forbes to the resident buying offices conducted and patronized by department stores.

At several meetings of the board of directors of the association plans were discussed for the adoption of a central buying office. At a meeting of the board of directors held June 9, 1938, the following report was made:

The policy of the Association regarding the manufacturers' cooperation and the curtailment of the practice of creating new operators. It was the suggestion of a member that a central buying office be established on a non-profit basis for all members of the Association. He felt that the time was ripe for the members of the Association to do something constructive and help stabilize the business. After discussion, no definite plan was reached, and a recommendation was made to submit this problem to the body at large.

At a meeting of the directors held June 16, 1938, the following report was made:

The matter has been taken up with a legal mind at a meeting of the Committee. The plan is legal and feasible and can be worked out. This plan is as follows. The operators enter into an agreement with the Association. The Association is to make all purchases of machines through an office created by the Association. The operators can make individual deals with the manufacturers, if they notify the Association of the deal. A code of fair trade practices is to be adopted, with penalties for violation of this code. The manufacturers can be placed on the Association accredited list when they agree to restrict the territory of New York to accredited operators. Manufacturers agree to list with the Association all their operations and agree not to extend same. Manufacturers shall not make sales of individual machines to location owners.

At the meeting held September 1, 1938, it was unanimously adopted that a central buying plan be established. At the meeting held on September 15, 1938, it was reported to the membership that the association had gone on record as favoring:

a plan for a central buying office and that the Board of Directors had devised the following plan: Vendormatic Service Corporation will be set up to handle this plan. The members are obliged to sign the contract at a given date.

PAR. 13. The objects and purposes of the Cigarette Merchandisers Association of New Jersey, Inc., as set forth in its constitution, by-laws, and code of fair trade rules, and as disclosed by numerous resolutions adopted at its meetings, and the things and acts done pursuant thereto, are similar to those of the New York association; to wit, The Cigarette Merchandisers Association, Inc.

In connection with the efforts of the association to monopolize the business of operating cigarette machines in its territory for the benefit of its members, the association requested and obtained the cooperation of the manufacturers of automatic cigarette vending machines in refusing to sell to locations and in refusing to create new operators. The association from time to time appointed committees to call upon manufacturers of automatic cigarette vending machines and to impress upon them the advisability of refusing to create new operators and to refuse to sell to locations, and in various other ways attempted to exert, and did exert, pressure on such manufacturers. The association entered into agreements with manufacturers whereby, in consideration for the manufacturer agreeing not to sell to new operators or to locations, it undertook to purchase on behalf of its members a definite number of machines each year. When a manufacturer refused to comply with the association's requests or demands with respect to sales of cigarette vending machines, the manufacturer was boycotted or threatened with a boycott by the association. The association demanded that its members strictly adhere to the rules and regulations of the association. A grievance or arbitration committee heard complaints respecting violation of the rules and regulations by members; the said committee had authority to mete out, and did mete out, penalties for violations thereof.

PAR. 14. The objects and purposes of The Automatic Cigarette Vendors Association of Eastern Pennsylvania as set forth in its constitution, bylaws, and code of fair trade practice, and the resolutions adopted from time to time at its meetings, and the acts and things done thereunder and pursuant thereto, are similar to those of the Cigarette Mechandisers Association, Inc., and Cigarette Merchandisers Association of New Jersey, Inc. The primary object and purpose of the association, as gathered from its activities, is the creation of a monopoly of the cigarette vending operating business in its territory for the benefit of its members. For the accomplishment of its object and purpose, the association from time to time has adopted rules and regulations designed to eliminate competition among its members. The association accepts and secures the cooperation of manufacturers in eliminating competition from nonmembers. The association from time to time impressed upon manufacturers the advisability of the manufacturers' cooperation in limiting sales of their machines to members of the association. In this connection the association entered into an agreement with the manufacturers whereby it was to purchase a specific number of machines from each manufacturer during the year, in consideration of said manufacturers' promise not to create new operators. One of the manufacturers did not abide by its promise and did sell to nonmembers of the association, with the result that no member of the association since that time has purchased machines from that company, nor has the association carried out its part of the contract to purchase annually a specified quantity of machines from that manufacturer.

PAR. 15. The objects and purposes of The Cigarette Machine Operators of Connecticut, Inc., as set forth in its constitution, bylaws, and code of trade practices, are substantially similar to those of the other respondent associations hereinabove referred to. The association has in its membership the operators in the State of Connecticut. The members of the association control 90 percent of the machines now in operation in that State. The preamble of the association's constitution and bylaws is as follows:

To eliminate unfair and ruinous competition which has caused serious financial loss and embarrassment to the vendors of tobacco products by machines, to improve economic conditions in the industry, and to the end that the sale of tobacco products by machines in the State of Connecticut may be stabilized and conducted profitably, this Association is formed.

Under the title Objects and Purposes of the Association, the following is stated:

The purpose of the Association shall be to establish such relations and mutual understanding among those engaged in the vending of tobacco products by machines as will contribute to the welfare of the business generally; to consider and adopt such forms of lawful and ethical business practices and principles as seem likely to improve economic conditions; to cooperate with government agencies and with those engaged in the tobacco industry generally to eliminate the evils that now exist or may hereafter arise, and to foster such measures deemed for the best interests of the business and welfare of the public * * *.

The association's trade practice rules prohibit the following as an unfair trade practice:

(the operation of) any cigarette machines when such are made by any manufacturer or vendor who sells or permits the sale of such machines to individual locations, in competition with the operators or to do business with any manufacturer or vendor of such machines who fails to comply with provisions for territorial protection to members of the association.

The association from time to time appointed committees to call on manufacturers for the purpose of protesting sales of machines to new operators. The association likewise adopted resolutions which it mailed to manufacturers in which it was indicated that the members thereof objected to sales of machines to new operators and that such sales would incur the displeasure of members. It also secured written pledges from manufacturers that they would comply with the rules and regulations of the association as they applied to sales to new operators.

At a meeting of the association held September 8, 1936, the following report was made:

A discussion relative to any member being forced to discontinue purchasing machines from a manufacturer because of some breach of territory rights, and what assistance that member could get regarding machines from other members.

PAR. 16. Cigarette Merchandisers Association of New England was organized at a later date than the other heretofore-mentioned respondent associations. Its objects and purposes, as indicated by its constitution, bylaws, and code of fair trade practices, are similar in every respect to the objects and purposes of the other respondent associations. This association has joined forces with the Interstate Association and has participated in its activities. The minutes of meetings of its executive committee and of the membership disclose the appointment of committees to call on manufacturers in reference to the latter's sale to locations and the imposition of penalties on members for violating the association's fair trade rules.

PAR. 17. The objects and purposes of the Inter-State Cigarette Merchandisers Association, as set forth in its constitution and bylaws, are similar to the objects and purposes of the other respondent associations. Its constitution sets forth:

This Association aims thru collective action to lay the foundation for and maintain equitable relations between all factors that affect economic conditions in the Industry. It recommends uniform action in securing constructive legislation toward the elimination of any abuses of power or unfairness. This Association leaves all questions of management in this business to the determination of each member.

At a meeting of the association held May 20, 1939, the question arose:

As to what to do where a given manufacturer sold machines to either nonmembers or started an independent operation in a given area.

Mr. Alfred Sharenow suggested that the better customers of such a manufacturer could speak to such manufacturer where there was such a disturbance in any given area and that the manufacturer would probably seriously consider and remedy any such situation.

Mr. Charles W. Stange reminded the Interstate Association that the purpose of the Inter-State was to eliminate abuses by the manufacturers and that everything should be done to acquaint the manufacturer with the disturbance in a given area.

Mr. Goldstein proposed the following resolution which was seconded by Mr. Nastri: "That the Inter-State CMA appoint representatives to cooperate with the local associations in contacting the particular manufacturer of a given area in order to straighten out any given matter."

Mr. John Sharenow moved that it was the opinion of the Inter-State CMA that New York CMA and New Jersey CMA appoint a Committee to settle the commission rates in overlapping areas.

The minutes of the meeting of the association held October 14, 1939, clearly show that the object and purpose of the association were to use the combined power of the membership of all the local associations as consolidated by the Inter-State organization in intimidating and compelling manufacturers of automatic cigarette machines to refuse to sell to locations, to nonmembers of associations or to new operators. Some of the minutes of said meeting are as follows:

Mr. Barest then brought up the question of whether any of the Inter-State members were having trouble with direct sales to locations or with the creation of new operators in any particular area.

Mr. Zimmerman reported that because of the difficulties arising with new competition created by a manufacturer, the Connecticut C. M. A. called on said manufacturer for cooperation. The manufacturer involved did not offer to assist the association in clearing up the difficulties created.

Mr. John Sharenow told the members that some difficulty had arisen in New Jersey with a cigarette vending machine manufacturer and that following considerable effort, the New Jersey association arrived at an agreement with that manufacturer who has been cooperating with the C. M. A. of New Jersey since that time.

Mr. Al Sharenow expressed himself as being sincerely disappointed in the method used by the Connecticut Association to accomplish what the Inter-State had originally set out to do. According to Mr. Sharenow the original purpose for the formation of the Inter-State C. M. A. was to attempt to obtain cooperation from manufacturers in all areas where there are C. M. A.'s and that where any manufacturer would not cooperate, the Inter-State was to appoint a committee made up of members from various States to call on the offending manufacturer. In such a way the full power of the Inter-State Association could be used because in each area covered by any member in the Inter-State there are certain groups who have strength with each manufacturer.

Mr. Hawthorne suggested that if a manufacturer refused to cooperate that one of the best methods open to any State association was to notify their members of the facts and to allow the members to follow their own best judgments.

Mr. Forbes stated that the C. M. A. of New York has no difficulty with any manufacturer and that these manufacturers only sell to any new operator at the suggestion of the Association.

Mr. Sharenow said that the reason for the cooperation of all manufacturers with the New York Association was because all manufacturers were sufficiently represented by the membership for them to cooperate with the Association members. He also suggested that inasmuch as the New York Association is in a friendly status with all manufacturers, that they use their strength in behalf of other Inter-State members.

Mr. Zimmerman made a motion that each individual Manager of the various C. M. A.'s write a letter to any offending manufacturer asking for cooperation wherever necessary.

Mr. King stated that at the present time the Pennsylvania Association is receiving all cooperation requested and that they have been working on a private matter with one particular manufacturer for a period of one year and, therefore, he did not want the Pennsylvania Association to go on record to write this one particular manufacturer.

Mr. Forbes suggested that the services of the President and Treasurer of the New York C. M. A. be used for contacting any manufacturer involved.

Mr. Al Sharenow made a motion which was passed that in the event of any disturbance the Recorder be immediately notified by the Association in that territory; that Managers of each association have on file a record of their operators according to number of machines and type of machines; and that each Manager contact the proper operators and arrange for them to meet with the offending manufacturer.

Mr. Fuhrman suggested that the individual association select whatever representatives were best suited to the particular case and Mr. Forbes suggested using operators who were not purchasers of the machines made by the particular manufacturer involved.

PAR. 18. The various local respondent associations all joined the respondent Inter-State Association, appointed the requisite number of delegates who attended its meetings, and in various ways cooperated together and with the Inter-State Association in attempting to effectuate its objects and purposes.

The president of the Cigarette Machine Operators of Connecticut, Inc., in a letter dated October 23, 1939, to the manager of the Cigarette Merchandisers Association of New Jersey, Inc., who was also recorder of the Inter-State Association, after referring to competition from an operator who, it was alleged, is controlled by a distributor for the U-Need-A-Pak Corporation, stated:

As this has been a serious situation here for some time, and some action must be taken to see if it can be eliminated, I am requesting you to get in touch with the presidents of the various associations who are members of the Interstate C. M. A., to appoint one or two men to act as a committee to call on the head of the U-Need-A-Pak Corporation, I would sincerely recommend that the men chosen should be those who are large U-Need-A-Pak operators, and who are intimately known to the officers of the U-Need-A-Pak Corporation, so that their word will carry more weight.

Arrangements should also be made for an interview with the officers of the Company in question, and I shall be glad to receive any comments or suggestions that would tend to make this meeting a successful one.

The recorder, under date of October 25, 1939, replied as follows:

I received your letter of October 23rd yesterday and will immediately communicate with the other members of the Inter-State C. M. A. I would like to set a date for this meeting with U-Need-A-Pak Products Corp. for the very near future.

I do hope that we shall be able to straighten out the situation so that business in Connecticut can resume its usual smooth operation.

As far as making any appointment for the committee to call on the officers of the company in question, I believe that we should hold the matter in abeyance following the interview with Messrs. Willens and Weiner.

The recorder, on November 2, 1939, in a communication further stated:

After receiving your letter concerning the situation in Connecticut, I contacted all the Managers of the Inter-State Association members.

In the meantime, I also got in touch with Matthew Forbes who asked me to let him handle the matter, if possible. Mr. Forbes told me yesterday that he had lunch with Mr. Willens during the past week and had taken up the situation with him. Mr. Willens has told Mr. Forbes that he will investigate the matter and I am sure that it will be taken care of very shortly without any further contact through the Inter-State members.

At a meeting of the Inter-State Cigarette Merchandisers Association on February 11, 1940, Manager Forbes of the New York association reported that—

A situation had arisen in Connecticut which was causing trouble to members of that Association. Both Mr. Forbes and Mr. Hawthorne volunteered their services to clear up this matter and the manufacturer agreed to sell the operation to members of the Connecticut C. M. A.

A meeting of the Inter-State Association was held February 11, 1940. The eastern representative for the National Vendors, Inc., who was present at said meeting, stated:

January 29, 1940, he received an inquiry from the St. Louis office concerning this operator. He thereupon contacted his representative in Boston, who had sold five machines to this operator without investigating whether or not this man was already an established cigarette vending machine operator. Mr. Cantor saw this operator on February 8th at which time they told him that they had purchased fifty machines from another manufacturer and was given an order which he refused to accept.

Mr. Sparrow of Connecticut stated that the report was made that the Diamond Self Service was entering the field about three weeks before the operation actually was started. The company was backed by a tobacco concern. Originally the U-Need-A-Pak Products Corp. was requested to sell machines to this new operator but refused. Mr. Kushner, a representative of the U-Need-A-Pak Corp., had been instructed how to act in this matter by his company. However, the U-Need-A-Pak Corp. had also gone on record that if someone else started a new operator, they would sell equipment to him. Mr. Sparrow said that he heard of the DuGrenier machines which had been sold through his nephew who had lost several locations. He immediately called New York to find out from Mr. Glassgold what the situation was. Mr. Kushner of the U-Need-A-Pak Corp. investigated the locations and found DuGrenier machines operating and then wired his firm the facts.

Mr. Morris Zimmerman stated that Mr. Sparrow had been very instrumental in clearing up the former situation in Connecticut.

He also said that he had been forewarned of new trouble in Connecticut. The Diamond Self Service, according to Mr. Zimmerman is headed by a group of racketeers. This same group has started operations in various lines and then sold out for large sums of money. This group is using politics, other types of pressure and actual arrests in order to put machines into locations.

Mr. Forbes suggested that a campaign of action should be planned without any further recourse to committee meetings with manufacturers.

President Masone stated that he had a conference with Mr. Willens on the evening of February 10th concerning this matter. Mr. Willens promised that if the DuGrenier, Rowe and National organizations would each go on record not to make any more sales that he would stop selling machines to the Diamond Self Service. However, there was one condition to this statement and that was that he must be permitted to fill the last order which he had received.

Mr. Sparrow declared that the situation in Hartford is a matter of a personal grievance. He also said that he had been instrumental in preventing the sale of U-Need-A-Pak machines to newly created nonmembers in Connecticut. Mr. Willens has told Mr. Sparrow that since straightening out the situation in Connecticut, there has been only one U-Need-A-Pak machine sold in that State. Again Mr. Sparrow brought up the fact that a new operator was created in Connecticut by Mr. Zimmerman, a member of the Association, who sold one Aristocrat machine thereby starting another competitor in the field.

Mr. John Sharenow stated that the same evils existed everywhere, that in order for a new operator to purchase machines from a manufacturer, he would have to have originally some equipment. However, he felt that the question in this case was would DuGrenier have sold the Diamond Self Service any more machines when they had been advised of the error which was made. If they would have refused to do so and all other manufacturers had also refused to do so then the situation would have straightened out of itself. In New York and New Jersey we have been able to take care of matters with most of the manufacturers and therefore, we have been able to get the cooperation which we deserve. Mr. Sharenow further asserted that in his opinion a committee could take care of this situation and that a manufacturer who has lost the good will of Association operators, must continue for a reasonable length of time to try to win the respect of those operators.

A motion was made and passed to appoint a committee to take up matters of this sort with any manufacturer with whom trouble might arise. Mr. John Sharenow further stated that he should ask the manufacturers to observe the spirit of our request and not to look for loopholes which could possibly be found. In other words, if a manufacturer were to consult us first before actually shipping machines we could possibly be of assistance to them.

On February 19, 1940, Secretary Masone of The Cigarette Machine Operators of Connecticut, Inc., in a communication to the U-Need-A-Pak Products Corporation stated as follows:

On behalf of our Connecticut Association, I want to thank you for the courtesy shown the representatives of our Inter-State Association when we met in your office last week.

Naturally, we are interested in the outcome of that conference with you and your associates, and we are watching with a great deal of interest any shipments of machines made to the operator we discussed. According to your promise of last week the shipment of machines en route to him at the time of our discussion, must have reached him by this time, and any future shipment of machines made at this time would be against our agreement. It may also interest you to know that we have received further assurances from the other manufacturers that they positively will not ship this concern any machines.

PAR. 19. In the territory covered by the several respondent associations and Inter-State Association the members of said associations control between 85 and 90 percent of the business of operating automatic cigarette vending machines. Manufacturers have been forced to comply with the requirements of the various associations and have not created any new operators in territories covered by the various associations; said manufacturers have refused to sell to locations or to wholesale dealers with whom they formerly did business but who sold to locations; said manufacturers have likewise refused to sell to nonmembers of associations. In certain territories manufacturers who have refused to abide by agreements not to create new operators in consideration for the undertaking on the part of an association to purchase a definite quantity of their machines annually have been boycotted by the members of such association. An example is the case of the U-Need-A-Pak Corporation which entered into such an agreement with the Philadelphia association, The Automatic Cigarette Vendors Association of Eastern Pennsylvania. The U-Need-A-Pak Corporation, subsequent to the making of said agreement did sell its machines to nonmembers. Since that time no member of the Philadelphia association has purchased machines from the U-Need-A-Pak Corporation.

The effect of the activities of the various associations, acting individually and in combination with the Inter-State Association, with respect to manufacturers is clearly indicated by extracts from a memorandum report dated March 14, 1940, prepared by the president of the DuGrenier Sales Co. to the Arthur H. DuGrenier Manufacturing Co.

concerning his meeting with the secretary of the Cigarette Merchandisers Association of New Jersey, Inc.:

Mr. Cherry called on us for the purpose of reaching an understanding with DuGrenier that we would not sell cigarette machines to any new accounts in New Jersey. Specifically he wanted us to agree not to deliver to Schnorrbush machines on the order which we have. This led to a general discussion of the policies of his Association, what we could expect in return, etc., etc.

It is our understanding that the Philadelphia Association does not even permit us to sell machines to non-members. Kline reported to me that Uneeda-Pak was blacklisted and that Association members are not permitted to buy from Uneeda-Pak because they violated this ruling.

It is also my understanding that the Connecticut Association tries to enforce the ruling that manufacturers cannot sell to any new accounts although they may be permitted to sell non-members.

The New Jersey Association is attempting to operate on the basis of the Connecticut Association in that manufacturers may sell non-members but cannot start new operations.

He agreed that according to operators, we had the best looking machine for 1940 and that based on identical prices and identical trade-in allowances, DuGrenier should receive orders for at least 500 machines. That if we failed to secure orders from the above named customers, we would be justified in believing that such customers were getting trade-in allowances higher than the published figures or were getting rebates from a competitive manufacturer.

He stated that the New Jersey Association working in conjunction with the Interstate group, i. e., New England, Connecticut, New York City, New Jersey and Pennsylvania Associations, were desirous of having the manufacturers fix a uniform trade-in price to which all would adhere and that the Associations were willing to see the manufacturers raise their list price $5.00 per machine so that all machines older than our Model "S" and Rowe's Model Imperial could be taken in by the manufacturers at around $5.00 per machine and destroyed.

The Associations were desirous of not having this old equipment re-sold to used machine dealers and come back on the market and to be put in use in their territories. * * *

From Mr. Cherry's statement there are virtually no non-member operators in New Jersey now except, Gambino in Manville, N. J., who was sold by Mr. Paul some months ago and Schnorrbush, who only has possibly five machines. There is no question whatever that the Association members ganging up on any new operator can force such new operator to lose so much money operating new cigarette machines that he will be forced to sell out or go out of business. This is practically what happened to Katzman. The Association allowed Katzman to get a fairly large number of good locations but after things were running fairly smoothly for him, they began exerting pressure on his locations by offering advanced commissions, bonuses, etc. so that in order to protect himself and hold what he had, Katzman had to join the Association, but this did not happen until after he had lost many of his better stops.

From our experience in New Jersey, as well as elsewhere in the Metropolitan area, in starting new operations, it seems that the headaches are not justified by the results. If we are unable to work out some satisfactory arrangement to sell machines in accordance with Association requirements, we will be faced with three alternatives:

1. Sell new operators with resultant credit troubles and possible losses. I do not think that any of us would recommend to a friend of ours that he go into the cigarette machine business as a new operator in New Jersey knowing the troubles that he would be almost sure to encounter.

2. Sell to locations either directly ourselves or through some dealer or distributor in New Jersey. It is questionable how much business would result from this policy but certainly we would have far more collection troubles and such procedure would hurt us in Southern New Jersey where Kline sells and would hurt us elsewhere with customers.

3. If we tried to do either of the above, there is a probability of failure which would result in this third alternative of doing little if no business in Northern New Jersey.

While it disagreeable to all of us and I have fought against being dictated to by an Association as to how and whom we can sell, the fact is that such conditions are not working out particularly adversely for Kline in Philadelphia. Our records show that in that part of New Jersey covered by Kline, he sold 133 machines compared to a total of 82 R & S machines and 39 W & V machines sold by Stewart and McGuire, Inc.

Even granting that our figures are not complete, it is possible that Kline has sold more machines to customers in his New Jersey territory during the past year and a half than S & M sold in the same territory during the previous three or four years. I am inclined to believe that a part of our trouble in the Northern New Jersey territory may be our sales coverage. In other words I think that possibly Kline would have gotten a far greater share of the business from Northern New Jersey than we have been able to obtain.

I have an appointment to see Mr. Lascari today at about 3:00 P. M. and while I am still interested in making a distributorship arrangement with him and think it might work out to our advantage, I believe that if the manufacturers did agree to a fixed trade-in allowance price for old equipment, as well as for equipment less than five years old, that we might expect to get a fair share of the business. So I will talk to Mr. Lascari along the line of the Association proposal.

Mr. Cherry states that the Association realizes that they must give us a fair share of the business on our new machines, else we will be forced to use other methods of getting our share of the business, and, although Cherry may be kidding us to some extent, I think there is some truth in what he says. Certainly he was frank enough to admit that our share of the business should be 500 machines which is more than we had originally thought of as securing through Lascari.

This memorandum is for the record so that you will know just what Mr. Cherry has said to us and the intentions of the New Jersey Association.

PAR. 20. Each of the said respondents; to wit, the respondent associations, respondent officers and directors, and respondent members herein mentioned, acted in concert with one or more of the other respondents in doing and performing the acts and practices herein stated in furtherance of understandings and agreements.

PAR. 21. It follows from the foregoing facts that for more than 3 years last past the respondent organizations and associations, their officers, directors, and members herein mentioned have entered into and carried out understandings, agreements, and conspiracies between and among themselves for the purpose of restricting, restraining, suppressing, and eliminating competition in the purchase, distribution, and installation of automatic cigarette vending machines in interstate commerce between and among the several States of the United States, and that pursuant to such understandings, agreements, and conspiracies, the said respondents have engaged in and performed the following practices and acts:

(a) Established and attempted to establish the members of the respondent organizations and associations, operators of automatic cigarette vending machines, as a preferred class for the purpose of having manufacturers and distributors of automatic cigarette vending machines confine the sale and distribution of such machines to such respondent member operators exclusively;

(b) The said respondents interfered with and prevented competitors of the said respondent member operators in the said competitors' efforts to obtain such machines;

(c) Said respondents required, induced, and compelled manufacturers and distributors of automatic cigarette vending machines, by promises and threats, not to sell or ship automatic cigarette vending machines to competitors of the said respondent member operators, and to confine the sale and distribution of such machines to the said respondent member operators;

(d) Said respondents threatened to boycott, and have boycotted, manufacturers and distributors of automatic cigarette vending machines selling such machines to competitors of the said respondent member operators.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as above set forth are all to the prejudice of competitors of respondent member operators and of the public, have a dangerous tendency to and have actually hindered and prevented competition in the sale of automatic cigarette vending machines in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act, have unreasonably restrained such commerce in automatic cigarette vending machines, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

IN THE MATTER OF

BENJAMIN GORDON AND LOUIS GORDON, TRADING AS BENGOR PRODUCTS COMPANY AND MAGNET MERCHANDISE COMPANY

Docket 4474. Complaint, Mar. 24, 1941—Decision, July 31, 1941

Where two individuals engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of drug sundries, notions, household specialties, and other novelty merchandise, and in selling certain assortments thereof so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme or game of chance when sold and distributed to the purchasers, typical assortment including a cigarette lighter and a push card for use in its sale, under a plan, as there explained, by which the purchaser selecting by chance that 1 of 35 feminine names displayed thereon corresponding to that concealed under card's master seal, received the lighter, and the amount paid by a customer for a push was decided by the number disclosed in disk beneath the particular feminine name selected—

Sold and distributed such assortments, directly or indirectly, to retailers, by whom they were exposed and sold to the purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, under which the fact as to whether a purchaser received the lighter or nothing except the right to push, and the amount of money paid for a push were determined wholly by lot or chance, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting a lottery in the sale of their products, involving possibility of procuring merchandise at much less than normal retail price thereof; contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who refrain from using any method involving a game of chance or any other method contrary to public policy;

With the result that many persons were attracted by said sales plans and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby, induced to buy and sell their products in preference to those of said competitors, and with tendency and capacity unfairly to divert trade in commerce to themselves therefrom:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. A. B. Duvall, trial examiner.

Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr., for the Commission.

Mr. Samuel J. Ernstoff, of New York City, for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade

Commission having reason to believe that Benjamin Gordon and Louis Gordon, individually, and trading as Bengor Products Co., and Magnet Merchandise Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Benjamin Gordon and Louis Gordon, are individuals trading and doing business as Bengor Products Co., and Magnet Merchandise Co., with their office and principal place of business located at 878 Broadway, New York, N. Y. Respondents are now and for more than 1 year last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of drug sundries, notions, household specialties, and other novelty merchandise to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from their said place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of their business respondents are and have been in competition with other individuals, firms and corporations engaged in the sale of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to retail dealers and others certain assortments of merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme or game of chance when sold and distributed to the purchasers thereof. One of said assortments consists of a cigarette lighter and a device commonly known as a push card. The push card bears on its face 35 feminine names with ruled columns for writing in the name of the purchaser opposite the name selected. Said push card has 35 small partially perforated disks on the face of which is printed the word "Push." Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the face of said card. The person selecting the feminine name corresponding to the one under the master seal receives a Dunhill cigarette lighter. The push card bears the legend or instruction as follows:

NAME UNDER SEAL RECEIVES A
DUNHILL SILENT FLAME LIGHTER
1¢ to 15¢—NO HIGHER
Nos. 1 to 15 Pay What You Draw
Nos. Over 15 Pay ONLY 15¢
TOTAL $4.86.

Sales of respondents' lighters by means of the said push card are made in accordance with the above described legend or instruction. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives a lighter or nothing for the amount of money paid for a push is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondents sell and distribute and have sold and distributed various other assortments of merchandise involving a lot or chance feature but the sales plans or methods by which said merchandise is distributed are similar to the one above described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers and others who purchase respondents' merchandise directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plans aforesaid. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others a means of conducting a lottery in the sale of their product in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said sales plan or method in the sale of their merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public by the method or sales plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute products in competition with respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their products and by the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' products in preference to products of said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondents because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on March 24, 1941, issued and on March 25, 1941, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Benjamin Gordon and Louis Gordon, individually and trading as Bengor Products Co. and Magnet Merchandise Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Benjamin Gordon and Louis Gordon, are individuals trading and doing business as Bengor Products Co. and Magnet Merchandise Co., with their office and principal place of business located at 878 Broadway, New York, N. Y. Respondents are now and for more than 1 year last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of drug sundries, notions, household specialties and other novelty merchandise to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from their said place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of their business respondents are and have been in competition with other individuals, firms, and corporations engaged in the sale of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to retail dealers and others certain assortments of merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme or game of chance when sold and distributed to the purchasers thereof. One of said assortments consists of a cigarette lighter and a device commonly known as a push card. The push card bears on its face 35 feminine names with ruled columns for writing in the name of the purchaser opposite the name selected. Said push card has 35 small partially perforated disks on the face of which is printed the word "Push." Concealed within each disk is a number which is not disclosed until the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the face of said card which name is not disclosed until the seal is removed. The person selecting the feminine name corresponding to the one under the master seal received a Dunhill cigarette lighter. The purchasers of all the other pushes receive nothing for their money except the right to push. The push card bears the legend or instruction as follows:

NAME UNDER SEAL RECEIVED A
DUNHILL SILENT FLAME LIGHTER

1¢ to 15¢—NO HIGHER
Nos. 1 to 15 Pay What You Draw
Nos. Over 15 Pay ONLY 15¢
TOTAL $4.86

Sales of respondents' lighters by means of the said push card are made in accordance with the above described legend or instruction. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives a lighter or nothing except the right to push for the amount of money paid for a push is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondents sell and distribute and have sold and distributed various other assortments of merchandise involving a lot or chance feature and the sales plans or methods by which said merchandise is distributed are similar to the one above described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers and others who purchase respondents' merchandise directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plans aforesaid. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others a means of conducting a lottery in the sale of their product in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said sales plan or method in the sale of their merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public by the method or sales plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute products in competition with respondents, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their products and by the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' products in preference to products of said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondents because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents Benjamin Gordon and Louis Gordon, individually and trading as Bengor Products Co. and Magnet Merchandise Co., or trading under any other name, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of their cigar and cigarette lighters or any other merchandise in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing cigar or cigarette lighters or any other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such cigar or cigarette lighters or other merchandise to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others, punchboards, push or pull cards, pull tabs or other lottery devices either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, pull tabs or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used, in selling or distributing said cigar and cigarette lighters or other merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Gilley, Humphreys & Sercombe, of Portland, Ore., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Lee Boyer's Candy, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest,

PARAGRAPH 1. It causes and has caused said candy, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Oregon to purchasers thereof in various other States of the United States at their respective points of location. There is now and for more than 2 years last past has been a course of trade by said respondent in such candy in commerce between and among various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations, and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold certain assortments of said candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments was and is sold and distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner: This assortment consists of a number of bars or rolls of candy, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Sales are 5 cents each. Said punchboard is divided into two sections, and each section contains a number of small sealed tubes, in each of which is concealed a slip of paper with a number printed thereon. Said board contains statements or legends informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that the persons selecting certain designated numbers each receive a quarter pound nut roll; that persons selecting other designated numbers each receive a half pound nut roll; that purchasers of the last number in each section each receive a 1 pound nut roll. Persons who do not select said designated numbers receive nothing for their money. The said numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until said slips of paper have been punched or removed from said board. The said candy is thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance. Respondent sells and distributes various assortments of candy which involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, but the sales plans or methods employed in connection with each of said assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's candy directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of its candy, and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a bar or roll of candy at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with the respondent as above alleged are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any methods involving the use of a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale of said candy in the manner above alleged, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by the respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade to respondent from its competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods in commerce between and among various States of the United States. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being done and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 24, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent Lee Boyer's Candy, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On June 24, 1941, the respondent filed its answer in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Lee Boyer's Candy, is a corporation, organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Oregon, with its principal office and place of business located at 103 Southwest Front Avenue, Portland, Oreg. Respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to dealers located in various States of the United States. It causes and has caused said candy, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Oregon to purchasers thereof in various other States of the United States at their respective points of location. There is now and for more than 2 years last past has been a course of trade by said respondent in such candy in commerce between and among various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations, and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold certain assortments of said candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments was and is sold and distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner: This assortment consists of a number of bars or rolls of candy, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Sales are 5 cents each. Said punchboard is divided into two sections, and each section contains a number of small sealed tubes, in each of which is concealed a slip of paper with a number printed thereon. Said board contains statements or legends informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that the persons selecting certain designated numbers each receive a quarter pound nut roll; that persons selecting other designated numbers each receive a half pound nut roll; that purchasers of the last number in each section each receive a 1 pound nut roll. Persons who do not select said designated numbers receive nothing for their money. The said numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until said slips of paper have been punched or removed from said board. The said candy is thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance. Respondent sells and distributes various assortments of candy which involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, but the sales plans or methods employed in connection with each of said assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's candy directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said methods in the sale of its candy, and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a bar or roll of candy at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with the respondent as above found are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any methods involving the use of a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale of said candy in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by the respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade to respondent from its competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods in commerce between and among various States of the United States. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Lee Boyer's Candy, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy or any other merchandise, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of said merchandise to the public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others assortments of any merchandise, together with push or pull cards, punchboards or other devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards or other devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other devices are to be used or may be used in the sale or distribution of said merchandise to the public at retail.

4. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

ATLAS WALL PAPER MILLS, INC.

Docket 4288. Complaint, Aug. 29, 1940—Decision, Aug. 6, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture and interstate sale and distribution of wall paper; through price lists and sample books and oral statements by its salesmen—

Represented and implied to jobber and retailer purchasers that the wall paper in question might be washed or cleaned with water without suffering damage or loss of appearance and was capable of resisting the usual effects of water, that the colors printed thereon would not fade, and that it was unaffected by exposure to sunlight, through such statements, in referring to said products, as "washable," "water-resisting," "colorfast," and "printed with the best non-fading colors obtainable";

Facts being such wall paper was not washable or water-resisting, as such terms are commonly understood, since application of water thereto caused it to deteriorate substantially and the colors to smear, and the colors were not fast, but faded appreciably when subjected to sunlight for short periods of time;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, with result that it purchased a substantial quantity of said products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Maurice C. Pearce for the Commission.

Palmer & Serles, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the Atlas Wall Paper Mills, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Atlas Wall Paper Mills, Inc., is a corporation duly chartered, organized, and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located in Coal City, State of Illinois.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of wall paper. Respondent causes and has caused its said product, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent now maintains, and at all times herein mentioned has maintained, a course of trade in its said wall paper in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its product, the respondent has made false and misleading representations and statements with respect to the character and qualities of certain items of its said product, such representations being disseminated among prospective purchasers, both jobbers and retailers, by appearing in its price lists and sample books, the latter of which are often exhibited to the ultimate purchaser, and by means of oral statements made by respondent's agents and salesmen.

Among and typical of the words and statements used by the respondent, as aforesaid, are the words "washable," "water resisting," and "colorfast," and the legend "printed with the best non-fading colors obtainable."

Through the use of the foregoing representations, statements, and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents that such items of its said wall paper may be washed or cleaned with the use of water without suffering damage or loss of appearance, and that said paper is capable of resisting the usual and customary effects of water; that the colors printed on said paper will not fade; and that said paper is unaffected by exposure to sunlight.

PAR. 4. The foregoing representations and statements are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, certain items of said wall paper concerning which such representations are made are not washable or water resisting, as such terms are usually and customarily understood by the purchasing public. Said paper is incapable of resisting the usual and customary effects of water as the application of water to said paper causes it to deteriorate substantially and causes the colors in said paper to smear, with the result that said paper suffers a substantial change in appearance. The colors used in said paper are not fast or free from fading, nor are such colors capable of resisting the usual and ordinary effects of sunlight. In truth and in fact, the colors printed on respondent's said paper fade appreciably when subjected to sunlight for short periods of time.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading representations and statements, with respect to certain items of its said wall paper, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations and statements are true, and that respondent's wall paper possesses character and qualities which it does not, in fact, possess. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief the purchasing public has been induced to and does purchase a substantial quantity of respondent's product.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 29, 1940, issued, and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Atlas Wall Paper Mills, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Atlas Wall Paper Mills, Inc., is a corporation duly chartered, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located in Coal City, State of Illinois.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale and distribution of wall paper. Respondent causes and has caused its said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent now maintains, and at all times herein mentioned has maintained, a course of trade in its said wall paper in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its products, the respondent has made false and misleading representations and statements with respect to the character and qualities of certain of its products. Such representations were disseminated among prospective purchasers, both jobbers and retailers, through price lists and sample books, the latter of which are often exhibited by retailers to the ultimate purchaser, and through oral statements made by respondent's agents and salesmen.

Among and typical of the statements used by the respondent in referring to the qualities of certain of its products are "washable," "water-resisting," "color-fast," and "printed with the best non-fading colors obtainable."

Through the use of the foregoing statements and others of similar import not set out herein, the respondent represents and implies that the wall paper so referred to may be washed or cleaned with water without suffering damage or loss of appearance, and that said paper is capable of resisting the usual and customary effects of water; that the colors printed on said paper will not fade; and that said paper is unaffected by exposure to sunlight.

PAR. 4. The foregoing representations and statements are false and misleading. In truth and in fact, the wall paper concerning which such representations are made is not washable or water-resisting, as such terms are usually and customarily understood by the purchasing public. Said paper is incapable of resisting the usual and customary effects of water, as the application of water to said paper causes it to deteriorate substantially and causes the colors in said paper to smear, with the result that said paper suffers a substantial change in appearance. The colors used in said paper are not fast or free from fading, nor are such colors capable of resisting the usual and ordinary effects of sunlight. In truth and in fact, the colors printed on respondent's said paper fade appreciably when subjected to sunlight for short periods of time.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading representations and statements, with respect to said wall paper, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true, and that respondent's wall paper possesses qualities which it does not, in fact, possess. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief, the purchasing public has been induced to, and does, purchase a substantial quantity of respondent's said products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Atlas Wall Paper Mills, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its wall paper in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that wall paper is washable, water-resisting, color-fast or nonfading, when such paper is affected in appearance, or otherwise, when washed or cleaned with water or when exposed to sunlight;

2. Using the terms "washable," "water-resisting," "color-fast," or "printed with the best nonfading colors obtainable," or any other term or terms of similar import and meaning, to designate, describe, or refer to wall paper which is affected in appearance, or otherwise, when washed or cleaned with water or when exposed to sunlight.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

GATES MEDICINE COMPANY, INC.

Docket 4301. Complaint, Sept. 5, 1940—Decision Aug. 6, 1941

Where a corporation and an individual who was its treasurer, general manager, and practically sole stockholder, engaged in the manufacture, from 1934 to 1940, of their "White Ribbon Remedy" for alcoholism, and, since 1940, of their "Improved White Ribbon Remedy," and in the interstate sale and distribution thereof; by means of advertisements disseminated, through the mails, in newspapers, periodicals, letters, circulars, and other advertising literature, directly or by implication—

(a) Represented, prior to January 1940, that their said "White Ribbon Remedy" constituted a competent and effective treatment for the liquor habit and was safe and harmless, through such statements as "George no longer drinks whiskey. White Ribbon treatment made him hate liquor. White Ribbon Remedy can be given in coffee, tea, or milk and has done much to stop drinking. One woman cured a drunkard of 20 years with one box," and "* * * White Ribbon Remedy, the safe and reliable medicine for the liquor habit * * *";

The facts being tartar emetic, the active drug in the original formula of said product is a poison, administered medically only once or twice as an emetic dose and never prescribed over a period of 8 days as was the product in question; the depressant effect of alcohol, added to that of tartar emetic, is dangerous to a person sufficiently susceptible to chronic antimony poisoning and addicted to the use of liquor, and, in the case of such a person, the prescribed doses taken three times daily would cause depression of the cardiovascular system, chronic irritation of the stomach and intestinal tract, nausea, and failure to eat and get the proper amount of food minerals and vitamins necessary for health; the effect of tartar emetic on the liquor habit is very slight, if any, and the prescribed three powders a day of aforesaid remedy over a period of 8 days would have no therapeutic effect upon an indivilual's alcoholic addiction; and

(b) Failed to reveal in their said advertisements facts material in the light of the representations therein contained, and that use of their said "White Ribbon Remedy," under prescribed or usual conditions, might produce the dangerous conditions noted above; and

(c) Represented, subsequent to January 1940, that their "Improved White Ribbon Remedy" constituted an effective and competent treatment for the liquor habit and an effective remedy or cure for nervousness, fatigue, illness, or other conditions caused by excessive drinking of alcoholic beverages, through such statements as "NERVOUS AFTER DRINKING Vitamin B in Improved White Ribbon Remedy Helps Give Needed Relief. Nervousness and Fatigue after excessive drinking is usually increased by a vitamin B deficiency. Improved White Ribbon Remedy, rich in vitamin B, not only gives relief by nourishing ragged nerves and restoring energy, but often helps counteract many of the more serious ills attributable to over-imbibing. * * *," and "RELIEF FOR LIQUOR HABIT Improved White Ribbon Remedy Relieves Vitamin B Deficiency. Excessive drinking usually results in ragged uncontrolled nerves, often due to a vitamin B deficiency. Improved White Ribbon Remedy, rich in vitamin B, relieves these symptoms, restores energy and makes it easier to do without alcohol";

The fact being that, while the formula for said "Improved" product excluded the tartar emetic previously contained and included an increase from 384 to 2,160 international units of vitamin B–1 for each 24 powders, such contribution to the normal vitamin requirements of the human system was practically negligible, it being not unusual for the medical profession to prescribe in excess of 3,000 international units as an ordinary single therapeutic dose in the not infrequent cases in which an alcoholic develops a vitamin B–1 deficiency, and their said "Improved White Ribbon Remedy" was not a competent cure for the liquor habit or the aforesaid conditions caused by excessive drinking;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken beliefs aforesaid, with the result that it purchased substantial quantities of said preparations:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Lewis C. Russell, trial examiner.

Mr. R. A. McOuat for the Commission.

Mr. P. H. Murphy, of Charleston, W. Va., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Gates Medicine Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said products by the United States mail and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said products; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said products by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of, the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements of White Ribbon Remedy, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, are the following:

GEORGE NO LONGER DRINKS WHISKEY

White Ribbon Treatment Made Him Hate Liquor.

White Ribbon Remedy can be given in coffee, tea or milk and has done much to stop drunkenness. One woman cured a drunkard of 20 years with one box.

We are about to start advertising in your City White Ribbon Remedy, the safe and reliable medicine for the liquor habit.

Among and typical of, the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements of Improved White Ribbon Remedy, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, are the following:

NERVOUS AFTER DRINKING?

Excessive drinking usually results in ragged uncontrolled nerves, often due to a Vitamin B deficiency. Improved White Ribbon Remedy, rich in Vitamin

B, relieves these symptoms, restores energy and makes it easier to do without alcohol. Can be given secretly if necessary in coffee, tea or milk.

By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth and other representations similar thereto not specifically set forth herein, respondent represents that White Ribbon Remedy is a competent, effective, safe, and reliable cure for the liquor habit.

PAR. 3. The aforesaid representations used and disseminated by respondent in the manner above described are grossly exaggerated, misleading, deceptive, and untrue and constitute false advertisements within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act. White Ribbon Remedy is not a competent, effective, safe, nor reliable cure for the liquor habit. Said advertisements of respondent are also false in that they fail to reveal that the use of this medicinal preparation, under conditions prescribed by respondent and under such conditions as are customary and usual may result in serious illness of the user. The facts are that White Ribbon Remedy contains tartar emetic which produces expectorant, nauseant, depressant effects, which may be harmful and dangerous to the health of the user. Improved White Ribbon Remedy is not a competent, effective, or reliable cure for the liquor habit. It is not an effective remedy or cure for nervousness, fatigue, illness, or other conditions caused by the excessive drinking of alcoholic beverages.

PAR. 4. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to the products White Ribbon Remedy and Improved White Ribbon Remedy disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations are true and to induce and has induced, a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's medicinal preparations.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 5th day of September, A. D. 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Gates Medicine Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by R. A. McOuat, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by P. H. Murphy, attorney for the respondent, before Lewis C. Russell, duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission, designated by it to serve in this proceeding, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, the testimony and other evidence, the report of the trial examiner, and brief in support of the complaint; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Gates Medicine Co., Inc., is a corporation organized A. D. 1934, under the laws of the State of West Virginia, with its principal place of business located in Charleston, W. Va. Garland B. Potterfield is its treasurer, general manager, and practically its sole stockholder.

PAR. 2. Respondent, from the year 1934 to 1940, was engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing a medical preparation designated as "White Ribbon Remedy," and since January 1940, has manufactured, sold, and distributed a medical preparation designated "Improved White Ribbon Remedy." Respondent caused its White Ribbon Remedy, when sold, and has caused and causes its Improved White Ribbon Remedy, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the State of West Virginia to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said medical preparations in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent sold White Ribbon Remedy as a cure for the liquor habit. The original formula for respondent's said product was tartar emetic and sugar of milk, the latter being a carrying body for the active drug. This formula was used for the years 1934 to 1937, when the formula was changed to include thiamin chloride (vitamin B–1), and the formula then became: tartar emetic, 1 grain; sugar of milk, 150 grains; vitamin B–1, 2.5 milligrams, mixed and divided into 50 powders. According to the directions issued by the respondent in connection with White Ribbon Remedy, three powders were to be taken daily for a period of 8 days, and each of these powders contained one-fiftieth of a grain of tartar emetic. If directions were followed, 24 of these powders would be taken by an individual over a period of 8 days, and he would therefore be taking, during said period, twelve twenty-fifths of a grain of tartar emetic.

The medical profession prescribes tartar emetic for the purpose of producing nausea, or for expectorant effect, in order to rid the body of poisons more speedily and effectively than they are ordinarily eliminated. The minimum effective dose, as ordinarily prescribed, is one-twentieth of a grain, and is administered only once or twice as an emetic dose. It is never prescribed over a period of 8 days in smaller quantities. The depressant effect of alcohol, added to the depressant effect of tartar emetic, creates danger to the person sufficiently susceptible to chronic antimony poisoning and addicted to the use of liquor. In the case of a susceptible individual, doses of one-fiftieth of a grain of tartar emetic taken three times a day would cause depression of the cardiovascular system, chronic irritation of the stomach and intestinal tract, nausea, and failure to eat and get the proper amount of food minerals and vitamins necessary to maintain health. Tartar emetic is a poison, and is not a safe, reliable remedy for the liquor habit, and may be harmful and dangerous to the health of the user. The effect of tartar emetic on the liquor habit is very slight, if any, and no therapeutic effect upon an individual's alcoholic addiction would result from the taking of three powders per day of White Ribbon Remedy over a period of 8 days.

PAR. 4. Respondent consulted a medical authority concerning the use of tartar emetic as a part of its formula for White Ribbon Remedy, and was advised that medical authorities consider it of no value as a remedy for the liquor habit.

PAR. 5. On January 1, A. D., 1940, respondent again changed the formula of its product by eliminating tartar emetic, and attempted to withdraw from sale all of its White Ribbon Remedy which contained tartar emetic. The product, from that time on, was put up in boxes, each of which contained 24 powders, each powder containing 90 international units of thiamin chloride (Vitamin B–1), with sugar of milk as a carrying body, and no other ingredient, and the name of the product was changed to "Improved White Ribbon Remedy." The dosage prescribed by respondent was three powders a day for 8 days.

Prior to January 1940, the 24 White Ribbon powders contained 384 international units of vitamin B–1, and since said date this amount has been increased to 2160 international units. The amount of vitamin B–1 contained in respondent's product, even after it was increased in 1940, is not sufficient to be effective for the purposes contemplated. An individual chronically addicted to the use of alcoholic liquor almost always fails to eat sufficient or proper food, or develops a gastric or intestinal irritation and is unable to properly assimilate the food he consumes, and in many instances develops a vitamin B–1 deficiency. In such cases the medical profession prescribes vitamin B–1 to overcome this deficiency; but the amount prescribed depends upon the evidence of deficiency, and it is not unusual to prescribe in excess of three thousand international units as an ordinary single therapeutic dose. Respondent's new product may contribute a portion of the normal vitamin requirement of the human system, but the contribution is practically negligible. It is not a competent, effective, reliable cure for the liquor habit and is not an effective remedy or cure for nervousness, fatigue, illness, or other condition caused by the excessive drinking of alcoholic beverages.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent, from the year 1934 to January 1940, disseminated and caused the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its product known as "White Ribbon Remedy," by means of the United States Mail and by various other means, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent also disseminated and caused the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said product in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by means of the United States Mail, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, and by letters, circulars, and other advertising literature, are the following:

GEORGE NO LONGER DRINKS WHISKEY

White Ribbon treatment made him hate liquor.

White Ribbon Remedy can be given in coffee, tea or milk and has done much to stop drinking. One woman cured a drunkard of 20 years with one box.

We're about to start advertising in your city, White Ribbon Remedy, the safe and reliable medicine for the liquor habit * * *. White Ribbon Remedy has a good sale with the most reliable drug stores throughout the country * * *. As soon as we receive your o. k. we will consign several dozens of the medicine and start the advertising at once.

PAR. 7. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation known as "White Ribbon Remedy" was not a competent and effective treatment for the liquor habit, and said preparation was not safe and reliable, in that it contained the drug tartar emetic in sufficient quantity to cause serious and irreparable injury to health, if used under the conditions described in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary and usual. Such use of said preparation is dangerous to the person sufficiently susceptible to chronic antimony poisoning and addicted to the use of liquor, by causing depression of the cardiovascular system, chronic irritation of the stomach and intestinal tract, nausea and failure to get the proper amount of food minerals and vitamins necessary to maintain health.

PAR. 8. The advertisements disseminated by the respondent constitute false advertising for the further reason that they fail to reveal facts which are material in the light of the representations contained therein, and fail to reveal that the use of said preparation known as White Ribbon Remedy, under the conditions described in such advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may cause depression of the cardiovascular system, chronic irritation of the stomach and intestinal tract and nausea, and failure to eat and get the proper amount of food minerals and vitamins necessary to maintain health.

PAR. 9. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent, since January 1940, has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the distribution of false advertisements concerning its product known as "Improved White Ribbon Remedy" by means of the United States Mail, and by various other means, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertising concerning the said product Improved White Ribbon Remedy by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce the purchase of said product in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated by respondent as above set forth, by means of the United States Mail, by advertisements in newspapers and by circulars and other advertising literature, are the following:

NERVOUS AFTER DRINKING

Vitamin B in Improved White Ribbon Remedy Helps Give Needed Relief. Nervousness and Fatigue after excessive drinking is usually increased by a vitamin B deficiency. Improved White Ribbon Remedy rich in vitamin B, not only gives relief by nourishing ragged nerves and restoring energy, but often helps counteract many of the more serious ills attributable to overimbibing. This relief likewise makes it easier to do without alcohol.

RELIEF FOR LIQUOR HABIT

Improved White Ribbon Remedy Relieves Vitamin B Deficiency. Excessive drinking usually results in ragged uncontrolled nerves, often due to a vitamin B deficiency. Improved White Ribbon Remedy, rich in vitamin B, relieves these symptoms, restores energy and makes it easier to do without alcohol. Can be given secretly, if necessary, in coffee, tea or milk.

PAR. 10. Through the use of the foregoing statements and representations, and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents and has represented, directly and by implication, that its preparation known as Improved White Ribbon Remedy constitutes an effective and competent treatment for the liquor habit, and an effective remedy or cure for nervousness, fatigue, illness, or other conditions caused by excessive drinking of alcoholic beverages.

PAR. 11. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's Improved White Ribbon Remedy is not an effective and competent treatment for the liquor habit, and is not an effective remedy or cure for nervousness, fatigue, illness, or other condition caused by excessive drinking of alcoholic beverages.

PAR. 12. The use by respondent of the aforesaid false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations with respect to its said preparations, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to its White Ribbon Remedy has had, and with respect to its Improved White Ribbon Remedy has had and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that respondent's preparations possess properties which they did not and do not possess, and that respondent's preparation White Ribbon Remedy was in all cases safe and harmless, when such was not the fact; and as a result of said mistaken and erroneous belief, a considerable number of the purchasing public have been induced to purchase and have purchased substantial quantities of respondent's said preparations.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony and other evidence introduced before Lewis C. Russell, duly appointed trial examiner of the Federal Trade Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, the report of the trial examiner thereon and brief filed on behalf of the Commission, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Gates Medicine Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, directors, agents, representatives, and employees, jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of its preparations known as "White Ribbon Remedy" and "Improved White Ribbon Remedy," or any preparation of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, do forthwith Cease and Desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States Mail, or (b) by any means—in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act—which advertisement represents directly or by implication that said preparation, White Ribbon Remedy, constitutes a competent or effective treatment for the liquor habit, or that said preparation is safe and harmless; or which advertisement fails to reveal that the use of said preparation may cause depression of the cardiovascular system, chronic irritation of the stomach and intestinal tract, nausea, and failure to eat and get the proper amount of food minerals and vitamins necessary to maintain health.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States Mail, or (b) by any means—in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or by implication, that its said preparation Improved White Ribbon Remedy constitutes a competent or effective treatment for the liquor habit; or that said improved White Ribbon Remedy is a remedy for nervousness, fatigue, illness, or other condition caused by the excessive drinking of alcoholic beverages.

(3) Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement, by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparations, or either of them, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraphs (1) and (2) hereof, or which fails to reveal that the use of the preparation White Ribbon Remedy may cause depression of the cardiovascular system, chronic irritation of the stomach and intestinal tract, nausea, and failure to eat and get the proper amount of food minerals and vitamins necessary to maintain health.

It is further ordered, That respondent, Gates Medicine Co., Inc., a corporation, shall, within 10 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing, stating whether it intends to comply with this order, and if so, the manner and form in which it intends to comply; and that within 60 days after service upon it of this order, it shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF

GEORGE G. BLAISDELL, WALTER G. BLAISDELL, AND HOMER G. BARCROFT, TRADING AS ZIPPO MANUFACTURING COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED V' OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, .

Docket 4497. Complaint, May 8, 1941 —Decision, Aug 6, 941

Where three individuals engaged in the manufacture, and in the competitive interstate sale and distribution of assortments of cigar and cigarette lighters so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold to consumers, a typical assortment including eight lighters and a punchboard for use in sale thereof under a plan, explained thereon, by which chance selection of certain numbers entitled purchaser, for 2 cents paid, to one lighter, certain other numbers entitled purchaser to a package of cigarettes, purchaser making last punch in each of the first nine sections completely sold was similarly entitled to receive such a package, and person making last punch on board received a lighter, value of which and of the packages of cigarettes was in excess of 2 cents, other customers receiving nothing for their money—

Sold such assortments to wholesalers, jobbers, and retailers, by whom they were exposed and sold to the purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, involving a chance to procure lighters at much less than the normal retail price, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their products, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many unwilling to use any method involving chance, or contrary to public policy, and who refrain therefrom;

With result that many persons were attracted by their said sales plan or method and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell their lighters in preference to those of aforesaid competitors, and with tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, unfairly to divert trade in commerce to them from such competitors: to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and their competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr. for the Commission.
Wilson & Fitzgibbon, of Bradford, Pa., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that George G. Blaisdell, Walter G. Blaisdell, and Homer G. Barcroft, individuals trading as Zippo Manufacturing Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, George G. Blaisdell, Walter G. Blaisdell, and Homer G. Barcroft, are individuals trading and doing business under the name of Zippo Manufacturing Co., with their office and principal place of business located at Bradford, Pa. Respondents are now and for more than six months last past have been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of cigar and cigarette lighters to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said products, when sold, to be transported from their principal place of business in the city of Bradford, Pa., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than Pennsylvania and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 6 months last past a course of trade by respondents in such cigar and cigarette lighters in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents are and have been in competition with other individuals, firms, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of cigar and cigarette lighters in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of cigar and cigarette lighters so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment includes eight Zippo cigar and cigarette lighters and a punchboard. Appearing on the face of the punchboard is the following inscription:

ZIPPO WIND PROOF LIGHTER ASSORTMENT

2¢ Per Sale (Depiction of Lighter)

Numbers 200–400–600–800–1000–1200
Each Receive a Zippo Lighter

Numbers 25–50–125–150–225–250–325–350–425–450–525–550–625–650–725–750–825–850–925–950 Each Receive One Package of (20) Cigarettes

Last Sale in Each Section Receives One Package (20) Cigarettes
Last Sale on Board Receives a Zippo Lighter

Said lighters are distributed to the purchasing public by means of said punchboard in the following manner:

Sales are 2 cents each, and when a punch is made a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence, and said numbers are arranged in 10 sections. The board bears a statement informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a lighter and certain other specified numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a package of cigarettes; and the last punch in each of the first 9 sections completely sold entitles the purchaser to receive a package of cigarettes, and the last punch on the board entitles the purchaser to receive a lighter. A customer who does not qualify by obtaining one of the specified numbers or the last punch on the board or in a section receives nothing for his money. The lighters are worth more than 2 cents each, and the cigarettes are worth more than 2 cents per package, and the purchaser who obtains a number calling for a lighter or a package of cigarettes receives the same for 2 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospectsive purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The cigar and cigarette lighters are thus distributed to the purchasers of punches from the board wholly by chance.

The respondents furnish and have furnished various punchboards and lighter assortments for use in the sale and distribution of their lighters by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such punchboards are similar to the one herein described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondents' cigar and cigarette lighters, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said sales plan or method in the sale of their lighters and the sale of said lighters by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of cigar and cigarette lighters to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure lighters at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute lighters in competition with respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their lighters and in the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' lighters in preference to lighters of said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondents because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act the Federal Trade Commission on May 8, 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents George G. Blaisdell, Walter G. Blaisdell, and Homer G. Barcroft, individuals trading as Zippo Manufacturing Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. In due course the respondents filed their answer, in which answer they admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, George K. Blaisdell, Walter G. Blaisdell, and Homer G. Barcroft, are individuals trading and doing business under the name of Zippo Manufacturing Co., with their office and principal place of business located at Bradford, Pa. Respondents are now and for more than 6 months last past have been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of cigar and cigarette lighters to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said products, when sold, to be transported from their principal place of business in the city of Bradford, Pa., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than Pennsylvania and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 6 months last past a course of trade by respondents in such cigar and cigarette lighters in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents are and have been in competition with other individuals, firms, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of cigar and cigarette lighters in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of cigar and cigarette lighters so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment includes eight Zippo cigar and cigarette lighters and a punchboard. Appearing on the face of the punchboard is the following inscription:

ZIPPO WIND PROOF LIGHTER ASSORTMENT
2¢ Per Sale (Depiction of Lighter)
Numbers 200–400–600–800–1000–1200
Each Receive a Zippo Lighter
Numbers 25–50–125–150–225–250–325–350–425–450–525–550–625–650–725–750–825–850–925–950
Each Receive One Package of (20) Cigarettes
Last Sale in Each Section Receives One Package (20) Cigarettes
Last Sale on Board Receives a Zippo Lighter

Said lighters are distributed to the purchasing public by means of said punchboard in the following manner:

Sales are 2 cents each, and when a punch is made a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence, and said numbers are arranged in 10 sections. The board bears a statement informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a lighter and certain other specified numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a package of cigarettes; and the last punch in each of the first 9 sections completely sold entitles the purchaser to receive a package of cigarettes, and the last punch on the board entitles the purchaser to receive a lighter. A customer who does not qualify by obtaining one of the specified numbers or the last punch on the board or in a section receives nothing for his money. The lighters are worth more than 2 cents each, and the cigarettes are worth more than 2 cents per package, and the purchaser who obtains a number calling for a lighter or a package of cigarettes receives the same for 2 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The cigar and cigarette lighters are thus distributed to the purchasers of punches from the board wholly by chance.

The respondents furnish and have furnished various punchboards and lighter assortments for use in the sale and distribution of their lighters by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such punchboards are similar to the one herein described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondents' cigar and cigarette lighters, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said sales plan or method in the sale of their lighters and the sale of said lighters by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of cigar and cigarette lighters to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure lighters at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell and distribute lighters in competition with respondents, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their lighters and in the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' lighters in preference to lighters of said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondents because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard from the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and stated that they waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents George G. Blaisdell, Walter G. Blaisdell, and Homer G. Barcroft, individuals, trading as Zippo Manufacturing Co., or under any other name, either jointly or severally, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of cigar and cigarette lighters, or any other merchandise, in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of such merchandise to the public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of others, punchboards, push or pull cards, pull tabs, or other lottery devices, either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, pull tabs, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

F. W. JOHNSON, TRADING AS KEMICO

Docket 4505. Complaint, May 17, 1941—Decision, Aug. 6, 1941

Where an individual engaged in interstate sale and distribution of formulas for various medicinal and cosmetic preparations; in describing the therapeutic properties and value of the preparations or products compounded from such formulas; by means of circulars, leaflets, and other advertising literature, directly or by implication—

(a) Falsely represented that the "Greaseless Massage Cream" and "Lemon Greaseless Cream" products of such formulas, respectively (1) constituted a cure or remedy and a competent and effective treatment for sallowness and roughness of the skin, and for pimples and other skin imperfections, and (2) was of substantial therapeutic value as a skin treatment, and helped to promote a clear, healthy skin;

(b) Falsely represented that the "Catarrhal Cream," "Vapor Inhalant," and "Nasal Jelly" products of such formulas, respectively, constituted competent and effective treatments for (1) nasal catarrh, dry catarrh, catarrhal headaches, head colds, hay fever, sore throat, bronchitis, and throat troubles generally, and for burns, cuts, and sores, (2) croup, head colds, headaches and catarrh, and (3) head colds, catarrh, and similar conditions;

(c) Represented that the "Hair-Lay Cream" product promoted the growth of hair, relieved itching scalp and helped to prevent dandruff and falling hair, that "Dandruff Remedy" for dandruff and the "Beauty Balm" was of substantial therapeutic value in improving the complexion, helped to eliminate wrinkles, and had a tonic effect upon the skin, and his "Debest Skin Treatment" constituted a competent and effective treatment for eczema and for redness, roughness, and scaling of the skin;

Facts being said "Hair-Lay" formula contained no active therapeutic agent; use of word "Remedy" for said dandruff formula was false and misleading, it having no therapeutic value in excess of affording temporary relief from itching symptom associated with said condition and of assisting in temporary removal of dandruff scales; and said formulas or preparations made therefrom would not accomplish the results, and did not possess the properties, claimed therefor;

(d) Represented that "Teeth Whitener Formula A" and "Teeth Whitener Formula B" products would remove tartar, stains, and other discolorations from the teeth, and were entirely safe for use;

Facts being products from said formulas would not accomplish such results, and preparation made from the former was not entirely safe for use, in that it contained precipitated chalk which might severely scratch the enamel of the teeth;

(e) Falsely represented that the "Pine Oil Nasal Spray" and "Menthol and Camphor Nasal Spray" products were competent and effective treatments for head colds, catarrh, and similar conditions; and that they were entirely safe for continued use, notwithstanding they contained sufficient light mineral oil to cause oil pneumonia, particularly in children, if used over long periods; and

(f) Falsely represented that "Nose Inhalant" product was safe for use, when in fact it contained sufficient chloroform to cause anesthesia and, in some instances, complete circulatory failure, and continued use thereof might also cause degenerative changes in the liver;

With tendency and capacity, through use of such misrepresentations and failure to disclose possible harmful effects of said preparations, to mislead and deceive a substantial number of prospective purchasers of said formulas and cause them to buy substantial quantities of his formulas, and with effect of placing in the hands of uninformed or unscrupulous purchasers means of misleading and deceiving members of the purchasing public:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Joseph C. Fehr for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that F. W. Johnson, individually and trading under the name Kemico, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, F. W. Johnson, is an individual trading under the name Kemico and having his principal office and place of business located in the city of Park Ridge, in the State of Illinois. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of certain formulas for various medicinal and cosmetic preparations.

Respondent causes his said formulas, when sold, to be sent through the United States mails and by other means to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in his said formulas in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his said formulas, the respondent has made many false and misleading representations with respect to his said formulas and with respect to the therapeutic properties and values of the preparations compounded from said formulas, such representations being made by means of circulars, leaflets, and other advertising literature circulated and distributed among prospective purchasers of said formulas. Through said false and misleading representations, distributed and circulated as aforesaid, the respondent represents and has represented, directly or by implication:

(a) That respondent's preparation Greaseless Massage Cream is a cure or remedy and a competent and effective treatment for sallowness and roughness of the skin, and for pimples and other skin imperfections.

(b) That respondent's preparation Lemon Greaseless Cream is of substantial therapeutic value as a skin treatment, and that it helps to promote a clear, healthy skin.

(c) That respondent's preparation Catarrhal Cream is a competent and effective treatment for nasal catarrh, dry catarrh, catarrhal headaches, head colds, hay fever, sore throat, bronchitis, and throat troubles generally, and for burns, cuts, and sores.

(d) That respondent's preparation Hair-Lay Cream promotes the growth of hair, relieves itching scalp, and helps to prevent dandruff and falling hair.

(e) That respondent's preparation Dandruff Remedy is a cure or remedy for dandruff.

(f) That respondent's preparation Vapor Inhalant is a competent and effective treatment for croup, head colds, headaches, and catarrh.

(g) That respondent's preparation Beauty Balm is of substantial therapeutic value in improving the complexion, that it helps to eliminate wrinkles, and that it has a tonic effect upon the skin.

(h) That respondent's preparation Debest Skin Treatment is a competent and effective treatment for eczema and for redness, roughness, and scaling of the skin.

(i) That respondent's preparation Nasal Jelly is a competent and effective treatment for head colds, catarrh, and similar conditions.

(j) That respondent's preparations Teeth Whitener Formula A and Teeth Whitener Formula B will remove tartar, stains, and other discolorations from the teeth, and that said preparations are entirely safe for use.

(k) That respondent's preparations Pine Oil Nasal Spray and Menthol and Camphor Nasal Spray are competent and effective treatments for head colds, catarrh, and similar conditions, and that said preparations are entirely safe for continued use.

PAR. 3. The aforesaid representations, as well as others of similar import which have not been specifically set out herein, are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact:

(a) Respondent's preparation Greaseless Massage Cream is not a cure or remedy, or a competent or effective treatment, for sallowness or roughness of the skin, or for pimples or other skin imperfections.

(b) Respondent's preparation Lemon Greaseless Cream does not possess any therapeutic value as a skin treatment, nor does it help to promote a clear or healthy skin.

(c) Respondent's preparation Catarrhal Cream does not constitute a competent or effective treatment for nasal catarrh, dry catarrh, catarrhal headaches, head colds, hay fever, sore throat, bronchitis, or throat troubles generally, nor is it a competent or effective treatment for burns, cuts, or sores.

(d) Respondent's preparation Hair-Lay Cream contains no active therapeutic agent. It is wholly incapable of promoting the growth of hair or relieving itching scalp, and is of no assistance in preventing dandruff or falling hair.

(e) Respondent's preparation Dandruff Remedy is not a cure or remedy for dandruff, and the use of the word "Remedy" to designate said preparation is false and misleading. Said preparation is of no therapeutic value in the treatment of dandruff in excess of affording temporary relief from the itching symptom associated with dandruff and assisting in the temporary removal of dandruff scales.

(f) Respondent's preparation Vapor Inhalant is not a competent or effective treatment for croup, head colds, headaches, or catarrh.

(g) Respondent's preparation Beauty Balm is wholly incapable of improving the complexion. It does not help to eliminate wrinkles, nor does it have any tonic effect upon the skin.

(h) Respondent's preparation Debest Skin Treatment is not a competent or effective treatment for eczema or for redness, roughness, or scaling of the skin.

(i) Respondent's preparation Nasal Jelly is not a competent or effective treatment for head colds, catarrh, or any similar conditions.

(j) Respondent's preparations Teeth Whitener Formula A and Teeth Whitener Formula B will not remove tartar, stains, or other discolorations from the teeth.

Moreover, said preparation Teeth Whitener Formula A is not entirely safe for use, as it contains precipitated chalk which may severely scratch the enamel of the teeth.

(k) Respondent's preparations Pine Oil Nasal Spray and Menthol and Camphor Nasal Spray are not competent or effective treatments for head colds, catarrh, or similar conditions.

Moreover, said preparations are not entirely safe for continued use, as they contain light mineral oil in a quantity sufficient to cause oil pneumonia, particularly in the case of children, if said preparations are used over long periods of time.

(l) Respondent's preparation Nose Inhalant is not safe for use, as it contains chloroform in a quantity sufficient to cause anesthesia, and in some instances complete circulatory failure. The continued use of said preparation may also cause degenerative changes in the liver.

PAR. 4. The use by the respondent of said false and misleading representations, and the failure of respondent to disclose the harmful effects which may result from the use of certain of said preparations, have the tendency and capacity to cause a substantial number of prospective purchasers of said formulas to believe that the preparations represented by said formulas possess therapeutic properties and values which they do not in fact possess, and that certain of said preparations are safe for use, when such is not the fact, and the tendency and capacity to cause such prospective purchasers to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said formulas as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

The acts and practices of the respondent serve also to place in the hands of uninformed or unscrupulous purchasers of said formulas means and instrumentalities whereby such parties are enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public.

PAR. 5. The acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

G. KRUEGER BREWING COMPANY

Docket 4434. Complaint, Dec. 26, 1940—Decision, Aug. 7, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in brewing its "Ambassador Beer," and in competitive interstate sale and distribution thereof; by means of interstate newspaper advertising—

Represented, directly or by implication, that said product was composed wholly of barley malt and hops and contained no other cereals or fermentable ingredients, through use of such statements as "* * * Only the choicest barley malt and hops are used in brewing this distinctively different product," when in fact said product was not an "all-malt beer," in which barley malt and hops are used exclusively, and which is well-known to the beer-drinking public and in demand by a portion thereof, but was product in brewing of which other fermentable grains or cereals were used in addition to malt and hops;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such advertisements were true, and with capacity to induce its purchase of substantial quantities thereof as a result of such belief, whereby trade was diverted unfairly by it from its competitors who truthfully advertise their products, to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.

Mr. Jesse D. Kash for the Commission.

Guggenheimer & Untermyer, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that G. Krueger Brewing Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, G. Krueger Brewing Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its office and principal place of business located at Newark, N. J.

PAR. 2. The respondent is now and for more than 2 years last past has been engaged in the business of brewing, selling, and distributing beer under the brand name Ambassador Beer. Respondent causes its said product when sold to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of New Jersey to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid respondent has been and is in competition with other corporations and individuals and with firms and partnerships selling and distributing beer in commerce in and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among such competitors in said commerce are many who do not in any manner misrepresent their said products or the ingredients composing same, and who do not make any other false statements in connection with the sale and distribution of their said products.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false and misleading and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinbefore set forth, by United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals and by pamphlets, circulars, and other advertising matter are the following:

A custom brewed beer for cultured taste, Ambassador is designed to meet the present day demand for a lighter, milder, more delicately flavored beer. Only the choicest barley malt and hops are used in brewing this distinctively different product.

Through the use of the statements and representations hereinbefore set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondent has represented directly or by implication that its product Ambassador Beer is composed wholly of barley malt and hops.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact respondent's product Ambassador Beer is not wholly composed of barley malt and hops but includes corn and other grains or cereals.

PAR. 6. The term "only the choicest barley malt and hops" when applied to beer is understood by the purchasing public as denoting a beer composed wholly of barley and hops and not containing any other cereal or fermentable ingredients and such beer has been well known to the beer drinking public and there is a demand on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for such beer.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading advertisements disseminated, as aforesaid, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false advertisements are true and to induce the purchasing public to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's product as the result of such belief.

As a result trade has been diverted unfairly by the respondent from its competitors in commerce who truthfully advertise their products. In consequence thereof, injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods in competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 26th day of December 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, G. Krueger Brewing Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On January 16, 1941, the respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, and on April 11, 1941, at a hearing duly scheduled and held at Brooklyn, N. Y., it was agreed by and between counsel for the respondent and counsel for the Commission that, subject to the approval of the Commission, a stipulation as to the facts read into the record may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto, and that the Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its findings as to the facts (including inferences which it may draw from the said stipulated facts) and its conclusion based thereon and issue its order disposing of this proceeding without the presentation of argument or filing of briefs. Respondent expressly waived the filing of the trial examiner's report on the evidence. Thereafter, this proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved and accepted, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, G. Krueger Brewing Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its office and principal place of business located at 75 Belmont Avenue, in the city of Newark, State of New Jersey.

PAR. 2. The respondent is now and for more than 2 years last past has been engaged in the business of brewing, selling, and distributing beer under the trade mark "Ambassador Beer." Respondent causes its said product, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of New Jersey to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States. Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent has been and is in competition with other corporations and individuals and with firms and partnerships selling and distributing beer in commerce in and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business respondent has disseminated and has caused the dissemination of advertisements concerning its said product by means of newspaper advertisements in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and respondent has also disseminated and has caused to be disseminated, advertisements concerning its product by newspaper advertising in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act.

PAR. 5. Among the statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinbefore set forth, are the following:

A custom brewed beer for cultured tastes, Ambassador is designed to meet the present day demand for a lighter, milder, more delicately flavored beer. Only the choicest barley malt and hops are used in brewing this distinctively different product.

Through the use of the statements and representations hereinbefore set forth, respondent represented directly or by implication that its product "Ambassador Beer" is composed wholly of barley malt and hops and does not contain any other cereals or fermentable ingredients.

PAR. 6. The foregoing representations are false, misleading, and deceptive. In truth and in fact other fermentable grains or cereals are used in brewing said product in addition to barley malt and hops.

PAR. 7. The Commission finds that while certain members of the purchasing public would not be led to believe, through the use by the respondent of the statement "only the choicest barley malt and hops are used in brewing this distinctively different product," that only barley malt and hops are used in brewing said product, the use by the respondent of such statement has the capacity and tendency to mislead a substantial number of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that said beer is composed wholly of barley malt and hops to the exclusion of all other cereals or fermentable ingredients. Barley malt and hops are used exclusively in brewing approximately 2 percent of the beer brewed and consumed in the United States, such beer being known as "all-malt beer." Such beer is and has been well known to the beer drinking public and there is a demand on the part of a portion of such public for this particular kind of beer.

PAR. 8. The Commission further finds that the advertisement set out herein in paragraph 5 appeared in the Newark Evening News, Newark, N. J., in the July 19, 1939, issue, and that said newspaper has an interstate circulation. Said advertisement is not being used at the present time and has not been used by the respondent since July 19, 1939.

PAR. 9. The use by the respondent of the foregoing misleading and deceptive advertisements disseminated as aforesaid, had a tendency and capacity to, and did, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such advertisements were true and to induce the purchasing public to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's product as the result of such belief.

As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly by the respondent from its competitors in commerce who truthfully advertise their products. In consequence thereof, injury has been done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found were to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent and a stipulation as to the facts entered into by counsel for respondent herein, and counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, G. Krueger Brewing Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its product "Ambassador Beer," or any other beer containing fermentable ingredients other than and in addition to barley malt and hops, whether sold under the same name or any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement, by any means, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advartisement represents directly or by implication that only barley malt and hops are used in brewing said beer.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said beer, which advertisement contains the representation prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

CASIMIRO MUOJO, TRADING AS ALVI CO. AND AS ALVI, INC.

Docket 4484. Complaint, Apr. 5, 1941—Decision, Aug. 7, 1941

Where an individual engaged in interstate sale and distribution of a hair dye cosmetic variously designated as "Vitale Instantaneous Hair Dye," "Vitale Rapid Hair Coloring," etc.; by means of advertisements disseminated through the mails and otherwise, including newspaper advertisements offering free samples, and circulars, leaflets, and other advertising literature sent in response to requests for such samples and in reply to inquiries—

(a) Represented that his said hair dye cosmetic was scientific, safe, and free from harmful, dangerous, and injurious chemicals, that it would end premature gray hair and produce a permanent, natural, uniform shade, that it gave the hair the warmth, color, lustre, and glint of youth and would have no ill effects, its statements accompanying samples including the representations "can be used by all persons having perfect skin and hair," along with advice, when in doubt, to apply a few drops of the product "behind the ear or on the arm," and statement that "If no redness appears on the following morning, you can use VITALE with the assurance that it will do no harm," it asserting in various advertising that it was "free from any harmful material," "SAFE FOR SCALP AND HAIR," "perfectly safe," etc.;

Facts being his said cosmetic was a chemical dye which was not capable of producing results claimed, and was not safe or harmless, in that it contained the toxic coal tar derivative paraphenylenediamine in sufficient quantity to cause skin irritation and violent local dermatitis when used as prescribed, and, if absorbed into the body, to result in vertigo, gastritis, exophthalmos, and asthma, among other ailments, while its application to eyebrows or eyelashes might cause blindness; and

(b) Failed to reveal, in such advertisements, facts material in the light of the representations contained therein, and that use of said hair dye cosmetic under prescribed or usual conditions might result in injury to health, in that they contained no warning against use of product on the eyelashes or eyebrows, nor adequate warnings as to the necessity of a proper skin patch test before each application to the hair, in order to determine user's toxic reaction;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that his said representations were true, and of inducing it, because of said belief, to purchase his preparation:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. James L. Baker for the Commission.

Mr. Alfred C. Ditolla, of New York City, for respondent.

PAR. 4. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents that his hair dye cosmetic, designated as Vitale Instantaneous Hair Dye and by various other names as aforesaid, is scientific, safe, and free from harmful, dangerous, and injurious chemicals; that it will end premature gray hair; that it will produce a permanent, natural, uniform shade; that it gives the hair the warmth, color, luster, and glint of youth and that its use will have no ill effects upon the human body.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, the cosmetic sold and distributed by the respondent as aforesaid is a chemical dye and will not end premature gray hair, nor will it produce a permanent, natural, uniform shade. It is incapable of giving the hair the warmth, color, luster or glint of youth, or affecting the hair in any way other than as a dye. The said preparation is not safe, scientific, or harmless, as its use may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

Respondent's preparation contains paraphenylene-diamine, a toxic coal tar derivative, in sufficient quantity to cause in some cases skin irritation and other harmful effects, if said preparation is used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

The use of said cosmetic may cause, in some cases, violent local dermatitis, and if absorbed into the body, it may result in vertigo, gastritis, exophthalmos, asthma, diplopia, asthenia, or subcutaneous oedema about the face and head. Furthermore, the application of said cosmetic to the eyebrows or eyelashes in any case may cause blindness.

PAR. 6. The advertisements disseminated by the respondent, as aforesaid, contain no warning against the use of said preparation on the eyelashes or eyebrows, nor do such advertisements contain adequate warnings as to the necessity of a proper skin patch test before each application of said preparation to the hair, in order to determine the toxic reaction of the user. Consequently, such advertisements constitute false advertisements in that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained therein, and fail to reveal that the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in injury to health.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing, false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to his preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and induce a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's preparation.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

AJAX TIRE & RUBBER CORPORATION

Docket 3943. Complaint, Nov. 6, 1939—Decision, Aug. 12, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in interstate sale and distribution of its "Ajax" automobile tires and tubes; in dealing with the matter of plies in its tires, as to which there is an established manufacturers' practice, familiar to the purchasing public which necessarily relies thereon, of indicating on the side walls and wrappings of tires the number of plies contained therein; by means of letters, blotters, signs, price lists, and other advertising matter circulated among dealers—

(a) Represented that its tires were six-ply and eight-ply construction, respectively, through such typical statements as "Silent 6 Six—Silent 8 Eight" and "Cleated 6 Six—Cleated 8 Eight," "Ajax—The World's Premier Tire—Since 1904," and "The World's Premier Tires for over 34 years," through means aforesaid and through placing on the side walls and wrappings of said tires marks, brands, numbers, and insignia which purported to represent that six and eight plies, respectively, were used in their construction; facts being its said products contained less than six and eight plies, respectively;

(b) Represented that it had been selling tires and tubes since 1904, facts being that, while its predecessors sold such products from 1904 to 1934, it did not sell or distribute them prior to 1934; and

(c) Represented that certain designated amounts were the retail prices of its products, when in fact they were in excess of the prices at which such tires and tubes were customarily sold by retailers, and thereby placed in the hands of dealers means of deceiving members of the purchasing public as to the regular retail prices;

With the result, notwithstanding fact it neither owned nor controlled any retail outlets and disseminated no advertising which reached the consumer directly from it, and the passing of its products through varying multiple channels before reaching the ultimate consumer, that use of such practices had the capacity and tendency to and did mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, and with result that the purchasing public bought substantial quantities of its said products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. B. G. Wilson for the Commission.

Levien, Singer & Neuburger, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Ajax Tire & Rubber Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Ajax Tire & Rubber Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business at 601 West Twenty-sixth Street, New York, N. Y. The respondent is now, and has been for some time last past, engaged in the business of selling and distributing automobile tires and tubes designated "Ajax" in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent causes and has caused its said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein, has maintained, a course of trade in said automobile tires and tubes in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. The number of plies in tires is an important factor in determining the durability and value thereof. There is among manufacturers of automobile tires an established custom and practice of placing on the side walls of tires and on the wrappings of such tires figures and marks indicating the number of plies contained in such tires. The purchasing public is familiar with such practice and relies upon such figures and marks in purchasing tires and in fact has no other way of knowing the actual number of plies contained in said tires other than as revealed in the manufacturers' representations so stamped on the tires themselves and the wrappings thereof.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said automobile tires and tubes, respondent has made many false and misleading representations concerning the character, quality and prices of said products by means of letters, blotters, signs, price lists and other printed and written matter circulated generally among dealers. Among and typical of the false and misleading representations so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

Silent 6 Six—Silent 8 Eight and
Cleated 6 Six—Cleated 8 Eight
Ajax—The World's Premier Tire—Since 1904.
The World's Premier Tires for over 34 years.

Respondent has also caused to be placed on the wrappings enclosing its said tires and on the side walls of said tires marks, brands, numbers, and insignia which purport to represent and indicate that six and eight plies respectively are used in the construction of such tires.

Through the use of the aforesaid statements and practices the respondent represents that its tires are of six ply construction and eight ply construction, respectively, and that its tires and tubes have been on the market since 1904.

PAR. 4. The foregoing representations are false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, such tires do not contain six plies and eight plies, respectively, but contain substantially smaller number of plies. Respondent's tires and tubes have not been on the market since 1904. It was not until 1934 that respondent was organized and began the sale and distribution of said tires and tubes.

PAR. 5. Respondent also represents, by means of fictitious price lists and other advertising material, that the value and retail price of its tires and tubes are much greater than is actually the fact. In truth and in fact, the purported prices set forth in such price lists and advertising material do not represent the actual retail prices of such tires and tubes but are fictitious prices and are greatly in excess of the retail prices at which such tires and tubes are customarily sold by retail dealers in the normal course of business.

By this practice respondent has placed in the hands of unscrupulous dealers a means and instrumentality whereby such dealers are enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public as to the regular value and retail price of said tires and tubes.

PAR. 6. The use by respondent of the practices set forth herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's tires and tubes as a result of such erroneous belief.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 6th day of November 1939, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Ajax Tire & Rubber Corporation, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On the 27th day of November 1939, the respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by Levien, Singer and Neuburger, counsel for respondent, and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, might be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the Commission might proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Counsel for the respondent expressly waived the filing of the report upon the evidence by the trial examiner. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Ajax Tire & Rubber Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business at 601 West Twenty-sixth Street, New York, N. Y. The respondent is now, and has been for some time last past, engaged in the business of selling and distributing automobile tires and tubes designated "Ajax" in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent causes and has caused its said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from its place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said automobile tires and tubes in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said automobile tires and tubes, respondent has made many representations concerning the character, quality, and prices of said products by means of letters, blotters, signs, price lists, and other printed and written matter circulated generally among dealers. Among and typical of the representations so used and disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

Silent 6 Six—Silent 8 Eight and
Cleated 6 Six—Cleated 8 Eight
Ajax—The World's Premier Tire—Since 1904.
The World's Premier Tires for over 34 years.

Respondent has also caused to be placed on the wrappings enclosing its said tires and on the side walls of said tires marks, brands, numbers, and insignia which purport to represent and indicate that six and eight plies, respectively, are used in the construction of such tires.

Through the use of the aforesaid statements and practices the respondent represents or implies that its tires are of six-ply construction and eight-ply construction, respectively, and that the respondent has been selling tires and tubes on the market since 1904.

PAR. 3. The number of plies in tires is an important factor in determining the durability and value thereof. There is among manufacturers of automobile tires an established custom and practice of placing on the side walls of tires and on the wrappings of such tires, figures and marks indicating the number of plies contained in such tires. The purchasing public is familiar with such practice and relies upon such figures and marks in purchasing tires, and in fact has no other way of knowing the actual number of plies contained in said tires other than as revealed in the manufacturers' representations so stamped on the tires themselves and the wrappings thereof.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact respondent's tires do not contain six plies and eight plies, respectively, but contain a lesser number of plies. Respondent has not been selling tires and tubes on the market since 1904. Ajax tires and tubes were sold by respondent's predecessors from 1904 to 1934. Respondent prior to 1934, did not sell or distribute Ajax tires and tubes.

PAR. 5. Respondent, in marketing its tires and tubes issues price lists and other advertising material to its distributors by means of which it represents that certain designated amounts are the retail prices of its tires and tubes. In truth and in fact, the purported prices set forth in such price lists and advertising material do not represent the actual retail prices of such tires and tubes but are prices in excess of the retail prices at which such tires and tubes are customarily sold by retail dealers in the normal course of business.

By this practice respondent has placed in the hands of dealers a means and instrumentality whereby certain dealers are enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public as to the regular retail price of said tires and tubes.

PAR. 6. Although respondent neither owns nor controls any retail outlets and does not disseminate any advertising which reaches the consumer directly from the respondent and its products pass through varying multiple channels before reaching the ultimate consumer, the use by respondent of the practices set forth in paragraphs 2 and 5 hereof, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true, and as a result of such erroneous belief the purchasing public has purchased substantial quantities of respondent's tires and tubes.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between Levien, Singer and Neuburger, counsel for the respondent, and W. T. Kelly, chief counsel for the Commission, which provides among other things that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein its findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of this proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Ajax Tire & Rubber Corporation, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its automobile tires and tubes in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or indirectly, by means of words, brands, markings, numbers, or insignia placed on its automobile tires or on the tire wrappings, or in any other manner, that the tires offered for sale or sold by respondent contain more plies in their construction than is actually the fact.

2. Representing, directly or indirectly, that any specified amounts are the retail selling prices of its automobile tires and tubes when such amounts are not, in fact, the bona fide actual selling prices of such tires and tubes as established by the usual and customary retail sales in the normal course of business.

3. Furnishing price lists and advertising material to its dealers, in which certain amounts are designated as the retail prices of its automobile tires and tubes, unless such amounts are the bona fide regular established retail selling prices of such tires and tubes, as established by the usual and customary retail sales of dealers in the normal course of business.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

DOMENICO DEL VECCHIO, TRADING AS PEOPLES HARDWARE STORES

Docket 4495. Complaint, May 1, 1941—Decision, Aug. 12, 1941

Where an individual engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of paints and other merchandise; by means of advertisements in newspapers and otherwise—

(a) Represented that he owned and operated or controlled the plant in which his products were made, and that the prices at which they were offered represented savings of 20 to 35 percent to purchasers as compared with prices of comparable products, through such statements as "Our factory-to-you plan brings savings of 20% to 35%"; facts being he was not a manufacturer, from whom merchandise is preferably bought direct by members of the purchasing public as affording them, in their belief, a more uniform line of goods, superior quality, lower prices, and other advantages, but filled orders with products made in a plant or factory which he did not own, operate, or control, and his prices represented no such savings; and

(b) Represented that his "Lawrence Master Painters Flat Paint" "* * * covers 1,100 square feet per gallon"; facts being such coverage could not be obtained under normal conditions of use, but only when used over a pigment sealer on a smooth surface;

With effect of deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, and of inducing it, because of such belief, to purchase his said products, thereby unfairly diverting trade to him from his competitors, to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. B. G. Wilson for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Domenico Del Vecchio, an individual trading as Peoples Hardware Stores, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Domenico Del Vecchio, is an individual trading as Peoples Hardware Stores, with his office and principal place of business located at 1434 Florida Avenue, NE., in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. The respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of paints and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of his said business, the said respondent causes his products, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the District of Columbia to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce, particularly in the District of Columbia and between the District of Columbia and the States of Maryland and Virginia.

Respondent is, and at all times mentioned herein has been, in competition with other corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of paints in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business and in connection with the sale and distribution of his paint products in commerce, as herein described, the respondent has disseminated false and misleading statements and representations with reference to the comparative price and quality of his said paint products in newspapers and in other advertising media, all of which are circulated among prospective purchasers of said products located in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia and particularly in the various localities hereinabove set forth. Among and typical of such false and misleading statements and representations are the following:

Our factory-to-you plan bring savings of 20% to 35%.
Lawrence Master Painters Flat Paint—covers 1100 square feet per gallon.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the foregoing statements and representations, together with other statements and representations similar thereto not set out herein, the respondent represents that he owns and operates or controls the plant or factory wherein the products he sells are made or manufactured, and that the prices at which such products are offered for sale represent savings of 20 percent to 35 percent to the purchasers thereof as compared to the prices of the same or comparable products made of the same or comparable materials; and respondent represents that his paint designated as "Lawrence Master Painters Flat Paint" covers 1,100 square feet of surface per gallon under normal conditions.

PAR. 5. The foregoing statements and representations are false, misleading and deceptive. In truth and in fact, the respondent does not own and operate or control, and has not owned and operated or controlled, a plant, factory or machinery for the manufacture of the products which he sells and distributes as hereinabove alleged. The respondent fills orders for such articles of merchandise with products which are made or manufactured in a plant or factory which he neither owns, operates, nor controls. The price at which the respondent offers his products for sale does not represent a saving of 20 percent to 35 percent to the purchasers of said products as compared to the prices charged by his competitors for similar products made of the same or comparable materials. The representation that respondent's "Lawrence Master Painters Flat Paint" covers 1,100 square feet per gallon, is false in that such coverage cannot be obtained under normal conditions of use and can be obtained only when used over a pigment sealer on a smooth surface.

PAR. 6. Members of the purchasing public have a preference for buying merchandise, including the products sold by respondent, and other products similar thereto, directly from the manufacturers thereof, believing that by doing so, a more uniform line of goods, superior quality, lower prices, and other advantages can be obtained.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the false and misleading statements and representations referred to herein has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, a substantial portion of the purchasing public is induced to, and does, purchase respondent's said products and trade is thereby unfairly diverted to respondent from his competitors. As a result of respondent's said practices, as herein set forth, substantial injury has been and is being done to competition in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 1, 1941, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Domenico Del Vecchio, an individual trading as Peoples Hardware Stores, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On May 31, 1941, the respondent filed his answer in which answer he admitted all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business and in connection with the sale and distribution of his paint products in commerce, as herein described, the respondent has disseminated false and misleading statements and representations with reference to the comparative price and quality of his said paint products in newspapers and in other advertising media, all of which are circulated among prospective purchasers of said products located in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia and particularly in the various localities hereinabove set forth. Among and typical of such false and misleading statements and representations are the following:

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the false and misleading statements and representations referred to herein has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, a substantial portion of the purchasing public is induced to, and does, purchase respondent's said products and trade is thereby unfairly diverted to respondent from his competitors. As a result of respondent's said practices, as herein set forth, substantial injury has been and is being done to competition in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

IN THE MATTER OF

ROCKFORD FURNITURE FACTORIES, INC.

Docket 4503. Complaint, May 14, 1941—Decision, Aug. 12, 1941

Where a corporation, with office and principal place of business in Newark, N. J., engaged in interstate sale and distribution of furniture at retail—

Represented, directly or indirectly, that it was a manufacturer of furniture and owned, operated, or controlled the plants or factories in which the furniture dealt in by it was made, and that such furniture was manufactured in Rockford, Ill., through adoption and use of corporate name including words "Rockford Furniture Factories," and through designating as "Rockford Furniture Showrooms" building and rooms in which its said furniture was displayed, and featuring its said corporate name on letterheads, sales contracts and other printed and advertising matter, and its said latter, designation about the building and rooms in question, and printing the same on order blanks, code price cards, and other literature used in connection with the display, solicitation, and sale of its furniture;

Notwithstanding it was not a manufacturer of furniture, but purchased it on the open market, and stocked and sold very little, if any, furniture made exclusively in Rockford, Ill.;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief (1) that it was a manufacturer, for dealing with whom directly, there is a marked preference, due to the belief that the profit of the middleman may be thereby eliminated and lower prices, more favorable terms, and other advantages obtained, and (2) that its said furniture was made in Rockford, Ill., long known as an important part of the furniture industry, products of which had long enjoyed a widespread popularity and demand; and of inducing a substantial portion of the purchasing public to buy its furniture as a result of such mistaken belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. J. V. Buffington for the Commission.
Mr. Samuel S. Ferster, of Newark, N. J., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Rockford Furniture Factories, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Rockford Furniture Factories, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its office and principal place of business located at 801 Passaic Avenue in the city of Newark and State of New Jersey. The respondent for more than three years last past has been, and is now, engaged in the distribution and sale at retail of furniture.

Respondent causes its said furniture, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New Jersey to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said furniture in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent adopted as and for its corporate and trade name the words "Rockford Furniture Factories, Inc.," under which to carry on its business, which said name, including the words "Rockford" and "Factories," respondent at all times mentioned herein has used continuously, and now uses, in soliciting the sale of and selling its furniture as described herein. Respondent has also described and designated, and now describes and designates, the building and rooms in which its said furniture is displayed as "Rockford Furniture Showrooms." Respondent has caused, and still causes, said corporate or trade name, "Rockford Furniture Factories, Inc.," to be prominently and conspicuously displayed in and about its place of business and to appear on its letterheads, sales contracts and other printed and advertising matter distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and has caused, and still causes, the said designation, "Rockford Furniture Showrooms," to prominently appear in and about the building and rooms in which its furniture is displayed and to be imprinted on its order blanks, code price cards and other literature used in connection with the display, solicitation of sales and selling of said furniture.

PAR. 3. Through the use of the aforesaid corporate or trade name, "Rockford Furniture Factories, Inc.," and said designation, "Rockford Furniture Showrooms," and through other representations not specifically set out herein, the respondent has represented, and still represents, directly or indirectly, that it is a manufacturer of furniture; that it owns and operates or controls the manufacturing plants or factories in which the furniture it sells is manufactured; and that said furniture is manufactured in the city of Rockford, Ill.

PAR. 4. Such representations on the part of the respondent are false and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent has never been, and is not now, a manufacturer of furniture. It has never, and does not now, own and operate or control in any manner the manufacturing plants or factories in which such furniture, or any of it is manufactured. Respondent at all times mentioned herein, on the contrary, has purchased, and now purchases, all of its furniture on the open market. Respondent has never and does not now stock or sell furniture manufactured exclusively in the city of Rockford, Ill., but on the contrary, has stocked and sold, and now stocks and sells, very little, if any, furniture manufactured in said city.

PAR. 5. There is a marked preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for purchasing furniture and other merchandise directly from the manufacturer thereof, such preference being due in part to a belief on the part of the public that the profit of a middleman may be eliminated and that lower prices, more favorable terms and other advantages may be obtained thereby.

PAR. 6. The city of Rockford, Ill., has been for many years last past, and is now, a large and important center of the furniture industry, which fact has been, and is, generally known to a substantial portion of the public throughout the United States. The furniture manufactured in said city for many years has enjoyed, and now enjoys, a widespread popularity and demand and there is a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for such furniture.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the acts and practices herein set forth has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into an erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent is a manufacturer of the furniture it sells and that said furniture is manufactured in Rockford, Ill., and has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, induce such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of said furniture as the result of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on May 14, 1941, issued and on May 15, 1941, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Rockford Furniture Factories, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On June 4, 1941, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Rockford Furniture Factories, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its office and principal place of business located at 801 Passaic Avenue in the city of Newark and State of New Jersey. The respondent for more than 3 years last past has been, and is now, engaged in the sale at retail and distribution of furniture.

Respondent causes its said furniture, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New Jersey to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said furniture in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent adopted as and for its corporate and trade name the words "Rockford Furniture Factories, Inc," under which to carry on its business, which said name, including the words "Rockford" and "Factories," respondent at all times mentioned herein has used continuously, and now uses, in soliciting the sale of and selling its furniture as described herein. Respondent has also described and designated, and now describes and designates, the building and rooms in which its said furniture is displayed as "Rockford Furniture Showrooms." Respondent has caused, and still causes, said corporate or trade name, "Rockford Furniture Factories, Inc." to be prominently and conspicuously displayed in and about its place of business and to appear on its letterheads, sales contracts, and other printed and advertising matter distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and has caused, and still causes, the said designation, "Rockford Furniture Showrooms," to prominently appear in and about the building and rooms in which its furniture is displayed and to be imprinted on its order blanks, code price cards and other literature used in connection with the display, solicitation of sales and selling of said furniture.

PAR. 3. Through the use of the aforesaid corporate or trade name, "Rockford Furniture Factories, Inc." and said designation, "Rockford Furniture Showrooms," and other representations not specifically set out herein, the respondent has represented, and still represents, directly or indirectly, that it is a manufacturer of furniture; that it owns, operates, or controls the manufacturing plants or factories in which the furniture it has sold, and now sells, was and is manufactured; and that said furniture is manufactured in the city of Rockford, Ill.

PAR. 4. Such representations on the part of the respondent are false and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent has never been, and is not now, a manufacturer of furniture. It has never, and does not now, own, operate, or control in any manner the manufacturing plants or factories in which such furniture, or any of it, was and is manufactured. Respondent at all times mentioned herein, on the contrary, has purchased, and now purchases, all of its furniture on the open market. Respondent has never and does not now stock or sell furniture manufactured exclusively in the city of Rockford, Ill., but, on the contrary, has stocked and sold, and now stocks and sells, very little, if any, furniture manufactured in said city.

PAR. 5. There is a marked preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for purchasing furniture and other merchandise directly from the manufacturer thereof, such preference being partly due in part to a belief on the part of the public that the profit of a middleman may be eliminated and that lower prices, more favorable terms and other advantages may be obtained thereby.

PAR. 6. The city of Rockford, Ill., has been for many years last past, and is now, a large and important center of the furniture industry, which fact has been, and is, generally known to a substantial portion of the public throughout the United States. The furniture manufactured in said city for many years has enjoyed, and now enjoys, a widespread popularity and demand, and there is a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for such furniture.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the acts and practices herein set forth has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into an erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent is a manufacturer of the furniture it sells and that said furniture is manufactured in Rockford, Ill., and has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, induce such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of said furniture as the result of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

IN THE MATTER OF

ILLINOIS NUT PRODUCTS COMPANY

Docket 3807. Complaint, June 3, 1939—Decision, Aug. 13, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture and in competitive interstate sale and distribution of candy, including certain assortments packed and assembled so to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when sold to consumers, and in shipping push cards to be used with such assortments, to its wholesaler and jobber purchasers, by whom the cards and candy were assembled into assortments and sold to the retail trade; a typical assortment consisting of a box of malted milk balls, together with a push card for use in their sale under a plan in accordance with which the chance selection of such football legends as "Touchdown," "Drop Kick," "Safety," etc., entitled a customer, for the cent paid, from 20 down to 1 malted milk ball, the last play in first of card's two sections was entitled to 10, and last play on card to 20 pieces—

Sold such assortments to wholesalers, jobbers, and retailers, and furnished therewith as aforesaid, various push cards for use, in their sale, thereby placing in the hands of others devices through which said merchandise was distributed to the ultimate consumer wholly by lot or chance, in competition with those who do not use any sales method involving such a game, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme;

With the result that many persons were attracted by its said sales plan and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell its candy in preference to that of its said competitors, and with tendency and capacity unfairly to divert trade in commerce to it from them:

Held, That such acts and practices were contrary to the established public policy of the United States Government, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas and Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiners.

Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr. and Mr. J. V. Mishou for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Illinois Nut Products Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Illinois Nut Products Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 613 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, said products, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is, and for some time last past has been, in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers, certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Respondent also causes, and has caused, push cards which were designed to be, and are, used with the said assortments to be shipped to the aforesaid wholesale dealers and jobbers. The wholesale dealers and jobbers aforesaid, in turn assemble the push cards and candy into one assortment and sell the same to the retail trade. Respondent distributes, and has distributed, various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of its candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said candy by means of said push cards, is the same as the one hereinafter described, varying only in detail:

One of said assortments consists of a box of malted milk balls, together with a device commonly called a push card. The said malted milk balls are distributed to the consuming public by means of said push card in the following manner:

The push card is divided into two sections, and each of said sections contain 50 partially perforated disks on the face of which is printed the word "push." Concealed within the said disks is one of the following words or phrases: Touchdown, Drop Kick, Safety, Field Goal, Forward Pass, End Run, Fake Pass, Line Buck, and Off Side. These words or phrases are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a push or selection has been made, and the selected disk removed or separated from said push card. Punches on the said card are 1 cent each, and the number of malted milk balls received by the purchaser is determined by the following legend which appears on the face of the card:

PLAY

FOR DELICIOUS CHOCOLATE COVERED MALTED MILK BALLS

1¢ a Play

EVERY PLAY A WINNER

	PIECES
TOUCHDOWN Receives	20
DROP KICK Receives	10
SAFETY Receives	10
FIELD GOAL Receives	6
FORWARD PASS Receives	3
END RUN Receives	3
FAKE PASS Receives	3
LINE BUCK Receives	2
OFF SIDE Receives	1
LAST PLAY IN FIRST SECTION COMPLETED Receives	10

LAST PLAY ON CARD RECEIVES 20 PIECES

The sales of respondent's candy by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above described legend. Said pieces of candy are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legend. The fact as to whether a purchaser receiving one or more pieces of candy for the amount of money paid is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed various assortments of candy along with push cards involving a lot or chance feature, but such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes or distributes the said push cards use the same in selling and distributing respondent's candy in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its candy in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its candy and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure additional pieces of candy without additional cost. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell or distribute candy in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its candy and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method. As a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been done, by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 3rd day of June A. D., 1939, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Illinois Nut Products Co., a corporation, charging it with unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of said complaint, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint, by attorney for the respondent before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding. Said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the testimony and other evidence, the trial examiners' report thereon and brief in support of the complaint, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Illinois Nut Products Co., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and since 1934 has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers, and causes its said products when sold to be shipped from its principal place of business to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Respondent in the conduct of its business, as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, has been, and now is, in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale or distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 4. Respondent in the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 2 hereof, sells, and has sold, to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Respondent also causes, and has caused, push cards which were designed to be and are used with the said assortments, to be shipped to the aforesaid wholesale dealers and jobbers who, in turn, assemble the push cards and candy into one assortment and sell the same to the retail trade. Respondent distributes, and has distributed, various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of its candies, and the said push cards and the respondent's sales plan or methods vary only in detail.

One of respondent's assortments consists of a box of malted milk balls, together with a device commonly called a push card. Upon the face of the push card appears the following legend:

PLAY FOOTBALL FOR DELICIOUS CHOCOLATE COVERED MALTED MILK BALLS	1¢ a Play
	EVERY PLAY A WINNER
	TOUCHDOWN Receives	20	PIECES
	DROP KICK Receives	10
	SAFETY Receives	10
	FIELD GOAL Receives	6
	FORWARD PASS Receives	3
	END RUN Receives	3
	FAKE PASS Receives	3
	LINE BUCK Receives	2
	OFF SIDE Receives	1

The push card is divided into two sections, each of said sections contain 50 disks, each covering a perforation in the card. These perforations are also covered on the reverse side by 12 disks. On each of the face disks is printed the word "push" and on the under side of these face disks, effectively concealed until the disk is pushed and removed from the card, is one of the football terms appearing in the legend. One cent is charged for the right to push one of the disks and the number of malted milk balls received by the purchaser is determined wholly by lot or chance, in accordance with the foregoing legend.

PAR. 5. The persons to whom the respondent furnishes or distributes the said push cards use the same in selling and distributing respondent's candy in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent by its sales plan or methods, hereinbefore described, places in the hands of others various devices which involve games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes to be used in the distribution of its candy, and by use of said devices said merchandise is distributed to the ultimate consumer wholly by law of chance.

PAR. 6. During all the time herein mentioned respondent has been in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States, of candy similar to that sold by the respondent who are unwilling to use and do not use in the sale and distribution of their candy any method involving a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Many persons are attracted by the sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its candy and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

PAR. 7. On May 11, 1937, the Commission approved a stipulation entered into between the respondent and the Commission in which respondent admitted engaging in the practices charged in the complaint and agreed to discontinue such practices. Respondent, notwithstanding said agreement, continued said practices up to the date of the issuance of the complaint herein.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States of America and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the testimony and other evidence taken before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, the report of the trial examiners thereon, brief filed by the attorney for the Commission, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent Illinois Nut Products Co., a corporation, has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Illinois Nut Products Co., its officers, directors, representatives, agents, and employees, jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of candy or any other merchandise, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, shall forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing candy or any other merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of such candy or other merchandise to the public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of others, push or pull cards, pull tabs, punchboards, or other lottery devices, either with assortments of candy or other merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, pull tabs, punchboards, or lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing said candy or other merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of candy or any other merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

DISABLED AMERICAN VETERANS OF THE WORLD WAR REHABILITATION DEPARTMENT, AND FRANK J. MACKEY, L. C. MAIER, DANIEL C. MOORE, AND ROBERT T. MACKEY

Docket 4492. Complaint, Apr. 24, 1941—Decision, Aug. 18, 1941

Where a corporation and four individuals, who as officers thereof directed and controlled its policies and operations, engaged in publication and in competitive interstate sale and distribution of books, including an 11-volume set entitled "Progress of Nations" and a 2-volume set of history and war picture books entitled "Forward March";

Following agreement with the well-known, not-for-profit "Disabled American Veterans of the World War," established shortly thereafter, and incorporated in 1932 under Federal statute, to cooperate with the Veterans Administration and other agencies devoted to improving the conditions, health and interests of wounded or disabled veterans of the World War, with the exclusive right to use aforesaid name, and under which agreement it, in consideration of right, among others, to incorporate as the "Disabled American Veterans of the World War Rehabilitation Department" and to conduct its business in the name of said national organization, was to pay latter a royalty of 15 percent, later reduced to 10 percent, on its gross sales of said two sets of books—

(a) Represented, through their salesmen, that they were representatives of the "Disabled American Veterans of the World War," and represented literature published and circulated by said organization, as endorsing their books; facts being they were not such representatives and literature referred to made no reference to said books, but related only to the general aims and purposes of the organization;

(b) Represented through said salesmen, that the books were being sold only to certain selected customers, and said "Disabled American Veterans" received the entire profit derived from the sale thereof, that a purchaser was in effect making a contribution to the organization, and that funds thus derived would be used by it in defraying expenses of its activities in combating anti-American and subversive organizations and influences in the United States; frequently concealing the fact that books in question were being sold and taking advantage of said campaign against subversive activities to urge prospective purchasers to contribute thereto, and making receipt of a set of books appear as only incidental to such subscription;

When in fact said books were sold as an ordinary commercial transaction for the profit of the corporation and individuals concerned, the only profit derived by the "Disabled American Veterans" was in the royalties referred to, and such books were sold indiscriminately to the general public and not, as claimed, restricted to any group or number of persons; and

(c) Represented, through use of corporate name "Disabled American Veterans of the World War Rehabilitation Department," that corporation in question was identical with, or connected with, or a part of, said "Disabled American Veterans of the World War," and thereby accentuated also other false and misleading representations made by said salesmen;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of their said books as a result of such belief, and of unfairly diverting trade to them from their competitors, to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. John P. Bramhall, trial examiner.
Mr. Joseph C. Fehr for the Commission.
Mr. Henry Junge, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Disabled American Veterans of the World War Rehabilitation Department, a corporation, and Frank J. Mackey, L. C. Maier, Daniel C. Moore, and Robert T. Mackey, individually, and as officers of Disabled American Veterans of the World War Rehabilitation Department, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and is appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Disabled American Veterans of the World War Rehabilitation Department, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 104 South Michigan Avenue, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Said corporation was formerly known as International Historical Society and was organized under that name on August 9, 1929, by the individual respondents, its name being changed on November 25, 1929, to Disabled American Veterans of the World War Rehabilitation Department.

Respondents Frank J. Mackey, L. C. Maier, Daniel C. Moore, and Robert T. Mackey are individuals and are respectively president, vice president, secretary-treasurer, and treasurer of the corporate respondent, with their office and principal place of business located at 104 South Michigan Avenue in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. As such officers of the respondent corporation, they are and have been actively in charge of, and direct and control, and have directed and controlled, the policies and operations of said corporate respondent. The stock in said corporate respondent is wholly owned by respondent Frank J. Mackey.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for several years last past have been, engaged in the publication and in the sale and distribution of books, including among others, two sets of books, one entitled "Progress of Nations," consisting of an 11-volume set of history books; the other consisting of a 2-volume set of history and war picture books, entitled "Forward March." In the course and conduct of their business respondents cause their said books, when sold, to be transported from their said place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their said books in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, as aforesaid, respondents are now, and at all times mentioned herein have been, in substantial competition with other corporations and individuals, and with firms and partnerships, engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of books of an encyclopedic and historical nature.

PAR. 4. Shortly after the conclusion of the Great World War, there was organized in the United States a patriotic, unincorporated society known and designated as Disabled American Veterans of the World War, to be devoted to the care, welfare, and advancement of the interests of wounded, injured, and disabled American veterans of the World War. In the year 1932, there was incorporated pursuant to Federal statute a national corporation designated as Disabled American Veterans of the World War, the incorporators thereof being members of the unincorporated organization by the same name, composed of wounded and disabled soldiers, sailors, and marines of the Great War. The purposes for which said corporation was created, as set forth in its national charter and articles of incorporation, were as follows: to uphold and maintain the constitution and laws of the United States, to realize the true American ideals and aims for which those eligible to membership had fought; to advance the interests and work for the betterment of all wounded, injured, and disabled veterans of the World War; to cooperate with the United States Veterans Administration and all other public and private agencies devoted to the cause of improving and advancing the condition, health, and interests of wounded, injured, or disabled veterans of the World War; and to encourage in all people that spirit of understanding which will guard against future wars.

Among the corporate powers conferred upon the corporation were the establishment of State and Territorial organizations and local chapters or post organizations and the power to publish a newspaper or other publications devoted to the purposes of the corporation. The organization was to be nonpolitical and nonsectarian. The aforesaid Federal statute provides that said national organization, and its State and local subdivisions, shall have the sole and exclusive right to have and to use in carrying out its purposes the name "Disabled American Veterans of the World War," and said national corporation is required, on or before the first day of January in each year, to make a report to Congress of its proceedings for the preceding calendar year.

PAR. 5. On or about November 2, 1929, the respondent corporation, Disabled American Veterans of the World War Rehabilitation Department entered into an agreement or contract with the Disabled American Veterans of the World War under the terms of which said organization was to receive a royalty of 15 percent on all gross sales of said two sets of books by the respondent corporation, said books to be sold under the sponsorship of the said Disabled American Veterans of the World War. Subsequently, on or about January 2, 1938, this royalty was by agreement between said parties reduced to and still is 10 percent on all gross sales of said books.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of their said business, and for the purpose of promoting the sale of said books, respondents have made and are making many false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations to prospective purchasers of their said books, such statements and representations being made through respondents' salesmen and representatives and by other means. Among and typical of such false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations are the following:

That respondents' salesmen and representatives are representatives of the organization known as the Disabled American Veterans of the World War; that respondents' books are being sold only to certain selected customers; that the organization known as the Disabled American Veterans of the World War receives the entire profit derived from the sale of said books, and that one purchasing such books is in effect making a contribution to said organization; that the funds derived from the sale of said books will be used by said organization known as the Disabled American Veterans of the World War to defray the expense of said organization's activities and efforts in combating anti-American and subversive organizations and influences in the United States.

In numerous instances, the fact that books are being sold by respondents is concealed from customers and prospective customers, respondents' proposition as presented by their salesmen and representatives taking the form of a patriotic and emotional appeal addressed to said customers and prospective customers. The Disabled American Veterans of the World War is represented as having launched a great legislative and educational campaign against subversive influences and activities in the United States, and prospective purchasers of respondents' books are urged to participate in and contribute to such campaign. Those subscribing to such purported campaign are finally advised that they will receive a set of books, the books being made to appear as incidental, however, to the subscription to such campaign fund.

PAR. 7. The foregoing representations made by and on behalf of respondents are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondents' salesmen and representatives are not representatives of the organization known as the Disabled American Veterans of the World War. Said organization does not receive the entire profit derived from the sale of said books, nor does the profit from the sale of said books constitute a contribution to said organization or to any campaign conducted by it. Said books, on the contrary, are sold by respondents as an ordinary commercial transaction for profit to respondents, and the only profit derived by the organization known as the Disabled American Veterans of the World War from the sale of such books is and has been the respective royalties hereinabove mentioned. The sale of said books is not restricted to any group or number of persons, but said books are sold indiscriminately to the general public.

PAR. 8. A further deceptive and misleading practice employed by respondents in promoting the sale of said books consists of the wrongful use by respondents of literature published and circulated by the organization known as the Disabled American Veterans of the World War. Said literature is represented by the respondents as endorsing said books, when in truth and in fact said literature has no reference to said books, but relates only to the general aims and purposes of said organization.

PAR. 9. The organization known as the Disabled American Veterans of the World War is now and for many years last past has been identified in the public mind as a nonprofit organization devoted to the rehabilitation and general welfare of its members, all of whom are disabled veterans of the World War. The use by respondent corporation of the corporate name Disabled American Veterans of the World War Rehabilitation Department constitutes within itself a false and misleading representation that said respondent is identical with or is connected with or is a part of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War. The use of said name by respondent corporation serves also to accentuate the other false and misleading representations made by respondents in the sale of their said books.

PAR. 10. The use by the respondents of the false and misleading statements and representations in connection with the sale of their said books, as hereinabove set out, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' said books as a result of such belief. Thereby trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors, many of whom do not make false or misleading representations with respect to their products, and in consequence thereof substantial injury has been done, and is now being done, by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 11. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 24th day of April 1941, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Disabled American Veterans of the World War Rehabilitation Department, a corporation, and Frank J. Mackey, L. C. Maier, Daniel C. Moore, and Robert T. Mackey, individually, and as officers of Disabled American Veterans of the World War Rehabilitation Department, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On May 26, 1941, the respondents filed their answer to this proceeding. Thereafter, at a hearing held in Chicago, Ill., on June 30, 1941, before John P. Bramhall, a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, to serve in this proceeding, evidence was received and a stipulation was entered into between counsel for the respondents and counsel for the Commission whereby it was stipulated and agreed that, subject to the approval of the Commission, a statement of fact read into the record might be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the Commission might proceed upon such statements of facts and the inferences drawn therefrom to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and issue its order disposing of this proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Respondents expressly waived the filing of the trial examiner's report upon the evidence. Thereafter, this proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, evidence and stipulation as to the facts, said stipulation having been approved by the Commission, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Disabled American Veterans of the World War Rehabilitation Department, is a corporation organized, existing and doing business by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 104 South Michigan Avenue, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Said corporation was formerly known as International Historical Society and was organized under that name on August 9, 1929, by the individual respondents, its name being changed on November 25, 1929, to Disabled American Veterans of the World War Rehabilitation Department.

Respondents Frank J. Mackey, L. C. Maier, Daniel C. Moore, and Robert T. Mackey are individuals and are respectively president, vice president, secretary-treasurer, and treasurer of the corporate respondent, with their office and principal place of business located at 104 South Michigan Avenue, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. As such officers of the respondent corporation, they are and have been actively in charge of, and direct and control, and have directed and controlled, the policies and operations of said corporate respondent. The stock in said corporate respondent is wholly owned by respondent Frank J. Mackey.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for several years last past have been, engaged in the publication and in the sale and distribution of books, including among others, two sets of books, one entitled "Progress of Nations," consisting of an 11-volume set of history books; the other consisting of a 2-volume set of history and war picture books, entitled "Forward March." In the course and conduct of their business respondents cause their said books, when sold, to be transported from their said place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their said books in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, respondents are now, and at all times mentioned herein have been, in substantial competition with other corporations and individuals, and with firms and partnerships, engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of books of an encyclopedic and historical nature.

PAR. 4. Shortly after the conclusion of the Great World War, there was organized in the United States a patriotic, unincorporated society known and designated as Disabled American Veterans of the World War, to be devoted to the care, welfare, and advancement of the interests of wounded, injured, and disabled American veterans of the World War. In the year 1932, there was incorporated pursuant to Federal statute a national corporation designated as Disabled American Veterans of the World War, the incorporators thereof being members of the unincorporated organization by the same name, composed of wounded and disabled soldiers, sailors, and marines of the Great War. The purposes for which said corporation was created, as set forth in its national charter and articles of incorporation, were as follows: to uphold and maintain the constitution and laws of the United States, to realize the true American ideals and aims for which those eligible to membership had fought; to advance the interests and work for the betterment of all wounded, injured and disabled veterans of the World War; to cooperate with the United States Veterans Administration and all other public and private agencies devoted to the cause of improving and advancing the condition, health, and interests of wounded, injured, or disabled veterans of the World War; and to encourage in all people that spirit of understanding which will guard against future wars.

Among the corporate powers conferred upon the corporation were the establishment of State and Territorial organizations and local chapters or post organizations and the power to publish a newspaper or other publications devoted to the purposes of the corporation. The organization was to be nonpolitical and nonsectarian. The aforesaid Federal statute provides that said national organization, and its State and local subdivisions, shall have the sole and exclusive right to have and to use in carrying out its purposes the name "Disabled American Veterans of the World War," and said national corporation is required, on or before the first day of January in each year, to make a report to Congress of its proceedings for the preceding calendar year.

PAR. 5. On or about November 2, 1929, the respondent corporation, Disabled American Veterans of the World War Rehabilitation Department, entered into an agreement or contract with the Disabled American Veterans of the World War under the terms of which the respondent corporation was granted the right to organize and incorporate as the Disabled American Veterans of the World War Rehabilitation Department and the right to use the seal of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, the signature of said organization's National Commander, and to conduct its business in the name of said national organization. In consideration of this arrangement the said national organization was to receive royalty of 15 percent on all gross sales of said two sets of books by the respondent corporation, said books to be sold under the sponsorship of the said Disabled American Veterans of the World War. Subsequently, on or about January 2, 1938, this royalty was by agreement between said parties reduced to and still is 10 percent on all gross sales of said books.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of their said business and for the purpose of promoting the sale of said books, respondent's salesmen have made statements and representations to prospective purchasers of respondents' said books. Among and typical of such statements and representations were the following:

That respondents' said salesmen and representatives were representatives of the organization known as the Disabled American Veterans of the World War; that respondents' books were being sold only to certain selected customers; that the organization known as the Disabled American Veterans of the World War received the entire profit derived from the sale of said books, and that one purchasing such books was in effect making a contribution to said organization; that the funds derived from the sale of said books would be used by said organization known as the Disabled American Veterans of the World War to defray the expense of said organization's activities and efforts in combating anti-American and subversive organizations and influences in the United States.

In numerous instances, the fact that books were being sold by respondents was concealed from customers and prospective customers, respondents' proposition as presented by their salesmen and representatives taking the form of a patriotic and emotional appeal addressed to said customers and prospective customers. Some of respondents' salesmen taking advantage of the fact that the Disabled American Veterans of the World War had launched a great legislative and educational campaign against subversive influences and activities in the United States, urged prospective purchasers of respondents' books to participate in and contribute to such campaign. Those subscribing to such purported campaign were advised that they would receive a set of books, but the receipt by such subscribers of said books was made to appear as only incidental to the subscription to such purported campaign fund.

PAR. 7. The statements and representations thus made by respondents' said salesmen and representatives, as set out in paragraph 6 hereof, were grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondents' salesmen and representatives were not representatives of the organization known as the Disabled American Veterans of the World War. Said organization did not and does not receive the entire profit derived from the sale of respondents' said books, nor has the profit from the sale of said books ever constituted a contribution to said organization or to any campaign conducted by it. Said books, on the contrary, were sold by respondents' said salesmen and representatives as an ordinary commercial transaction for profit to respondents, and the only profit derived by the organization known as the Disabled American Veterans of the World War from the sale of such books was and has been the respective royalties hereinabove mentioned. The sale of said books was not restricted to any group or number of persons, but said books were sold indiscriminately to the general public.

PAR. 8. A further deceptive and misleading practice employed by respondents' salesmen and representatives in promoting the sale of respondents' said books consisted of the wrongful use by them of literature published and circulated by the organization known as the Disabled American Veterans of the World War. Said literature was represented by respondents' salesmen and representatives as endorsing said books, when in truth and in fact said literature had no reference to said books, but related only to the general aims and purposes of said organization.

PAR. 9. The organization known as the Disabled American Veterans of the World War is now and for many years last past has been identified in the public mind as a nonprofit organization devoted to the rehabilitation and general welfare of its members, all of whom are disabled veterans of the World War. The use by respondent corporation of the corporate name Disabled American Veterans of the World War Rehabilitation Department constitutes within itself a false and misleading representation that said respondent is identical with or is connected with or is a part of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War. The use of said name by respondent corporation serves also to accentuate the other false and misleading representations made by respondents' salesmen and representatives in connection with the sale of respondents' aforesaid books.

PAR. 10. The use by the respondents of the false and misleading statements and representations in connection with the sale of their said books, as hereinabove set out, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' said books as a result of such belief. Thereby trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors, and in consequence thereof substantial injury has been done, and is now being done to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, Disabled American Veterans of the World War, Rehabilitation Department, a corporation, and Frank J. Mackey, L. C. Maier, Daniel C. Moore, and Robert T. Mackey, individually, and as officers of Disabled American Veterans of the World War Rehabilitation Department, as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondents, evidence and stipulation as to the facts entered into which provides, among other things, that without further evidence

IN THE MATTER OF

SOAP LAKE PRODUCTS CORPORATION[1]

Docket 2823. Complaint, May 27, 1936—Decision, Aug. 19, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in preparation and competitive interstate sale and distribution of packaged mineral salts obtained from Soap Lake, Washington, which (1) were composed of about 20 percent sodium sulphate or Glauber's salts, 54 percent sodium carbonate or washing soda, and 25 percent sodium chloride and potassium chloride or ordinary table salt; and (2) included (a) "Mother Nature Soap Lake Salts" consisting of the unadulterated residue of the natural lake water after evaporation, (b) "Mother Nature Soap Lake Spirit" consisting of the liquid concentrate bottled before evaporation was complete, and (c) "Mother Nature Soap Lake Seltzer," consisting of 60 percent "Salts" and 40 percent citric and tartaric acid salts, added for effervescense and palatability;

In advertising its said packaged mineral salts through booklets, folders, pamphlets, and other advertising literature distributed to members of the purchasing public in the various States and furnished to customers for distribution to members of said public, and through newspapers and magazines of general interstate circulation, and radio broadcasts, in all of which it featured its corporate name—

Falsely represented, directly or by implication, that said various products would prevent and cure and were beneficial in the treatment of many of the diseases, ailments, and conditions of the body, including rheumatism, arthritis, neuritis, eczema, athlete's foot, ulcers of the stomach, poison oak and ivy, gangrene, body and scalp sores, Buerger's disease, hyperacidity, lumbago, trench mouth, and pyorrhea;

Facts being the therapeutic benefits, if any, obtained from use of said products, were limited to those resulting from the laxative diuretic, and cleansing properties of their ingredients and the products did not accomplish the results claimed in the diseases and conditions set forth;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations were true, and with result, as direct consequence of such beliefs, that a number of the consuming public purchased a substantial volume of said products and trade in commerce was unfairly diverted to it from its competitors, many of whom truthfully represent the effectiveness of their respective products, to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Soap Lake Products Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Soap Lake Products Corporation, is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Washington, with its principal office and place of business located at 2013 Fourth Avenue, in the city of Seattle, State of Washington. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, engaged in the business of preparing, distributing, and selling, in commerce as herein set out, certain packaged mineral salts designated as "Mother Nature Soap Lake Salts" and packaged kindred products designated as "Mother Nature Soap Lake Seltzer" and "Mother Nature Soap Lake Spirit," obtained from Soap Lake located in the State of Washington.

PAR. 2. Said respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes said salts and kindred products, when sold, to be transported from its office and place of business in the State of Washington to purchasers thereof located at various points in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been at all times since the organization of respondent corporation, a constant current of trade and commerce in said products so prepared, distributed, and sold by the respondent, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, the respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with firms and individuals likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling mineral salts or other products designed, intended, and sold for the same purposes for which respondent's products are sold, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course of the operation of said business, and for the purpose of inducing individuals, firms, and corporations to purchase said salts and kindred products, respondent has caused advertisements to be inserted in newspapers, periodicals, and trade journals of general circulation throughout the United States, has printed and circulated throughout the several States to customers and prospective customers, through the United States mails and otherwise, advertising folders, letters and literature, and has made use of radio broadcasts over stations of sufficient power to convey the programs emanating therefrom into the various States of the United States; in all of which advertisements, respondent has caused its corporate name to be prominently and conspicuously displayed, together with the following statements:

* * * Ask almost anyone who has been there (Soap Lake) and who faithfully took the treatments for such ills as rheumatism, neuritis, arthritis, eczema, athlete's foot, ulcers of the stomach, poison oak or ivy, gangrene, infections, or body and scalp sores. In many cases you will be told stories of complete and prompt recovery so astonishing as to be almost unbelievable.

No longer need you journey far and expensively to prove the virtue of Soap Lake minerals. They are now easily and inexpensively available to you through your druggist under the name of Mother Nature Soap Lake Products—Mother Nature Soap Lake Salts for the bath; Mother Nature Soap Lake Seltzer—pleasantly effervescent—for internal use, and Mother Nature Soap Lake Spirit for external application—all natural products from Nature's own laboratory.

The answer to all such arguments are the thousands and thousands of cases of neuritis, arthritis, rheumatism, insomnia, Buerger's Disease, gangrene, infections, etc., that have been benefited by Soap Lake baths alone.

You will find that Mother Nature Soap Lake baths are a wonderful aid to Nature in correcting certain forms of eczema, itch, poison oak and ivy, athlete's foot and disorders resulting from hyperacidity.

For rheumatic swellings and congestion, sore muscles, lumbago, etc., poulticing is recommended.

ULCERS OF THE STOMACH. Soap Lake water has proven wonderfully beneficial in aiding Nature to correct this distressing trouble. No one should submit to an operation for ulcers without first having given Mother Nature Soap Lake Seltzer a trial.

ORAL HYGIENE: TRENCH MOUTH—PYORRHEA. * * * Wonderful aid to Nature in Pyorrhea and Trench Mouth.

All of said statements, together with many similar statements appearing in respondent's advertising literature purport to be descriptive of respondent's products and their effectiveness in treating or curing many of the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions of the human body. In all of its advertising literature, respondent represents, through the statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect, that its various packaged products to wit: Mother Nature Soap Lake Salts, Mother Nature Soap Lake Seltzer and Mother Nature Soap Lake Spirit, will prevent and cure, or are beneficial in the treatment of, many of the diseases, ailments, afflictions and conditions which may be present or exist in the human body.

Among the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions named by the respondent in said radio broadcasts and advertising literature as diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions which the use of said above-named products will prevent and cure, or are beneficial in the treatment of, are the following: rheumatism, neuritis, arthritis, eczema, athlete's foot, ulcers of the stomach, poison oak or ivy, gangrene, body or scalp sores, Buerger's Disease, hyperacidity, lumbago, trench mouth, and pyorrhea.

PAR. 5. The representations made by the respondent with respect to the nature and effect of its products when used are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the use of respondent's packaged products will not prevent and cure, nor is it beneficial in the treatment of all, or any of, the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions hereinabove named. The beneficial properties, if any, of said products are limited to laxative and diuretic action. Said packaged products have no therapeutic value in the treatment of the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions above named.

PAR. 6. There are among respondent's competitors many who manufacture, distribute, and sell various products designed, intended and sold for the purpose of curing, relieving, or treating the various diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions of the human body hereinabove named and who do not, in any way, misrepresent the quality or character of their respective products or their effectiveness when used.

PAR. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent in designating or describing its products and the effectiveness of said products for curing, treating or relieving the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions of the human body herein named, in offering for sale and selling its said products was, and is, calculated to, and had, and now has, a tendency and capacity to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true and that said products will, in truth, accomplish the results claimed. Further, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs, induced by the acts and representations of the respondent, as hereinabove detailed, a number of the consuming public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling similar products or other products designed, intended and sold for use in the cure, relief, or treatment of the various diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions named herein, and who truthfully represent the effectiveness of their respective products. As a result thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondent have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors as aforesaid, and have been, and are, unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of section 5 of an act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 27th day of May 1936, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Soap Lake Products Corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of an answer thereto by the respondent, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by the attorney for the respondent, before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, the testimony and other evidence, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being fully advised in the premises, on April 10, 1939, made its findings as to the facts and its conclusions drawn therefrom, and isued its order requiring the respondent to cease and desist from the use of said unfair methods of competition.

Subsequently, the State of Washington, appearing as amicus curiae, filed a petition alleging that the findings of the Commission reflected adversely upon the therapeutic properties of the water of Soap Lake, Washington, and requesting that the proceeding be reopened for the taking of further testimony. Upon consideration of said petition, the Commission, on August 5, 1939, entered its order directing that the proceeding be reopened for the purpose of taking further testimony and other evidence in support of and in opposition to certain allegations of the complaint, the Commission thereby setting aside its original findings as to the facts and order to cease and desist. Pursuant to such order, supplemental hearings were held at which additional testimony and other evidence were introduced in support of and in opposition to said allegations of the complaint. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the complaint, answer, testimony and other evidence introduced in both the original and supplemental hearings, original briefs of counsel for the Commission and for the respondent, and supplemental brief of counsel for the Commission (no supplemental briefs having been filed by either the respondent or the State of Washington, and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Soap Lake Products Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Washington, with its office and principal place of business located at 2013 Fourth Avenue, in the city of Seattle, in said State. Respondent is now, and for more than 6 years last past has been, engaged in the business of preparing, selling, and distributing in commerce, certain packaged mineral salts designated as "Mother Nature Soap Lake Salts," "Mother Nature Soap Lake Seltzer," and "Mother Nature Soap Lake Spirit." The salt ingredients which go to make up these products are obtained by respondent from a body of water called "Soap Lake," which is situated in the State of Washington.

PAR. 2. Respondent causes its products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in Seattle, in the State of Washington, to purchasers thereof located at various points in other States of the United States. There is now and has been for more than 6 years last past a course of trade by the respondent in its products in commerce among and between various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. The respondent, in the course of the operation of its business, is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and firms also engaged in the business of preparing, selling, and distributing mineral salt products or other products intended and sold for the same purposes as those for which respondent's products are sold, in commerce among and between various States of the United States.

PAR. 4. In the course of the operation of its business and for the purpose of inducing individuals, firms, and corporations to purchase its said packaged mineral salts, the respondent has made use of booklets, folders, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, some of which it distributes to members of the purchasing public located in the various States of the United States, and some of which it furnishes to its customers to be by them placed in the hands of the members of the purchasing public. It has also made use of advertisements inserted in newspapers and magazines having a general circulation throughout the various States of the United States. It has also made use of radio broadcasts over stations of sufficient power to convey the programs emanating therefrom into the various States of the United States. In all of its said advertisements, respondent has caused its corporate name to be prominently and conspicuously displayed in connection with the trade names of its products, "Mother Nature Soap Lake Salts," "Mother Nature Soap Lake Seltzer," and "Mother Nature Soap Lake Spirit," together with the following statements:

ORAL HYGIENE: TRENCH MOUTH—PYORRHEA. * * * Wonderful aid to Nature in Pyorrhea and Trench Mouth * * * Hold in mouth in contact with sore places as long as possible. Wonderful results.

Through the use of said statements and other statements of similar import and meaning used in its radio broadcasts and advertising literature, respondent represents directly or by implication that "Mother Nature Soap Lake Salts," "Mother Nature Soap Lake Seltzer," and "Mother Nature Soap Lake Spirit," will prevent and cure, and are beneficial in the treatment of, many of the diseases, afflictions, ailments, and conditions which may be present or exist in the human body. Among the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions named by respondent in its radio broadcasts and advertising literature as diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions which the use of the said products will benefit, prevent and cure, are the following: Rheumatism, arthritis, neuritis, eczema, athlete's foot, ulcers of the stomach, poison oak and ivy, gangrene, body or scalp sores, Buerger's disease, hyperacidity, lumbago, trench mouth, and pyorrhea.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, the use of respondent's packaged mineral salts alone, either externally or internally, will not prevent or cure, and are not beneficial in the treatment of rheumatism, arthritis, neuritis, eczema, athlete's foot, ulcers of the stomach, poison oak and ivy, gangrene, body or scalp sores, Buerger's disease, hyperacidity, lumbago, trench mouth, pyorrhea, or any other disease, affliction, ailment, or condition which may be present or exist in the human body, as represented in respondent's radio broadcasts and other advertisements and advertising literature.

Respondent obtains its above-named products by evaporation of the waters of Soap Lake. Respondent's "Salts" are the unadulterated residue after evaporation is complete, and its "Spirit" is the liquid concentrate bottled before evaporation is complete. Its "Seltzer" is 60 percent "Salts" and 40 percent citric and tartaric acid salts, which are added solely for effervescence and palatability.

"Mother Nature Soap Lake Salts" contain:

Sodium Chloride	18.19%
Potassium Chloride	6.57%
Sodium Sulphate	21.38%
Sodium Carbonate	53.72%
Calcium Carbonate	.07%

Negligible traces of silica, phosphorus, iron, alumina, magnesium, iodine and lithium.

No merit is claimed for the calcium carbonate or for the negligible traces of silica, phosphorus, iron, alumina, magnesium, iodine, and lithium.

Sodium sulphate, or Glauber's salts, a well known purgative, accounts for a trifle more than one-fifth of the total solid content. Concentrated Glauber's salts give a laxative effect. The effect of the Glauber's salts in respondent's products, however, is so minimized by its combination with the other ingredients therein as to require increased dosage and the ingestion of a very large amount of water, in order to have the same effect as that given by a concentrated laxative requiring a much less amount of water. Physicians prefer to prescribe a laxative in concentrated form, in order that the patient be not required to drink more water than he would normally consume.

More than one-half of the content of the "Salts" is sodium carbonate, a caustic alkali known as washing soda. For the purpose of temporarily neutralizing acid in cases where ulcers or a condition of hyperacidity exists, an alkali is sometimes prescribed by physicians. One of the elements usually prescribed for temporarily overcoming hyperacidity is sodium bicarbonate which is less caustic and more readily decomposed by the hydrochloric acidity of the stomach than sodium carbonate. While the respondent's products, because of the sodium carbonate therein, do have an alkalizing effect, they are not a proper treatment for ulcers or hyperacidity because of their extremely caustic effect.

Of the total content, 24.76 percent is sodium chloride and potassium chloride. Potassium chloride is ordinary table salt. The medicinal properties of potassium chloride and sodium chloride are practically the same. The normal diet contains an adequate supply of salt and other chlorides for all purposes.

During the course of the supplemental hearings testimony was introduced by respondent to the effect that in addition to the ingredients listed above, respondent's preparations contain an ingredient designated as ichthammol homologue. The weight of the expert testimony shows, however, and the Commission finds, that this ingredient is not present in the preparations in sufficient quantity to have any effect upon the therapeutic value of the preparations.

In the treatment of neuritis, arthritis, or lumbago, which are types of rheumatism, and kidney trouble, the use of chlorides is restricted by physicians because an excess of chloride irritates and aggravates the pathological processes in the kidneys. The internal use of respondent's products by persons afflicted with any type of rheumatism causes additional aggravation and irritation of the kidneys. Frequently, the conditions prevalent when the patient is suffering from so-called rheumatism are associated with some degree of kidney involvement, and the use of respondent's products is distinctly harmful. When taken internally the respondent's products act as a mild and indefinite diuretic and laxative. There are many well known harmless laxatives, diuretics, and neutralizers of hyperacidity which do not aggravate the pathological processes of the organs of the patient. Many of these other preparations will react definitely as prescribed by physicians.

Bathing in hypertonic salt solutions will promote dehydration through the skin and thus eliminate to a certain extent toxic products circulating in the blood. This effect is increased when baths are taken hot. Hot baths with or without salts of this character are very useful in giving temporary relief to internal pains, especially those associated with the joints, arising from neuritis, arthritis, lumbago, rheumatism, gangrene, or Buerger's disease. The dehydrating effect of the hypertonic salt solution very probably results in the lessening of congestion in and about swollen joints or other afflicted parts and thus temporarily relieves pain. While respondent's products have a slight hypertonic effect, there are many other hypertonic salts which likewise furnish temporary relief when mixed with hot bath water.

Eczema and other similar diseases are generally considered of systemic origin and are manifested by skin lesions. When sodium carbonate is applied to this diseased skin, it acts as a counterirritant and temporarily relieves the itching and discomfort. Respondent's products, however, are not effective in curing or preventing these skin diseases.

Athlete's foot is a fungoid infection deeply embedded in the layers of the skin. While some of the ingredients of respondent's products might cleanse the diseased tissue, there are no antiseptic properties in respondent's product which will prevent or cure athlete's foot.

Poison oak and poison ivy are skin diseases which spread rapidly unless properly checked. The rapidity with which the infection is spread over the body is greatly accentuated by the use of liquid solutions. External applications of respondent's products are harmful to a person suffering from this affliction.

Body and scalp sores are commonly treated with medicines having astringent qualities. It is also necessary to keep the afflicted parts clean. Respondent's products have no astringent properties whatever. The beneficial effect following the use of these products on sores is limited to the cleansing properties thereof.

Trench mouth is caused by a germ which is not affected in any way by respondent's products. The only benefit which a person afflicted with trench mouth or pyorrhea could derive from respondent's products would be through their use as a mouth wash. When so used the effect would be similar to that of table salt.

Hot and cold baths are beneficial in temporarily relieving the pain incidental to Buerger's disease and gangrene. Gangrene is sometimes due to diabetes. In that event, respondent's products may be soothing when mixed with bath water. However, respondent's products, when administered in any form, are not competent treatments for gangrene or Buerger's disease.

The therapeutic benefits, if any, generally obtained from the use of any or all of respondent's products are limited to those resulting from the laxative, diuretic and cleansing properties of the various ingredients thereof. Additional expert testimony introduced at the instance of the Commission during the supplemental hearings corroborated the testimony taken during the original hearings with respect to the therapeutic properties of respondent's products.

PAR. 6. Testimony adduced at the instance of the State of Washington during the supplemental hearings shows that in 1938 the State established, and has since maintained, a hospital at Soap Lake for the study and treatment of Buerger's disease, the hospital being primarily for the benefit of American veterans of the World War. Up to the present time some 25 to 30 patients have received treatment at the hospital. The usual treatment includes rest in bed, cessation from smoking, and the use of the lake water as a bath and for soaking the feet. The testimony of the head of the institution is to the effect that while substantial progress appears to have been made in certain cases, it is too early to form any definite conclusions as to the effectiveness of the treatment or as to the therapeutic properties of Soap Lake water.

Neither the effectiveness of the hospital's method of treatment nor the therapeutic properties of the natural waters of Soap Lake is involved in this proceeding. The proceeding has to do only with the representations made by respondent with respect to its own packaged products.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations in its advertising circulars, pamphlets, radio continuities and other advertising media, in connection with the offering for sale and selling of its products in commerce, has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true. As a direct result of these erroneous and mistaken beliefs induced by the acts and representations of the respondent, as hereinabove enumerated, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products, with the result that trade in commerce has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its said competitors, many of whom truthfully represent the effectiveness of their respective products, to the injury of competition in commerce among and between the various states of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony and other evidence introduced in both the original and supplemental hearings before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint, original briefs of counsel for the Commission and for the respondent, and supplemental brief of counsel for the Commission (no supplemental brief having been filed by the respondent and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Soap Lake Products Corporation, a corporation, and its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of its packaged mineral salts now designated as "Mother Nature Soap Lake Salts," "Mother Nature Soap Lake Seltzer," and "Mother Nature Soap Lake Spirit," or any other products of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other names, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. That said mineral salt preparations will cure eczema or similar skin diseases of systemic origin, or have any beneficial effect in the treatment thereof other than temporarily relieving the itching and discomfort incidental to said diseases.

2. That said mineral salt preparations will cure athlete's foot or any body or scalp sores or have any beneficial value in the treatment thereof other than cleansing effect upon surface lesions.

3. That said mineral salt preparations will cure poison oak or poison ivy or have any beneficial value in the treatment thereof.

4. That said mineral salt preparations will cure pyorrhea or trench mouth or have any beneficial value in the treatment thereof other than as a cleansing agent.

5. That said mineral salt preparations will cure ulcers of the stomach or hyperacidity, or constitute a competent and proper treatment therefor, or have any beneficial value in the treatment thereof other than temporarily relieving the pain and discomfort incident thereto by temporarily neutralizing excess acid.

6. That said mineral salt preparations, when taken internally, will prevent or cure rheumatism, neuritis, arthritis, lumbago, gangrene, or Buerger's disease, or constitute a proper treatment therefor or have any beneficial value in the treatment thereof.

7. That said mineral salt preparations, when used externally, will prevent or cure rheumatism, neuritis, arthritis, lumbago, gangrene, or Buerger's disease, or have any beneficial effect in the treatment thereof other than temporarily relieving pain and congestion in the afflicted parts.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Roxie Thorson, trading as Thorson's Soap Lake Products Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Roxie Thorson, trading as Thorson's Soap Lake Products Co., has her place of business at Soap Lake, in the State of Washington. Respondent is now, and has been for some years, engaged in the business of preparing, distributing, and selling, in commerce as herein set out, certain packaged mineral salts designated as "Thorson's Soap Lake Salts," "Thorson's Effervescent Soap Lake Salts," and packaged kindred products designated as "Thorson's Soap Lake Liniment," "Thorson's Skin-Aid Soap Lake Ointment," "Thorson's Soap Lake Shampoo," and "Thorson's Skin-Aid Soap Lake Soap," obtained from Soap Lake, located in the State of Washington.

PAR. 2. Said respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes said salts and kindred products, when sold, to be transported from her place of business in the State of Washington to purchasers thereof located at various points in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for several years, a constant current of trade and commerce in said products so prepared, distributed, and sold by the respondent, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of her business, respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition with other individuals and with firms and corporations likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling mineral salts or other products designed, intended, and sold for the same purposes for which respondent's products are sold, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

All of said statements, together with many similar statements appearing in respondent's advertising literature, purport to be descriptive of respondent's products and their effectiveness in treating or curing many of the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions of the human body. In all of her advertising literature, respondent represents, through the statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect, that her various packaged products to wit: Thorson's Soap Lake Salts, Thorson's Effervescent Soap Lake Salts, Thorson's Soap Lake Liniment, Thorson's Skin-Aid Soap Lake Ointment, Thorson's Soap Lake Shampoo, and Thorson's Skin-Aid Soap Lake Soap, will prevent and cure, or are beneficial in the treatment of, many of the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions which may be present or exist in the human body.

Among the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions named by the respondent in said radio broadcasts and advertising literature as diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions which the use of said above-named packaged products will prevent and cure, or is beneficial in the treatment of, are the following:

Stomach, liver, bowel and kidney trouble, rheumatism, diabetes, catarrh, skin diseases, female trouble, diseases of the blood, psoriasis, pyorrhea and sore gums, gangrene, foot trouble, eye trouble, eczema, lumbago, dropsy, pleurisy, dyspepsia, ivy oak poison, sunburn, insect bites, chilblains, frostbite, cramps of muscles, scalds, wounds and sores, high blood pressure, auto-intoxication, nervous ailments, excess acidity, constipation, arthritis, neuritis, and Buerger's disease.

PAR. 5. The representations made by the respondent with respect to the nature and effect of her products when used are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the use of respondent's packaged products will not prevent and cure, nor are any of said products beneficial in the treatment of all, or any of, the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions hereinabove named. The benefits, if any, generally obtained from a use of any or all of said products are limited to those resulting from the laxative and diuretic properties and action of said products and the use of said products as either an external or an internal cleansing agent. Said packaged products have no therapeutic value in the treatment of the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions above named.

PAR. 6. There are among respondent's competitors many who manufacture, distribute, and sell various products designed, intended and sold for the purpose of curing, relieving, or treating some, or all, of the various diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions of the human body hereinabove named and who do not, in any way, misrepresent the quality or character of their respective products or their effectiveness when used.

PAR. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent in designating or describing her products and the effectiveness of said products for curing, treating, or relieving the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions of the human body herein named, in offering for sale and selling her said products were, and are, calculated to, and had, and now have, a tendency and capacity to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true and that said products will, in truth, accomplish the results claimed. Further, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs, induced by the acts and representations of the respondent, as hereinabove detailed, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling similar products or other products designed, intended, and sold for use in the cure, relief, or treatment of the various diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions named herein, and who truthfully represent the effectiveness of their respective products. As a result thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondent have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors as aforesaid, and have been, and are, unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of section 5 of an act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on June 3, 1936, issued, and on June 8, 1936, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Roxie Thorson, trading as Thorson's Soap Lake Products Co., charging her with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being fully advised in the premises, on January 16, 1939, made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom, and issued its order requiring the respondent to cease and desist from the use of said unfair methods of competition.

Subsequently, the State of Washington, appearing as amicus curiae, filed a petition alleging that the findings of the Commission reflected adversely upon the therapeutic properties of the water of Soap Lake, Wash., and requesting that the proceeding be reopened for the taking of testimony. Upon consideration of said petition, the Commission, on August 5, 1939, entered its order directing that the proceeding be reopened for the purpose of taking testimony and other evidence in support of and in opposition to certain allegations of the complaint, the Commission thereby setting aside its original findings as to the facts and order to cease and desist. Pursuant to such order, supplemental hearings were held at which testimony and other evidence were introduced in support of and in opposition to said allegations of the complaint. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the complaint, answer, testimony and other evidence, and brief of counsel for the Commission (no briefs having been filed by either the respondent or the State of Washington, and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Roxie Thorson, is an individual trading as Thorson's Soap Lake Products Co., with her principal office and place of business located at Soap Lake, in the State of Washington. Respondent is now, and for some years last past has been, engaged in the business of preparing, distributing, and selling in commerce, certain packaged mineral salts designated as "Thorson's Soap Lake Salts," "Thorson's Effervescent Soap Lake Salts," and kindred products designated as "Thorson's Soap Lake Liniment," "Thorson's Skin-Aid Soap Lake Ointment," "Thorson's Soap Lake Shampoo," and "Thorson's Skin-Aid Soap Lake Soap."

The salt ingredients that go to make up these products are obtained by respondent from a body of water called Soap Lake, which is a lake located in the State of Washington.

PAR. 2. Respondent causes her products, when sold, to be transported from her place of business at Soap Lake in the State of Washington to purchasers thereof located at various points in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by the respondent in her products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. The respondent, in the course of the operation of her business, is in competition with other individuals and with firms and corporations also engaged in the business of preparing, distributing and selling mineral salt products or other products prepared, intended and sold for the same purpose as those for which respondent's products are sold, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In order to induce customers and prospective customers to purchase her products, respondent causes to be printed and circulated throughout the various States of the United States certain advertising matter which consists for the most part of letters, pamphlets, and circulars. Respondent has also made use of the radio for the purpose of creating a demand for her products by broadcasting advertising statements concerning her products over radio stations which have sufficient power to reach audiences in other states.

In all of her advertising matter respondent has featured her trade name, Thorson's Soap Lake Products Co., together with the following statements and representations which purport to be descriptive of respondent's products, the names of which are set forth in full in paragraph 1 hereof, and the effectiveness of said products in treating and curing many of the diseases, ailments, afflictions, and conditions of the human body:

THORSON'S EFFERVESCENT SOAP LAKE SALTS—Relief for all Stomach Trouble.

By a special process of crystallization you can now make this wonderful product in your own home without losing any of the curative power of the water.

In all of her advertising literature respondent represents through statements and representations herein set out and through other statements of similar import and effect that her products will prevent or cure, or are beneficial in the treatment of the following diseases, ailments, and afflictions:

Stomach, liver, bowel and kidney troubles, rheumatism, diabetes, catarrh, skin diseases, female trouble, diseases of the blood, psoriasis, pyorrhea and sore gums, gangrene, foot trouble, eye trouble, eczema, lumbago, dropsy, pleurisy, dyspepsia, ivy and oak poison, sunburn, insect bites, chilblains, frostbite, cramps of muscles, scalds, wounds, and sores, high blood pressure, autointoxication, nervous ailments, excess acidity, constipation, arthritis, neuritis, and Buerger's disease.

PAR. 5. The Commission finds that the representations set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, which respondent makes with respect to the therapeutic value of her products when used, are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, respondent's products will not prevent or cure, nor do they constitute competent treatments for, all or any of the diseases, ailments, or afflictions set forth in paragraph 4 hereof. The therapeutic benefits, if any, generally obtained from the use of any or all of said products are limited to those resulting from the laxative, diuretic and cleansing properties of said products.

PAR. 6. Testimony adduced at the instance of the State of Washington during the supplemental hearings shows that in 1938 the State established, and has since maintained, a hospital at Soap Lake for the study and treatment of Buerger's disease, the hospital being primarily for the benefit of American veterans of the World War.

Up to the present time some twenty-five to thirty patients have received treatment at the hospital. The usual treatment includes rest in bed, cessation from smoking, and the use of the lake water as a bath and for soaking the feet. The testimony of the head of the institution is to the effect that while substantial progress appears to have been made in certain cases, it is too early to form any definite conclusions as to the effectiveness of the treatment or as to the therapeutic properties of Soap Lake water.

Neither the effectiveness of the hospital's method of treatment nor the therapeutic properties of the natural waters of Soap Lake is involved in this proceeding. The proceeding has to do only with the representations made by respondent with respect to her own packaged products.

PAR. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by respondent, as hereinabove set forth, in her advertising, letters, circulars, pamphlets, and over the radio and by other advertising media in offering for sale and selling her products, have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true.

As a direct result of these mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the acts and misrepresentations of respondent as hereinabove enumerated, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products, with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from her said competitors, many of whom truthfully represent the effectiveness of their respective products.

As a result thereof substantial injury has been done and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and stated that she waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and upon testimony and other evidence introduced in certain supplemental hearings before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint, and upon brief of counsel for the Commission (no brief having been filed by the respondent and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Roxie Thorson, individually and trading as Thorson's Soap Lake Products Company, or trading under any other name, and her representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of her packaged mineral salts now designated as "Thorson's Soap Lake Salts," "Thorson's Effervescent Soap Lake Salts," "Thorson's Soap Lake Liniment," "Thorson's Skin-Aid Soap Lake Ointment," "Thorson's Soap Lake Shampoo," and "Thorson's Skin-Aid Soap Lake Soap," or any other products of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other names, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

That said mineral salt preparations will prevent or cure, or that they constitute competent treatments for, stomach, liver, bowel or kidney disorders, rheumatism, diabetes, catarrh, skin diseases, female trouble, diseases of the blood, psoriasis, pyorrhea, sore gums, gangrene, foot trouble, eye trouble, eczema, lumbago, dropsy, pleurisy, dyspepsia, ivy or oak poisoning, sunburn, insect bites, chilblains, frostbite, cramps of muscles, scalds, wounds or sores, high blood pressure, autointoxication, nervous ailments, excess acidity, constipation, arthritis, neuritis, or Buerger's disease; or that said preparations possess any therapeutic value in excess of their laxative, diuretic, and cleansing properties.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon her of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which she has complied with this order.

WILLIAM CLARENCE OHLENDORF, TRADING AS W. C. OHLENDORF, CLARENCE OHLENDORF, C. OHLENDORF, AND DR. OHLENDORF

Docket 4079. Complaint, Apr. 3, 1940—Decision, Aug. 19, 1941

Where practicing physician, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of his "Dr. Ohlendorf's Tonic," which he compounded from a formula originated by his father, also a physician; by means of advertisements in periodicals of general circulation and circulars sent through the mails, directly or by implication—

Represented that his said preparation constituted a cure or remedy and a competent and effective treatment for kidney, bladder, and nervous disorders, rheumatism, neuritis, diabetes, and catarrh of the bladder and bowels, and that it would tone up the nerves and acted as a diuretic; the facts being ferric chloride, only active ingredient of the product in question, while having some value as an iron tonic and treatment in cases of anemia due to deficiency of iron in the blood, possesses no therapeutic value in treatment of ailments and disorders named, and is not capable of acting as a diuretic;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such advertisements were true, and to cause it, as a result of such belief, to purchase substantial quantities of his said product:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, trial examiner.

Mr. Joseph C. Fehr for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that William Clarence Ohlendorf, an individual trading under the names W. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as aforesaid, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning said product, by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation and also in circulars and other printed matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said product; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

PAR. 5. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by the attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by the respondent, appearing on his own behalf, before Arthur F. Thomas, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and such testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

Kidney, Bladder, Nerve Sufferers send * * * for Dr. Ohlendorf's Tonic. Helps Rheumatism, Backache, Frequency. Enriches Blood. Tones up Nerves. Diuretic to Kidneys.

PAR. 3. Through the use of these statements and representations, and of others similar thereto but which are not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents and has represented, directly, or by implication, that his preparation, Dr. Ohlendorf's Tonic, constitutes a cure or remedy and a competent and effective treatment for kidney, bladder, and nervous disorders, rheumatism, neuritis, diabetes, and catarrh of the bladder and bowels; that it will tone up the nerves; and that it acts as a diuretic.

PAR. 4. Respondent is a licensed and practicing physician. He compounds or manufactures his preparation himself, using a formula originated by his father, who is also a physician, although no longer active in the practice. Respondent has been selling the preparation since 1928. The formula of the preparation is as follows:

Tincture ferric chloride	2½ drams
Oil of wintergreen	3 minims
Water	q. s. to make 4 ounces

The directions for the use of the preparation are that one-half to one teaspoonful shall be taken in a glass of hot water after meals. A 4-ounce bottle of the preparation is supposed to contain 45 doses or a 15-day supply.

PAR. 5. The only active ingredient in respondent's preparation is the ferric chloride. The oil of wintergreen is added merely for the purpose of supplying flavor and color. To support his claim for the therapeutic value of his preparation, respondent relies principally upon a scientific work published about 1795, which stressed the importance of ferric chloride, or iron, to the human system and attributed to it unusual therapeutic value. Respondent insists also that he has many times in his own practice prescribed ferric chloride with favorable results. He insists that his preparation is of substantial value as a remedy or treatment for all of the ailments and conditions mentioned in his advertisements. His testimony is corroborated by the testimony of his father.

PAR. 6. The weight of expert testimony in the record shows, however, and the Commission finds, that ferric chloride does not possess the therapeutic value formerly attributed to it. It is still used as a tonic and in certain cases of anemia and it has astringent properties to a slight degree. The consensus of medical opinion is, and the Commission finds, that ferric chloride possesses no therapeutic value in the treatment of kidney or bladder disorders, rheumatism, neuritis, diabetes, or catarrh of the bladder or bowels. It is incapable of acting as a diuretic. While respondent's preparation possesses some therapeutic value as an iron tonic, and as a treatment in cases of anemia due to a deficiency of iron in the blood, it will not tone up the nerves, nor is it of any therapeutic benefit in the treatment of nervous disorders.

PAR. 7. The Commission therefore finds that the representations made by respondent with respect to the therapeutic value of his preparation, as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof, are misleading and deceptive and constitute false advertisements.

PAR. 8. The Commission further finds that the use by the respondent of such false advertisements has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such advertisements are true and that respondent's product possesses therapeutic properties and values which it does not in fact possess, and the tendency and capacity to cause such portion of the public, as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's product.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer or respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Arthur F. Thomas, trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and brief in support of the allegations of the complaint (no brief having been filed by respondent and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, William Clarence Ohlendorf, individually and trading as W. C. Ohlendorf, Clarence Ohlendorf, C. Ohlendorf, and Dr. Ohlendorf, or trading under any other name, and his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in conection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of his medicinal preparation designated "Dr. Ohlendorf's Tonic" or any preparation of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference.

(a) That said preparation constitutes a cure or remedy for, or that it possesses any therapeutic value in the treatment of, kidney disorders, bladder disorders, rheumatism, neuritis, diabetes, or catarrh of the bladder or bowels.

(b) That said preparation possesses any therapeutic value as a diuretic.

(c) That said preparation will tone up the nerves, or that it has any therapeutic value in the treatment of nervous disorders.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

CINCHONA PRODUCTS INSTITUTE, INC.

Docket 4398. Complaint, Dec. 3, 1940—Decision, Aug. 19, 1941

Where a corporation, wholly owned subsidiary of two Dutch concerns, controlled by and affiliated with a foreign unknown corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution to United States of quinine, and itself engaged in business of disseminating advertisements to promote domestic sale of such quinine, sold by said foreign corporation to domestic purchasers in substantial competition with others engaged in interstate sale and distribution of medicinal preparations other than drug quinine for use in the treatment of malaria;

In pamphlets, circulars, and other advertising literature disseminated in commerce for the purpose of inducing the purchase of and increasing the demand for and use of quinine in the United States, directly or by implication—

Represented that quinine constitutes a certain cure or remedy for malaria which is in all cases safe for use and is the only treatment for said ailment which is inexpensive and dependable, through such statements, among others, as "QUININE is the only cheap, safe, and certain remedy," and "the only dependable treatment for malaria is quinine";

The facts being that while quinine possesses therapeutic value in the treatment of malaria, it is not effective in all cases nor safe in all cases as it may sometimes cause toxic conditions manifested by skin rashes, ringing in the ears and dizziness; the use of quinine in excessive doses by women in the later stage of pregnancy may precipitate miscarriage; and it is not the only treatment for malaria which is inexpensive and dependable, there being other drugs and medicinal preparations which constitute dependable treatments for malaria and which are also inexpensive;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that such representations were true, with consequence that such public was induced to and did purchase substantial quantities of quinine, sale thereof to purchasers thereof in the United States by such foreign corporation was increased, and trade was thereby diverted unfairly to purchasers in the United States who buy said drug from such unknown corporation, affiliated, as aforesaid, with the two corporate owners of advertising concern here involved:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Maurice C. Pearce for the Commission.

Mr. Eugene R. Pickrell, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal

Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Cinchona Products Institute, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Cinchona Products Institute, Inc., is a corporation chartered, organized, and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 10 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N. Y. Respondent is a wholly owned subsidiary, and American agent and representative, of the Cinchona Institute of Amsterdam, Holland, a foreign corporation engaged in the sale and distribution in the United States of America and elsewhere of a drug known as quinine.

PAR. 2. Respondent, as the agent of said Cinchona Institute of Amsterdam, Holland, and in furtherance of the business of its said principal, is now and for more than 2 years last past has been engaged in the business of disseminating advertisements, as hereinafter set forth, with respect to its principal's product, which product is intended and recommended by respondent and by said Cinchona Institute of Amsterdam, Holland, for use in the treatment of malaria.

The said Cinchona Institute of Amsterdam, Holland, causes its said product, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the country of Holland to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States of America. Said Cinchona Institute of Amsterdam, Holland, maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in its said product in commerce between the country of Holland and various States of the United States of America.

PAR. 3. Said Cinchona Institute of Amsterdam, Holland, is now and at all times mentioned herein has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals and firms engaged in the sale and distribution, in commerce between the United States and other countries and between and among various States of the United States, of drugs and medicinal preparations intended for use in the treatment of the same ailment or condition of the human body as that for which the product of said Cinchona Institute of Amsterdam, Holland, is intended.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business, the respondent, Cinchona Products Institute, Inc., acting for and on behalf of its principal, as aforesaid, has disseminated and is now disseminating and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning said product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals and by pamphlets, circulars, and other advertising literature, are the following:

QUININE is the only cheap, safe and certain remedy.
* * * the only dependable treatment for malaria is quinine * * *.

PAR. 5. Through the use of the foregoing representations and others of similar import not specifically set out herein the respondent represents, directly or by implication, that said drug quinine constitutes a certain cure or remedy for malaria; that it is in all cases safe for use; that it is the only treatment for malaria which is inexpensive and dependable.

PAR. 6. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading. While the drug quinine possesses therapeutic value in the treatment of malaria, it is not effective in all cases. Said drug is not in all cases safe for use, as it may cause in some cases toxic conditions manifested by skin rashes, ringing in the ears, and dizziness. The use of quinine by women in the latter stages of pregnancy may precipitate miscarriage. Quinine is not the only treatment for malaria which is inexpensive and dependable, there being other drugs and medicinal preparations which constitute dependable treatments for malaria and which are inexpensive.

PAR. 7. The respondent further represents, through the use of the word "Institute" in its corporate name and by other representations disseminated in the manner herein set forth, that it is a nonprofit organization whose purpose is the promotion of learning and research. In truth and in fact, respondent is not such an organization, but is a commercial enterprise whose sole purpose is the promotion of the sale of its principal's product.

PAR. 8. There are among the competitors of said Cinchona Institute of Amsterdam, Holland, those who do not misrepresent their business status or the therapeutic value of their products.

PAR. 9. The use by the respondent of said false, deceptive, and misleading representations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false representations are true. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief, engendered as herein set forth, the purchasing public has been induced to purchase, and has purchased, substantial quantities of the product of respondent's principal, said Cinchona Institute of Amsterdam, Holland. Thereby trade has been diverted unfairly to said Cinchona Institute of Amsterdam, Holland, from its competitors, and in consequence thereof substantial injury has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between the United States and foreign countries and between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 10. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of the competitors of respondent's said principal, Cinchona Institute of Amsterdam, Holland, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 3rd day of December 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the said respondent, Cinchona Products Institute, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On December 21, 1940, the respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by Eugene R. Pickrell, attorney for respondent, and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon (subject to an unexercised reservation with respect to the filing of briefs and oral argument) and, further, that the filing of a report upon the evidence by the trial examiner was expressly waived. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed; and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Cinchona Products Institute, Inc., is a corporation chartered, organized, and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 10 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N. Y. Respondent is a wholly owned subsidiary of Naamlooze Vermootschap Serband Veem, Amsterdam, The Netherlands, and Naamlooze Vermottschap Combinatie Voochemische Industrie, Amsterdam, The Netherlands. These two Dutch concerns are controlled by and affiliated with a foreign unknown corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution to the United States of a drug known as quinine.

PAR. 2. Respondent, owned by the two Dutch concerns controlled by and affiliated with a foreign unknown corporation, as above stated, has been engaged in the business of disseminating advertisements as hereinafter set forth, designed to promote the sale and distribution in the United States of a drug known as quinine, which is intended and recommended by respondent for use in the treatment of malaria.

PAR. 3. The drug quinine advertised by the respondent and produced by the unknown affiliated foreign corporation is now, and at all times mentioned herein has been, sold by the said unknown affiliated foreign corporation to purchasers located in the United States of America, which purchasers are in substantial competition with other corporations, and with individuals and firms engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States of medicinal preparations other than quinine for use in the treatment of malaria.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of and increasing the demand for and use of quinine in the United States, respondent, by means of pamphlets, circulars, and other advertising literature disseminated in commerce among and between the various States of the United States to prospective purchasers, has made representations concerning the efficacy of the drug quinine as the only cheap, safe, and certain cure or remedy and the only dependable treatment for malaria. Among and typical of representations made by respondent are the following:

QUININE is the only cheap, safe and certain remedy.

* * * the only dependable treatment for malaria is quinine * * *

PAR. 5. Through the use of the foregoing representations and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents, directly or by implication, that said drug, quinine, constitutes a certain cure or remedy for malaria; that it is in all cases safe for use; that it is the only treatment for malaria which is inexpensive and dependable.

PAR. 6. The foregoing representations are not true. While the drug, quinine, possesses therapeutic value in the treatment of malaria, it is not effective in all cases. Said drug is not in all cases safe for use as it may cause in some cases toxic conditions manifested by skin rashes, ringing in the ears and dizziness. The use of quinine in excessive doses by women in the latter stages of pregnancy may precipitate miscarriage. Quinine is not the only treatment for malaria which is inexpensive and dependable, there being other drugs and medicinal preparations which constitute dependable treatments for malaria and which are also inexpensive.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the misleading representations disseminated as aforesaid has had the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations were true. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief, engendered as herein set forth, the purchasing public has been induced to purchase, and has purchased, substantial quantities of the drug quinine. Consequently, the sale to purchasers in the United States of the drug quinine by the said foreign unknown corporation has been increased. Thereby trade has been diverted unfairly to certain corporations, individuals, and firms in the United States who purchase said drug quinine from said foreign unknown corporation which is affiliated with the two corporations which, in turn, own the respondent herein.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between Eugene R. Pickrell, attorney for respondent herein, and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent Cinchona Products Institute, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, do forthwith cease and desist from, directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference, that the drug quinine, or any product of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, constitutes a certain cure or remedy for malaria, that it is in all cases safe for use, or that it is the only treatment for malaria which is inexpensive and dependable.

2. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said product in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That said respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That paragraph 7 of the complaint be, and the same hereby is, dismissed.

IN THE MATTER OF

THE GERRARD COMPANY, INC., AND AMERICAN STEEL & WIRE COMPANY

Docket 3498. Complaint, July 19, 1938—Decision, Aug. 20, 1941

DEALING ON EXCLUSIVE AND TYING BASIS—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 3—FIELDS OF COMPETITION—IF MODERN AND SPECIALIZED SERVICE FRACTIONAL PART ONLY OF OLDER GENERAL FIELD—WHETHER SUBSTANTIAL COMPETITIVE EFFECT POSSIBLE.

As respects a contention that metal tying machines constitute such a small part of the entire tying field that the practice of the leading tying machine concerns can have no substantial effect upon competition in that field, it is to be noted that most of the devices and methods used for tying purposes—such as rope, twine, gummed tape, etc., tools for metal reinforcing such as pliers, nippers, twisting bars, and hammer and nails, and including also prefabricated containers which either do not need reinforcing or are reinforced in the process of manufacture—are of a more or less primitive or outmoded nature and, in many instances, are being supplanted by modern tying machines, such as those made by the instant concern and others. The very existence of the tying machine industry, in fact, depends upon its ability to convince shippers that the tying machine is an improvement over such other methods. That it has been able to make substantial inroads into the tying field and to supplant the more primitive methods in many instances, is attested by its steady and rapid growth.

DEALING ON EXCLUSIVE AND TYING BASIS—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 3—WHETHER "LINE OF COMMERCE"—TYING MACHINES.

The tying machine industry constitutes a field distinct from the general tying field, and is a line of commerce within the meaning of the Clayton Act.

DEALING ON EXCLUSIVE AND TYING BASIS—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 3—RESTRICTIVE CONDITIONS—IF PRACTICAL EFFECT TO PRECLUDE. LESSEES' USE OF SUPPLIES, ETC., OF LESSOR'S COMPETITOR.

While the form of a lease contract used by lessor company in leasing its metal tying machines, providing that no wire other than that supplied by the company should be used in the operation of the machine and that, in the event of a breach of said condition, lessee's right to possess or use a machine should terminate forthwith, did not expressly provide that lessees of its machines and appliances should not use the wire of its competitiors, the practical effect of said condition was to preclude such lessees from using competitors' wire.

DEALING ON EXCLUSIVE AND TYING BASIS—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 3—LEASE OF MACHINES PERFORMING MODERN SPECIALIZED SERVICE IN OLDER GENERAL FIELD ON CONDITIONS PRECLUDING USE OF COMPETITORS' SUPPLIES.

Where a manufacturer of wire tying machines or appliances, doing approximately 40 percent of the business in the United States in flat band or strap machines and constituting 1 of the 3 leading companies in the industry which together, out of some 10 or 15 in the United States, controlled about three-fourths of the business of furnishing tying machines; engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of steel tying wire which it purchased from various sources but mainly from its parent company, manufacturer thereof, leasing its machines only, without profit and frequently at a net loss, as did the aforesaid other two leading companies, and having as its sole purpose the sale of steel strapping or wire used in the machines' operation, gross receipts from which sales were in excess of 30 times its receipts from the leasing of the machines—

Leased its said machines upon the condition that no wire other than that supplied by it should be used therewith, and that in the event of a breach of said condition the right of the lessee to possess or use the machine should terminate forthwith and the company should have the right to repossess it and to enter upon the premises of the lessee for that purpose, and thereby excluded from the market numerous parties who, in the absence of such restriction, would be potential purchasers of tying wire from its competitors, and restricted and contracted competition in the tying wire market in direct proportion to the extent to which it was successful in leasing its machines under such restrictive agreements;

Effect of which practice, materially increased as a part of the cumulative effect upon competition of the practices of said three leading companies, might be to substantially lessen competition in line of commerce aforesaid:

Held, That, through use of acts and practices described, said corporation and its parent company violated Section 3 of the Clayton Act.

Before Mr. Charles F. Diggs, trial examiner.

Mr. George W. Williams for the Commission.

Knapp, Allen & Cushing, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that The Gerrard Co., Inc., a corporation, and the American Steel and Wire Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated, and are now violating, the provisions of section 3 of the act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, and commonly known as the Clayton Act, hereby issues this its complaint against said respondents and states its charges with respect thereto as follows, to wit:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, The Gerrard Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, having its principal office and place of business at 2915 West Forty-seventh Street, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, and branch offices and places of business located in

New York, State of New York, Pittsburgh, State of Pennsylvania, New Orleans, State of Louisiana, Los Angeles and San Francisco, State of California, Portland, State of Oregon, and Seattle, State of Washington. It is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing wire-tying machines and equipment, the leasing and licensing thereof, the servicing of the same, and the selling and supplying of steel tying-wire used in the operation thereof, said machine and wire being used by lessees, licensees, or vendees in the tying or binding of boxes, packages, and bundles. In connection with the making of such leases and license agreements, the respondent, the Gerrard Co., Inc., has caused, and still causes, said machines and equipment when leased, or licensed, and the said wire when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business or its branch plants located in Brooklyn, N. Y., McKee's Rocks, Pa., Chicago, Ill., or New Orleans, La., through and into other States of the United States and the District of Columbia, to the aforesaid lessees, licensees, and vendees, and there is now, and has been for more than 3 years last past, a constant current of trade and commerce in said products between and among the various States of the United States, the Territories thereof, and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of its said business, said respondent has been, for more than 3 years last past, and now is, in competition with other firms, partnerships, and corporations, and with individuals, engaged in the leasing and licensing of wire-tying machinery and equipment, and in the selling of wire used in the operation thereof, as aforesaid, in commerce between and among the States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Said respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, the largest manufacturer and distributor of wire-tying machines and equipment and tying-wire used in connection therewith in the United States, and now occupies a dominant position in said industry, and is one of the largest in the whole tying-machine and tying-wire business in the United States.

PAR. 2. Respondent, American Steel and Wire Co. is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its office and principal place of business in the Rockefeller Building, Cleveland, Ohio. It is now, and has been for many years last past, engaged, among other things, in the manufacturing and selling of steel tying wire used in the operation of the tying machines mentioned and referred to in paragraph 1 hereof.

PAR. 3. The respondent, The Gerrard Co., Inc., in the course and conduct of its said business, hereinbefore described in paragraph 1, has leased and licensed, and is now leasing and licensing, its said machines and equipment for use in the several States and territories of the United States, and in the District of Columbia, on the condition, agreement, or understanding that the lessees or licensees or other users thereof will not use the tying wire of any of the competitors of the respondent The Gerrard Co., Inc., and on the further condition, agreement, or understanding that if such lessees or licensees should use any tying wire in the operation of any of said machines and equipment other than that purchased from or supplied by the said respondent The Gerrard Co., Inc., the right to the use and possession of such machines and equipment shall forthwith terminate and said machines and equipment may be thereafter immediately repossessed by said respondent, and at once removed from the premises of such lessees or licensees.

PAR. 4. The effect of said leases or licenses, on the said condition, agreement, or understanding set forth in paragraph 3 hereof may be to substantially lessen competition in commerce in the leasing of tying machines and the sale of the tying wire hereinbefore described, between respondents and said competitors or tend to create a monopoly in respondents in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, in said products.

PAR. 5. Respondents, The Gerrard Co., Inc., is, and since September 1936 has been, through the ownership of both its stock and assets, wholly owned by the respondent American Steel and Wire Co., as aforesaid, and through such ownership the said American Steel and Wire Co. has complete and entire power and control over the business and various practices and business methods of the respondent The Gerrard Co., Inc., which said practices and methods of leasing or licensing its said wire-tying machines, as in this complaint set forth, are known to respondent American Steel and Wire Co., or, by the exercise of reasonable care and diligence, could and therefore should be well known to it, and therefore, said respondent American Steel and Wire Co. is jointly responsible with said respondent The Gerrard Co., Inc., for the existence and continued existence of all of said acts, practices and methods so employed and engaged in by the said respondent The Gerrard Co. Inc.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts, practices, and methods of respondent constitute a violation of the provisions of section 3 of the hereinabove mentioned act of Congress entitled, "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of that certain act of the Congress of the United States entitled, "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, commonly known as the Clayton Act, the Federal Trade Commission on July 19, 1938, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, The Gerrard Co., Inc., a corporation, and American Steel & Wire Co., a corporation, charging them with the violation of the provisions of section 3 of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by George W. Williams, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Knapp, Allen and Cushing, attorneys for the respondents, before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and the testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Also, stipulations as to certain of the facts involved in the proceeding were entered into between the attorney for the Commission and the attorneys for the respondents, which stipulations were duly recorded in the record of the proceeding. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answers thereto, testimony and other evidence, stipulations as to certain of the facts, report of the trial examiners upon the evidence and the exceptions thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral argument before the Commission; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, The Gerrard Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business located at 2915 West Forty-seventh Street, in the city of Chicago, Ill. Said respondent also maintains branch offices and places of business in New York, N. Y.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; New Orleans, La.; Los Angeles. Calif.; San Francisco, Calif.; Portland, Oreg.; and Seattle, Wash.

Said respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of wire-tying machines or appliances and in the leasing of such machines, and in the sale and distribution of steel tying wire to be used in the operation of such machines.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business said respondent causes, and for many years last past has caused, its said machines, when leased, and its said wire, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in Chicago, Ill., or from its branch plants located in New York, N. Y; McKee's Rocks, Pa.; and New Orleans, La., to the parties leasing such machines and purchasing such wire, such parties being located in various States of the United States other than the States in which said shipments originate, and in the District of Columbia. Said respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. There are in the United States other corporations, and individuals, firms, and partnerships, who have been and are engaged in the sale, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of steel tying wire suitable for use in and with said respondent's machines and appliances. But for the restrictive conditions in said respondent's lease contracts, as hereinafter set forth, said respondent would have been and would now be in active and substantial competition with such corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships in the sale of steel wire to the lessees of said respondent's machines and appliances.

PAR. 4. Respondent, The Gerrard Co., Inc. (hereinafter referred to as the Gerrard Co.), was organized in 1927, succeeding to the business theretofore operated by one A. J. Gerrard as an individual. The company has always manufactured the machines leased by it, but has never manufactured the wire sold by it for use in the machines. It purchases the wire from various sources and then resells it to the users of its machines. During the first 2 or 3 years of its business operations the company sold its machines outright, but about 1930 it discontinued the policy of selling the machines and adopted the policy of leasing them exclusively.

The form of lease contract used by the company provides, among other things, that no wire other than that supplied by the company shall be used in the operation of the machine. The contract further provides that in the event of a breach of this condition the right of the lessee to possess or use the machine shall terminate forthwith, and the company shall have the right to repossess the machine and to enter upon the premises of the lessee for that purpose.

The pertinent provisions of the contract are in the following language:

The Gerrard Company, Inc., offers to furnish you for the binding, bundling and stowage work in your plant at (location), its Wire Tying Service which comprises, supplying such machines and auxiliary equipment as may be needed and the special tying wire to be used in that operation; maintaining the machines and equipment in operating condition including complete replacement when necessary; and furnishing the advice and counsel of its staff in the installation and use of the Gerrard Method of Wire Tying.

Promptly upon receipt of written request therefor, you will pay the service fee specified in the annexed "Terms and Conditions" hereof for each item of equipment delivered to you.

The machines and equipment supplied to you by this Company shall be used only with the special tying wire to be supplied by this Company for that purpose at the schedule of prices specified in the "Terms and Conditions" hereof above referred to and shall be used only for the binding, bundling and stowage work at your plant or plants above named. * * *

You will have the privilege of returning at any time and without notice, transportation charges prepaid to Chicago, Illinois, any machine or item of equipment furnished you by this Company. The return of all machines and equipment in your hands will effect a cancellation of this agreement. This Company will promptly refund to you the full amount of the service fee paid by you on any machine or item of equipment which may be returned within one month after date of original shipment.

All machines and equipment, and all parts therefor and replacements thereof, supplied by this Company shall remain the exclusive property of this Company, and shall be subject at all times to all the terms and provisions hereof, including the right of this Company to retake and remove the same from your possession upon any default on your part.

* * * your right to possess and/or use said machines and equipment shall terminate forthwith, as to each and every such machine and item of equipment, upon your failure to pay any sums owing to this Company promptly when due, or in the event tying wire other than that supplied by this Company is used in the operation of any of the machines or equipment supplied to you hereunder, and this Company reserves the right, at any time after the happening of either such event, to repossess itself of any and all such machines and equipment as may then be in your possession, and shall have the right to enter upon your said premises for that purpose.

Unless your license and right to the machines and equipment supplied to you by this Company is earlier terminated, for one or more of the reasons hereinabove specified, you may continue to use the same as long as you desire so to do, during all of which time the obligations of this Company, with respect to maintenance, repair and replacement of said machines and equipment, and the supplying of wire therefor and the furnishing of advice and counsel, as herein provided, shall continue in full force and effect.

No alterations in, or attachments to, any such machines and equipment are to be made by you without the consent, in writing, of an officer of this Company.

PAR. 5. Respondent American Steel & Wire Co. is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its office and principal place of business located in the Rockefeller Building, Cleveland, Ohio. Said respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture and sale of steel tying wire and strips and bands used in the operation of tying machines.

In 1936 the Gerrard Co. became involved in financial difficulties, and as a result of the adjustment of such difficulties the American Steel & Wire Co. became in effect the owner of the Gerrard Co., acquiring some 98 or 99 percent of the capital stock of the Gerrard Co. The American Steel & Wire Co. was familiar with the form of contract used by the Gerrard Co. in leasing its machines and was also familiar with the general policies and practices of the company. No change, however, was made with respect to the lease contract nor with respect to any of the general policies or practices of the Gerrard Co., nor was any change made in the management of the company, the same officers being retained.

The Gerrard Co. purchases the major portion of its wire from the American Steel & Wire Co. For example, between January 1, 1937, and October 31, 1937, the total purchases of wire by the Gerrard Co. from all sources amounted to $763,021.82, and of this total, the purchases from the American Steel & Wire Co. amounted to $417,789.04.

PAR. 6. Tying machines are divided into two general classes, those which use flat strips or bands of steel, commonly called steel strapping, and those which use wire. The general purpose of the machines is the reinforcement of boxes, bales, bundles, packages, etc., so that such containers and their contents may be transported or stored more efficiently and with greater safety and satisfaction. Essentially, the machines perform two operations: first, the tightening or tensioning of the wire or strapping around the bundle, and second, the tying or fastening of the wire or strapping.

PAR. 7. Tying machines were first used in the United States about 25 years ago. Since that time the development of the industry has been fairly steady and rapid. There are now approximately 100,000 tying machines in use in the United States, of which about 80,000 are flat band or strap machines and about 20,000 are wire machines. The gross volume of business done by the industry, including both machines and supplies (wire and strapping), is approximately $9,000,000 per year.

PAR. 8. At the present time there are some 10 to 15 companies in the United States engaged in the furnishing of tying machines.

Approximately three-fourths of the business, however, is confined to 3 companies, these being the Acme Steel Co. (respondent in the Commission's proceeding under Docket No. 3818), the Signode Steel Strapping Co. (respondent in the Commission's proceeding under Docket No. 3688), and the Gerrard Co., respondent in the present case. The Acme and Signode companies each do approximately 30 percent of the total volume of business in the industry, while the Gerrard Co. does approximately 17 percent of the total volume.

The Acme Co. deals in flat band or strap machines exclusively. The Signode Co. deals in both strap and wire machines. The Gerrard Co. confines its business entirely to wire machines. In this field (wire machines) the Gerrard Co. does approximately 40 percent of the total volume of business.

Like the Gerrard Co., the Acme and Signode companies lease their machines and do not sell them outright. The lease agreements used by both of these companies contain conditions prohibiting the lessee from using in the machine any strapping or wire other than that supplied to the lessee by the company furnishing the machine.

PAR. 9. None of these three companies makes or undertakes to make any profit on the machines themselves. In fact, the supplying and servicing of the machines is frequently done at a net loss to the companies. The sole purpose of supplying the machines is to sell the steel strapping or wire used in their operation. Illustrative of this is the fact that the gross revenue received by the Gerrard Co. from the leasing of its machines during the period from June 1938 to June 1939, amounted to only about $40,000, whereas the gross revenue received by the company from the sale of wire for its machines during the same period amounted to approximately $1,460,000.

PAR. 10. There is testimony in the record from a number of users of tying machines, some of whom use the machine of the Gerrard Co. exclusively and some of whom use both the Gerrard machine and other machines. Several of these witnesses testified that they would prefer to buy the wire or strapping for their machines in the open market rather than be restricted to the purchase of wire or strapping from the respective companies furnishing the machines; that they had been approached by representatives of concerns selling tying wire, but that they had been unable to entertain offers from such concerns because of the restrictive conditions in their lease agreements.

Other witnesses testified that they thought it preferable to obtain both machine and wire from the same source so as to preclude any attempted division of responsibility in the event the results obtained from the use of the machine were unsatisfactory. According to these witnesses, when the wire is obtained from a source other than the company supplying the machine, there is a tendency on the part of the manufacturer of the machine to attribute any unsatisfactory results to the wire, and likewise there is a tendency on the part of the manufacturer or seller of the wire to place the blame on the machine.

Other users of tying machines were of the opinion that the matter of avoiding a division of responsibility was of little consequence. Some of these witnesses were using, along with machines leased under contracts containing restrictive conditions, other machines which had been purchased outright and which were free from any restrictions as to the purchase of wire. As to these latter machines these users were in fact buying their wire in the open market, although they were observing the terms of their contracts insofar as the leased machines were concerned.

Even those witnesses who attached importance to the matter of avoiding a division of responsibility, testified that in the absence of restrictive conditions in their lease contracts, they would consider offers from concerns other than those supplying the machines; that they would be inclined to purchase from such outside sources if they found the material to be satisfactory and if the prices quoted were low enough to offset the point as to avoiding a division of responsibility.

PAR. 11. There is testimony to the effect that the wire sold by the Gerrard Co. for use in its machines is manufactured according to specifications furnished by the company, and that the wire has certain characteristics as to tensile strength, ductility, finish, etc. It is, however, undisputed that there is in the market and available at all times an ample supply of tying wire suitable for use in the Gerrard Co.'s machines, and that such wire will produce satisfactory results when used in such machines in the usual and normal manner. In fact, such wire may be obtained from some of the mills supplying the Gerrard Co.

Much of this wire which is suitable for use in the Gerrard Co.'s machines is for sale by concerns which do not manufacture, sell, or lease tying machines. These concerns have attempted to sell such wire to users of the Gerrard Co.'s machines but have found themselves precluded because of the restrictive conditions in the company's lease contract.

PAR. 12. The Commission finds that the practice of the Gerrard Co. in requiring that the lessees of its machines use in such machines no wire other than that supplied by the company, results in the exclusion from the market of numerous parties who, in the absence of such restriction, would be prospective and potential purchasers of tying wire from the company's competitors. Competition in the tying wire market is restricted and contracted in direct proportion to the extent to which the Gerrard Co. is successful in leasing its machines under agreements containing such restrictive conditions.

PAR. 13. It is contended by the Gerrard Co. that metal-tying machines constitute such a small part of the entire tying field that the practice of the company and of the other leading tying machine concerns can have no substantial effect upon competition in that field. In support of this contention it is pointed out that there are many devices which can be and are used for tying purposes, such as rope, twine, gummed tape, etc., and that even where metal reinforcing is desired there are many tools and devices which are used in doing the work, such as pliers, nippers, twisting bars, and hammer and nails. It is further pointed out that many shippers use preformed or prefabricated boxes or containers which either do not need reinforcing or which are reinforced in the process of manufacture.

PAR. 14. Most of the devices and methods referred to, however, are of a more or less primitive or out-moded nature and in many cases are being supplanted by modern tying machines such as those manufactured by the Gerrard Co. and the other tying machine concerns. In fact, the very existence of the tying-machine industry depends upon its ability to convince shippers that the tying machine is an improvement over these other methods. That the industry has been able to make substantial inroads into the tying field and to supplant the more primitive methods in many instances is attested by the steady and rapid growth of the industry.

PAR. 15. The Commission is of the opinion from the evidence, and finds, that the tying machine industry constitutes a field distinct from the general tying field, and that it is a line of commerce within the meaning of the Clayton Act.

PAR. 16. While the restrictive condition in the Gerrard Co.'s contract does not expressly provide that the lessees of the company's machines and appliances shall not use the wire of the company's competitors, the practical effect of such condition is to preclude such lessees from using such wire. The Commission further finds that the effect of such restrictive condition, under the circumstances set forth herein, has been, is, and may be, to substantially lessen competition in the aforesaid line of commerce. Such effect is materially increased by reason of the fact that it forms a part of the cumulative effect of the practices of the three leading companies in the tying machine industry upon competition in said line of commerce.

CONCLUSION

Through the use of the acts and practices described herein the respondents have violated and are now violating section 3 of the act of the Congress of the United States entitled, "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," commonly known as the Clayton Act.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST [1]

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answers of respondents, stipulations as to certain of the facts, testimony and other evidence taken before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiners upon the evidence and the exceptions thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by George W. Williams, attorney for the Commission, and by Knapp, Allen and Cushing, attorneys for the respondents, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of that certain act of the Congress of the United States entitled, "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, commonly known as the Clayton Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, The Gerrard Co., Inc., a corporation, and American Steel & Wire Co., a corporation, and their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the leasing, sale, or making of any contract for the sale, of respondents' machines and appliances in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Clayton Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Leasing, selling, or making any contract for the sale of, respondents' machines or appliances on the condition, agreement or understanding that the lessee or purchaser thereof shall not use in or with such machines or appliances any wire other than that acquired from respondents, or from any other source designated by respondents.

2. Enforcing, or continuing in operation or effect, any condition, agreement, or understanding in or in connection with any existing lease or sale contract, which condition, agreement or understanding is to the effect that the lessee or purchaser of respondents' machines or appliances shall not use in or with such machines or appliances any wire other than that acquired from respondents.

It is further ordered, That said respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

SIGNODE STEEL STRAPPING COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND MODIFIED ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 3 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914

Docket 3688. Complaint, Jan. 16, 1939—Decision, Aug. 20, 1941

DEALING ON EXCLUSIVE AND TYING BASIS—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 3—FIELDS OF COMPETITION—IF MODERN AND SPECIALIZED SERVICE FRACTIONAL PART ONLY OF OLDER GENERAL FIELD—WHETHER SUBSTANTIAL COMPETITIVE EFFECT POSSIBLE.

As respects a contention that metal tying machines constitute such a small part of the entire tying field that the practice of the leading tying machine concerns can have no substantial effect upon competition in that field, it is to be noted that most of the devices and methods used for tying purposes—such as rope, twine, gummed tape, etc., tools for metal reinforcing such as pliers, nippers, twisting bars, and hammer and nails, and including also prefabricated containers which either do not need reinforcing or are reinforced in the process of manufacture—are of a more or less primitive or outmoded nature and, in many instances, are being supplanted by modern tying machines, such as those made by the instant concern and others. The very existence of the tying machine industry, in fact, depends upon its ability to convince shippers that the tying machine is an improvement over such other methods. That it has been able to make substantial inroads into the tying field and to supplant the more primitive methods in many instances, is attested by its steady and rapid growth.

DEALING ON EXCLUSIVE AND TYING BASIS—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 3—WHETHER "LINE OF COMMERCE"—TYING MACHINES.

The tying machine industry constitutes a field distinct from the general tying field, and is a line of commerce within the meaning of the Clayton Act.

DEALING ON EXCLUSIVE AND TYING BASIS—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 3—RESTRICTIVE CONDITIONS—IF PRACTICAL EFFECT TO PRECLUDE. LESSEES' USE OF SUPPLIES, ETC., OF LESSOR'S COMPETITOR.

While the form of a lease contract used by lessor company in leasing its metal tying machines, providing that no wire other than that supplied by the company should be used in the operation of the machine and that, in the event of a breach of said condition, lessee's right to possess or use a machine should terminate forthwith, did not expressly provide that lessees of its machines and appliances should not use the wire of its competitors, the practical effect of said condition was to preclude such lessees from using competitors' wire.

DEALING ON EXCLUSIVE AND TYING BASIS—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 3—LEASE OF MACHINES PERFORMING MODERN SPECIALIZED SERVICE IN OLDER GENERAL FIELD ON CONDITIONS PRECLUDING USE OF COMPETITORS' SUPPLIES.

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture and interstate purchase and sale of steel tying wire and strapping, and in the manufacture of five general classes of machines and appliances for use in stretching such wire or strapping and tying the ends to make shipping units, which, excepting only electric wire tying machines purchased by it for resale, it leased to lessees in other states, for revenues constituting only a fractional part of those received from the sale of wire and strapping, which constituted the primary purpose of the leasing; doing from twenty to thirty percent of the total business in the industry, and, along with 2 other companies out of some 12 in the United States, controlling from two-thirds to three-fourths of such business and, like said two, leasing its machines only—

Leased its said machines upon the condition that no wire other than that supplied by it should be used therewith, and thereby excluded from the market numerous parties who, in the absence of such restriction, would be potential purchasers of tying wire from its competitors, and restricted competition in the tying wire market in direct proportion to the extent to which it was successful in leasing its machines under such agreements;

With the result that the effect of such restrictive condition, under the circumstances set forth, materially increased as a part of the cumulative effect upon competition of the practices of said three leading companies, might be to substantially lessen competition in the line of commerce concerned:

Held, That such acts and practices constituted violations of section 3 of the Clayton Act.

Mr. George W. Williams for the Commission.

Davies, Richberg, Beebe, Busick & Richardson, of Washington, D. C., and Scott, MacLeish & Falk, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Signode Steel Strapping Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated, and is now violating the provisions of section 3 of the act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, and commonly known as the Clayton Act, hereby issues this its complaint against said respondent and states its charges with respect thereto as follows, to wit:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Signode Steel Strapping Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, having its principal office and place of business at 2600 Northwestern Avenue in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, and branch offices and places of business located in New York, State of New York; Boston, State of Massachusetts; Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania; Cleveland, State of Ohio; and San Francisco, State of California. It is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the business of processing and selling flat steel strapping used in the wrapping and bundling of boxes and packages, together with the manufacture, sale, leasing, servicing, and the licensing of the use of patented tools used in the stretching and fastening of said flat steel strapping. It is also now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the purchase, sale, leasing, and servicing of wire-tying machines and the selling and supply of steel tying wire used in the operation thereof, said machine and wire being used by the lessees or vendors in the tying and bundling of boxes and packages. In connection with the making of such leases, licenses, agreements, and sales the respondent has caused and still causes said tools and machines, when leased, licensed, or sold, and the flat steel strapping and the steel tying wire, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business or its branch plants located in New York, N. Y.; Boston, Mass.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Cleveland, Ohio; and San Francisco, Calif., through and into other states of the United States and the District of Columbia to the aforesaid lessees, licensees, and vendees, and there is now, and has been for more than 9 years last past, a course of trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, the Territories thereof, and in the District of Columbia.

There are in the United States, and have been during the time respondent has been in business, other corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals who have been and are engaged in the sale of steel strapping and wire in commerce among and between the several States, which strapping and wire are suitable for and may be used in and with respondent's machines and tools; and with whom, but for the restrictive condition of respondent's contracts of license and lease, as hereinafter set forth, respondent would have been and would now be in active, substantial competition in the sale of steel strapping and wire to the vendees, licensees, and lessees of respondent's machines and tools.

Said respondent is now and for more than 9 years last past has been one of the largest manufacturers and distributors, licensors, lessors, and servicers of steel strapping, fastening and stretching tools, and flat steel strapping used in connection therewith, and also one of the largest vendors and distributors, lessors, and servicers of wire-tying machines and the steel wire used in connection therewith and now occupies a dominant position in said industry.

PAR. 2. The respondent in the course and conduct of its said business hereinabove described in paragraph 1, has leased and licensed and is now leasing and licensing the use of its said steel strapping, fastening and stretching tools and the distributing and leasing of its said wire-tying machines and equipment for use in the several States and territories of the United States and the District of Columbia, on the condition, agreement or understanding that the lessees or licensees or other users thereof will not use the flat steel strapping or the steel tying wire of any of the competitors of respondent, and on the further condition, agreement or understanding that, if such lessees or licensees should use any steel strapping or tying wire in the operation of any of said tools, machines and equipment other than that purchased from or supplied by the said respondent, the right to the use and possession of such tools, machines, and equipment shall forthwith terminate and said tools, machines, and equipment may be thereafter immediately repossessed by said respondent, and at once removed from the premises of such lessees or licensees.

PAR. 3. The effect of said leases and licenses on the condition, agreement, or understanding set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, may be, has been, and is, to substantially lessen competition between respondent and said competitors, and to tend to create a monopoly in respondent, in the sale, to vendees, licensees, and lessees of respondent's machines and tools, of steel strapping and wire in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid acts, practices, and methods of respondent constitute a violation of the provisions of section 3 of the hereinabove mentioned act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of that certain act of the Congress of the United States entitled, "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, commonly known as the Clayton Act, the Federal Trade Commission on January 16, 1939, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Signode Steel Strapping Co., a corporation, charging it with the violation of the provisions of section 3 of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, a stipulation as to the facts was entered into between W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, and Davies, Richberg, Beebe, Busick and Richardson, and Scott MacLeish and Falk, attorneys for the respondent, which provided among other things, that the Commission might proceed upon such statement of facts and certain other matter referred to in the stipulation to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts (including inferences which it might draw from the facts stipulated), and its conclusion based thereon, the parties reserving, however, the right to file briefs and present oral argument. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, stipulation, briefs filed by the attorneys for the Commission and for the respondent, and oral argument before the Commission and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Signode Steel Strapping Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business located at 2600 North Western Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent also maintains branch offices and places of business located in New York, N. Y.; Boston, Mass.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Cleveland, Ohio; and San Francisco, Calif.

Respondent is now, and for a number of years last past has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling, and of buying and selling, steel wire and steel strapping suitable for use in making a package or shipping unit, and also in the business of manufacturing, selling, and leasing machines and appliances used in the stretching or tensioning of strapping or wire and in fastening or tying the ends of the strapping or wire to make a package or shipping unit.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business the respondent causes its machines and appliances, when sold or leased, and its steel strapping and wire, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the State of Illinois, or from its branch places of business in the States of New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and California, to the purchasers or lessees of such products located in various States of the United States other than the States in which such shipments originate, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. There are in the United States other corporations, and individuals, firms, and partnerships, who have been and are engaged in the sale, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of steel strapping and wire suitable for use in and with respondent's machines, appliances, and tools. But for the restrictive conditions in respondent's lease contracts, as hereinafter set forth, respondent would have been and would now be in active and substantial competition with such corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships in the sale of steel strapping and wire to the lessees of respondent's machines, appliances, and tools.

PAR. 4. Tying machines and appliances are divided into two general classes, those which use or are used with flat strips or bands of steel, commonly called steel strapping, and those which use or are used with steel wire. The general purpose of the machines and appliances, whether used separately or in combinations, is the tying or reinforcing of boxes, bales, bundles, etc., so that such containers and their contents may be transported or stored more efficiently and with greater safety and satisfaction. Essentially, the machines perform two operations: first, the tightening or tensioning of the wire or strapping around the bundle; and second, the tying or fastening of the wire or strapping.

PAR. 5. The machines and appliances manufactured by respondent fall into the following general classes: (1) appliances or tools known as sealing tools, which are hand tools designed on the principle of pliers and used to crimp or seal a fastener over the ends of the strapping; (2) tensioning appliances or tools which are hand tools used for tensioning strapping around a package or shipping unit; (3) combination appliances or tools which are used for tensioning the strapping, and also the crimping or sealing fasteners over the end of the strapping; (4) wire tying machines or appliances which are used for joining the ends of steel wire by twisting them together; (5) electric stretching machines for use in stretching steel strapping, which machines operate on the same principle as the hand tensioning tools, except that the tensioning is accomplished by electric mechanism instead of by hand operation.

These machines, appliances, and tools are manufactured by the respondent in different sizes for use with steel strapping and wire of different sizes and weights. Respondent purchases for resale electric wire tying machines, which both tension and fasten the wire around the package or shipping unit.

PAR. 6. Only the electric wire tying machines are sold or offered for sale by the respondent. All of the other machines, appliances or tools are leased by respondent and are not offered for sale. While some of the forms of lease agreements used by respondent refer to the equipment as having been "loaned," the Commission finds that the agreements are in fact leases within the meaning of section 3 of the Clayton Act. All of the agreements contain provisions prohibiting the use in or in connection with the equipment of any wire or strapping other than that supplied by respondent. The forms of the agreements are as follows:

(a) Sealing Tools, Tensioning Tools and Combination Tools for Strapping of certain smaller dimensions, and Wire-Tying Appliances.

Respondent leases its sealing tools, tensioning tools, and combination tools for use with strapping of certain smaller dimensions, and its wire tying appliances, upon the deposit of an amount with the respondent which is in no case larger than $25 per tool (except in the case of the combination tool, upon which the deposit is $37.50), which sum represents the total payment to respondent regardless of when the lease is terminated. The pertinent provisions of the lease agreement are in substance as follows:

That the loaned tools and machines are loaned to facilitate the customer's practice and use of the Signode system or of the Loop-the-Loop system of bundling or banding.

That the customer will not make such Signode joints or Loop-the-Loop joints by the use of the loaned tools except with steel strapping acquired from respondent.

That the customer will not transfer the tools and machines, or use them except in the customer's business.

That respondent shall repair the loaned tools, when returned for this purpose, free of charge during the two succeeding quarterly periods from the date of the loan, and thereafter at actual cost except in the case of misuse.

That the loan may be terminated at any time by either the customer or the respondent, and as a condition precedent to termination by the customer, the customer shall return the loaned tools.

That if the tools are returned in good condition, except for reasonable wear, the respondent will repay to the customer the amount deposited therefor less 10 percent for each quarterly period or fraction thereof between the date on which the tools were shipped and the date on which the tools were returned, until such time as the depreciated value shall be 20 percent of the tool loan deposit.

(b) Larger Sealing and Tensioning Tools, Combination Tools, and Electric Stretching Machines.

Respondent leases its larger sealing tools, tensioning tools, combination tools, and electric stretching machines under what is known as a "Yearly Maintenance and Service Agreement," the pertinent provisions of which are in substance as follows:

That respondent will loan as many Signode machines and/or tools as may be required, and respondent agrees to make such repairs, adjustments, or replacements as are necessary to maintain the same in good working order except in the case of misuse.

That in consideration of the loan the lessee agrees not to use the loaned machines or tools except with Signode bands purchased from the respondent at the respondent's quoted prices.

That for such tools and machines the customer agrees to pay an annual service charge ranging in amount from $5 to $50 which covers periods of time varying from 1 year to 4 years. That the customer is at liberty at any time to terminate the agreement by giving notice to respondent and returning the loaned equipment, transportation charges prepaid, and respondent may cancel the agreement should the customer fail to carry out any of the terms hereof.

That title to the machines and tools remains in the respondent, and if the agreement is terminated for any cause whatever, the customer will return all machines and tools without prejudice to any of the rights either party may have under the agreement.

That the customer will take reasonable care to avoid loss or destruction of all Signode machines and/or tools, and if in spite of such care any machine and/or tool should be lost or destroyed, the customer agrees to remit to the respondent three times the annual maintenance and service charges for such machine and/or tool, and if lost, will give a certificate of loss.

(c) Wiring Tying Machines.

Respondent leases its wire-tying machines especially adapted for the bundling of newspapers and other commodities and merchandise under several forms of contract.

One form is known as the "rental contract," the pertinent provisions of which are, in substance, as follows:

That the respondent will furnish its automatic wire-tying service, which comprises the use of its automatic wire-tying machines, its supplying for use with such machines round wire of suitable physical property, size, and finish; and the inspection and assistance of respondent's service men and advice of respondent's staff in applying automatic wire-tying service to the customer's work of tying bundles of newspapers.

That the respondent will install (number) Model (description) automatic wire-tying machines in the customer's plant, transportation charges to be paid by the customer from Riverside, Calif., to plant.

That the customer will pay for the wire-tying service (amount) per month for each machine so installed.

That the customer will use in the wire-tying machines only wire ordered and secured from the respondent, which will be invoiced at prices shown in an attached letter, changes in prices to correspond to changes in the wire market.

That the respondent will have the machines examined, tested, and adjusted from time to time, and at least once during each year, and at such times will replace such working parts as may be reasonably expected to cause interruption of continuous and efficient operation, and for such service respondent will make no charge for the time or traveling expenses of the mechanic, but the customer will pay standard prices for repair parts, and if special trips of the mechanic are necessary, the customer will pay transportation and hotel expenses.

That the customer will make no alteration in an installation, and install no attachments to such machines without respondent's written consent.

That at any time after 1 year from the date of the agreement the customer may cancel the contract by returning the machines, and otherwise, unless breached, the agreement remains in force for (number) years from the date of the agreement.

That respondent may cancel the contract should the customer use with the machines wire not supplied by respondent, or fail to pay monthly charges.

Prior to the summer of 1938 respondent used another form of contract, this particular contract being in connection with the purchase of a stated quantity of steel wire per year. This agreement provided, in substance, as follows:

That the respondent agrees to sell to the customer and to deliver to the customer in LCL lots from local stocks at its nearest warehouse, or to ship to the customer in CL or LCL lots from mill if so specified by the customer, all of the round and flat steel wire used by customer in the automatic tying of bundles of (commodity) and the like; and that customer agrees to purchase from the respondent the entire requirements of the customer for round and flat wire used in the automatic tying of bundles of (commodity) and the like.

In 1933 many of the contracts then outstanding were amended so that the customer's obligation to purchase wire from respondent was limited to the customer's requirements for use with wire-tying machines leased under the contract, and such amendments were sent to customers with the following letter:

It has been called to our attention that our standard form of contract covering newspaper automatic wire tying machines can be read so as to impose limitations on the users of these machines which would prevent them from installing a wire tying machine of some other make and securing tying wire for operation in such machines from someone other than ourselves.

It was not and is not our intention to so limit our licensees, and the sole object of this signed amendment which we are enclosing in duplicate is to clarify the contract in that respect.

If this amendment meets with your approval, kindly sign one copy and return it to us, attaching the other copy to your original contract.

To those who did not sign and return the amendment, the following letter was written in 1933 and subsequently:

It has been called to our attention that our standard form of contract covering newspaper automatic wire tying machines might possibly be interpreted to obligate the user of these machines to buy from us not only wire used with the automatic wire tying machine placed by us with the user, but also ordinary baling wire or wire used with some other type of wire machine, automatic or otherwise. It was not and is not our intention to so interpret our contract; all we expect is that machines placed by us shall be used with wire supplied by us.

We are writing you so that you may attach this letter of interpretation to your copy of the automatic wire tying machine contract. Will you kindly acknowledge receipt of this letter.

PAR. 7. There are some 12 companies in the United States engaged in the sale or leasing of tying machines and appliances, and the gross volume of business done by the industry, including the sale of wire and strapping, amounts to approximately $9,000,000 annually. Some two-thirds to three-fourths of the business, however, is confined to 3 companies, these being the respondent, the Acme Steel Co. (respondent in the Commission's proceeding under Docket No. 3818), and the Gerrard Co., Inc. (respondent in the Commission's proceeding under Docket No. 3498). Respondent and the Acme Co. each do some 20 to 30 percent of the total volume of business in the industry, and the Gerard Co. does some 10 to 20 percent of the total volume. A fourth company does approximately the same amount of business as the Gerrard Co.

Like the respondent, the Acme and Gerard companies lease their machines and do not sell them outright. The lease agreements used by both of these companies contain conditions prohibiting the lessee from using in the machine any strapping or wire other than that supplied to the lessee by the company furnishing the machine.

PAR. 8.The revenue received by respondent from the renting or leasing of its machines and appliances is of minor importance as compared with the revenue received from the sale of wire and strapping. The primary purpose of leasing the equipment is to enable respondent to sell the wire and strapping used in or with the equipment. This is evident from a comparison of the gross revenue received by respondent from the two sources during the years 1936, 1937, and 1938. The figures for these years are as follows:

	Sales of steel strapping and wire	Rental of tools, appliances, and machines (exclusive of automatic wire-tying machines)	Rentals and deposits on automatic wire-tying machines
1937	2,623,271.24	94,672.22	87,575.00
1938	1,739,085.42	86,640.01	55,300.00

PAR. 9. There is on the market an ample supply of steel strapping and wire suitable for use in or with respondent's machines and appliances, such strapping and wire being for sale both by concerns which sell or lease tying machines and by concerns which do not sell or lease such machines. These concerns are prepared to and have attempted to sell such strapping and wire to lessees of respondent's machines and appliances, but have found themselves precluded from such sale by reason of the restrictive conditions in respondent's lease contracts.

PAR. 10. The Commission finds that the practice of respondent in requiring that the lessees of its machines and appliances use in or with such machines and appliances no wire or strapping other than that supplied by respondent, results in the exclusion from the market of numerous parties who, in the absence of such restrictions, would be prospective and potential purchasers of tying wire and strapping from respondent's competitors. Competition in the tying wire and strapping market is restricted and contracted in direct proportion to the extent to which respondent is successful in leasing its machines and appliances under agreements containing such restrictive conditions.

PAR. 11. There are many ways of preparing boxes, bundles, and packages for shipment, and there are also many devices and tools used by shippers for this purpose. Rope, twine, gummed tape, etc., are used in many cases, and where metal reinforcement is desired there are many devices and tools which may be and are used in doing the work, such as pliers, nippers, buckles, wire twisters, and hammer and nails. Many shippers also use specially made boxes, containers, barrels, etc., which either do not need additional reinforcement or are reinforced during the process of manufacture. It is contended by the respondent that metal tying machines and appliances constitute such a small part of the entire tying field that the practices of respondent and the other leading tying-machine companies can have no substantial effect upon competition in the tying field.

PAR. 12. Most of the devices and methods referred to, however, are of a more or less primitive or outmoded nature, and in many cases are being supplanted by modern tying machines such as those manufactured by respondent and the other tying-machine concerns. In fact, the very existence of the tying-machine industry depends upon its ability to convince shippers that the tying machine is an improvement over these other methods. That the industry has been able to make substantial inroads into the tying field and to supplant the more primitive methods in many instances is attested by the substantial volume of business done by respondent and by the tying-machine industry as a whole.

PAR. 13. The Commission is of the opinion from the evidence, and finds, that the tying-machine industry constitutes a field distinct from the general tying field, and that it is a line of commerce within the meaning of the Clayton Act.

PAR. 14. While the restrictive conditions in respondent's contracts do not expressly provide that the lessees of respondent's machines, appliances, and tools shall not use the wire and strapping of respondent's competitors, the practical effect of such conditions is to preclude such lessees from using such wire and strapping. The Commission further finds that the effect of such restrictive conditions, under the circumstances set forth herein has been, is, and may be, to substantially lessen competition in the aforesaid line of commerce. Such effect is materially increased by reason of the fact that it forms a part of the cumulative effect of the practices of the three leading companies in the tying-machine industry upon competition in said line of commerce.

CONCLUSION

Through the use of the acts and practices described herein the respondent has violated and is now violating section 3 of the act of the Congress of the United States entitled, "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," commonly known as the Clayton Act.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST [1]

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondent and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, briefs filed by the attorney for the Commission and the attorneys for the respondent, and oral argument before the Commission, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of that certain act of the Congress of the United States entitled, "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, commonly known as the Clayton Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Signode Steel Strapping Co., a corporation, and its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the leasing, sale, or making of any contract for the sale, of respondent's machines, appliances, and tools in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Clayton Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Leasing, selling, or making any contract for the sale of, respondent's machines, appliances, or tools on the condition, agreement, or understanding that the lessee or purchaser thereof shall not use in or with such machines, appliances, or tools any wire or strapping other than that acquired from respondent, or from any other source designated by respondent.

2. Enforcing, or continuing in operation or effect, any condition, agreement, or understanding in or in connection with any existing lease or sale contract, which condition, agreement, or understanding is to the effect that the lessee or purchaser of respondent's machines, appliances, or tools shall not use in or with such machines, appliances, or tools any wire or strapping other than that acquired from respondent.

It is further ordered, That said respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

ACME STEEL COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND MODIFIED ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 3 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914

Docket 3818. Complaint, June 14, 1939—Decision, Aug. 20, 1941

DEALING ON EXCLUSIVE AND TYING BASIS—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 3—FIELDS OF COMPETITION—IF MODERN AND SPECIALIZED SERVICE FRACTIONAL PART ONLY OF OLDER GENERAL FIELD—WHETHER SUBSTANTIAL COMPETITIVE EFFECT POSSIBLE.

As respects a contention that metal tying machines constitute such a small part of the entire tying field that the practice of the leading tying-machine concerns can have no substantial effect upon competition in that field, it is to be noted that most of the devices and methods used for tying purposes—such as rope, twine, gummed tape, etc., tools for metal reinforcing such as pliers, nippers, twisting bars, and hammer and nails, and including also prefabricated containers which either do not need reinforcing or are reinforced in the process of manufacture—are of a more or less primitive or out-moded nature and, in many instances, are being supplanted by modern tying machines, such as those made by the instant concern and others. The very existence of the tying-machine industry, in fact, depends upon its ability to convince shippers that the tying machine is an improvement over such other methods. That it has been able to make substantial inroads into the tying field to supplant the more primitive methods in many instances is attested by its steady and rapid growth.

DEALING ON EXCLUSIVE AND TYING BASIS—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 3—WHETHER "LINE OF COMMERCE"—TYING MACHINES.

The tying-machine industry constitutes a field distinct from the general tying field, and is a line of commerce within the meaning of the Clayton Act.

DEALING ON EXCLUSIVE AND TYING BASIS—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 3—RESTRICTIVE CONDITIONS—IF PRACTICAL EFFECT TO PRECLUDE LESSEES' USE OF SUPPLIES, ETC., OF LESSOR'S COMPETITOR.

While the form of a lease contract used by lessor company in leasing its metal tying machines, providing that no wire other than that supplied by the company should be used in the operation of the machine and that, in the event of a breach of said condition, lessee's right to possess or use a machine should terminate forthwith, did not expressly provide that lessees of its machines and appliances should not use the wire of its competitors, the practical effect of said condition was to preclude such lessees from using competitors' wire.

DEALING ON EXCLUSIVE AND TYING BASIS—CLAYTON ACT, SEC. 3—LEASE OF MACHINES PERFORMING MODERN SPECIALIZED SERVICES IN ORDER GENERAL FIELD ON CONDITIONS PRECLUDING USE OF COMPETITORS' SUPPLIES.

Where a corporation engaged in manufacturing tying tools, machines, and appliances and the steel straps and bands used in operation thereof, and in the interstate sale and distribution of its steel strapping and in leasing such tools and machines to lessees in other States for revenues which were of minor importance compared with those received from the sale of the strapping, which constituted the primary purpose of such leasing; doing from 20 to 30 percent of the business in the industry and, along with 2 other companies out of some 12 in the United States, controlling from 20 to 30 percent of the total volume of business, and, like said 2, leasing its machines only—

Leased its said machines upon the condition that no steel strapping other than that purchased from it should be used therewith, and that, in the event of a breach of such condition, right of lessee to possession might be terminated and such equipment be repossessed by it, and thereby excluded from the market numerous parties who, in the absence of such restriction, would be potential purchasers of tying wire from its competitors, and restricted competition in the tying-wire market in direct proportion to the extent to which it was successful in leasing its machines under such restrictive agreements;

With the result that the effect of such restrictive condition, under the circumstances set forth, materially increased as a part of the cumulative effect upon competition of the practices of said three leading companies, might be to substantially lessen competition in line of commerce concerned:

Held, That such acts and practices described constituted violations of Section 3 of the Clayton Act.

Mr. George W. Williams for the Commission.

Davis, Lindsey, Smith & Shonts, of Chicago, Ill., and Mr. Francis D. Thomas, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Acme Steel Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of section 3 of the act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, and commonly known as the Clayton Act, hereby issues this its complaint against said respondent and states its charges in respect thereto as follows, to wit:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Acme Steel Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, having its principal office and place of business at 2840 Archer Avenue, city of Chicago, State of Illinois, and branch offices and warehouses located in Brooklyn, State of New York, Atlanta, State of Georgia, Los Angeles and San Francisco, State of California, and Seattle, State of Washington.

Respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing steel strap and band-tying tools, machines, and equipment, and the steel straps, bands, and seals used in the operation thereof, and in the business of leasing, and licensing the use of, said tools, machines, and equipment, and in selling and supplying of the steel straps, bands, and seals used in the operation of said tools and machines. Said tools, machines, and equipment and said steel straps, bands, and seals, are used by lessees, licensees, and vendees in the tying or binding of boxes, packages, and bundles. In connection with the making of such leasing and license agreements, respondent has caused, and still causes, said tools, machines, and equipment, when leased or licensed, and said straps, bands, and seals, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business or its branch plant at Riverdale, Ill., to the aforesaid licensees, lessees and vendees, located at various points in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and there is now, and has been for more than 3 years last past, a constant current of trade and commerce in said products between and among the various States of the United States, the Territories thereof, and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of its business, said respondent has been, in the last several years, in competition with firms, partnerships, corporations, and individuals engaged in the selling, leasing, and licensing of steel strap tying tools, machines, and equipment and the selling of steel straps, bands, and seals used in the operation thereof, as aforesaid, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, the Territories thereof, and in the District of Columbia.

Said respondent is now, and has been for several years last past, the largest manufacturer and distributor of said steel strap and band tying tools, machines, and equipment and the straps, bands, and seals used in connection therewith, in the United States, and now occupies a dominant position in said industry, and is the largest in the whole tying-tool, machine, and equipment and tying supply business in the United States.

Respondent manufactures two types of tying machinery; one being known as hand-tying tools and the other as unit-loading tool equipment, the former being used in connection with the tying of ordinary bundles, packages, and boxes, and the latter principally in connection with the tying of bundles for loading on railroad cars and the like.

PAR. 2. Respondent, in the course and conduct of its said business, hereinabove described in paragraph 1, has, during the last several years, leased, and licensed the use of, its said tools, machines, and equipment for use in the several States and Territories of the United States, and the District of Columbia, on the condition, agreement, or understanding that the lessees or licensees or other users thereof will use with the said tools, machinery, and equipment only strapping and seals purchased from respondent, reserving the right to terminate the lease at any time; and has, during the last several years, leased, or licensed the use of, its said unit-load tool equipment on the condition, agreement or understanding that the lessees or licensees or other users thereof will purchase their entire requirements of bands and seals for use in the operation thereof from respondent as long as they are in the possession of said lessees and licensees and on the further condition, agreement, or understanding that if such lessees or licensees should use any such material in the operation of any of said machines and equipment other than that purchased from or supplied by respondent, the right to the use and possession of such machines and equipment may be terminated and that such machines and equipment may be immediately repossessed by respondent.

PAR. 3. The effect of said leases and licenses, entered into on the said condition, agreement, or understanding set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, may be to substantially lessen competition in commerce in the leasing and selling of said hand-tying and unit-loading tools and equipment and the sale of said supplies and tying material hereinabove described, namely, straps, bands, and seals, between respondent and said competitors, or tend to create a monopoly in respondent, in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States, and the District of Columbia, in said products.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid acts, practices, and methods of respondent constitute a violation of the provisions of section 3 of the hereinbefore mentioned act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of that certain act of the Congress of the United States entitled, "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, commonly known as the Clayton Act, the Federal Trade Commission on June 14, 1939, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Acme Steel Co., a corporation, charging it with the violation of the provisions of section 3 of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, a stipulation as to the facts was entered into between W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, and Glen E. Smith and Messrs. Davis, Lindsey, and Shonts, attorneys for the respondent, which provided, among other things, that a certain statement of facts stipulated to in the Commission's proceeding against Signode Steel Strapping Co. (Docket No. 3688) may be made a part of the record herein and may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint and in opposition thereto, and that the Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts (including inferences which may be drawn from said stipulated facts), and its conclusion based thereon, the parties reserving, however, the right to file briefs and present oral argument in said Signode case, Docket No. 3688. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation (no brief having been filed by the attorneys for the respondent and no oral argument having been made by such attorneys); and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Acme Steel Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 2840 Archer Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent also maintains branch offices and warehouses located in Brooklyn, N. Y.; Atlanta, Ga.; Los Angeles, Calif.; San Francisco, Calif.; and Seattle, Wash.

Respondent is now, and for many years last past has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing tying tools, machines, and appliances and the steel straps and bands used in the operation thereof, and in the business of leasing such tools, machines, and appliances, and in the selling of the steel straps and bands used in the operation thereof. Said tools, machines, and appliances and said steel straps and bands, commonly called steel strapping, are used in the tying or binding of boxes, packages, and bundles.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business the respondent causes, and for many years last past has caused, its said tools, machines, and appliances, when leased, and its said steel strapping, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in Chicago, Ill., or from its branch plant located at Riverdale, Ill., or from its branch offices and warehouses located in the States of New York, Georgia, California, and Washington, to the aforesaid lessees and vendees located in various States of the United States other than the States in which such shipments originate, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. There are in the United States other corporations, and individuals, firms, and partnerships, who have been and are engaged in the sale, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of steel strapping suitable for use in and with respondent's machines, appliances, and tools. But for the restrictive conditions in respondent's lease contracts, as hereinafter set forth, respondent would have been and would now be in active and substantial competition with such corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships in the sale of steel strapping to the lessees of respondent's machines, appliances and tools.

PAR. 4. Tying machines and appliances are divided into two general classes, those which use or are used with flat strips or bands of steel, and those which use or are used with steel wire. The general purpose of the machines and appliances, whether used separately or in combinations, is the tying or reinforcing of boxes, bales, bundles, etc., so that such containers and their contents may be transported or stored more efficiently and with greater safety and satisfaction. Essentially, the machines perform two operations: First, the tightening or tensioning of the wire or strapping around the bundle, and second, the tying or fastening of the wire or strapping.

PAR. 5. Respondent does not sell any of its machines or appliances but supplies such machines and appliances to users thereof under certain lease agreements. All of such leases include (or until recently did include) conditions or agreements prohibiting the lessee from using in or with such machines and appliances any steel strapping other than that purchased from respondent. Such leases further provide that if such lessees should use in the operation of respondent's machines and appliances any material other than that purchased from respondent, the right of the lessee to the possession of the machine or appliance may be terminated and that such equipment may be repossessed by respondent.

PAR. 6. There are some 12 companies in the United States engaged in the sale or leasing of tying machines and appliances, and the gross volume of business done by the industry, including the sale of wire and strapping, amounts to approximately $9,000,000 annually. Some two-thirds to three-fourths of the business, however, is confined to 3 companies, these being the respondent, the Signode Steel Strapping Co. (respondent in the Commission's proceeding under Docket No. 3688), and The Gerrard Co., Inc. (respondent in the Commission's proceeding under Docket No. 3498). Respondent and the Signode Co. each do some 20 to 30 percent of the total volume of business in the industry, and the Gerrard Co. does some 10 to 20 percent of the total volume. A fourth company does approximately the same amount of business as the Gerrard Co.

Like the respondent, the Signode and Gerrard companies lease their machines and do not sell them outright. The lease agreements used by both of these companies contain conditions prohibiting the lessee from using in the machine any strapping or wire other than that supplied to the lessee by the company furnishing the machine.

PAR. 7. The revenue received by respondent from the leasing of its machines and appliances is of minor importance as compared with the revenue received by it from the sale of its steel strapping. The primary purpose of leasing the machines and appliances is to enable respondent to sell the steel strapping used in or with the equipment.

PAR. 8. There is on the market an ample supply of steel strapping suitable for use in or with respondent's machines and appliances, such strapping being for sale both by concerns which sell or lease tying machines and by concerns which do not sell or lease such machines. These concerns are prepared to and have attempted to sell such strapping to lessees of respondent's machines and appliances, but have found themselves precluded from such sale by reason of the restrictive conditions in respondent's lease contracts.

PAR. 9. The Commission finds that the practice of respondent in requiring that the lessees of its machines and appliances use in or with such machines and appliances no strapping other than that supplied by respondent, results in the exclusion from the market of numerous parties who, in the absence of such restrictions, would be prospective and potential purchasers of strapping from respondent's competitors. Competition in the strapping market is restricted and contracted in direct proportion to the extent to which respondent is successful in leasing its machines and appliances under agreements containing such restrictive conditions.

PAR. 10. There are many ways of preparing boxes, bundles, and packages for shipment, and there are also many devices and tools used by shippers for this purpose. Rope, twine, gummed tape, etc., are used in many cases, and where metal reinforcement is desired there are many devices and tools which may be and are used in doing the work, such as pliers, nippers, buckles, wire twisters, and hammer and nails. Many shippers also use specially made boxes, containers, barrels, etc., which either do not need additional reinforcement or are reinforced during the process of manufacture. It is contended by the respondent that metal tying machines and appliances constitute such a small part of the entire tying field that the practices of respondent and the other leading tying-machine companies can have no substantial effect upon competition in the tying field.

PAR. 11. Most of the devices and methods referred to, however, are of a more or less primitive or out-moded nature, and in many cases are being supplanted by modern tying machines such as those manufactured by respondent and the other tying-machine concerns. In fact, the very existence of the tying-machine industry depends upon its ability to convince shippers that the tying machine is an improvement over these other methods. That the industry has been able to make substantial inroads into the tying field and to supplant the more primitive methods in many instances is attested by the substantial volume of business done by respondent and by the tying machine industry as a whole.

PAR. 12. The Commission is of the opinion from the evidence, and finds that the tying-machine industry constitutes a field distinct from the general tying field, and that it is a line of commerce within the meaning of the Clayton Act.

PAR. 13 While the restrictive conditions in respondent's contracts do not expressly provide that the lessees of respondent's machines, appliances, and tools shall not use the strapping of respondent's competitors, the practical effect of such conditions is to preclude such lessees from using such strapping. The Commission further finds that the effect of such restrictive conditions, under the circumstances set forth herein, has been, is, and may be, to substantially lessen competition in the aforesaid line of commerce. Such effect is materially increased by reason of the fact that it forms a part of the cumulative effect of the practices of the three leading companies in the tying-machine industry upon competition in said line of commerce.

CONCLUSION

Through the use of the acts and practices described herein the respondent has violated and is now violating section 3 of the act of the Congress of the United States entitled, "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," commonly known as the Clayton Act.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST [1]

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondent and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Commission, which provided, among other things, that a certain statement of facts stipulated to in the Commission's proceeding against Signode Steel Strapping Co. (Docket No. 3688), may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of that certain act of the Congress of the United States entitled, "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, commonly known as the Clayton Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Acme Steel Co., a corporation, and its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the leasing, sale, or making of any contract for the sale, of respondent's machines, appliances, and tools in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Clayton Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Leasing, selling, or making any contract for the sale of, respondent's machines, appliances, or tools on the condition, agreement, or understanding that the lessee or purchaser thereof shall not use in or with such machines, appliances, or tools any strapping other than that acquired from respondent, or from any other source designated by respondent.

2. Enforcing, or continuing in operation or effect, any condition, agreement, or understanding in or in connection with any existing lease or sale contract, which condition, agreement, or understanding is to the effect that the lessee or purchaser of respondent's machines, appliances, or tools shall not use in or with such machines, appliances, or tools any strapping other than that acquired from respondent.

It is further ordered, That said respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

ORA R. YATES AND CHARLES W. MILLER, TRADING AS MONARCH PRINTERS AND BINDERS

MONARCH PRINTERS & BINDERS

Docket 4339. Complaint, Oct. 9, 1940—Decision, Aug. 20, 1941

Where two individuals engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of sales promotion cards so designed and arranged as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when used by dealers in promoting and increasing sales of their merchandise to consuming public, typical one involving plan, as explained on card, under which customer or dealer using such cards was entitled to a "Treasure Chest receipt" with each 25 cents spent, and had the option, upon the pasting of such receipts on the 100 spaces provided on the card, of receiving cash redemption value of 15 cents or of exchanging the card for articles of merchandise or cash awards varying from 50 cents to $5 called for by legend under card's seal—

(a) Sold such cards to wholesalers and jobbers and, directly and indirectly, to retailers, who distributed them to customers and honored awards as shown when seals were broken, in accordance with above plan, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws, and in competition with many who, unwilling to offer or sell cards or devices so designed and arranged as to involve a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, refrain therefrom;

With the result that the consuming public was induced to purchase merchandise from dealers using their cards in preference to those using devices of their competitors, because of said game of chance, and dealers were consequently induced to purchase their said cards in preference to devices of their competitors, and with effect of unfairly diverting trade in commerce to them from their said competitors, to the injury of competition in commerce; and

(b) Represented that they were printers and binders of their said merchandise, owning, operating, and controlling the plant in which it was printed and bound, through using words "Printers and Binders" in their trade name set forth on display cards, letterheads, said sales-promotion cards and other printed matter which they caused to be distributed;

When, in fact, they filled orders with merchandise which was printed and bound in a plant which they did not own, operate, or control, and were not printers and binders, preferentially dealt with by substantial portion of the consuming public and dealers as affording, in their belief, lower prices, elimination of middlemen's profits, superior products, and other advantages;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive prospective purchasers into the belief that they were the printers and binders of their merchandise, and to cause them to buy their said articles because of such mistaken and erroneous belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.
Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr., and Mr. J. V. Mishou for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Ora R. Yates and Charles W. Miller, individually and trading as Monarch Printers and Binders, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Ora R. Yates and Charles W. Miller, are individuals trading as Monarch Printers and Binders, with their principal office and place of business located at 812 Hunt Street, Adrian, Mich. Respondents are now and for more than 3 years last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of sales-promotion cards and other articles of merchandise to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers. Respondents cause and have caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of Michigan to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various States of the United States other than Michigan and in the District of Columbia. There is now and for more than 3 years last past has been a course of trade by respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of their business, respondents are and have been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold cards so designed and arranged as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when used by dealers in promoting and increasing sales of their merchandise to the consuming public. A sales-promotion card in one such group is herein described for the purpose of showing arrangement, design, and principle involved.

The said card contains 100 ruled spaces for pasting thereon receipts which are given by the said dealers to customers with each 25-cent purchase. The card contains a legend or instructions as follows:

Under the others is listed cash in amounts of 50¢, $1, $2, or $5. THERE ARE NO BLANKS! When completely filled with 100 receipts, return this booklet to us with the Seal unbroken. NO DRAWINGS—NO JUDGINGS—NO DISAPPOINTMENTS!

This booklet accepted subject to above conditions

The prizes or premiums are allotted to the said customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legend or instructions.

Under the seal is the following legend:

1 lb.
Pomco
Vac. Can Coffee
2 cans
Pomco
Tall Milk

The articles of merchandise called for under the said seals vary with the individual card and the cash awards vary from 50 cents to $5. The legend under the seal is effectively concealed until the seal has been opened and the amount which the holder of said card will receive in merchandise or cash is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondents sell and distribute and have sold and distributed various sales-promotion cards which involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when used by dealers to promote the sale of their merchandise to the consuming public. Such cards are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

Respondents furnish their customers with various display posters and advertisements to be used by retail merchants in distributing and using said cards.

PAR. 3. Sales of assortments of said sales-promotion cards are and have been made to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers. The retail dealers who directly or indirectly purchase respondents' said cards distribute the same to their customers and prospective customers and honor the awards as shown when the seals are broken open in accordance with the plan hereinabove set forth. The respondents thus supply to, and place in the hands of, others the means of and instrumentalities for conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said method in designing and arranging their said cards and distributing the same for redistribution to the public is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. There are in competition with respondents various manufacturers and distributors of sales-promotion cards, premium cards, price concession cards, coupons, and trading stamps, which when used by dealers do not involve a lottery scheme, game of chance, or a gift enterprise. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute various cards or devices for promoting or increasing the sales of dealers are unwilling to offer for sale or sell cards or devices so designed and arranged as above alleged, or otherwise designed and arranged as to involve a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

The consuming public is induced to deal with or purchase merchandise from dealers using respondents' cards in preference to purchasing merchandise from dealers using the devices of respondents' competitors because of the games of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme connected with respondents' said cards. By reason thereof dealers are induced to purchase respondents' said cards in preference to devices of competitors of the respondents. The use by respondents of said method in designing and arranging their said cards and distributing them as aforesaid because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof injury is being and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, respondents in soliciting the sale of and in selling their merchandise, as above described, have caused display cards, letterheads, the aforesaid sales-promotion cards, and other printed matter to be distributed through the United States mail and by other means to customers and prospective customers located in States other than the State of Michigan and in the District of Columbia. The aforesaid printed matter contains thereon the firm name of the respondent, Monarch Printers and Binders. The use of the words "Printers and Binders" in respondents' firm name serves as a representation that respondents are the printers and binders of their aforesaid merchandise and that respondents own and operate or control the plant wherein such merchandise is printed and bound.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact, respondents do not own, operate or control a plant for the printing and binding of sales-promotion cards and other merchandise which they sell and distribute, as herinabove alleged, but respondents have filled and now fill orders for such articles of merchandise with merchandise which is printed and bound in a plant which they neither own, operate, nor control.

PAR. 7. There has long been a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public and of dealers for dealing directly with a printer and binder, such preference being due in part to a belief that lower prices, elimination of middlemen's profits, superior products, and other advantages can thereby be obtained.

PAR. 8. The use by the respondents of the words "Printers and Binders" in their firm name, as hereinabove alleged, has had and now has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers by causing them mistakenly and erroneously to believe that the respondents are the printers and binders of such merchandise and own and operate or control the plant wherein such merchandise is printed and bound, and to purchase respondents' articles on account of such mistaken and erroneous belief.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on October 9, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Ora R. Yates and Charles W. Miller, individually and trading as Monarch Printers and Binders, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by L. P. Allen, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Frazier Reams, attorney for the respondents, before W. W. Sheppard, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it (which testimony and other evidence consisted of a stipulation of facts upon the record supplementing the answer filed by the respondents), and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed by the respondents or oral argument requested), and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

In the course and conduct of their business, respondents are and have been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, respondents sold cards so designed and arranged as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when used by dealers in promoting and increasing sales of their merchandise to the consuming public. A sales-promotion card in one such group is herein described for the purpose of showing arrangement, design, and principle involved. The articles of merchandise called for under the said seals varied with the individual card and the cash awards varied from 50 cents to $5. The legend under the seal was effectively concealed until the seal had been opened and the amount which the holder of said card received in merchandise or cash was thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondents sold and distributed various sales-promotion cards which involved the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when used by dealers to promote the sale of their merchandise to the consuming public. Such cards were similar to the one hereinabove described and varied only in detail.

Respondents furnished their customers with various display posters and advertisements to be used by retail merchants in distributing and using said cards.

PAR. 3. Sales of assortments of said sales-promotion cards were made to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers. The retail dealers who directly or indirectly purchased respondents' said cards distributed the same to their customers and prospective customers and honored the awards as shown when the seals were broken open in accordance with the plan hereinabove set forth. The respondents thus supplied to, and placed in the hands of, others the means of and instrumentalities for conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said method in designing and arranging their said cards and distributing the same for redistribution to the public is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. There are in competition with respondents various manufacturers and distributors of sales-promotion cards, premium cards, price concession cards, coupons, and trading stamps, which when used by dealers do not involve a lottery scheme, game of chance, or a gift enterprise. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute various cards or devices for promoting or increasing the sales of dealers are unwilling to offer for sale or sell cards or devices so designed and arranged as to involve a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, respondents in soliciting the sale of and in selling their merchandise, as above described, caused display cards, letterheads, the aforesaid sales-promotion cards and other printed matter to be distributed through the United States mail and by other means to customers and prospective customers located in States other than the State of Michigan and in the District of Columbia. The aforesaid printed matter contained thereon the firm name of the respondent Monarch Printers and Binders. The use of the words "Printers and Binders" in respondents' firm name serves as a representation that respondents are the printers and binders of their aforesaid merchandise and that respondents own and operate or control the plant wherein such merchandise is printed and bound.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact, respondents do not own, operate, or control a plant for the printing and binding of sales-promotion cards and other merchandise which they sell and distribute, but instead respondents have filled and now fill orders for such articles of merchandise with merchandise which is printed and bound in a plant which they neither own, operate, nor control.

PAR. 7. There has long been a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public and of dealers for dealing directly with a printer and binder, such preference being due in part to a belief that lower prices, elimination of middlemen's profits, superior products, and other advantages can thereby be obtained.

PAR. 8. CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Arthur G. Spangler, Ernest D. Spangler, and Mrs. Faie Spangler, individually and as copartners trading under the name of Spangler Candy Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Arthur G. Spangler, Ernest D. Spangler, and Mrs. Faie Spangler, are individuals doing business as copartners under the name of Spangler Candy Company, with their principal office and place of business located at 420 West Edgerton Street, Bryan, Ohio. Respondents also maintain a place of business in Toledo, Ohio. Respondent Ernest D. Spangler resides at 232 East Wayne Street, Maumee, Ohio. Respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been, engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof to dealers. Respondents cause and have caused said candy, when sold, to be transported from their principal place of business in Bryan, Ohio, to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than the State of Ohio, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, a course of trade by respondents in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondents are and have been in competition with other individuals, partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is as follows:

This assortment consists of a number of small pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a device commonly called a push card. The push card contains 100 partially perforated disks, on the face of each of which is printed the word "PUSH." Sales are 1 cent each. Concealed within each of the said disks is a legend, which corresponds to a legend appearing on the face of said card. The legends or instructions on the face of the card are as follows:

FOOTBALL 1¢

TOUCHDOWN receives	20	PIECES
DROP KICK receives	10
SAFETY receives	10
FIELD GOAL receives	5
FORWARD PASS receives	5
END RUN receives	3
LINE BUCK receives	3
FAKE PASS receives	2
OFF SIDE receives	1
Last Sale First 3 Sections receives	5
Last Sale on Card receives	15

No. 200

Sales of respondents' candy by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above legend or instructions. The legends or instructions aforesaid are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a purchase has been made and the disk separated or removed from said card. The number of said pieces of candy to be procured by a purchaser for 1 cent is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondents sell and distribute, and have sold and distributed, various assortments of candy involving lot or chance features, but such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who directly or indirectly purchase respondents' said candy expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondents thus supply to, and place in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their candy in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said sales plan or method in the sale of their candy, the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the sales plan or method hereinabove alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to secure pieces of candy at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said sales plan or method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their candy and by the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on July 16, 1941, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Arthur G. Spangler, Ernest D. Spangler, and Mrs. Faie Spangler, individually and as copartners trading under the name of Spangler Candy Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On August 1, 1941, respondents filed their answer in which answer they admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

The use by respondents of said sales plan or method in the sale of their candy, and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the sales plan or method hereinabove described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to secure pieces of candy at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondents, as above described, are unwilling to adopt and use said sales plan or method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their candy and by the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having duly made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents Arthur G. Spangler, Ernest D. Spangler, and Mrs. Faie Spangler, individually and as copartners trading under the name of Spangler Candy Co., their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales thereof are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others assortments of any merchandise together with push or pull cards, punchboards, or other devices which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, push or pull cards, punchboards, or other devices either with assortments of candy or other merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said candy or other merchandise to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

4. Selling or otherwise distributing any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

SCHNECK-WAYNE COMPANY, INC., AND GUSTAVE B. WAYNE AND FRANK J. SCHNECK

Docket 3441. Complaint, May 23, 1938—Decision, Aug. 21, 1941

Where a corporation and two officers and owners thereof, who formulated and directed its policies, acts, and practices, engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of various articles of merchandise, including clocks, watches, fountain pens, electrical appliances, radios, traveling bags, blankets, and silverware, and, as thus engaged, in carrying on their business under a general plan by which they entered into agreements with fraternal or charitable organizations to conduct for them money-raising enterprises, such as fairs and carnivals, upon profit-sharing basis, and under which they cooperated with the particular local organization and managed the enterprise and the sale and distribution of their merchandise—

Used and caused others to use various devices and plans of merchandising involving the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes in the sale and distribution of their said products, through forwarding to the organization sales literature and material, including pull cards and circulars illustrating their merchandise and explaining their plan of awarding it as prizes to purchasers selecting, from list of feminine names on a card, the same name as that concealed under the card's master seal, who received their choice of any gift illustrated in the "Purchasers Gift Folder" and the operators of cards—usually members of the organization—received a similar choice, and under which the cost of a chance was dependent upon the number under the tab adjoining the name selected, and each purchaser of a chance received also a ticket representing credit on the price of admission to the carnival and bearing a number participating in the special drawing for a grand award of an automobile which usually climaxed the event; and thereby

Supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with aforesaid plan under which articles of greater value than the cost of a single pull were sold and distributed wholly by lot or chance, contrary to an established policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who, unwilling to use any method involving a game of chance or contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With the result that many persons were attracted by their said sales method and by the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell their said merchandise in preference to that offered and sold by their said competitors, and with tendency and capacity to divert trade unfairly to them from such competitors; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Nash & Donnelly, of Washington, D. C., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the Schneck-Wayne Co., Inc., and Gustave B. Wayne and Frank J. Schneck, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Schneck-Wayne Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and has its principal office and place of business located at 261 Fifth Avenue, in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondents Gustave B. Wayne and Frank J. Schneck are, respectively, president and secretary-treasurer of the Schneck-Wayne Co., Inc., and have their office and principal place of business at 261 Fifth Avenue in the city of New York, State of New York. The individual respondents named herein direct and control the sales policies and general business activities of respondent corporation and participated in the acts and practices herein charged. Respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been, engaged in offering for sale and selling general merchandise to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia. They cause, and have caused, said merchandise, when sold, to be shipped or transported from their place of business in the State of New York into and through other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time past, a course of trade in such merchandise sold by said respondents in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of their business, respondents are in competition with other individuals, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like and similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as herein described, and in soliciting the sale and in selling and distributing their merchandise, respondents have furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes. The method and sales plan adopted and used by respondents were and are substantially as follows:

Respondents contact fraternal and charitable organizations located at various points throughout the United States and offer to put on, conduct, or promote a so-called fair or carnival for such organizations, the proceeds of which are to be divided upon a basis theretofore agreed upon between respondents and the organizations. Thereafter, respondents cause, and have caused, certain advertising literature, including, among other things, pull cards, order blanks, advertising literature containing illustrations of their merchandise, and circulars explaining respondents' plan of selling said merchandise and of awarding it as premiums or prizes to purchasers and to the operators of said pull cards to be distributed to the purchasing public through the particular fraternal or charitable organizations. Said pull cards bear a number of feminine names, with a blank space opposite each for writing in the name of the customer. Said pull cards have a corresponding number of partially perforated disks, on each of which is printed one of the feminine names appearing alphabetically elsewhere in the pamphlet or brochure. Concealed underneath each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pulled or separated from the card.

The pull cards have a master seal concealed within which is one of the feminine names appearing elsewhere on the said cards.

Appearing on the back of the pamphlet or brochure are legends or instructions, of which the following is representative:

THE COMMITTEE.

Sales of respondents' products by means of said pull cards are made in accordance with the specified legends or instructions. The articles of merchandise sold and distributed by respondents vary in value but each of the articles of merchandise is of greater value than the cost of a single pull from said pull cards. The purchasing public is thus induced and persuaded to purchase pulls from said cards in the hope that they may pull a prize winning name or number and thus obtain an article of merchandise of a greater value than the amount paid. The various articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and the amount which the customer pays for a chance is also determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. Within the above referred to pamphlet or brochure containing the pull chances appear the following:

Every subscriber Receives Credit Admission Ticket to Shriners' Frolic and Streets of Bagdad and Participates in the choice award of a 1937 Chevrolet, Plymouth or Ford 2-door sedan.

The above language is always modified or changed to show the name of a particular organization for which the fair or carnival is being conducted.

The fair or carnival conducted or promoted for fraternal and charitable organizations by respondents is concluded by a gala night event. The credit admission ticket above referred to plus a definite sum of cash admits the holder of such credit admission ticket to the closing event of fair or carnival. On this particular night, the so-called "Grand Award" is made. The grand award consists of, among other things, a 2-door Ford, Plymouth, or Chevrolet sedan automobile.

PAR. 4. The persons to whom respondents furnish the said pull cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing a greater part of respondents' merchandise, in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan herein set forth. The use by respondents of said method in the sale of their merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by and through the aid of said method, is a practice which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and is contrary to the criminal statutes.

PAR. 5. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price therefor.

Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Many persons are attracted by respondents' said method, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner herein set forth, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

The use of said method by respondents because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, divert trade unfairly to respondents from their competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method. As a consequence thereof, injury has been, and is being, done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and of the respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 23, 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Schneck-Wayne Co., Inc., and Gustave B. Wayne and Frank J. Schneck, individually and as officers of the Schneck-Wayne Company, Inc., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission (no testimony or other evidence having been introduced by respondents), before Miles J. Furnas, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (respondents not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Schneck-Wayne Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 261 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Respondents Gustave B. Wayne and Frank J. Schneck are the owners of all the capital stock of the corporate respondent and are president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, of the corporation. They formulate the policies and direct, dominate, and control the acts and practices of the corporation. They have their offices at the same address as that of the corporate respondent.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and since 1937 have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various articles of merchandise, including among other things, clocks, watches, fountain pens, electrical appliances, radios, traveling bags, blankets, and silverware. Respondents cause, and since 1937 have caused their merchandise, when sold, to be shipped or transported from their place of business in the State of New York or from the places of manufacture of such merchandise, to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of New York, and other than the States in which such merchandise is manuactured. Respondents maintain, and since 1937 have maintained, a course of trade in their merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business respondents are, and since 1937 have been, in active competition with other corporations, and individuals, and with firms and partnerships, engaged in the sale and distribution of similar articles of merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 4. The Commission finds that in the course and conduct of their business and in selling and distributing their merchandise, and in offering such merchandise for sale, the respondents have used, and have caused others to use, various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes. The method or sales plan used by the respondents is substantially as follows:

Respondents contact various fraternal and charitable organizations located at various points throughout the United States and offer to conduct or promote for such organizations, various money-raising enterprises such as fairs and carnivals. The proceeds derived from the operation of such enterprises are divided between the respondents and the organization upon a basis theretofore agreed upon. Upon the consummation of the agreement the respondents forward to the organization certain advertising and sales literature and material, including among other things, pull cards, advertising circulars illustrating respondents' merchandise, and circulars explaining respondents' plan of selling such merchandise and of awarding it as premiums or prizes to persons purchasing chances on such pull cards, and to the persons operating such pull cards and selling the chances thereon. Respondents also forward, or cause to be forwarded, to the organization the merchandise to be awarded as prizes or premiums during the enterprise.

The respondents cooperate with the local organization and manage and direct the enterprise and the sale or distribution of the merchandise. The pull cards are usually placed in the hands of certain members of the organization, who proceed to contact other members of the organization and members of the general public and undertake to sell to such persons the chances on the pull cards.

The pull cards bear a number of feminine names, with a blank space opposite each name in which is to be written the name of the purchaser of the chance. The card also has a corresponding number of partially perforated disks on each of which is printed a feminine name corresponding to one of the names appearing elsewhere on the card. Under each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pulled or separated from the card. The card also bears a master seal under which is concealed a feminine name corresponding to one of the names under the disks. The names under the disks are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until after a purchase has been made and the disk pulled or separated from the card. Likewise, the name under the master seal is concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until all of the chances appearing on the card have been purchased and all of the disks have been pulled or separated from the card.

On the back of the pull card (referred to by respondents as a "Subscription Book") appear legends containing directions to be followed in the operation of the sales plan and in the sale of the chances. The following is typical of such legends.

DIRECTIONS

The Subscription Book has 99 girls' Names with numbers. The amount of each subscription ranges from 1c. to 35c. No higher—No Subscription over 35c. No. 25 & 50 each receive a Parker made Pen.

As each person selects a Girl's Name, the amount to subscribe appears under the tab. For instance, if number one (1) is selected, the amount to subscribe is one cent. If number fourteen (14), the amount is 14 cents, etc. up to number thirty-five (35) which is 35 cents.

THOSE SELECTING NUMBERS OVER 35 SUBSCRIBE ONLY 35 CENTS

Write the name of the person making the Subscription on the proper line opposite the Girl's Name and on the ticket stub, and give them one of the Credit Tickets to the * * * Frolic and Streets of Bagdad. Each ticket holder participates in the choice awarding of a Latest Model Chevrolet, Plymouth or Ford 2-Door Sedan, Fully Equipped.

When the entire Book is completed, you will have collected $28.70. Turn the receipts in at Campaign Headquarters at once.

Remove the Seal at the top of Book. The person who selected the Girl's Name under the Seal is entitled to the choice of any Gift illustrated in the Purchasers Gift Folder, absolutely free. For disposing of the Subscription Book and upon receipt of the $28.70 at the Headquarters, you will also receive your choice of any Gift illustrated in the Special Book Seller's Gift Folder. All Gifts are on display at Headquarters * * *.

Do not remove the seal until all subscriptions have been received.

Sales of respondents' merchandise by means of the pull cards are made in accordance with these instructions. The various articles of merchandise sold and distributed by means of the cards vary in value but each of the articles is of a value greater than the cost of a single pull from the pull card. Members of the purchasing public are induced to purchase pulls from the card in the hope that they may pull a prize-winning name or number and thus obtain an article of merchandise of a value greater than the amount paid. The articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance, and the amount which the purchaser pays for a chance is also determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 5. Each purchaser of a chance on the pull card receives also a ticket purporting to represent a credit on the price of admission to the fair or carnival. Each of these tickets bears a different number. The fair or carnival is usually climaxed by a special night event at which there is a drawing for a "Grand Award," usually an automobile. The holder of the ticket bearing the lucky number receives the Grand Award.

PAR. 6. The persons to whom respondents furnish the pull cards through the local organization, use the cards in selling and distributing respondents' merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of respondents' merchandise in accordance with such sales plan.

PAR. 7. The Commission finds that the sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner herein described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. The use by respondents of such method in the sale of their merchandise and the sale of respondents' merchandise by and through the use and aid of such method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

Among the persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with respondents, as above set forth, are those who are unwilling to adopt and use the method used by respondents or any method involving a game of chance or any other method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Many persons are attracted by respondents' sales method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of respondents' merchandise, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by respondents' competitors who do not use such method or any equivalent method.

PAR. 8. The Commission therefore finds that the use of such method by respondents has the tendency and capacity, because of such game of chance, to divert trade unfairly to respondents from their said competitors. In consequence thereof, substantial injury has been done and is being done by the respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony, and other evidence taken before a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint (no testimony or other evidence having been offered by respondents), report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and brief of counsel for the Commission (no brief having been filed by respondents and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Schneck-Wayne Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, and Gustave B. Wayne and Frank J. Schneck, individually and as officers of said corporation, and respondents' representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of their clocks, watches, fountain pens, electrical appliances, radios, traveling bags, blankets, silverware, or any other merchandise, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others any merchandise, together with push or pull cards, punchboards, or any other lottery devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such merchandise to the public.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, either with merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing respondents' merchandise or any other merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

PHILIP HARRY KOOLISH AND SARA ALLEN KOOLISH, INDIVIDUALLY AND TRADING AS STANDARD DISTRIBUTING COMPANY

Docket 4135. Complaint, May 18, 1940—Decision, Aug. 21, 1941

Where two individuals, husband and wife, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of flashlights, electric mixers, sport jackets, cosmetics, cameras, billfolds, pen and pencil sets, bedspreads, radios, raincoats, watches, clocks, silverware, vacuum cleaners, and other articles of merchandise;

In carrying on their business pursuant to a scheme, as below set forth, under which they distributed more than a million merchandise offers, received orders for such merchandise from thousands of individuals, dealers, and others to whom such offers were made, making sales during a recent 12-month period amounting to about $1,800,000, and receiving orders from approximately 1 percent of those to whom said offers were sent, and reorders or additional orders from about 25 percent of those to whom sales had been made—

Made use of selling plan or method which involved distribution by mail to individuals, without prior receipt of any request therefor, of certain literature and instructions, including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, illustrations, and descriptions of articles of merchandise and circulars explaining their plan for the sale thereof and allotting premiums or prizes and which included, as typical, offer of certain portable radio receiving sets by mail through an explanatory letter accompanied by an illustrative and descriptive advertisement, a push card and a printed order form for the purchase of the two radios involved and four combinations of pen and pencil at a total price of $16.95 (as called for by said card), together with a business reply envelope addressed to said individuals under their trade name, and plan under which, as explained to recipient, person selecting from list of feminine names displayed on card that name, after sale of all chances, found to correspond with name concealed under card's seal, received one of said radios, amount paid by each customer or purchaser was dependent upon number disclosed through disk selected in accordance with feminine name chosen, and operator of card, i. e., recipient of particular offer, was compensated, upon remitting to said individuals the total sum thus called for, by the right to retain one of said radios, upon the shipment to him of said various merchandise, for distribution to customers secured by him in response to the invitation and suggestion contained in the circular letter and as above set forth; and thereby

With result that many persons were attracted by their said sales plan or method and element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell their merchandise in preference to that of their said competitors, whereby substantial trade in commerce was unfairly diverted from said competitors to them, and substantial injury done to competition in commerce:

Held, That said acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.

Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr., and Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Mr. Albert A. Jones, of Washington, D. C., and Mr. Jacob Rabkin, of New York City, for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Philip Harry Koolish and Sara Allen Koolish, individually and trading as Standard Distributing Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Philip Harry Koolish and Sara Allen Koolish, are individuals trading as Standard Distributing Co. The principal place of business of the respondents was formerly 6227 Broadway, Chicago, Ill. The principal place of business of respondents is now located at 2222 Diversey, Chicago, Ill. Respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past, have been engaged in the sale and distribution of flashlights, electric mixers, sport jackets, cosmetics, cameras, billfolds, pen and pencil sets, bedspreads, radios, raincoats, watches, clocks, silverware, vacuum cleaners, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said products, when sold, to be transported from their aforesaid places of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been a course of trade by respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are and have been in competition with other individuals and partnerships and with corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States or the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing their merchandise, furnish and have furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes by which said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof wholly by lot or chance. The method or sales plan adopted and used by respondents was and is substantially as follows:

One of respondents' push cards bears 15 feminine names with ruled columns on the reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 15 small partially perforated disks on the face of which is printed the word "Push." Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card bears a legend or instructions as follows:

Sales of respondents' merchandise by means of said push card are made in accordance with the above-described legend or instructions. Said prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legend or instructions. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives an article of merchandise or nothing for the amount of money paid and which of said articles of merchandise the purchaser is to receive, if any, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondents furnish and have furnished various push cards accompanied by said order blanks, instructions, and other printed matter for use in the sale and distribution of their merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondents furnish the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondents' merchandise, in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to, and place in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said sales plan or method in the sale of their merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents, as above alleged are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert substantial trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on May 18, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon Philip Harry Koolish and Sara Allen Koolish, individually, and trading as Standard Distributing Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by attorneys for the respondents before W. W. Sheppard, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and the said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments of counsel; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Philip Harry Koolish and Sara Allen Koolish, are individuals trading as Standard Distributing Co. and having their principal place of business at 2222 Diversey, Chicago, Ill. Respondent Sara Allen Koolish is the wife of respondent Philip Harry Koolish. Respondents are now, and since January 1939 have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of flashlights, electric mixers, sport jackets, cosmetics, cameras, billfolds, pen and pencil sets, bedspreads, radios, raincoats, watches, clocks, silverware, vacuum cleaners, and other articles of merchandise.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business respondents cause, and have caused, articles of merchandise, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, a course of trade by respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. The selling plan or method used by respondents in the sale and distribution of merchandise is to distribute by mail to individuals, without the prior receipt of any request therefor, certain literature and instructions including among other things push cards, order blanks, illustrations, and descriptions of articles of merchandise, and circulars explaining their plan for the sale of such merchandise and of allotting premiums or prizes. A typical instance of respondents' merchandising plan is illustrated by the offering for sale of certain portable radio receiving sets by mailing to various individuals a circular letter which stated in part:

HERE'S ALL YOU NEED TO DO TO GET YOUR RADIO:

Merely show the enclosed illustration to your friends * * * neighbors * * * relatives * * * folks you work with * * * persons you trade with and so on; and explain to them how they may obtain one of these KENT RADIOS.

The sales card contains a list of girls' names and under each seal is a concealed number. Numbers are not consecutive. Person selecting No. 1 pays 1¢, No. 5 pays 5¢, No. 9 pays 9¢, No. 15 pays 15¢, No. 19 pays 19¢, No. 22 pays 22¢, all others pay only 29¢. NONE HIGHER.

HOW TO SEND FOR YOUR RADIO: Simply fill out enclosed order form. Immediately upon receipt of your order we will RUSH to you 2 KENT RADIOS and 4 COMBINATION PEN & PENCILS. You may keep one RADIO and may give the other RADIO to the party who selected the name which is found under the large seal.

This letter was accompanied by an illustrated and descriptive advertisement of the radio receiving sets offered for sale and by a push card having on its face 62 partially perforated small disks each printed with the word "Push" and a feminine name and having concealed within it a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The card also has on its face a partially perforated large disk with the notation, "Do not remove seal until entire card is sold," the statement, "NAME UNDER SEAL RECEIVES A KENT RADIO," an illustration of the radio receiving set, and a statement similar to that set out in the extracts from the letter quoted above showing the amounts to be paid by players and bearing the notation that Nos. 1, 9, 19, and 29 each receive a combination pen and pencil. The back of the card has the same feminine names printed on it as appear on the partially perforated disks on the face of the card, each followed by a blank space intended for the use of the operator of the card in writing in the name of the player pushing each of the 62 partially perforated disks, together with a further explanation of the nature of the card and the statement:

Upon receipt of your order we immediately ship you the articles indicated on order blank. This card is given to you absolutely free. If you wish you can use this as a sales card.

The above-described material is accompanied by a printed order form for the purchase of two Kent radios and four combination pen and pencils at a total price of $16.95, together with a business reply envelope addressed to respondents under their trade name, Standard Distributing Co. The sum of the payments called for by the push card is $16.95.

The offerings made by respondents of other articles of merchandise are in substantially the same form, varying only in detail. In each instance the total amount of the payments called for by the push card is exactly equal to the amount stated on the printed order form addressed to respondents as the price for the principal article of merchandise and such subsidiary prizes or premiums as are provided for on the push card, plus one additional article of merchandise identical to the principal prize or premium named on the push card. It is intended and provided by respondents' sales plan that one of the two identical principal articles of merchandise shall be retained by the operator of the push card and the other, and such subsidiary prizes or premiums as may be provided in the particular offer, shall be allotted to the player or players selecting the concealed numbers which correspond to the predetermined number or numbers entitling the player or players to such prizes or premiums as may be specified.

PAR. 4. Respondents have distributed more than a million of the aforesaid merchandise offers accompanied by push cards in substantially the form described above and have received orders for such merchandise from thousands of individuals, dealers, and others to whom such offers were mailed. Respondents' sales of merchandise pursuant to the aforesaid plan for the 12 months ending November 30, 1940, amounted to approximately $1,800,000. In most instances the orders for merchandise received by respondents are for precisely the articles of merchandise listed on the printed order form mailed out with a push card and cover two identical principal articles of merchandise and such subsidiary premiums or prizes as are named on the push card. Respondents receive such orders for merchandise from approximately 1 percent of the individuals, dealers, or others to whom push cards are sent, and when the shipments are made to such purchasers respondents send with such shipments other literature and push cards offering different types of merchandise under the same plan. Reorders or additional orders are received from about 25 percent of those to whom a sale has been made.

PAR. 5. The Commission concludes that many of the individuals, dealers, and others to whom respondents furnished said push cards have used, and do use, the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing merchandise which they buy from respondents. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public according to respondents' sales plan involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of merchandise. The use by respondents of the aforesaid sales plan or method in the sale and distribution of their merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by the aid of and through the use thereof, is a practice contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 6. In the sale and distribution of their various articles of merchandise respondents are in competition with many other persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute like merchandise, some of whom are unwilling to adopt and use a sales plan or method similar to that used by respondents, or any method involving a game of chance or any other method contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods substantial trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and as a result thereof substantial injury has been done, and is being done, by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto taken before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments of counsel, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondents Philip Harry Koolish and Sara Allen Koolish, individually, and trading as Standard Distributing Co., or under any other name, jointly or severally, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of any merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others any merchandise, together with push or pull cards, punchboards, or any other lottery devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such merchandise to the public.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, either with any merchandise or separately, which push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of push cards, pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall, within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

INLAID OPTICAL CORPORATION

Docket 4178. Complaint, July 11, 1940—Decision, Aug. 21, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of lenses and eyeglasses, including reading glasses and sunglasses, importing uncut lenses from Japan, and processing and mounting them in frames, in course of which the label attached to each bearing legend "Made in Japan," was removed, and also manufacturing and purchasing lenses of domestic origin with which it customarily intermingled the processed Japanese lenses in its ready-to-wear glasses—

(a) Sold and distributed said glasses to chain stores and dealers, without any label, mark or words thereon indicating the Japanese or foreign origin of lenses above referred to, frames of which were made in the United States; and

(b) Represented, through salesmen and representatives, that its eyeglasses, assembled from lenses intermingled as above set forth and of which about 25 percent contained such imported lenses, were of domestic origin;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public, which has a decided preference for products made in the United States over those made in Japan and many other foreign countries, and members of which have become accustomed to examining articles prior to purchase for indication of foreign origin, in absence of which they assume such products to be domestic, into the erroneous belief that its said eyeglasses were wholly of domestic origin, thereby inducing such public to purchase its said products, and placing in the hands of unscrupulous and uninformed dealers means to mislead and deceive members of said public:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Lewis C. Russell, trial examiner.

Mr. Merle P. Lyon for the Commission.

Adler & Flint, of Providence, R. I., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Inlaid Optical Corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

of the laws of the State of Rhode Island, with its principal office and place of business located at 1058 Broad Street, in the city of Providence of said State. Said respondent is now, and for some time past has been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing lenses and eyeglasses, including reading glasses and sunglasses, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent has maintained, and maintains, a course of trade in said products in said commerce, and has caused, and now causes, said products, when sold or ordered, to be shipped and transported from its place of business in the State of Rhode Island to purchasers, including retailers, resellers, and users thereof, located in various States of the United States other than the State of Rhode Island, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as above described, and in connection with the sale and distribution of its said products in said commerce, respondent has caused certain quantities of lenses for said eyeglasses and sunglasses to be imported from the country of Japan. At the time of importation into the United States, said lenses have been, and are, all labeled or marked with the word or words "Japan" or "Made in Japan," indicating that the country of origin is Japan. After said lenses were and are received by respondent, as so marked, it thereafter caused and causes the said labeling or marking to be removed from said lenses, and thereafter offered and offers for sale, and sold and sells, the same mounted in frames, to the aforesaid purchasers, including dealers, resellers, and users thereof, without any label, mark, or words thereon indicating the Japanese or foreign origin of the said lenses.

PAR. 3. By virtue of the practice, heretofore and now established, of imprinting and otherwise labeling or marking products of foreign origin, and their containers, with the name of the country of their origin, in legible English words, in a conspicuous place, and as required by law, a substantial portion of the buying and consuming public has come to rely, and now relies, upon such imprinting, labeling, or marking, and is influenced thereby, to distinguish and discriminate between competing products of foreign and domestic origin, inclusive of eyeglasses and sunglasses having foreign-made or imported lenses. When products composed in whole or substantial part of imported articles are offered for sale and sold in the channels of trade in commerce throughout the United States and its territorial possessions, and in the District of Columbia, they are purchased and accepted as and for, and taken to be, products wholly of domestic manufacture and origin unless the same are imprinted, labeled, or marked in a manner which informs purchasers that the said products, or parts thereof, are of foreign origin, and not of domestic origin.

At all times material to this complaint there has been, and now is, among said members of the buying and consuming public, including purchasers and users of eyeglasses and sunglasses, in and throughout the United States and its territorial possessions, and in the District of Columbia, a substantial and subsisting preference for products which are wholly of domestic manufacture or origin, as distinguished from products of foreign manufacture or origin and from products which are in substantial part made of materials or parts of Japanese or foreign manufacture or origin.

PAR. 4. The practice of respondent, as aforesaid, in offering for sale, selling, and distributing its eyeglasses, including reading glasses and sunglasses, made of lenses having Japanese or foreign origin, without any imprinting, labeling, or marking thereon to indicate to purchasers that the said lenses or glasses are of Japanese or foreign origin, has had, and has, the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive purchasers and members of the buying and consuming public into the false and erroneous belief that the said glasses, and all the parts thereof, are wholly of domestic manufacture and origin, and into the purchase thereof in the reliance upon such erroneous belief.

The aforesaid practice further places in the hands of retailers and resellers of respondent's said products a means wherewith to mislead and deceive purchasers and members of the buying and consuming public into the false and erroneous belief that the said glasses referred to, and all the parts thereof, are wholly of domestic origin, and thus into the purchase thereof in reliance upon such erroneous belief.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 11, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Inlaid Optical Corporation, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introducted by Merle P. Lyon, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Walter Adler, attorney for the respondent, before Lewis C. Russell, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed by the respondent or oral argument requested), and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Inlaid Optical Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Rhode Island, with its principal office and place of business located at 1058 Broad Street in the city of Providence, in the State of Rhode Island.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of lenses and eyeglasses, including reading glasses and sunglasses, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes its said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Rhode Island to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business the respondent purchases and imports uncut lenses manufactured and fully ground in Japan. When such lenses are imported into the United States they bear a label or tag attached to each lens bearing the legend "Made in Japan" and usually bear a further label or tag giving the focal strength of said lenses, although sometimes the information as to the focal strength appears upon the package instead of the lens itself.

When such lenses are so received, they are further processed by the respondent, which processing consists of cleaning and cutting said lenses to the desired shape and size, finishing the edges, drilling such holes as may be necessary, and attaching to frame or mounting. In the course of this processing, the labels or tags bearing the legend "Made in Japan" are removed from such lenses, and thereafter said lenses so mounted are sold and distributed to chain stores and other dealers without any label, mark, or words thereon indicating the Japanese or foreign origin of said lenses. The frames to which said lenses are mounted are made in the United States and the completed eyeglasses retail for from 25 cents to $1, depending on the frame used. Approximately 25 percent of the ready-to-wear glasses sold and distributed by the respondent contain lenses imported from Japan.

In addition to the lenses imported from Japan, the respondent also manufactures and purchases lenses of domestic origin for use in its ready-to-wear glasses. It is customary for the respondent, after processing the uncut lenses imported from Japan, to intermingle such imported lenses with lenses of its own manufacture and those purchased from domestic sources. In the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its ready-to-wear glasses assembled from such intermingled lenses, the respondent has represented, through salesmen and representatives, that its eyeglasses were of domestic origin.

PAR. 4. There is among the members of the purchasing public a decided preference for products which are manufactured in the United States over products manufactured in Japan and many other foreign countries. Members of the purchasing public have become accustomed to examining articles prior to purchase for markings or tags which indicate that the product is of foreign origin, and when products bear no markings indicating that they are of foreign origin the purchasing public assumes that such products are of domestic origin.

PAR. 5. The practice of respondent in obliterating or obscuring from its lenses the legend "Made in Japan" and in offering for sale, selling, and distributing such lenses mounted on frames without disclosing that the lenses are made in Japan has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent's eyeglasses are wholly of domestic origin and manufacture. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief engendered as herein set forth, a substantial portion of the purchasing public are induced to, and do, purchase respondent's products.

By the use of the practices herein set forth, respondent has also placed in the hands of unscrupulous and uninformed dealers a means and instrumentality whereby such dealers have been, and are, enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, answer of the respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Lewis C. Russell, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiner thereon and brief filed in support of the complaint, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Inlaid Optical Corporation, a corporation, its officers, directors, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of lenses and eyeglasses, including reading glasses and sunglasses, and other similar products in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Advertising, offering for sale, or selling lenses or eyeglasses including reading glasses and sunglasses, or other similar products, which are manufactured in whole or in part in Japan or any other foreign country, without clearly disclosing the foreign origin of such products.

2. Representing in any manner whatsoever that respondent's products are made in the United States when in fact such products are manufactured in whole or in part in Japan or any other foreign country.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Pursuant to the provisions of the act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act) as amended by section 1 of an act entitled "An act to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes," approved June 19, 1936 (the Robinson-Patman Act), the Federal Trade Commission, on April 9, 1941, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents named in the caption hereof, charging them with violating the provisions of paragraph (c) of section 2 of the said act as amended.

After the issuance and service of said complaint, answers admitting all the material allegations of the complaint were filed on behalf of respondents Reed-Harlin Grocer Co.; John R. Reed and Orr M. Reed, individuals trading under the firm name and style of West Plains Brokerage Co.; Inness Bros., Inc.; and Louis S. Taube, Theodore Taube, and Lloyd B. Holden, individuals trading under the firm name and style of L. S. Taube & Co. Answers admitting and denying various material facts alleged in the complaint were filed on behalf of all other respondents. Thereafter, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents Ady & Milburn, Inc., a corporation; Arkansas State Rice Milling Co., a corporation; William D. Wright and Frank E. Hockensmith, individuals trading under the firm name and style of Midwest Bean Co., and The Great Western Sugar Co., a corporation, upon motion, permission to withdraw their said answers, and to substitute therefor answers admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in the complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearings as to said facts, and expressly waiving the filing of briefs and oral arguments. Said substitute answers were duly filed in the office of the Commission. The respondents Arkansas State Rice Milling Co. and The Great Western Sugar Co., in their answers, stated they had no knowledge that the West Plains Brokerage Co. was not independent of the Reed-Harlin Grocer Co., or that the brokerage was used for the benefit of respondent Reed-Harlin Grocer Co.

IN THE MATTER OF

JAMES J. COLLINS, CHARLES J. HEPP AND CATHERINE HEPP, TRADING AS ROCKDALE MONUMENT COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4404. Complaint, Dec. 6, 1940—Decision, Aug. 22, 1941

Where a firm engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of imitation granite monuments and markers; by means of advertisements in periodicals of general circulation and in circulars, catalogs and other advertising media, directly and by implication—

(a) Represented that the prices at which they offered their products were wholesale and special or reduced, and substantially lower than those at which they sold said products in the usual course of business, and that they were the only dealers offering a plan by which monuments and markers could be purchased at low prices on the installment plan; facts being the prices in question were the regular and customary prices, and many other dealers sold such products at low prices and on installments;

(b) Represented that their said products were of natural granite, of a permanent nature, and of certain specified weights; when they were not natural granite, monuments and markers of which have an established reputation for beauty, durability, and other preeminent qualities and are consequently decidedly preferred over those of cast or artificial stone, but were made of a mixture of cement and granite chips molded into the desired form and ground and polished to resemble natural granite, would deteriorate much more rapidly than natural granite, and in many instances were substantially less in weight than represented; and

(c) Made use in their advertising literature of drawings and cuts purporting to show the size, color, nature, and quality of their monuments, when in fact said products were not of the size, color, nature, and quality illustrated;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, and of causing it, because of such belief, to purchase substantial quantities of their said products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that James J. Collins, Charles J. Hepp, and Catherine Hepp, individually and trading as

Rockdale Monument Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, James J. Collins, Charles J. Hepp, and Catherine Hepp, are individuals trading as Rockdale Monument Co., with their office and principal place of business in Joliet, Ill. Respondents are now, and for more than 2 years last past have been, engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling imitation granite monuments and markers in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents cause their said products, when sold, to be shipped from their said place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their said monuments and markers in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, and to induce the purchase of their said products, the respondents have disseminated false and misleading statements and representations with respect to said products, such statements and representations being inserted in magazines having a general circulation and in circulars, catalogs, and other advertising matter, distributed among prospective purchasers. Among and typical of such false and misleading representations, are the following:

You buy from us at wholesale prices.

Special Offer. Rockdale marker (as illustrated) specially priced, $12.50—$25.00 value.

We are the only company offering an easy payment plan on the purchase of monuments or markers by mail at the low prices as shown in our catalog.

Rockdale monuments and markers have been skillfully designed and executed by expert stone cutters.

They have been styled and cut by expert artisans.

Dignified beauty and dependable durability.

Flint-like hardness. Made of the finest grades of granite aggregates.

A lasting memorial that will endure through the years.

Model A–10 * * * Approximate weight, 470 lbs.

Model A–11 * * * Approximate weight, 600 lbs.

PAR. 3. Through the use of the foregoing representations, and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent and have represented, directly or by implications, that the prices at which respondents offer their products for sale are wholesale prices and are special or reduced prices, being substantially lower than the prices at which such products are sold by respondents in the usual course of business; that respondents are the only dealers offering a plan by which monuments and markers may be purchased at low prices on the installment plan; that respondents' products are of natural granite; that said products are of a permanent nature; that said monuments and markers are of certain specified weights.

PAR. 4. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, the prices at which respondents offer their products for sale are not wholesale prices, nor are said prices special or reduced prices but are the regular and customary prices at which such products are offered for sale and sold by respondents in the usual and ordinary course of business. Repondents are not the only dealers offering monuments and markers for sale at low prices on the installment or partial payment plan, there being many other dealers who sell such products at low prices and on the installment plan. Respondents' products are not of natural granite but are cast stone or artificial stone, said products being made of a mixture of cement and granite chips molded into the desired forms, and ground and polished to resemble natural granite. Respondents' products are not of a permanent nature but deteriorate much more rapidly than natural granite. In many instances the monuments and markers represented by respondents as being of certain specified weights are substantially lighter in weight than represented.

A further practice on the part of the respondents is the use in their advertising literature of drawings, cuts, and picturizations purporting to represent the size, color, nature, and quality of respondents' products, when in fact such products are not of the size, color, nature, or quality so represented.

PAR. 5. Monuments and markers of natural granite have established among the members of the purchasing public a reputation for beauty, durability, and other preeminent qualities, and as a result of such reputation the purchasing public has a decided preference for such products over monuments and markers which are cast stone or artificial stone.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief, that such statements and representations are true, and to cause the public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' products.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on December 6, 1940, issued, and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents James J. Collins, Charles J. Hepp, and Catherine Hepp, individually and trading as Rockdale Monument Co., charging them with unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On December 26, 1940, the respondents filed their answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, at a hearing held in Chicago, Ill., on May 22, 1941, before Andrew B. Duvall, an examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, certain testimony was received and a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that, subject to the approval of the Commission, a statement of facts read into the record may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto, and that the Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its findings as to the facts (including the inferences which it may draw from the said stipulated facts) and its conclusion based thereon, and issue its order disposing of this proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Counsel for respondents expressly waived the filing of the trial examiner's report upon the evidence. Thereafter, this proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, testimony, and stipulation as to the facts, said stipulation having been approved, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Charles J. Hepp, Catherine Hepp, and James J. Collins, are individuals who, prior to October 15, 1940, composed a partnership trading under the name Rockdale Monument Co., with their office and principal place of business at Joliet, Ill. On October 15, 1940, respondent James J. Collins severed his connection with the partnership and he has not since that date been interested in the business conducted under the name Rockdale Monument Co. All of said individuals, for more than 2 years prior to October 15, 1940, had been engaged in, and the respondents Charles J. Hepp and Catherine Hepp are now engaged in, the business of manufacturing and offering for sale and selling imitation granite monuments and markers in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District fo Columbia.

Respondents Charles J. Hepp and Catherine Hepp now cause their said products, and all of said respondents prior to October 15, 1940, caused their said products, when sold, to be shipped from said place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents, during the respective periods of time above mentioned, maintained a course of trade in said monuments and markers in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their said business, prior to October 15, 1940, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said products, the respondents disseminated false and misleading statements and representations with respect to said products. Such statements and representations were inserted in magazines having a general circulation and in circulars, catalogs, and other advertising media distributed among prospective purchasers. Among and typical of such false and misleading representations are the following:

You buy from us at wholesale prices.

Special Offer. Rockdale marker (as illustrated) specially priced, $12.50—$25.00 value.

We are the only company offering an easy payment plan on the purchase of monuments or markers by mail at the low prices as shown in our catalog.

Rockdale monuments and markers have been skillfully designed and executed by expert stone cutters.

They have been styled and cut by expert artisans.

Dignified beauty and dependable durability.

Flint-like hardness. Made of the finest grades of granite aggregates.

A lasting memorial that will endure through the years.

Model A–10 * * * Approximate weight, 470 lbs.

Model A–11 * * * Approximate weight, 600 lbs.

PAR. 3. Through the use of the foregoing representations, and others of similar import and meaning not specifically set out herein, the respondents represented, directly and by implication, that the prices at which respondents offered their products for sale were wholesale prices and were special or reduced prices, substantially lower than the prices at which such products were sold by respondents in the usual course of business; that respondents were the only dealers offering a plan by which monuments and markers could be purchased at low prices on the installment plan; that respondents' products were of natural granite; that said products were of a permanent nature; and that said monuments and markers were of certain specified weights.

PAR. 4. The foregoing representations were false and misleading. In truth and in fact, the prices at which respondents offered their products for sale were not wholesale prices, nor were said prices special or reduced prices but the regular and customary prices at which such products were offered for sale and sold by respondents in the usual and ordinary course of business. Respondents were not the only dealers offering monuments and markers for sale at low prices on the installment or partial payment plan, there being many other dealers who sell such products at low prices and on the installment plan. Respondents' products were not natural granite but were cast stone or artificial stone; said products were made of a mixture of cement and granite chips molded into the desired forms, and ground and polished to resemble natural granite. Respondents' products were not of a permanent nature but would deteriorate much more rapidly than natural granite. In many instances, the monuments and markers represented by respondents as being of certain specified weights were substantially less in weight than represented.

A further practice on the part of respondents was the use in their advertising literature of drawings, cuts, and picturizations purporting to show the size, color, nature, and quality of respondents' products, when in fact respondents' products were not of the size, color, nature, and quality illustrated in said drawings, cuts, and picturizations.

PAR. 5. Monuments and markers of natural granite have established among the members of the purchasing public a reputation for beauty, durability, and other preeminent qualities, and as a result of such reputation the purchasing public has a decided preference for such products over monuments and markers which are cast stone or artificial stone.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations had the tendency and capacity to, and did, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations were true, and caused the public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondents, testimony and a stipulation as to the facts entered into which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondents herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based theron and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, James J. Collins, Charles J. Hepp, and Catherine Hepp, individually and trading as Rockdale Monument Co., or trading under any other name or names, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of monuments and markers in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that usual and customary prices at which said products are sold are "wholesale," special or reduced prices or anything other than the regular retail prices for said products.

2. Representing that respondents are the only dealers in monuments offering such products for sale at low prices on the installment plan.

3. Representing that said products are natural granite, or that said products are of permanent nature.

5. Using cuts, drawings, or picturizations of monuments to show the size, color, nature, or quality of respondents' products which do not accurately reflect the actual size, color, nature, or quality of the monuments so illustrated.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

(5) Agreed not to and did not sell their products at a price less, or a discount greater, or on terms and conditions more favorable to the purchaser, than those contained in any of the price lists so filed, and that published by the seller; and

Where their said section controlled and directed by its executive committee—

(b) Received from its members and disseminated among them information as to the prices, discounts, terms, and conditions of sale; and

(c) Adopted and agreed upon, in cooperation with such members, rules and regulations designed to prevent any deviation by members from the prices, discounts, terms, and conditions of sale fixed and agreed upon as above set forth;

With the result that trade in commerce in products in question was unduly and unlawfully restricted and restrained, prices to the consumer were substantially enhanced and maintained at artificial levels, public was also deprived of benefits which would follow from normal competition among said concerns, and competition was eliminated and there was a tendency and capacity to create in said corporations and concerns a monopoly in sale of said products:

Held, That said understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies, and the things done, pursuant thereto, under the circumstances set forth, constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the corporations, the association, and the individuals hereinafter described and named as respondents, and the corporations and individuals in the classes hereinafter described of whom those named as respondents are representatives, have been and are now using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Scientific Apparatus Makers of America is a corporation existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office at 20 North Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill. The businesses of the members of the respondent Scientific Apparatus Makers of America is varied and is generally referred to as that of manufacturing and distributing scientific and technical apparatus and supplies. Said respondent has classified the businesses of its several members and grouped its members into sections, which are as follows: Industrial Instrument Section; Laboratory Furniture Section; Laboratory Supplies Section; Mechanical & Electrical Specialties Section; Optical Instrument Section; Steam and Fluid Specialties Section; Surveying-Drafting-Coaters Section.

Each of these sections is and acts as a trade association for the members of the respondent Scientific Apparatus Makers of America whose business has been classified as belonging to a particular section. Respondent Scientific Apparatus Makers of America aided, abetted, and encouraged the Surveying-Drafting-Coaters Section in planning and doing the things and acts hereinafter alleged to have been done and performed.

PAR. 2. Respondents Carl S. Hallauer, R. E. Gillmor, and John M. Roberts are president, vice president and secretary-treasurer respectively, of the respondent Scientific Apparatus Makers of America, and respondent Karl L. Keller is named as a respondent herein individually and as a member of said board of directors and as representing each and all of the other members thereof. devices and lettering pens for the drafting profession; slide rules; planimeters and integrators; surveying instruments; surveying barometers; forestry instruments; such as tree-calipers, hypsometers, increment borers, etc.; current meters and water stage registers; rods and poles for surveyors use; tapes, chains, and plumb bobs, for surveyors, engineers, and builders use.

Berger, and R. Fred Allin are members of the executive committee of the association respondent. These respondents and their predecessors and successors in office have and do control and direct the policies, practices, and activities of said respondent association in doing the things and acts hereinafter alleged to have been done and performed. The predecessors and successors in office of these respondents are so numerous and change so often that it is impracticable to name them as parties respondent and bring them before the Commission without manifest inconvenience and delay and the respondents Paul J. Bruning, Karl L. Keller, W. A. Berger, and R. Fred Allin are made parties herein individually, as members of said executive committee, and as representatives of the other members past, present, and future.

PAR. 5. Respondent, Charles Bruning Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York with its office and principal place of business at 102 Reade Street, New York, N. Y., and with offices and places of business in various States of the United States which it operates and controls through wholly owned subsidiary corporations.

Respondent, Jacob H. Weil, Edwin H. Weil, and Manfred R. Krauskopf, are individuals trading under the name and style J. H. Weil & Co. and have their office and principal place of business at 1315 Cherry Street, Philadephia, Pa.

These respondents will hereinafter be referred to as the member respondents and all of them are now or have been members of the respondent Scientific Apparatus Makers of America and the respondent Surveying-Drafting-Coaters Section, hereinabove described. The members of the respondent Surveying-Drafting-Coating Section are approximately 40 in number, which number varies from time to time by the dropping out of old and the addition of new members and they constitute a class so numerous that it is impracticable at any given time to name as parties respondent and bring before the Commission each and all of said members without manifest inconvenience and delay, and the members named are made parties respondent separately and as representatives of each and all other members as a class.

PAR. 6. The above-described member respondents are all engaged in the sale and distribution of one or more of the products described in paragraph 3 hereof to wholesalers of, dealers in, and consumers of, such products located throughout the United States, and pursuant to such sales, and as a part thereof, regularly have shipped and do ship such products to their said customers at their said respective places of business located at various points in the several States of the United States other than in the States of the origin of such shipments.

Prior to the adoption of the practices hereinafter alleged, these member respondents were in active and substantial competition with each other, and with other members of the industry, some of whom have been members of the respondent association and others of whom have not been members of the respondent association, in making and seeking to make sales of their said products in such commerce, and, but for the facts hereinafter alleged, such active and substantial competition would have continued to the present time, and the said member respondents would now be in active and substantial competition with each other and with members of the industry not presently members of the respondent association. Said member respondents now constitute, and have during all of the times mentioned herein constituted substantially all of the sellers to wholesalers of, dealers in, and consumers of, said products and especially so in regard to blueprint paper, and other reproduction papers and cloths. Said member respondents control and dominate said industry in the United States and thereby control the practices of the industry as a whole.

Blueprint paper, together with many of the other products sold and distributed by the member respondents, is used extensively throughout the United States by manufacturers, builders, and others in drafting, preparing and reproducing designs, plans, and specifications for new and changed productions of whatever nature. Many manufacturers, builders, and others, including the United States and State Governments and municipalities, or some agency thereof, because of the substantial quantity used, purchase blueprint paper and others of said products only as the result of the submission of bids by the member respondents and others, from which bids is selected the member of the industry from whom purchases of said products will be made for a given time or in a stated quantity.

PAR. 7. Prior to the formation of the respondent association, member respondents Charles Bruning Co., Inc., The Huey Co., The Frederick Post Co., Eugene Deitzen Co., Inc., and other members of the industry, on or about July 15, 1932, entered into and thereafter carried out an understanding, agreement, combination, and conspiracy for the purpose and with the effect of restricting, restraining, and monopolizing, and eliminating competition in, the sale of blueprint paper, and others of the products hereinabove mentioned, in trade and commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. From time to time members of the industry other than those herein named as respondents became parties to, and carried out, said understanding, agreement, combination, and conspiracy.

PAR. 8. Pursuant to said understanding, agreement, combination, and conspiracy, and in furtherance thereof, the said member respondents Charles Bruning Co., Inc., The Huey Co., The Frederick Post Co., Eugene Deitzen Co., Inc., and the other members of the industry parties thereto, have done and performed and still do and perform the following acts and things:

1. Agreed to fix and maintain and have fixed and maintained the prices at which said products are sold.

2. Agreed to fix and maintain and have fixed and maintained uniform terms and conditions for all sales made, including, but without limitation, classification of customers, freight allowances, duration of and optional clauses in contracts.

3. Agreed to induce and have, through threats, coercion, and persuasion, induced members of the industry, not parties to said understanding, agreement, combination, and conspiracy, to participate in and cooperate with the parties thereto in carrying out said understanding, agreement, combination, and conspiracy.

4. Agreed to require and have required dealers purchasing said products for resale to consumers to maintain the prices fixed and agreed upon by the respondents.

5. Agreed to submit and have submitted uniform and identical bids on said products when requests were made for such bids.

6. Agreed to and have interfered with the source of supply of raw paper of certain members of the industry who did not adhere to the schedule of prices fixed and agreed upon by the said respondents.

PAR. 9. Subsequent to the entering into and carrying out of the aforementioned understanding, agreement, combination, and conspiracy by the parties thereto, the respondent association was formed by the respondents Scientific Apparatus Makers of America and the member respondents and thereafter, and on or about the 3d day of June 1935 and on divers days and dates thereafter, the said respondents entered into and thereafter carried out understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies for the purpose and with the effect of restricting, restraining, and monopolizing, and eliminating competition in, the sale of blueprint paper and the other products described in paragraph 3 hereof in trade and commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Pursuant to said subsequent understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies and in furtherance thereof the said respondents have done and performed and still do and perform the acts and things done and performed pursuant to the understanding, agreement, combination, and conspiracy mentioned in paragraph 8 hereof and do and perform in addition thereto the following acts and things:

1. Each of the members of the respondent association agreed to and does file with the respondent association a schedule of the prices, including discounts and the terms and conditions of all sales, at which such member will and does sell said products.

2. Each of said members of respondent association agreed that the prices filed by the respective members could be deviated from only under certain conditions, but agreed that under those conditions they would not and they do not sell at a price less, a discount greater, or on more favorable terms and conditions than those granted by the terms of the price list filed by any other member respondent showing the lowest price, the greatest discount and the most favorable terms of sale.

3. The respondent association collects from and disseminates among the member respondents information as to prices, discounts and the terms and conditions of sales which enables each of said member respondents to know what prices will be charged by all of the other member respondents. Said member respondents exchange information among themselves in regard to the price discounts and terms and conditions of sale to be submitted by such members when bids are requested.

4. In many instances the respondents declare the bids requested by purchasers to be "open," because some member of the industry bidding in such instances is not a participant in the carrying out of said understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies and is selling the products of the industry at prices less than those fixed by the member respondents, and in such cases the member respondents collusively submit identical bids at prices lower than those that would be otherwise submitted so as to prevent such nonparticipating member of the industry from securing any substantial amount of business and to compel such member to become a party to said understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies.

5. Said member respondents and the respondent association have adopted and agreed upon detailed rules and regulations designed and intended to prevent any deviation on the part of the member respondents from the price fixed and agreed upon as hereinabove alleged.

6. Said respondents used and are using other methods and means designed to suppress and prevent competition and restrict and restrain the sale of said products in said commerce.

PAR. 10. Each of said respondents acted in concert and in cooperation with one or more of the other respondents in doing and performing the acts and things hereinabove alleged in furtherance of said understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies.

PAR. 11. Said understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies, and the things done thereunder and pursuant thereto, as hereinabove alleged, have had and do have the effect of unduly and unlawfully restricting and restraining trade and commerce in said products between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; of substantially enhancing prices to the consuming public and maintaining prices at artificial levels and otherwise depriving the public of the benefits that would flow from normal competition among and between the member respondents; of eliminating competition, with the tendency and capacity of creating a monopoly in the sale of said products in said commerce. Said understandings, agreements, combinations and conspiracies, and the things done thereunder and pursuant thereto and in furtherance thereof, as above alleged, constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," and are to the prejudice of the public.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 29th day of March, A. D., 1937, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents named in the caption hereof, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of answers thereto by all the respondents except Carl S. Hallauer, R. E. Gillmor, The Huey Co., Economy Blue Print Products, Inc., and the United States Blue Print Paper Co.—(answers filed by the three last-named respondents were stricken by the Commission)—testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by the attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by attorneys for the respondents, before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission theretofore designated by it to serve in this proceeding. Said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the said complaint, the answers thereto, the testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, the report of the trial examiners and the exceptions thereto, and oral arguments of the attorney for the Commission and attorneys for respondents. And the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Scientific Apparatus Makers of America is a nonprofit membership corporation without capital stock; for brevity it will hereinafter be referred to as "SAMA." It was incorporated on January 20, 1936, under the laws of the State of Illinois, and its principal office is located at No. 20 North Wacker Drive, in Chicago, Ill. At the time of the issuance of the complaint herein its officers were respondents Carl S. Hallauer, president; R. E. Gillmor, vice president, and John M. PAR. 2. The corporate respondent, SAMA, and its predecessor, an unincorporated association bearing the same name, were organized for the purpose of scientific research relating to the production and improvement of scientific instruments, the promotion and betterment of the industry, the prevention of unfair methods of competition, and the dissemination of scientific, structural, and other information relating to the promotion of the industry. The membership of the unincorporated association was as first limited to those engaged in the production of strictly scientific instruments, such as microscopes, clinical thermometers, test tubes, etc. Later, it and its successor, respondent corporation SAMA, extended the scope of its membership and classified the various groups into sections, according to their respective lines of business, namely; Individual Instrument Section; Clinical Thermometer Section; Automatic Control Section; Optical Instrument Section; Aeronautical, Nautical and Military Instrument Section; Laboratory Supply Section; Laboratory Furniture Section; Steam Fluid Specialty Section, and Surveying-Drafting-Coaters Section.

PAR. 3. Respondent Karl Keller (named in the complaint as Karl L. Keller), from September 27, 1933, until April 30, 1936, was chairman of its executive committee, and was succeeded on May 1, 1936, by respondent Paul J. Bruning, who since said date has been chairman of said committee. The members of the executive committee of respondent Association until April 30, 1937, were respondents Karl Keller, Paul J. Bruning, W. A. Berger, and R. Fred Allin. Respondent Association's membership is composed of those members of SAMA who are engaged in making, selling, and distributing one or more of the various products used by surveyors, engineers, builders, the drafting profession, and others, to wit: Prepared tracing papers, tracing cloths, blueprint papers and cloths, other reproduction papers and cloths, profile and cross-section papers and cloths in sheets and rolls, coordinate papers—graph sheets (except rolled sheets) for engineering and drafting purposes, field books for engineers, drawing instruments, drawing tools (scales, triangles, T-squares, curves), drawing machines, blueprinting machines and equipment, drawing boards and tables, filing cabinets for drawings and blueprints, lettering devices and lettering pens for the drafting profession, slide rules, planimeters and integrators, surveying instruments, surveying barometers, forestry instruments such as tree calipers, hypsometers, increment borers, current meters and water-stage registers, rods, and poles for surveyor's use, tapes, chains, and plumb bobs.

PAR. 4. Respondent Association's members have shipped and do ship their products as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof, to purchasers thereof at their respective places of business located in various States of the United States other than the States wherein said respondents' places of business are located and in which such shipments originate.

PAR. 5. Respondent, Charles Bruning Co., Inc., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business in the city and State of New York, and with offices and places of business in various States of the United States, which it operates and controls through wholly owned subsidiary corporations.

Respondent, The Huey Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business in Chicago, Ill.

Respondent, The Frederick Post Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business in Chicago, Ill.

Respondent, Eugene Dietzgen Co. (named in the complaint as "Deitzen"), is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its office and principal place of business in Chicago, Ill., and with branches at other points in the United States.

Respondent, Economy Blue Print Products, Inc., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business in Chicago, Ill.

Respondent, Keuffel & Esser Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its office and principal place of business in Hoboken, N. J. Respondent, Keuffel & Esser Co., the New Jersey corporation, owns the capital stock of a New York corporation with the same name, and the business of said respondent, except for sales made in New York, is conducted through branches operated by the subsidiary corporation.

Respondent, Alphonse A. Brunner, is an individual trading under the name Keystone Blue Paper Co., with his offce and principal place of business in Philadelphia, Pa.

Respondent, C. F. Pease Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Delaware with its office and principal place of business in Chicago, Ill.

Respondents, Jacob H. Weil, Edwin H. Weil and Manfred Krauskopf (named in the complaint as Manfred R. Krauskopf), are individuals trading under the name J. H. Weil & Co., and have their office and principal place of business in Philadelphia, Pa.

All of the aforenamed respondents were, at the date of the issuance of the complaint, members of respondent SAMA and of the respondent Association, and were and are engaged in the sale and distribution of some of the merchandise described in paragraph 3 hereof, and sell and distribute their merchandise as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof.

Respondent, Paul J. Bruning, is president of respondent Charles Bruning Co., Inc. Respondent, Karl Keller, is president of respondent Keuffel & Esser Co. Respondent, W. A. Berger is secretary of C. L. Berger & Sons, Inc., which is a member of the corporate respondent SAMA and of respondent Association. Respondent, R. Fred Allin, is vice president of respondent Eugene Dietzgen Co.

PAR. 6. In June or July 1932, representatives of respondent corporations Charles Bruning Co., Inc., The Frederick Post Co., Eugene Dietzgen Co., United States Blue Print Paper Co., and The Huey Co., together with 7 to 10 other manufacturers of blueprint paper and other products described in paragraph 3 hereof, held a meeting in the Statler Hotel, in Detroit, Mich., and but for 1 dissenter (not listed above), agreed that in the sale of their said products they would adhere strictly to the prices, discounts, terms, and conditions of sale shown on the price list circulated among them which respondent Eugene Dietzgen Co. had prepared, to become effective on July 10, 1932. The list designated territories into which the United States should be divided, and specified prices for each territory. The prices shown on the list were substantially higher than the demoralized prices at which sales were being made in Detroit at the time of this meeting. One popular grade of paper which had been selling to dealers and large consumers at $2.95 a roll was raised in central territory to $4.87½ to large consumers and $4.16 to dealers.

Other meetings were held during the following 5 or 6 months, and a committee functioned to stabilize, generalize, and maintain the prices named on the Dietzgen list, with the result that other sellers decided to adhere to the prices, discounts, terms, and conditions of sale named in said list, and the prices so named became substantially the prevailing prices charged by all the respondents and other dealers—except the respondents The C. F. Pease Co. and Chas. W. Speidel & Co., and some discount modifications by Keuffel & Esser Co.—until respondent Eugene Dietzgen Co. issued a new list, which was likewise adopted and adhered to by all the respondent sellers and others, except as hereinabove stated, until the enactment of the National Industrial Recovery Act.

PAR. 7. From November 1933, to May 27, 1935, when the Supreme Court declared the National Industrial Recovery Act unconstitutional, all respondent dealers and members of respondent Association conducted their business in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Fair Competition for the Scientific Apparatus Industry and its amendment, and pursuant thereto, they were required to do and did do the following things:

Filed with the manager of respondent Association from time to time their published price lists, terms, and conditions of sale, and a copy of all changes therein; refrained from selling or offering for sale their said products, directly or indirectly, at a price lower or a discount greater, or on more favorable terms than those provided in their respective current price lists, discount sheets, and terms and conditions of sale on file with said manager, except that from time to time, to meet existing competition, they sold their respective products at prices below those contained in their respective filed and published price lists, but did not sell below the lowest published net prices then in effect, filed with said manager by other members of the industry; used uniform terms and conditions for all sales made, including classification of customers; refused to make contracts for a period of more than 1 year, or allow options for any additional period, or additional quantity of merchandise.

The manager of respondent Association from time to time disseminated among the membership of said Association the information contained in the price lists, discount sheets, and terms of sale so filed.

PAR. 8. After the National Industrial Recovery Act had been declared unconstitutional, a meeting of respondent Association was held in Atlantic City, N. J., on June 3, 1935, at which respondent Karl Keller presided. Twenty-one members of respondent Association were present; the corporate respondents represented were, Eugene Dietzgen Co., Charles Bruning Co., Inc., The C. F. Pease Co., and The Frederick Post Co.; respondent Manfred Krauskopf represented the respondent partners composing the firm of J. H. Weil & Co.; respondents, W. A. Berger, Paul J. Bruning, R. Fred Allin, and Alphonse A. Brunner, were present.

By unanimous vote of the members present at said meeting, it was agreed to continue in force all the provisions of the Code referred to in paragraph 7 hereof, the only modification being that the provision relating to adherence to prices on file with the manager of respondent Association should be referred to the executive committee to be rewritten in a legally acceptable form and then submitted to respondent Association.

PAR. 9. On October 29, 1935, respondent Association held a meeting in Cleveland, Ohio, at which respondent Karl Keller presided. Listed as present at this meeting were 19 corporations and partnerships and 22 individuals. Included in the corporations and firms represented at this meeting were respondents The Huey Co., United State Blue Print Paper Co., The Frederick Post Co., The C. F. Pease Co., Charles Bruning Co., Inc., Kueffel & Esser Co., Eugene Dietzgen Co., and J. H. Weil & Co.; among the individuals present were respondents, W. A. Berger, Edwin H. Weil, and R. Fred Allin. The manager of respondent Association was also present.

At this meeting rules of fair competition were adopted by unanimous vote of the members present, which, among other things, makes it unfair practice to:

Sell, or offer to sell, products on which price information has been filed and published, at less than the lowest net price filed and published by any member on such product or products; nor sell, or offer to sell, special products which are covered by his filed and published price lists at net prices more favorable to the purchaser than the lowest filed and published net prices for a similar item of comparable grade.

To offer to consumers more favorable to them than "Net 30 days," nor more favorable terms to dealers than "2% cash discount on the 10th prox."

To take contracts for a period of more than 1 year, or allow options for any additional period or additional quantity of merchandise.

PAR. 10. On June 1, 1936, a meeting of the respondent Association was held in Chicago, Ill., at which respondent, Paul J. Bruning, presided. Seventeen corporations were listed as being present at this meeting, and 25 individuals, including the following respondent corporations: Charles Bruning Co., Inc.; Eugene Dietzgen Co., The Huey Co., Keuffel & Esser Co., The C. F. Pease Co., The Frederick Post Co., and the United States Blue Print Paper Co. Among the individuals present were respondents, W. A. Berger, Paul J. Bruning, and R. Fred Allin. Rules of fair competition were adopted at this meeting to supersede those currently in effect. The practices described below were declared to be unfair and destructive to Industry welfare:

Sell, or offer to sell, directly or indirectly, any product of the section on which price information had been published, at less than the lowest net price published by any member on such product or products; nor sell, or offer to sell, products which are not covered by such price lists but which are similar to listed products, at net prices more favorable to the purchaser than the lowest published net price.

These rules also provide that:

No member shall quote a lump-sum price on any schedule of products of this Industry which does not itemize, or which is lower than, the sum of such member's unit selling prices of the articles comprising the schedule; and when quoting a combined bid, including purchased materials, no member shall quote prices for such purchased material less than the published resale price of the manufacturer thereof applicable to the trade factor making the purchase. Any adjustment for units withdrawn must be at quoted prices.

It is also provided in these rules, that:

When the quotations are made f. o. b. shipping point, the shipping point is defined to be "the location of the manufacturing plants, branches or warehouses of the member."

At this meeting a motion was adopted in which it is provided that:

All members of the section shall file with the manager for distribution, the conditions of sale and cash terms pertaining to the products they manufacture, and also the conditions of sale and cash terms pertaining to the rest of the items in that line.

The rules also provide that:

Each quotation shall define terms and conditions of sale.

Each quotation shall be a firm proposal, subject to revision only to correct errors.

Invoices shall bear the date on which delivery is made to the carrier at the point of shipment. Invoices shall not be post-dated.

PAR. 11. Prior to the meeting held in Detroit in June or July 1932, and referred to in paragraph 6 hereof, all the respondents and the other members of respondent Association were in active and substantial competition with each other and with other members of the Industry, in the sale of their products, but since said meeting respondents and the other members of respondent Association have observed and adhered to the rules and practices set forth in paragraphs 8, 9, and 10 hereof, and the prices charged for their said products, and the terms and conditions of sale thereof, have been substantially the same, and as a result, competition between said respondents and other members of respondent Association has been eliminated.

The respondent Association has been active in the attempt to have its members observe the said rules and practices. The following is a letter dated February 24, 1936, from respondent, Karl Keller, to respondent, Arthur L. Parker, manager of respondent Association, concerning a member of the Association:

Information has reached us that the B. K. Elliott Co. of Pittsburgh are furnishing a 35% rag blueprint paper in 25 lb. weight. The tests we have made on their paper confirm that information.

According to our trade Code and blueprint standards, such paper should not be sold as our trade standardized on a 24 lb. paper, either 25% rag or 50% rag.

Furthermore, the B. K. Elliott Co. is selling the 35% rag paper at their standard price for a 25% rag paper.

Please write to them, giving them the above information and ask them for an explanation.

PAR. 12. Exhibits in evidence showing tabulations of bids made by respondents prior to the June or July 1932, meeting referred to in paragraph 6 hereof show that a highly competitive condition existed in the industry and that the submission of identical bids by two or more of the respondents was the exception rather than the rule. Exhibits in evidence, showing tabulations of bids made by the respondents after the issuance of the Dietzgen Co. price list approved at the 1932 meeting show that the prices quoted in that list and the amended price list issued in 1933 were used by the respondents in the submission of bids and that the submission of bids at identical prices became the rule and a variation from the prices shown in the Dietzgen lists by even a single bidder the exception. That the effect of the practices of respondents, as herein found, has been to eliminate in its entirety the competition as to price that existed prior to the commencement of such practices is clearly shown by exhibits in evidence reflecting bids made to State and Federal agencies for their requirements after the National Industry Recovery Act was declared unconstitutional.

On May 18, 1936, respondents Eugene Dietzgen Co., Keuffel & Esser Co., Charles Bruning Co., Inc., Keystone Blue Paper Co. (trade name of respondent Alphonse A. Brunner), and five other members of the Industry submitted bids on blueprint paper to the executive department of the State of New York. Except for the bid of the Keystone Blue Paper Co., which was for $18,722.23, each of the bids was for $18,721.48.

Pease Co., United States Blue Print Paper Co., J. H. Weil & Co., Keystone Blue Paper Co., Chas. W. Speidel & Co., and a number of other dealers, submitted bids on blueprint paper to the United States Navy Department, as follows:

On lot 574, the identical bid of $15,867 was submitted by respondents Eugene Dietzgen Co., Economy Blue Print Products, Inc., The Huey Co., Keuffel & Esser Co., The C. F. Pease Co., United States Blue Print Paper Co., J. H. Weil & Co., and by three other dealers.

F. Pease Co., The Frederick Post Co., Charles W. Speidel & Co., J. H. Weil & Co., and 3 other members of respondent Association.

On lot No. 579, there were 14 bidders, at $5,672.51 each. Among those making this identical bid were respondents Charles Bruning Co., Inc., Eugene Dietzgen Co., The Huey Co., Keuffel & Esser Co., The C. F. Pease Co., The Frederick Post Co., Chas. W. Speidel & Co. and J. H. Weil & Co., and 3 other members of respondent Association.

On lot No. 580, there were 14 bids, each for $6,107.35. Among those submitting this identical bid were respondents Charles Bruning Co., Inc., Eugene Dietzgen Co., The Huey Co., Keuffel & Esser Co., Keystone Blue Paper Co., The C. F. Pease Co., The Frederick Post Co., Chas. W. Speidel & Co., J. H. Weil & Co., and three other members of respondent Association.

On lot No. 581 there were 17 bids submitted, 15 of which were for $6,883.29 each. There was 1 bid for $6,881.85, and 1 for $5,223.25. Among those submitting the bid of $6,883.29 were respondents Charles Bruning Co., Inc., Eugene Dietzgen Co., The Huey Co., Keuffel & Esser Co., Keystone Blue Paper Co., The Frederick Post Co., Chas. W. Speidel & Co., J. H. Weil & Co., and three other members of respondent Association.

On lot No. 582 14 bids were submitted, each of which was for $26,922.51. The respondents submitting identical bids on this lot were Charles Bruning Co., Inc., Eugene Dietzgen Co., The Huey Co., Keuffel & Esser Co., Keystone Blue Paper Co., The C. F. Pease Co., The Frederick Post Co., Chas. W. Speidel & Co. and J. H. Weil & Co., and 3 other members of respondent Association.

On July 1, 1937, respondents The Huey Co., Chas. W. Speidel & Co., Charles Bruning Co., Inc., Eugene Dietzgen Co., The Frederick Post Co., J. H. Weil & Co., and 3 other members of respondent Association, each submitted to the Navy Department a bid for $29,112.91, on lot No. 513.

Thirteen bids, each for $3,441.20, were submitted on lot No. 514, and of this number, 6 were submitted by the respondent bidders on lot No. 513, and 3 other members of respondent Association.

Ten bids of $3,750.00 each were submitted on lot No. 515, the same respondents bidding as in the two immediately preceding lots, and two other members of respondent Association.

Ten bids of $5,767.74 each were submitted in lot No. 516. The respondents submitting this bid were The Frederick Post Co., The Huey Co., Eugene Dietzgen Co., and Charles Bruning Co., Inc., together with two other members of respondent Association. Respondents, Chas. W. Speidel & Co. and J. H. Weil & Co., each bid $5,757.74.

Twelve bids, each for $6,692.75 were submitted on lot No. 517; among those submitting this bid were respondents Charles Bruning Co., Inc., Eugene Dietzgen Co., The Frederick Post Co., The Huey Co., Chas. W. Speidel & Co., J. H. Weil Co., and 3 other members of respondent Association.

Twelve bids of $6,112.44 each were submitted on lot No. 518. The respondents making this bid were Charles Bruning Co., Inc., Eugene Dietzgen Co., The Huey Co., The Frederick Post Co., Chas. W. Speidel & Co., J. H. Weil & Co., Keuffel & Esser Co., and three other members of respondent Association.

On lot No. 519, 13 bids were submitted, each for $23,488.11. Among those submitting this bid were the respondents who submitted identical bids on lot No. 518, and 3 other members of respondent Association.

Twelve bids of $23,211.76 each were submitted on lot No. 752. Among those submitting this bid were respondents Eugene Dietzgen Co., Economy Blue Prints Products, Inc., The Huey Co., The Frederick Post Co., Chas. W. Speidel & Co., J. H. Weil & Co., and two other members of respondent Association.

While the illustrations above set out relate to reproduction papers only, the evidence establishes the same uniformity of prices on the other items sold by the respondents.

Bids substantially identical in all instances and identical to the penny in most instances on various types of reproduction paper, where the quantity involved in the several lots ranges from $3,441.20 to $34,095.50, are not the result of a uniformity of the cost of production as contended by respondents but are the result of concerted action on the part of the respondents, as hereinabove found.

PAR. 13. Pursuant to said understandings, agreements, arrangements, combinations, and conspiracies, as set forth in paragraphs 6, 8, 9, and 10 hereof, and in furtherance thereof, said respondents have done and performed, and still do and perform the following acts and things:

(a) Agreed to fix and maintain, and have fixed and maintained, the prices at which said products are sold by them.

(b) Agreed not to sell, and have not sold their said products at a price less, or a discount greater, or on terms and conditions more favorable to the purchaser than those contained in any of the price lists so filed.

(c) Agreed not to make contracts for a longer period than 1 year, nor to extend any such contract for a longer period, nor to include additional merchandise therein.

(d) Agreed to fix and maintain, and have fixed and maintained, uniform terms and conditions of sales made by them, including classification of customers and freight allowances.

(e) Have exchanged information among themselves with regard to the price, discount and terms and conditions of sale to be submitted by them when bids are requested, and have submitted uniform and identical bids on said products when requests have been made for bids.

(f) Have filed with respondent Association schedules of their prices or price lists and agreed to file, and did file, with the respondent Association schedules showing the terms and conditions of sale at which they will, and do, sell said products.

PAR. 14. Respondent Association, through its manager, receives from its respondent members, information as to their prices, discounts, terms and conditions of sale, and disseminates such information among its members.

PAR. 15. Respondent Association and its respondent members have adopted and agreed upon rules and regulations designed and intended to prevent any deviation on the part of respondent members from the prices, discounts, terms, and conditions of sale fixed and agreed upon as above set forth.

PAR. 16. The policies, practices, and activities of respondent Association are controlled and directed by its executive committee.

PAR. 17. The respondents named in paragraph 5 hereof control and dominate the industry in which they are engaged, and their sales to wholesalers and dealers in, and consumers of, the products mentioned in paragraph 3 hereof constitute the majority of the volume of business in such products in the United States, especially with respect to blueprint and other reproduction papers and cloths.

PAR. 18. Many manufacturers, builders, and others, including United States and State Governments and municipalities, purchase blueprint paper and other products mentioned in paragraph 3 hereof only upon the submission of bids by the respondents named in paragraph 5 hereof and others engaged in said industry, from which bids is selected the member of the industry from whom purchase of said products will be made for a given time or in a stated quantity.

PAR. 19. Prior to the adoption of the herein described practices and the acts of the respondents herein set forth, the respondents mentioned in paragraph 5 hereof were in active and substantial competition with each other and with others engaged in the industry described in paragraph 3, in making and seeking to make sales of their products to customers located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and would have continued to be in such competition had such respondents not adopted and carried out the herein described acts and practices.

PAR. 20. Said understandings, agreements, arrangements, combinations, and conspiracies and the things done thereunder and pursuant thereto, as herein set forth, have and had the effect of unduly and unlawfully restricting and restraining trade and commerce in said products described in paragraph 3 hereof, between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; of substantially enhancing prices to the consumer; of maintaining prices at artificial levels and otherwise depriving the public of benefits which would follow from normal competition among and between the respondents named in paragraph 5 hereof; of eliminating competition, with the tendency and capacity of creating in respondents a monopoly in the sale of said products in such commerce.

CONCLUSION

Said understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies, and the things done thereunder and pursuant thereto and in furtherance thereof, as hereinabove found, constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answers of respondents, the testimony and other evidence taken before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission theretofore designated by it to serve in this proceeding, the report of the trial examiners thereon and the exceptions to said report, briefs filed herein by the attorney for the Commission and attorneys for the respondents, and the oral arguments by the respective attorneys, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

1. Adopting any rule or regulation designed or intended to prevent any deviation on the part of the members of said respondent Association from the prices, discounts, and terms fixed and agreed upon by them, as hereinbefore set forth.

2. Receiving from the individual members of said respondent association price lists, including discounts, terms, and conditions of sale, and disseminating such information among said respondent association members.

It is further ordered, That the complaint herein be and the same hereby is dismissed as to respondents Scientific Apparatus Makers of America, its officers and directors, and respondents Carl S. IN THE MATTER OF HAMILTON, HARRIS & CO.

Docket 4253. Complaint, Aug. 21, 1940—Decision, Aug. 26, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of fishing tackle, pipes, robes, cameras, and other articles, and of certain assortments of said merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to consumers, a typical assortment including a number of pipes with a punchboard for use in their sale and distribution to the consuming public under a plan, as thereon explained, by which selection of certain lucky numbers entitled purchasers to receive one of said pipes, value of which was in excess of the 5 cents paid, and purchasers failing thus to qualify received nothing for their money other than the privilege of making a punch—

Sold such assortments to dealers and jobbers and, directly or indirectly, to retailers, by whom they were exposed and sold to the purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, involving chance to procure an article at much less than its normal price, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to use a method of sale involving a game of chance and refrain therefrom;

With the result, because of such game of chance, of unfairly diverting trade in commerce to it from its said competitors, to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.

Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr., and Mr. J. V. Mishou for the Commission.

Matson, Ross, McCord & Ice, of Indianapolis, Ind., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Hamilton, Harris & Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Hamilton, Harris & Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Indiana, with its principal office and place of business located at 302 West South Street, Indianapolis, Ind. The respondent has branch offices and places of business located at Terre Haute, Kokomo, South Bend, and Richmond, Ind. Respondent is now and for more than 2 years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of fishing tackle, pipes, robes, cameras, and other articles of merchandise. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from its places of business as aforesaid to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various States of the United States other than the State of Indiana and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 2 years last past a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and with partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers and retail dealers, certain assortments of merchandise so packed or assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment consists of a number of pipes, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Said pipes are sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner: Sales are 5 cents each, and when a punch is made from the board a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears the statement or statements informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a pipe. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the lucky numbers receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The pipes are worth more than 5 cents each, and the purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for one of the pipes receives the same for the price of 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The said pipes are thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, various assortments of merchandise along with punchboards involving a lot or chance feature, but such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who directly or indirectly purchase respondent's said merchandise, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of its merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure one of the said articles of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent, who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 21, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Hamilton, Harris & Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by attorney for the respondent before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner, and brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed by respondent and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Hamilton, Harris & Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Indiana, with its principal office and place of business located at 302 West South Street, Indianapolis, Ind. The respondent has branch offices and places of business located at Terre Haute, Kokomo, South Bend, and Richmond, Ind.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of fishing tackle, pipes, robes, cameras, and other articles of merchandise. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from its places of business as aforesaid to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than the State of Indiana and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for several years last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business respondent is, and has been, in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its said business the respondent has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of merchandise so packed or assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Illustrative of the method used by the respondent is the sale of an assortment consisting of a number of pipes and a device commonly called a punchboard. Such pipes were sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard device in the following manner: Sales were 5 cents each and when a punch was made from the board a number was disclosed. The numbers began with 1 and continued to the number of punches there were on the board, but the numbers were not arranged in numerical sequence. The board carried the statement or statements that certain specified numbers entitled the purchaser thereof to receive a pipe. A purchaser who did not qualify by obtaining one of the lucky numbers received nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The pipes were worth more than 5 cents each and the purchaser who obtained one of the numbers calling for one of the pipes received the same for the price of 5 cents. The numbers were effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection was made and the particular punch separated from the board. The said pipes were thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sold and distributed various assortments of merchandise, together with punchboards, involving a lot or chance feature similar to the one above described and varying therefrom only in detail, to purchasers in States other than the State of Indiana and in the District of Columbia prior to July 10, 1939. Subsequent to the said date respondent has sold and distributed, and sells and distributes, various assortments of merchandise with punchboard to purchasers within the State of Indiana.

PAR. 5. Retail dealers outside the State of Indiana who directly or indirectly purchased respondents said merchandise prior to July 10, 1939, and dealers within the State of Indiana who purchased respondent's merchandise subsequent to said date exposed and sold the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plan above set forth. The use by respondent of said method of sale, and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 6. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public by the aforesaid method involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Others who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent are unwilling to adopt and use a method of sale involving a game of chance and refrain therefrom. The use of said method by respondent, because of the same game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method. As a result thereof substantial injury has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in Commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto taken before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, report of the trial examiner, and brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed by respondent and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent, Hamilton, Harris & Co., a corporation, its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of fishing tackle, pipes, robes, cameras, or any other merchandise, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed or assembled that sale of such merchandise to the public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others punchboards, push or pull cards, pull tabs, or other lottery devices, either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, pull tabs, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

SANFORD MILLS, AND L. C. CHASE & CO., INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4084. Complaint, Apr. 5, 1940—Decision, Aug. 27, 1941

Where a corporation and its wholly owned sales subsidiary, engaged in manufacture and interstate sale and distribution of its "Velmo" mohair upholstery fabric; in advertising in trade journals and in copies thereof which they supplied to their customers, furniture manufacturers, and upholstery supply companies, and on labels and tags which they also furnished to such customers to be attached to the furniture delivered to consumers—

Represented that their said upholstery fabrics were "mothproof" and would not be attacked or destroyed by moths, through use of such terms as "guaranteed moth-proofed," "MOTH-PROOF GUARANTEE * * * PERMANENTLY," "A TROUBLE-PROOF LABEL * * * PERMANENTLY!", "Swatting the moth question BEFORE IT HATCHES," facts being the mohair fabric concerned had not been rendered immune from all moth damage by the processes to which said manufacturer had subjected it, and said corporations had received claims for damage to fabrics in question, certain of which it found to be legitimate and satisfied under its guarantee to make good any claim for legitimate damage;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial number of retail dealers and the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that their said product was permanently free from damage by moths, and to induce the purchase of substantial quantities of their fabrics because of such belief, and with result that trade in commerce was diverted unfairly to them from competitors in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.

Mr. D. E. Hoopingarner for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Sanford Mills, a corporation and L. C. Chase & Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Sanford Mills, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Maine, with its principal office and place of business located in Sanford, in the State of Maine. It is now, and for a number of years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of a mohair upholstery fabric and in the sale and delivery thereof under the brand name of "VELMO," in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, through the medium of its wholly owned subsidiary, respondent L. C. Chase & Co., Inc.

PAR. 2. Respondent, L. C. Chase & Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Maine, with its principal office and place of business located at 295 Fifth Avenue, New York City, in the State of New York, and is engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of mohair fabrics manufactured by the respondent Sanford Mills, a corporation.

PAR. 3. In the regular and usual course of business respondent Sanford Mills ships the said fabric, namely, mohair fabric used in upholstering furniture, from its said place of business in the State of Maine to its said subsidiary and exclusive sales agent, namely, respondent L. C. Chase & Co., Inc., in the State of New York; and the latter, in turn, sells, and for a number of years last has sold and transported said product to purchasers, generally to retail dealers, located in the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of their business, the respondents are now and during all the times mentioned herein have been engaged in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships, likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products, in commerce, among and between various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said product, in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their business, as hereinabove described, respondents cause advertisements and advertising matter to be inserted in newspapers and in trade journals of the type which reaches users of upholstery material and generally in the name of respondent L. C. Chase & Co., Inc. Respondents also furnish advertising matter to retail customers for their use, and the same has been used by them during the last several years in advertising their furniture upholstered with the mohair fabric purchased and delivered to them by said respondents.

Typical of said advertising matter is the following:

Swatting the MOTH QUESTION BEFORE IT HATCHES

Moths have good taste; they will eat woolens, feathers, furs, mohairs * * * any fine fibre * * * unless the diet is made unpleasant for them. And about the most distasteful diet in the world for a moth is Velmo mohair velvet!

A MOTH-PROOF GUARANTEE * * * PERMANENTLY!

Twelve years ago, Goodall-Sanford began subjecting every yard of Velmo to a solution that renders it permanently moth-resistant. Since then, moth trouble has been so negligible that the guarantee is given, not for a term of years, but for the life of the fabric * * * permanently.

A TROUBLE-PROOF LABEL * * * PERMANENTLY!

The Velmo label is supplied with each five-yard purchase. When it is sewn under furniture all responsibility ends on the part of manufacturer, or retailer. It swats moth-trouble before it hatches! It puts future liability where Goodall-Sanford thinks it belongs * * * on the weaver. A customer merely has to be told, "This beautiful mohair velvet has been moth-proofed at the mill, as the label states. If at any time moth-damage appears, communicate with L. C. Chase & Company, Inc., New York." Simple, direct, and red-tape-proof!

Typical of other advertising published or caused to be published by respondents is the following:

VELMO Quality * * * increases merchant's sales

Velmo upholstered furniture sells readily because of its lasting durability and decorative value. Velmo on a sofa or chair—identified by the Velmo label—means satisfaction for the customer and protection for the merchant.

To protect the requirements of customers with limited budgets, Velmo has styled several low-priced coverings. They, however, maintain the same high quality of all Velmo coverings.

Angora Satin, Aristocrat, Bethel, Cavalier, Crochette, Debonaire, Fiesta, Gros Point, Molano, Serenade and Twistone are some Velmo coverings styled and priced to help the furniture merchant increase his sale of furniture. These items, in their various price brackets, always mean quality.

We will be glad to furnish, upon request, samples of Velmo fabrics with the names of the firms manufacturing Velmo upholstered furniture.

All of the guarantees hereinabove set forth are prominently featured by large type and placement in the advertisements and on the tags and labels, as above indicated.

By the use of said advertisements, tags, and labels, and by other means, to describe the quality, durability, and desirability of their said products, respondents represent to retailers and the consumer public that their mohair upholstery fabric is permanently moth-proof and moth-resistant, when in truth and in fact their said fabric is not permanently moth-proof and moth-resistant, but is, in fact, subject to moth attack and destruction thereby.

By the use of this practice of supplying retail dealers and manufacturers with false and misleading labels, tags, and advertising matter, the respondents place in the hands of uninformed or unscrupulous retail dealers and manufacturers a means and instrumentality whereby said dealers and manufacturers may deceive and mislead members of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that respondents' fabric is permanently immune from attacks, damage and destruction by moths, when in truth and in fact it is not permanently free from such attacks, damage, and destruction.

PAR. 5. Mohair is the hair or wool taken from the Angora goat, and the fabrics made thereof are subject to the attack of the moth larvae. By reason of its susceptibility to such attacks, furniture users have been reluctant to use this fabric for upholstering purposes. In any circumstances, consumers have a preference for mohair fabrics that are understood to be completely and entirely moth-proof or moth-resistant, and the advertising and offering for sale of mohair and mohair-upholstered furniture as being treated in such a way as to make the same permanently free from attack and destruction by moth has offered great and additional inducement for the purchase of respondents' mohair fabrics in preference to the fabrics of those who do not represent their products to be permanently free from attack, damage, and destruction by moths.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid acts and practices of designating and describing its said product as being permanently free from attack, damage, and destruction by moths, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive retail dealers, and a substantial portion of the purchasing public, into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said product is rendered permanently free from attack, damage, and destruction by moths, and to induce the purchase of respondents' fabric because of such erroneous belief. As a direct result thereof, trade in commerce has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors who are likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and who do not falsely represent the quality and durability of their products. As a consequence thereof injury has been and is being done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices, in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 5th day of April 1940, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the said respondents Sanford Mills, a corporation, and L. C. Chase & Co., Inc., a corporation, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On April 24, 1940, the respondents filed their answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, at a hearing duly scheduled and held in this proceeding, a stipulation was entered into by and between counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondents, subject to the approval of the Commission, whereby it was agreed that a statement of facts thereupon read into the record may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs, or of a report upon the evidence by the trial examiner. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved and accepted, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Sanford Mills, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Maine, with its principal office and place of business located in Sanford, in the State of Maine. It is now, and for a number of years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of a mohair upholstery fabric and in the sale and delivery thereof under the brand name of "VELMO," in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, through the medium of its wholly owned subsidiary respondent, L. C. Chase & Co., Inc.

PAR. 2. Respondent, L. C. Chase & Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Maine, with its principal office and place of business located at 295 Fifth Avenue, New York City, in the State of New York, and is engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of mohair fabrics manufactured by the respondent Sanford Mills, a corporation.

PAR. 3. In the regular and usual course of business respondent, Sanford Mills, shipped said mohair fabric used in upholstering furniture from said place of business in the State of Maine to purchasers thereof in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia on orders obtained by its exclusive sales agent, L. C. Chase & Co., Inc., which has an office in the city and State of New York.

In the course and conduct of their business the respondents are now and during all the times mentioned in the complaint have been engaged in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships also engaged in the sale and distribution through the usual channels of similar products in commerce among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a course of trade in said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their business as hereinabove described respondents, during the period from 1934 to 1939, caused advertisements and advertising matter, generally in the name of L. C. Chase & Co., Inc., to be inserted in trade journals of the type which reached users of upholstery material. During such period respondents furnished copies of such advertising matter to their customers, furniture manufacturers, and upholstery supply companies.

1. The following representations are typical of the representations made by respondent in said advertising matter:

(a) For Twelve Years THE MOTH QUESTION HAS BEEN ANSWERED in mohair velvets with the famous VELMO LABEL * * *

While it is true that moths will attack woolens, furs, or any animal fibre with the same zest that they show for mohair—and while the manufacturers of most of these products have never attempted to moth-proof their articles, the Goodall-Sanford Mills, makers of Chase Velmo, began proofing their velvets as early as 1923 with a solution chemically proved to be moth-resistant.

The VELMO LABEL is also trouble-proof!

There is no limit in years to the plain statement on the Velmo label * * * "Guaranteed Moth-Proofed." Because moth damage has been practically negligible as far as Velmo is concerned, the Goodall-Sanford Mills will, at any time, make good any claim of anyone, dealer or customer, who finds cause for legitimate complaint of moths attacking a piece of Velmo.

The Velmo label is supplied with each five-yard purchase of the fabric. If it is sewn under a piece of furniture, the manufacturer's and the retailer's responsibility ends right there. It is the belief of the Goodall-Sanford Mills that their own liability to the final user of the fabric is direct, simple, clear and without cumbersome "red tape." The salesman has only to say to a customer, "This velvet is moth-proofed at the mill, as you will see by this label. If at any time you are troubled with moths, you can communicate with L. C. Chase & Company, New York."

(b) Swatting the moth question BEFORE IT HATCHES.

"Velmo Mohair Velvet is guaranteed moth-proofed. We will at any time make good the claim of any dealer or customer who has a legitimate complaint of moths attacking Velmo."

YEARS AGO we considered the plan of insuring or guaranteeing our Goodall-Sanford upholstery fabrics against moths.

Frankly, we have felt that we, perhaps, of all firms, were in an admirable position to do this because (1) Our fabrics are scientifically proofed and finished to resist moths; (2) In more than ten years, claims for moth damage have been practically negligible. * * *

USE THE VELMO LABEL

Goodall-Sanford has successfully proofed its fabrics against moths—since 1923.

2. During the period aforesaid respondent also furnished labels and tags to the manufacturers and upholsterers of furniture, which were attached to furniture delivered to consumers; typical of which are the following:

(a) A cloth label containing the following:

L. C. CHASE & CO., INC., 295 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

PAR. 5. Mohair is the hair or wool taken from the Angora goat and the fabrics made thereof are subject to the attack of the moth larvae. By reason of its susceptibility to such attacks furniture users have been reluctant to use this fabric for upholstery purposes. Consumers have a preference for mohair fabrics that are permanently moth-proof or moth-resistant.

PAR. 6. The Commission finds that substantial numbers of the purchasing public, both retailers and ultimate consumers, have been induced to believe, through the use by respondents of the terms "Moth-Proofed," "Guaranteed Moth-Proofed," "A Moth-Proof Guarantee—Permanently," "A Trouble-Proof Label—Permanently," "Swatting the Moth Question Before It Hatches," in connection with, or in referring to, the moth-resistant or moth-repellent properties of their fabric, that the fabric so referred to is moth-proof and that moths will not attack or destroy it.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid statements and representations are exaggerated, misleading, and deceptive. While the respondent, Sanford Mills, since the year 1923, has subjected the mohair fabric known as "Velmo" to processes which respondent believed to be effective in preventing moth damage and has guaranteed to make good any claim of anyone who found cause for legitimate complaint because of moth damage, said processes have not, in fact, rendered said product immune from all moth damage and respondents have received claims of moth damage to said fabrics and have found certain of said claims to be legitimate and have satisfied them.

PAR. 8. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid practices and the aforesaid statements and representations with respect to the moth-proof and moth-resistant properties and characteristics of their said fabric has had the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial number of retail dealers and a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said product is permanently free from attack, damage, and destruction by moths and to induce the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' fabrics because of such erroneous belief. As a result thereof, trade in commerce has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from competitors in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondents and a stipulation entered into by and between counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondents, wherein it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts read into the record may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the Commission may proceed upon such statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs, or any other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Sanford Mills, a corporation, and L. C. Chase & Co., Inc., a corporation, their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of mohair upholstery fabrics, in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Using the term "mothproof" to designate, describe, or in any way refer to upholstery fabrics which are not in fact mothproof, or otherwise representing that upholstery fabrics which are not permanently immune from attack or destruction by moths are mothproof.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

LILLIAN M. GRANGER, L. H. MURRAY, CLARA FEITLER, AND ADOLF FEITLER, TRADING AS G. & F. SALES COMPANY

Docket 4155. Complaint, June 4, 1940—Decision, Aug. 27, 1941

Where four individuals, engaged during different periods, in competitive interstate sale and distribution of radios, watches, clocks, knives, pen and pencil sets, and other articles, and of assortments of their merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof, a typical assortment consisting of a number of tins of peanuts and a radio, together with a punchboard for use in their sale to the consuming public, as explained thereon, under a plan by which a purchaser secured one of said tins—value of which was in excess of the 5 cents paid—in accordance with success in selecting certain numbers, and received the radio by selecting the number corresponding to that under the board's seal, and those failing to qualify by obtaining one of the lucky numbers received nothing for their money, other than the privilege of punching a number—

Sold such assortments to wholesalers and jobbers and, directly or indirectly, to retailers, by whom they were exposed and sold to the purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, involving sale of a chance to procure one of said articles at much less than its normal price, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to use method involving chance or contrary to public policy, and refrain therefrom;

With the result that many persons were attracted by said sales plan and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell said individual's merchandise in preference to that offered and sold by said competitors, and with tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, unfairly to divert trade in commerce to them from said competitors; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Lillian M. Granger, L. H. Murray, Clara Feitler, and Adolf Feitler, individually and trading as G. & F. Sales Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Lillian M. Granger, L. H. Murray, Clara Feitler, and Adolf Feitler, are individuals trading as G. & F. Sales Co. with their principal office and place of business formerly located at 2300 South Canal Street, Chicago, Ill. The present office and place of business of the respondents is located at 35 South Franklin Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondents are now, and for more than 4 years last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of radios, watches, clocks, knives, pen and pencil sets, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said merchandise when sold, to be transported from their aforesaid places of business in Chicago, Ill., to the purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various States of the United States other than Illinois and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for more than 4 years last past, a course of trade by respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondents are and have been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of merchandise so packed or assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondents and is as follows:

This assortment consists of a number of tins of peanuts and a radio, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Said articles of merchandise are sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner: Sales are 5 cents each and when a punch is made from the board a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to number of punches there are on the board but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears a legend or statements informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive one of the tins of peanuts. The said numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. There is also a seal on the board which conceals a number. When all of the punches on the board have been made the seal is removed disclosing the number thereunder. The person punching the number from the board corresponding to the number under the seal receives the said radio. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the lucky numbers receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The articles of merchandise are worth more than 5 cents each and the purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for one of the articles of merchandise receives the same for the price of 5 cents. The said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

Respondents sell and distribute and have sold and distributed various assortments of merchandise along with punchboards involving a lot or chance feature but such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondents' said merchandise, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said method in the sale of their merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure one of the said articles of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents, who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on June 4, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Lillian M. Granger, L. H. Murray, Clara Feitler, and Adolf Feitler, individually and trading as G. & F. Sales Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. The respondent, Clara Feitler, filed an answer, in which answer she admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts and in which answer she further stated that the respondent Adolf Feitler, died on March 9, 1941, and that the respondents, Lillian M. Granger and L. H. Murray, have not been interested in any way in the business operated under the name G. & F. Sales Co. since August 1, 1939. The respondents, Lillian M. Granger and L. H. Murray, filed a separate answer in which they generally denied the allegations of the complaint but admitted that they were copartners in the business operated under the name G. & F. Sales Co. prior to August 1, 1939. Subsequently a stipulation as to the facts with respect to the extent of the participation of the respondents, Lillian M. Granger and L. H. Murray, in the business operated under the name G. & F. Sales Co. was read into the record at a hearing duly held in Chicago, Ill., on June 12, 1941. In such stipulation respondents, Lillian M. Granger and L. H. Murray, stipulated the facts alleged in the Commission's complaint are true with the exception that such respondents disposed of all interest in the business operated under the name of G. & F. Sales Co. on August 1, 1939, and have not participated in the operation of such business since that date. Respondents, Lillian M. Granger and L. H. Murray, further specifically waived the filing of a trial examiner's report upon the evidence, the filing of briefs and oral argument. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, answers thereto and the said stipulation as to the facts, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Prior to August 1, 1939, respondents, Lillian M. Granger, L. H. Murray, Clara Feitler, and Adolph Feitler, were individuals trading as G. & F. Sales Co., having their principal office and place of business located at 2300 South Canal Street, Chicago, Ill., and subsequently at 35 South Franklin Street, Chicago, Ill. On August 1, 1939, respondents, Lillian M. Granger and L. H. Murray, sold, transferred, and assigned to respondents Clara Feitler and Adolf Feitler all their right, title, and interest in and to the aforesaid G. & F. Sales Co. and since that date have had no interest in nor any relation with the said company. On March 9, 1941, respondent, Adolf Feitler, died and since that date the surviving partner, respondent, Clara Feitler, has been conducting the affairs of the said G. &. F. Sales Co. Respondent, Clara Feitler is now, and for more than 4 years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of radios, watches, clocks, knives, pen and pencil sets, and other articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents, Lillian M. Granger and L. H.

Murray, for more than 3 years prior to August 1, 1939, and respondent, Adolf Feitler, for more than 4 years prior to March 9, 1941, were likewise engaged. Respondent, Clara Feitler, causes and has caused, and respondents, Lillian M. Granger, L. H. Murray, and Adolf Feitler, have caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from their aforesaid places of business in Chicago, Ill., to the purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various States of the United States other than Illinois and in the District of Columbia. There is now a course of trade by respondent, Clara Feitler, and in the past there has been a course of trade by all of the respondents herein named in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent, Clara Feitler, is and all respondents herein named have been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, Clara Feitler, sells and all of the respondents herein named have sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of merchandise so packed or assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondents and is as follows:

This assortment consists of a number of tins of peanuts and a radio, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Said articles of merchandise are sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner: Sales are 5 cents each and when a punch is made from the board a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of punches there are on the board but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears a legend or statements informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive one of the tins of peanuts. The said numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. There is also a seal on the board which conceals a number. When all of the punches on the board have been made, the seal is removed, disclosing the number thereunder. The person punching the number from the board corresponding to the number under the seal receives the said radio. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the lucky numbers receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The articles of merchandise are worth more than 5 cents each and the purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for one of the articles of merchandise receives the same for the price of 5 cents. The said articles of merchandise are thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent, Clara Feitler, sells and distributes and all of the respondents herein named have sold and distributed various assortments of merchandise along with punchboards involving a lot or chance feature; such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondents' said merchandise directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent, Clara Feitler, thus supplies to and places, and all the respondents herein named thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said method in the sale of their merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said method, is practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public, in the manner above found, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure one of the said articles of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents, who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein set forth constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, Clara Feitler, in which answer such respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that she waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and upon the joint answer of respondents, Lillian M. Granger and L. H. Murray, and a stipulation as to the facts agreed upon between counsel for the Commission and counsel for said respondents, Lillian M. Granger and L. H. Murray, which stipulation was read into the record herein, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents Clara Feitler, Lillian M. Granger, and L. H. Murray, individually and trading as G. & F. Sales Co., or trading under any other name, their agents, representatives, and employees, jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of radios, watches, clocks, knives, pen and pencil sets, or other articles of merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing radios, watches, clocks, knives, pen and pencil sets, or any other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales thereof are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others assortments of radios, watches, clocks, knives, pen and pencil sets, or any other merchandise together with push or pull cards, punchboards, or other devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

3. Selling to or placing in the hands of others, push or pull cards, punchboards, or other devices either with assortments of radios, watches, clocks, knives, pen and pencil sets, or other merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other devices are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said radios, watches, clocks, knives, pen and pencil sets, or other merchandise to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

4. Selling or otherwise distributing any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That this proceeding be, and the same hereby is, dismissed as to respondent, Adolf Feitler, due to his death on March 9, 1941.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

CONTINENTAL BRIAR PIPE COMPANY, INC.

Docket 4293. Complaint, Aug. 30, 1940—Decision, Aug. 27, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture of pipes and other articles, and in the competitive interstate sale and distribution of its merchandise, including certain assortments thereof so packed or assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to consumers, a typical assortment consisting of a number of pipes, together with a punchboard for use in their sale to consumers under a plan by which, as thereon explained, those securing certain numbers were entitled to a pipe, the value of which exceeded the 5 cents paid for a chance, and purchasers who did not thus qualify received nothing for their money other than the privilege of a punch—

Sold such assortments to wholesalers and jobbers and, directly or indirectly, to retailers, by whom they were exposed and sold to the purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, involving game of chance to procure a pipe at much less than its normal price, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who were unwilling to use a method involving chance or contrary to public policy, and refrained therefrom;

With the result that many persons were attracted by said sales plan and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell its merchandise in preference to that of aforesaid competitors, and with the effect, through use of said method and because of said game of chance, of unfairly diverting trade in commerce to it from its said competitors, to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Andrew B. Duvall, trial examiner.

Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr. and Mr. J. V. Mishou for the Commission.

Mr. W. Lee Helms, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Continental Briar Pipe Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Continental Briar Pipe Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 80 York Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. Respondent is now and for more than 8 years last past has been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of pipes and other articles of merchandise. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from its place of business as aforesaid to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia. There is now and for more than eight years last past has been a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers and retail dealers certain assortments of merchandise so packed or assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment consists of a number of pipes, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Said pipes are sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner: Sales are 5 cents each and when a punch is made from the board a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears the statement or statements informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchasers thereof to receive a pipe. Purchasers who do not qualify by obtaining one of the lucky numbers receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The pipes are worth more than 5 cents each and the purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for one of the pipes receives the same for the price of 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The said pipes are thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed various assortments of merchandise along with punchboards involving a lot or chance feature but such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in details.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who directly or indirectly purchase respondent's said merchandise, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of its merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure one of the said pipes at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent, who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on August 30, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Continental Briar Pipe Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. The respondent did not file an answer to the complaint. Thereafter, the case being regularly set down for the taking of testimony in the city of New York, State of New York, on June 26, 1941, during the course of such hearing, counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondent entered into an agreement on the record wherein the respondent stipulated the material facts set forth in the complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the facts. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint and stipulation as to the facts, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the public interest and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Continental Briar Pipe Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 80 York Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. For about one year prior to the fall of 1939, respondent was engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of pipes and other articles of merchandise. Respondent caused said merchandise when sold to be transported from its place of business as aforesaid to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than the State of New York. There was a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as heretofore described, respondent sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers and retail dealers certain assortments of merchandise so packed or assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. A representative assortment is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by the respondent, and is as follows: This assortment consists of a number of pipes, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Said pipes are sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner: Sales are 5 cents each, and when a punch is made a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of punches that are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears the statement or statements informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchasers thereof to receive a pipe. Purchasers who do not qualify by obtaining one of the lucky numbers generally receive nothing for their money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The pipes are worth considerably more than 5 cents each, and the purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for one of the pipes receives the same for the price of 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The said pipes are thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who directly or indirectly purchased respondent's said merchandise exposed and sold the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinbefore set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of its merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said method, was a practice of a sort which was and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public, in the manner above found, involved a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure one of the said pipes at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. There were dealers in said merchandise who sold or distributed said merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above found, who were unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrained therefrom. Many persons were attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise, and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent, who did not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, had a tendency and capacity to, and did, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among various States of the United Sates, to respondent from its said competitors who did not use the same or an equivalent method. As a result therefore, substantial injury was done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon complaint of the Commission and a stipulation as to the facts entered into by and between counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondent wherein it was agreed that the material facts alleged in the Commission's complaint are true, and all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts were waived, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Continental Briar Pipe Company, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of pipes or any other articles of merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing pipes or any other merchandise so packed and assembled that sales thereof are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, game device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, assortments of pipes or any other merchandise together with push or pull cards, punchboards or other devices, which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

3. Together, these members and associate members do an annual volume of business with approximately 12,000 retail stores averaging approximately $30,000,000 at wholesale prices.

In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, member respondents and associate members purchase substantial quantities of candies, tobaccos, and groceries from manufacturers, producers, and suppliers thereof located in the States of New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and other States of the United States, and ship or cause to be shipped such commodities into the city of Detroit, Mich., and the surrounding trade area for resale and distribution. For several years last past and at all times specified or referred to in this complaint, they have been and are engaged in commerce in candies and tobaccos (and some have been engaged in commerce in groceries) between and among the various States of the United States.

Respondent association, its officers and directors, promote the mutual interests of its members and aids them in the doing and carrying out of their individual and joint purposes and plans.

PAR. 4. For more than 4 years last past respondents have maintained and now have in effect an understanding, combination, and agreement among themselves to hinder, lessen, restrict, and restrain competition and trade in the sale and distribution of candies, tobaccos and groceries in commerce among and between the several States of the United States and to monopolize to themselves the business in commerce among and between the several States of the United States, of buying and selling in wholesale quantities candies, tobaccos, and groceries for resale and distribution in Detroit, Mich., and the surrounding trade area.

Pursuant to, and in furtherance of, said understanding, combination, and agreement, respondents have done and are now doing many acts and things and have used and are now using many methods of competition among which are the following:

1. Member respondents attempt to, and do, limit the number of persons, partnerships and corporations engaged in the business of purchasing, in wholesale quantities, candies, tobaccos, and groceries from the manufacturers and suppliers thereof, many of whom are located in the States other than the State of Michigan, and selling said products in Detroit, Mich., and the surrounding area by:

(a) Determining and agreeing among themselves as to who shall enter or remain in said business.

(b) Interfering with the sources of supply of those whom they determine should not enter or remain in the said business, by boycotting, intimidating, and threatening to boycott said manufacturers and suppliers, and persuading them not to sell or offer to sell to such concerns.

(c) Refusing to sell to persons, firms and corporations not selected by said member respondents to enter or remain in the aforesaid business; and

(d) Coercing and persuading jobbers, wholesalers, and suppliers of candies, tobaccos, and groceries located in cities adjacent to Detroit and in States other than the State of Michigan, to refrain from making or soliciting sales in Detroit, Mich., and the surrounding trade area.

2. Member respondents concertedly classify customers, allocate business, fix discounts and enter into numerous understandings and agreements regarding their respective business and sales problems and have sought to and have concertedly enforced adherence to agreements and understandings which they have from time to time made.

3. Member respondents have harassed competitors and interfered with the conduct of their businesses by spying on their shipments, sent or received, upon their truck deliveries and other business operations.

4. Member respondents have used respondent association, together with its officers and directors as a vehicle or implement for the furtherance of their joint purposes, plans and activities hereinbefore described, and in furtherance of the aforesaid understanding, combination and agreement.

5. Respondent association, its officers and directors, have cooperated with member respondents in the carrying out and furtherance of the said understanding, combination, and agreement and have classified members, nonmembers, competitors of members, customers and prospective customers, held meetings, printed customer cards, written letters, delivered messages, made contacts with manufacturers and suppliers of candies, tobaccos, and groceries in aid of the said understanding, combination and agreement and in the furtherance of the acts and things done by member respondents hereinbefore described, and have in other ways helped and aided in making effective the said understanding, combination and agreement.

PAR. 5. The said understanding, combination, and agreement and the doing and performing of the acts and things and the use of the methods set forth in the preceding paragraphs hereof, tend to have, have had and now have the effect of unduly and unlawfully restricting and restraining interstate trade and commerce in candies, tobaccos, and groceries between, among and in the several States of the United States; of preventing, hindering, and restraining other persons, firms, corporations, and partnerships than the respondents engaged in trade and commerce in such commodities in the United States in the conduct of their respective businesses; of substantially reducing, lessening, stifling, and eliminating competition in candies, tobaccos and groceries between and among member respondents and between and among themselves and the firms, partnerships, corporations, and individuals in the same or similar lines of business in Detroit, Mich., and the surrounding trade area; of stabilizing prices and maintaining discounts and commissions received by themselves in the conduct of their business at levels and amounts inconsonant with levels and amouts that would exist in the presence of full and free competition; and of destroying, eliminating and causing to be diminished the competition to which the consuming public and retailers of candy, tobacco and groceries are entitled to expect in conformance with the public policy and the laws of the United States.

PAR. 6. The acts and practices and methods of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public; have a dangerous tendency to, and have, actually hindered and prevented competition in the sale and distribution of candies, tobaccos, and groceries in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act; and have unreasonably restrained such commerce in candies, tobaccos, and groceries, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 19th day of September 1940, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents named in the caption hereof, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On October 10, 1940, respondent Detroit Candy & Tobacco Jobbers Association, Inc., its officers: president, Archie Cherrin, first vice president, Vene G. Perry, secretary, V. H. Nalbandian, secretary, Harry T. Bump; its directors: Calvin Gauss, Vene G. Perry, Archie Cherrin, Joseph Bianco, V. H. Nalbandian, Charles Nalbandian, Budd Mendel, Joel Levy, filed their answer in this proceeding by their attorney, Harrison T. Watson. On October 9, 1940, respondents Morris Starkstein, William Starkstein and Jacob Starkstein filed their answer in this proceeding by their attorneys Butzel, Eamon, Long, Gust & Bills. On February 14, 1941, Attorney J. Thomas Smith entered his appearance for respondent Detroit Candy & Tobacco Jobbers Association, Inc., and its aforesaid officers and directors, and Attorney Harrison T. Watson consented to the substitution. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondents and their attorneys aforesaid and William T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding, solely for the purpose of this proceeding, the enforcement or review thereof in the circuit courts of appeal and for any review in the Supreme Court of the United States or for any other court proceeding which may be brought or instituted by virtue of authority contained in the Federal Trade Commission Act as amended and approved March 21, 1938, and for no other purpose whatsoever, and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument, the filing of briefs or other intervening procedure. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answers and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

JOSEPH H. KEVORKIAN, JOSEPH D. KEVORKIAN AND LOUIS STONE, TRADING AS STOMAR MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Docket 4272. Complaint, Aug. 27, 1940—Decision, Aug. 28, 1941

Where a firm engaged in manufacture and in interstate sale and distribution of steel kitchen graters and shredders; in advertisements in periodicals and in circulars and other advertising literature distributed among their distributors and dealers, who redistributed them to the purchasing public, and in statements on display cards and on envelopes enclosing such products—

Represented that their graters and shredders were made of stainless steel, and would successfully resist rust, tarnish, stain and corrosion, through such legends and statements as "Stomar Stainless Safety Grater and Shredder," "Wont Rust Won't Tarnish Won't Corrode";

Facts being their said products were not made of the more expensive stainless steel or alloy, generally associated with term "stainless," which resists effects of food acids, dampness and water and weather conditions generally, to a much greater degree than does ordinary carbon steel, but were made of latter less expensive product plated with tin, and were not stainless in fact, but, as disclosed by Bureau of Standards tests, would not successfully resist rust, tarnish, or corrosion;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said products possessed qualities which they did not in fact possess, and to cause it, because of such belief, to purchase substantial quantities of said products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, trial examiner.

Mr. Charles S. Cox for the Commission.

Scarborough & Creamer, of Philadelphia, Pa., for Joseph H. Kevorkian and Joseph D. Kevorkian.

Mr. Nathan Markmann, of Philadelphia, Pa., for Louis Stone.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Joseph H. Kevorkian, Joseph D. Kevorkian, and Louis Stone, individually and as copartners trading as Stomar Manufacturing Co., have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Joseph H. Kevorkian, Joseph D. Kevorkian, and Louis Stone, are individuals trading as a copartners under the firm name, Stomar Manufacturing Co., with their office and principal place of business located at 1027 Ridge Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now and for more than 2 years last past have been engaged in manufacturing, selling, and distributing graters and shredders. Respondents cause said graters and shredders when sold by them to be transported from their place of business located in the State of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than the State of Pennsylvania, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondents' said graters and shredders are sold to various distributors, department and chain stores and retailers who in turn resell the same to the purchasing public. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said graters and shredders in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. Stainless steel is an alloy produced from iron, chromium and carbon, and sometimes containing other minor alloying elements. Through long commercial usage, the alloy so produced has become known to manufacturers, to the trade and to the consuming public by the term "Stainless." This term as applied to steel indicates a very specific type of chromium-steel alloy which has the quality of resisting oxidation and corrosion against most media. Stainless steel resists alkaline materials, fruit acids, dampness and water, salt air and salt water and weather conditions, including rain and snow, to a markedly greater degree than is true of carbon steel. Stainless steel, in fact, is either wholly or substantially immune to the action of nearly a hundred corrosive agents. It is a much more expensive product to manufacture than carbon steel, and this is particularly true in relation to articles used in the ordinary kitchen.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said products, respondents, through advertisements inserted in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation and also through circulars and other advertising matter, and on various carton and container labels, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between various States of the United States, and through other means, have made misleading statements and representations to the purchasing public concerning certain of their said graters and shredders. Among and typical of such misleading statements and representations so disseminated are the following:

Stomar Stainless Safety Grater
Stomar Stainless Safety Grater and Shredder
Won't Rust
Won't Tarnish
Won't Corrode

Respondents by the use of the term "Stainless" thereby have falsely represented and do falsely represent to prospective purchasers that their aforesaid grater is such a product as is known to the trade and to the general public as stainless steel, when in truth and in fact said grater so described and designated by respondent is made from ordinary carbon steel wire with a retinned finish.

Respondents' use of the terms or expressions "Stainless," "Won't Rust," "Won't Tarnish," and "Won't Corrode" in describing, designating, or referring to their said product, creates the impression upon the trade and the general public, and causes the trade and general public to believe, that said grater is so made and is of such quality, as that it successfully resists rust, stain and corrosion.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact repondents' said grater is not stainless, nor does it possess the qualities and characteristics of being immune to, or of successfully resisting rust, tarnish, and corrosion, but on the contrary said product will and does rust and stain when brought in contact with agencies which do not rust or blemish stainless steel. Respondents' said graters are not stainless in fact.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of their said graters and shredders, as aforesaid, have had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous an mistaken belief that the aforesaid misleading and deceptive representations are true, and cause a substantial number of the purchasing public, because of said mistaken and erroneous belief so engendered, to purchase a substantial amount of respondents' said products.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on August 27, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents,

Joseph H. Kevorkian, Joseph D. Kevorkian, and Louis Stone, individually and as copartners trading as Stomar Manufacturing Co., charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Charles S. Cox, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Fred B. Creamer and Nathan Markmann, attorneys for the respondents, before Arthur F. Thomas, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and such testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answers thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (respondents not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. From approximately June 1, 1939 to approximately May 16, 1940 the respondents, Joseph H. Kevorkian, Joseph D. Kevorkian, and Louis Stone, were engaged in business as copartners under the firm name Stomar Manufacturing Co., with their office and principal place of business located at 1027 Ridge Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa. Respondents were engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of certain steel kitchen utensils known as graters and shredders.

Respondents sold their graters and shredders to various distributors, and to department stores, chain stores and other retailers who in turn resold such products to the purchasing public. Respondents caused their said products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintained a course of trade in their products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

On or about May 16, 1940, respondents Joseph H. Kevorkian and Louis Stone severed their connection with the business, and since that date the business has been operated, and is now operated, by respondent Joseph D. Kevorkian who is the sole owner thereof. The said Joseph D. Kevorkian has continued the use of the trade name, Stomar Manufacturing Co.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their products, the respondents (originally all of the respondents and subsequently respondent Joseph D. Kevorkian) have advertised their products in periodicals having a general circulation throughout the United States. Respondents have also made use of circulars and other pieces of advertising literature which have been distributed by respondents among their distributors and dealers and by such distributors and dealers to members of the purchasing public. Respondents have also caused legends and statements to be placed on display cards on which respondents' products are displayed for sale to the public, and on envelopes enclosing such products. Among and typical of the various legends and statements appearing in such advertisements and advertising material were the following:

Stomar Stainless Safety Grater
Stomar Stainless Safety Grater and Shredder
Won't Rust
Won't Tarnish
Won't Corrode

Through the use of these legends and of others similar thereto, the respondents have represented that their graters and shredders are made of stainless steel, and that such graters and shredders will sucessfully resist rust, tarnish, stain, and corrosion.

PAR. 3. The Commission finds that stainless steel is an alloy produced from iron, chromium and carbon, and sometimes other minor alloying elements. Through long commercial usage the alloy so produced has become known generally to manufacturers, to the trade and to the consuming public by the term "stainless."

This term, as applied to steel and particularly to household utensils, indicates a specific type of chromium-steel alloy which has the quality of resisting oxidation and corrosion. Stainless steel resists the effects of fruit acids, dampness and water, and weather conditions generally to a much greater degree than is true of ordinary carbon steel. Stainless steel is more expensive to produce than carbon steel and this is particularly true of the articles used as ordinary kitchen utensils.

PAR. 4. While the respondents have not used in their advertising material the specific word "steel" after the word "stainless," the testimony in the record shows, and the Commission finds, that the word

"stainless" as used by respondents on their graters and shredders is understood by a substantial portion of the purchasing public as indicating and representing that such graters and shredders are made of stainless steel. And the effect of the use of the word "stainless" in this manner is accentuated by reason of the fact that in much of respondents' advertising material the word is followed by the legends "Won't Rust," "Won't Tarnish," and "Won't Corrode."

PAR. 5. Respondents' graters and shredders are not made of stainless steel but are made of ordinary carbon steel and are plated with tin. Nor are respondents' graters and shredders stainless in fact. Tests conducted by the United States Bureau of Standards disclose, and the Commission finds, that respondents' products will not successfully resist rust, tarnish, or corrosion. The Commission therefore finds that the representations of respondents are misleading and deceptive.

PAR. 6. The Commission further finds that the use by respondents of such representations has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents' products possess qualities which they do not in fact possess, and the tendency and capacity to cause such portion of the public, as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' products.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before Arthur F. Thomas, trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed by respondents and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Joseph H. Kevorkian, Joseph D. Kevorkian, and Louis Stone, individually and trading as Stomar Manufacturing Co., or trading under any other name, and their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of their kitchen utensils known as graters and shredders, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word "stainless" to designate or describe respondents' products, or otherwise representing that said products are made from stainless steel or that they are stainless in fact.

2. Representing that respondents' products will not rust, tarnish or corrode.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

HASKELITE MANUFACTURING CORPORATION

Docket 4442. Complaint, Dec. 31, 1940—Decision, Aug. 29, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture and interstate sale and distribution to department stores, gift shops, and other retail establishments, of serving trays made of a single ply of poplar, basswood, or other similar veneer covered top and bottom, with specially processed paper, so colored and finished as to simulate walnut or copomo grain with nothing to indicate that any other material than wood had been used in their manufacture;

In advertising mats which it supplied to dealers for their use in advertising such trays in local newspapers, the expense of which it bore in whole or in part depending upon the quantity purchased, and in advertising booklets, leaflets, and circulars—

Falsely represented that said trays were made entirely of wood and finished with walnut or copomo wood, through such legends and statements as "Simulated walnut grain finish that looks exactly like fine wood inlay," "Hardwood with simulated walnut grain surface," "Made of selected wood veneer with simulated walnut grain finish," "Selected wood construction," "Available in walnut or copomo grains," and "Wood inlay on walnut grained surface * * * also in plain simulated walnut," and Failed to disclose affirmatively that the surfaces of its said trays were made of paper, through use of word "Simulated" in such statements as "Simulated walnut grain surface," etc., which were insufficient to disclose to a substantial portion of the purchasing public the actual nature of said products;

With result of thereby placing in the hands of unscrupulous or uninformed retailers means to mislead or deceive members of the purchasing public, and with tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of such public into the erroneous belief that its said trays were made entirely of wood, and to cause it to purchase substantial quantities of its products as a result of such mistaken belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.
Mr. Eldon P. Schrup for the Commission.
Fyffe & Clarke, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Haskelite Manufacturing Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Haskelite Manufacturing Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York with its principal office and place of business located at 208 West Washington Street, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

Said respondent operates a factory located at Grand Rapids, Mich., wherein are manufactured, among other products, wooden serving and lap trays, together with the products designated by respondent as Hasko De Luxe Buffet Trays.

Respondent, Haskelite Manufacturing Corporation, is now and for a number of years last past has been engaged in the business of the offering for sale and the sale of the aforedescribed products to retail merchants, and through and by use of the United States mails and respondent's salesmen, said respondent contacts and has contacted for such purpose, various such merchants located throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent in response to and in fulfillment of orders thereby obtained has caused and now causes said products when sold to be transported from its place of business in Chicago, Ill., or Grand Rapids, Mich., to the purchasers thereof located in a State or States other than the State or States wherein such shipments from the respondent originated, or in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said products so sold and distributed by it in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent in aid of the offering for sale and the sale of Hasko De Luxe Buffet Trays in the conduct and course of its business in trade as aforedescribed, has stated in advertising mats, copy, booklets, and other materials furnished retail merchants through and by means of the United States mails, respondent's salesmen and otherwise, and has thereby caused to be stated in newspapers and other advertising media employed by respondent's said merchant customers, that Hasko De Luxe Buffet Trays, among other things with reference to their manufacture, construction and materials, are:

Hardwood with simulated Walnut grained surface.

Made of attractive simulated Walnut grained hardwood.

Selected wood construction * * * available in Walnut or Mexican Copomo grains.

PAR. 3. Respondent through and by use of the statements hereinabove set forth and by means of other statements similar thereto not specifically set out herein, represents and implies and causes to be represented and implied to retail merchants purchasing respondent's said products for resale, and through and by means of such merchants' advertising media, has caused and causes to be stated, represented and implied, to the purchasing public, that Hasko De Luxe Buffet Trays are manufactured and constructed of hardwood, that said trays are of selected wood construction, and that the surface of said trays is composed of hardwood material finished to simulate Walnut or Mexican Copomo grains.

Respondent's said statements, representations, and implications made and caused to be made as aforesaid with reference to the manufacture, construction, and materials contained in Hasko De Luxe Buffet Trays are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, deceptive, and untrue.

In truth and in fact, Hasko De Luxe Buffet Trays are not manufactured and contructed of hardwood, are not of selected hardwood construction, and the surface of said trays is not composed of hardwood material finished to simulate walnut or Mexican copomo wood grains. Hasko De Luxe Buffet Trays as manufactured and constructed by the respondent, are composed of a core of poplar softwood material, said core being covered with a surface of paper which has been processed and printed to resemble Walnut or Mexican copomo wood grains in appearance, and said trays do not contain nor are their surfaces composed of hardwood materials of any description whatsoever.

PAR. 4. Respondent's said statements, representations, and implications to retail merchants and to the purchasing public, made and disseminated as aforedescribed, have had and now have the capacity to and do mislead and deceive a substantial number of such merchants and the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief and impression that the statements and representations contained in respondent's advertising mats, copy, booklets and other materials furnished such merchants, and in such merchants' newspaper and other advertising media, are true, and many of such merchants and many members of the purchasing public have been and are thereby influenced and induced both directly and indirectly to purchase from respondent or from such merchants, the respondent's aforesaid products.

Respondent's said acts and practices, as hereinabove detailed, further serve to place in the hands of unscrupulous or uninformed retail merchants a means and instrumentality whereby in the sale of respondent's said products such merchants may mislead and deceive the purchasing public in manner and method as hereinbefore described.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on December 31, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Haskelite Manufacturing Corporation, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Eldon P. Schrup, attorney for the Commission, before William C. Reeves, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and such testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission (no testimony or other evidence having been offered by respondent). Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (oral arugment not having been requested); and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Haskelite Manufacturing Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 208 West Washington Street, in the city of Chicago, Ill. Respondent also operates a manufacturing plant located in Grand Rapids, Mich. Respondent is engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of serving trays, including certain trays designated as "Hasko De Luxe Buffet Trays" or "Hasko Trays."

PAR. 2. Respondent causes its trays, when sold, to be transported from its places of business in the States of Illinois and Michigan to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its trays in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent sells its trays to department stores, gift shops, and other retail establishments, and the trays are resold by such retail establishments to the purchasing public. In the course and conduct of its business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its trays by the purchasing public, the respondent supplies to dealers purchasing its trays advertising mats which are used by such dealers in advertising respondent's trays in local newspapers, most of which have general circulation among various States of the United States. The expense of these advertisements is borne in whole or in part by respondent, depending upon the quantities of the trays purchased by the respective dealers. In addition to such newspaper advertisements, respondent also uses booklets, leaflets and circulars to advertise its products among prospective purchasers. Among and typical of the legends and statements appearing in such newspaper advertisements and other advertising material are the following:

Simulated walnut grain finish that looks exactly like fine wood inlay
Hardwood with simulated walnut grain surface
Made of selected wood veneer with simulated walnut grain finish
Selected wood construction
Available in walnut or copomo grains
Wood inlay on walnut grained surface * * * also in plain simulated walnut
Made of wood finished in walnut
Made of attractive simulated walnut grain hardwood
Made of fine selected wood in simulated walnut grain

Through the use of these legends and statements and of others similar thereto, the respondent represents that its trays are made entirely of wood and are finished or covered with walnut or copomo wood.

PAR. 4. Respondent's trays are made of a single ply of wood veneer, usually poplar, basswood, or other similar material, which forms what is known as the core of the trays, and the outer surfaces of the trays, both top and bottom, are covered with specially processed paper. This paper is colored and finished in such manner that it closely simulates walnut or copomo grain, as the case may be. The paper appears to be a part of the wood itself, and there is nothing on or about the trays to indicate that they are covered with paper or that any material other than wood has been used in their manufacture.

In some of its advertising the respondent has used in connection with the description of its trays the word "simulated," as "simulated walnut grain surface," and respondent insists that the use of this word is sufficient to apprise prospective purchasers of the fact that the surfaces of the trays are not wood but are of some other material. The Commission is of the opinion, however, from the evidence, and finds, that to a substantial portion of the purchasing public the use of such term is insufficient to disclose the actual nature of the trays.

PAR. 5. The Commission further finds that the use by respondent of the representations herein set forth, and the failure of respondent to disclose affirmatively that the surfaces of its trays are made of paper, serve to place in the hands of unscrupulous or uninformed retail dealers a means and instrumentality whereby such dealers may be enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public.

PAR. 6. The Commission further finds that the acts and practices of the respondent, including the failure of respondent to disclose the true nature of its trays, have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent's trays are made entirely of wood, and the tendency and capacity to cause such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's products as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST [1]

to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Haskelite Manufacturing Corporation, a corporation, and its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its serving trays in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that trays made in part of paper are made entirely of wood.

2. Using the words "wood," "hardwood," "walnut," or "copomo," or any other word descriptive of wood, to designate or describe trays having paper surfaces, unless there appear in immediate connection or conjunction with such words other words clearly indicating that the surfaces of such trays are made of paper.

3. Selling or distributing trays having surfaces of paper which simulates wood, without clearly disclosing by means of legends imprinted upon such trays or upon the individual cartons in which said trays are packed and sold at retail to the ultimate consumer, that such surfaces are made of paper.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

SCHULER CHOCOLATES, INC., ALSO DOING BUSINESS AS SCHULER CANDY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4385. Complaint, Nov. 23, 1940—Decision, Sept. 5, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of candy and confectionery products, including certain assortments so packed and assembled as to involve a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, in resale thereof to the consuming public, and distributing push cards and punchboards for use in such sale and distribution, typical assortments consisting of—

(1) A number of bars of candy of uniform size and shape and a number of boxes of candy, together with a push card for use in sale and distribution of said bars under a plan, as explained thereon, by which customer received, for 5 cents paid, a box of chocolates, two 5-cent bars or three 5-cent bars, depending on the number he secured by chance, the last punch in first section entitled purchaser also to a box of chocolates, and the last punch on the board secured purchaser the large box of chocolates, all others receiving one of said bars; and

(2) A number of boxes of candy, together with a three-section punchboard for use in their sale under a plan by which the chance selection of certain specified numbers entitled purchaser to receive one of said boxes, value of which was in excess of the 5 cents paid, the person punching the last number in each of the three sections also received a box, and others received nothing for their money other than the privilege of making a punch—

Sold such assortments to wholesalers, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its candy, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who do not use method involving chance or any other method contrary to public policy;

Use of which methods, because of said games of chance, had a tendency and capacity unfairly to divert trade in commerce to it from competitors who did not use the same or equivalent methods:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.
Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr. and Mr. J. V. Mishou for the Commission.
Lamberton & Lamberton, of Winona, Minn., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Schuler

Chocolates, Inc., a corporation, doing business under that name and as Schuler Candy Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Schuler Chocolates, Inc., also trading under the name Schuler Candy Co., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Minnesota, with its office and principal place of business located at Winona, Minn. Respondent is now, and for more than 6 years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and confectionery products to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers. The respondent causes and has caused said products, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of Winona, Minn., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than Minnesota, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for more than 6 years last past has been a course of trade by respondent in such candy and confectionery products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and confectionery products between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Respondent distributes and has distributed various push cards and punchboards for use, and which are used, in the sale and distribution of its candy to the consuming public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Certain of said assortments are hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the methods used by respondent, but these are not all-inclusive of the various assortments, nor do they include all the details of the several plans which respondent has been or is using in the sale and distribution of candy by lot or chance:

(a) One assortment consists of a number of bars of candy of uniform size and shape, and a number of boxes of candy, together with a device commonly called a push card. The push card contains partially perforated disks, and on the face of each of said disks is printed the word "Push." Concealed within the said disks are numbers which are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a push or selection has been made and the selected disk pushed or separated from the card. Sales are 5 cents each. The following legend appears on the face of said card:

5¢ Fairplay Assortment 5¢
No. 5—10—15 take One Box Delicious Chocolates.
Nos. 20—25—30—35—40 take Two 5c Bars.
Nos. 45—50 take Three 5c Bars.
Last punch in first section takes One Box Chocolates.
Last punch on board takes Large Box Chocolates.
All other numbers take 5c Bar.

The sales of respondent's candy by means of said push card are made in accordance with the above-described legend or instructions. Said bars or boxes of candy are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legend or instructions. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one or more bars of candy or a box of candy for the amount of money paid is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed various assortments of candy along with push cards involving a lot or chance feature, but such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

(b) Another of said assortments consists of a number of boxes of candy together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Said boxes of candy are sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of such punchboard in the following manner. Sales are 5 cents each, and when a punch is made from the board a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with one and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears a statement or statements informing prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive one of said boxes of candy. The board is also divided into three sections, and the person punching the last number in each of the three sections receives one of said boxes of candy. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining one of the lucky numbers or the last punch in one of said sections receives nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The said boxes of candy are worth more than 5 cents each, and a purchaser who obtains one of the numbers calling for a box of candy or the last punch in one of said sections receives the same for the price of 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the said punch separated from the board. The said candy is thus distributed to purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed various assortments of candy along with punchboards involving a lot or chance feature, but such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who directly or indirectly purchase respondent's said candy expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plans aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its candy in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plans or methods in the sale of its candy, and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plans or methods, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the methods and plans hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure additional pieces of candy without additional cost, or boxes of candy at prices which are much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy and confectionery products in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its candy and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent, because of said games of chance, has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on November 23, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent Schuler Chocolates, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, certain facts were stipulated in the record by the attorney for the respondent and the attorney for the Commission at a hearing before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said record and other evidence were duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, the facts stipulated in the record and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Schuler Chocolates, Inc., also trading under the name Schuler Candy Co., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Minnesota, with its office and principal place of business located at Winona, Minn. Respondent is now, and for more than 6 years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and confectionery products to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers. The respondent causes, and has caused, said products, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of Winona, Minn., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than Minnesota, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for more than 6 years last past has been, a course of trade by respondent in such candy and confectionery products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business in commerce, as aforesaid, respondent has sold to wholesale dealers certain assortments of candy packed and assembled in a manner designed and intended for use in the resale thereof to the consuming public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Respondent has also distributed various push cards and punchboards designed for use in the sale and distribution of its said assortments of candy to the consuming public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Certain of said assortments are hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the methods used by respondent.

One assortment consisted of a number of bars of candy of uniform size and shape and a number of boxes of candy, together with a device commonly called a push card. The push card contained 60 partially perforated disks and on the face of each of said disks the word "Push" was printed. Concealed within the said disks were numbers which were effectively concealed from purchasers or prospective purchasers until a push or selection had been made and the selected disk pushed or separated from the card. Sales were 5 cents each. The following legend appeared on the face of said card:

5¢ Fairplay Assortment 5¢

Nos. 5–10–15 take One Box Delicious Chocolates.
Nos. 20–25–30–35–40 take Two 5¢ Bars.
Nos. 45–50 take Three 5¢ Bars.
Last punch in first section takes One Box Chocolates.
Last punch on board takes Large Box Chocolates.
All other numbers take 5¢ Bar.

Respondent has sold and distributed various other assortments of candy with push cards involving a lot or chance feature, but such assortments were similar to the one above described and varied only in detail.

Another of the assortments sold and distributed by respondent consisted of a number of boxes of candy, together with a device commonly called a punchboard. When a punch was made from the board a number was disclosed. The numbers began with 1 and continued to the number of punches there were on the board, but the numbers were not arranged in numerical sequence. Sales were 5 cents each. The board was divided into three sections and bore a statement which provided that the person who punched the last number in each of the three sections received one of said boxes of candy and that certain specified numbers entitled the purchaser thereof to receive one of said boxes of candy. It was further provided that a purchaser who did not qualify by obtaining one of the lucky numbers or the last punch in one of said sections received nothing for his money other than the privilege of punching a number from the board. The said boxes of candy were worth more than 5 cents each and a purchaser who obtained one of the numbers calling for a box of candy or the last punch in one of said sections received same for the price of 5 cents. The numbers were effectively concealed until a punch or selection had been made and the said punch separated from the board. The plan or design thus provided for the distribution of said candy wholly by lot or chance to purchasers of punches from the board. Respondent has sold and distributed various other assortments of candy along with punchboards involving a lot or chance feature, but such assortments were similar to the one hereinabove described and varied only in detail.

PAR. 3. Respondent thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its candy in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plans or methods in the sale of its candy is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. Many persons and corporations who sell and distribute candy and confectionery products in competition with respondent do not adopt and use said methods, or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something, or any other method contrary to public policy. The use of said methods by respondent, because of said games of chance, has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, certain facts stipulated in the record and other evidence, and briefs in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act:

It is ordered, That the respondent Schuler Chocolates, Inc., a corporation, also trading as Schuler Candy Co., or under any other name, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of such merchandise to the public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others punchboards, push or pull cards, pull tabs, or other lottery devices, either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, pull tabs, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

Represented that its said preparation constituted a cure or remedy and competent and effective treatment for colds, coughs, sore throat, athlete's foot, and poison ivy, and that it was an effective preventive of coughs and sore throat, facts being the product in question, which was made from a variety of pine oil and was a counter-irritant and aromatic, possessing slight expectorant and antiseptic properties, was of no therapeutic value in the treatment of poison ivy, athlete's foot, or sore throat, was not an effective preventive thereof or of coughs, and did not constitute a cure for colds, although capable of affording some relief from the symptoms thereof because of such expectorant properties;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that its said preparation possessed therapeutic properties which it did not in fact possess, and to cause it to purchase substantial quantities of said preparation as a result of such belief:

Before Mr. Robert S. Hall, trial examiner.

Mr. Charles S. Cox for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Ozon Chemical Co., Inc., a corporation, also trading as Duncan Chemical Co., has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Ozon Chemical Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Missouri, and having its principal place of business at 607 Delmonte Way, St. Louis, Mo. Respondent also trades from said address as Duncan Chemical Co.

PAR. 2. The respondent is now and for more than two years last past has been engaged in the business of selling and distributing a medicinal preparation designated as "Duncan's Ozon." In the course and conduct of its business, respondent causes its said medicinal preparation, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Missouri to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States, other than the State of Missouri, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times herein mentioned has maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said product by the United States mails, and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals and by pamphlets, circulars, and other advertising literature, are the following:

For * * * poison ivy, athlete's foot.

Now is the time of the year when your demand for COLD remedies should begin to grow.

DUNCAN'S OZON is one of the best preventives and treatments of sore throat and coughs, that is known. It is a natural household remedy and no family medicine chest can afford to be without a bottle.

At the first sign of approaching sore throat, this medicine can be applied with a swab and instantly relief is had, and in most cases, infection is stopped and cold avoided.

By the same method of treatment it can be used as a COUGH MEDICINE and in most cases will stop a cough instantly.

Prescribed by physicians and hospitals.

Manufactured and distributed by DUNCAN CHEMICAL CO.,
607 Delmonte Way,
St. Louis, Missouri.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the foregoing representations, and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents and has represented, directly or by implication, that its said preparation constitutes a cure or remedy and a competent and effective treatment for colds, coughs, sore throat, athlete's foot, and poison ivy, and is an effective preventive of colds, coughs and sore throat; that said preparation is recommended by physicians generally and is in general use in hospitals. Respondent further represents that it manufactures or compounds its said preparation.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation does not constitute a cure or remedy nor a competent or effective treatment for colds, coughs, sore throat, athlete's foot or poison ivy, nor is said preparation an effective preventive of colds, coughs, or sore throat. Said preparation is composed principally of pine oil, and is of no substantial therapeutic value in either the treatment or the prevention of any of the ailments or conditions mentioned. Said preparation is not recommended by physicians generally, nor is it in general use in hospitals. Respondent does not manufacture or compound said preparation but obtains said preparation from other sources.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true, and to cause the public, because of such erroneous belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's preparation.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on December 17, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Ozon Chemical Co., Inc., a corporation, also trading as Duncan Chemical Co., charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint (no answer being filed by respondent), testimony and other evidence in support of and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint were introduced before Robert S. Hall, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and such testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Ozon Chemical Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Missouri and having its principal place of business at 607 Delmonte Way, St. Louis, Mo. Respondent also trades under the name Duncan Chemical Co.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and since May 1938 has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation designated as "Duncan's Ozon." In the course and conduct of its business respondent causes its preparation, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Missouri to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States, including, among others, the States of Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Alabama. Respondent maintains, and since May 1938 has maintained, a course of trade in its preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business respondent advertises its preparation by means of advertisements inserted in newspapers which have general circulation among and between various States of the United States. Respondent also makes use of circular letters, which are sent by it through the United States mails to purchasers and prospective purchasers of its preparation. All of respondent's advertisements and advertising material are for the purpose of inducing, and are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of respondent's preparation in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the statements and representations appearing in such advertisements and advertising material are the following:

For * * * poison ivy, athlete's foot.

Now is the time of the year when your demand for COLD remedies should begin to grow.

DUNCAN'S OZON is one of the best preventives and treatment of sore throat and coughs, that is known. It is a natural household remedy and no family medicine chest can afford to be without a bottle.

At first sign of approaching sore throat, this medicine can be applied with a swab and instantly relief is had, and in most cases, infection is stopped * * *.

By the same method of treatment it can be used as a COUGH MEDICINE and in most cases will stop a cough instantly.

PAR. 4. Through the use of these statements and representations, and others of similar import, the respondent represents and has represented, directly or by implication, that its preparation constitutes a cure or remedy and a competent and effective treatment for colds, coughs, sore throat, athlete's foot, and poison ivy, and that it is an effective preventive of coughs and sore throat.

PAR. 5. Respondent's preparation is made from a certain kind or variety of pine oil. The oil is made from long leaf yellow pine, being steam distilled from the wood. The oil is removed from the wood by subjecting the ground-up wood to the action of live steam. The oil is volatilized along with the steam, after which it condenses.

PAR. 6. The expert testimony in the record shows, and the Commission finds, that respondent's preparation is a rubifacient or counter-irritant, that it is aromatic, and possesses expectorant properties to a slight degree. It also possesses antiseptic properties but not to any substantial degree, and it is seldom prescribed by physicians for that purpose, there being other drugs which are much more effective.

The preparation is of no therapeutic value in the treatment of poison ivy or athlete's foot. Athlete's foot is a fungus infection of the skin and in order to treat the condition successfully it is necessary to destroy the fungi. To do this the drug used must be able to penetrate the dead skin which contains the fungi, and must be sufficiently antiseptic to destroy the fungi. While pine oil is mildly antiseptic and will penetrate the skin to a limited extent, these properties are insufficient to reach and kill all of the fungi in the deeper layers of the skin.

Nor is respondent's preparation of any therapeutic value in the treatment of sore throat. Sore throat is caused by an infection either of the tonsils or the mucous membrane of the throat. The properties of pine oil are not sufficient to have any substantial effect upon the condition. Nor is pine oil an effective preventive of sore throat.

While certain pine oil products are sometimes incorporated in cough remedies, they are usually combined with expectorants, sedatives, or other drugs, these being more effective than the pine oil constituent. Used alone, pine oil has no therapeutic value in the treatment of coughs in excess of such relief as may be afforded by its expectorant properties, which may tend to afford some comfort to the patient. Pine oil is not an effective preventive of coughs.

Pine oil does not constitute a cure or remedy for colds, although it is capable of affording some relief for the symptoms of colds.

PAR. 7. The Commission therefore finds that respondent's representations with respect to its preparation, as set forth in paragraphs 3 and 4 hereof, are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and deceptive, and constitute false advertisements.

PAR. 8. The Commission further finds that the use by respondent of these false advertisements has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent's preparation possesses therapeutic properties and values which it does not in fact possess, and the tendency and capacity to cause such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's preparation as a result of such belief.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission (no answer having been filed by respondent), testimony and other evidence taken before Robert S. Hall, trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Ozon Chemical Co., Inc., a corporation, also trading as Duncan Chemical Co., and its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of its medicinal preparation designated "Duncan's Ozon," or any preparation of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference:

(a) That said preparation constitutes a cure or remedy for, or possesses any therapeutic value in the treatment of, sore throat, poison ivy, or athlete's foot.

(b) That said preparation constitutes a cure or remedy for colds or coughs, or that it possesses any therapeutic value in the treatment of coughs in excess of such comfort as it may afford by reason of its expectorant properties.

(c) That said preparation is an effective preventive of sore throat or coughs.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

CONTINENTAL PREMIUM MART

Docket 4462. Complaint, Feb. 11, 1941—Decision, Sept. 5, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the competitive interstate sale and distribution of novelty jewelry, fountain pens, billfolds, knives, wearing apparel, carnival supplies, lamps, premium novelties and other merchandise, including three assortments of its merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumer, and which consisted of a large cardboard carton enclosing a pull card and a number of smaller cartons, each containing an article of merchandise, and bearing on the end a number, function of which was to determine the chance recipient of the particular article, dependent upon the securing of the corresponding number from the pull card so that which of such articles—many of greater retail value than the 10 cents paid for a chance—purchaser received was determined wholly by lot—

Sold such assortments, directly or indirectly, to dealers and retailers by whom they were exposed for sale and sold to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale and distribution of its merchandise, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to use any sales methods involving chance or contrary to public policy, and refrain therefrom;

With the result that many dealers in and ultimate consumers of said merchandise were attracted by its said sales plans, and were thereby induced to buy its said merchandise in preference to that of aforesaid competitors, with effect of unfairly diverting trade to it from them; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. John W. Addison, trial examiner.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Mr. Joseph H. Bilansky, of Milwaukee, Wis., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Continental Premium Mart, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Continental Premium Mart, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Wisconsin, with its principal office and place of business located at 822 North Third Street, Milwaukee, Wis. Respondent is now and for more than 3 years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of novelty jewelry, fountain pens, bill folds, knives, wearing apparel, carnival supplies, lamps, premium novelties, and other merchandise to dealers and other purchasers. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise when sold to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Wisconsin to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now and for more than 3 years last past has been a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers and other purchasers certain assortments of said merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when said merchandise is sold and distributed to the purchaser or consumer thereof. One of the said assortments is and has been sold and distributed to the purchasing public in substantially the following manner.

This assortment consists of a large cardboard carton in which is contained a number of smaller cartons, each of which smaller cartons contains an article of merchandise and on the end of each of said smaller cartons there appears a number. One end of said large carton is so constructed as to constitute a device commonly known as a pull card. Said pull card contains a number of partially perforated pull tabs and on the reverse side of each of said tabs there appears a number which corresponds to the number appearing on the end of one of said smaller cartons. Sales are 10 cents each and each purchaser pulls one of said tabs from the pull card. The purchaser is entitled to and receives the smaller carton bearing the number which corresponds to the number appearing on the reverse side of the tab pulled by such purchaser. The numbers on the reverse sides of said tabs are effectively concealed from purchasers and the prospective purchasers until selections have been made and the tabs have been separated or removed from the said card. Many of the said articles of merchandise contained in this assortment have a normal retail value greater than 10 cents. The fact as to which of said articles of merchandise a purchaser is to receive and whether or not he receives an article of merchandise of greater retail value than the amount to be paid therefor are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, various assortments of its merchandise, together with devices for use in the sale or distribution of such merchandise, to the purchasing public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme but the sales plans or methods employed in connection with each of said assortments are substantially the same as the sales plans or methods hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's said assortments of merchandise, either directly or indirectly, expose for sale and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans or methods. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale and distribution of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove described. The use by respondent of said sales plans or methods in the sale of its merchandise, and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plans or methods, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said sales plans or methods or any sales plans or methods involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other sales plans or methods that are contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many dealers in and ultimate consumers of said merchandise are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondent and the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent sales plans or methods. The use of said sales plans or methods by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent sales plans or methods and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on February 11, 1941, issued and on February 12, 1941, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Continental Premium Mart, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in violation of the provisions of said act. On March 21, 1941, respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. A hearing was held in this matter on June 5, 1941, at which time a stipulation as to the facts, entered into by and between counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondent, was read into the record and certain testimony was introduced by respondent. The filing of briefs and the presentation of oral argument in support of and in oposition to the allegations of said complaint were waived. Thereafter this proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, stipulation and testimony, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Continental Premium Mart, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Wisconsin, with its principal office and place of business located at 822 North Third Street, Milwaukee, Wis. Respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of novelty jewelry, fountain pens, bill folds, knives, wearing apparel, carnival supplies, lamps, premium novelties, and other merchandise to dealers and other purchasers. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise when sold to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Wisconsin to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers and other purchasers three assortments of said merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when said merchandise is sold and distributed to the purchaser or consumer thereof. Such assortments were and are known as "Captain Kidd's Bazaar," "Trading Post" and "Play Ball" and are and have been sold and distributed to the purchasing public in substantially the following manner:

Each of said assortments consists of a large cardboard carton in which is contained a number of smaller cartons, each of which smaller cartons contains an article of merchandise and on the end of each of said smaller cartons there appears a number. One end of said large carton is so constructed as to constitute a device commonly known as a pull card. Said pull card contains a number of partially perforated pull tabs and on the reverse side of each of said tabs there appears a number which corresponds to the number appearing on the end of one of said smaller cartons. Sales are 10 cents each and each purchaser pulls one of said tabs from the pull card. The purchaser is entitled to and receives the smaller carton bearing the number which corresponds to the number appearing on the reverse side of the tab pulled by such purchaser. The numbers on the reverse sides of said tabs are effectively concealed from purchasers and the prospective purchasers until selections have been made and the tabs have been separated or removed from the said card. Many of the said articles of merchandise contained in this assortment have a normal retail value greater than 10 cents. The facts as to which of said articles of merchandise a purchaser is to receive and whether or not he receives an article of merchandise of greater retail value than the amount he paid therefor are thus determined wholly by lot or chance. The said assortments, when purchased by respondent, were packed and assembled as above described.

PAR. 3. The Commission finds that retail dealers who purchase respondent's said assortments of merchandise, either directly or indirectly, expose for sale and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans or methods. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale and distribution of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove described. The use by respondent of said sales plans or methods in the sale of its merchandise, and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plans or methods, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The Commission finds that the sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with respondent, as above described, are unwilling to adopt and use said sales plans or methods or any sales plans or methods involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other sales plans or methods that are contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many dealers in, and ultimate consumers of, said merchandise are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondent and the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent sales plans or methods. The use of said sales plans or methods by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent sales plans or methods and, as a result thereof, substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, a stipulation as to the facts entered into by and between counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondent and certain testimony introduced by respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

IN THE MATTER OF

W. HILLYER RAGSDALE, ANNIE M. RAGSDALE, MARSHALL D. RAGSDALE, AND IDA J. RAGSDALE, DOING BUSINESS AS W. HILLYER RAGSDALE, W. HILLYER RAGSDALE, INC., AND RAGSDALE CANDIES

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4472. Complaint, Mar. 19, 1941—Decision, Sept. 5, 1941

Where four individuals engaged in interstate sale and distribution of outfits, courses of instruction, supplies, and material represented to give men and women an opportunity to establish themselves in the business of making and selling home-made candy; in letters and circulars, and in advertisements in periodicals—

(a) Represented and implied that their outfits and instruction afforded an opportunity to all, regardless of prior training and experience or amount of their capital, to enter the business of making and selling home-made candies, and that, upon the purchase of such outfits and instruction, all such men and women, would thereby and by reason of their help, be enabled to set themselves up in a profitable business, which could be operated from or in the home;

(b) Represented and implied that through the use of such method and instruction and the assistance which they gave by mail, and the equipment and supplies which they furnished, all such men and women were assured by them of success in the candy business and of a steady income and profits from the start, whether they took up such occupation as a part-time or full-time business;

(c) Represented and implied that the equipment and supplies which they furnished were the same as, and included, all the professional confectioners' tools, equipment, supplies, and materials, used in the most modern home-made candy kitchens, and required in making home-made candy and preparing it for sale, except certain inexpensive materials; and

(d) Represented and implied that a purchaser of their outfits and instruction would have nothing else to buy at the start, except "sugar, flavoring, etc."—represented by them to be only inexpensive minor items—inasmuch as they furnished sufficient tools, supplies and raw materials, except such "inexpensive items," to make over $40 worth of candy, which they represented to be enough to give the purchaser a good start;

Facts being the instruction and equipment which they furnished were not sufficient to assure the acquisition of the necessary skill in the manufacturing and merchandising of candy, or to permit a person having such skill to put into operation and operate an establishment in which enough candy could be made to meet the requirements of such business, or to supply candy that could be sold for enough money to assure a successful business or the earning of a steady income; the tools and equipment furnished by them did not include all those necessary to make home-made candy and prepare it for sale, but much additional expensive equipment would be necessary; the raw materials not furnished by them were not inexpensive but relatively expensive, and those furnished were not sufficient to enable the purchaser to make, even after the addition of materials not furnished, enough candy to start a business from which $40 or any other definite amount could be earned in any given length of time, since such candy, like all fresh home-made candy, would be subject to deterioration from fermentation and drying out, if not properly made or promptly sold; other factors, not indicated in their representations, enter into the difficulty of selling such candy; and their representations as to the opportunity afforded and certainty of success as above set forth had no basis in fact; and (e) Falsely represented and implied that a large number of men and women had, by following their method, achieved success in the candy business and made a good steady income and profits, both as a part-time and as a full-time business; which statement, considering the number who had purchased their course, was without basis in fact;

Capacity, tendency and effect of which acts and practices were to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations and implications were true, and to cause many members of said public, because of such belief, to purchase their outfits, courses of instruction, supplies and materials:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.

Mr. D. E. Hoopingarner for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that W. Hillyer Ragsdale, Annie M. Ragsdale, Marshall D. Ragsdale, and Ida J. Ragsdale, individually and doing business under the names and styles of W. Hillyer Ragsdale, W. Hillyer Ragsdale, Inc., and Ragsdale Candies, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, W. Hillyer Ragsdale, Annie M. Ragsdale, Marshall D. Ragsdale and Ida J. Ragsdale, are individuals trading and doing business under the names and styles of W. Hillyer Ragsdale, W. Hillyer Ragsdale, Inc., and Ragsdale Candies, with their office and principal place of business at 307 North Walnut Street in the city of East Orange, State of New Jersey.

For more than 2 years last past respondents have been, and are now, engaged in the sale and distribution of outfits, courses of instruction, supplies, and materials which are represented by respondents to give men and women an opportunity to establish for themselves and in their homes the business of manufacturing and merchandising home-made candy. In the course and conduct of said business respondents have been and are now causing their said outfits, courses of instruction, supplies and materials, when sold, to be transported from their said place of business in the State of New Jersey to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their said outfits, courses of instruction, supplies and materials in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said outfits, courses of instruction, supplies and materials, respondents, by means of letters and circulars and by means of advertisements appearing in magazines and periodicals, all of which were circulated between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, have made various representations with respect to their said outfits, courses of instruction, supplies and materials. Among said representations are the following:

(a) We help start you in business, furnishing outfits and instruction, operating "Specialty Candy Factory" home. Men—women opportunity to earn good steady income. All or spare time.

(b) Profits in "Specialty Candies" in a business for both men and women.

(c) A Ragsdale "New System Specialty Candy Factory" will help set you up in a business of your own almost immediately.

(d) By the Ragsdale Original Method, your home kitchen, spare room or basement can be fitted up as a complete candy work-shop or candy studio.

(e) By using the methods as outlined in our instruction, you should be assured of a cash income daily.

(f) With our personal assistance by mail, it will be next to impossible for you to fail to make money.

(g) Only a few pounds sold daily will net you a good income.

(h) By the Ragsdale method you should begin making and selling the delicious Specialty Candies within a few days after starting.

(i) A Ragsdale "New System Specialty Candy Factory" makes it possible to turn your spare time into cash profits.

(j) You should begin to make money almost from the first day you start.

(k) Complete course in professional and home-made candy manufacturing—professional confectioners' big outfit of tools—professional confectioners' outfit of materials and supplies.

(l) Professional confectioners' big tool outfit. This outfit consists of the following standard full-size professional equipment, the same as used in the best candy factories and candy kitchens. It should not be confused with cheap home candy outfits.

(m) To further help you get a quick and successful start in this profitable business with the least possible outlay of money, we are going to ship sufficient supplies and raw materials with the course and outfits, free of extra cost, to help make over $40.00 worth of candy. A list of these supplies is enclosed with this letter. There will be nothing else to buy at the start except sugar, flavorings, etc. These you may already have in your home. You should begin to make and sell candy at a large profit from the first week.

(n) The supplies and tools which we furnish free of extra cost with the coarse and outfits will help make up over $40.00 worth of candy. This will give you a good start and enable you to buy future supplies in large quantities.

(o) The successful operators of our "New System Specialty Candy Factories" are divided into two classes—men and women who are making candy during their spare time at home to earn extra money, and those who have taken up the work of a permanent full-time business. Whichever plan you choose you cannot go wrong.

(p) These people are making money through the Ragsdale original method of candy making.

Through the statements, claims and representations aforesaid, and others of similar import and meaning not herein set out, respondents have represented and implied that their outfits and instruction afford an opportunity to all men and women, regardless of their prior training and experience or the amount of their capital, to enter the business of making and selling home-made candies; that all such men and women, upon the purchase of such outfits and instructions, will thereby and by reason of respondents' help be enabled to set themselves up in a profitable business; that by respondents' method of making and selling candy, such business can be operated from or in the home; and by use of such method as outlined in their instruction and by reason of their outfits and instruction, and the assistance which they give by mail, and the equipment, tools, supplies and raw materials which they furnish with their instruction, all such men and women are assured by respondents of success in the candy business and of a steady income and profits from the start, whether they take up such business as a part-time or a full-time business.

Respondents have also represented and implied that the tools, equipment, supplies and materials that they furnish are the same as, and include, all the professional confectioners' tools, equipment, supplies, and materials, except certain inexpensive materials, used in the most modern home-made candy kitchens and that are required in the making of home-made candy and the preparing of it for sale.

Respondents have also represented and implied that a purchaser of their outfits and instruction will have nothing else to buy at the start, except "sugar, flavoring, etc.," which have been represented by respondents to be only inexpensive minor items, inasmuch as they also furnish, free of extra cost, sufficient tools, supplies and raw materials, except said inexpensive items, to make over $40.00 worth of candy, which respondents have represented to be enough candy to give the purchaser a good start in the candy business.

Respondents have also represented and implied that a large number of the men and women who have purchased their course of instruction, have, by following their method of making and selling candy, achieved success in the candy business and, made a good steady income and profits, making and selling candy, both as a part-time and as a full-time business.

PAR. 2. There is no basis in fact for the many and various assurances that respondents give men and women that they can enter, or that there is an opportunity of entering, the candy business, by beginning in such limited way, suggested by respondents, or that such opportunity is afforded by respondents' furnishing outfits and instructions, or that they are thereby helped to start in business, or that by respondents' help they can set themselves up in a profitable business, or that by respondents' method of making and selling candy such business can be operated from or in the home, or that by following respondents' methods, or by reason of their outfits and instruction, or the assistance given by mail, or the equipment, tools, supplies and materials furnished, they can, or will, become successful in the candy business, or make a steady income, or profits, either as a part-time or as a full-time business.

The outfits and instruction, equipment, tools, supplies, and raw materials which respondents furnish are not sufficient, taken separately or as a whole, to assure the acquisition of the necessary skill in the manufacturing and merchandising of candy. They are not sufficient to permit a person having the necessary skill in the making and selling of candy to put into operation and operate an establishment in which sufficient candy can be made to meet the requirements of such business. They are not sufficient to supply enough candy that can be sold for enough money to assure the successful beginning of a candy business or the earning of a steady income.

The tools and equipment furnished by respondents are not the same, and do not include, all the tools and equipment necessary to make home-made candy and prepare such candy for sale. Much additional expensive equipment would be necessary. All the equipment, tools, supplies and materials furnished by respondents have a value of not to exceed $2.50. The raw materials which are not furnished by respondents are not inexpensive but are relatively expensive. The supplies and raw materials that respondents furnish are not sufficient to enable the purchaser to make, even after the addition of materials not furnished, enough candy to start a business from which $40 or any other definite amount can be earned in any given length of time. Such candy, like all fresh home-made candy, would be subject to becoming stale and hard and to deterioration from fermentation and drying out, if not properly made, or if not promptly sold. Other factors, which are not indicated in respondents' representations, enter into the difficulty of selling such candy.

There is also no basis in fact for respondents' statement that a large number of the men and women who have purchased their course of instruction, considering the number that have purchased it, have, by following their method of making and selling candy, achieved success in the candy business or made a steady income, making and selling candy, either as a part-time or as a full-time business.

The aforesaid representations and implications made and published by respondents as aforesaid are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and deceptive.

PAR. 4. The use by respondents of the acts and practices hereinabove mentioned in connection with the sale and distribution of their outfits, courses of instruction, supplies and materials, in commerce, has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations and implications are true, and causes many members of the purchasing public, because of said mistaken and erroneous belief, to purchase respondents' outfits, courses of instruction, supplies and materials.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 19th day of March 1941, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondents, W. Hillyer Ragsdale, Annie M. Ragsdale, Marshall D. Ragsdale, and Ida J. Ragsdale, individually and doing business under the names and styles of W. Hillyer Ragsdale, W. Hillyer Ragsdale, Inc., and Ragsdale Candies, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On April 8, 1941, the respondents filed their answers in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into by and between counsel for the Commission and the respondents, Marshall D. Ragsdale, acting for himself, and W. Hillyer Ragsdale, acting for himself, and Annie M. Ragsdale and Ida J. Ragsdale, subject to the approval of the Commission, whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts thereupon read into and made a part of the record in this proceeding, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs or of a report upon the evidence by the trial examiner. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answers and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved and accepted and made a part of the record, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, W. Hillyer Ragsdale, Annie M. Ragsdale, Marshall D. Ragsdale and Ida J. Ragsdale, are individuals trading and doing business under the names and styles of W. Hillyer Ragsdale, W. Hillyer Ragsdale, Inc., and Ragsdale Candies, with their office and principal place of business at 307 North Walnut Street in the city of East Orange, State of New Jersey.

For more than 2 years last past respondents have been, and are now, engaged in the sale and distribution of outfits, courses of instruction, supplies and materials which are represented by respondents to give men and women an opportunity to establish for themselves and in their homes the business of manufacturing and merchandising home-made candy. In the course and conduct of said business respondents have been and are now causing their said outfits, courses of instruction, supplies and materials, when sold, to be transported from their said place of business in the State of New Jersey to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their said outfits, courses of instruction, supplies and materials in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said outfits, course of instruction, supplies, and materials, respondents, by means of letters and circulars and by means of advertisements appearing in magazines and periodicals, all of which were circulated between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, have made various representations with respect to their said outfits, courses of instruction, supplies and materials. Among said representations are the following:

(a) We help to start you in business, furnishing outfits and instruction, operating "Specialty Candy Factory" home. Men—women opportunity to earn good steady income. All or spare time.

(b) Profits in "Specialty Candies" in a business for both men and women.

(c) A Ragsdale "New System Specialty Candy Factory" will help set you up in a business of your own almost immediately.

(d) By the Ragsdale Original Method, your home kitchen, spare room or basement can be fitted up as a complete candy work-shop or candy studio.

(e) By using the methods as outlined in our instruction, you should be assured of a cash income daily.

(f) With our personal assistance by mail, it will be next to impossible for you to fail to make money.

(g) Only a few pounds sold daily will net you a good income.

(h) By the Ragsdale method you should begin making and selling the delicious Specialty Candies within a few days after starting.

(i) A Ragsdale "New System Specialty Candy Factory" makes it possible to turn your spare time into cash profits.

(j) You should begin to make money almost from the first day you start.

(k) Complete course in professional and home-made candy manufacturing—professional confectioners' big outfit of tools—professional confectioners' outfit of materials and supplies.

(l) Professional confectioners' big tool outfit. This outfit consists of the following standard full-size professional equipment, the same as used in the best candy factories and candy kitchens. It should not be confused with cheap home candy outfits.

(m) To further help you get a quick and successful start in this profitable business with the least possible outlay of money, we are going to ship sufficient supplies and raw materials with the course and outfits, free of extra cost, to help make over $40.00 worth of candy. A list of these supplies is enclosed with this letter. There will be nothing else to buy at the start except sugar, flavorings, etc. These you may already have in your home. You should begin to make and sell candy at a large profit from the first week.

(n) The supplies and tools which we furnish free of extra cost with the course and outfits will help make up over $40.00 worth of candy. This will give you a good start and enable you to buy future supplies in large quantities.

(o) The successful operators of our "New System Specialty Candy Factories" are divided into two classes—men and women who are making candy during their spare time at home to earn extra money, and those who have taken up the work of a permanent full-time business. Whichever plan you choose you cannot go wrong.

(p) These people are making money through the Ragsdale original method of candy making.

Through the statements, claims and representations aforesaid, and others of similar import and meaning not herein set out, respondents have represented and implied that their outfits and instruction afford an opportunity to all men and women, regardless of their prior training and experience or the amount of their capital, to enter the business of making and selling home-made candies; that all such men and women, upon the purchase of such outfits and instruction, will thereby and by reason of respondents' help be enabled to set themselves up in a profitable business; that by respondents' method of making and selling candy, such business can be operated from or in the home; and by use of such method as outlined in their instruction and by reason of their outfits and instruction, and the assistance which they give by mail, and the equipment, tools, supplies, and raw materials which they furnish with their instruction, all such men and women are assured by respondents of success in the candy business and of a steady income and profits from the start, whether they take up such business as a part-time or a full-time business.

Respondents have also represented and implied that the tools, equipment, supplies and materials that they furnish are the same as, and include, all the professional confectioners' tools, equipment, supplies, and materials, except certain inexpensive materials, used in the most modern home-made candy kitchens and that are required in the making of home-made candy and the preparing of it for sale.

Respondents have also represented and implied that a purchaser of their outfits and instruction will have nothing else to buy at the start, except "sugar, flavoring, etc.," which have been represented by respondents to be only inexpensive minor items, inasmuch as they also furnish, free of extra cost, sufficient tools, supplies and raw materials, except said inexpensive items, to make over $40.00 worth of candy, which respondents have represented to be enough candy to give the purchaser a good start in the candy business.

Respondents have also represented and implied that a large number of the men and women who have purchased their course of instruction, have, by following their method of making and selling candy, achieved success in the candy business and made a good steady income and profits, making and selling candy, both as a part-time and as a full-time business.

PAR. 3. There is no basis in fact for the many and various assurances that respondents give men and women that they can enter, or that there is an opportunity of entering, the candy business, by beginning in such limited way, suggested by respondents, or that such opportunity is afforded by respondents' furnishing outfits and instructions, or that they are thereby helped to start in business, or that by respondents' help they can set themselves up in a profitable business, or that by respondents' method of making and selling candy such business can be operated from or in the home, or that by following respondents' method, or by reason of their outfits and instruction, or the assistance given by mail, or the equipment, tools, supplies and materials furnished, they can, or will, become successful in the candy business, or make a steady income, or profits, either as a part-time or as a full-time business.

The outfits and instruction, equipment, tools, supplies and raw materials which respondents furnish are not sufficient, taken separately or as a whole to assure the acquisition of the necessary skill in the manufacturing and merchandising of candy. They are not sufficient to permit a person having the necessary skill in the making and selling of candy to put into operation and operate an establishment in which sufficient candy can be made to meet the requirements of such business. They are not sufficient to supply enough candy that can be sold for enough money to assure the successful beginning of a candy business or the earning of a steady income.

The tools and equipment furnished by respondents do not include all the tools and equipment necessary to make home-made candy and prepare such candy for sale. Much additional expensive equipment would be necessary. The raw materials which are not furnished by respondents are not inexpensive but are relatively expensive. The supplies and raw materials that respondents furnish are not sufficient to enable the purchaser to make, even after the addition of materials not furnished, enough candy to start a business from which $40 or any other definite amount can be earned in any given length of time. Such candy, like all fresh home-made candy, would be subject to becoming stale and hard and to deterioration from fermentation and drying out, if not properly made, or if not promptly sold. Other factors, which are not indicated in respondents' representations, enter into the difficulty of selling such candy.

There is also no basis in fact for respondents' statement that a large number of the men and women who have purchased their course of instruction, considering the number that have purchased it, have, by following their method of making and selling candy achieved success in the candy business or made a steady income, making and selling candy, either as a part-time or as a full-time business.

The aforesaid representations and implications made and published by respondents as aforesaid are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and deceptive.

PAR. 4. The use by respondents of the acts and practices hereinabove mentioned in connection with the sale and distribution of their outfits, courses of instruction, supplies, and materials, in commerce, has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations and implications are true, and causes many members of the purchasing public, because of said mistaken and erroneous belief, to purchase respondents' outfits, courses of instruction, supplies and materials.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answers of the respondents and a stipulation entered into by and between counsel for the Commission and the respondents, wherein it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts thereupon read into and made a part of the record in this proceeding may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the Commission may proceed upon such statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs or of a report upon the evidence by the trial examiner, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

2. Representing that the tools, equipment, supplies and materials furnished by the respondents include all the confectioners' tools, equipment, supplies, and materials, except certain minor inexpensive items, that are used in modern home-made candy kitchens or that they are all that are required in the making of home-made candy and in the preparing of it for sale, except minor inexpensive items; or that respondents furnish sufficient tools, supplies and raw materials, except for minor inexpensive items, to make over $40 worth of candy, or enough candy to give the purchaser a good start in the candy business.

3. Representing that a large number of men and women who have purchased respondents' courses of instruction, tools and equipment have, by following their method of making and selling candy, achieved success in the candy business and made a steady income and profits making and selling candy either as a part-time or as a full-time business.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

POND'S EXTRACT COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER, IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3427. Complaint, May 18, 1938—Decision, Sept. 10, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture, and in competitive interstate sale and distribution, of a line of cosmetics, including its liquefying cream, cold cream, vanishing cream, and "Danya Lotion," each ounce of which contained, since sometime in 1938, 3100 units of vitamin A and 165 units of vitamin D; in numerous advertisements in magazines of general circulation, and in radio programs—

(a) Represented that its creams were deep-reaching, going right to the user's underskin, which was thereby stirred to vigorous action and kept active, and that effect of use of one of its creams was to soften and loosen impurities within the skin, lifting them from the pores and thereby liberating the underskin and leaving it free to function actively again; and

(b) Represented that use of its said creams appeared to wipe away lines and blemishes, giving the skin a fresh, smooth appearance, and not only cleansing it but keeping away lines and blackheads;

Facts being the only effect of the use of said creams would be an emollient smoothing and cleansing action on the surface of the skin, the massaging of cold cream into the skin affecting the so-called under- or true skin to an extremely small degree only, and above statement as to the softening, loosening and lifting of dirt, etc., from within the skin, and liberating of the user's underskin, was incorrect; skin blemishes may be due to faulty diet or other causes in which use of cold creams is of no benefit, and lines and blemishes cannot be wiped away by use of the creams, and while use of cold cream may postpone time when wrinkles will be quite noticeable, such use alone will not retard appearance thereof; and

(c) Made representations and claims, since about July 1938, to the effect that the vitamin content of its creams, which it then described as "New Skin Vitamin Creams," nourished the skin of the user, that when it found a way to put this "skin vitamin" in its cream it gave to women an important new scientific aid to skin care, and that through use of its said lotion, the skin vitamin was put into and stored up in the hands of the user;

Facts being that, while vitamin A, when included in a suitable vehicle, may be absorbed by the skin of a human being in physiologically significant quantities, to accomplish such result enormous quantities of the vitamin must be added to the vehicle and applied to the skin for several hours, accompanied by considerable massaging, due to the relatively small absorption compared with oral administration, proper treatment for a deficiency; only in very small proportion of cases is a harsh, dry condition of the skin due to vitamin A deficiency, in which event a physician is needed; the most its creams could accomplish would be to postpone the day when lines and wrinkles would be quite noticeable; while application of its creams might be helpful in keeping the skin smooth and preventing excessive dryness, the vitamin A content would not increase said creams' emollient properties, and it was not warranted in claiming that such content constituted an important new aid to skin care, or that vitamin A was the skin vitamin, since its activity was not limited to the skin, and its effect thereon was of minor consequence;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public, and of inducing them to purchase substantial quantities of such cosmetics in the mistaken belief that its representations were true, and with result, through use of such representations, of diverting trade unfairly to it from its competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

As respects claim by seller of its so-called "New Skin Vitamin Creams," that their vitamin content nourished the skin of the user, that when seller found a way to put said "skin vitamin" in its creams it gave to women an important new scientific aid to skin care, and that through use of its said lotion the skin vitamin was put into and stored up in the hands of the user, (1) an experiment on a number of students, in which the vitamin was applied to the skin in enormous quantities and for several hours, was not acceptable evidence in support of seller's aforesaid advertising claims, since the conditions and treatment were too remote from customary method of use of its products to permit comparison, absorption, in any event, being of no consequence, since its action would be systemic and not local; (2) various case histories offered to support its contention would not permit conclusion that results there obtained justified claim made for its products, due to difference between the pathological conditions of the individuals concerned and their treatment, on the one hand, and the purpose for which its cosmetic products were offered to adult women of normal health, on the other; and (3) animal experiments submitted in support of its claims were equally inconclusive as approximating neither conditions under which cosmetics are offered to purchasing public, nor method of use by public.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Pond's Extract Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it, in respect thereof, would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Pond's Extract Co. is a corporation created by and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal offices and places of business located at 60 Hudson Street, New York, N. Y. and in Clinton, Conn.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the business of distributing and selling a line of cosmetics. Respondent causes said products when sold to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York or in the State of Connecticut to its customers located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said cosmetics sold and distributed by it in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business respondent is in active and substantial competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of cosmetics in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said cosmetics, respondent has made, by means of advertising circulars and folders, and by means of advertisements inserted in magazines and newspapers, circulated generally throughout the United States, many representations concerning the character and nature of said cosmetics, and concerning the results obtained from their use. Among said representations made by respondent are the following:

See smooth glowing cheeks return as deep-reaching cream stirs under skin back to vigorous action.

A cream that goes deep and keeps your under skin alive.

Pond's Cold Cream goes right to the underskin.

As you pat it into your skin, you feel the circulation freshened, stimulated. Dirt, make-up, all sorts of impurities from within the skin itself are softened, loosened, lifted from the pores. Your underskin is liberated, free to function actively again.

Take a look in your mirror, after a thorough, deep-skin cleansing and stimulation with this cream. How much fresher and clearer your skin is! With just one treatment!

Pond's Cold Cream is pure, germ-free. Use it daily. Every night before retiring to flush impurities away, free the skin, stimulate its under layers.

Remember, the healthy, vigorous underskin Pond's Cold Cream gives you is a sure means to the lovely, satiny outer skin every woman wants.

Pond's Cold Cream seems to wipe away lines and blemishes—gives the skin a fresh, smooth look.

Pond's not only cleans. It keeps away lines, blackheads and such.

The same way with practically all common skin faults. Blemishes, blackheads, sagging tissues—all start deep in your underskin where tiny glands, blood vessels, nerves, fibres begin to fail. Skin faults go—new ones can't start. What your skin needs is a cream that does more than cleanse—a "deep-skin" cream that goes right down to the roots of those lines and blemishes—and fights them where they start. That's exactly what Pond's Cold Cream does.

Now you can get this wonderful "skin vitamin" in every jar of Pond's Cold Cream. Every time you pat in the new Pond's Cold Cream you're patting in some of the active "skin-vitamin" nourishing your skin.

Pond's new "skin-vitamin" Cold Cream is a great advance—a really scientific beauty care. It smooths out lines marvelously—makes texture seem finer. I'll never be afraid of sports or travel drying my skin, with this new cream to put the "skin-vitamin" back into it.

So when Pond's found a way to put this "skin-vitamin" in Pond's Creams, they certainly gave women an important new scientific aid to skin care.

When you eat foods containing this vitamin, one of its special functions is to help keep skin tissue healthy. But when this vitamin is applied right to the skin, it aids the skin more directly.

But there's an easy way to get rid of these little powder catchers. Just melt them away. You can do this instantly with a Keratolytic cream, Pond's Vanishing Cream. The moment it touches your skin, those rough dead cells on top melt off. And that uncovers the new young cells underneath.

All of said statements, together with similar statements appearing in respondent's advertising literature purport to be descriptive of respondent's products and of their effectiveness in use. In all of its advertising literature and through other means respondent, directly or by inference, through statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect, represents: that its cold cream is deep-reaching and stirs the underskin to vigorous action; that it goes deep and keeps the underskin alive and healthy; that the patting of Pond's Cold Cream on the skin will cause dirt, make-up and all kinds of impurities within the skin itself to be softened, loosened and lifted from the pores; that it is a sure means to a lovely, satiny outer skin; that it is germ-free; that it will wipe away and keep away facial lines, blemishes and skin faults and will prevent new ones from starting; that it nourishes the skin, smooths out lines and gives the skin a finer texture; that respondent, in finding a way to put the so-called skin-vitamin in its creams, has given women an important new scientific aid to skin care; that when vitamins are applied right to the skin, they aid the skin more directly than when vitamins are taken by way of the mouth; that Pond's Vanishing Cream melts away rough dead cells on the surface of the skin and uncovers the new young skin cells underneath; that "Danya," Pond's

Cream Lotion, enables hands to store up its so-called active skin-vitamin, and that this product has brought about a new kind of skin care.

PAR. 5. The representations made by respondent with respect to the nature and effect of its products when used are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, Pond's Cold Cream is not a deep-reaching cream, nor does it stir the underskin back to vigorous action; it does not go deep and keep the underskin alive and healthy. The patting of Pond's Cold Cream on the skin will not cause dirt, make-up, and all sorts of impurities within the skin itself to become softened, loosened, and lifted from the pores. It will not give one a healthy vigorous underskin, or provide a sure means to a lovely, satiny outer skin. It is not germ-free. Pond's Cold Cream will not wipe away and keep away facial lines, blemishes, and skin faults nor prevent new ones from starting. Pond's Cold Cream does not nourish the skin, nor does it smooth out lines or make texture finer. Respondent, in finding a way to put the so-called skin-vitamin in its creams, did not give women an important new scientific aid to skin care, nor does the application of any vitamin to the skin in this way help the skin more directly than when such vitamin is taken by way of the mouth.

Pond's Vanishing Cream does not melt away rough dead cells on the surface of the skin, nor does it uncover the new young skin cells underneath.

"Danya," Pond's Cream Lotion, does not enable hands to store up its so-called active skin-vitamin, nor has this product brought about a new kind of skin care.

The true facts are that the ingredients of Pond's Cold Cream are not absorbed by or through the skin. While scientific literature contains no reference to a skin vitamin, it is possible that some types of vitamins may be absorbed through the skin. However, if vitamins are absorbed through the skin, they will not beneficially affect the local condition of the skin where applied. Any vitamin deficiency can be more scientifically treated by way of diet and by the introduction of vitamins and vitamin concentrates by way of the mouth.

PAR. 6. There are, among respondent's competitors, many who manufacture, distribute, and sell cosmetics, who do not in any way misrepresent the quality or character of their respective products, or their effectiveness when used.

PAR. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent in designing or describing its products, and their effectiveness when used, as hereinabove set out, was and is calculated to, and has had and now has, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true. As a direct result of this erroneous and mistaken belief, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products, with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling cosmetics, and who truthfully advertise their respective products and the effectiveness thereof when used. As a result thereof, injury has been done, and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 18, 1938, issued its complaint in this proceeding and subsequently caused it to be served upon the respondent, Pond's Extract Co., charging respondent with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of an answer thereto by the respondent, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by William L. Pencke, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of said complaint, by Blake and Voorhees, attorneys for the respondent, before William C. Reeves and John J. Keenan, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it. Also, stipulations as to certain of the material facts were entered into by and between counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondent, which stipulations were set out in the record. The testimony was also reduced to writing and filed in the office of the Commission, together with numerous pieces of documentary evidence received as exhibits. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the said complaint and answer thereto, the stipulations as to certain of the facts, the testimony and other evidence, briefs by counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondent and the oral argument of the respective counsel, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Pond's Extract Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Delaware, with principal places of business at 60 Hudson Street, New York, N. Y., and at Clinton, Conn. For a number of years respondent has been engaged in the business of the manufacture, sale and distribution of a line of cosmetics. Respondent has caused the cosmetics manufactured by it to be transported, when sold, from its places of business in the States of New York and Connecticut through and into various other States of the United States to the respective purchasers thereof. In the course and conduct of its business respondent has been and is now in substantial competition with various persons and partnerships and with other corporations also engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution, or the sale and distribution in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of cosmetics intended to be used, and used, for the same general purposes.

PAR. 2. Respondent in the course of its business manufactures and sells what it describes as a liquefying cream, a cold cream, a vanishing cream and a lotion, which it labels and describes as "Danya Lotion." Each ounce of these creams and the lotion, since some time in the year 1938, has contained 3.100 units of vitamin A and 165 units of vitamin D. One ounce of the cream when used as directed will last the average user approximately 1 week. Prior to the date in 1938 the creams and the lotion contained no vitamins, and since the vitamins have been added advertisements of the respondent have contained the statement that the formula for Pond's Cold Cream has not been changed in any way apart from the addition of these vitamins. No claims are made in the advertisements which respondent has caused to be published concerning the efficacy of the vitamin D content of the creams and lotion.

PAR. 3. In the course of its business and for the purpose of enhancing the sale of the cosmetics manufactured by it, respondent in the years 1935, 1936, 1937, and 1938, caused numerous advertisements to be published in various magazines and other periodicals having general circulation throughout the United States. Respondent also caused various radio programs to be broadcast advertising its products. In these advertisements and radio programs numerous claims and representations were made concerning the nature of such cosmetics and the benefits that might be derived by their use, among which were claims and representations to the effect: That each of the creams was deep-reaching and when applied went right to the underskin of the user, and as a result the underskin was stirred to vigorous action and kept active; that when one of the creams was patted into the skin of a user she felt the circulation freshened and stimulated, and dirt, makeup and all sorts of impurities within the skin were softened, loosened, and lifted from the pores, and as a result the underskin was liberated and left free to function actively again; that the use of such creams seemed to wipe away lines and blemishes and give to the skin a fresh, smooth appearance; that by the use of such creams the skin was not only cleansed but lines and blackheads were kept away; that as a result of the use of such creams skin faults go and new faults cannot start. Since about July 1938, attention has been called in such advertisements to the fact that the creams manufactured by respondent contained what was described as a skin vitamin, and such creams were described as Pond's New Skin Vitamin Creams, and claims and representations were made to the effect that the vitamin content of such creams had the effect of nourishing the skin of the user; that when respondent found a way to put this skin vitamin in its cream, it gave to women an important new scientific aid to skin care. Reference was made in some of such advertisements to the lotion manufactured and sold by respondent and described as Danya, for which the claim was made that by its use the skin vitamin was put into and stored up in the hands of the user. Other claims and representations of like import concerning said creams and lotion were contained in such advertisements and radio broadcasts.

PAR. 4. Respondent concedes that certain advertisements published in 1935 contained claims and representations which were unwarranted, including the statements that respondent's cold cream is deep reaching, goes right to the underskin, seems to wipe away lines and blemishes, and keeps away lines. With respect to the skin lotion containing vitamin A, the statements that the hands will store up active "skin" vitamins and that the lotion will increase the store of "skin" vitamins in the hands are also conceded to be unwarranted.

PAR. 5. The several experts introduced as witnesses by the Commission include a practicing physician who for over ten years has specialized in dermatology. He is a Diplomate of the Board of Dermatology and Syphilology and a member of other medical and dermatological societies. Another physician has been practicing medicine for 23 years, is specializing in venereal and skin diseases, has taught dermatology and cosmetics at Columbia University and other schools. He is the author of numerous papers and books, including works on cosmetic dermatology. A third witness is Chief Pharmacologist of the United States Public Health Service. He is the author of numerous scientific papers, and a specialist in vitamins, having written a number of papers on the subject of vitamins. Finally, there was introduced a physician who is a pathologist, clinical consultant and teacher at Harvard Medical School. He has been practicing medicine for over thirty years, is a member of all leading societies, has an international reputation, and is considered the leading authority in vitamin investigation. He has written and published hundreds of papers and books, including a number of papers on vitamin A. At least one of respondent's experts refers to him as being undoubtedly the leading figure in the vitamin field, and all of respondent's experts consider him an authority and greatly respect his opinions.

The respondent introduced as expert witnesses a research chemist who has been in this profession for 20 years and is a professor and director of the Department of Bio-chemistry of the New York Post Graduate Medical School. He performed a series of experiments on the absorption of vitamin A through the unbroken skin of rats. Another witness is an opthalmologist who is devoted largely to research work and who performed on a number of students a test designed to support the claims made by respondent. There were also introduced three practicing dermatologists, all of whom are well known in their profession, members of leading societies and authors of numerous papers and books devoted mostly to skin diseases. Another witness is a pathologist, at present head of the laboratories at Grassland Hospital, who for 10 years investigated vitamin deficiencies, mainly among the Eastern races. Finally, a physician employed by a large manufacturer testified with respect to a certain form of dermatitis, an industrial disease prevalent among the employees of such company.

PAR. 6. The testimony shows, and the Commission finds, that certain of the claims and representations contained in respondent's advertisements and radio broadcasts are false and misleading and that others of such claims and representations are grossly exaggerated.

Cold cream massaged into the skin can affect the so-called underskin or true skin only to an extremely small amount; and the cream alone would have no effect on the underskin, because whatever action it may have can only be a surface action. It is, therefore, incorrect to say that dirt, makeup and other impurities from within the skin are softened, loosened, and lifted from the pores, or that the underskin of users will be liberated and left free to function. The only effect of the use of such creams will be an emollient, smoothing and cleansing action on the surface of the skin. Lines and blemishes cannot be wiped away by the use of the creams. Skin blemishes may be due to faulty diets or other causes in which the use of cold creams is not indicated and is of no beneficial effect. In fact, the use of cold cream in cases of blemishes and comedones may add to the clogging of the pores and may make such conditions worse. The age at which lines and wrinkles appear varies with different individuals, depending entirely upon the kind of skin they were born with, its texture and elastic tissue, and the use of cold cream alone will not retard the appearance of wrinkles but may postpone the time when they will be quite noticeable.

PAR. 7. The testimony shows, and the Commission finds, that while the authorities are not entirely in agreement as to the exact daily requirement of vitamin A for the average normal adult, it is conceded by all the experts testifying in the case to be approximately 3,000 international units. Only a gross deficiency of vitamin A will manifest itself in the appearance of the skin. There are other more specific symptoms of vitamin A deficiency. All of the witnesses are in agreement that if a deficiency exists, the proper treatment is to give large doses of vitamin A by mouth.

PAR. 8. The evidence shows, and the Commission finds, that vitamin A, when included in a suitable vehicle, may be absorbed by the skin of a human being in physiologically significant quantities. To accomplish this enormous quantities of the vitamin must be added to the vehicle and applied to the skin for several hours, accompanied by considerable massaging, for the reason that absorption is relatively small compared with oral administration. This was shown in an experiment on human subjects performed by the ophthalmologist called by the respondent. For the purpose of this experiment, a number of students were used. They were almost completely depleted of vitamin A, only about 150 units being given per day in the diet. The reason why they were not totally depleted was that total depletion might seriously affect their health. After carefully recorded dark adaptation tests had established definite deficiency, one group continued as a control, while the other group was given daily applications of 6 grams of ointment of petrolatum and lanoline fortified with 10,000 units of vitamin A per gram. This material was massaged into the skin of the abdomen for a period of 10 minutes, and thereafter covered and left in place for 6 hours. After the treatment had been continued for some length of time, the dark adaptation tests proved that vitamin A had been absorbed through the skin in substantial quantities. No changes in the appearance of the skin were noted by the observer.

The Commission finds that this experiment cannot be accepted in support of respondent's advertising claims, for the reason that the conditions and treatment are too remote from the customary method of use of respondent's products, to permit of comparison. The small amount of vitamin A in respondent's creams is in contact with the skin for such a short time that no effective absorption by the skin can take place, and even if the entire vitamin A content of the cream applied should be absorbed by the skin and then carried into the blood stream, the effect would be of no consequence for the reason that its action would be systemic and not local. The use of the creams as directed will not prevent lines, wrinkles, or blemishes, and will not cause existing lines or wrinkles to disappear. The most that could be accomplished by the use of such creams would be to postpone the day when lines and wrinkles would be quite noticeable. Only in a very small proportion of cases is a harsh, dry condition of the skin of a human being due to a vitamin A deficiency, and whenever a definite deficiency exists the case is one for a physician and not a cosmetician. Nor will the vitamin content of the lotion Danya, when used as directed, be absorbed by the skin and stored up in the hands of users.

Many case histories were described to support the contention of the respondent not only that vitamin A deficiency will manifest itself in a rough, dry and scaly appearance of the skin, but also that vitamin A applied locally will be effective in pathological conditions caused by wounds, burns, and industrial dermatitis. The evidence shows that the skin symptoms of gross vitamin A deficiency occurred among the Hindus and Chinese and other oriental races whose diet was deficient in vitamin A, and that such cases were treated by administering vitamin A orally in doses many hundred times larger than the quantity contained in respondent's cream. Respondent adduced reports on the treatment of occupational dermatitis. The cases deal exclusively with industrial diseases, and it appears from the illustrations accompanying the reports that the skin lesions of the hands were unusually severe, and that the treatment was by intramuscular injections containing large quantities of vitamin A. Other histories deal with radiodermatitis usually caused by excessive exposure to X-rays. The treatment in these cases was with vitamin D rather than A, the latter being added merely as a supplemental treatment. The Commission finds that the difference between the various pathological conditions of these individuals and their treatment on the one hand, and the purpose for which respondent's cosmetic products are offered to adult women of normal health on the other hand, is too great to permit the conclusion that the results obtained in the former conditions justify the claims made for the products in the latter instance.

The evidence further shows, and the Commission finds, that the various other scientific reports of cases of vitamin deficiency do not support the advertising claims made by the respondent with respect to cosmetic improvements. One of the investigators reported that Avitaminosis A is considered rare in this country, particularly among adults; that geographic location, economic status, age, sex, and occupation are of the greatest importance in the study of deficiency diseases; that a slight vitamin A deficiency was manifested in a somewhat lowered dark adaptation long before any other symptoms were apparent; and that in those cases where a deficiency was manifested by the skin, such manifestation was in the skin on the thighs, arms, and shoulders only.

The animal experiments which were submitted in support of the respondent's claims are equally inconclusive, because they approximate neither the conditions under which the cosmetics are offered to the purchasing public nor the method of use by the public. All of the animals used were depleted of vitamin A until a severe deficiency set in, and varying quantities of vitamin A were massaged into the skin. The animals improved according to the quantity of vitamin A contained in each application and the length of time of the massage. The disappearance of the deficiency symptoms shows that the action of vitamin A was systemic and not local. While respondent has shown that there may be a topical effect indicated by the increased metabolism of the tissue cells, such effect is demonstrable only under the microscope and there is evidence that an increased metabolism was shown in rats which were not deficient. The animal experiments further show that the addition of 110 units of Vitamin A to the gram of ointment had no effect on the growth curve, substantially larger doses being required for demonstrable results, and it is further shown that the feedings of minute quantities of vitamin A were more effective than the large quantities used in the local application. In fact, one International Unit given by mouth produced a therapeutic effect.

While the application of respondent's creams may be helpful in keeping the skin smooth and may prevent excessive dryness of the skin, the vitamin A content will not increase the emollient properties of such creams. The experts testifying at the instance of the Commission are in agreement in holding that the use of cold creams fortified with vitamin A in the quantities contained in respondent's creams will have no effect whatever upon the skin. The respondent's experts, while giving it as their opinion that the skin should be benefited by the use of respondent's creams, were unable to testify that such effects are demonstrable or that the appearance of the skin is improved. The Commission, therefore, finds that respondent is not warranted in claiming that the vitamin content of the creams sold by it constitutes an important new aid to skin care. Nor is respondent warranted in claiming that vitamin A is the "skin" vitamin, for the reason that its activity is not limited to the skin, and its effects upon the skin in comparison with two other vitamins is of minor consequence.

PAR. 9. The claims and representations made by respondent concerning its cosmetics as set out herein, have had and now have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public, and as a result, such members of the public have been induced to purchase substantial quantities of such cosmetics in the mistaken belief that the claims and representations made by respondent are true. The use by respondent of such representations has, therefore, diverted trade unfairly to the respondent from its competitors.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of competitors of respondent, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves and John J. Keenan, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by William L. Pencke, counsel for the Commission and by Blake and Voorhees, counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Pond's Extract Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of its cosmetic creams and lotions, or any products of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing in any manner whatever that respondent's creams or lotions have any added beneficial value by reason of their vitamin A content.

2. Representing that respondent's cold cream causes lines, wrinkles or blemishes to disappear from the skin, or that it prevents the formation of lines, wrinkles or blemishes in the skin.

3. Representing that respondent's cold cream has any appreciable effect upon the underskin, that it liberates the underskin, or leaves the underskin free to function.

4. Representing that dirt, makeup, or other impurities below the surface of the skin may be softened, loosened, or lifted from the underskin through the use of respondent's cold cream.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

JERGENS-WOODBURY SALES CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3438. Complaint, May 21, 1938—Decision, Sept. 10, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of cosmetics and soaps, including its "Facial Soap" which contained 1453 International Units of Vitamin D per cake, and including among its cosmetics a facial powder, "Cleansing Cream," "Facial Cream," "Tissue Cream," and "Cold Cream," each ounce of which contained 150 International Units of said vitamin; by means of advertisements in newspapers and periodicals of general circulation, and radio broadcasts—

(a) Represented that said facial powder and creams were sterile and germ-free, both before and during use, and guarded the skin against blemishes and infections from germs, which they killed under conditions of normal use; facts being no aseptic agent will guard against an infection of the skin, and representations to such effect and that such products would remain germ-free during use, and inhibit germ growth were, as shown by evidence, unwarranted and misleading;

(b) Represented that the powder would spread farther than competitive powders, facts being that at least one competitive powder spread farther, and a number of others were equal to it in such respect; and

(c) Represented that the appearance and beauty of the skin would be enhanced and improved by reason of its absorption of Vitamin D contained in the cold cream and facial soap, and that its respiration would be increased thereby; the facts being that in event of deficiency of vitamin D, large doses thereof are given by mouth, and its said cosmetic products, offered for purchase to the average healthy American woman, who obtains, presumably, a sufficient amount of vitamin D in her diet and through sunshine, would not accomplish such results; any slight vitamin D deficiency in an individual is not manifest in the appearance of the skin, which does not breathe, as commonly understood; while vitamin D, in large quantities in a suitable vehicle, may be massaged into and absorbed by the skin, its effect in such event will be systemic and not local, and its said products did not contain sufficient quantities nor did they constitute a good vehicle for such purpose; and its advertising claims with respect to benefits to be derived from the use of its products were unwarranted, exaggerated and misleading;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public, with the result that such members of the public were induced to purchase quantities of cosmetics and soap in the mistaken belief that such advertisements were true, and of thereby unfairly diverting trade to it from its competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

As respects claim of a seller of cold creams and facial soaps that the appearance and beauty of the skin would be enhanced and improved and the skin's respiration would be increased by reason of the skin's absorption of their Vitamin D content, evidence offered by it in support of such claims, including (1) animal experiments, (2) treatment by a physician of a large number of premature rachitic infants, and (3) half-face experiments performed by a dermatologist at the request of an advertising firm, did not warrant the conclusion that use of seller's products by the average healthy woman would have any effect on the appearance of the skin.

Mr. Jerome L. Isaacs of Rogers, Hoge & Hill, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Jergens-Woodbury Sales Corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Jergens-Woodbury Sales Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Ohio, with its principal office and place of business at Spring Grove Avenue and Alfred Street in the city of Cincinnati, State of Ohio. Said respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a line of cosmetic products and soaps manufactured by John H. Woodbury, Inc., and Andrew Jergens Co., in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia. It causes said products, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers thereof located in a State or States of the United States other than the State of Ohio and in the District of Columbia.

There is now, and has been at all times herein mentioned, a course of trade in said cosmetic products and soaps so sold and distributed by the respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the sale and distribution of other cosmetic preparations and soaps in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. The respondent, Jergens-Woodbury Sales Corporation, in connection with the sale and distribution of said cosmetic products, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said products, makes certain representations as to the chemical properties and bacteriological effects thereof in newspaper advertisements, radio broadcasts, pamphlets, and otherwise, of which the following are typical, but not all inclusive, examples:

As to its facial powder—

You'll look your loveliest with Woodbury's Germ-Free Powder.

And here's an exclusive advantage of using Woodbury's Facial Powder. It actually helps guard your skin against the most dreaded skin defect of all—blemishes! The kind of blemishes that germs from dust in the air or from a soiled powder puff so often cause. Woodbury's Facial Powder is the one and only face powder that stays germ-free to the very last time you fluff it on.

It's germ-free * * * the only powder that gives you hygienic protection against the surface germs that cause blemishes.

Proof that Woodbury's does not clog the pores.

Spread a pinch of Woodbury's on your wrist and smooth it upwards along your arm. Beside it a pinch of the face powder you've been using. You'll see at once how far Woodbury's spreads. Why is this? Because Woodbury's lies on the surface of your skin—does not cram down into the pores and clog them. The pores are free when you're wearing Woodbury's. They can breathe, stay fine, active, elastic.

But Woodbury's Facial Powder will keep your beauty serene. It clings—right through the day—until you wash it off. It spreads farther than other popular-priced face powders. Goes on smoothly, stays on evenly without risk of clogging your pores. Shine will not come through. Warmth will not make it mat. It keeps your skin alluring.

It is free from germ-growth both before and after use.

As to its cold cream—

Clear, Fresh Loveliness for Skins that have the GERM-FREE care—

Contains Exclusive Germ-Destroying Element.

Why, you may ask, does Woodbury's Cold Cream fulfill its beauty task more quickly, more surely than others? First, because of its germ-free quality. An exclusive ingredient keeps it free from germs to the very bottom of the jar.

Germs—a common cause of infection and blemish—are banished, even as you leave the jar uncovered. The last fingertipful of Woodbury's Germ-Free Cold Cream is as sterile and free from germ growth as the first.

Scientific Ingredient keeps these Beauty Creams GERM-FREE.

WHAT CAUSES BLEMISHES?

A blemish on the skin may be caused by impurities in the blood. No external treatment can prevent blemishes of this type. Many blemishes, however, occur from a surface bacterial infection * * * when germs invade some tiny crack in the skin. Try to avoid this danger by using beauty creams that stay germ-free to the last.

Now a second important element in Woodbury's Cold Cream, will help you fulfill, quickly, your fondest hopes for beauty. Sunshine is vital to a good complexion. Certain rays, which produce Sunshine Vitamin D, keep the skin healthy and alive, functioning as it should because they help the skin to breathe!

As to its soap—

Bathe all your skin for Beauty in the "FILTERED SUNSHINE" of Woodbury's Gentle Lather.

Vitamin D is closely related to skin health. Certain rays of the sun produce this element in the skin, itself. And now, after long and costly research by Woodbury skin scientists and a leading American university, a way has been found to incorporate Sunshine Vitamin D in Woodbury's Facial Soap. This is done by the patented, "Filtered Sunshine" process, by which one of Woodbury's ingredients is now irradiated with gentle, non-burning rays.

Your skin, eager for its benefits, soaks up this "Filtered Sunshine" element from Woodbury's lather as you wash and bathe. This has positive proof in the records of important scientific tests.

Ingredient of the famous Woodbury's Facial Soap now irradiated with the kindly, skin-beautifying qualities of Sunshine.

At last a way has been found to irradiate the gentlest qualities of Sunshine into one of the ingredients of the world-famous Woodbury's Facial Soap.

Now, Winter or Summer, every time you wash or bathe, Woodbury's is ready to give your skin the glorious benefits of this kindly Sunshine element.

Everyone knows that Sunshine in careful measure, is a natural skin beautifier. And now by a marvelous new process, an exclusive patented process, the useful rays are irradiated into an ingredient of Woodbury's Facial Soap, which is readily absorbed by the skin. An important scientific work, by Woodbury skin scientists and a leading American university!

PAR. 4. All of said statements, together with many similar statements appearing in respondent's advertising literature, purport to be descriptive of respondent's products and their efficacy in use. In all of its advertising literature, respondent represents, through statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect, that its "Facial Powder" (1) will guard the skin against blemishes and prevent surface infections from germs, (2) is sterile and germ-free both before and continuously during use, (3) will spread farther than competitive products and not clog the skin pores, and (4) is an antiseptic which possesses inhibitory properties and kills germs under conditions of normal use; that its "Cold Cream" (1) is sterile and germ-free both before and continuously during use, (2) will kill and banish germs and prevent infections and blemishes under conditions of normal use, and (3) is an antiseptic which possesses inhibitory properties and kills germs under conditions of normal use; that its "Facial Soap" (1) contains "filtered sunshine," (2) releases an invigorating "filtered sunshine" element, namely, vitamin D, (3) the skin absorbs a sufficient amount of vitamin D through use of such soap to produce a substantial effect thereon.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, said statements and representations were and are false and misleading in that the said Woodbury's Facial Powder will not guard against or prevent skin blemishes or infections from germs. It is not antiseptic and will not stay germ-free. It will not spread over a greater surface than some of the powders manufactured and sold by respondent's competitors, and will not be free from germ growth after use. In truth and in fact, said Woodbury's Cold Cream will not banish germs and will not remain sterile and free from germ growth in all instances after it has been applied to the skin. Bacterial infection is not prevented by the use of said cream or said facial powder. Said facial cream will not kill bacterial organisms within a reasonable time under ordinary conditions of use. The skin will not absorb an appreciable amount of vitamin D through the use of respondent's cold creams and the claims and representations made by respondent with respect thereto are exaggerated and not justified. In truth and in fact, respondent's vitamin D Soap is not irradiated with skin-beautifying qualities of sunshine, and the alleged youthful rays of sunshine are not readily absorbed by the skin. The skin can not absorb an appreciable amount of vitamin D by simply washing the skin or taking a lather bath. Washing or bathing with a soap containing vitamin D does not cause or bring about such a substantial absorption of vitamin D by the skin as to produce any substantial beneficial result on the skin or to justify the claims and representations made by respondent.

PAR. 6. The true facts are that the ingredients of respondent's products are not absorbed by or through the skin. While scientific literature contains no reference to a skin vitamin, it is possible that some types of vitamins may be absorbed through the skin to some extent under certain conditions of application. However, if vitamins are absorbed through the skin, they will not beneficially affect the local condition of the skin where applied by washing or bathing with respondent's soap.

PAR. 7. In the course and conduct of its business as hereinbefore described, respondent is, and has been, in competition with corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the sale and shipment in commerce among and between the several States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia, of other cosmetic preparations and soaps, which said competitors do not misrepresent the extent of the beneficial or therapeutic effects of their said competitive preparations.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid misleading and deceptive statements and representations hereinabove set forth made by respondent in selling said cosmetic preparations and soaps have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive the purchasing public into buying said Woodbury's Facial Powder, Woodbury's Cold Cream and Woodbury's Vitamin D Soap, in the erroneous beliefs that such representations are true and that the use of said products will accomplish the results set out or indicated in said advertisements and statements. As a result of the aforesaid false and misleading statements, advertisements, and representations by the respondent with respect to said products, trade has been diverted unfairly to it from its said competitors, whose ability to compete successfully with respondent has been, and is, lessened and injured by the methods of the respondent hereinbefore set forth.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and things done, or caused to be done, by the respondent, were and are each and all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning and intent of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on May 21, 1938, issued its complaint in the above entitled proceeding and thereafter caused same to be served upon the respondent, Jergens-Woodbury Sales Corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of the answer thereto by said respondent, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by William L. Pencke, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of said complaint by Jerome L. Isaacs of the firm of Rogers, Hoge and Hills, attorneys for the respondent, before William C. Reeves and John J. Keenan, examiners for said Commission theretofore duly designated by it; also stipulations as to certain of the material facts were made and entered into by and between counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondent, which stipulations were set out in the record, and the testimony so taken was reduced to writing and filed in the office of the Commission, together with numerous pieces of documentary evidence and samples of respondent's products, received as exhibits. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the said complaint and answer thereto, the stipulations as to certain of the facts, the testimony and other evidence, briefs by counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondent and oral argument of the respective counsel, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Jergens-Woodbury Sales Corporation, is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Ohio, with its principal place of business at Cincinnati, in said State. For more than 1 year prior to the date of the issuance of the complaint herein, and since said date, said respondent has been engaged in the sale and distribution of cosmetics and a facial soap manufactured by John H. Woodbury, Inc., and the Andrew Jergens Co. Said respondent has caused said cosmetics and soap, when sold, to be transported from Cincinnati in the State of Ohio, through and into various other States of the United States, to the respective purchasers thereof. In the course and conduct of its said business said respondent has been, and is now, in active competition with numerous persons and partnerships, and other corporations, also engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the several States of the United States of cosmetics and soaps intended to be used and used, for the same general purposes.

PAR. 2. The respondent, in the course and conduct of its business, as set out in paragraph 1 hereof, has sold a soap described by it as "Woodbury's Facial Soap," which soap has been produced in cakes of 3⅞ ounces, each of which has contained 1,453 international units of vitamin D. Among the cosmetics sold by respondent were a facial powder, and certain creams designated as "Woodbury's Cleansing Cream," "Woodbury's Facial Cream," "Woodbury's Tissue Cream," and "Woodbury's Cold Cream." Each ounce of each of these items has contained 150 international units of vitamin D.

One ounce of the cream will last the average user for approximately 1 week, and one cake of the soap, used as a facial and bath soap, will last the average user about 10 days.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business in the years 1936, 1937, and 1938, and for the purpose of inducing members of the public to purchase the aforesaid cosmetics and soap, the respondent caused advertisements to be published in newspapers and other periodicals having a general circulation among various States of the United States, caused printed advertising matter to be distributed generally among the various States, and caused advertising programs to be broadcast over radio stations in the various States. All of this advertising matter contained numerous claims and representations concerning certain of the ingredients of such cosmetics and soap and benefits that would be derived by the use of same. The claims and representations with respect to the facial powder and cold creams are to the effect that they are sterile and germ free both before use and continuously during use; that they guard the skin against blemishes and prevent infections from germs and will kill germs under conditions of normal use; that the powder will spread farther than competitive powders and will not clog the pores of the skin but will leave them free, enabling them to breathe, stay fine and active. Further claims and representations with respect to the creams and facial soap are that the presence of vitamin D in such creams will help users to fulfill their "fondest hopes for beauty"; that a way has been found to incorporate vitamin D in Woodbury's Facial Soap; and that this is done by the patented "filtered sunshine" process by which one of Woodbury's ingredients is irradiated with gentle, nonburning rays; that by the use of Woodbury's Facial Soap the skin of the user will absorb a sufficient amount of vitamin D to produce a substantial effect thereon; and that this element in the soap is readily absorbed by the skin; that certain rays which produce Sunshine vitamin D keep the skin healthy and alive, and functioning as it should because they help the skin to breathe. Other claims and representations of like import concerning such cosmetics and soap were contained in such advertisements, advertising matter and radio broadcasts.

PAR. 4. All the experts testifying at the instance of the Commission have been members of the medical profession for many years and include three dermatologists, a pharmacologist, and a specialist in public health research and X-ray work. They are members of numerous medical and scientific societies; and the dermatologists, in addition to an extensive hospital experience, have also made investigations and researches in the vitamin field, and have published many papers in scientific journals. One of the dermatologists has also specialized in cosmetology for about 12 years, published several books and papers on that subject, and given courses therein at medical schools in New York. The pharmacologist has served for over 20 years in the United States Public Health Service, is recognized as one of the foremost researchers in pharmacology and is credited with the discovery of vitamin B2.

The opinions of these experts with respect to the function of vitamin D may be summarized as follows: Vitamin D fixes and maintains the calcium and phosphorus supply in the bony structure.

Its lack results in rickets or osteomalacia. Vitamin D is supplied by the action of the ultraviolet rays of the sun upon the pro-vitamins, such as cholesterol, contained in the skin, and by certain foods rich in various sterols such as fish oils, certain fish, butter, and leafy vegetables. Medical authorities are not in agreement as to the daily requirement of vitamin D for the normal adult human being, the estimates running from 400 to 5,000 international units. Likewise there is some disagreement among the experts as to whether the average adult person in the United States is deficient in vitamin D. Generally the witnesses testifying at the instance of the Commission are of the opinion that the average person does get a sufficient supply in the two ways indicated. Several of the respondent's experts are of the opinion that a great many individuals are deficient. All of them are agreed that in the event of deficiency the most effective method of supplying vitamin D is by giving huge doses by mouth, external application, or inunction being both ineffective and expensive.

In substance respondent claims that the appearance and beauty of the skin will be enhanced and improved by reason of the absorption by the skin of vitamin D contained in the cold creams and facial soap, and that the respiration of the skin will be increased thereby.

The witnesses testifying at the instance of the Commission are in complete agreement that such results are not possible. There is nothing in scientific or medical literature indicating that local benefits may be derived through the use of cosmetic creams or soaps containing vitamin D in the quantities present in respondent's products. So far as is known, no authors or writers in dermatology ascribe any condition of the skin as being due to a lack of vitamin D.

Vitamin D, if contained in a suitable vehicle and massaged into the skin, may be absorbed by the skin. Such absorption, however, will not in any event affect the appearance of the skin, for the reason that if absorption takes place the vitamin will be absorbed into the blood stream, so that its action must be systemic and not local. The only exception occurs in instances when a pathological condition exists in the skin itself such as lesions caused by wounds or burns, and in that case huge doses of vitamin D contained in the vehicle are required. Nor will the use of respondent's products improve the appearance of the skin of persons who are slightly deficient in vitamin D, for the reason that such deficiency is not manifested in the skin. Neither the vehicle nor the quantity of vitamin D contained in respondent's creams and soap nor the method of application is conducive to permitting more than a negligible or infinitesimal amount of vitamin D to be absorbed. In the average use of the cosmetics not more than 20 units of vitamin D will be applied to the face once or twice a day. The bulk of the material will be wiped off, with the result that only a minute quantity can possibly be absorbed by the skin.

With respect to the use of the soap, the experts introduced by the Commission are in complete agreement that so far as the absorption of vitamin D is concerned, it can have no demonstrable effect whatever. The skin is an organ of excretion. Soap is a cleansing agent. The small quantity of vitamin D which might be made available at each use would be contained in the lather and rinsed off before any absorption could take place. No medicaments contained in a soap can enter the body in sufficient quantity to have any medicinal or therapeutic effect.

The claim that vitamin D added to cosmetic creams will help the skin to breathe is wholly unwarranted. There is no scientific basis for such treatment. The skin does not breathe as breathing is commonly understood. In the sense of an interchange of gases the word "breathe" may be applied to all the tissues of the body. The respiration of the skin as compared with the amount of normal respiration is infinitesimal.

A certain experiment was adduced in which the metabolism of tissue was increased by the administration of vitamin D, this experiment being adduced in support of the claim that the use of respondent's cosmetic products containing vitamin D will likewise accelerate the rate of respiration of the tissue. It was shown that the condition of the tissue in the experiment was so abnormal that the increased metabolism may well have been due to other causes than to the administration of vitamin D. In any event, the effect is so slight that it can be demonstrated only under the microscope.

The appearance of the human skin in youth is smooth and without wrinkles and as individuals grow older, lines and wrinkles will appear and the tissues will lose their firmness. This physiological phenomenon can not be deferred or altered by the use of cosmetic creams. Moreover the appearance and texture of the skin are hereditary or congenital. Such characteristics cannot be overcome by treatment with cosmetic creams containing small quantities of vitamin D. In many instances the use of cold creams may even interfere with the activities of the skin. There are dermatologists who will inhibit the use of cosmetics in cases of skin disorders and there are no reports in medical literature in which the use of vitamin D by local application is indicated.

PAR. 5. To support its contentions with respect to the claims for its cosmetic products, the respondent called a number of experts. These included several scientists, who, while they had done considerable research work in connection with subjects unrelated to the present case, had also devoted considerable time to experimental work dealing with the absorption of vitamin D by the skin and the effects thereon. Most of this work was done at the request of the respondent, or under fellowships established by the Andrew Jergens Co. In addition, there was called a practicing physician who had done some experimental work on vitamin absorption and a practicing dermatologist who had made certain experiments with the respondent's soap several years prior to the complaint.

With the exception of the testimony of the last mentioned witness, all of the expert testimony and opinion rendered by the witnesses is based on animal experiments and case histories of pathological skin conditions. In the tests conducted with animals, the experimental rats were depleted of vitamin D according to the approved methods prescribed by the U. S. Pharmacopoeia, resulting in severe vitamin D deficiencies manifested by rickets. A large number of experiments were performed which varied with respect to the quantity of vitamin D contained in the cream or soap and the length of time employed to massage the material into the skin of the rat. The applications were continued for a prescribed length of time until improvements in the rachitic condition of the rat were demonstrated. The various degrees of improvements were shown by X-ray pictures taken of the leg joints of the rats, showing calcium deposits due to the treatment with respondent's product. In fact, one international unit administered to an experimental rat depleted of vitamin D is sufficient to demonstrate a calcium deposit on the joint of the leg bone of the rat. In the experiments conducted with the facial soap a liquid solution of the soap containing vitamin D was massaged into the skin of the rats, and sufficient absorption took place to indicate some improvement in the rachitic condition of the animal. The ordinary manner in which the soap is used differs entirely from the method employed in the experiments.

In order to demonstrate that the local administration of vitamin D to the skin causes the skin to breathe more rapidly, the scientists placed a small segment of the skin of a rat under the microscope after vitamin D had been added to the tisses and compared it with a section from the skin of a rat that had not been treated with vitamin D. It was found that there was a slight increase in the metabolism of the skin tissue.

With respect to these animal experiments, the testimony shows, and the Commission finds, that vitamin D contained in a suitable vehicle and massaged into the skin may be obsorbed by the skin in quantities sufficient to improve the condition of a rachitic rat; that the action of such absorption is systemic and not local; that the acceleration of skin respiration can be demonstrated only under the microscope and may be due to the abnormal condition of the excised tissue rather than to the administration of vitamin D; that for these reasons the experiments on test animals are not sufficiently persuasive to warrant the conclusion that the use of respondent's products by the average healthy, adult woman will have an effect in the appearance of the skin.

A practicing physician testified that he had supplied vitamin D to a large number of premature rachitic infants by treating them with local applications of olive oil containing 15,000 units of vitamin D per half ounce. The treatment, repeated twice a day, consisted of a cotton pleget immersed in ½ ounce of olive oil containing the vitamin being left on the body of the infant for some time, and it was calculated that approximately 22,000 units of vitamin D per day were absorbed. It appears from the evidence that several of the babies to whom Haliver Oil and Viosterol was fed did not respond as well as those who had been given the vitamin D externally, for the reason that their delicate stomachs did not tolerate the medicine. The evidence shows, and the Commission finds, that the difference between both the age and physical condition of the subjects and the method of application and the quantities of vitamin D contained in the vehicle is too great to permit a conclusion that because the condition of the infants was improved the claims with respect to the cosmetic properties are valid.

A dermatologist testified that about 5 years ago he performed half-face experiments with the facial soap on 29 women at the request of an advertising firm. The subjects were required to wash one-half of the face with the plain soap and the other half with the soap containing vitamin D. They were not advised which of the two cakes furnished them contained the vitamin. According to the testimony of the witness, 22 of the women preferred the soap containing vitamin D because their faces felt smoother and cleaner. However, the evidence shows that there was no supervision of the experiments or of the diet of the subject, nor were the individual conditions of the subjects taken into account. In order to determine the improvement, the witness found it necessary to use a magnifying glass under a good light. The evidence shows, and the Commission finds, that this experiment was not performed under such accepted and required scientific conditions as to support the cosmetic claims made for respondent's products.

PAR. 6. The evidence shows, and the Commission finds, that respondent's cosmetic products are offered for purchase to the average normal healthy, adult American woman who is presumed to obtain a sufficient amount of vitamin D in her diet and through sunshine. Any slight vitamin D deficiency in an individual will not be manifested in the appearance of the skin. When deficiency exists, large doses of vitamin D are given by mouth. Vitamin D, when contained in large quantities in a suitable vehicle and massaged into the skin, may be absorbed by the skin. When absorption takes place the action of vitamin D will be systemic and not local. Respondent's products do not contain sufficient quantities of vitamin D, nor do they constitute a good vehicle for purposes of absorption, nor is the method of application conducive to permit absorption to the extent of having any effect upon the condition or appearance of the skin of the user, and the advertising claims with respect to the benefits to be derived from the use of respondent's products are, therefore, unwarranted, exaggerated, and misleading.

PAR. 7. An associate bacteriologist of the Food and Drug Administration, who specializes in testing antiseptics and disinfectants, tested respondent's creams and facial powder to determine whether said products would remain germ-free both before and during use. The samples tested were all received in a germ-free condition. The witness added certain bacteria which are ordinarily found in the skin and in places that come in contact with the hands. He found that the organisms remained active in the creams up to seven hours and were still alive and active in the powder after 24 hours. It was his opinion that an infection might occur should organisms be carried to the face from the finger tips. With respect to the claim that the products will guard against infection, the evidence shows, and the Commission finds, that no aseptic agent will guard against an infection of the skin.

A chemist called by respondent also made extensive tests to determine the sterility of the products during use. His tests showed that organisms were killed between 3 and 5 hours after they had been added to the products. The evidence therefore shows, and the Commission finds, that the representations to the effect that the products will remain germ-free during use, will guard against infection, and inhibit germ growth, are unwarranted and misleading.

PAR. 8. The evidence shows, and the Commission finds, that the representation with respect to the spreading qualities of respondent's facial powder is exaggerated and misleading. A test performed at the request of the respondent demonstrated that one competitive powder spread farther than respondent's powder and that a number of other competitive powders were equal to respondent's product in this respect.

PAR. 9. The claims and representations made by respondent in its advertisements and advertising matter concerning the cosmetics and soap sold by it have had and now have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public, and as a result such members of the public have been induced to purchase quantities of such cosmetics and soap in the mistaken belief that the statements and representations contained in such advertisements and advertising matter concerning such cosmetics and soap were true. Said representations have therefore unfairly diverted trade to the respondent from its competitors.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of the competitors of respondent, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves and John J. Keenan, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by William L. Pencke, counsel for the Commission, and by Jerome L. Isaacs, counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Jergens-Woodbury Sales Corporation, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of its soaps, cosmetic creams and face powders, or any products of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that its facial powder will guard against or prevent skin blemishes or infection from germs, or that said powder will remain germ-free during use.

2. Representing that its facial powder will spread farther than other competitive face powders of comparable quality.

3. Representing that its cold cream will remain sterile, or that said cream will kill germs or prevent germ growth, infections or blemishes under ordinary conditions of use.

4. Representing in any manner whatever that respondent's creams or soap have any added beneficial value upon the skin by reason of their vitamin content.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

SPENCER SYSTEM, AND JOHN L. SHEA, WILLIAM J. HAGERTY, JEAN G. MITCHIE, AND GLENDA S. HILLS

Docket 4350. Complaint, Oct. 16, 1940—Decision, Sept. 12, 1941

Where a concern, organized as a Massachusetts trust, and four individuals in charge of its business, determining and carrying out its policies and practices, engaged in interstate sale of courses of instruction, including lesson sheets, tools, and materials, in the design and fabrication of arch supports and foot exercisers, and in a system of foot correction and culture; in circulars, letters and pamphlets, and in advertisements in periodicals of general circulation, directly and indirectly—

(a) Represented that the structure of the foot is simple, that anyone of ordinary intelligence who could read and write could readily master their courses and become proficient therein, that their treatment was infallible, that the instruction could be given by mail and the necessary knowledge and proficiency acquired in 10 weeks or less, and that by reason of such mastery and the use of their system of foot culture and arch supports made by their method, student would be able to determine whether or not a person required arch supports and prescribe, design and fabricate the proper supports, and diagnose as surgical or nonsurgical all foot ailments or conditions; and

(b) Represented further that student would be able to correct, overcome and cure all foot troubles, other than those requiring operative surgery, including flat foot, distorted toes, weak feet, painful heel, aching, sweaty or too dry feet, calluses, chilblains, foot neuralgia, hammer or Morton's toes, stretched ligaments, enlarged joints and bunions, and prevent the growth of corns and bunions;

The facts being the structure of the foot is not simple; adequate correction of arch troubles, diseases, and ailments of the feet, and the proper designing of arch supports, require a diagnosis which can be properly made only by one familiar not only with the structure and physiology of the feet but also of the rest of the body; the knowledge necessary for proper diagnosis of all foot troubles as surgical or nonsurgical, and the application of adequate corrective or curative methods to latter conditions by arch supports, exercises, or otherwise, cannot be imparted by mail, in the short time indicated, to the ordinary literate person, and cannot be acquired from their courses of instruction; proper arch support cannot be made by one without substantial practical experience and training, and those mastering the course cannot be assured, in all cases of nonsurgical foot conditions or diseases, of successful results from use of the corrective system as taught, either with or without use of exercises of their design or arch supports made and fitted in accordance with their instructions; and

(c) Falsely represented that the student would learn how to obtain trade without solicitation, delay, or expense, and was assured, by mastery of the course, of a paying business and large income;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers of their said courses of instruction into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, and to induce a substantial part of the public, because of such mistaken belief, to purchase the same:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.

Mr. Randolph W. Branch for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Spencer System, a Massachusetts trust, John L. Shea, William J. Hagerty, Jean G. Mitchie, and Glenda S. Hills, individually and as trustees of said trust, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The said respondent, Spencer System, is a Massachusetts trust, organized under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and having an office and principal place of business at 55 Belvidere Street in the city of Boston, Mass., with respondents John L. Shea, William J. Hagerty, Jean G. Mitchie, and Glenda S. Hills as its trustees. The said trustees are in charge of the business conducted by said trust, and determine and carry out its policies and practices.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and have been for more than 6 months last past, engaged in the business of selling courses of instructions and instructing students in the design and fabrication of arch supports and "foot exercisers" and in a system of foot correction and culture.

The conduct of such courses of instruction contemplates and results in the transportation from respondents' place of business in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to students located in various States of the United States, of information, textual matter, charts, tools, materials and other things useful or necessary in such courses of study, and from students to respondents of reports and specimens of their work.

Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said courses, including said lesson sheets, tools, materials and other things, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said courses of instruction, respondents have engaged in the practices of distributing circulars, letters, and pamphlets containing claims with respect to said courses, the proficiency and ability which will be acquired, and the financial rewards to be anticipated, by those who purchase and master said courses of instruction, to be distributed between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and of causing advertisements containing similar claims to be inserted in magazines and periodicals of general circulation between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondents have represented, directly and indirectly, among other things, that the structure of the foot is simple; that anyone of ordinary intelligence who can read and write can readily master respondents' courses of instruction in arch support making and foot culture and become proficient therein; that by reason of such mastery and the use of respondents' system of foot culture and arch supports made by respondents' method, the student will be able to determine whether or not a person requires arch supports, prescribe, design and fabricate the proper supports, diagnose as surgical or nonsurgical all foot ailments or conditions and correct, overcome and cure all foot troubles other than those requiring operative surgery, including flat foot, distorted toes, weak feet, painful heel, aching, sweaty or too dry feet, callouses, chilblains, foot neuralgia, hammer or Morton's toes, stretched ligaments, enlarged joints and bunions and prevent the growth of corns and bunions; that respondents' treatment is, to all practical intents and purposes, infallible; that this instruction can be given by mail and the necessary knowledge and proficiency acquired in ten weeks or less; that the student will learn how to obtain trade without solicitation, delay or expense and is assured, by the mastery of the course, of a paying business and a large income.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are false and misleading. In truth and in fact the structure of the foot is not simple. The adequate correction of arch troubles, diseases and ailments of the feet, and the proper designing of arch supports, require, as a preliminary, a diagnosis which can be properly made only by one familiar not only with the structure and physiology of the feet but of the rest of the body. The knowledge necessary for the proper diagnosis of all foot troubles as surgical or nonsurgical, and the application of adequate corrective or curative methods to nonsurgical conditions by arch supports, exercises, or otherwise, cannot be imparted by mail in the short time indicated by respondent to the ordinary literate person, and cannot be acquired from respondents' courses of instruction. A proper arch support cannot be made by one without substantial practical experience and training. Those mastering the course cannot in all cases of nonsurgical foot conditions or diseases, be assured of successful results from the use of the corrective system as taught, either with or without the use of exercisers of respondents' design or arch supports made and fitted in accordance with respondents' instructions. The student is not assured of a profitable business by completing the course, nor of a big income; neither is he assured that he will be able to obtain trade without solicitation, delay or expense.

PAR. 6. The use by respondents of the foregoing false and misleading misrepresentations as set forth herein, in connection with the offering for sale and sale of its said courses of instruction, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true, and to induce a substantial part of the public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' courses.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on October 16, 1940, issued and on October 17, 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Spencer System, a Massachusetts trust, and John L. Shea, William J. Hagerty, Jean G. Mitchie, and Glenna S. Hills (the individual referred to in the complaint as Glenda S. Hills), individually, and as trustees of said trust, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts or practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of the respondents' answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' request for permission to withdraw said answer and substitute thereof an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, except the allegation in paragraph 1 of the said complaint that Jean G. Mitchie and Glenna S. Hills are trustees of respondent Spencer System, and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and substitute answer; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The said respondent, Spencer System, is a Massachusetts trust, organized under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and having an office and principal place of business at 55 Belvidere Street in the city of Boston, Mass., with respondents John L. Shea and William J. Hagerty as its trustees. The said trustees are in charge of the business conducted by said trust and they, and respondents Jean G. Mitchie and Glenna S. Hills, determine and carry out its policies and practices.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and have been for more than six months last past, engaged in the business of selling courses of instruction and instructing students in the design and fabrication of arch supports and "foot exercisers" and in a system of foot correction and culture.

The conduct of such courses of instruction contemplates and results in the transportation from respondents' place of business in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to students located in various States of the United States of information, textual matter, charts, tools, materials, and other things useful or necessary in such courses of study, and from students to respondents of reports and specimens of their work.

Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said courses, including said lesson sheets, tools, materials, and other things, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said courses of instruction respondents have engaged in the practices of distributing circulars, letters, and pamphlets containing claims with respect to said courses, the proficiency and ability which will be acquired, and the financial rewards to be anticipated, by those who purchase and master said courses of instruction, to be distributed between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and of causing advertisements containing similar claims to be inserted in magazines and periodicals of general circulation between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Among and typical of such claims are the following:

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondents have represented, directly and indirectly, among other things, that the structure of the foot is simple; that anyone of ordinary intelligence who can read and write can readily master respondents' courses of instruction in arch support making and foot culture and become proficient therein; that by reason of such mastery and the use of respondents' system of foot culture and arch supports made by respondents' method, the student will be able to determine whether or not a person requires arch supports, prescribe design and fabricate the proper supports, diagnose as surgical or nonsurgical all foot ailments or conditions and correct, overcome and cure all foot troubles other than those requiring operative surgery, including flat foot, distorted toes, weak feet, painful heel, aching, sweaty or too dry feet, callouses, chilblains, foot neuralgia, hammer or Morton's toes, stretched ligaments, enlarged joints, and bunions and prevent the growth of corns and bunions; that respondents' treatment is, to all practical intents and purposes, infallible; that this instruction can be given by mail and the necessary knowledge and proficiency acquired in ten weeks or less; that the student will learn how to obtain trade without solicitation, delay or expense and is assured, by the mastery of the course, of a paying business and a large income.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are false and misleading. In truth and in fact the structure of the foot is not simple. The

Those mastering the course cannot be assured in all cases of nonsurgical foot conditions or diseases, of successful results from the use of the corrective system as taught either with or without the use of exercisers of respondents' design or arch supports made and fitted in accordance with respondents' instructions. The student is not assured of a profitable business by completing the course, nor of a big income; neither is he assured that he will be able to obtain trade without solicitation, delay or expense.

PAR. 6. The use by respondents of the foregoing false and misleading representations as set forth herein, in connection with the offering for sale and sale of their said courses of instruction, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true, and to induce a substantial part of the public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' courses.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, Spencer System, a Massachusetts trust, John L. Shea and William J. Hagerty, individually, and as trustees of said trust, and Jean G. Mitchie and Glenna S. Hills, individually, as herein found, are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, except the allegations that Jean G. Mitchie and Glenna S. Hills are trustees of respondent Spencer System, and waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Spencer System, a Massachusetts trust, its trustees, officers, agents, representatives, and employees, and John L. Shea and William J. Hagerty, individually and as trustees of said trust, and Jean G. Mitchie and Glenna S. Hills individually, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of courses of instruction in the fabrication of foot supports and foot exercisers and in the treatment and correction of foot troubles, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or by implication:

1. Representing that respondents' course of instruction, or any substantially similar course of instruction, will equip any one with learning and proficiency adequate to:

(a) Diagnose and determine whether or not foot troubles require surgical treatment.

(b) Effectively and successfully treat non-surgical foot troubles, regardless of origin or cause thereof.

(c) Effectively and successfully treat substantially all cases of foot troubles, conditions, or diseases, including flat foot, distorted toes, weak feet, painful heel, aching, sweaty, or too dry feet, callouses, chilblains, foot neuralgia, hammer or Morton's toe, stretched ligaments, enlarged joints, and bunions.

2. Representing that any purchaser who masters respondents' correspondence course is assured of a profitable business or will be able to obtain trade without solicitation, delay, or expense.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

ROBERT E. OVERELL, TRADING AS COPINOL COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4431. Complaint, Dec. 21, 1940—Decision, Sept. 12, 1941

Where an individual engaged in interstate sale and distribution of his "Copinol" or "Copinol Nasal Medicine"; by advertisements through the mails and otherwise, including purported testimonials, directly or by implication—

(a) Represented that his said preparation was a cure and remedy for head colds, catarrh-choked nose or throat, nasal catarrh, and sinus congestion, and constituted a competent and effective treatment for such conditions, and that it would rid the nose and throat of, and protect nose from, germ-laden mucus and instantly clear the head, and would afford relief to congested nasal passages more quickly and for a longer period of time than other similar preparations;

Facts being said product, which was a mild, soothing, and cooling emollient and local constrictor of the small blood vessels, was not a cure or remedy for aforesaid conditions and had no therapeutic value in the treatment thereof in excess of furnishing temporary relief to congested nasal mucous membranes; it would not rid the nose and throat of, or protect nose from, germ-laden mucus, nor clear the head instantly; and had no special properties which would afford quicker or longer relief than other similar preparations; and

(b) Failed to reveal material facts and that use of said product, as prescribed, might result in injury to health, in that he included neither on the pasteboard container of said "Copinol," or in said advertisements, a warning statement to the effect that said preparation, which contained the drug ephedrine alkaloid, should not be used by persons suffering from heart trouble, high blood pressure, diabetes, or thyroid trouble except on competent advice, and that its use over a long period of time was likely to produce prolonged nasal constriction so as to cause tissue damage from anoxemia, with secondary inflammatory reaction, or a cautionary statement to the effect that said preparation should be used only as directed on the label, and failed on the cautionary statement in the circular which it enclosed with its said product to which label referred user, to set forth the full danger in use of said preparation over a long period of time, and sufficiently to warn persons suffering from aforesaid diseases that they should not use the product except on competent advice;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, and that his said preparation was harmless and would accomplish the results claimed for it, and of inducing it, because of such belief, to purchase his said "Copinol" medicinal preparation:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. John W. Carter, Jr., for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Robert E. Overell, individually and trading under the style and firm name of Copinol Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Robert E. Overell, is an individual trading under the style and firm name of Copinol Co. with his principal place of business located at Seventh and Main Streets, Los Angeles, Calif.

PAR. 2. Acting in his individual capacity and trading under the style and firm name of Copinol Co., respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the advertising, sale, and distribution of a medicinal product or preparation designated as "Copinol" and sometimes designated as "Copinol Nasal Medicine," hereinafter referred to as "Copinol," in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

Respondent causes said medicinal preparation, when sold, to be transported from respondent's place of business in the State of California to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein, has maintained a course of trade in the said medicinal preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning his said preparation by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act and respondent has also disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning his said product by various means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said product in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, are the following:

TERRIBLE NOSE DISCHARGE EMBARRASSES LADY

Suffers from stuffy head colds, catarrh-choked nose and throat, nasal sinus, helped by Copinol. "I had a bad discharge from my right nostril and used from four to six handkerchiefs daily. It was terrible," writes Mrs. O. E. J., Ocean Beach, California.

"No words can express my embarrassment in company. Copinol relieved me instantly. My head is clear—the crackling is gone." The secret formula of seven scientific ingredients for Copinol Nasal Medicine is now revealed on the package.

SECRET FORMULA FOR NOSE CATARRH REVEALED AT LAST!

Special ingredient retains medication longer in nose—speeds relief in catarrh-choked nasal congestion, shrinks swollen membranes.

Sufferers from stopped up nasal passages—choked by disgusting mucus drippings in nose and throat—have gladly paid more for Copinol Nasal Medicine because it gave longer lasting relief. Now the secret is out. New laws require that Copinol reveal its treasured formula and now the whole world knows that LANOLIN, blended with six other scientific ingredients, is the amazingly effective mediament that insures such lasting relief from stuffy head colds, catarrh-choked nose and throat, nasal catarrh and sinus congestions. * * *

LONGER LASTING MEDICATION FOR YOUR NOSE

Sufferers from nasal congestion can rid nose of clogging mucus and get longer protection by using COPINOL NASAL MEDICINE.

NASAL HYGIENE COPINOL NASAL MEDICINE.

Rid nose of germ laden mucus! Loosen clogging congestion with COPINOL! Long lasting medication! A few drops will aid you in breathing freely again.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and in other and similar statements and representations not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of his said preparation, respondent represents, directly or by implication: That his said preparation is a cure and remedy for head colds, catarrh-choked nose or throat, nasal catarrh, or sinus congestion, and that it constitutes a competent and effective treatment for such conditions; that it will rid nose and throat of, and protect nose from, germ laden mucus, and instantly clear the head; and that said preparation will afford relief to congested nasal passages more quickly and for a longer period of time than other preparations.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations used and disseminated by respondent as aforesaid, are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading. Respondent's preparation "Copinol" is not a cure or remedy for head colds, nasal catarrh, or sinus congestion, and has no therapeutic value in the treatment of such conditions in excess of furnishing temporary relief to congested nasal mucus membranes. It will not rid the nose and throat of, or protect the nose from, germ laden mucus. It will not clear the head instantly. This preparation has no special therapeutic properties which will enable it to afford relief more quickly or for a longer period of time than many other similar preparations on the market, affording temporary relief to congested nasal passages. It is nothing more than a mild antiseptic emollient and constrictor of the arterioles.

PAR. 6. Respondent's preparation contains the drug ephedrine alkaloid and the use of said preparation may be harmful to those suffering from heart trouble, high blood pressure, diabetes, or thyroid trouble and the use of this preparation over a long period of time is likely to produce such prolonged nasal constriction as to cause tissue damage from anoxemia with secondary inflammatory reaction, and may also cause nervousness, restlessness, or sleeplessness.

The advertisements disseminated by the respondent as aforesaid, contain no cautionary statements to the effect that this preparation should not be used by persons having heart trouble, high blood pressure, diabetes, or thyroid trouble or that its frequent or continued use may cause nervousness, restlessness, or sleeplessness, and consequently such advertisements constitute false advertising in that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representation contained therein and fail to reveal that the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in injury to health.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has, the capacity and tendency to and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's medicinal preparation "Copinol."

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 21st day of December 1940, issued, and on the 26th day of December 1940, served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent, Robert E. Overell, charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

On January 15, 1941, the respondent filed his answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondent, Robert E. Overell, and Richard P. Whiteley, assistant chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceedings without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs and without the filing of trial examiner's report upon the evidence. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes it findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Robert E. Overell, is an individual trading under the style and firm name of Copinol Co. with his principal place of business located at Seventh and Main Streets, Los Angeles, Calif.

PAR. 2. Respondent, acting in his individual capacity, and trading under the style and firm name aforesaid, is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the advertising, sale, and distribution of a medicinal preparation designated as "Copinol" and sometimes as "Copinol Nasal Medicine." Respondent causes said preparation, when sold, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of California to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business as aforesaid, respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, advertisements concerning his said medicinal preparation, designated as aforesaid, by United States mails and by various means in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, advertisements concerning his said medicinal preparation by various means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said medicinal preparation, designated as aforesaid, in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated by the United States mails and various other means, are the following:

TERRIBLE NOSE DISCHARGE EMBARRASSES LADY

Sufferers from stuffy head colds, catarrh-choked nose and throat, nasal sinus, helped by Copinol. "I had a bad discharge from my right nostril and used from 4 to 6 handkerchiefs daily. It was terrible," writes Mrs. O. E. J., Ocean Beach, California.

NASAL HYGIENE COPINOL NASAL MEDICINE

Rid nose of germ-laden mucus! Loosen cloggy congestion with COPINOL! A few drops will aid you in breathing freely again.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and other statements and representations similar thereto but not specifically set out herein, all purporting to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of the medicinal preparation "Copinol," respondent represents, directly or by implication, that his said preparation is a cure or remedy for head colds, catarrh-choked nose or throat, nasal catarrh, and sinus congestion, and that it constitutes a competent and effective treatment for such conditions that it will rid the nose and throat of, and protect nose from, germ-laden mucus, and instantly clear the head; and that said preparation will afford relief to congested nasal passages more quickly and for a longer period of time than similar preparations.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations, used and disseminated by respondent as aforesaid, are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading.

Respondent's preparation Copinol, designated as aforesaid, is a mild soothing and cooling emollient and local constrictor of the small blood vessels. It is not a cure or remedy for head colds, catarrh-choked nose or throat, nasal catarrh, or sinus congestion, and it has no therapeutic value in the treatment of such conditions in excess of furnishing temporary relief to congested nasal mucous membranes. It will not rid the nose and throat of, or protect the nose from, germ-laden mucus. It will not clear the head instantly. This preparation has no special therapeutic properties which will enable it to afford relief more quickly or for a longer period of time than many other similar preparations affording temporary relief to congested nasal passages.

PAR. 6. Respondent's preparation contains the drug ephedrine alkaloid, and the use of this preparation may be harmful to those suffering from heart trouble, high blood pressure, diabetes, or thyroid trouble, and the use of this preparation over a long period of time is likely to produce such prolonged nasal constriction as to cause tissue damage from anoxemia with secondary inflammatory reaction and may also cause nervousness, restlessness, or sleeplessness.

PAR. 7. While the label now being used by respondent carries the statement,

See circular for full directions regarding use of Copinol, it carries neither a warning statement to apprise the reader that there is potential danger in the use of said preparation to persons suffering from heart trouble, high blood pressure, or thyroid disease, and that this preparation should not be used over a long period of time, nor a cautionary statement specifically directing attention to a warning statement to such effect appearing in the accompanying labeling.

The circular now being packaged with respondent's preparation Copinol, contains directions for use and in connection therewith the following statement:

Care should be taken that this preparation is not used so continuously over a long period of time as to cause amassing of oily deposits in nose or lungs. Should be used with caution by persons subject to heart trouble, high blood pressure or thyroid disease. Consult your physicians, particularly regarding children's use.

In the light of the potential danger existing in this product as found in paragraph 6 hereof, the above statement appearing on the circular is inadequate as a warning. It fails to set forth the full danger existing in this preparation if used over a long period of time, and it does not constitute a sufficient warning to persons suffering from heart trouble, high blood pressure, diabetes, or thyroid diseases. This preparation should not be used by persons subject to these diseases except on competent advice.

The printed matter on the pasteboard box in which Copinol is now being packaged by respondent, and the advertisements disseminated by the respondent, as aforesaid, however, contain neither a statement to the effect that said preparation should not be used by persons suffering from heart trouble, high blood pressure, diabetes, or thyroid trouble except on competent advice and that its use over a long period of time is likely to produce prolonged nasal constriction as to cause tissue damage from anoxemia with secondary inflammatory reaction, nor a cautionary statement to the effect that said prepartion should be used only as directed on the label. Such advertisements constitute false advertisements in that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained therein, and fail to reveal that the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in injury to health.

PAR. 8. The use by the respondent of the foregoing statements and representations, and others of a similar nature, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has, the capacity and tendency to and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true and that respondent's preparation is harmless and will accomplish the results claimed for it, as found in paragraph 4 hereof, and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase respondent's medicinal preparation "Copinol."

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondent herein and Richard P. Whiteley, assistant chief counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent, Robert E. Overell, individually or trading under the name of Copinol Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of his medicinal preparation designated "Copinol," or any other preparation of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or by any means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference that said preparation:

(a) Is a cure or remedy for head colds, catarrh-choked nose or throat, nasal catarrh, or sinus congestion, or has any therapeutic value in the treatment of such conditions in excess of furnishing temporary relief to congested nasal mucous membranes.

(b) Will rid the nose and throat of, or will protect the nose from, germ-laden mucus.

(c) Will instantly clear the head.

(d) Will afford relief to congested nasal passages more quickly and for a longer period of time than similar preparations.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisements by means of the United States mails or by any means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement fails to reveal that respondent's medicinal preparation "Copinol" should not be used by persons suffering from heart trouble, high blood pressure, diabetes, or thyroid trouble, and that the use of said preparation over a long period of time is likely to produce prolonged nasal constriction resulting in tissue damage from anoxemia, provided, however, that if the label of said preparation contains a warning of the potential dangers in the use of said preparation, as hereinabove set forth, such advertisements need contain only the cautionary statement: CAUTION, USE ONLY AS DIRECTED ON THE LABEL.

3. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof, or which fails to comply with the requirements set forth in paragraph 2 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 10 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing stating whether he intends to comply with this order, and, if so, the manner and form in which he intends to comply; and that, within 60 days after the service upon him of this order, said respondent shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

BARD-PARKER COMPANY, INC., AND PARKER, WHITE & HEYL, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4478. Complaint, Mar. 28, 1941—Decision, Sept. 15, 1941

Where a corporation and its subsidiary, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of their "Bard-Parker Formaldehyde Germicide," referred to sometimes as "Bard-Parker Germicide," and "B-P Germicide," and of "B-P Instrument Containers," "B-P Sterilizers," and "B-P Instrument Jars" for use therewith; by means of advertisements in pamphlets, circulars, medical journals, letterheads, and other advertising literature, and through imprinted or raised letterings on the sides of said instrument containers, and through photomicrographs, in pamphlets distributed by them, of the cutting edge of surgical blades, directly and by implication—

Represented that their said "Bard-Parker Formaldehyde Germicide" chemical solution was an efficient, practical and certain sterilization medium for the pre-operative preparation of surgical and dental instruments, and a safe, practical substitute for heat sterilization;

Facts being that, while their said solution had high germicidal and destructive bacteriological properties, it would not destroy all forms of bacteria when used in accordance with the customary sterilization technique; and it was not efficient, practical and certain, or a safe substitute for heat sterilization, unless the instruments remained continuously immersed therein for a period of 18 hours between usage;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such false representations were true, and of inducing it, because of said belief, to purchase their chemical solution:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. John W. Carter, Jr., for the Commission.
Wiggin & Dana, of New Haven, Conn., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Bard-Parker Co., Inc., a corporation, and Parker, White & Heyl, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Bard-Parker Co., Inc., is a corporation with its principal office and place of business located at Danbury, Conn. The respondent, Parker, White & Heyl, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at Danbury, Conn. It is a subsidiary of the said Bard-Parker Co., Inc., and is engaged primarily as the selling and distributing agent for its principal. The said respondent corporations act in conjunction and cooperation with each other with respect to the acts and practices hereinafter set forth.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Parker, White & Heyl, Inc., and respondent, Bard-Parker Co., Inc., acting through its said subsidiary, are now, and for more than 1 year last past, have been engaged in the sale and distribution of the following Bard-Parker products:

(b) Instrument containers designed and intended to be used in connection with the aforesaid "Bard-Parker Formaldehyde Germicide" designated as "B-P Instrument Containers" and "B-P Sterilizers."

(c) Instrument jars designed and intended to be used in connection with the said "Bard-Parker Formaldehyde Germicide" and designated as "B-P Instrument Jars."

Respondents cause their said products, when sold, to be transported from their said place of business in the State of Connecticut to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States, other than the State of Connecticut, and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business the said respondents have disseminated and are disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said chemical solution "Bard-Parker Formaldehyde Germicide" by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and the respondents have also disseminated, and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said product, by various means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, in pamphlets, circulars, advertisements in medical journals, letterheads, by statements imprinted on the various containers and by other advertising literature, are the following:

B-P Sterilizer.

Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the destructive bacteriological properties of their said chemical solution, respondents represent, directly or through implication, that their said chemical solution "Bard-Parker Formaldehyde Germicide" is an efficient, practical and certain sterilization medium for surgical and dental instruments, and that it is a safe substitution for heat sterilization.

PAR. 4. The foregoing statements and representations, and others of similar import not specifically set forth herein, are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. While respondents' said preparation has germicidal properties it will not, when used in accordance with the usual and customary technique ordinarily associated with sterilization, destroy all forms of bacteria. It is not an efficient, practical, and certain sterilization medium and is not a safe substitute for heat sterilization.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations, and others of a similar nature, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the tendency and capacity to, and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' chemical solution "Bard-Parker Formaldehyde Germicide."

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 28th day of March 1941, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon Bard-Parker Co., Inc., and Parker, White & Heyl, Inc., charging said respondents with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act.

On April 15, 1941, the respondents filed their answers in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondents and Richard P. Whiteley, assistant chief counsel for the Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs, and without the filing of the trial examiner's report upon the evidence.

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Bard-Parker Co., Inc., is a corporation with its principal office and place of business located at Danbury, Conn.

Respondent, Parker, White & Heyl, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at Danbury, Conn. It is a subsidiary of respondent, Bard-Parker Co., Inc., and is engaged primarily as the selling and distributing agent for its principal.

Respondents act in conjunction and cooperation with each other with respect to the acts and practices hereinafter set forth.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past, have been engaged in the sale and distribution of the following Bard-Parker products:

(a) A chemical solution designated "Bard-Parker Formaldehyde Germicide," sometimes referred to as "Bard-Parker Germicide" and "B-P Germicide."

(b) Instrument containers designed and intended to be used in connection with the aforesaid "Bard-Parker Formaldehyde Germicide," designated as "B-P Instrument Containers" and "B-P Sterilizers."

(c) Instrument jars designed and intended to be used in connection with the said "Bard-Parker Formaldehyde Germicide" and designated as "B-P Instrument Jars."

Respondents cause their said products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Connecticut and from their place of business in the State of Pennsylvania, to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than Connecticut and Pennsylvania, and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3 In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business the said respondents have disseminated and are disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said chemical solution "Bard-Parker Formaldehyde Germicide" by the United States mails and by various means in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and the respondents have also disseminated, and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the disseminating of, false advertisements concerning their said product, by various means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

PAR. 4. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated by respondents, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, in pamphlets, circulars, advertisements in medical journals and periodicals, letterheads, and by other advertising literature, are the following:

1. Prior to the year 1939, as shown by Commission's exhibits 1 to 10, inclusive:

Studies on the Chemical Sterilization of Surgical Instruments.

The Improved Bard-Parker Formaldehyde Germicide—a highlight in the cavalcade of protective instrument sterilization methods.

Specifically developed as a more efficient, practical and economical sterilization method that insures preservation of the factory new characteristics of delicate surgical instruments * * *.

Destructive Factor Eliminated by the Modern B-P Instrument Sterilization Medium.

Bard-Parker Germicide provides effective rust-proof sterilization.

* * * often far exceeds the nominal cost of this invaluable sterilizing medium.

BARD-PARKER INSTRUMENT CONTAINERS designed to afford added measures of instrument protection during the sterilizing process.

A compact container of heavy duty "PYREX" glass, designed for use with B-P Germicide to facilitate the rust-proof sterilization of fine surgical instruments.

Of high germicidal potency * * * destructive to both vegetative and spore forms of bacteria.

It Sterilizes.

B-P Sterilizer.

2. Subsequent to the year 1939, as shown by respondents' exhibits Nos. A, B, C, and D:

Studies on the Chemical Sterilization of Surgical Instruments.

THE IMPROVED BARD-PARKER FORMALDEHYDE GERMICIDE

A Highlight in The Calvacade of Protective Methods For the Preoperative Preparation of Instruments.

Specifically developed as a more efficient, practical and economical disinfecting medium, capable of prolonging the factory-new characteristics of delicate surgical instruments—thus serving to safeguard the surgeon's or hospital's instrument investment.

DESTRUCTIVE FACTORS ELIMINATED BY THE MODERN B. P. INSTRUMENT-DISINFECTING MEDIUM.

Sterilization by boiling is known to produce a progressively destructive action upon keen cutting edges and points. The intense heat of autoclaving and boiling in oil jeopardize the temper of steel—the oil leaving a film which must be rinsed or wiped off. Most available chemical solutions of sufficiently high germicidal potency, such as formaldehyde U. S. P. carbolic acid, mercuric chloride, etc., exert a corrosive action on metal.

BARD-PARKER FORMALDEHYDE GERMICIDE PROVIDES EFFECTIVE RUSTPROOF PREPARATION OF INSTRUMENTS.

The solution will not rust, corrode or otherwise damage steel instruments, glass, or heat treated rubber, and is nondestructive to the keen cutting edges of B-P knives and scissors; the lumens and points of hypodermic and suture needles; glass syringes and suture tubes * * * throughout the disinfecting process. It preserves the temper of steel thus prolonging the useful life of instruments.

PAR. 5. In like manner and means in commerce, and for the same purpose, as is set forth in paragraph 3 hereof, respondents have also disseminated and are disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements by the use of:

1. Imprinted or raised lettering on the sides of the Bard-Parker Instrument Containers, as illustrated in Commission's exhibits 1 to 9, inclusive, and in respondents' exhibits A and B, respectively, such as

and

2. Photomicrographs of the cutting edge of surgical blades appearing in pamphlets distributed by respondents, as is shown by Commission's exhibit 1, 2, 3, and 9, respectively, and by respondent's exhibits A and B, respectively.

The photomicrographs are designated

(a) Edge of steel blade before sterilization;

(b) Edge of steel blade after boiling in water for five minutes, and

(c) Edge of steel blade after thirty-six hours in Bard-Parker Germicide, respectively.

and are arranged in sequence so as to demonstrate the nondestructive action of the aforesaid chemical solution on the cutting edge of surgical blades, as compared with the destructive action of sterilization by boiling.

PAR. 6. Through the use of the statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, as set forth in paragraphs 4 and 5 hereof, and others of similar import not specifically set-out herein, all disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, respondents have represented directly, and are now representing indirectly and through implication and inference, that their said chemical solution "Bard-Parker Formaldehyde Germicide" was and is an efficient, practical and certain sterilization medium for the preoperative preparation of surgical and dental instruments and that it was and is a safe, practical substitute for heat sterilization.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid statements and representations disseminated as aforesaid, are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. While respondents' chemical solution, "Bard-Parker Formaldehyde Germicide," has high germicidal and destructive bacteriological properties, it will not, in the light of present scientific knowledge, when used in accordance with the usual and customary technique ordinarily associated with sterilization, destroy all forms of bacteria. It is not an efficient, practical and certain sterilization medium and it is not a safe substitute for heat sterilization unless the instruments, between usage, remain continuously immersed in the said solution for a period of eighteen hours.

PAR. 8. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations, and others of a similar nature, disseminated as aforesaid, has had the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements were and are true and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' chemical solution "Bard-Parker Formaldehyde Germicide."

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That respondents, Bard-Parker Co., Inc., a corporation, and Parker, White & Heyl, Inc., a corporation, their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of the chemical solution "Bard-Parker Formaldehyde Germicide," or any other preparation of substantially similar composition or possessing similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly, indirectly, or through inference, that the said chemical solution Bard-Parker Formaldehyde Germicide is a sterilization medium for the preoperative preparation of surgical or dental instruments, or is a substitute for boiling or autoclaving of surgical or dental instruments, unless it is clearly and unequivocally stated in immediate connection with each such representation, in words of equal conspicuousness, that any instrument to be sterilized must remain continuously immersed in said chemical solution for not less than 18 hours.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said chemical solution, Bard-Parker Formaldehyde Germicide, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

RENAUD SALES COMPANY, INC., AND MURRAY W. MORIN, IRVING UNTERMAN, AND IRVING LIPSCHITZ

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3500. Complaint, July 20, 1938—Decision, Sept. 16, 1941

Where, for a number of years ending in 1934, the perfumes, powders, and allied products of "Societe Anonyme Renaud Paris 1817" of Paris, France, had been sold and distributed in the United States by "Renaud et Cie of America," and said products and its perfumes known as "Sweet Pea," "Gardenia," "Narcisse," "Orchidee," "Ghedma," "Notchenka," and others, all further identified by name "Renaud," "Renaud Paris," or "Renaud Paris 1817," had acquired a reputation as high quality French perfumes with the trade and purchasing public in the United States, the "Sweet Pea" being particularly well and favorably known; and thereafter, a New York corporation and three officers thereof who controlled its business, engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of perfumes, powders and other products;

Following the insolvency, in 1934, of said "Renaud et Cie of America," and their purchase at assignee's sale of a substantial part of the stock of said Societe's products, together with the name and good will, and including also large numbers of Renaud bottles, containers, and labels, and, in the case of the perfumes purchased by them, substantial quantities of certain odors and small quantities of others such as "Sweet Pea," amounting to a few gallons only, which perfumes and other products they sold at much lower prices than had previously been obtained for said Societe's products—

(a) Bottled in containers bearing labels such as "Renaud Paris" and "Renaud Paris 1817," perfumes which they manufactured by mixing alcohol with perfume essences and essential oils purchased at the assignee's sale, and, when their supplies of perfumes of certain odors purchased at said sale became exhausted, bottled and sold, in containers bearing such labels, substitutes therefor which were made for them by a New York concern from essences, essential oils, or other products purchased from various sources, of which none were said Societe; and

(b) Made use, in continuing their sale and distribution of perfumes, including those compounded in the United States of alcohol with essences and essential oils, of containers simulating those previously used in the bottling and sale of products of said Societe, and of labels which bore the words "Renaud Paris" and "Made in France," together with depiction of a Norman crown and a woman's face superimposed thereon, or "Renaud Paris 1817" together with name of the odor "Sweet Pea," or the typical Norman crown with a woman's face superimposed thereon and the name "Renaud," simulating the labels formerly used on the products of said Societe; and made advertising allowances to retailers to assist in defraying the cost of advertisements circulated by the latter such as "Famous in France RENAUD'S Perfume * * * famous for the subtlety of its scent, is now available in the three-ounce size (listed at 22.50) at about one-fifth of its value. * * *";

With effect of misleading and deceiving the purchasing public into believing that such perfumes were those of said Societe and were those made or compounded in France and imported, for which a substantial part of the consuming public has long had a marked preference, and with consequence that substantial numbers of such public bought their products and trade was thereby diverted to them from competitors who truthfully advertise their respective goods and refrain from representing, through labels or otherwise, that their perfumes have a value, merit, or origin contrary to the fact; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Edward E. Reardon, trial examiner.

Mr. Charles S. Cox for the Commission.

Munn, Anderson & Liddy and Mr. Abraham B. Hertz, of New York City, for Renaud Sales Co., Inc., Murray W. Morin and Irving Unterman.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Renaud Sales Co., Inc., a corporation, Murray W. Morin, Irving Unterman, and Irving Lipschitz, individually, and as officers of Renaud Sales Co., Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Renaud Sales Co., Inc., is and has been since the year 1934, a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York with its principal place of business at 245 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Respondents, Murray W. Morin, Irving Unterman, and Irving Lipschitz, are, respectively, president, vice president, and secretary and treasurer of the said Renaud Sales Co., Inc., and individually, and as such officers, control and direct, and have controlled and directed, the policies, practices, and activities of said Renaud Sales Co., Inc., during the time hereinafter mentioned. Respondents are now and have been for more than 1 year last past engaged in the sale and distribution of domestic and imported perfumes in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their said business respondents are now and have been in substantial competition with individuals, partnerships, firms, and corporations, likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling perfumes in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. When said products are sold respondents transport or cause the same to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. Respondents, in soliciting the sale and in the sale of their products, and for the purpose of creating a demand on the part of the consuming public for said commodities, have adopted and are employing a method or form of advertising the same in newspapers, on labels, containers, cartons, bottles, and otherwise, by the use of the trade name "Renaud" or "Renaud—Paris—1817," and by so doing the respondents create and have created in the general public, and among buyers of perfumes for retail stores, misleading conceptions with reference to said articles and commodities, in that the name "Renaud" in connection with perfumes and cosmetics implies to the public that said products are of a superior quality manufactured or sold by "Renaud—Paris—1817," of Paris, France. "Renaud—Paris—1817" is a French perfumer of international reputation, and for a number of years cosmetics and perfumes manufactured or sold by said concern and bearing that name have been imported into the United States, where they have been and are recognized by the buying public as high-grade French products of superior quality, and a substantial part of the buying public of the United States has shown and does show a decided preference for such products of "Renaud—Paris—1817."

PAR. 5. The said practices and said advertisements by respondents are misleading in that many of the products so advertised and thus labeled are not in truth manufactured or compounded by "Renaud—Paris—1817," and are not products manufactured or compounded in France at all, but are products wholly compounded or manufactured within the United States.

PAR. 6. For many years a substantial part of the consuming public of the United States has had, and still has, and has so expressed, a marked preference for perfumes which are manufactured or compounded in foreign countries, especially in France, and then imported into the United States.

PAR. 7. There are among the competitors of respondents manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who truthfully advertise and represent the nature, merit, and origin of their respective product. There are also among the competitors of respondents manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who refrain from advertising or representing, through their labels or otherwise, that the merchandise offered for sale by them has a value, merit, or origin that it does not have.

PAR. 8. The acts and practices of respondents, as hereinabove alleged, have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to and do mislead and deceive a substantial part of the purchasing and consuming public and cause them mistakenly and erroneously to believe that said perfumes so sold and distributed by the respondents were and are manufactured in France and imported from that country into the United States; and as a result of such mistaken and erroneous belief to cause a substantial number of members of the purchasing and consuming public to purchase the products of the respondents.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations on the part of respondents have induced and still induce a substantial number of consumer purchasers of said products, as well as many purchasers for retail stores, to buy the products offered for sale and distributed by the respondents on account of the aforementioned erroneous belief. As a result thereof substantial trade in said commerce has been unfairly diverted to the respondents from their competitors, and as a consequence substantial injury has been and is being done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 10. The aforementioned methods, acts, and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on July 20, 1938, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Renaud Sales Co., Inc., a corporation, and upon respondents Murray W. Morin, Irving Unterman, and Irving Lipschitz, individually and as officers of the corporate respondent, charging said respondents with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by an attorney for the Commission and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by attorneys for the respondents before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, and brief in support of the complaint (respondents not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Renaud Sales Co., Inc., is and has been since 1934 a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business at 245 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Respondents, Murray W. Morin, Irving Unterman, and Irving Lipschitz are, respectively, president, vice president, and secretary-treasurer of the corporate respondent, and individually and as such officers, control and direct, and have controlled and directed, the policies, practices, and activities of said Renaud Sales Co., Inc.

PAR. 2. Respondents have, during the time alleged in the complaint, been engaged in the sale and distribution of perfumes, powders, and other products. When sold, respondents transport or cause said products to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of their said business respondents are now, and have been, in substantial competition with individuals, partnerships, firms, and corporations likewise engaged in selling and distributing like or similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. For a number of years ending in 1934 the perfumes, powders, and allied products of Societe Anonyme Renaud Paris 1817 of Paris, France, were sold and distributed in the United States by Renaud et Cie of America, which company had its principal place of business at 210 South Street, Boston, Mass. These products included perfumes known as "Sweet Pea," "Gardenia," "Narcisse," "Orchidee," "Ghedma," "Notchenka," and others, all further identified by the name "Renaud," "Renaud Paris," or "Renaud Paris 1817." These products acquired a reputation of being high quality French perfumes and were so known to and accepted by the trade and the purchasing public in the United States. The perfume known as "Sweet Pea" was particularly well and favorably known.

In 1934, Renaud et Cie of America became insolvent, and at the assignee's sale of the assets of that company the respondents in this proceeding purchased certain of such assets, including the name and good will, a substantial part of the stock of perfumes of various odors and other products made by the Societe Anonyme Renaud Paris 1817, large numbers of empty perfume bottles and containers for Renaud products, and large quantities of Renaud labels for use on or with such bottles and containers. In the case of perfumes purchased by respondents there were substantial quantities of certain odors, and small quantities of other odors such as "Sweet Pea," in which instance the quantity purchased by respondents amounted to only a few gallons.

PAR. 4. After the aforesaid purchase respondents began selling the perfumes and other products acquired at said assignee's sale at much lower prices than had previously been obtained for products of Societe Anonyme Renaud Paris 1817, and began the manufacture of perfumes by mixing alcohol with perfume essences and essential oils purchased at the assignee's sale. Perfumes so manufactured were bottled in containers bearing labels such as "Renaud Paris" and "Renaud Paris 1817." Within a short time respondents removed their remaining stock of the products of the Societe Anonyme Renaud Paris 1817, containers, and labels to New York City; and when their supplies of perfumes of certain odors purchased at the assignee's sale became exhausted, they purchased substitutes therefor which were manufactured for them by Special Toiletries Corporation of New York City from essences, essential oils, or other products, purchased from various sources, none of which was the Societe Anonyme Renaud Paris 1817. Such essences, essential oils, or other products were combined with alcohol of domestic manufacture and the perfumes so manufactured were bottled and sold by respondents in containers bearing labels such as "Renaud Paris" and "Renaud Paris 1817."

PAR. 5. In the continuation of their business in the aforesaid manner respondents purchased large quantities of containers from glass manufacturers, which containers simulated in appearance the containers previously used in the bottling and sale of products of the Societe Anonyme Renaud Paris 1817. Respondents also purchased large quantities of labels simulating labels previously used on the products of the Societe Anonyme Renaud Paris 1817 and with which members of the trade and the purchasing public were familiar as identifying the products of the Societe Anonyme Renaud Paris 1817. For example, they purchased 100,000 labels from the Quality Seal & Engraving Company of Framingham, Mass., bearing the words, "Renaud," "Paris," "Made in France," with a pictorial representation of a Norman crown and a woman's face superimposed thereon, which label is a simulation in size, shape, color, and appearance of the labels previously used on products of the Societe Anonyme Renaud Paris 1817. Respondents also purchased from the Foxon Company of Providence, R. I., 125,000 labels similar in size, shape, color, and appearance to those purchased from the Quality Seal & Engraving Company and having thereon a pictorial representation of a Norman crown with a woman's face superimposed, but with the words "Renaud Paris 1817" and the name of the odor "Sweet Pea" appearing near the edge of the label. At other times, but subsequent to the purchases specifically mentioned, respondents purchased quantities of labels similar in size, shape, color, and appearance to the labels described above. These additional labels bore the typical Norman crown with a woman's face superimposed and the name "Renaud" but did not bear the words "Paris" or "Made in France."

PAR. 6. In the sale and distribution of perfumes, including those manufactured or compounded in the United States by the mixing of alcohol with essences and essential oils and packed in containers simulating those used for the products of Societe Anonyme Renaud Paris 1817 and with labels simulating those used on the products of such company, respondents' direct and implied statements to retailers purchasing such products for sale to the public resulted in their being advertised and sold with representations such as:

Famous in France

RENAUD'S Perfume

This fine perfume, famous for the subtlety of its scent, is now available in the three-ounce size (listed at 22.50) at about one-fifth of its value! The gift bottle, of simulated quartz, is done in excellent taste. Your choice of Sweet Pea, Orchid or Gardenia.

Respondents further contributed to the circulation of advertisements containing such representations by making advertising allowances to retailers to assist in defraying the cost of so advertising and representing the products in question.

PAR. 7. For many years a substantial part of the consuming public has had, and still has, a marked preference for imported perfumes manufactured or compounded in foreign countries, especially in France.

PAR. 8. There are among the competitors of respondents manufacturers and distributors of perfumes who truthfully advertise the nature, merit, and origin of their respective products and who refrain from advertising or representing through their labels or otherwise that the perfumes so offered for sale by them have a value, merit, or origin that they do not have.

PAR. 9. The acts and practices of respondents in offering for sale, selling, and distributing perfumes and other products not manufactured by Societe Anonyme Renaud Paris 1817 but packaged in containers simulating those in which Renaud et Cie of America sold and distributed the products of Societe Anonyme Renaud Paris 1817, with labels identical or closely simulating those used on such products, have the capacity and tendency to, and did, mislead and deceive the purchasing public into believing that such perfumes were the products of the Societe Anonyme Renaud Paris 1817. The offering for sale, sale, and distribution of perfumes which were manufactured or compounded in the United States, in the aforesaid containers and with the aforesaid labels, have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such perfumes are manufactured or compounded in France and imported into the United States. As a result of such acts and practices substantial numbers of the purchasing and consuming public have purchased the products of respondents under such erroneous belief and trade in commerce has been diverted from competitors of respondents, and as a consequence substantial injury has been done, and is being done, to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto taken before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, and brief in support of the complaint (respondents not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondents, Renaud Sales Company, Inc., a corporation, and respondents, Murray W. Morin, Irving Unterman, and Irving Lipschitz, individually and as officers of the corporate respondent, their agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of perfumes and other products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist, directly or indirectly:

1. From using the terms "Paris," "Renaud Paris," "Renaud Paris 1817," "Made in France," or any other terms, words, symbols, or pictorial representations indicative of French or other foreign origin, on or in connection with products which are made or compounded in the United States; provided, however, that the country or countries of origin of the various ingredients of any such product may be stated when immediately accompanied with a statement that such product is made or compounded in the United States.

2. From using the term "Renaud Paris" or "Renaud Paris 1817" on or in connection with products not made or compounded by the Societe Anonyme Renaud Paris 1817; or using on or in connection with such products containers or labels simulating the containers or labels used on or in connection with products of the Societe Anonyme Renaud Paris 1817; or otherwise representing, importing, or implying in any manner that products not made or compounded by the Societe Anonyme Renaud Paris 1817 are made or compounded by or are the products of that company.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

DOMESART CORPORATION AND JOSEPH ZWEIGENTHAL AND WILLIAM M. SAFRIN, INDIVIDUALLY AND AS OFFICERS OF DOMESART CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3620. Complaint, Oct. 3, 1938—Decision, Sept. 17, 1941

Where a corporation, and the two individuals who were its only officers and directors, and represented the ownership of its capital stock, engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of candy through agents or operators whose names and addresses it obtained from mailing list brokers—

Made use of sales method which involved the mailing to prospective agents of catalogs describing its product, its list of premiums, and its sales plan, involving use of pull cards in sale and distribution of its said candy, under which the amount paid by the purchaser was dependent upon the number disclosed beneath the feminine name he selected from those displayed on the tabs, the purchaser pulling a certain tab received in addition to the candy the pen and pencil set described in the catalog, and the agent or operator had choice of certain premiums for his services or alternative privilege of retaining $2 of the amount collected for said candies, customarily sold at retail for considerably less than the price listed; and

Placed in the hands of others thereby plans, methods, and devices which involved games of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery schemes for use in the sale and distribution of its product, notwithstanding "Notice to Purchasers" in the catalog advising purchaser of privilege of buying a box of candy at the price listed which, as far as appeared, was never shown to any purchaser of a pull;

With the result that many persons were attracted by said sales method and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to purchase its merchandise in preference to that of its competitors, including those who do not use such or a similar method and are unwilling so to do, and from whom, as a result, trade was thereby unfairly diverted to it:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.
Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Domesart Corporation, a corporation, and Joseph Zweigenthal and William M. Safrin, individually and as officers of Domesart Corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Domesart Corporation, is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 130 West Seventeenth Street, New York, N. Y. Individual respondents, Joseph Zweigenthal and William M. Safrin, are the sole stockholders in, directors of, and president and secretary-treasurer respectively of corporate respondent, and have their offices at the same address as said corporation. Respondents Zweigenthal and Safrin formulate, control, and direct the practices and policies of respondent Domesart Corporation. All of said respondents act together and in cooperation with each other in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged. Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause, and have caused, said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in the various other States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondents are, and have been, in competition with individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and distribute, and have sold and distributed, said candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Respondents distribute to purchasers and prospective purchasers certain advertising literature including, among other things, a catalog. One of respondents' assortments of candy consists of a number of boxes of candy and a fountain pen and pencil set, which said fountain pen and pencil set is to be given as a prize to the purchaser of one of said boxes of candy. Said assortment of candy is sold and distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner: On one page of said catalog is printed and set out a list of the boxes of candy and the prices thereof. On the opposite page is printed and set out a device commonly called a pull card. Said pull card consists of a number of tabs, under each of which is concealed the name of a box of candy and the price thereof. The name of the box of candy and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers and prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which box of candy they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated or removed from the card. When a purchaser has detached a tab and learned what box of candy he is to receive, and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named box of candy. The purchaser securing a tab calling for a certain box of candy is entitled to receive, and is given without charge, said pen and pencil set. Some of said boxes of candy have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them, but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he buys. The manner in which said pen and pencil set is distributed and the apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said boxes of candy as compared to the price the prospective purchaser would be required to pay in the event he secures one of said boxes of candy, induce the members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive a box of candy and said pen and pencil set, or a box of candy of far greater value than the designated price to be paid for same. The facts as to whether the purchaser of one of said pull card tabs receives a box of candy and said pen and pencil set or receives a box of candy which has apparent greater value and regular price than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said boxes of candy a purchaser is to receive and the amount of money which a purchaser is required to pay are determined wholly by lot or chance.

When the person or dealer operating the above-described card has succeeded in selling all of the tabs or chances, collected the amounts called for, and remitted the sums to the respondents, the said respondents thereupon ship to said dealers the boxes of candy designated on said card, and the pen and pencil set to be given as a prize, as aforesaid, together with a premium for the dealer as compensation for operating the pull card and selling the said merchandise. Said dealer delivers the boxes of candy to the purchasers of tabs from said pull card in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.

Respondents sell and distribute, and have sold and distributed, various assortments of boxes of candy and furnish, and have furnished, various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution thereof by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Respondents' sales plans or methods vary in detail, but the above-described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

PAR. 3. The dealers to whom respondents furnish, and have furnished, the said pull cards use, and and have used, the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondents' merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to, and place in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their candy in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said methods in the sale of their candy and the sale of such candy by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an additional article of merchandise without cost or a box of candy at a price much less than the apparent normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with the respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any other methods involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondents' said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such candy in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' candy in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade and custom to the respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof, substantial injury is being done, and has been done, by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on October 3, 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint, in this proceeding upon the respondents, Domesart Corporation, a corporation, and Joseph Zweigenthal and William M. Safrin, individually and as officers of the respondent corporation, charging them with unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of the complaint and filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer thereto, the testimony and other evidence, the trial examiner's report thereon, and brief in support of the complaint; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Domesart Corporation, is a corporation organized in the year 1928 under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business located at 130 West Seventeenth Street, in the city and State of New York. Respondents, Joseph Zweigenthal and William M. Safrin, are directors, and president and secretary and treasurer, respectively, of the corporate respondent, and share the offices of the corporate respondent. The individual respondents, since 1933, have formulated, controlled, and directed the practices of the corporate respondent. All of the capital stock of the respondent corporation is owned by William M. Safrin and Adele Zweigenthal, the mother of respondent Joseph Zweigenthal. Respondents, William M. Safrin and Joseph Zweigenthal, are the only officers and directors of respondent corporation.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Domesart Corporation, since the year 1928, has been engaged in the sale and distribution of candy, and causes its product, when sold, to be shipped from its principal place of business to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Respondent, Domesart Corporation, in the conduct of its business as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, has been and now is in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 4. Respondent, Domesart Corporation, sells and distributes its candy through agents located in various States of the United States whose names and addresses it obtains through mailing-list brokers. Catalogs describing its product, sales method including pull card, and its list of premiums, are mailed to prospective agents.

PAR. 5. The pull cards included in the catalogs bear 16 seals or pull-tabs, each of which has a slit across the top to facilitate its removal from the card. On the face of each tab is printed a feminine name, and on the reverse thereof is a number which is not disclosed until the tab has been detached and which indicates the price to be paid to the agent by the person pulling the tab. The catalog contains a list of respondent's candies and a statement indicating the amounts to be paid, therefor, which amounts correspond with the numbers appearing on the reverse of the tabs, one of these being for 10 cents, another for 39 cents, and the remaining 14 ranging from 44 to 49 cents. The purchaser pulling the 49-cent tab receives, in addition to the candy and without further charge, the pen and pencil set described in the catalog. The agent records the name of each customer and the number revealed by the detached pull-tab, which the customer retains as his receipt when he has paid the amount indicated thereon. After all the pulls have been sold, the agent remits the amount collected, $6.99, to respondent corporation, whereupon, the 16 boxes of candy described in the catalog, together with the pen and pencil set and the premiums selected by the agent as compensation for his services are mailed to the agent. If he so desires, the agent may retain, in lieu of the premiums, $2 of the amount collected, and remit the balance, $4.99, to the respondent. The pen and pencil set given as a prize to the person pulling the tab bearing the figure 49 cents is sold at wholesale for 16 cents. The candies sold by respondent are customarily sold at retail for considerably less than the price listed.

PAR. 6. The sheet of pull tabs is pasted on the upper half of page 19 of the catalog, and immediately thereunder appears a notice which reads:

> Notice to purchasers—On the back of each slip is printed the price of a box of candy. If after deliberation you decide that you want to buy the box of candy, pay the holder of this book the price shown on the slip. If you don't want the box of candy you need not buy it.

There is no testimony that any purchaser of a pull was ever shown this notice. One of the respondent's agents testified that every purchaser of a pull paid the price indicated on the tab.

PAR. 7. Respondent, Domesart Corporation, by its sales methods hereinbefore described, has placed and now places in the hands of others, plans, methods, and devices which involve games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes to be used in the distribution of its merchandise, and by the use of such plans, methods, and devices such merchandise is distributed to the ultimate consumer wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 8. Many persons have been and are attracted by the sales method employed by respondent corporation in the sale and distribution of its candy and by the element of chance involved therein, and have been thereby induced to purchase respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale by respondent's competitors who do not use the same or a similar method.

PAR. 9. During all of the time herein mentioned, the corporate respondent has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce of candy similar to that sold by respondent in commerce between and among various States of the United States, who are unwilling to use and do not use, in the sale and distribution of their candy, any method involving a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, and as a result, trade has been unfairly diverted from such competitors to the corporate respondent.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, are contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States of America, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, the testimony, and other evidence introduced before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding in support of the allegations of the complaint, the trial examiner's report thereon, and brief filed on behalf of the Commission; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent Domesart Corporation, a corporation, its officers, directors, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, and respondents, Joseph Zweigenthal and William M. Safrin, individually and as officers of said respondent corporation, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing candy or any other merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of such candy or other merchandise to the public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of others, push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, either with assortments of candy or other merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling and distributing said candy or other merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

EARL ARONBERG, TRADING AS POSITIVE PRODUCTS COMPANY AND REX PRODUCTS COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3856. Complaint, July 20, 1939—Decision, Sept. 17, 1941

Where an individual engaged in interstate sale and distribution of his medicinal preparations intended for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation, designated as "Triple X Relief Compound," and "Perio Pills," known also as "Reliable Perio Compound" and "Perio Relief Compound"; by means of advertisements disseminated through the mails and in newspapers and periodicals, directly or by implication—

(a) Represented that his said products constituted competent and effective remedies and treatments for delayed menstruation, and that they were harmless and safe for use, facts being that, while they possessed emmenagogue properties, they did not constitute competent and effective remedies or treatments for delayed menstruation, nor were they harmless or safe for use, but contained aloes, extract of cotton root and oil of savin in sufficient quantities, even where used in dosage prescribed, to cause such harmful results as gastro-intestinal disturbances and excessive purgation, and, by reason of their ergotin content, as well as the quinine sulphate in said "Triple X" preparation, might also cause severe toxix and circulatory conditions particularly hazardous in the case of pregnancy; and danger inherent in said preparations was further augmented by their indiscriminate sale to the lay public for use without medical supervision, and the taking by many users, because of ignorance or alarm, of excessive and too frequent doses; and

(b) Failed to reveal in said advertisement that prescribed use of said preparations might result in serious injury to health, and failed sufficiently to disclose harmful potentialities of such products in statements which appeared only on their labels, which, as a result of change made following the initiation of the Commission's investigation, read: "Not to be taken in pregnancy as it may cause discomfort. If in doubt consult a physician. If the pills cause excessive bowel action, they should be stopped temporarily. This medicine is a laxative and may irritate piles. Laxatives should never be used in cases of nausea, vomiting, abdominal pain or other possible sign of appendicitis," and which the many purchasers by mail had no opportunity to observe until after they had received said products;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that his preparations possessed therapeutic values which they did not in fact possess, and that they were safe for use, when such was not the fact, and to cause such public to purchase substantial quantities of his preparations because of such belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

As respects evidence of experiments performed on rats and rabbits, introduced to support claim that seller's products, offered for delayed menstruation, did not possess harmful potentialities, the Commission found that such experiments were inconclusive, did not afford a substantial basis for his contentions, and lacked sufficient probative value to overcome evidence introduced at the instance of the Commission, which included the testimony of outstanding authorities in the field of gynecology and obstetrics.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston and Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiners.

Mr. R. P. Bellinger for the Commission.

Jacobson, Merrick, Nierman & Silbert, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Earl Aronberg, an individual trading as Positive Products Company and Rex Products Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Earl Aronberg, is an individual trading as Positive Products Co. and Rex Products Co. with his office and principal place of business located at 6603 Cottage Grove Avenue, Chicago, Ill. The respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various medicinal preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Among the preparations so sold and distributed by the respondent are certain medicinal preparations for the relief of delayed menstruation, designated as "Triple-X Compound" and "Reliable Perio Compound," also known as "Perio Pills" and "Perio Relief Compound."

Respondent causes said preparations when sold to be transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning his said preparations, by the United States mails, by insertions in newspapers, and periodicals, having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said preparations; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning his said preparations by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said preparations in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false representations contained in the advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

A Modern Aid For Many Unnaturally

DELAYED WOMEN

(Picture of one woman saying to another—

But my dear, haven't you heard of Perio-Relief Compound?)

A Time-Tested Preparation

For countless women such unnatural menstrual delay is often needless. To them a simple preparation is offered, which in many cases of abnormally suppressed, overdue, scant and painful periods has helped start the function, thus bringing gratifying relief. It is called PERIO RELIEF COMPOUND and may be taken at home, without, in most instances, interfering with daily activities.

Do as Many Other Women do

Thousands of modern-minded women have used PERIO RELIEF COMPOUND: a large number having heard about it through friends who have been helped and are therefore grateful. Some have secured relief after a delay of as much as two months, while others write to tell us how pleased they are with reputed effectiveness and say it is worth many times the cost.

PAR. 3. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth, and other representations similar thereto not specifically set-out herein, respondent represents that his medicinal preparations known and designated as "Triple-X Compound" and "Reliable Perio Compound," also known as "Perio Pills" and "Perio Relief Compound," are competent and effective remedies for delayed menstruation; that said preparations are harmless and will accomplish results without pain or inconvenience.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact said preparations are not a competent and efficient remedy for delayed menstruation and will not accomplish results without pain or inconvenience. Furthermore, said preparations are not safe and harmless in that "Triple-X Compound" contains aloes, extract cotton root, ergoti ferrous sulphate, extract black hellebore, quinine sulphate and oil savin, and said preparation "Reliable Perio Compound," also known as "Perio Pills" and "Perio Relief Compound" contains extract cotton root, ergotin, iron sulphate extract, extract black hellebore, aloes purified and oil savin. The aforesaid drugs are present in said preparations in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if taken under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

The use of said preparations, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary and usual, may produce a very severe circulatory condition by constriction of blood vessels and contraction of involuntary muscles tending to produce abortion with violent poisonous effects upon the human system, and liable to produce severe toxic conditions, such as hemorrhagic diarrhea, and in some instances producing a gangrenous condition in the lower limbs, and in some instances resulting in either the loss of limbs or in death of the individual.

PAR. 5. In addition to the representations above set forth, the respondent is also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in that said advertisements fail to reveal that the use of said preparations, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and to induce a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's medicinal preparations containing injurious drugs.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 20, 1939, issued, and subsequently served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Earl Aronberg, an individual trading as Positive Products Co. and as Rex Products Co., charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by R. P. Bellinger, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by David Silbert, attorney for respondent, before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and such testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, answer, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiners upon the evidence and the exceptions thereto, briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and oral argument; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Earl Aronberg, is an individual trading as Positive Products Co. and as Rex Products Co., with his office and principal place of business located at 6603 Cottage Grove Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and for more than three years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of certain medicinal preparations intended for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation, such preparations being designated by the respondent as "Triple-X Relief Compound" and "Perio Pills," the latter being known also as "Reliable Perio Compound" and as "Perio Relief Compound."

PAR. 2. Respondent causes his preparations, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and for more than three years last past has maintained, a course of trade in his preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his business the respondent has disseminated, and has caused the dissemination of, advertisements concerning his preparations by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated, and has caused the dissemination of, advertisements concerning his preparations by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his preparations in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the statements and representations appearing in such advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated by the United States mails and by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, are the following:

A Modern Aid for Many Unnaturally
DELAYED WOMEN
A Time-Tested Preparation

For countless women, such unnatural menstrual delay is often needless. To them a simple preparation is offered, which in many cases of abnormally suppressed, overdue, scant and painful periods has helped start the function, thus bringing gratifying relief. It is called PERIO RELIEF COMPOUND and may be taken at home, without, in most instances, interfering with daily activities.

Pure Vegetable Ingredients

PERIO RELIEF COMPOUND contains no habit-forming drugs, but is made almost solely of pure vegetable ingredients, such as may be used by many physicians in their practice. Many users say they would never be without it. Some keep it always on hand and use it just before the time so as to help bring on a more full, unsuppressed function.

DO AS MANY OTHER WOMEN DO

Thousands of modern-minded women have used PERIO RELIEF COMPOUND; a large number having heard about it through friends who have been helped and are therefore grateful. Some have secured relief after a delay of as much as two months, while others write to tell us how pleased they are with its reputed effectiveness and say it is worth many times the cost.

GOOD NEWS TO MANY WOMEN!

PERIO RELIEF COMPOUND is made to quickly and harmlessly aid most abnormally delayed functions, in cases where no organic disorder is present.

PAR. 4. Through the use of these statements and representations and others of similar import, the respondent has represented, directly or by implication, that his preparations constitute competent and effective remedies and treatments for delayed menstruation, and that the preparations are harmless and safe for use.

PAR. 5. The formulas for the preparations are as follows:

TRIPLE-X

Each capsule contains:
Aloes	¾ Gr.
Ergotin	1 "
Ext. Cotton Root	1 "
Ext. Black Hellebore	1 "
Oil Savin	¼ Min.
Ferrous Sulphate	1 Gr.
Quinine Sulphate	½ "

PERIO PILLS

Each pill contains:
Aloes Purified	1 Gr.
Ergotin	1 "
Ext. Cotton Root	1 "
Ext. Black Hellebore	1 "
Oil Savin	¼ Min.
Ferrous Sulphate	1 Gr.

Respondent's directions for the use of the preparations were originally as follows:

For Triple-X: "One capsule four times a day, that is, one after each meal and one before bedtime, the last one to be taken with a large glass of water, together with a tablespoon full of epsom salts, that is, the epsom salts is to be in the large glass of water. The latter is merely suggested."

For Perio Pills: "The average adult dose is one pill before each meal and one before retiring, and, in addition, one of the pink capsules (Triple-X), which is contained in the box, is to be taken at night before retiring."

Subsequent to the Commission's investigation the directions were changed by respondent to read as follows:

The average adult dose is one pill with water four times daily before each meal and before retiring, not to be used continuously for more than ten days. Allow one week to intervene before resuming. Caution: Not to be taken in pregnancy as it may cause discomfort. If in doubt consult a physician. If the pills cause excessive bowel action, they should be stopped temporarily. This medicine is a laxative and may irritate piles. Laxatives should never be used in cases of nausea, vomiting, abdominal pain or other possible sign of appendicitis.

PAR. 6. Delayed menstruation is frequently due to pregnancy. In those cases which are due to causes other than pregnancy emmenagogue treatment is seldom efficacious or necessary. In such cases the menstrual delay is usually but a symptom of some other dysfunction in the body or is due to some external cause, such as fright or shock, and when such dysfunction is corrected or such cause removed, the normal menstrual flow usually resumes. In those exceptional cases where physicians prescribe emmenagogues such action is taken only after diagnosis, and the treatment is under the supervision of the physician.

PAR. 7. While respondent's preparations possess emmenagogue properties, they do not constitute competent or effective remedies or treatments for delayed menstruation. Nor are they harmless or safe for use. The ingredients aloes, extract of cotton root and oil of savin are drastic cathartics and gastro-intestinal irritants. They tend to cause gastro-intestinal disturbances and excessive purgation, resulting in severe toxic conditions, including hemorrhagic diarrhea. The preparations, by reason of their ergotin content (and in the Triple-X preparation the quinine sulphate also), may also cause a severe circulatory condition by the constriction of the blood vessels and the contraction of the involuntary muscles, including the muscles of the uterus. This is particularly hazardous in the case of pregnancy, as the contraction of the uterus may precipitate an abortion, which may result in violent poisonous effects upon the system.

PAR. 8. The ingredients referred to above are present in the preparations in quantities sufficient to cause such harmful results even in those cases where the preparations are used in the dosage prescribed by respondent. The record discloses, moreover, that where, as in this case, such preparations are sold indiscriminately to the lay public for use without medical supervision, many users, because of ignorance or of alarm over their condition, take excessive and too-frequent doses, thus augmenting the danger inherent in the preparations.

Respondent insists that the statements appearing in his current directions are sufficient to obviate the danger of excessive use of the preparations, and to apprise purchasers that the preparations should not be used in the event of pregnancy. The Commission finds, however, that such statements are insufficient to disclose the harmful potentialities of the preparations. Moreover, such statements appear only on the labels of the preparations and do not appear in respondent's advertisements. Many of respondent's sales are made through the mails, and the purchasers have no opportunity to observe such statements until after they have received the preparations.

PAR. 9. In support of his claims that the preparations do not possess the harmful potentialities referred to above, the respondent introduced in evidence, in addition to the testimony of certain expert witnesses, the results of certain experiments performed on rats and rabbits. It is questionable, however, whether the number of animals used in the tests was sufficient to afford a substantial scientific basis for the conclusions contended for by respondent. Moreover, it appears from the record that the results of these tests cannot be accepted as a positive indication of the effects of the preparations on human beings, there being substantial differences in the degrees of susceptibility of animals and human beings.

The Commission finds that while these experiments may be to a limited extent indicative of the effects which may be expected to follow the use of the preparations, the experiments are inconclusive and do not afford a substantial basis for respondent's contentions. Their probative value is insufficient to overcome the evidence introduced at the instance of the Commission, which included the testimony of certain expert witnesses who are outstanding authorities in the field of gynecology and obstetrics.

PAR. 10. The Commission therefore finds that respondent's representations with respect to his preparations are misleading and deceptive and constitute false advertisements. The Commission finds also that respondent's advertisements are false for the further reason that they fail to reveal that the use of the preparations under the conditions prescribed in the advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious injury to the health of the user.

PAR. 11. The Commission further finds that the use by respondent of these false advertisements has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent's preparations possess therapeutic values which they do not in fact possess, and that the preparations are safe for use, when such is not the fact, and the tendency and capacity to cause such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's preparations as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint, report of the trial examiners upon the evidence and the exceptions thereto, briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and oral argument; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Earl Aronberg, individually and trading as Positive Products Co. and as Rex Products Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of his medicinal preparations designated as "Triple-X Relieve Compound" and "Perio Pills," the latter being known also as "Reliable Perio Compound" and as "Perio Relief Compound," or any preparations of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or by implication, that said preparations constitute competent or effective remedies or treatments for delayed menstruation; that said preparations are harmless or safe for use; or which advertisement fails to reveal that the use of said preparations may cause gastro-intestinal disturbances and severe toxic and circulatory conditions, and in the case of pregnancy, may produce violent poisonous effects upon the system.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparations, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof, or which fails to reveal that the use of said preparations may cause gastro-intestinal disturbances and severe toxic and circulatory conditions, and in the case of pregnancy, may produce violent poisonous effects upon the system.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 10 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing, stating whether he intends to comply with this order and, if so, the manner and form in which he intends to comply; and that within 60 days after service upon him of this order, said respondent shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

W. S. McCLYMONDS AND G. L. McCLYMONDS, DOING BUSINESS AS OXOL LABORATORIES

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4208. Complaint, July 31, 1940—Decision, Sept. 17, 1941

Where two individuals engaged in manufacture and interstate sale and distribution of their "Trox Tablets," ingredients of which included powdered extract triticum repens, oxyquinoline sulphate, charcoal, starch, and sugar of milk; by means of advertisements disseminated through the mails and otherwise—

Falsely represented that said preparation was a cure or remedy for various diseases and ailments of the kidneys and prostate gland, and constituted an effective treatment therefor; facts being tablets in question were without therapeutic value; modern pharmacologists ascribe no therapeutic properties to said first ingredient or conch grass, second ingredient is a decidedly less efficient antiseptic than phenol, with amount contained in said tablets so insignificant that no beneficial action would result therefrom for said ailments, and other ingredients are of no medical value;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such false representations were true, and of inducing it, because of such erroneous belief, to purchase substantial quantities of their said "Trox Tablets":

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.

Mr. Donovan R. Divet for the Commission.

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that W. S. PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, W. S. McClymonds and G. L McClymonds, are individuals doing business under the firm name and style of Oxol Laboratories with their principal office and place of business at 1042-48 Santa Fe Drive, Denver, Colo.

Respondents are now and for more than 2 years last past have been engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing a drug preparation designated as "Trox Tablets." The respondents cause said preparation when sold, to be shipped from their said place of business in the State of Colorado to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, respondents have disseminated, and are now disseminating and have caused and are now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said preparation, "Trox Tablets," by United States mails, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said preparation; and have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said preparation by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said preparation in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, are the following:

Prostate and Kidney * * * sufferers? Amazing results with our ten day treatment with Trox Tablets. Quick relief or your money back * * *

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 31st day of July 1940, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, W. S. McClymonds and G. L. McClymonds, individuals, doing business as Oxol Laboratories, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On August 21, 1940, the respondents filed their answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondents and Richard P. Whiteley, assistant chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, W. S. McClymonds and G. L. McClymonds, are individuals and for more than 2 years prior to May 1, 1941, did business under the firm name and style of Oxol Laboratories, with their office and principal place of business located at 1042–48 Santa Fe Drive, Denver, Colo.

For more than 2 years prior to May 1, 1941, the respondents were engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing a drug preparation designated as "Trox Tablets," the formula for which is:

Powdered extract triticum repens	4 grs.
Oxyquinoline sulphate	1/20 gr.
Charcoal	1 gr.
Starch	3/4 gr.
Sugar of milk	1/4 gr.

During the time that respondents were so engaged in said business, they caused said preparation when sold to be shipped from their said place of business in the State of Colorado to the purchasers thereof located in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents, at all times mentioned herein prior to May 1, 1941, maintained a course of trade in said preparation in commerce among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, respondents disseminated and caused the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said preparation, "Trox Tablets," by means of the United States mails and by other means in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and have disseminated and have caused the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said preparation by various means for the purpose of inducing, and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said produce in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, were the following:

Prostate and kidney—sufferers? Amazing results with our ten-day treatment with Trox Tablets. Quick relief or your money back * * *

Prostate and kidney sufferers. Use Trox Tablets for instant relief; money back offer.

PAR. 3. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations, and other representations of similar import or meaning not herein set out, respondents represented that their said preparation,

"Trox Tablets," was a cure or remedy for various diseases and ailments of the kidneys and of the prostate gland, and constituted a competent and effective treatment for such diseases and ailments.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid statements and representations by respondents relating to said preparation, "Trox Tablets," were exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, no therapeutic properties are ascribed to triticum repens (conch grass) by modern pharmacologists. Oxyquinoline sulphate is an antiseptic decidedly less efficient in its killing power than phenol. The standard dose of oxyquinoline sulphate is 5 to 15 grains, and the amount of oxyquinoline sulphate contained in "Trox Tablets" is so insignificant that no beneficial action would result from its use in kidney or prostate disorders. The other ingredients of "Trox Tablets," to wit, starch, sugar of milk, and charcoal, are of no medical value. "Trox Tablets" have no therapeutic value, and the claims made by respondents as to the therapeutic value of "Trox Tablets," as hereinabove set forth, are false and misleading in their entirety.

PAR. 5. The use by respondents of the aforesaid false and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, has had the capacity and tendency to, and did, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and has induced a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' said "Trox Tablets."

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondents, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondents herein and Richard P. Whiteley, assistant chief counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondents herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, W. S. McClymonds and G. L. McClymonds, individually and doing business as Oxol Laboratories, or trading under any other name, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of their product "Trox Tablets," or any product of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from, directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represents, directly or through inference:

(a) That respondents' product "Trox Tablets" constitutes a cure or remedy for diseases and ailments of the kidneys or of the prostate gland, or constitutes a competent or effective treatment therefor.

(b) That respondents' product "Trox Tablets" possess any therapeutic value in the treatment of diseases and ailments of the kidneys or of the prostate gland.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act of said product, "Trox Tablets," which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

THE BRABANT NEEDLE COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4212. Complaint, Aug. 2, 1940—Decision, Sept. 17, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in importing needles and needle threaders from England, Germany, Holland, and Czechoslovakia, and in interstate sale and distribution thereof—

(a) Packaged needles—the container pads or flaps of which, at time of importation and pursuant to the laws of the United States, bore the name of the country of origin—in a manner which concealed said name, and in booklets or other containers which usually bore the words "Printed in U. S. A.," and sold and distributed its needles, thus packaged, without disclosure of fact that they were made in Germany or other foreign country, to dealers for resale, and to manufacturers, dealers, and others for distribution to the public as part of a sales promotion plan to act as sales reminders and create good will for the supplying concern; and

(b) Made use of such statements, in invoices, letterheads, and other materials, as "Factory Lion Works, George St. Redditch—England U. S. Factory and Sales Rooms 47 Great Jones Street, New York, N. Y.";

The facts being needles of English manufacture are considered by trade and consuming public as superior in quality to those manufactured in Germany, Holland, or Czechoslovakia; there is a prejudice on the part of a substantial part of said purchasing public against products manufactured in Germany; and said corporation had not for many years, and did not then, own, control, or operate any needle factory in the United States or in England, and was not a manufacturer, for dealing with whom there is a decided preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public, as affording, in its belief, a saving of the middleman's profit and other advantages;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that its needles were of domestic or English origin and that it owned or controlled factories in which such needles were produced, and with result, as consequence of said erroneous belief, that a substantial portion of said public was induced to purchase its products, and there was thereby placed in the hands of dealers a means whereby they were enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public as to the source of such products and the business status of said company:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, trial examiner.

Mr. Carrel F. Rhodes for the Commission.

Mr. William Kessler, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal

Trade Commission, having reason to believe that The Brabant Needle Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, The Brabant Needle Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business at 47 Great Jones Street, New York, N. Y.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the business of importing, packaging, selling, and distributing needles and needle threaders. Respondent causes its said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof, located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. At all times mentioned herein, respondent has maintained a course of trade in said products, in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent imports said needles in pads or flaps from Germany and other foreign countries; the name "Germany" indicating the country of the origin of some of such needles is stamped or printed upon the back of each pad or flap. In marketing certain of its products, respondent combines various pads or flaps of needles into booklets, or containers, sometimes in combination with other articles, such as needle threaders. Respondent prepares such booklets or containers by securely pasting the pads or flaps of needles to the inside covers of the booklets or containers in such a manner that the backs thereof are entirely concealed and any printing thereon, indicating the origin of said needles, is completely hidden from view. Such booklets, or containers, are thereupon sold and distributed by respondent in commerce, as aforesaid, without any marking thereon whatsoever, visible to the purchaser, indicating that such needles are of German origin.

PAR. 4. In the further course and conduct of its business, and in furtherance of the sale of its products, the respondent, during the times mentioned herein, has printed, or caused to be printed, upon the booklets, or containers, of its needles, the words: "Printed in U. S. A." and "U. S. A." and has caused to be printed on its letterheads, invoices, and bill heads, circulated, and caused to be circulated, by United States mails, and by other means among purchasers and prospective purchasers, the following statements and representations:

The Brabant Needle Company, Inc.
Factory, Lion Works, George St.,
Redditch, England
U. S. Factory and Sales Rooms
47 Great Jones Street,
New York, N. Y.

The aforesaid statements, used by respondent, serve as representations to members of the purchasing public that its needles are of domestic or English origin and that it owns, operates, or controls factories located in England and in the United States, wherein the needles, which it sells and offers for sale, are made and manufactured.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, none of the needles packaged as aforesaid, and sold by respondent, are manufactured in the United States or England, and the respondent has not during any of the times mentioned herein owned, operated, or controlled any factory wherein such needles sold by it were manufactured either in England, the United States, or elsewhere. All of said needles are imported by respondent from foreign countries other than England for purpose of resale.

PAR. 6. For many years last past, there has been maintained among domestic manufacturers and importers an established custom and practice of marking products of foreign origin in such a manner as to indicate that such products are, in fact, of foreign, rather than domestic, origin. The purchasing public is familiar with and relies upon such custom and practice, and when products bear no marking indicating that they are of foreign origin, the purchasing public assumes that such products are of domestic origin. There is, among a substantial portion of the purchasing public, a decided preference for products which are manufactured in the United States or England over products manufactured in Germany or other foreign countries.

PAR. 7. There also is, and has been during all of the time mentioned herein, a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for purchasing products directly from the manufacturer. There is and has been during all of such time a belief that a saving of the middleman's profit could be obtained and that other advantages would accrue by purchasing directly from the manufacturer, and that dealing directly with a manufacturer is preferable and more advantageous than dealing with purchasers for resale.

PAR. 8. The practice of the respondent in packaging its products in such a manner that the origin of said products is entirely concealed from the view of the purchaser, and of printing on said booklets and containers the words, "Printed in U. S. A." and "U. S. A.," without disclosing to the prospective purchasers the fact that certain of its products offered for sale are made in Germany, and the representations that it owns or controls factories in England and the United States, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that a portion of its products are of domestic or English origin and that it owns or controls the factories manufacturing all of its said products. As the result of said erroneous and mistaken belief, engendered as herein set forth, a substantial portion of the purchasing public is induced to and does purchase respondent's products.

Through the practices herein set forth, the respondent places in the hands of dealers a means and instrumentality whereby such dealers have been and are enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public as to the source or origin of such products and as to the business status of respondent.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on August 2, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, The Brabant Needle Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by an attorney for the Commission and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by an attorney for the respondent before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, The Brabant Needle Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of New York and having its office and principal place of business at 47 Great Jones Street, New York, N. Y. The respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the business of importing, packaging, selling, and distributing needles and needle threaders.

PAR. 2. Respondent causes its said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to purchasers located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. At all times mentioned in the complaint respondent has maintained a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business respondent imports needles and needle threaders from England, Germany, Holland, and Czechoslovakia. At the time of importation into this country the said needles are arranged in pads or flaps and, pursuant to the laws of the United States, the name of the country of origin is printed or stamped upon the pads or flaps in which the needles are packaged. In some instances the name of the country of origin appears upon the face of the pad or flap and in other instances upon the back thereof. In selling and distributing the needles so imported, respondent frequently combines a number of the pads or flaps of needles, sometimes with other articles such as needle threaders, into one package by securely pasting said pads or flaps into a booklet or other container in which form they are sold and distributed. In those instances where the name of the country of origin of the imported needles appears upon the back of the pad or flap in which they are packaged, the name of such country of origin is effectively concealed when such pad or flap is pasted into a booklet or container, and is not visible to any purchaser or prospective purchaser.

PAR. 4. Needles of English manufacture are considered by the trade and the consuming public to be superior in quality to those manufactured in Germany, Holland, or Czechoslovakia, and there is a prejudice on the part of a substantial part of the purchasing public against products manufactured in Germany. In addition to frequently packaging needles imported from Germany or other foreign country in booklets or other containers in a manner which conceals the name of the country of origin, as aforesaid, the respondent packages such needles in booklets or other containers which usually bear the words "Printed in U. S. A." Respondent sells and distributes the needles packaged in the manner stated to dealers, for resale to the public, and also to manufacturers, dealers, and others who distribute them to members of the public without charge as a part of a sales promotion plan by such manufacturer, dealer, or other purchaser. When so distributed they are intended to act as sales reminders and to create good will for the concern which supplied them as a gift.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of its business, as aforesaid, respondent has used invoices, letterheads, and other material bearing statements such as:

Factory Lion Works, George St.,
Redditch—England
U. S. Factory & Sales Rooms
47 Great Jones Street
New York, N. Y.

The respondent has not for many years, and does not now own, control, or operate any factory in the United States or England in which it manufactures needles. Many years ago the respondent owned an English concern known as "Brabant Needle Co., Ltd.," and is now the exclusive distributor for the products of that company in the United States and Canada. For a number of years last past, however, respondent has not manufactured any of the needles offered for sale and sold by it. There is a decided preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for dealing directly with the manufacturer of the products purchased because of a belief that by purchasing directly from the manufacturer a saving of the middleman's profit is accomplished and that other advantages accrue through such method of purchase.

PAR. 6. The acts and practices of respondent in packaging needles imported from Germany and other foreign countries in such a manner that the name of the country of origin of such needles is frequently concealed from the view of the purchaser, and the placing upon the booklets and other containers in which said needles are packaged the words "Printed in U. S. A." without disclosing to purchaser or prospective purchasers the fact that certain of said needles are made in Germany or other foreign countries, and the acts and practices of respondent in representing that it owns, operates, or controls factories in the United States and in England, have a capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent's needles are of domestic or English origin and that it owns or controls factories in which such needles are produced. As a result of said erroneous and mistaken belief engendered as herein set forth, a substantial portion of the purchasing public is induced to and does purchase respondent's products. Through the aforesaid acts and practices the respondent places in the hands of dealers a means and instrumentality whereby such dealers have been and are enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public as to the source of origin of such products and the business status of respondent.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, brief filed in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed by respondent and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent, The Brabant Needle Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the sale and distribution of needles, needle threaders, or other products in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing or implying that respondent owns, controls, or operates a factory in which the needles which it offers for sale, sells, and distributes are made, or representing or implying in any manner that needles or other products not manufactured by respondent are manufactured by it.

2. Concealing, erasing, or removing from imported needles, needle threaders, or other products the legend "Germany," "Made in Germany," or other marking showing the country of origin of such products: Provided, however, That this shall not prevent such concealment, erasure or removal of the markings showing the country of origin of such products as is reasonably necessary in the packaging, assembling, or other handling of such products if the respondent affirmatively and clearly discloses on or in immediate connection with such products their German or other foreign origin.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

J. V. CORDES AND MRS. J. H. CORDES, DOING BUSINESS AS MARTHA BEASLEY ASSOCIATES

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3841. Complaint, June 30, 1939—Decision, Sept. 18, 1941

Where two individuals engaged in interstate sale and distribution of certain medicinal preparations intended for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation, one being designated as "Martha Beasley's Compound Formula No. 2" and the other as "Martha Beasley's Compound Formula No. 3"; by means of advertisements disseminated through the mails and in periodicals, directly or by implication—

(a) Represented that their preparations constituted competent and effective treatments for delayed menstruation, were recommended by physicians generally, and were safe for use, through such statements as "Get a modern woman's remedy. Ladies, when troubled with delay, get our Special Relief Compound at once. Don't wait longer. Has rapidly relieved many unusual, long overdue or past due, suppressed, late appearing abnormally delayed periods in 2 to 4 days without pain or inconvenience," and "A preferred favorite time-tested prescription of many doctors";

The facts being active ingredients in products in question were apiol, oil of savin, aloin, and ergotin, first three of which had long been recognized by pharmacologists and physicians generally as gastrointestinal irritants, aloin in particular being regarded as a drastic cathartic; under directions prescribed or suggested, daily dosage of last-named drug would be four times dose of the United States Pharmacopoeia, which dosage, particularly when added to the apiol and savin ingredients, is likely to produce gastrointestinal disturbances resulting in nausea and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, including congestion of the uterus, and possibly resulting and leading to excessive hemorrhage therefrom; while in the case of pregnancy, use of their said preparations had a tendency to cause also contraction of uterus, sometimes producing abortion and causing uterine infection, which might also extend to other pelvic and abdominal structures and result in septicemia or blood poisoning; and while drugs which constituted active ingredients of their said preparations possess emmenagogue properties, they are not competent or effective treatments for delayed menstruation, nor recommended by physicians generally, being used only after careful diagnosis and under supervision of the physician in those exceptional cases in which some of said drugs may be used; and

(b) Failed to reveal in said advertisements that use of their said products, under prescribed or usual conditions, might result in serious injury to the health of the user, and to apprise prospective purchasers that said preparations should not be used in event of pregnancy, by use in their advertisements of the word "abnormally" in connection with words "delayed periods," said preparations being offered for sale and sold indiscriminately to the lay public, and prospective purchaser being usually incapable of determining whether her condition is due to normal or abnormal causes, and did not disclose product's harmful potentialities, in direction "Should capsules cause looseness of bowels or act excessively, discontinue for several days or number of capsules may be reduced for a day or so," which appeared only on the labels of said products and not in their advertisements, and which the many purchasers by mail had no opportunity to observe until after they had received products in question;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that their said preparations possessed therapeutic values which they did not in fact possess, and that such preparations were safe for use, when such was not the fact, and to cause such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of their preparations as a result of such belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

As respects evidence of experiments performed on rats and rabbits, introduced to support claim that sellers' products, offered for delayed menstruation, did not possess harmful potentialities, the Commission found that such experiments—which, in certain instances, tended to confirm the opinions of experts introduced by the Commission as to the toxic properties of said products—were inconclusive, did not afford a substantial basis for their contentions, and lacked sufficient probative value to overcome evidence introduced at the instance of the Commission, which included the testimony of outstanding authorities in the field of gynecology and obstetrics.

Mr. Gerard A. Rault for the Commission.

Nash & Donnelly, of Washington, D. C., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that J. V. Cordes and Mrs. J. H. Cordes, trading and doing business as Martha Beasley Associates, hereinafter referred to as respondents have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, J. V. Cordes and Mrs. J. H. Cordes, are individuals trading and doing business under the name of Martha Beasley Associates, with their principal office and place of business located at 5741 Grand River Boulevard, Detroit, Mich. The respondents are now, and for several years last past have been, engaged in the sale of medicinal preparations designed for the treatment of unnaturally delayed menstruation, one known as Martha Beasley Compound Formula No. 2 and as Special Relief Compound, and Special Package No. 2; and the other known as Martha Beasley Compound Formula No. 3, and as Special Relief Compound, and Special Package No. 3. Respondents cause said preparations when sold to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of Michigan to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of Michigan and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said drugs in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business the respondents have disseminated, and are now disseminating, and have caused, and are now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said preparations by the United States mails, by insertions in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed among and between the various States of the United States and by other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said preparations; and have disseminated, and are now disseminating, and have caused, and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said preparations by various means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said preparations in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false representations contained in the advertisements disseminated and cause to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Get a modern woman's remedy. Ladies, when troubled with delay, get our Special Relief Compound at once. Don't wait longer. Has repeatedly relieved many unusual, long overdue, or past due, suppressed, late appearing abnormally delayed periods in 2 to 5 days without pain or inconvenience.

A preferred favorite time-tested prescription of many doctors.

The representations hereinbefore set out, and other representations similar thereto but not set out herein, appearing in respondents' advertisements, are false, misleading, and untrue. Respondents' preparations are not safe or scientific treatment for delayed menstruation. They are not recommended by physicians. Said advertisements of respondents are also false in that they fail to reveal that the use of such preparations under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary and usual may result in the serious illness, and in some cases the death, of the user.

The true facts are that the following drugs constitute the chief ingredients of each of these preparations, apiol, ergotin, savin, water pepper, and aloin, and that the use of either of these preparations may result in gastrointestinal disturbances such as catharsis, nausea and vomiting with pelvic congestion, inflammation and congestion of the uterus leading to uterine hemorrhage, and in those cases where either of these preparations is used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy may result in uterine infection with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures causing septicemia or blood poisoning.

PAR. 3. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false advertisements and deceptive and misleading statements and representations with respect to their preparations disseminated as aforesaid has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true and to induce a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' medicinal preparations containing injurious drugs.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on June 30, 1939, issued, and subsequently served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, J. V. Cordes and Mrs. J. H. Cordes, individuals trading and doing business as Martha Beasley Associates, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Gerard A. Rault, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by Messrs. Nash and Donnelly, attorneys for respondents, before William C. Reeves, trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and such testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, answer, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and oral argument; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, J. V. Cordes and Mrs. J. H. Cordes, are individuals trading under the name Martha Beasley Associates, with their principal office and place of business located at 5741 Grand River Boulevard, Detroit, Mich. Respondents are now, and for several years last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of certain medicinal preparations intended for use in the treatment of delayed menstruation, one of such preparations being designated by respondents as "Martha Beasley's Compound Formula No. 2" and the other as "Martha Beasley's Compound Formula No. 3."

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business the respondents cause their preparations, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Michigan to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business the respondents have disseminated, and have caused the dissemination of, advertisements concerning their preparations by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondents have also disseminated, and have caused the dissemination of, advertisements concerning their preparations by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their preparations in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the statements and representations appearing in such advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated by the United States mails and by advertisements in periodicals, are the following:

Get of modern woman's remedy. Ladies, when troubled with delay, get our Special Relief Compound at once. Don't wait longer. Has rapidly relieved many unusual, long overdue or past due, suppressed, late appearing abnormally delayed periods in 2 to 4 days without pain or inconvenience.

A preferred favorite time-tested prescription of many doctors.

PAR. 4. Through the use of these statements and representations and others of similar import, the respondents represent, directly or by implication, that their preparations constitute competent and effective treatments for delayed menstruation; that they are recommended by physicians generally; and that they are safe for use.

PAR. 5. The formulas for respondents' preparations are as follows:

Formula No. 2	Formula No. 3
Apiol—7½ minims	Apiol—8 minims
Oil of Savin—½ grain	Oil of Savin—¾ minims
Ergotin—1 grain	Ergotin—1 grain
Extract of water pepper—⅕ grain	Extract of water pepper—⅕ grain
Aloin—⅛ grain	Aloin—⅛ grain

The dosage as prescribed by respondents for Formula No. 3 is "One or two capsules four times a day." The dosage prescribed for Formula No. 2 is the same as that for Formula No. 3 except that the words "three or four times a day" are used instead of "four times a day."

Respondents' directions for the use of the preparations contain the following statement:

Should the capsules cause looseness of bowels or act excessively, discontinue for several days or number of capsules may be reduced for a day or so.

PAR. 6. The active ingredients in the preparations are the apiol, savin, aloin and ergotin. Apiol, savin, and aloin have long been recognized by pharmacologists and by physicians generally as gastrointestinal irritants, aloin in particular being regarded as a drastic cathartic. The average dose of aloin, according to the United States Pharmacopoeia, is one-fourth grain. The amount in each of respondents' capsules (Formula No. 3) is one-half of that amount or one-eighth grain. According to respondents' directions, as many as eight capsules may be taken in 1 day, and in that event the total amount of aloin taken per day would be four times the United States Pharmacopoeia dose. This dosage, particularly when added to the apiol and savin ingredients, is likely to produce gastrointestinal disturbances, resulting in nausea and vomiting. Pelvic congestion, including congestion of the uterus, may also result, leading to excessive hemorrhage from the uterus.

In the case of pregnancy, the use of respondents' preparations has a tendency to cause, in addition to the results mentioned above, a contraction of the uterus, due to the ergotin content of the preparations. Such contraction of the uterus may in some cases produce an abortion, which may result in uterine infection. Such infection may also extend to other pelvic and abdominal structures and may result in septicemia or blood poisoning.

PAR. 7. The respondents insist that their advertisements are not directed to pregnant women, and that the use in their advertisements of the word "abnormally" in connection with the words "delayed periods" is sufficient to apprise prospective purchasers that the preparations should not be used in the event of pregnancy. The preparations, however, are offered for sale and sold indiscriminately to the lay public, and the prospective purchaser is usually incapable of determining whether her condition is due to normal or abnormal causes.

Respondents further insist that their direction, "Should capsules cause looseness of bowels or act excessively, discontinue for several days or number of capsules may be reduced for a day or so," is sufficient to obviate the danger of excessive cathartic action. The Commission finds, however, that this statement is insufficient to disclose the harmful potentialities of the preparations. Moreover, the statement appears only on the labels of the preparations and does not appear in respondents' advertisements. Many of respondents' sales are made through the mails, and the purchasers have no opportunity to observe such statement until after they have received the preparations.

PAR. 8. In support of their claims that their preparations do not possess the harmful and dangerous potentialities referred to above, the respondents introduced in evidence, in addition to the testimony of certain expert witnesses, the results of certain experiments performed on rats and rabbits. It is questionable, however, whether the number of animals used in the experiments was sufficient to afford a substantial scientific basis for the conclusions contended for by respondents. Moreover, in certain of the tests, the results tend to confirm the opinions of the experts introduced by the Commission as to the toxic properties of the preparations. It is doubtful also whether these experiments can be accepted as a positive indication of the effect of the preparations on human beings, there being substantial differences in the degrees of susceptibility of animals and human beings.

The Commission therefore finds that while these animal experiments may be to a limited degree indicative of the effects produced by respondents' preparations, the experiments are inconclusive and do not afford a substantial basis for respondents' claims. Their probative value is insufficient to overcome the testimony of the expert witnesses testifying at the instance of the Commission, among whom were outstanding authorities on pharmacology, toxicology, gynecology, and obstetrics.

PAR. 9. While the drugs which constitute the active ingredients of respondents' preparations possess emmenagogue properties, such drugs are not competent or effective treatments for delayed menstruation, nor are they recommended by physicians generally. In those exceptional cases in which some of the drugs may be used by physicians, they are used only after careful diagnosis and under the supervision of the physician.

PAR. 10. The Commission therefore finds that the representations of the respondents with respect to their preparations are misleading and deceptive, and constitute false advertisements. The Commission finds also that respondents' advertisements are false for the further reason that they fail to reveal that the use of respondents' preparations under the conditions prescribed in such advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious injury to the health of the user.

PAR. 11. The Commission finds that the use by the respondents of such false advertisements has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents' preparations possess therapeutic values which they do not in fact possess, and that such preparations are safe for use, when such is not the fact, and the tendency and capacity to cause such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' preparations as a result of such belief.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondents, testimony, and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves, trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and oral argument; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, J. V. Cordes and Mrs. J. H. Cordes, individually and trading as Martha Beasley Associates, or trading under any other name, and respondents' representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of their medicinal preparations designated as "Martha Beasley's Compound Formula No. 2" and "Martha Beasley's Compound Formula No. 3," or any preparations of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or by implication, that said preparations constitute competent or effective treatments for delayed menstruation; that said preparations are recommended by physicians generally; that said preparations are safe for use; or which advertisement fails to reveal that the use of said preparations may cause gastrointestinal disturbances and excessive congestion and hemorrhage of the pelvic organs, and in the case of pregnancy may cause uterine infection and blood poisoning.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparations, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof, or which fails to reveal that the use of said preparations may cause gastrointestinal disturbances and excessive congestion and hemorrhage of the pelvic organs, and in the case of pregnancy may cause uterine infection and blood poisoning.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 10 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing, stating whether they intend to comply with this order and, if so, the manner and form in which they intend to comply; and that within 60 days after service upon them of this order, said respondents shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

PERFECT VOICE INSTITUTE, ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4047. Complaint, Mar. 5, 1940—Decision, Sept. 18, 1941

Where a corporation and three individuals, including its president in charge of its teaching activities, the chairman of its board of directors and its principal stockholder, who directed and controlled its business activities and policies, and its secretary and treasurer; engaged in interstate sale and distribution of a correspondence course of instruction for the development of the voice, based on the theory that the development and control of the muscles of the tongue is the key to voice culture, and accordingly prescribing numerous physical exercises for the tongue muscles, involving frequent use of certain mechanical aids supplied by them in addition to the series of lessons, including a mirror, an electric torch or flashlight, a pitch pipe, certain tongue supports and depressors, a tape measure and a so-called mouth gauge;

In advertisements of its said courses in periodicals of general circulation and in booklets outlining them and including testimonials from those who had taken it—

Represented that the voice might be greatly improved through the development and control of the muscles of the tongue, and that use of their course brought out a new and improved quality to the voice, and that by such use stammering might be overcome and physical defects of the vocal organs corrected;

The facts being that there is no relation between the development and control of the tongue muscles and the culture of the voice and while the physical exercises prescribed by them might result in strengthening said muscles and, in consequence, in the voice becoming louder or stronger, the quality and tone of the latter are not thereby improved, the voice on the contrary almost invariably becoming harsh and unmusical; there was danger also that use of such exercises might result in injury rather than a benefit to the voice, due to strain of the vocal organs through excessive exercising (ordinarily pursued by correspondence and without supervision of a teacher), notwithstanding caution as to moderation, since moderation for one student may be excess for another; and use of said course could not correct physical defects of the vocal organs or overcome stammering;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that their course possessed values and benefits which it did not possess, and to cause it to purchase their course as a result of said belief:

Held, That such acts and practices under the circumstances set forth were all to the prejudice of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

As respects the theory, underlying a course in voice culture, that the development and control of the muscles of the tongue is the key to the culture and development of the voice, testimony to the effect that they had found the course of substantial benefit and that their voices had been improved by it on the part of a teacher of singing who had sung in opera and in motion pictures, formerly studied said course, and used said method in teaching his own pupils, and testimony of some 10 lay witnesses, students of such course, it appearing, among other things, that some of them had pursued studies with other teachers, was insufficient to overcome testimony to the effect that said theory did not reflect the facts, by various expert witnesses, including an assistant dean of the school of speech of a prominent university in Chicago, a specialist in the field of experimental psychology in speech problems who had devoted many years to the study of the vocal mechanism and the physics of voice production, and a number of teachers of standing in the educational field concerned and of long experience as singers themselves.

Before Mr. Edward E. Reardon and Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiners.

Mr. Maurice C. Pearce, for the Commission.

Petit, Olin & Overmyer, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Perfect Voice Institute, a corporation, Eugene Feuchtinger, individually and as president of Perfect Voice Institute, Walter A. Jordan, individually and as chairman of the board of directors of Perfect Voice Institute, and Mary E. Murphy, individually and as secretary and treasurer of Perfect Voice Institute, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Perfect Voice Institute, is a corporation duly chartered, organized, and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 64 East Lake Street, Chicago, State of Illinois.

Respondent, Eugene Feuchtinger, an individual, is president of Perfect Voice Institute, with his principal office and place of business located at 64 East Lake Street, Chicago, State of Illinois.

Respondents, Walter A. Jordan and Mary E. Murphy, are each individuals, the former being chairman of the board of directors of Perfect Voice Institute, and the latter secretary and treasurer of Perfect Voice Institute, with their principal office and place of business located at 307 North Michigan Avenue, in Room 1600, Chicago, State of Illinois.

Said respondent, Walter A. Jordan, owns a controlling interest in respondent corporation and controls and directs the business activities and policies of said corporation, including its advertising. Respondents Feuchtinger and Murphy act in conjunction and cooperation with said respondent Jordan and with each other in connection with the acts and practices hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 2. The individual respondents, acting in conjunction and cooperation with each other as aforesaid, and said respondent Perfect Voice Institute, are now and for more than 1 year last past have been, engaged in the business of offering for sale, selling, and distributing, a course of instruction for the development of the voice, designated "Physical Voice Culture." Such course of instruction consists of 30 lessons, contained in 15 printed and bound volumes, entitled "A Manual for the Perfection of the Human Voice." Along with the course of instruction, and as a part of the same, respondents supply to purchasers thereof a so-called "outfit consisting of mirror, electric torch, tongue depressors, thyhedron tongue support, breath measure and special chromatic pitch pipe" to be used in connection with said course of instruction in the development of the voice.

PAR. 3. Said respondents have, through the medium of said corporate respondent, Perfect Voice Institute, placed certain advertisements in various publications, offering a "wonderful voice book free." When a reply to such advertisements is received by corporate respondent, said respondents then contact the party so answering the advertisements. The book referred to in said advertisements is forwarded to such prospective purchaser and contemporaneously therewith there is also forwarded application for enrollment blank, together with a form letter urging such prospective purchaser to enroll and become a student for such course of instruction. Upon receipt by respondents of the application for enrollment duly signed by the purchaser, and in consideration of the payment of the agreed tuition in cash or by installments, as set forth and provided in said application for enrollment, respondents deliver to such purchaser, through the United States mail or otherwise, the course of instruction, together with the "outfit," hereinabove described.

Respondents cause said course of instruction, when sold, to be transported from their said place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said course of instruction sold and distributed by them in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their business, as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said course of instruction, respondents by means of advertisements inserted in newspapers and magazines having a general circulation, and also by advertising circulars and other printed or written matter, have made and are now making various false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations concerning the character and nature of their said course of instruction and as to the results that have been and may be obtained from the training and instruction provided therein. Among and typical of such representations and statements made by respondents are the following:

We build, strengthen the vocal organs—not with singing lessons, but by fundamentally sound and scientifically correct silent exercises—and absolutely guarantee to improve any singing or speaking voice at least 100%.

The key to perfect voice production is strong tongue muscles under perfect control.

This famous method of physical voice culture is based upon the elementary principle of strengthening the throat and tongue muscles by silent, physical exercise.

We can bring out a new quality, a new power and force to your voice.

People who used to laugh at me because I stammered are the ones I laugh at now.

Yes—this is an astonishing guarantee, but it is justified by our twenty years of success not only in developing fine voices for thousands of students, but in overcoming positive physical defects * * *

PAR. 5. Through the use of the statements hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondents have represented and do now represent that by the use of respondents' said course of instruction, the exercises outlined therein and the "outfit" supplied therewith, any person can build and strengthen vocal organs and thereby improve the singing and speaking voice by at least 100 percent; that by using respondents' method of instruction strong tongue muscles can be developed and controlled; that control of strong tongue muscles results in perfect voice production; that the strengthening of the throat and tongue muscles by silent physical exercises is a method of physical voice culture; that respondents' course of instruction brings out a new quality, new power and force to the voice; that respondents' course of instruction cures stammering; and that respondents' course of instruction has developed fine voices for students and overcomes positive physical defects.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representations and claims, cooperatively used and disseminated by the respondents, as hereinabove described, are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, the singing and speaking voice cannot be improved at least 100 percent by building and strengthening the vocal organs by use of respondents' said course of instruction, the exercises outlined therein, or the "outfit" supplied therewith; strong tongue muscles cannot be developed nor controlled by the use of respondents' method of instruction; control of strong tongue muscles does not result in perfect voice production; the strengthening of the throat and tongue muscles by silent physical exercises is not a method of physical voice culture; the course of instruction will not bring out new quality, new power and force to the voice; respondents' course of instruction is not a cure for stammering; and respondents' course of instruction will not develop fine voices or overcome positive physical defects.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to the course of instruction, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true; and also has a tendency and capacity to induce a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase said course of instruction.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on March 5, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Perfect Voice Institute, a corporation; Eugene Feuchtinger, individually and as president of Perfect Voice Institute; Walter A. Jordan, individually and as chairman of the board of directors of Perfect Voice Institute; and Mary E. Murphy, individually and as secretary and treasurer of Perfect Voice Institute, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Maurice C. Pearce, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by Gustav E. Beerly, attorney for respondents, before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and such testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, answer, testimony, and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint (oral Argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Perfect Voice Institute, is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 64 East Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent, Eugene Feuchtinger, an individual, is president of the corporate respondent. He formulates the course of instruction hereinafter referred to, and is in general charge of the corporation's teaching activities. He has his office at 64 East Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent, Walter A. Jordan, an individual, is chairman of the board of directors of the corporate respondent and is the principal stockholder therein. He directs and controls the business activities and policies of the corporation, including its activities and policies with respect to advertising. He has his office at 307 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent, Mary E. Murphy, an individual, is secretary and treasurer of the corporate respondent, her mailing address being 307 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

All of the respondents act in conjunction and cooperation in carrying out the acts and practices hereinafter described.

PAR. 2. The respondents are now, and for a number of years last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a course of instruction in the development of the human voice. Respondents cause their course of instruction, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times referred to herein have maintained, a course of trade in their course of instruction in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondents' course of instruction consists of a series of lessons, approximately 30 in number, to be pursued by correspondence, and certain mechanical aids supplied by respondents for use in connection with such lessons. These mechanical aids include a mirror, an electric torch or flashlight, a pitch pipe, certain tongue supports and depressors, a tape measure, and an article designated as a mouth gauge.

For the purpose of bringing their course of instruction to the attention of the public and obtaining students, the respondents insert advertisements in periodicals having general circulation throughout the United States. To those making inquiry in response to such advertisements, respondents forward an advertising booklet outlining the course of instruction and containing numerous statements with respect to the value and effectiveness of the course. This booklet contains also a number of testimonials from persons who have taken the course. Along with this advertising booklet respondents forward to the prospective purchaser an application blank or form of contract to be executed by the prospect.

Among and typical of the statements and representations appearing in respondents' newspaper advertisements and other advertising material are the following:

We build, strengthen the vocal organs—not with singing lessons, but by fundamentally sound and scientifically correct silent exercises—and absolutely guarantee to improve any singing or speaking voice at least 100%.

The key to perfect voice production is strong tongue muscles under perfect control.

This famous method of physical voice culture is based upon the elementary principle of strengthening the throat and tongue muscles by silent, physical exercises.

We can bring out a new quality, a new power and force to your voice.

People who used to laugh at me because I stammered are the ones I laugh at now.

Yes—this is an astonishing guarantee, but it is justified by our twenty years of success not only in developing fine voices for thousands of students, but in overcoming positive physical defects * * *.

PAR. 4. Through the use of these statements and representations and others of similar import, the respondents represent that the voice may be greatly improved through the development and control of the muscles of the tongue; that the use of respondents' course of instruction brings out a new and improved quality to the voice; that by the use of such course stammering may be overcome; and that physical defects of the vocal organs may be corrected through the use of such course of instruction.

PAR. 5. The theory upon which respondents' course of instruction is based is that the development and control of the muscles of the tongue is the key to the culture and development of the voice. This theory is set forth in the first lesson of the course as follows:

> Carry this important fact in your mind throughout your course of study, for it is the basic principle of my method and marks the vital difference between my system of vocal culture and all others:
>
> In this course we consider the tongue muscles to be the key of all the muscles used to produce voice—that they are the most necessary factor in the desired control of the vocal organ as a whole.

In pursuance of this theory, respondents prescribe varied and numerous physical exercises for the tongue muscles, and in these exercises frequent use is made of the mechanical aids supplied by respondents. The purpose of these exercises is to develop and strengthen the muscles of the tongue, and to give the student a greater degree of control over the position and action of the tongue.

PAR. 6. The experts introduced as witnesses at the instance of the Commission included:

1. An assistant dean of the school of speech of a prominent university in Chicago, who is also director of the speech clinic of the university. This witness holds degrees from three universities, including a doctor's degree, and is a specialist in the field of experimental psychology and speech problems. He has devoted 20 years to the study of the anatomy and physiology of the vocal mechanism and the physics of voice production. His services with the speech clinic have extended over a period of 12 years, during which time some 3,000 speech and voice cases have come under his observation.

2. A teacher of singing who, in addition to giving private lessons, directs choirs and choruses and is choir master of a prominent church. He has studied voice in a number of leading schools, and his experience in teaching extends over a period of some 25 years.

3. A teacher who has for 21 years conducted a school of singing in Chicago. He is a graduate of one of the leading conservatories of music in Chicago, and has spent some 15 years studying with teachers both in the United States and in Europe. He has specialized in the development of the voice and in preparing students for the singing profession.

4. A professor of voice in the school of music of one of the leading universities in Chicago, who has studied both in the United States and abroad, being a graduate of the university in which he is now teaching. His teaching experience covers a period of some 35 years.

5. An official of a conservatory of music in Chicago who has studied both in America and abroad, and who sang professionally for some 12 or 14 years. His work has included singing in opera as well as on the concert stage and in musical comedies.

6. A teacher of speech in a prominent university who has studied in several accredited schools of speech.

7. A teacher of singing, who sang in opera for some 12 years, including several years with the Chicago Civic Opera Co. This witness is connected officially with a prominent conservatory of music in Chicago and also with the Chicago Civic Opera Co.

The testimony of these witnesses shows that there is no relation between the development and control of the tongue muscles and the culture of the voice. The physical exercises prescribed by respondents may result in the strengthening of the tongue muscles, and in consequence the voice may become louder or stronger. The quality and tone of the voice, however, are not improved; on the contrary the voice almost invariably becomes harsh and unmusical. Certain of the Commission's witnesses have had occasion to observe the voices of persons taking respondents' course, and the opinions of these witnesses as to the value of the course are based not only upon their general knowledge and experience but also upon their observation of these students.

The testimony further shows that in many instances the use of the physical exercises prescribed by the course may result in injury to the voice rather than benefit, one reason for this being that the exercises may be carried to excess and the vocal organs strained. This danger is increased by reason of the fact that the course is pursued by correspondence and without the supervision and guidance of a teacher. Respondents' students are free to come to the school for advice and instruction, and a number of students living fairly close to Chicago do go to the school for that purpose. In the usual case, however, the course is pursued entirely by correspondence. Even a caution as to moderation in the use of the exercises is insufficient, because exercises which may be moderate in the case of one student may easily become excessive in another case.

PAR. 7. In support of their claims for their course of instruction, respondents introduced only one expert witness, a teacher of singing who has also sung in opera and in motion pictures. This witness formerly studied respondents' course and now uses the method in teaching his own pupils. He testified that he had found the course of substantial benefit in his own case and also that he had obtained favorable results from the use of the method in his teaching.

Aside from the testimony of this witness, respondents relied principally upon the testimony of some 10 members of the public who had pursued respondents' course of instruction and some of whom are still numbered among respondents' students. The testimony of these witnesses, in substance, was that they had found the course to be of substantial benefit and that their voices had been improved as a result of taking the course.

In some of these cases the witnesses had pursued studies with other teachers, and it is questionable as to how much of the improvement testified to by the witnesses was due to respondents' method. Moreover, the record discloses that it is questionable whether an individual is a capable judge of the quality and tone of his own voice, there being certain physiological and psychological reasons why one's voice does not sound to him as it does to other persons. After careful consideration of the testimony offered by respondents, including the testimony of these lay witnesses and of the expert referred to, the Commission is of the opinion, and finds, that it is insufficient to overcome the expert testimony introduced at the instance of the Commission.

PAR. 8. The Commission therefore finds that the representations of respondents with respect to their course of instruction and the benefits to be derived therefrom are misleading and deceptive. The use of respondents' course of instruction is incapable of improving the quality or tone of the voice. Neither the course of instruction nor the physical exercises prescribed therein has any beneficial effect upon the voice, other than to make it louder or stronger. Nor can physical defects in the vocal organs be corrected or stammering overcome through the use of respondents' course.

PAR. 9. The Commission further finds that the use by respondents of these misleading and deceptive representations has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents' course of instruction possesses values and benefits which it does not in fact possess, and the tendency and capacity to cause such portion of the public to purchase respondents' course of instruction as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commere within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Perfect Voice Institute, a corporation, and its officers, and Eugene Feuchtinger, Walter A. Jordan, and Mary E. Murphy, individually and as officers of said corporation, and respondents' representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of their course of instruction in the development of the human voice, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that the development and control of the muscles of the tongue has any beneficial effect upon the voice other than to make it louder or stronger.

2. Representing that the use of respondents' course of instruction has any beneficial effect upon the voice other than to make it louder or stronger.

3. Representing that by the use of respondents' course of instruction physical defects of the vocal organs may be corrected, or stammering overcome.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

FEDERAL YEAST CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SUBSEC. (a) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 3926. Complaint, Oct. 13, 1939—Decision, Sept. 22, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture and interstate sale and distribution of bakers' yeast, in substantial competition with others similarly engaged—

(a) Discriminated in price by selling yeast of like grade and quality and in like quantities to customers competitively engaged with one another in sale and distribution of bread and allied products, at differentials amounting to 7 percent and upwards, thereby affording to the beneficiaries substantial savings in price which constituted material and vital factors in competition;

(b) Discriminated in price by delivering large quantities of its yeast without charge to certain purchasers in addition to its yeast actually sold to them, thereby substantially reducing average cost of its yeast to said purchasers, while concurrently selling it to others without so delivering yeast for which no charge was made, so that while both classes might be charged the same price for yeast sold and billed, the actual cost to the former was less by 5 percent or more than that to the nonfavored customers, thereby affording substantial savings to the beneficiaries which constituted material and vital factors in competition; and

(c) Discriminated in price by granting to certain of its purchasers cash discounts of 1 to 2 percent not granted to others who paid in the same manner and within the same time;

Effect of which discriminations had been and might be substantially to lessen competition in the line of commerce concerned, and to injure, destroy, or prevent competition in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products between its purchasers who received the benefits of such discriminations and those who did not:

Held, That said discriminations in price, as hereinabove set out, violated subsection (a) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

Mr. P. C. Kolinski for the Commission.

Mr. Simon E. Sobeloff, of Baltimore, Md., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the party respondent named in the caption hereof and hereinafter more particularly designated and described, since June 19, 1936, has violated and is now violating the provisions of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13,) hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges with respect thereto as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Federal Yeast Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Maryland, having its principal office and plant located at Colgate-Highlandtown P. O., Baltimore, Md.

PAR. 2. Respondent since June 19, 1936, has been and now is engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of bakers' yeast. In the course and conduct of such sale and distribution it causes said yeast to be shipped and transported in commerce from its plant in the State of Maryland to purchasers thereof in and among the various States of the United States and there has been at all times herein mentioned a current of trade and commerce in respondent's yeast between the State wherein respondent's plant is located and various other States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Said respondent in the course and conduct of its business since June 19, 1936, has been and is now in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in manufacturing, selling, and distributing bakers' yeast, in commerce.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, the respondent has been and now is discriminating in price between different purchasers of its said product of like grade and quality, by giving and allowing certain purchasers of bakers' yeast used in the manufacture of bread and allied products, different prices than given or allowed other of its said purchasers competitively engaged one with the other, in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products within the various States of the United States. To illustrate, during the year of 1937 respondent sold 5,681 pounds of bakers' yeast to Benkert's Bakery, 3012 Thirtieth Avenue, Long Island City, N. Y., at 13 cents per pound and during the same period sold Sabriett Food Products Co., 90 East Third Street, New York City, N. Y., a competitor, 10,910 pounds of bakers' yeast at 11 cents per pound and 27,710 pounds of bakers' yeast at 10 cents per pound, thus affording the last mentioned purchaser a saving of $1,049.50 during said period upon the basis of price charged to first mentioned purchaser.

PAR. 5. Further discrimination in price between different competing purchasers of its product is brought about as a result of respondent delivering large quantities of bakers' yeast to certain of its purchasers for which no specific charge is made in addition to yeast actually sold and delivered to these same purchasers for which a specific price is charged, thus reducing the cost of said favored customers of the yeast actually purchased, while at the same time other purchasers competitively engaged in the sale of bread and allied products with the said favored purchasers and paying the same price per pound for said product are not furnished such additional yeast. To illustrate, during the month of December 1936, Kallik, 1018 Intervale Avenue, New York City, N. Y., purchased 1,171 pounds of bakers' yeast at 13 cents per pound and in addition to said purchased yeast respondent delivered 115 pounds of bakers' yeast for which no charge was made, while during the same period Your Baking, 1141 Burnett Place, New York City, N. Y., a competitor purchased 915 pounds of baker's yeast at 13 cents per pound and respondent delivered no additional yeast to said purchaser without charge.

PAR. 6. Respondent further discriminates in price between competing purchasers by granting cash discounts of 1 to 2 percent to certain of its purchasers which are not granted to others who pay in the same manner and within the same time as those receiving such discounts.

PAR. 7. The effect of such discriminations in price as set forth in paragraphs 4, 5, and 6 hereof has been or may be substantially to lessen competition in the line of commerce in which respondent and its competitors are engaged and may be to injure, destroy, or prevent competition in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products between those of respondent's purchasers who receive the benefits of such discriminations and competing purchasers who do not receive such benefits.

PAR. 8. The foregoing alleged acts and practices are in violation of subsection (a) of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, the Clayton Act, as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, the Robinson-Patman Act (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), the Federal Trade Commission on the 13th day of October 1939, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Federal Yeast Corporation, charging the respondent with violation of the provisions of subsection (a) of section 2 of the said act as amended. After the issuance and service of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, with the exception of the illustrations therein set forth regarding specific price discriminations, and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and a stipulation as to certain facts, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, and being of the opinion that section 2 (a) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, has been violated by the respondent, now makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Federal Yeast Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Maryland, with its principal office and place of business at Colgate-Highlandtown P. O., Baltimore, Md.

PAR. 2. Respondent, since June 19, 1936, has been and now is, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of bakers' yeast. In the course and conduct of such sale and distribution it causes its said yeast to be shipped and transported, in commerce, from its plant in the State of Maryland to the purchasers thereof in and among the various States of the United States, and there is, and has been at all times since the above date, a current of trade and commerce in respondent's yeast between the State of Maryland and various other States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Since June 19, 1936, respondent in the sale and distribution of its bakers' yeast has been, and now is, in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing bakers' yeast in commerce.

PAR. 4. Respondent, since June 19, 1936, has discriminated in price and is now discriminating in price between different competing purchasers of its products of like grade and quality by giving and allowing some purchasers of its bakers' yeast used in the manufacture of bread and allied products different prices from those given and allowed other of its said purchasers competitively engaged one with the other in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products. In some instances respondent sold bakers' yeast of like grade and quality and in like quantities to competing customers at different prices wherein the differential between such prices amounted to 7 percent and upwards.

PAR. 5. Respondent has discriminated, and is further discriminating, in price between different purchasers of its products competitively engaged in the sale of bread and allied products by delivering large quantities of its bakers' yeast, without specific charge therefor, to certain purchasers in addition to its bakers' yeast actually sold and delivered to these purchasers, thereby substantially reducing the average cost of its said yeast to such purchasers. Respondent concurrently sells its said yeast to other purchasers but does not deliver in addition to the quantities purchased yeast for which no specific charge is made, with the result that while both classes of purchasers may be charged the same price for yeast sold and billed, the actual cost to those who receive additional yeast without specific charge therefor is less, by 5 percent or more, than the actual cost to the nonfavored customers.

PAR. 6. Respondent's acts and practices as set forth in paragraphs 4 and 5 constituted discriminations in price between its customers, and the savings to the beneficiaries of such discriminations in price were substantial in nature and constituted material and vital factors of competition.

PAR. 7. Respondent has discriminated, and is now further discriminating, in price between competing purchasers by granting cash discounts of 1 to 2 percent to certain of its purchasers which are not granted to other purchasers who pay in the same manner and within the same time as those receiving such discounts.

PAR. 8. The effect of such discriminations in price described in paragraphs 4, 5, and 7 above has been and may be substantially to lessen competition in the line of commerce in which respondent and its competitors are engaged and may be to injure, destroy, or prevent competition in the sale and distribution of bread and allied products between those of respondent's purchasers who receive the benefits of such discriminations and competing purchasers who do not receive such benefits.

CONCLUSION

The discriminations in price by respondent as hereinabove set out, violate subsection (a) of section 2 of an act of Congress entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936 (the Robinson-Patman Act).

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the substitute answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of said complaint with the exception of the illustration therein set forth regarding specific price discriminations and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and a stipulation of facts filed herein, and the Commission being of the opinion that said respondent has violated the provisions of section 2 (a) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13), and having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion, which findings as to the facts and its conclusion are hereby made a part hereof.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Federal Yeast Corporation, its officers, directors, representatives, agents, and employees, jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of bakers' yeast in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Clayton Act, do forthwith cease and desist:

From the discriminations in price as found in paragraphs 4, 5, and 7 of the findings of fact or otherwise discriminating in price between different purchasers of bakers' yeast of like grade and quality where the effect of such discriminations may be substantially to lessen competition or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with respondent or any such purchaser unless the differential in price in any such discrimination makes only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from differing methods or quantities in which such commodities are to such purchasers sold or delivered.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Federal Yeast Corporation, shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinbefore set forth.

IN THE MATTER OF

LEONA JOHNSON AND AUBREY M. GRAFF, TRADING AS RADIO DISTRIBUTORS

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4157. Complaint, June 7, 1940—Decision, Sept. 22, 1941

Where an individual engaged in the competitive interstate sale and distribution of radios and other articles; in soliciting sale of and in selling and distributing her said products—

Furnished various devices and plans which involved the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes in sales of her merchandise to the ultimate consumer, including among other things, push cards and circulars explaining her plan of selling her said merchandise and allotting it as premiums or prizes to operators of said cards and to the purchasing public, a typical plan involving the use of a push card displaying 58 feminine names and adjacent disks and under which the customer selecting the name corresponding to that under card's master seal received a radio, those punching disks concealing certain numbers received a combination pen and pencil, and the amount paid for a chance was dependent upon the number punched; and thereby

Supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of her merchandise, in which the fact as to whether a purchaser received an article and which, if any, was determined wholly by lot and there was involved a game of chance to procure an article at much below its normal price, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to use any method involving chance, or contrary to public policy, and refrain therefrom;

With the result that many persons were attracted by her said sales plan and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell her merchandise in preference to that of said competitors, and trade in commerce was unfairly diverted to her from them, to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.

Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr. and Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Mr. A. H. Schwab of Nash & Donnelly, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Leona Johnson and Aubrey M. Graff, individually and trading as Radio Distributors, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Leona Johnson and Aubrey M. Graff, are individuals trading as Radio Distributors with their principal office and place of business located at 30 North Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondents are now and for more than 8 months last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of radios and other articles of merchandise to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said merchandise when sold to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof, at their respective points of location, in the various States of the United States other than Illinois and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 8 months last past a course of trade by respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are and have been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing their merchandise, furnish and have furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, when said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumer thereof. The method or sales plan adopted and used by respondents was and is substantially as follows:

Respondents distribute and have distributed to the purchasing public certain literature and instructions, including among other things, push cards, order blanks, illustrations of their said merchandise and circulars explaining respondents' plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards and to the purchasing and consuming public. One of respondents' push cards bears 58 feminine names with ruled columns on the reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 58 small partially perforated discs on the face of which is printed the word "push." Each of such discs is set under one of the aforesaid feminine names. Concealed within each disc is a number which is disclosed only when the disc is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the face of said card. The person selecting the feminine name corresponding to the one under the master seal receives a radio. Persons selecting certain designated numbers set out in the legend in the center of said card also receive a premium or prize. The push card bears a legend or instructions as follows:

Name Under Seal Receives A

Licensed AC DC

R. C. A. RADIO

No ground Required

R. C. A. Licensed Tubes

Do not remove seal until entire card is sold

Nos. 1–39 pay what you draw.
All others 39¢. None higher

4 EXTRA WINNERS 4

Nos. 1–9–19 and 29 Each Receive a Combination Pen and Pencil.

Sales of respondents' merchandise by means of said push card are made in accordance with the above-described legend or instructions. Said prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above-described legend or instructions. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives an article of merchandise or nothing for the amount of money paid, and which of said articles of merchandise the purchaser is to receive, if any, is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondents furnish, and have furnished, various other push cards accompanied by order blanks, instructions, and other printed matter for use in the sale and distribution of their merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said other push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondents furnish and have furnished the said push cards use and have used the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondents' merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan or method. Respondents thus supply to, and place in the hands of others, the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations, who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on June 7, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Leona Johnson and Aubrey M. Graff, individually and trading as Radio Distributors, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by L. P. Allen and D. C. Daniel, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by A. H. Schwab, attorney for the respondents, before W. W. Sheppard, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, testimony, and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Leona Johnson is an individual trading as Radio Distributors, with her principal office and place of business located at 30 North Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent Aubrey M. Graff is an individual who, during the times mentioned herein, was employed by the respondent Leona Johnson, trading as Radio Distributors.

PAR. 2. For more than 1 year last past the respondent Leona Johnson, trading as Radio Distributors, has been engaged in the sale and distribution of radios and other articles of merchandise to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. The respondent causes her said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from her aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States. Said respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

In the course and conduct of her said business the respondent Leona Johnson, trading as Radio Distributors, is and has been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of her aforesaid business, the respondent Leona Johnson, trading as Radio Distributors, in soliciting the sale of, and in selling and distributing, her merchandise, furnishes and has furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when said merchandise was sold and distributed to the ultimate consumer thereof. The method or sales plan adopted and used by said respondent was and is substantially as follows:

Respondent distributes and has distributed to the purchasing public certain literature and instructions, including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, illustrations of her said merchandise, and circulars explaining respondent's plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards and to the purchasing and consuming public.

One of respondent's push cards bears 58 feminine names with ruled columns on the reverse side thereof for writing in the name of the customers opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 58 small partially perforated disks, on the face of which is printed the word "push." Each of such disks is set above one of the aforesaid feminine names. Concealed within each disk is a number, which is disclosed only when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal, and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the face of said card. The person selecting the feminine name corresponding to the one under the master seal receives a radio. Persons selecting certain designated numbers set out in the legend in the center of said card also receive a premium or prize. The push card bears the following legends or instructions, in addition to a pictorial representation of a portable radio and the seals and disks above described:

Name under seal receives a RCA radio.

Numbers 1 to 39 pay what you draw. All others 39¢. None higher.

Numbers 1–9–19 and 29 each receive a combination pen and pencil.

Sales of respondent's merchandise by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above-described legend or instructions. Said prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above-described legends or instructions. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives an article of merchandise or nothing for the amount of money paid and which of said articles of merchandise the purchaser is to receive, if any, is determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent furnishes and has furnished various other push cards, accompanied by order blanks, instructions, and other printed matter for use in the sale and distribution of their merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in connection with the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said other push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 4. During the period of 16 months prior to February 6, 1941, the respondent Leona Johnson, trading as Radio Distributors, mailed out approximately a million and a half sets of literature containing push cards similar to the one above described. This mailing netted a return of approximately 10,000 orders for merchandise. The persons who placed such orders for merchandise used the said push cards in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the above-described sales plan or method. Said respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others, the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of her merchandise, and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by aid of said sales plan or method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States, and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 5. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent Leona Johnson, trading as Radio Distributors, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by the respondent Leona Johnson in the sale and distribution of her merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell said respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by said respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States to said respondent from her said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and, as a result thereof, substantial injury is being and has been done by said respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent Leona Johnson, individually and trading as Radio Distributors, as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of said respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, testimony and other evidence before W. W. Sheppard, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and briefs filed herein, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent Leona Johnson, individually and trading as Radio Distributors, has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Leona Johnson, individually and trading as Radio Distributors, her representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of radios and other articles of merchandise in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying or placing in the hands of others, push cards or other devices which are to be used or may be used in the sale or distribution of said merchandise to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the complaint be dismissed as to the respondent Aubrey M. Graff.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon her of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which she has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

AMERICAN BANDAGE CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4354. Complaint, Oct. 22, 1940—Decision, Sept. 22, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture of so-called "Self-adhering Medicated Bandages," and in the interstate sale and distribution thereof under the trade name "A B C Gauzband"; by means of advertisements disseminated through the mails, in newspapers and periodicals, and in circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, directly and indirectly—

Represented that its product had antiseptic and germicidal properties sufficient to inhibit the growth of, and to destroy, all types of bacteria, and was self-sterilizing and remained surgically sterile after removal from the package, through such statements as "medicated with antiseptic and germicidal material which renders it self-sterilizing * * ," " * * will remain sterile even after it is removed from the package," and "is safe to apply directly to the wound";

Facts being the properties of the mercuricin medication in its said product, while antiseptic and germicidal, were insufficient to inhibit the growth of and to destroy all types of bacteria, or render such product self-sterilizing, or keep it sterile after it had been removed from the package;

With tendency and capacity to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public to believe that such statements were true, and because of such belief, to purchase a substantial amount of its said product:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard and Mr. Andrew B. Duval, trial examiners.

Mr. Maurice C. Pearce for the Commission.

Mr. Albert I. Kegan, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that American Bandage Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as the respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, American Bandage Corporation, is a corporation duly chartered, organized, and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 4238 North Lincoln Avenue, Chicago, State of Illinois.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing certain so-called self-adhering medicated bandages sold and distributed under the trade name and designation "A B C Gauzband," which respondent alleges have germicidal and antiseptic properties. Respondent causes said product, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and has also disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said product by various means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated, or caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

Through the development of a secret process, used exclusively by the manufacturer, GAUZBAND is medicated with an ANTISEPTIC and GERMICIDAL material, rendering it SELF-STERILIZING. It will remain sterile even after it is removed from the package.

GAUZBAND is self-sterilizing. The manufacturer has spared no expense to make this bandage the finest of its kind in the world. Years of chemical research have made possible the development of a new, secret process used exclusively by the manufacturer to render GAUZBAND self-sterilizing; it will remain sterile even after it is removed from the package.

The same process used in rendering GAUZBAND self-sterilizing, which is done with a medication containing antiseptic and germicidal materials, also makes it antiseptic and impregnates it with germicidal properties.

A B C GAUZBAND is a pure white cohesive gauze bandage offering maximum protection because it is medicated with antiseptic and germicidal material which renders it self-sterilizing, assuring the user a surgically sterile dressing. It is safe to apply directly to the wound.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondent has represented and does now represent, directly and indirectly, that its said product has been impregnated with certain materials which give said product antiseptic and germicidal properties sufficient to inhibit the growth of, and to destroy all types of bacteria, thereby making said product self-sterilizing and causing it to remain surgically sterile after it has been removed from the package.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid claims, statements and representations as hereinabove described are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's product is not self-sterilizing and will not remain sterile after it has been removed from the package. The medication in said product consists of mercuricine, which is a mercury salt derivative, having antiseptic and mild germicidal properties. These properties, however, are insufficient to inhibit the growth of and to destroy all types of bacteria or to render respondent's product self-sterilizing or keep respondent's product surgically sterile after it has been removed from the package.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, misleading, and deceptive statements, representations, and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to the properties of its product, has had and now has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase a substantial amount of respondent's product.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as hereinabove set forth, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 22d day of October 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent American Bandage Corporation, a corporation, charging it with unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint was introduced by the attorney for the Commission, at a hearing held before a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, and at said hearing a stipulation as to the facts was entered into between the attorney for the Commission and the attorney for the respondent, and at a later date the attorney for respondent waived the filing of briefs and oral argument, and agreed that the case be submitted to the Commission upon the record.

The evidence introduced and the stipulation as to the facts were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer thereto, the evidence, the stipulation as to the facts, the trial examiner's report upon the evidence and brief in support of the complaint; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, American Bandage Corporation, is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business at 1701 Damen Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

PAR. 2. Respondent, for some time prior to the issuance of the complaint herein had been and now is engaged in the business of manufacturing certain so-called "Self-adhering Medicated Bandages," and in the sale and distribution of same under the trade name and designation "A B C Gauzband," and caused and causes said product, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains and has maintained a course of trade in its said products in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent, in the conduct of its business has disseminated, and has caused the dissemination of advertisements concerning its products by means of the United States mails and by various other means, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and has also disseminated and caused the dissemination of advertisements concerning its products by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its product in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in the advertisements disseminated or caused to be disseminated by respondent by means of the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers, periodicals and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets and other advertising literature, are the following:

Through the development of a secret process used exclusively by the manufacturer, GAUZBAND is medicated with an ANTISEPTIC and GERMICIDAL material, rendering it SELF-STERILIZING. It will remain sterile even after it is removed from the package.

GAUZBAND is self-sterilizing. The manufacturer has spared no expense to make this bandage the finest of its kind in the world. Years of chemical research have made possible the development of a new, secret process used exclusively by the manufacturer to render GAUZBAND self-sterilizing; it will remain sterile even after it is removed from the package.

The same process used in rendering GAUZBAND self-sterilizing, which is done with a medication containing antiseptic and germicidal materials, also makes it antiseptic and impregnates it with germicidal properties.

ABC GAUZBAND is a pure white cohesive gauze bandage offering maximum protection because it is medicated with antiseptic and germicidal material which renders it self-sterilizing, assuring the user a surgically sterile dressing. It is safe to apply directly to the wound.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements set forth in paragraph 3 hereof, and others similar to the above but not herein set out, respondent has represented, directly and indirectly, that its product has been impregnated with certain materials which give it antiseptic and germicidal properties sufficient to inhibit the growth of, and to destroy, all types of bacteria, thereby making the product self-sterilizing and causing it to remain surgically sterile after it has been removed from the package.

PAR. 5. The statements and representations made by the respondent, as set forth in paragraph 3, and others referred to in paragraph 4, hereof, are false, misleading, and deceptive, in that respondent's product is not self-sterilizing and will not remain sterile after it has been removed from the package. The medication in respondent's product consists of mercuricin, which is an organic mercury salt having antiseptic and germicidal properties. These properties are insufficient to inhibit the growth of and to destroy all types of bacteria, or to render respondent's product self-sterilizing, or to keep respondent's product surgically sterile after it has been removed from the package.

PAR. 6. The use by respondent of the statements, representations, and advertisements set out in paragraph 3 and referred to in paragraph 4, with respect to the properties of its product, has had the tendency and capacity to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public to believe that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public because of such belief, to purchase a substantial amount of respondent's product.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, evidence introduced before a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, the report of the trial examiner thereon, the stipulation as to the facts entered into between the attorney for the Commission and the attorney for respondent, and brief filed on behalf of the Commission; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, American Bandage Corporation, a corporation, its officers, directors, agents, representatives, and employees, jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of any medicated bandage sold and distributed by it under the trade name "A B C Gauzband," or under any other trade name or designation, do forthwith cease and desist from, directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement in newspapers, periodicals, circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, or otherwise, by means of the United States mails, or by any means, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or by implication, that its said product possesses antiseptic and germicidal properties sufficient to inhibit the growth of, or to destroy, all types of bacteria, or which represents, directly or indirectly, that said product is a sterilizing agent, or that it remains sterile after it has been removed from the container.

2. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement in newspapers, periodicals, circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, or otherwise, by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of respondent's said product, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

JOSEPH WARNER FURNITURE CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4416. Complaint, Dec. 13, 1940—Decision, Sept. 22, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of household furniture, operating so-called dealer or trade showrooms in New York under the name "Salem House," and describing its business as "Exclusive Distributors of Salem House Furniture"; directly and by implication—

Represented that it was a wholesaler and was selling its furniture at wholesale prices, which, substantially lower than retail prices, are responsible for the well-known preference by a substantial portion of the public for purchasing at wholesale; and as part of its plan and scheme so to misrepresent the character of its business and the prices of its products—

(a) Made such claims and statements in advertising matter, circular letters and so-called "admittance cards" which it circulated by mail and personally as "We are furniture distributors representing over 100 different factories," stocking every possible furniture need "to suit the requirements of thousands of dealers and interior decorators, and their referred clientele. A substantial money saving * * * is assured you";

(b) Made such statements on their so-called "Admittance Permit" cards, as "ADMITTANCE PERMIT To the Trade Showrooms of the JOSEPH WARNER FURNITURE CORP. This card entitles _____ and party to all Showroom privileges, including price quotation * * *," and set forth on customer's copy of triplicate invoice of sales the words "Serving the Trade"; thereby implying that it sold only to or through dealers, that it was a wholesaler and sold to holders of such cards at wholesale prices, and that its business was something other than that of selling to the general public;

(c) Furnished circulars to such persons and business concerns as would, for a commission, refer customers to it, to be shown to prospective customers, reading, in part, "Salem House Authorized Member Admittance and direct buying privileges by permit or personal escort available here. On view, products of over 100 factories, * * *. Substantial savings";

(d) Paid commissions on sales to customers sent to it by various persons and smaller business concerns, with whom it entered into agreements for the payment of such commissions, and who, in making such contacts and inducing prospective customers to go to its place of business and purchase its wares, made or repeated to them some or all of the aforesaid deceptive statements;

(e) Hesitated or refused, through its salesmen and representatives to show furniture to prospective purchasers unless they gave their dealer's name or presented an "admittance card" from some person or concern with whom it had made an agreement, as above described, for the payment of commissions on sales made to such customers, and stated that the house

sold only to dealers and was strictly wholesale, and that the net prices quoted were in fact the wholesale prices quoted to dealers; and

(f) Stated to customers who came to its place of business, through its salesmen and representatives, that the net prices quoted to them for its furniture were at various discounts and reductions from the exaggerated prices marked thereon, and gave the purchaser the benefit of discounts or reductions of 20 to 60 percent below the ordinary retail prices, and were in fact wholesale prices;

With result of inducing the belief in its customers that it was a wholesaler and that they were buying from it at wholesale prices, when in truth and in fact its sales were not at wholesale prices nor in wholesale lots, but were to the ultimate consumer and user and not for resale, and the net prices quoted to its customers were not wholesale prices but were substantially higher, and did not represent 20 to 60 percent discounts from retail prices, and with effect, as a consequence thereof, of inducing a substantial portion of the purchasing public to purchase its said products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.

Mr. D. E. Hoopingarner for the Commission.

Mr. Benjamin S. Kirsh, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Joseph Warner Furniture Corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Joseph Warner Furniture Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business at 42 East Thirty-third Street (Two Park Avenue Building), city of New York, State of New York. Respondent is engaged in the sale and distribution of household furniture and conducts and operates so-called dealer or trade showrooms at said location under the name "Salem House." It designates and describes its business as "Exclusive Distributors of Salem House Furniture." When sales are made at said location, respondent causes the furniture sold to be transported from its said place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof, many of whom are located in various States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said furniture in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. There is a well-known preference on the part of a substantial portion of the public for purchasing at wholesale, due to a general belief, and the fact, that wholesale prices are substantially lower than retail prices.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said products, respondent has made false, exaggerated, and misleading representations with respect to the character of its business and the value and prices of its products.

By various forms of advertising, circularizing, and by personal statements of its representatives and employees, respondent has directly and indirectly and by implication represented, and does represent, itself to be a wholesaler of furniture, and that it has been and is in fact selling furniture at wholesale prices.

As parts of respondent's plan and scheme so to represent the character of its business and the prices of its products, among other devices, acts and practices, respondent circulated by mail and personally advertising matter, circular letters and so-called Admittance Permit cards, containing the following statements and claims:

(a) We are furniture distributors representing over 100 different factories. We stock every possible furniture need in a very wide price range to suit the requirements of thousands of dealers and interior decorators, and their referred clientele. A substantial money saving, quality for quality, is assured you.

EXCLUSIVE DISTRIBUTOR OF SALEM HOUSE FURNITURE

(c) On the customer's copy of the triplicate invoice of sales appear the words "Serving The Trade."

(d) To persons and business concerns which, for a commission, would refer customers to respondent, respondent furnished circulars to be shown to the prospective customers, which read in part as follows:

"Salem House Authorized Member

Admittance and direct buying privileges by permit or personal escort available here. On view, products of over 100 factories. 50,000 sq. ft. of furniture for every room in the home, in every price range. Substantial savings."

PAR. 4. As further parts of its said aforementioned plan and scheme to represent its business and prices as those of a wholesaler, and to more fully effectuate them, and to gain the advantages flowing therefrom, respondent carried on other acts and practices, among them the following:

(a) Respondent contacted various persons and smaller business concerns of various kinds and made agreements with them to pay, and did pay them commissions on sales to customers contacted by or sent to respondent by such persons and concerns, who, in making such contacts and inducing such prospective customers to go to respondent's place of business and purchase its wares, made or repeated to such customers some or all of the aforedescribed misleading and deceptive statements.

(b) Its salesmen and representatives at its place of business hesitated or refused to show furniture to prospective purchasers unless they gave their dealer's name or presented a so-called admittance card from some person or concern with whom respondent had made an agreement as before described for the payment of commissions on sales to such customers, and stated that "This house sold only to dealers and was strictly wholesale," and that the net prices quoted were in fact the wholesale prices quoted to dealers.

(c) To retail customers who came to its place of business, respondent's salesmen and representatives stated that the net prices for its furniture quoted to such customers were at various discounts and reductions from exaggerated prices marked on its furniture, did in fact give the purchaser the benefit of discounts or reductions amounting to from 20 percent to as much as 60 percent below the ordinary retail prices of the same or similar wares, and were in fact wholesale prices.

PAR. 5. By some or all of the aforesaid statements, acts and practices, respondent, both directly and by indirection and implication, represented to, and induced the belief in, its retail customers that it was a wholesaler and was selling its wares to them, and that they were in fact buying from respondent, at wholesale prices, when in truth and in fact respondent is a retailer, and its sales were and are not at wholesale prices nor in wholesale lots, but were and are to the ultimate consumer and user and not for resale, and so intended and known to the respondent, and the net prices quoted to its customers were not wholesale prices, but were and are substantially higher than wholesale prices for the same or similar articles. Respondent does not sell said furniture at discounts or reductions from the ordinary retail prices of from 20 percent to 60 percent as represented.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts, practices, and methods are parts of, and together they constitute, a plan or scheme to mislead and deceive purchasers into the belief that they are buying at wholesale prices; and the use of the aforesaid acts, practices and methods, in connection with the sale and distribution of respondent's said furniture in said commerce, has misled and deceived, and does mislead and deceive, purchasers into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent sells its said furniture at wholesale prices, and at the discount or reductions from the usual retail prices indicated, and induces a substantial portion of the purchasing public, as a result of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's said products.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 13th day of December 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent, Joseph Warner Furniture Corporation, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On January 2, 1941 the respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into by and between counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondent, subject to the approval of the Commission, whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts thereupon read into and made a part of the record in this proceeding, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs or a report upon the evidence by the trial examiner. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved and accepted and made a part of the record, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Joseph Warner Furniture Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business at 42 East Thirty-third Street (Two Park Avenue Building), city of New York, State of New York. Respondent is engaged in the sale and distribution of household furniture and conducts and operates so-called dealer or trade showrooms at said location under the name "Salem House." It designates and describes its business as "Exclusive Distributors of Salem House Furniture." When sales are made at said location, respondent causes the furniture sold to be transported from its said place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof, many of whom are located in various States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said furniture in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. There is a well-known preference on the part of a substantial portion of the public for purchasing at wholesale, due to a general belief, and the fact, that wholesale prices are substantially lower than retail prices.

PAR. 3. By various forms of advertising, circularizing, and by personal statements of its representatives and employees, respondent has directly and indirectly and by implication represented, and does represent, itself to be a wholesaler of furniture, and that it has been and is in fact selling furniture at wholesale prices.

As parts of respondent's plan and scheme so to represent the character of its business and the prices of its products, among other devices, acts, and practices, respondent circulated by mail and personally advertising matter, circular letters and so-called admittance permit cards, containing the following statements and claims:

(a) We are furniture distributors representing over 100 different factories. We stock every possible furniture need in a very wide price range to suit the requirements of thousands of dealers and interior decorators, and their referred clientele. A substantial money saving, quality for quality, is assured you.

(b) ADMITTANCE PERMIT
To the Trade Showrooms of the
JOSEPH WARNER FURNITURE CORP.

EXCLUSIVE DISTRIBUTOR OF SALEM HOUSE
FURNITURE.

(c) On the customer's copy of the triplicate invoice of sales appear the words "Serving The Trade."

(d) To persons and business concerns which, for a commission, would refer customers to respondent, respondent furnished circulars to be shown to the prospective customers, which read in part as follows:

"Salem House Authorized Member Admittance and direct buying privileges by permit or personal escort available here. On view, products of over 100 factories, 50,000 sq. ft. of furniture for every room in the home, in every price range. Substantial savings."

PAR. 4. As further parts of its said aforementioned plan to represent its business and prices as those of a wholesaler, and to more fully effectuate them, and to gain the advantages flowing therefrom, respondent carried on other acts and practices, among them the following:

(a) Respondent contacted various persons and smaller business concerns of various kinds and made agreements with them to pay, and did pay them commissions on sales to customers contacted by or sent to respondent by such persons and concerns, who, in making such contacts and inducing such prospective customers to go to respondent's place of business and purchase its wares, made or repeated to such customers some or all of the aforedescribed misleading and deceptive statements.

(b) Its salesmen and representatives at its place of business hesitated or refused to show furniture to prospective purchasers unless they gave their dealer's name or presented a so-called admittance card from some person or concern with whom respondent had made an agreement as before described for the payment of commissions on sales made to such customers, and stated that "This house sold only to dealers and was strictly wholesale," and that the net prices quoted were in fact the wholesale prices quoted to dealers.

(c) To customers who came to its place of business, respondent's salesmen and representatives stated that the net prices for its furniture quoted to such customers were at various discounts and reductions from exaggerated prices marked on its furniture, and represented that such prices did in fact give the purchaser the benefit of discounts or reductions amounting to from 20 percent to as much as 60 percent below the ordinary retail prices of the same or similar wares, and were in fact wholesale prices.

PAR. 5. By some or all of the aforesaid statements, acts, and practices, respondent, both directly and by indirection and implication, represented to, and induced the belief in, its customers that it was a wholesaler and that they were in fact buying from respondent at wholesale prices, when in truth and in fact respondent's sales were and are not at wholesale prices nor in wholesale lots, but were and are to the ultimate consumer and user and not for resale, and the net prices quoted to its customers were not wholesale prices, but were and are substantially higher than wholesale prices for the same or similar articles. Respondent does not sell said furniture at discounts or reductions from the ordinary retail prices of from 20 percent to 60 percent as represented.

The use by the respondent on said so-called admittance permits or cards and invoices of sales of the statements "Trade Showrooms," "Exclusive Distributor," "This Card entitles (Name of holder) and party to all Showroom privileges, including price quotation," and "Serving the Trade" has the tendency and capacity to lead members of the general public to believe that respondent sells only to or through dealers; that respondent is a wholesaler and sells to holders of such cards at wholesale prices; and that the business of respondent is something other than that of selling furniture and other merchandise to the general public.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representations and implications made and published by respondent as aforesaid are false, misleading, and deceptive.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts, practices, and methods mislead and deceive purchasers into the belief that they are buying at wholesale prices; and the use of the aforesaid acts, practices and methods, in connection with the sale and distribution of respondent's said furniture in said commerce, has misled and deceived, and does mislead and deceive, purchasers into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent sells its said furniture at wholesale prices, and at the discounts or reductions from the usual retail prices indicated, and induces a substantial portion of the purchasing public, as a result of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's said products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent and a stipulation entered into by and between counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondent, wherein it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts thereupon read into and made a part of the record in this proceeding may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the Commission may proceed upon such statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs or of a report upon the evidence by the trial examiner, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Joseph Warner Furniture Corporation, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agent, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of furniture or allied merchandise in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or by implication, that respondent is a wholesaler or that it sells its furniture and other merchandise to purchasers thereof at wholesale prices.

2. Representing, directly or by implication, that respondent sells its furniture and merchandise only to or through dealers purchasing for resale.

3. Using and distributing among prospective customers so-called admittance permits or cards which, through use of such statements as "Trade Showrooms," "Exclusive Distributor," "Serving the Trade," "This card entitles (Name of holder) and party to all showroom privileges, including price quotation," or other similar statements, import and imply that respondent sells only to or through dealers; or that respondent is a wholesaler and sells to holders of such cards at wholesale prices; or that respondent's business is anything other than that of selling furniture and other merchandise to the general public.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

FOOD DISPLAY MACHINE CORPORATION, AND A. H. KULIKOWSKI, MRS. A. H. KULIKOWSKI, AND GEORGE H. HARDT

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4122. Complaint, May 1, 1940—Decision, Sept. 23, 1941

Where a corporation and two individuals, who were its general officers and stockholders and in active charge of its business, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of machines designed for preparing and cooking potato chips, doughnuts, and, until discontinuance of sale of such machine in early 1940, corn chips, conducting their business under various trade names and doing much of their advertising under name of one of said individual officers; by advertisements in periodicals of general circulation, and advertising circulars, leaflets, and pamphlets, and circular letters, directly or by implication—

Represented that amazing profits or earnings might be made and fortunes acquired through the operation of their said machines, that profits of as much as $21.60 and $40 per day might be so obtained, and that the minimum profit on operation of certain machines would amount to $100 a week;

Facts being earnings and profits so represented were far in excess of any amounts which had been earned by persons operating their machines, or which might reasonably be expected from operation thereof; in exceptional cases in which purchasers had been able to derive a profit from their operation, such profits were far below the amounts represented; and in no event could amazing profits or earnings be thus derived, or fortunes thus acquired;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that much greater earnings and profits might be made from the operation of their said machines than was actually the fact, and to cause it to purchase substantial quantities of their machines, as a result of such belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.
Mr. R. P. Bellinger for the Commission.
Bussian & DeBolt, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Food Display Machine Corporation, a corporation, M. J. Kulikowski, Mrs. M. J. Kulikowski, and George H. Hardt, individuals, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The corporate respondent, Food Display Machine Corporation, is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 620 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill. The respondents, M. J. Kulikowski, Mrs. M. J. Kulikowski, and George H. Hardt, of the same address, are the officers and principal stockholders of the said corporate respondent above named, and as such manage, control, and direct the policies and operation thereof, particularly in the acts and practices herein alleged. All of said respondents have acted in concert in conducting the business hereinafter described and in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of machines designed for cooking potato chips, corn chips, and doughnuts. Respondents cause said machines, when sold, to be shipped from their place of business in Chicago, Ill., to the purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than Illinois and in the District of Columbia, and there is and has been a course of trade in said machines sold by the respondents in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, respondents employ or use the trade names, Vita-Seald with respect to and in connection with their potato chip machines King Korn Co. and King K Co. with respect to and in connection with their corn chip machines, and Brown Bobby Co. with respect to and in connection with their doughnut machines.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business in said commerce as aforesaid, in soliciting the sale of and selling their machines, respondent's have made various and sundry representations in form letters, pamphlets and other circulars distributed among prospective purchasers, and by statements published in magazines and periodicals of national circulation concerning the opportunities afforded purchasers of such machines to start a profitable, independent business, and concerning the earnings or income which are likely to result from the purchase of any of said machines. Among and typical of the statements and representations so made and used by the respondents are the following:

Only $2.50 investment in raw materials brings back $10 in cash at wholesale.

Your machine is capable of turning out 10 lbs. of chips every hour—80 lbs. in an 8 hour day. If sold in 5¢ size bags * * * that should give you a total profit of $21.60 on your 80 lbs. of chips.

You can get back $40 in cash receipts from one day's production of the machine.

Big daily profits from the start without overhead expense.

Sensational New Business That May Sweep You To Riches.

This is undoubtedly the most amazing money-making opportunity ever offered to the readers of this—or any other—magazine. It tells how any ambitious level-headed man can quickly establish a remarkable new kind of business that can pay a steady net cash profit of $40.00 a day—a business that offers unlimited opportunity, rapid expansion—a business in which you can employ others to work for you and run your daily profits up as high as you want them to go—a business that may make many men independently wealthy within the next few years.

Your whole investment will be less than your first week's potential income. This is truth; not fiction—fact; not theory. To the best of our knowledge no other business in America offers one-tenth the opportunity for profit and independence.

Experts estimate and tests show that the first year's requirements should be about 12,000,000 lbs. You make 32¢ net profit on every pound that passes through your hands.

$100 A WEEK NET TO START.

According to accurate figures the very minimum of the first operation would produce a net cash profit of at least $100 a week * * *. This we figure to be a minimum.

Anyone—anywhere—can make big profits on this surprising new product.

No wonder so many people without one bit of experience are literally cleaning up fortunes with this new money-maker.

Said statements, together with other statements similar thereto not herein set out, represent that tremendous incomes and profits may reasonably be expected by the purchasers and users of respondents' machines as aforesaid; that with little effort and small investment or expense, one can purchase respondents' machines and therewith start a business that will rapidly accumulate riches for himself; that respondents' said machines present in themselves the most amazing money-making opportunity offered by any business in America; that the demand for the products of respondents' machines is so great that with one or more of said machines a person can quickly amass fabulous profits; that anybody anywhere can make large profits by the operation of one of respondents' machines and the minimum net weekly profit to be derived therefrom as a starter is $100; that with the purchase and operation of one of respondents' machines a man can quickly establish a business in which he will realize a net cash profit of $40 a day, and which offers unlimited opportunities for mounting profits as high as he might wish; that the first week's income from the operation of one of respondents' machines will exceed the entire purchase price thereof and investment in the business; that many people without experience are reaping fortunes by the use of respondents' machines.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact, respondents' claims and representations as to the actual or potential markets available for the sale of the products produced by such machines and the claims and representations made as to the earnings to be made or the income produced by the operation of such machines are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and deceptive, for the actual and potential markets available for such products are not as great as represented by respondents and the actual market is supplied by strong, well-financed, experienced operators from whom an inexperienced operator with one or more of respondents' said machines would be unable to acquire or divert substantial trade and custom. Only a few, if any, operators of such machines are able to find markets which will justify or require the operation of such machines at full capacity for any extended period of time. To accumulate the profits or earnings at the rate and in the amounts represented by respondents would require the steady operation of such machines at full capacity.

In truth and in fact, one cannot buy respondents' machines and therewith start a business that will rapidly accumulate riches for himself; respondents' machines do not present in themselves the most amazing money-making opportunity offered by any business in America; the demand for the products of respondents' machines is not sufficient to enable the operator of one or more of said machines quickly to amass fabulous profits; not everyone can make large profits through the operation of one of respondents' machines and the minimum net weekly profit to be derived therefrom when the operation thereof is first started is not $100 per week or any approximate sum; a man cannot, by the purchase and operation of one of respondents' machines, quickly establish a business in which he will realize a net cash profit of $40 a day, or which offers unlimited opportunities for mounting profits as high as he might wish; the first week's income from the operation of one of respondents' machines will not exceed the total investment in the business; many people without experience are not reaping fortunes by the use of respondents' machines; the actual and probable earnings or profits of operators of respondents' machines are, on the average, much less than the amounts set out above, and said amounts set out above are far in excess of the earnings and profits that can reasonably be expected by operators of said machines.

PAR. 5. The use by respondents of the representations set out herein have had and now have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and do mislead and deceive, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true and to purchase a substantial quantity of such machines from respondents by reason of such erroneous belief.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 1, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Food Display Machine Corporation, a corporation, and A. H. Kulikowski (referred to in the complaint as M. J. Kulikowski), Mrs. A. H. Kulikowski (referred to in the complaint as Mrs. M. J. Kulikowski), and George H. Hardt, individuals, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by R. P. Bellinger, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by Messrs. Bussian & DeBolt, attorneys for respondents, before William C. Reeves, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and such testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, answer, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and exceptions thereto, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Food Display Machine Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 620 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent, A. H. Kulikowski (referred to in the complaint as M. J. Kulikowski), is president and treasurer of the corporate respondent. Respondent, Mrs. A. H. Kulikowski (referred to in the complaint as Mrs. M. J. Kulikowski), is secretary of the corporate respondent. Respondent George H. Hardt is vice president and assistant secretary of the corporate respondent. The mailing address of the individual respondents is the same as that of the corporate respondent.

The individual respondents, together with L. T. Kulikowski, a son of respondents A. H. Kulikowski and Mrs. A. H. Kulikowski, are the owners of all of the outstanding capital stock of the corporate respondent. Respondents, A. H. Kulikowski and George H. Hardt, are in active charge of the business of the corporation and formulate, direct and control the corporation's policies, practices and methods, including its advertising policies and practices. Respondent, Mrs. A. H. Kulikowski, does not participate actively in the operation of the business nor in the formulation, direction or control of the corporation's policies or practices.

The corporate respondent and respondents A. H. Kulikowski and George H. Hardt have acted in conjunction and cooperation each with the others in carrying out the acts and practices hereinafter set forth. As used hereinafter, the word "respondents" will refer to these three respondents alone and not to Mrs. A. H. Kulikowski.

PAR. 2. The respondents are now, and for more than three years last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of certain machines designed for preparing and cooking potato chips and doughnuts. Respondents were formerly engaged also in the sale and distribution of a machine designed for the preparation and cooking of corn chips, but the sale of this machine was discontinued in the early part of 1940. Respondents cause, and have caused, their machines, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and have maintained, a course of trade in their machines in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, the respondents employ, in addition to the corporate name Food Display Machine Corporation, various other trade names. In connection with their corn chip machine the names "King Korn Co." and "King K Co." have been used, and in connection with their doughnut machine the name "Brown Bobby Co." is used. Much of the respondents' advertising is done also under the name of the individual respondent, George H. Hardt.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their business and for the purpose of promoting the sale of their machines, the respondents have inserted advertisements in periodicals having a general circulation throughout the United States. They have also made use of numerous advertising circulars, leaflets, and pamphlets as well as various circular letters, all of such advertising material being sent to prospective purchasers of their machines. Among and typical of the statements and representations appearing in respondents' advertisements and advertising material are the following:

Only $2.50 investment in raw materials brings back $10 in cash at wholesale.

Your machine is capable of turning out 10 lbs. of chips every hour—80 lbs. in an 8 hour day. If sold in 5¢ size bags * * * that should give you a total profit of $21.60 on your 80 lbs. of chips.

You can get back $40 in cash receipts from one day's production of the machine.

Big daily profits from the start without overhead expense.

This is undoubtedly the most amazing money-making opportunity ever offered to the readers of this—or any other—magazine. It tells how any ambitious level-headed man can quickly establish a remarkable new kind of business that can pay a steady net cash profit of $40.00 a day—a business that offers unlimited opportunity, rapid expansion—a business in which you can employ others to work for you and run your daily profits up as high as you want them to go—a business that may make many men independently wealthy within the next few years.

Your whole investment will be less than your first week's potential income. This is truth; not fiction—fact; not theory. To the best of our knowledge no other business in America offers one-tenth the opportunity for profit and independence.

$100 A WEEK NET TO START

According to accurate figures the very minimum of the first operation would produce a net cash profit of at least $100 a week * * *. This we figure to be a minimum.

Anyone—anywhere—can make big profits on this surprising new product.

AMAZING NEW BUSINESS

Work at Home

Pays

BIG DAILY PROFITS

A SURPRISING new profit opportunity is now offered to every ambitious man and woman! A sensational new kind of food business has been invented that can be operated with no previous experience in either full or spare time—a business that pays you big daily profits selling production of one machine at wholesale only.

EVERYTHING SUPPLIED. We supply equipment and plans for making and selling a delicious new greaseless doughnut that is cooked in a remarkable electrical device. Easy to digest and more toothsome than old style doughnuts ever were. This delicious new dainty—Brown Bobby—costs less to make and sells faster. No wonder so many people without one bit of experience are literally cleaning up "fortunes" with this new money-maker!

PAR. 5. Through the use of these statements and representations and others of similar import, the respondents have represented, directly or by implication, that amazing profits or earnings may be made and fortunes acquired through the operation of respondents' machines; that profits of as much as $21.60 per day and $40 per day may be obtained from the operation of such machines, and that the minimum profit on the operation of certain of the machines will amount to $100 per week.

PAR. 6. In order to ascertain the amount of the earnings or profits which may reasonably be expected to accrue to persons operating respondents' machines, there were introduced as witnesses on behalf of the Commission a number of persons who had actually purchased and operated the machines. These witnesses resided in some six different States and were representative of the members of the public who purchase the machines. The testimony of these witnesses shows, and the Commission finds, that the earnings and profits represented by respondents are far in excess of any amounts which have been earned by persons operating respondents' machines, or which may reasonably be expected to accrue from the operation of the machines. In most of the instances testified to by the witnesses the machines were found to be unprofitable, and the business was abandoned and the machines discarded entirely. In those exceptional cases in which purchasers had been able to derive a profit from the operation of the machines such profits were far below the amounts represented by respondents. In no event can "amazing" profits or earnings be derived from the operation of respondents' machines, nor can "fortunes" be acquired from the operation of the machines. Profits of $21.60 per day, $40 per day and $100 per week, as represented by respondents in their advertising, are wholly impossible from a practical viewpoint.

PAR. 7. The Commission therefore finds that respondents' representations with respect to the earnings or profits which may be derived from the operation of their machines are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading.

PAR. 8. The Commission further finds that the use by respondents of these false and misleading representations has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that much greater earnings and profits may be made from the operation of respondents' machines than is actually the fact, and the tendency and capacity to cause such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' machines as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of respondents, Food Display Machine Corporation, A. H. Kulikowski and George H. Hardt, as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves, trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and exceptions thereto, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that certain of the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondents Food Display Machine Corporation, a corporation, its officers, and A. H. Kulikowski and George H. Hardt, trading under the names King Korn Co., King K Co. and Brown Bobby Co., or trading under any other name or names, and respondents' representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of respondents' potato chip machines, corn chip machines, and doughnut machines in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that amazing earnings or profits may be made or fortunes acquired through the operation of respondents' machines.

2. Representing as possible or maximum earnings or profits which may be made during any specified period through the use of respondents' machines, any amounts in excess of those which have actually been earned during such specified period by users of respondents' machines under normal conditions in due course of business.

3. Representing as usual or customary earnings or profits which may be made during any specified period through the use of respondents' machines, any amounts in excess of the average, usual and customary amounts which have actually been earned by users of respondents' machines under normal conditions in due course of business.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That this proceeding be, and it hereby is, dismissed as to respondent Mrs. A. H. Kulikowski.

IN THE MATTER OF

W. K. STERLINE, AND MUMM, ROMER, ROBBINS & PEARSON, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4485. Complaint, Apr. 8, 1941—Decision, Sept. 23, 1941

Where an individual engaged in interstate sale and distribution of his "Hay Fever Compound" also known as "W. K. Sterline's compound," and his "Asthma Treatment," the latter including said "Compound," "Bronchial Elixir," and "Korana Powder"; together with his corporate advertising agency, by advertisements sent through the mails and through form letters, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising media, and including purported testimonial quotations, directly and by implication—

(a) Represented that his said "Hay Fever Treatment" was a cure and remedy for hay fever, and a competent and effective treatment therefor, which would fortify one's system against it, enabling one to avoid it, and would check sneezing and nasal discharge; facts being said treatment had no therapeutic value in the treatment of such condition;

(b) Represented that said "Asthma Treatment" constituted a cure and remedy for asthma and a competent and effective treatment therefor, and also for bronchitis when associated with asthma, and would restore one to health and prevent return of said condition; facts being neither said treatments nor the preparations of which it was composed, whether used separately or in any combination, constituted a cure or effective treatment for either ailment, or had any therapeutic value in the treatment of asthma in excess of affording mild temporary relief from its paroxysms, or any such value in the treatment of bronchitis when associated with asthma in excess of that furnished by a mild expectorant;

(c) Represented that his said "Elixir" constituted a cure and remedy and a competent and effective treatment for bronchitis; facts being it had no therapeutic value in treatment thereof, in excess of that furnished, as aforesaid, by a mild expectorant; and

(d) Failed to reveal facts material in light of representations contained in said advertisements as respects his said "Compound," and that use thereof under usual or prescribed conditions might result in serious injury to health, in that its content of potassium iodide and fluid extract of lobelia might be harmful to those suffering from active or latent tuberculosis, and its sodium bromide content, when used over long period of time, was likely to cause mental derangement and rash; and failed to apprise the reader that use of product in question might be harmful for such reasons, in note on label of said "Compound" advising prospective user, in event of having tuberculosis, to see a physician first;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, and of inducing a substantial portion of said public, because of such belief, to purchase his "Treatments":

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. John W. Norwood, trial examiner.
Mr. John W. Carter, Jr. for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that W. K. Sterline, an individual, and Mumm, Romer, Robbins & Pearson, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, W. K. Sterline, is an individual with his principal place of business located at 110 West Poplar Street, Sidney, Ohio.

PAR. 2. This respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a treatment for hay fever, consisting of a medicinal preparation designated "W. K. Sterline's Compound," sometimes referred to as "Double Strength Hay Fever Compound," "W. K. Sterline's Hay Fever Compound," "Hay Fever Compound," and "Compound," hereinafter referred to as "Hay Fever Treatment;" and in the sale and distribution of a treatment for asthma designated "Sterline's Combination Home Treatment" and sometimes as "Combination Treatment," hereinafter referred to as "Asthma Treatment," consisting of the following items:

(a) A medicinal preparation designated "W. K. Sterline's Compound," sometimes referred to as "Sterline's Asthma Compound" and "Asthma Compound."

(b) A medicinal preparation designated as "W. K. Sterline's Elixir," sometimes referred to as "Sterline's Bronchial Elixir" and "Bronchial Elixir"; and

(c) A medicinal powder designated as "Korona," sometimes referred to as "Asthma Powder," in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

This respondent causes his aforesaid treatments, and the various items constituting said treatments, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Ohio to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States.

This respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in his aforesaid treatments, and in the various items constituting said treatments, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Respondents, Mumm, Romer, Robbins & Pearson, Inc., is a corporation existing under the laws of the State of Ohio, with its principal office and place of business located at 33 North Grant Avenue, Columbus, Ohio. This respondent is an advertising agency and, as such, is engaged in formulating, editing, and selling, as well as advising its clients on advertising matters.

This respondent is the advertising representative of respondent, W. K. Sterline, and as such it places all newspaper advertising, and aids, assists and advises in the preparation of all advertising material, used by respondent, W. K. Sterline, in the sale and distribution of the aforesaid treatments and medicinal preparations designated as aforesaid.

PAR. 4. The respondents act in conjunction and cooperation with one another in the performance of the acts and practices hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 5. In furtherance of the sale and distribution of the aforesaid "Hay Fever Treatment," the aforesaid "Asthma Treatment" and the respective items thereof, as aforesaid, the said respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning the aforesaid "Hay Fever Treatment" and the aforesaid "Asthma Treatment" by the United States mails and by various means in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning the said treatments, designated as aforesaid, by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of the said treatments, and the respective items thereof, in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false statements and representations disseminated and caused to be disseminated by the United States mails, by form letters, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising media, are the following:

WHY SUFFER WITH HAY FEVER? Fortify your system now by using W. K. Sterline's Hay Fever Compound.

Every time you take a dose you are doing that much to fortify your system and avoid your Hay Fever.

For 20 years I have been afflicted with Hay Fever. Nothing gave me any relief until I used your product. The sneezing and running from my nose was checked and I can truthfully say it is the most effective remedy I ever used in my life.

Some will not believe Hay Fever can be prevented, but at the end of every Hay Fever season sufferers write they escaped entirely.

I am glad to recommend your treatment because it always keeps me from having the slightest attack of Hay Fever.

I am mailing you today my ASTHMA COMPOUND and, since most people who suffer from Asthma also have Bronchitis without knowing it, I am also sending a trial of my Bronchial Elixir.

For instance, W. W. Shaeffer, Wakeman, Ohio, says that before he used my treatment in 1909, he couldn't rest in bed at all, but since taking the medicine nearly 30 years ago, he has never had an attack of asthma.

I have hundreds and hundreds of letters, not only from those who have just recently taken the treatment, but from those who used these same medicines 10, 15, and 20 years ago, all stating that their asthma has not returned.

I was confined to my bed for years and wondered how I managed to live. Everything I ate disagreed with me until I received your proper diet. Now I am making up for what I missed in my younger days. I have just forgotten that I ever had Asthma, but I owe it all to your great medicine. I am in the best of health * * *.

Your medicines are worth their weight in gold and God Bless you for saving me from the grave. I did not want to live those years and now I can hardly believe it is myself well and perfectly healthy. I want everyone to write me as I will always praise your treatment to the highest. I would be dead but for your precious medicine.

PAR. 6. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and other statements and representations similar thereto, but not specifically set out herein, which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of the aforesaid "Hay Fever Treatment," sold and distributed by respondent, W. K. Sterline, as aforesaid, respondents represent directly and by implication that the "Hay Fever Treatment," is a cure and remedy for hay fever and constitutes a competent and effective treatment for hay fever; that it will fortify one's system against hay fever; that it will enable one to avoid hay fever; and that it will check sneezing and discharging from the nose.

Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and other statements and representations similar thereto but not specifically set out herein, which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of the aforesaid "Asthma Treatment" sold and distributed by respondent, W. K. Sterline, as aforesaid, respondents represent directly and by implication that the "Asthma Treatment" is a cure and remedy for asthma and constitutes a competent and effective treatment for asthma; and that it will restore one to health; and that it will prevent the return of asthma. Respondents further represent that this treatment is a cure and remedy for bronchitis when this disease is associated with asthma.

PAR. 7. The foregoing statements and representations, and others similar thereto but not specifically set out herein, are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading.

The aforesaid "Hay Fever Treatment," sold and distriuted as aforesaid, is not a cure or remedy for, and has no generally recognized dependable therapeutic value in the treatment of, hay fever. It will not fortify one's system against hay fever. It will not enable one to avoid hay fever. It will not check sneezing and discharging from the nose. It will not prevent hay fever.

The aforesaid "Asthma Treatment," and the individual preparations constituting this treatment sold and distributed as aforesaid, used separately, or in any combination of one with the other, is not a cure or remedy, nor do they jointly or separately, or in any combination of one with the other, have any generally recognized material therapeutic value in the treatment of asthma or bronchitis in excess of affording temporary relief from the paroxysm usually associated with asthma. They will not restore one to health. They will not prevent the return of asthma. They are not a cure or remedy, nor are they a competent or effective treatment for bronchitis.

The medicinal preparation "W. K. Sterline's Compound" and the medicinal preparation "Korona" have no generally recognized material therapeutic value in the treatment of asthma in excess of affording temporary relief from the paroxysm of asthma.

The medicinal preparation "W. K. Sterline's Elixir" has no generally recognized material therapeutic value in the treatment of bronchitis in excess of that furnished by an expectorant.

PAR. 8. The medicinal preparation "W. K. Sterline's Compound" contains the drugs potassium iodide and fluid extract of lobelia. The use of this preparation thus constituted may be harmful to those suffering with active or latent tuberculosis by reason of delaying or retarding healing and the danger of activation of dormant lesions.

This medicinal preparation also contains the drug sodium bromide. The use of this preparation thus constituted over a long period of time is likely to cause mental derangement and rash.

The advertisements disseminated by the respondents, as aforesaid, contain no cautionary or warning statement to the effect that this preparation should not be used by persons suffering from active or latent tuberculosis, nor do they contain a cautionary or warning statement to the effect that this preparation should not be taken over a prolonged period of time. Such advertisements, therefore, constitute false advertising in that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained therein and fail to reveal that the use of said preparations under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious injury to health.

PAR. 9. The use by said respondents, as aforesaid, of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations, and others of similar nature, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true, and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase the aforesaid treatments and the medicinal preparations designated as aforesaid.

PAR. 10. The aforesaid acts and practices of said respondents as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 8th day of April 1941, issued, and on the 9th day of April 1941, and on the 10th day of April 1941, served its complaint on respondents, Mumm, Romer, Robbins & Pearson, Inc., and on respondent, W. K. Sterline, respectively, charging respondents with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

On April 28, 1941, respondents, Mumm, Romer, Robbins & Pearson, Inc., and on April 30, 1941, respondent, W. K. Sterline, filed their separate answers in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts, together with the exhibits thereto attached, signed and executed by respondent, W. K. Sterline, and by respondents, Mumm, Romer, Robbins & Pearson, Inc., and Richard P. Whiteley, assistant chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts, and the exhibits thereto attached, to make its reports, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceedings without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs and without the filing of trial examiner's report upon the evidence.

This proceeding, thereafter, regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answers, stipulation, and exhibits, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

Sterline, is an individual with his principal place of business located at 110 East (instead of 110 West as alleged in the complaint) Poplar Street, Sidney, Ohio, and he is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States of a treatment for hay fever and of a treatment for asthma and of the various individual medicinal preparations of which said treatments are composed.

Among and typical of the false statements and representations disseminated and caused to be disseminated by the United States mails, and by various means in commerce, through the use of form letters, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising media, are the following:

Sterline's Elixir," respondents represent directly and by implication that the said medicinal preparation is a cure and remedy for bronchitis and constitutes a competent and effective treatment for bronchitis.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid statements and representations, and others similar thereto but not specifically set out herein, are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading.

The aforesaid "Hay Fever Treatment," sold and distributed as aforesaid is not a cure or remedy, nor a competent or effective treatment for hay fever. It has no generally recognized dependable therapeutic value whatever in the treatment of hay fever. It will not fortify one's system against hay fever. It will not enable one to avoid hay fever. It will not prevent hay fever. It will not check sneezing and discharging from the nose.

The aforesaid "Asthma Treatment," sold and distributed as aforesaid, or the individual medicinal preparations of which said treatment is composed, used separately, jointly, or in any combination of one with the other, is not a cure or a remedy, nor a competent or effective treatment, for asthma or bronchitis; nor do they jointly or separately, or in any combination of one with the other, have any generally recognized dependable therapeutic value in the treatment of asthma in excess of affording mild temporary relief from the paroxysms usually associated with asthma; nor do they jointly or separately, or in any combination of one with the other, have any generally recognized dependable therapeutic value in the treatment of bronchitis, when bronchitis is associated with asthma, in excess of that furnished by a mild expectorant. They will not restore one to health. They will not prevent the return of asthma.

The aforesaid medicinal preparation "W. K. Sterline's Elixir" sold and distributed, as aforesaid, is not a cure or remedy, nor a competent or effective treatment for bronchitis. It has no generally recognized dependable therapeutic value in the treatment of bronchitis in excess of that furnished by a mild expectorant, either when bronchitis is associated with asthma or when bronchitis is independent of asthma.

PAR. 10. The medicinal preparation "W. K. Sterline's Compound" contains the drugs potassium iodide, fluid extract of lobelia, and sodium bromide. Due to the presence of potassium iodide and fluid extract of lobelia the use of this preparation may be harmful to persons suffering from active or latent tuberculosis by reason of delaying or retarding healing and the danger of activation of dormant lesions. Due to the presence of sodium bromide the use of this preparation over a long period of time by any person is likely to cause mental derangement and rash.

PAR. 11. The labels now being used by respondent, W. K. Sterline, for the medicinal preparation "W. K. Sterline's Compound" carries the following statement printed thereon:

NOTE: If you have tuberculosis see a physician before using.

This statement is not such a warning or cautionary statement that apprises the reader that the use of this preparation may be harmful to persons suffering from active or latent tuberculosis by reason of delaying or retarding healing and the danger of activation of dormant lesions and that this preparation used over a long period of time by any person is likely to cause mental derangement and rash.

The advertisements disseminated by the respondents contain neither a statement to the effect that the use of this preparation may be harmful to persons suffering from active or latent tuberculosis by reason of delaying or retarding healing and the danger of activation of dormant lesions and that its use over a long period of time is likely to cause mental derangement and rash, nor a cautionary or warning statement to the effect that this preparation should be used only as directed on the label. Such advertisements, therefore, constitute false advertisements in that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained therein and fail to reveal that the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in serious injury to health.

PAR. 12. The use of said respondents, as aforesaid, of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations, and others of a similar nature, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and advertisements are true, and that respondent W. K. Sterline's "Hay Fever Treatment" and "Asthma Treatment" and the individual medicinal preparation of which said treatments are composed will accomplish the results claimed as found in paragraphs 6, 7, and 8 hereof, and that respondent's medicinal preparation "W. K. Sterline's Compound" is harmless and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase respondent W. K. Sterline's aforesaid "Hay Fever Treatment" and "Asthma Treatment" and the various medicinal preparations of which said treatments are composed, as aforesaid.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answers of the respondents, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondents herein and Richard P. (a) is a cure or remedy for, or possesses any therapeutic value whatever in the treatment of persons suffering from, hay fever; or

(b) possesses any properties which will be effective in fortifying the system against, or enable one to avoid, hay fever; or

B. That respondent W. K. Sterline's "Asthma Treatment," or the medicinal preparations "W. K. Sterline's Compound," "W. K. Ster-line's Elixir" or "W. K. Sterline's Korana Powder," separately, jointly, or when used in any combination of the one with the other:

(a) is a cure or remedy for, or possesses any therapeutic value in the treatment of, asthma in excess of affording mild temporary relief from the paroxysms usually associated with asthma; or

C. That respondent W. K. Sterline's medicinal preparation "W. K. Sterline's Elixir" possesses any therapeutic value in the treatment of bronchitis in excess of that furnished by a mild expectorant, whether bronchitis is associated with asthma or not.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement of the medicinal preparation "W. K. 3. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of W. Sterline's "Asthma Treatment," or of the individual medicinal preparations of which each treatment is composed, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof, or which fails to comply with the requirements set forth in paragraph 2 hereof.

IN THE MATTER OF

NOLAN B. STADLEY, TRADING AS STERLING APPLIANCE COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4542. Complaint, July 18, 1941—Decision, Sept. 23, 1941

Where an individual engaged in interstate sale and distribution of his "Sterling Short Wave Diathermy"; by means of advertisements disseminated through the mails—

(a) Represented that his said device, when used by the unskilled lay public in the treatment of self-diagnosed diseases and ailments, by self-application in the home, was a scientific, safe, harmless, and effective means for the relief, cure, or treatment of rheumatism, arthritis, neuritis, bursitis, lumbago, sciatica, neuralgia, sinus trouble, and colds, painful menstruation, female disorders, ulcers, and innumerable other ailments, and for the alleviation of pain resulting therefrom, and that its use would have no ill effects upon the body;

Facts being the device did not constitute a competent treatment for conditions of acute inflammation of the nerves, muscles, bursae, or joints, and rheumatic pains associated therewith, but might result, in such cases, in further swelling of the inflamed tissues, thereby increasing the congestion and spreading the inflammation; short wave diathermy is contra-indicated in all cases of menstruation, pregnancy, gastric ulcers, acute appendicitis, in areas where there is a probable malignancy, and where there is a hermorrhagic diathesis; use of device in certain cases might cause serious injury to health, delay proper diagnosis and treatment, and result in severe tissue destruction and burns; use for treatment of pain in the extremities under certain conditions may lead to gangrene and even necessitate amputation; and diagnosis by competent medical authority is required to determine if diathermy is indicated and method of treatment which should be prescribed; and

(b) Failed to reveal the facts material in the light of such representations, and that use of said device under prescribed or usual conditions might result in serious and irreparable injury to health, and failed to reveal conspicuously that it might be safely used only after a competent medical authority had determined that diathermy was indicated and had prescribed the treatment, and user had been adequately instructed in the operation of such device by a trained technician;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, and of inducing it, because of said belief, to purchase his said device or apparatus:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. James L. Baker for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Nolan B. Stadley, an individual, trading as Sterling Appliance Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Nolan B. Stadley, is an individual trading as Sterling Appliance Co., with his office and principal place of business at 4203 South Hoover Street, Los Angeles, Calif., from which address he transacts business under the above trade name.

PAR. 2. The respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a certain device or apparatus designated as Sterling Short Wave Diathermy.

In the course and conduct of his business, the respondent causes said device or apparatus, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of California, to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein, has maintained, a course of trade in said device or apparatus, in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and has caused the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated and has caused the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among, and typical of, the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, are the following:

Feel Better Through the use of Sterling Short Wave Diathermy—For home use. Natures way to health.

Short wave diathermy and its use in the home. * * * the older methods of application were inefficient, uncertain * * *. These uncertain methods of the past have now given way to the modern scientific way—Short Wave Diathermy, a means of applying heat that overcomes every objection and enables you to enjoy its many benefits right in your own home. No more trips to the clinics or tiresome waits for appointments. * * * the simplicity of operation in Sterling equipment makes possible self-treatment without an attendant. * * * artificial fever will do exactly the same thing that natural fever does * * *. * * * germs succumb more readily in the presence of short waves * * *.

The feature of self-administration of short wave diathermy is an important one. * * * two or more treatments may be taken per day as long as it is necessary if there is a diathermy machine in the home, whereas two or even one visit per day to the doctor's office can easily be an unnecessary burden * * * on the patient's pocketbook.

Practical home treatment is easy. The Sterling Diathermy machine is especially designed for the home. It is comfortable and pleasant, and as safe as your electric pad * * *.

Relief immediate and cures rapid. * * * beneficial results are certain in such ailments as rheumatism, arthritis, neuritis, neuralgia, sciatica, lumbago, prostate trouble, female disorder, hay fever, asthma, bronchitis, tonsilitis, infected wounds, sores, boils, bruises, sprains, aching feet, aching back, aching teeth, headache, sinus infection—almost any ache or pain. * * * as a curative agent in such other diseases as pneumonia, infantile paralysis, gonorrhea, syphilis, stomach ulcers and hosts of others. The reason for its curative success is * * * increased antibodies to neutralize toxins, and germicidal characteristics.

Effective method of applying heat to legs, arms, head, chest, back, hip and lower abdominal region.

Its value is marked in such instances as painful menstruation, pelvic cramps, intestinal cramps, gas, urinary retardation from prostatitis, and innumerable other ailments.

If the public is to benefit very generally from such treatment and the wonderful results * * *, the machines should be in the homes * * *.

The patient is the best judge of length and frequency of treatments. With a Sterling instrument in your home you are well equipped for the quick alleviation of pain, aches, inflammation, congestion and the treatment of other unpleasant symptoms that might otherwise lead to dangerous disease.

PAR. 4. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth, and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondent represents that his device or apparatus, advertised as Sterling Short Wave Diathermy, when used by the unskilled lay public in the treatment of self-diagnosed diseases and ailments of the human body by individual self-application in the home, is a scientific, safe, harmless, and effective means and method for the relief, cure, or treatment of rheumatism, arthritis, neuritis, bursitis, lumbago, sciatica, neuralgia, sinus trouble, and colds, painful menstruation, female disorders, ulcers, and innumerable other ailments, and for the alleviation of pain resulting therefrom; and that its use will have no ill effects upon the human body.

The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading.

PAR. 5. Respondent's device or apparatus, designated as Sterling Short Wave Diathermy, is composed principally of a high frequency generator encased in a portable wooden cabinet. The circuit is a modified Hartley Circuit, two RCA 812 tubes, push-pull, plus the regular chokes for proper control and for eliminating interference. The power to the circuit is furnished by a transformer of approximately 1,200 volts, 160 milliamperes plate supply, 6⅜₁₀ volt filament supply. The output is inductively coupled and tuned with a series condenser of 50 millimicrofarads and the device may be adjusted to produce a wave length from 12 to 15 meters, inclusive. The maximum power output is approximately 140 watts as indicated on the panel meter. The power is transmitted to the user by 2 insulated rubber covered conductor pads, varying in size from 2 by 4 inches to 7 by 9 inches, together with ear and sinus applicators used with one of the larger pads. No single high frequency cable is used with this device. The application to the patient is made usually by placing the condenser pads in such position that the power may pass between said condenser pads through the affected area of the body, at stated intervals for varying periods of time.

The individual self-application of said device by the unskilled lay public in the home, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisement or under such conditions as are customary or usual, will not accomplish the results claimed by the respondent, and is not a scientific, safe, harmless, and effective means and method to be used by the unskilled lay public for the relief, cure, or treatment of self-diagnosed diseases and ailments of the human body, or for the alleviation of pain resulting therefrom, and may cause severe electric burns or other serious and irreparable injury to health.

The said device does not constitute a competent treatment for conditions of acute inflammation of the nerves, such as neuritis, neuralgia, and sciatica; acute inflammation of the muscles, such as lumbago and myositis; acute inflammation of the bursae, such as bursitis; acute inflammation of the joints, such as acute inflammatory arthritis; and rheumatic pains associated with acute inflammatory conditions of the joints, bursae, nerves, and muscles. Such treatment as aforesaid may result in further swelling of the inflamed tissue, thereby increasing the congestion of the inflamed part and in spreading the inflammation to adjacent tissue and allowing the absorption of toxins, when present.

Short wave diathermy is contra-indicated in all cases of menstruation, pregnancy, gastric ulcers, acute appendicitis, in areas where there is a probable malignancy, and where there is a hemorrhagic diathesis.

Furthermore, the use of this device for the relief of pain due to neuralgia or neuritis, which may often be symptomatic of some deeper, underlying disease or cause (such as pains due to tuberculosis of the joints, syphilis, and other infectious processes, or to tumor or cancer) may cause serious injury to health and also delay proper diagnosis and treatment.

The application of Sterling Short Wave Diathermy in treating conditions of acute sinus trouble may result in further increasing congestion of the mucous membranes of the sinuses, nose, and throat, and facilitate extension of the infections and increased absorption of bacterial toxins.

In those areas of the skin where the sense of heat has been lost, due to injury or impairment of the peripheral nerves, the application of said device may result in severe tissue destruction and severe burns.

Cancer or tuberculosis of the spine may evidence itself by severe pains in the knees and the application of diathermy by the untrained layman may delay proper diagnosis and treatment.

The application of this device for the treatment of pain in the extremities in the presence of advanced blood vessel changes of the legs or arms, when given in excess dosage, will cause serious injuries and may lead to gangrene and necessitate amputation of the legs or arms.

There are many diseases and conditions in the treatment of which, diathermy would be contra-indicated. There are other conditions in which the efficacy of diathermy is dependent upon the method and duration of its use. In both of these classes of cases, the use of diathermy may aggravate rather than relieve such conditions. Many conditions, including some of those for which respondent recommends this device, are sometimes symptomatic or indicative of underlying systemic disorders for which diathermy would have no therapeutic value and may even be injurious. It would be impossible for a member of the lay public to correctly diagnose his ailment or condition or to determine the underlying cause of such disorder. It would also be impossible for such person to correctly determine the method and duration of the use of diathermy. Consequently, the use of diathermy requires the diagnosis of the ailment or condition by a competent medical authority to determine if diathermy is indicated and the method and duration of treatment which should be prescribed.

PAR. 6. In addition to the representations hereinabove set forth, the respondent has also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in the manner above set forth, in that said advertisements so disseminated fail to reveal all facts material in the light of such representations or material with respect to consequences which may result from the use of said device or apparatus, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisement, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, and fail to reveal that the use of said device may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

The said advertisement is further false, as aforesaid, in that said advertisement also fails to conspicuously reveal that the device may be safely used only after a competent medical authority has determined, as a result of diagnosis, that diathermy is indicated and has prescribed the frequency and amount of application of such diathermy treatments and the user has been adequately instructed in the method of operating such device by a trained technician.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to his device or apparatus, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true and induce a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase the respondent's said device or apparatus.

PAR. 8. The foregoing acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 18th day of July 1941, issued, and on the 22nd day of July 1941, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Nolan B. Stadley, an individual, trading as Sterling Appliance Co., charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On the 8th day of August 1941, respondent filed his answer, admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in the complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Nolan B. Stadley, is an individual trading as Sterling Appliance Co., with his office and principal place of business at 4203 South Hoover Street, Los Angeles, Calif., from which address he transacts business under the above trade name.

PAR. 2. The respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a certain device or apparatus designated as Sterling Short Wave Diathermy.

In the course and conduct of his business, the respondent causes said device or apparatus, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of California, to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said device or apparatus, in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated, and has caused the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product by means of the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated, and has caused the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of, false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by means of the United States mails, are the following:

Feel Better Through the use of Sterling Short Wave Diathermy—For home use. Natures way to health.

Short wave diathermy and its use in the home. * * * the older methods of application were inefficient, uncertain * * *. These uncertain methods of the past have now given way to the modern scientific way—Short wave Diathermy, a means of applying heat that overcomes every objection and enables you to enjoy its many benefits right in your own home. Its value is marked in such instances as painful menstruation, pelvic cramps, intestinal cramps, gas, urinary retardation from prostatitis, and innumerable other ailments.

If the public is to benefit very generally from such treatment and the wonderful results * * *, the machines should be in the homes * * *.

The patient is the best judge of length and frequency of treatments. With a Sterling instrument in your home you are well equipped for the quick alleviation of pain, aches, inflammation, congestion and the treatment of other unpleasant symptoms that might otherwise lead to dangerous disease.

PAR. 4. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth, and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondent represents that his device or apparatus, advertised as Sterling Short Wave Diathermy, when used by the unskilled lay public in the treatment of self-diagnosed diseases and ailments of the human body by individual self-application in the home, is a scientific, safe, harmless and effective means and method for the relief, cure or treatment of rheumatism, arthritis, neuritis, bursitis, lumbago, sciatica, neuralgia, sinus trouble, and colds, painful menstruation, female disorders, ulcers and innumerable other ailments, and for the alleviation of pain resulting therefrom; and that its use will have no ill effects upon the human body.

The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading.

PAR. 5. Respondent's device or apparatus, designated as Sterling Short Wave Diathermy, is composed principally of a high frequency generator encased in a portable wooden cabinet. The circuit is a modified Hartley Circuit, two RCA 812 tubes, push-pull, plus the regular chokes for proper control and for eliminating interference. The power to the circuit is furnished by a transformer of approximately 1,200 volts, 160 milliamperes plate supply, 6⅘ volt filament supply. The output is inductively coupled and tuned with a series condenser of 50 millimicrofarads and the device may be adjusted to produce a wave length from 12 to 15 meters, inclusive. The maximum power output is approximately 140 watts as indicated on the panel meter. The power is transmitted to the user by two insulated rubber-covered conductor pads, varying in size from 2 by 4 inches to 7 by 9 inches, together with ear and sinus applicators used with one of the larger pads. No single high frequency cable is used with this device. The application to the patient is made usually by placing the condenser pads in such position that the power may pass between said condenser pads through the affected area of the body, at stated intervals for varying periods of time.

The individual self-application of said device by the unskilled lay public in the home, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisement or under such conditions as are customary or usual, will not accomplish the results claimed by the respondent, and is not a scientific, safe, harmless and effective means and methods to be used by the unskilled lay public for the relief, cure or treatment of self-diagnosed diseases and ailments of the human body, or for the alleviation of pain resulting therefrom, and may cause severe electric burns or other serious and irreparable injury to health.

The said device does not constitute a competent treatment for conditions of acute inflammation of the nerves, such as neuritis, neuralgia, and sciatica; acute inflammation of the muscles, such as lumbago, and myositis; acute inflammation of the bursae, such as bursitis; acute inflammation of the joints, such as acute inflammatory arthritis; and rheumatic pains associated with acute inflammatory conditions of the joints, bursae, nerves, and muscles. Such treatment as aforesaid may result in further swelling of the inflamed tissue, thereby increasing the congestion of the inflamed part and in spreading the inflammation to adjacent tissue and allowing the absorption of toxins, when present.

Short wave diathermy is contra-indicated in all cases of menstruation, pregnancy, gastric ulcers, acute appendicitis, in areas where there is a probable malignancy, and where there is a hemorrhagic diathesis.

Furthermore, the use of this device for the relief of pain due to neuralgia or neuritis, which may often be symptomatic of some deeper, underlying disease or cause (such as pains due to tuberculosis of the joints, syphilis, and other infectious processes, or to tumor or cancer), may cause serious injury to health and also delay proper diagnosis and treatment.

The application of Sterling Short Wave Diathermy in treating conditions of acute sinus trouble may result in further increasing congestion of the mucous membranes of the sinuses, nose, and throat, and facilitate extension of the infections and increased absorption of bacterial toxins.

In those areas of the skin where the sense of heat has been lost, due to injury or impairment of the peripheral nerves, the application of said device may result in severe tissue destruction and severe burns.

Cancer or tuberculosis of the spine may evidence itself by severe pains in the knees and the application of diathermy by the untrained layman may delay proper diagnosis and treatment.

The application of this device for the treatment of pain in the extremities in the presence of advanced blood vessel changes of the legs or arms, when given in excess dosage, will cause serious injuries and may lead to gangrene and necessitate amputation of the legs or arms.

There are many diseases and conditions in the treatment of which, diathermy would be contra-indicated. There are other conditions in which the efficacy of diathermy is dependent upon the method and duration of its use. In both of these classes of cases, the use of diathermy may aggravate rather than relieve such conditions. Many conditions, including some of those for which respondent recommends his device, are sometimes symptomatic or indicative of underlying systemic disorders for which diathermy would have no therapeutic value and may even be injurious. It would be impossible for a member of the lay public to correctly diagnose his ailment or condition or to determine the underlying cause of such disorder. It would also be impossible for such person to correctly determine the method and duration of the use of diathermy. Consequently, the use of diathermy requires the diagnosis of the ailment or condition by a competent medical authority to determine if diathermy is indicated and the method and duration of treatment which should be prescribed.

PAR. 6. In addition to the representations hereinabove set forth, the respondent has also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements in the manner above set forth, in that said advertisements so disseminated fail to reveal all facts material in the light of such representations or material with respect to consequences which may result from the use of said device or apparatus, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisement, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, and fail to reveal that the use of said device may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

The said advertisement is further false, as aforesaid, in that said advertisement also fails to conspicuously reveal that the device may be safely used only after a competent medical authority has determined, as a result of diagnosis, that diathermy is indicated and has prescribed the frequency and amount of application of such diathermy treatments and the user has been adequately instructed in the method of operating such device by a trained technician.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to his device or apparatus, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true and induce a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase the respondent's said device or apparatus.

CONCLUSION

The foregoing acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer the respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Nolan B. Stadley, an individual, trading as Sterling Appliance Co., or trading under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of his device advertised as Sterling Short Wave Diathermy, or any other device of substantially similar construction, whether sold under the same name or any other name or names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference, that respondent's device when used by the unskilled lay public constitutes a scientific, safe, harmless and effective means or method for the relief, cure or treatment of:

Rheumatism, arthritis, neuritis, bursitis, lumbago, sciatica, neuralgia, sinus trouble and colds, painful menstruation, female disorders, ulcers or innumerable other ailments, or for the alleviation of pain resulting therefrom; or which advertisement fails to reveal that the unsupervised use of said device by persons not skilled in the diagnosis, analysis, and methods of treatment of disease may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said device, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof; or which advertisement fails to reveal that the unsupervised use of said device by persons not skilled in the diagnosis, analysis, and methods of treatment of disease may result in serious and irreparable injury to health.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 10 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing stating whether he intends to comply with this order, and, if so, the manner and form in which he intends to comply, and that within 60 days after service upon him of this order, said respondent shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

One of said purchasers to whom respondent sells and ships said merchandise is the respondent, Piedmont Wholesale Grocery Co.

Since June 19, 1936, in the course of making such sales of said merchandise in commerce, respondent, The Thomas Page Mill Co., Inc., has engaged in the practice of paying brokerage fees and granting allowances or discounts in lieu of brokerage upon such purchasers by buyers for their own account, including the Piedmont Wholesale Grocery Co., and said respondent Piedmont Wholesale Grocery Co. has received and accepted allowances or discounts in lieu of brokerage upon its purchases of merchandise from respondent The Thomas Page Mill Co., Inc.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes" (the Clayton Act), as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936 (the Robinson-Patman Act—U. S. C., Title 15, sec. 13), the Federal Trade Commission, on August 29, 1940, issued its complaint which was subsequently served in this proceeding upon the parties respondent named in the caption hereof, charging them with violating the provisions of subsection (c) of section 2 of said Clayton Act as amended. On September 16, 1940, respondents filed their answers to the complaint. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into by respondent The Thomas Page Mill Co., Inc., whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by said respondent, and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto, and that the Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts, to make its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answers of respondents, and the stipulation entered into by respondent The Thomas Page Mill Co., Inc., said stipulation having been approved, accepted and filed: And the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, is of the opinion that subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, has been violated by one of the respondents, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Piedmont Wholesale Grocery Co., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Missouri, with is principal office and place of business located at Piedmont, Mo., and is engaged in a general wholesale merchandise business.

On such sales of flour respondent paid a brokerage fee of 20 cents per barrel to T. A. Ward, Carr Ward, and Wilma Ward, trading as Minetree Brokerage Co. During said period of time the brokerage so paid amounted to $1,578.25.

Ward and Wilma Ward owned 88 percent of the outstanding capital stock of the Poplar Bluff Wholesale Grocery Co., and Carr Ward rendered services of an executive nature to said Poplar Bluff Wholesale Grocery Co. These individuals, trading under the name of Minetree Brokerage Co., in the transactions of sales of flour by the respondent to the Poplar Bluff Wholesale Grocery Co. during the period from March 19, 1938, to November 10, 1939, were the agents, and acted in fact for and on behalf of the Poplar Bluff Wholesale Grocery Co.

IN THE MATTER OF

JOHN H. DAVIS AND DALE S. DAVIS, TRADING AS NORMANDIE ET CIE

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3341. Complaint, Feb. 26, 1938—Decision, Oct. 6, 1941

Where two individuals engaged in the manufacture of perfumes and kindred products, and in competitive interstate sale and distribution thereof; directly or by implication—

(a) Represented that their products were made or compounded in France and imported into the United States in finished form and ready for use, through such statements on labels and cartons of their perfume as "Normandie et Cie—Pois de Senteur—Paris, France," "Parfums—Normandie—Paris," "Qualite Superieure," and "True Flower Fragrances—Made in France," and through prominently displaying, in small folders enclosed with each vial of perfume, the words "Paris" and "France" and the statement "Imported True Flower Fragrances"; and

(b) Represented thereby and through such statements, on letterheads and invoices following their trade name "Normandie et Cie," as "11 Rue des Champs Asnieres, pres Paris, France. U. S. Sales Division: 92 Maplewood Street, Watertown, (Boston), Massachusetts," that they had a place of business in France where such products were manufactured;

Facts being that their perfume was domestically made by them through importing from France certain perfume essences or compounds in bulk, to which they added domestic alcohol, the latter substance making up about 75 percent of the finished product; their bottles and cartons and the advertising matter included therewith were made in the United States, and all their operations were carried on in this country;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that their products were those preferred perfumes manufactured or compounded in France and imported into the United States, and to cause it to purchase substantial quantities of their product because of such belief, and with result that trade was diverted unfairly to them from their competitors, many of whom do not misrepresent their products or the place of origin thereof:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. Edward E. Reardon, trial examiner.

Mr. Charles S. Cox for the Commission.

Mr. David S. Grant, Mr. Harry Ehrlich and Walsh & Walsh, of Boston, Mass., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that John H. Davis, an individual, and Dale S. Davis, an individual, trading as Normandie et Cie, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, John H. Davis and Dale S. Davis, are individuals trading under the name and style of Normandie et Cie, with their principal office and place of business located at 92 Maplewood Street, Watertown, Boston, Mass. Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the business of importing certain oils and ingredients used in the manufacture of perfumes and of similar products and of manufacturing the same into perfumes which respondents sell and distribute throughout the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. Said respondents being engaged in business as aforesaid, cause said products, when sold, to be transported from their office and principal place of business in the State of Massachusetts to purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State from which such shipments are made and in the District of Columbia. Respondents now maintain a constant current of trade in commerce in said products manufactured, distributed and sold by them between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business respondents are now, and have been, in substantial competition with other individuals, and with corporations and firms likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing perfumes in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their business as hereinabove described, certain of respondents' perfume products so sold bear labels, tags, and markings purporting to describe and refer to the place of origin or manufacture of said products, as follows:

Respondents' perfume product designated "Sweet Pea" bears a sticker, on which appears the wording "Normandie et Cie—Pois de Senteur—Paris, France." Around each vial of perfume is wrapped a folder printed in French and English describing the product with the words "Paris, France" prominently displayed, as well as the words, "Imported True Flower Fragrance," appearing thereon. The carton containing the vial and folder above described has printed thereon the following words:

Parfums Normandie—Paris

Said carton also depicts flowers followed by the words:

Pois de Senteur Sweet Pea,

and

Qualite Superieure;
True Flower Fragrances Made in France

Letterheads and invoices distributed by respondents bear the following statements:

Suel Inventeur et Fabricant Du Celebre
Parfums "Secrets of the Flowers"

NORMANDIE ET CIE

11 Rue de Champs
Asnieres Pres Paris, France

U. S. Sales Division: 92 Maplewood
Street, Watertown, (Boston) Mass.

The use of such statements, as herein set out, by respondents serve as representations that respondents' products are manufactured or compounded in France; that said products are imported into this country finished and completed for use, and that respondents have an office and place of business at 11 Rue de Champs, Asnieres, Paris, France. In truth and in fact, said products are not manufactured in Paris or in France and are not made up or compounded into the finished or completed articles in Paris or in France, but are composed of certain oils and ingredients compounded or mixed by respondents with domestic alcohol, and bottled and packaged in the United States of America. Respondents do not have an office or place of business at 11 Rue de Champs, Asnieres, near Paris, France.

PAR. 5. There is a preference on the part of the buying public for goods, wares, and merchandise which are manufactured in foreign countries and imported into the United States; and this is particularly true regarding perfumes manufactured in France, and such goods so manufactured and imported command and bring from the purchasing public higher prices in the markets of the United States than domestic perfumes of the same nature and description.

PAR. 6. The foregoing statements on tags, labels, and invoices made by respondents in designating and describing their products and the source of origin and place of manufacture had and now have a tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead a substantial part of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the products are of foreign manufacture, and are imported from France into the United States. Further as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the representations of respondents, a number of the consuming public purchased a substantial volume of respondents' products.

As a result, trade in said commerce has been unfairly diverted to respondents from their competitors who actually import into the United States from foreign countries perfumes manufactured in foreign countries, or who manufacture or compound perfumes and similar products in this country for sale to the buying public and who truthfully represent and advertise the place of origin and quality of their products.

PAR. 7. The acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of section 5 of an act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on February 26, 1938, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, John H. Davis and Dale S. Davis, individuals trading as Normandie et Cie, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Charles S. Cox, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by respondent John H. Davis, before Edward E. Reardon, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and such testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, answers, testimony, and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and exceptions thereto, and brief in support of the complaint (respondents not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, John H. Davis and Dale S. Davis, are individuals trading under the name Normandie et Cie, with their principal office and place of business located at 92 Maplewood Street, Watertown, Boston, Mass. Respondents are now, and for more than 6 years last past have been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of perfumes and kindred products.

PAR. 2. Respondents cause, and for more than 6 years last past have caused, their products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Massachusetts to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business the respondents are now, and at all times mentioned herein have been, in substantial competition with other individuals and firms, and with corporations, engaged in the sale and distribution of perfumes in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their business and for the purpose of promoting the sale of their products, the respondents use various names, legends, and statements purporting to be descriptive of their products and of the place of origin or manufacture of such products. For example, the label on respondents' perfume designated "Sweet Pea" bears the wording "Normandie et Cie—Pois de Senteur Paris, France." The carton in which this perfume is displayed and sold to purchasers bears, in addition to the foregoing legend, the further legends, "Parfums—Normandie—Paris," "Qualite Superieure," and "True Flower Fragrances—Made in France." Substantially similar legends appear on the labels and cartons used by respondents for other varieties of their perfumes. Respondents also enclose with each vial of perfume a small folder or circular on which the words "Paris" and "France" are prominently displayed. This folder also bears the statement "Imported True Flower Fragrances."

Letterheads and invoices used by the respondents bear the following statements:

Suel Inventeur et Fabricant Du Celebre Parfums "Secrets of the Flowers"
NORMANDIE ET CIE
11 Rue des Champs
Asnieres, pres Paris, France
U. S. Sales Division: 92 Maplewood Street, Watertown, (Boston,) Massachusetts

PAR. 5. Through the use of the foregoing legends and statements and others of a similar nature, the respondents represent, directly or by implication, that their products are manufactured or compounded in France and are imported into the United States in finished form and ready for use; and that respondents have a place of business in France where such products are manufactured.

PAR. 6. The Commission finds that the respondents import from France certain perfume essences or compounds in bulk, and then add to such materials domestic alcohol. The imported essences constitute approximately 25 percent of the finished perfume product, while the alcohol constitutes approximately 75 percent of the finished product. After the manufacture of the perfume has been completed by the addition of the alcohol, the respondents bottle the perfume in new bottles or containers and then proceed to sell it to retail dealers, who in turn resell it to the public. All of the bottles in which the perfume is packaged are manufactured in the United States, and this is true also of the cartons in which the bottles are enclosed. Likewise, the advertising matter enclosed in the cartons is prepared and printed in the United States.

Respondents do not have a place of business in France or any other country outside the United States. All of the respondents' business operations, including the manufacture of their perfumes, are carried on in respondents' place of business near Boston, Mass.

PAR. 7. The Commission therefore finds that the representations made by the respondents with respect to their products and the place of origin thereof, as set forth in paragraphs 4 and 5 hereof, are false, misleading, and deceptive.

PAR. 8. The Commission further finds that there is a marked preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public in the United States for perfumes which are manufactured or compounded in France and imported into the United States.

PAR. 9. The acts and practices of the respondents have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents' products are manufactured or compounded in France and imported into the United States, and the tendency and capacity to cause such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' products as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief. In consequence thereof trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors, many of whom do not misrepresent their products or the place of origin thereof.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answers of respondents, testimony, and other evidence taken before Edward E. Reardon, trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and exceptions thereto, and brief in support of the complaint (respondents not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, John H. Davis and Dale S. Davis, individually and trading as Normandie et Cie, or trading under any other name, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of their perfumes and kindred products, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the terms "Paris," "France," "Made in France," or "Imported" to designate or describe products which are made or compounded in the United States, or otherwise representing that such products are manufactured in or imported from France or any other foreign country: Provided, however, That the country of origin of the various ingredients of such products may be stated when immediately accompanied by a statement that such products are made or compounded in the United States.

2. Using any French or other foreign words or terms to designate or describe products made or compounded in the United States, unless there appear in connection and conjunction therewith other words in English clearly stating that such products are made or compounded in the United States.

3. Using the words "11 Rue des Champs, Asnieres, pres Paris, France" or "U. S. Sales Division" in connection with respondents' trade name, or otherwise representing that respondents have a place of business in France or in any country other than the United States.

4. Representing in any manner whatsoever that products which are made or compounded in the United States are made in or imported from countries other than the United States.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

CLAIROL, INC., AND JOAN GELB, LEON A. SPILO, AND MORRIS GELB

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3615. Complaint, Sept. 30, 1938—Decision, Oct. 8, 1941

Where three individuals engaged, through a corporation, since dissolved, which they controlled, in the competitive interstate sale and distribution of hair dyeing preparations which they designated generally as "Clairol," and more specifically as "Instant Clairol" and "Progressive Clairol"; in advertisements in circulars, leaflets, display cards and other advertising material distributed among retailers and beauty shops, and by them among the purchasing public, and also through extensive advertisements in trade journals and in advertisements which said individuals inserted in newspapers, or caused to be inserted therein, by dealers and beauty shops; directly or by implication—

(a) Represented that their said products were not hair dyes, but preparations which reconditioned and supplied nourishment to the hair, and restored the natural or youthful color thereof, imparting thereto color which was permanent; facts being said preparations were shampoos which contained certain dyeing ingredients and their effect on the color of the hair was due solely to such ingredients, they were incapable of reconditioning the hair or restoring the natural or youthful color thereof, and their effect was not permanent, since they served only to color the hair to which applied and had no effect upon new hair, and they were incapable of supplying nourishment to the hair; and

(b) Represented that said preparations were harmless and safe for use, and were made or compounded in Paris, France, and that as many as 12 million treatments thereof had been used in America in 1 year; facts being said "Instant Clairol" contained paratolylene diamine, and would result in irritation or rash to users allergic to such coal tar derivative, and blindness might result from its use for dyeing eyelashes or eyebrows; said preparations were compounded in the United States and not in Paris, France; and the actual number of treatments used in America in 1 year was not in excess of 1,500,000;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations were true, and to cause such portion of the public, because of said belief, to purchase substantial quantities of their preparations, and with result of diverting substantial trade to them from their competitors, among whom are those who do not misrepresent their products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Edward E. Reardon, trial examiner.

Mr. John M. Russell for the Commission.
Mr. John Wattawa, of Washington, D. C., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Clairol, Inc., a corporation, and Joan Gelb, Leon A. Spilo, and Morris Gelb, individuals, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Clairol, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and respondents, Joan Gelb, Leon A. Spilo, and Morris Gelb, individuals, are president, vice president, and secretary, respectively, thereof. The individual respondents have dominant control of the advertising policies and business activities of said corporate respondent, and all of said respondents have cooperated each with the other and have acted in concert in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged. Respondents' office and principal place of business is located at 132 West Forty-sixth Street, in the city of New York, State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondents now are, and for more than two years last past have been, engaged in the business of compounding and soliciting the sale of and selling, directly and through retail dealers and salesmen, two hair dyeing preparations, both generally known as Clairol and each specifically known as Progressive Clairol and Instant Clairol, respectively. Respondents cause said products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said Clairol preparations in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents are in active and substantial competition with other corporations and individuals and with partnerships and firms engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Among such competitors there are many who do not make any misrepresentations or false statements concerning the qualities and properties of their respective products and of their effectiveness when used.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their said business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said Clairol preparations by members of the purchasing public, respondents, by means of statements in radio broadcasts, advertisements inserted in magazines, trade journals, display cards, bulletins and in other printed matter distributed among the trade and locally used by it in advertising said products and through other advertising media circulated generally throughout the United States, have made and are making many representations, directly and indirectly, as hereinafter stated, concerning the qualities and effectiveness of said Clairol preparations.

Among and typical of said representations made by the respondents are the following:

Clairol is not a dye.

Don't dye your hair—Clairol it.

Clairol does not contain the harsh metallic salts that dyes contain.

I can't use common old-fashioned dyes. I can't use anything but Clairol * * *.

All of said statements, together with similar statements appearing in respondents' advertising literature and in and through other said advertising media, purport to be descriptive of respondents' said Clairol hair dyeing preparations and of their effectiveness when used. In all of their advertising literature, and through other means, respondents, directly or indirectly by implication, insinuation or otherwise, through statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect, represent: By advertising Progressive and Instant Clairol as merely Clairol, that all of their claims concerning both are applicable to each of said preparations. That they are not dyes. That they do not contain the harsh, metallic salts that dyes contain. That they recondition and restore hair to its natural and youthful color and loveliness. That they contain beneficial oils and unguents which nourish the hair, as they are deeply absorbed by the hair shaft and follicles. That they permanently color white, gray or other shades of hair. That Instant and Progressive Clairol are both absolutely harmless and safe to use. That even every girl should prefer her hair colored with Clairol to its own natural color. That 12 million Clairol shampoo tint treatments are used annually in America alone. That respondents have an office and place of business in Paris, France, where said Clairol preparations are made.

PAR. 5. The above-mentioned representations, implications, and insinuations used by the respondents in the manner above described in connection with the offering for sale and selling of said Clairol preparations are false, misleading, and deceptive. In truth and in fact Progressive and Instant Clairol are both dyes, or shampoos containing dyes. The statement that they do not contain the harsh, metallic salts dyes contain is therefore unwarranted. They do not recondition or restore hair to its natural or youthful color and loveliness. They contain no beneficial oils and unguents, and have no properties which in any way nourish or benefit the hair. Neither of said preparations permanently colors white, gray or other shades of hair, new hair growing out thereafter will not be colored thereby. Instant Clairol is not harmless but dangerous when used by persons unable to pass a certain physical test, written notice of which is required by law in New York City to be stated on each bottle sold there. Every girl's hair will not be improved by using either of respondents' said products. The implication that 12 million Clairol shampoo tint treatments are used annually in America alone is a gross exaggeration and vastly exceeds the number of such treatments used here. None of the respondents has any office or place of business in Paris, France, and said Clairol preparations are not made there but are compounded in New York.

PAR. 6. The true facts are that there is nothing which will recondition or restore hair to its natural or youthful color. There is no known product which, when externally applied, will nourish the hair or hair shaft and follicles, or correct the cause of gray or faded hair or do more than impart color to existent hair. The slightest growth of the hair shows the natural color thereof and thus announces and proclaims that a hair dye has been used which accentuates lines and wrinkles and usually makes the face look hard.

PAR. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondents in describing their said products and their effectiveness when used, as hereinabove set out, were and are calculated to, and have had and now have a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true. As a direct result of this erroneous and mistaken belief a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondents' products, with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondents from competitors likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling similar preparations who truthfully advertise their respective products and the effectiveness thereof when used. As a result thereof, injury has been done, and is now being done, by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on September 30, 1938, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Clairol, Inc., a corporation, and Joan Gelb, Leon A. Spilo, and Morris Gelb, individuals, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by John M. Russell, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by John Wattawa, attorney for respondents, before Edward E. Reardon, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and such testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, answer, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and the exceptions thereto, briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and oral argument; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. For approximately seven years prior to November 4, 1940, respondent Clairol, Inc. was a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York. The individual respondents, Joan Gelb, Leon A. Spilo, and Morris Gelb, were president, vice president, and secretary, respectively, of the corporate respondent. They had dominant control of the business activities and practices of the corporation, including its advertising policies and practices. The office and principal place of business of all of the respondents was located at 132 West Forty-sixth Street, New York City, N. Y.

On October 14, 1940, a new corporation was organized by the individual respondents, such corporation being organized under the laws of the State of Connecticut and being known as Clairol, Incorporated. The individual respondents were the sole incorporators of the new corporation and constitute its board of directors. They hold the same official positions in the new corporation as they held in the old corporation, Joan Gelb being president, Leon A. Spilo being vice president, and Morris Gelb being secretary.

The new corporation, Clairol, Incorporated, was organized for the purpose of taking over the business formerly conducted by Clairol, Inc., respondent herein. On October 31, 1940, respondent Clairol, Inc. transferred to Clairol, Incorporated, all of its business and physical assets, which were moved to the new corporation's principal place of business in Stamford, Conn. On November 4, 1940, respondent Clairol, Inc. was dissolved.

PAR. 2. Prior to November 4, 1940, the respondents were engaged in the sale and distribution of certain hair dyeing preparations designated generally as "Clairol" and more specifically designated as "Instant Clairol" and "Progressive Clairol." Respondents caused their preparations, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintained a course of trade in their preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, the respondents were in active and substantial competition with other corporations and individuals and with firms and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of preparations intended for the same purposes as those for which respondents' preparations were intended.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their business and for the purpose of promoting the sale of their preparations, the respondents have advertised their preparations by means of circulars, leaflets, display cards and other advertising material distributed among retail dealers and beauty shops, and through such agencies among members of the purchasing public. Respondents have also advertised extensively in trade journals and have inserted advertisements in daily newspapers, or have caused such advertisements to be inserted in such papers by dealers and beauty shops. Among and typical of the statements and representations which have appeared in respondents' advertisements and advertising material are the following:

Clairol is not a dye.

Don't dye your hair—Clairol it.

Clairol does not contain the harsh metallic salts that dyes contain.

I can't use common old-fashioned dyes. I can't use anything but Clairol * * *.

Clairol * * * reconditions, obliterates the gray * * *.

Something effective, yet not a dye * * * colors white or gray hair completely, permanently in one treatment.

Naturally with Clairol * * * your hair regains and retains its youth.

* * * restore it to its youthful beauty and endow it with all the shimmering loveliness of its original and natural shade.

* * * the trained technician will apply these corrective oils to your hair and scalp and as these nourishing unguents are deeply absorbed by the hair shaft and follicles the Clairol tint * * * imparts color that is permanent.

Clairol * * * harmless way to beauty.

Clairol * * * safe enough to bathe in.

Mury of Paris presents Clairol. It is * * * absolutely safe.

Last year in America alone twelve million of Clairol shampoo tint treatments were used.

PAR. 5. Through the use of these statements and representations and others of similar import, the respondents have represented, directly or by implication, that their preparations are not hair dyes; that the preparations recondition the hair, and restore the natural or youthful color of the hair; that the color imparted to the hair by the use of the preparations is permanent; that the preparations supply nourishment to the hair; that the preparations are harmless and safe for use; that the preparations are made or compounded in Paris, France; and that as many as 12 million treatments of the preparations have been used in America in 1 year.

PAR. 6. The Commission finds that respondents' preparations are shampoos which contain certain dyeing ingredients. The effect produced upon the color of the hair through the use of the preparations is due solely to such dyeing ingredients. The preparations are incapable of reconditioning the hair or restoring the natural or youthful color of the hair. Nor is the effect produced by the preparations permanent, as the preparations serve only to color the hair to which they are applied, and have no effect upon new hair. The preparations are incapable of supplying nourishment to the hair.

The Commission further finds that the preparation Instant Clairol is not in all cases harmless or safe for use, as it contains the drug paratolylene diamine, a coal tar derivative, and in those cases where the user is allergic to such drug, the use of the preparation will result in irritation or rash. In no event should the preparation be used for dyeing the eyelashes or eyebrows, as blindness may result. The preparations are not made or compounded in Paris, France, but are compounded in the United States. The number of treatments of the preparations represented by respondents as having been used in America in 1 year is grossly exaggerated. The actual number was not in excess of 1,500,000.

PAR. 7. The Commission therefore finds that the representations made by the respondents with respect to their preparations, as set forth in paragraphs 4 and 5 hereof, are misleading and deceptive.

PAR. 8. The Commission further finds that the use by the respondents of these misleading and deceptive representations with respect to their preparations has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true, and the tendency and capacity to cause such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' preparations as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief. As a result substantial trade has been diverted to the respondents from their competitors, among whom are those who do not misrepresent their products.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

ceptions thereto, briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and oral argument; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That said individual respondents, Joan Gelb, Leon A. Spilo, and Morris Gelb, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of their cosmetic preparations designated generally as "Clairol" and more specifically designated as "Instant Clairol" and "Progressive Clairol," or any other preparations of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other names, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that said preparations are not hair dyes.

2. Representing that said preparations recondition the hair, or restore the natural or youthful color of the hair.

3. Representing that the effect produced upon the color of the hair by the use of said preparations is permanent.

4. Representing that said preparations supply nourishment to the hair.

5. Representing that said preparations are made or compounded in France.

6. Representing that the number of treatments of said preparations used by the public is greater than is the fact.

7. Representing that said preparation Instant Clairol is harmless or safe for use.

It is further ordered, That said individual respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

The corporate respondent, Clairol, Inc., having been dissolved, It is further ordered, That this proceeding be, and it hereby is, dismissed as to said corporate respondent.

IN THE MATTER OF

DAVID L. SILVER AND O. C. COLWES, TRADING AS KAY'S CUT RATE AND AS KAY'S CUT RATE DRUGS

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4510. Complaint, May 27, 1941—Decision, Oct. 14, 1941

Where two individuals engaged in interstate sale and distribution of various medicinal preparations; in advertisements through the mails, in newspapers, circulars, and other advertising literature, directly and by implication—

(a) Represented that their "Madame Bea's Capsules" constituted a competent and effective treatment for delayed, unnatural, and suppressed menstruation, and that it was safe and harmless, through such statements as "Modern women: Harmless prescription delayed periods. Don't be alarmed over delayed unnatural suppressed periods. Madame Bea's Capsules sold at Kay's Cut-Rate";

Facts being that said product was not a competent or effective treatment for such ailment, and was not safe or harmless, in that it contained the drugs ergot, oil of savin, aloin, and hellebore in quantities sufficient to cause gastro-intestinal disturbances and excessive congestion and hemorrhage of the pelvic organs; where used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy, might result in uterine infection causing blood poisoning; might also produce a severe circulatory condition by constriction of the blood vessels and contraction of the involuntary muscles, tending to cause abortion, and might result in severe poisonous effects upon the human system, in some instances resulting in loss of limbs or other serious and irreparable injury to health; and

(b) Failed to reveal facts material in the light of representations in such advertisements, and that the use of said preparation, under prescribed or usual conditions, might cause aforesaid disturbances and serious and irreparable injury;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that their said preparation possessed properties which it did not in fact possess, and that it was safe and harmless when such was not the fact, and to cause such public to buy substantial quantities of said preparation, as a result of such belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. William L. Taggart for the Commission.

McGinnis & Mann, of Beckley, W. Va., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that David L. Silver and O. C. Colwes, trading under the names of Kay's Cut Rate and Kay's Cut Rate Drugs, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents are individuals operating under the laws of the State of West Virginia with their principal office and place of business in Beckley, W. Va. Kay's Cut Rate and Kay's Cut Rate Drugs are trade names used by respondents in the operation of their said business.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now and for more than one year last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of various medicinal preparations. Among the various preparations sold and distributed by the respondents is a drug preparation advertised and sold as "Madame Bea's Capsules."

Respondents cause their said preparation, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of West Virginia to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their said preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers, and by circulars and other advertising literature, are the following:

Modern Women! Harmless prescription delayed periods. Don't be alarmed over delayed unnatural suppressed periods. Madame Bea's Capsules sold at Kay's Cut-Rate.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the foregoing statements and representations, and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent and have represented, directly and by implication, that their preparation designated as "Madame Bea's Capsules" constitutes a competent and effective treatment for delayed, unnatural, and suppressed menstruation, and that said preparation is safe and harmless.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondents' preparation is not a competent or effective treatment for delayed, unnatural, or suppressed menstruation. Moreover, said preparation is not safe or harmless, as it contains the drugs ergot, oil of savin, aloin, and hellebore in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if said preparation is used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Such use of said preparation may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances, such as catharsis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, congestion of the uterus, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage, and in those cases where said preparation is used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy, such use may result in uterine infection, with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures and even to the blood stream, causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

Such use of said preparation may also produce a severe circulatory condition by the constriction of the blood vessels, and contraction of the involuntary muscles, often with poisonous effect upon the human system, and tending to cause abortion in some instances, and may result in severe toxic conditions such as hemorrhagic diarrhea and in some instances producing a gangrenous condition of the lower limbs, resulting either in possible loss of limbs or in other serious and irreparable injury to health.

PAR. 6. The advertisements disseminated by the respondents constitute false advertisements for the further reason that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained therein, and fail to reveal that the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may cause gastro-intestinal disturbances and excessive congestion and hemorrhage of the pelvic organs, and in the case of pregnancy may cause uterine infection and blood poisoning.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations with respect to their said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents' preparation possesses properties which it does not in fact possess, and that said preparation is safe and harmless, when such is not the fact, and the capacity and tendency to cause the purchasing public to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' preparation as a result of such belief.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on May 27, 1941 issued, and on May 29, 1941 served its complaint in this proceeding upon David L. Silver and O. C. Colwes, individually, and trading as Kay's Cut Rate and as Kay's Cut Rate Drugs, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents are individuals operating under the laws of the State of West Virginia, with their principal office and place of business in Beckley, W. Va. Kay's Cut Rate and Kay's Cut Rate Drugs are trade names used by respondents in the operation of their said business.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now and for more than one year last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of various medicinal preparations. Among the various preparations sold and distributed by the respondents is a drug preparation advertised and sold as "Madame Bea's Capsules."

Respondents cause their said preparation, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of West Virginia to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their said preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers, and by circulars and other advertising literature, are the following:

Modern Women! Harmless prescription delayed periods. Don't be alarmed over delayed unnatural suppressed periods. Madame Bea's Capsules sold at Kay's Cut-Rate.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the foregoing statements and representations, and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent and have represented, directly and by implication, that their preparation designated as "Madame Bea's Capsules" constitutes a competent and effective treatment for delayed, unnatural and suppressed menstruation, and that said preparation is safe and harmless.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondents' preparation is not a competent or effective treatment for delayed, unnatural, or suppressed menstruation. Moreover, said preparation is not safe or harmless, as it contains the drugs ergot, oil of savin, aloin, and hellebore in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if said preparation is used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

Such use of said preparation may result in gastro-intestinal disturbances, such as catharsis, nausea, and vomiting, with pelvic congestion, congestion of the uterus, leading to excessive uterine hemorrhage, and in those cases where said preparation is used to interfere with the normal course of pregnancy, such use may result in uterine infection, with extension to other pelvic and abdominal structures and even to the blood stream, causing the condition known as septicemia or blood poisoning.

Such use of said preparation may also produce a severe circulatory condition by the constriction of the blood vessels, and contraction of the involuntary muscles, often with poisonous effect upon the human system, and tending to cause abortion in some instances, and may result in severe toxic conditions such as hemorrhagic diarrhea and in some instances producing a gangrenous condition of the lower limbs, resulting either in possible loss of limbs or in other serious and irreparable injury to health.

PAR. 6. The advertisements disseminated by the respondents constitute false advertisements for the further reason that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained therein, and fail to reveal that the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may cause gastro-intestinal disturbances and excessive congestion and hemorrhage of the pelvic organs, and in the case of pregnancy may cause uterine infection and blood poisoning.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations with respect to their said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents' preparation possesses properties which it does not in fact possess, and that said preparation is safe and harmless, when such is not the fact, and the capacity and tendency to cause the purchasing public to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' preparation as a result of such belief.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondents, in which answer the respondents admit all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents David L. Silver and O. C. Colwes, individually, and trading as Kay's Cut Rate and as Kay's Cut Rate Drugs, or trading under any other name or names, their representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of their medicinal preparation known as Madame Bea's Capsules, or any other medicinal preparation or product of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or by implication, that said preparation constitutes a competent or effective treatment for delayed, unnatural or suppressed menstruation, or that said preparation is safe or harmless; or which advertisement fails to reveal that the use of said preparation may cause gastro-intestinal disturbances and excessive congestion and hemorrhage of the pelvic organs, and in cases of pregnancy may cause uterine infection and blood poisoning.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof, or which advertisement fails to reveal that the use of said preparation may cause gastro-intestinal disturbances and excessive congestion and hemorrhage of the pelvic organs, and in cases of pregnancy may cause uterine infection and blood poisoning.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall, within 10 days after service upon them of this order file with the Commission an interim report in writing, stating whether they intend to comply with this order, and, if so, the manner and form in which they intend to comply; and that within 60 days after the service of this order, respondents shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

POWER & GANG MOWER MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION, COLDWELL LAWN MOWER COMPANY, JACOBSEN MANUFACTURING COMPANY, MILBRADT MANUFACTURING COMPANY, MOTO MOWER COMPANY, TORO MANUFACTURING COMPANY, IDEAL POWER LAWN MOWER COMPANY, OUTBOARD MOTORS CORPORATION, ROSEMAN TRACTOR MOWER COMPANY, AND ECLIPSE LAWN MOWER COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3689. Complaint, Jan. 19, 1939—Decision, Oct. 15, 1941

Where an association of manufacturers of power or gang mowers or both, whose combined sales approximated from 65 to 85 percent of the total sales of such equipment, of which, it appeared, a large part was sold to agencies of the Federal Government; following the abandonment of the N. R. A. code of fair competition for the industry, which carried into effect many of the practices previously established by said association and included provision for filing of prices and strict adherence thereto as filed, various restrictive rules relating to marketing, uniform cash discounts and establishment of trade-in allowances which were not to be exceeded, and in order "to salvage such provisions of the power and gang mower code as were found of value under the N. R. A."—

(a) Provided for the filing of prices with the association and the furnishing of copies to all known members of the industry, and also for uniform cash discounts and uniform guarantees to purchasers; and prohibited the sale of any product at any other price or discount than those set forth in such published price sheets;

(b) Prohibited members from repurchasing or taking in trade any product of the industry, or granting credit or allowances therefor, in amounts in excess of those set forth in the trade-in allowance schedule adopted by the association, and published, in different years, a "Blue Book" fixing trade-in allowances for various makes, models, and years, which were less, it appeared, than the average actual value of the equipment concerned;

(c) Established a uniform rate of discount to be granted to agencies of the Federal Government and, where price was the only factor considered, undertook to place their various models, which were not identical and prices of which ordinarily were not the same, on an absolute price parity; and—

(d) Organized distributors, in order more fully to effectuate such association and member policies in various territories in the United States, including, particularly, four large cities, and frequently met with such dealer organizations, and exerted pressure upon dealers to secure compliance with their said policies, including observance of established prices, discounts, and trade-in allowances, and avoidance of price cutting;

With result that such agreements for maintenance of filed prices, for standard discounts and terms to the more important classes of purchasers, and for uniform trade-in allowances, resulted, in substance, in stabilization of the prices of their products; prices to government units were enhanced and, during existence of their N. R. A. Code, an executive order permitting 15 percent discount in sales to the Government was, through understanding, disregarded; organization of dealer groups and participation in the conduct thereof aided in more effectively reflecting to consumers the effects of said agreements; and effect of said various agreements, acts, and practices was to unduly and unreasonably restrict and restrain competition in the sale of their products; to hinder and prevent competition between and among them, and enhance the prices of their products to the consuming public, and otherwise deprive the public of the benefits which would flow from normal competition:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public, had a dangerous tendency to, and did, hinder and prevent competition in the sale and distribution of power and gang mowers in commerce, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Power and Gang Mower Manufacturers' Association, Coldwell Lawn Mower Co., Jacobsen Manufacturing Co., Milbradt Manufacturing Co., Moto Mower Co., Toro Manufacturing Co., Ideal Power Lawn Mower Co., Outboard Motors Corporation, Roseman Tractor Mower Co., and Eclipse Lawn Mower Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Power and Gang Mower Manufacturers' Association, hereinafter referred to as respondent association, is a voluntary unincorporated association comprised of the respondents named in paragraph 2 hereof, all of whom are engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of power lawn mowers. Its principal office is in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. It was organized in December 1932 or thereabouts by the respondents named in paragraph 2 hereof as a trade association, for the promotion of the interests of its members, and since its organization has so acted. The activities of its members hereinafter described were and have been and are being carried out through and under the supervision, and by means of, said respondent association.

PAR. 2. The following respondents are corporations organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the States hereinafter mentioned and with their principal places of business in the cities hereinafter mentioned, to wit:

Name of respondent	State of incorporation	Principal place of business
Coldwell Lawn Mower Co	New York	Newburgh, N. Y.
Jacobsen Manufacturing Co	Wisconsin	Racine, Wis.
Milbradt Manufacturing Co	Missouri	St. Louis, Mo.
Moto Mower Co	Michigan	Detroit, Mich.
Toro Manufacturing Co	Minnesota	Minneapolis, Minn.
Ideal Power Lawn Mower Co	Michigan	Lansing, Mich.
Outboard Motors Corporation	Delaware	Milwaukee, Wis.
Roseman Tractor Mower Co	Illinois	Evanston, Ill.
Eclipse Lawn Mower Co	do	Prophetstown, Ill.

PAR. 3. The respondents named in paragraph 2 hereof are now and since their respective organizations have been engaged in the manufacture, at their respective places of business, of power lawn mowers and in the sale thereof. In the course and conduct of their businesses, all the said respondents for more than 6 years last past have caused and still cause such power lawn mowers when sold by them to be transported in commerce from their respective places of business, to, into, and through various States of the United States other than the States in which they respectively have their places of business, to the purchasers in such other States and in the District of Columbia. The number of power lawn mowers manufactured and sold by the said respondents constitutes and at all times since 1931 has constituted substantially all of the power lawn mowers manufactured in the United States and sold therein. Many purchasers of power lawn mowers have no regular source of supply thereof excepting from said respondents, and since 1931 have had no regular source of supply of power lawn mowers excepting from said respondents. An important class of purchasers of power lawn mowers from the said respondents consists of cities and other municipalities,

State governments and divisions thereof, the Federal Government and divisions thereof, and State and Federal institutions. The said respondents were, prior to 1932, in competition with one another as to discounts, terms and conditions of sale in the sale of power lawn mowers between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and but for the combination, agreement, understanding, and conspiracy hereinafter described, said respondents would have been at all times since 1931, and would now be, in such competition with one another.

PAR. 4. In or about December 1932, the respondents named in paragraph 2 hereof, for the purpose of eliminating among themselves competition as to discounts, terms, and conditions of sale, entered into and have since carried out and are still carrying out, through and by means of respondent association, an agreement, combination, understanding, and conspiracy among themselves to fix and maintain, and by which they have fixed and maintained, uniform discounts, terms, and conditions of sale in selling power lawn mowers in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Pursuant to and for the purpose of carrying out the aforesaid agreement, combination, understanding, and conspiracy, said respondents have done, among other things, the following:

(a) By agreement among themselves have fixed and maintained list prices at which each of the said respondents would sell and have sold power lawn mowers manufactured by it.

(b) By agreement among themselves have fixed and maintained and have adhered to and still adhere to schedule of uniform trade-in allowances for used power lawn mowers.

(c) By agreement among themselves have fixed and maintained uniform discounts, terms, and conditions of sale.

(d) By agreement among themselves have fixed and maintained and still fix and maintain uniform discounts to be, and which have been and are, allowed to their respective distributors.

(e) By agreement among themselves have filed and still file with respondent association schedules of prices, discounts, terms, and conditions of all sales.

(f) By agreement among themselves have not deviated and do not deviate from prices, discounts, terms, and conditions of sale filed with respondent association.

(g) By agreement among themselves have organized in various cities of the United States local distributors of power lawn mowers into associations for the purpose of maintaining the prices, uniform discounts, and terms and conditions of sale fixed as hereinbefore described.

(h) By agreement among themselves have allocated territories and prospective customers to certain of the said respondents, to the exclusion of the other of said respondents, the latter agreeing not to solicit sales nor to sell in such territories and to such customers, which such agreements have been and are being carried out.

PAR. 5. The acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public; have a dangerous tendency to and have actually hindered and prevented competition as to discounts, terms and conditions of sales, territories of sale, and customers between and among respondents in the sale of power lawn mowers in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act; have placed in respondents the power to control and enhance prices; have created in the respondents a monopoly in the sale of power lawn mowers in such commerce; have unreasonably restrained such commerce in power lawn mowers, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on January 19, 1939, issued and subsequently served its complaint upon respondents Power and Gang Mower Manufacturers Association, a voluntary unincorporated association, Coldwell Lawn Mower Co., Jacobsen Manufacturing Co., Milbradt Manufacturing Co., Moto-Mower Co., Toro Manufacturing Co., Ideal Power Lawn Mower Co., Outboard Motors Corporation, Roseman Tractor Mower Co., and Eclipse Lawn Mower Co., corporations, charging them with combination and conspiracy in restraint of trade in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of answers by several of respondents, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by an attorney for the Commission and in opposition thereto by attorneys for several of the respondents, before Edward E. Reardon, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answers thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral argument by counsel; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Power and Gang Mower Manufacturers Association, was a voluntary unincorporated association of which Edwin S. George of the Moto-Mower Co. was president and O. T. Jacobsen of the Jacobsen Manufacturing Co. was secretary, and the membership of which consisted of the other respondents in this proceeding and certain additional manufacturers of power and/or gang mowers. It was organized in 1932 and its last meeting was held early in 1937, since which time it has been inactive though not formally dissolved.

Respondent, Coldwell Lawn Mower Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, having its principal place of business in Newburgh, N. Y.

Respondent, Jacobsen Manufacturing Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Wisconsin, having its principal place of business at Racine, Wis.

Respondent, Milbradt Manufacturing Co., was a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Missouri, having its principal place of business at St. Louis, Mo. In December 1938 this corporation was dissolved and Mr. Raymond C. Luecke, who had been its president, became proprietor of the business formerly conducted by the corporation.

Respondent, Moto-Mower Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Michigan, having its principal place of business at Detroit, Mich.

Respondent, Toro Manufacturing Corporation (referred to in the complaint as Toro Manufacturing Co.), is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Minnesota, having its principal place of business at Minneapolis, Minn. Late in 1935 it succeeded to the business of the Toro Manufacturing Co., a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Delaware which was dissolved in January 1936.

Respondent, Ideal Power Lawn Mower Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Michigan, having its principal place of business at Lansing, Mich.

Respondent, Outboard Motors Corporation, was a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Michigan. It was dissolved in September 1936 when it and Johnson Motor Co. were consolidated and their business carried on by Outboard, Marine & Manufacturing Co., a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware.

Respondent, Roseman Tractor Mower Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, having its principal place of business at Evanston, Ill. It sells only gang mowers and was never very active in the affairs of respondent association, although elected a member in December 1935 without obligation for the payment of any dues.

Respondent, Eclipse Lawn Mower Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, having its principal place of business at Prophetstown, Ill.

PAR. 2. Respondents other than Power and Gang Mower Manufacturers Association were during all or a portion of the time alleged in the complaint, engaged in the sale and distribution of power and/or gang mowers to purchasers located in States other than the States in which their respective places of business are located, and caused such mowers, when sold, to be transported in commerce from their respective places of business to, into, and through various other States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. The corporate respondents were, during all or a portion of the time alleged in the complaint, engaged in the sale and distribution of equipment for mowing or cutting grass. This equipment is of two general types: (1) Power mowers, propelled and operated by a built-in motor; and (2) gang mowers which consist of a number of mowing units coupled together and drawn by a horse, tractor, or other motive power. Some of the respondents manufacture but one of the two general types of mowers mentioned, while others manufacture both types.

Late in 1931 a meeting was held by representatives of certain of the corporate respondents at which it was determined that an effort would be made to organize the industry. Subsequent thereto, at a meeting held in January 1932, the Power and Gang Mower Manufacturers Association was organized, although articles of association and bylaws were not adopted until 1934. Representatives of Toro Manufacturing Co., Ideal Power Lawn Mower Co., Jacobsen Manufacturing Co., and Moto-Mower Co., were most active in the creation of the association and in securing the membership therein of other concerns in the industry.

The early efforts of members of the association were directed toward reducing or minimizing, insofar as possible, price competition in the sale of their products, particularly through control of discounts granted to purchasers and allowances made to purchasers for used equipment turned in as part payment for new equipment.

Examples of practices in furtherance of these aims appear in correspondence between interested parties. On February 22, 1932, the president of the Moto-Mower Co. wrote to the Jacobsen Manufacturing Co. stating:

Having in mind the expressed desire on the part of the power lawn mower dealers at our conference in Chicago—believing the statements made there were sincere, and also inasmuch as it was agreed that we would report what was looked upon as unfair competition, leads me to forward you this communication.

Our dealer, Mr. Dursch, of Philadelphia, reports that a dealer of yours by the name of Dunn (a repair man) had offered $50.00 allowance for a 1925 Detroit model Moto-Mower and in addition a 5% discount on the price of your product.

This is certainly unfair competition and destructive of the best interests of power lawn mower manufacturers. I felt it my duty to report this, and I am sending a copy of this communication to Mr. Smith of the Ideal Power Lawn Mower Co., as chairman to whom such information was to be forwarded.

I shall be pleased to hear from you when you are able to advise me of the facts pertaining to the above transaction and would respectfully request that a copy of your communication be forwarded to Mr. Smith.

On November 15, 1932, the Jacobsen Manufacturing Co. wrote the Moto-Mower Co. in part:

You may be interested to note the enclosed copies of letters from and to the Gilson Bolens Manufacturing Company at Port Washington, Wisconsin.

The transaction referred to took place shortly after our last meeting in Chicago and in accordance with our understanding at the meeting, we quoted a discount of 15% on this business. You will note the Cooper Mower Company received the award at a price approximately 40% from list.

A few days ago a dealer from Washington, D. C., came into our office and made the statement that he had been informed by the Ideal agency, Mr. Armiger, in Washington, that they would quote 35% from list on government business in 1933. I understand Mr. Armiger would get a 10% over-rider on such business.

I do not know what truth there is in this report but would appreciate your taking the matter up with Mr. Smith of the Ideal Company so we can disregard the agreement made in Chicago in the event that the Ideal people wish to quote on government business in this fashion.

On November 16, 1932, the president of the Moto-Mower Co. replied to the Jacobsen Manufacturing Co. in part:

This will acknowledge receipt of your favor of November 15th with enclosures, all of which I have read with considerable interest. I shall communicate with Mr. Smith, of the Ideal, and advise you of his reply. Specific instances such as you have stated enables detailed investigation and naturally calls for explanation on the part of any manufacturer that has been accused of doing anything that is detrimental to the best interests of the trade as a whole.

On November 23, 1932, this was followed by a letter from the president of the Toro Manufacturing Co. to the president of the Moto-Mower Co. stating:

On my return from St. Louis this morning, I find your letter of November 18, with copies of letters from Jacobsen Manufacturing Company, Gilson-Bolens Manufacturing Company, Cushman Motor Works, and Ideal Power Lawn Mower Company, all of which are very interesting, and involve a question of policy of vital interest to all manufacturers of power mowing machinery.

Inasmuch as there is a meeting to be held in Chicago the early part of December, and in order to get down to brass tacks in this controversy, I suggest that you address a letter to all of the manufacturers and have them prepare a schedule of all bids that have been submitted by the manufacturer direct, or through their selling agents, to any of the governmental departments the past two or three years, showing the list price and the discounts that have been made in submitting the bids.

It is a very easy and simple matter for some of the manufacturers to take refuge behind local dealers who have submitted prices with long discounts, and excuse themselves on the grounds that they have no control over sales agents. I believe the only solution of this matter would be for the manufacturers of such equipment to reserve the sole right to bid and sell direct to the governmental departments.

On November 25, 1932, the president of the Moto-Mower Co. wrote the Jacobsen Manufacturing Co.:

On December 10th the Power Lawn Mower Manufacturers will again hold a meeting at Chicago, at which time several matters of importance will be discussed. These meetings have proven very beneficial to the manufacturers as a whole, brought about through the spirit of co-operation and frankness which has characterized these meetings.

This morning's mail brought me a letter from Mr. Clapper of the Toro Manufacturing Co., under date of November 23rd, of which I enclose a copy herewith.

I believe Mr. Clapper's suggestion a good one. The Moto-Mower Company will be prepared to disclose the bids which they have made during the past two or three years for government business.

May I suggest, inasmuch as this office is being used at present as a clearing house for these matters, that you bring with you to the meeting detailed facts covering bids for government business during the last two or three years and present them for discussion at the meeting in Chicago. This information should furnish interesting discussion and a basis for a decision governing future policy in selling power lawn mowers to the government.

With a view to curtailing and bringing about uniformity in allowances granted on used equipment taken in trade in connection with the sale of new equipment, the association prepared and published a "Blue Book of Trade-In Allowances on Used Power Lawn Mowers, Gang Fairway Mowers, Golf Tractors," commonly referred to as the "Blue Book." This publication was authorized at a meeting of the power and gang mower manufacturers in Chicago, Ill., on September 8, 1933, and was approved by the board of directors at a meeting in Chicago on October 27, 1933. It was said to be for the confidential use of dealers and that "the values herein established have been worked out on a percentage basis of the retail price of the different pieces of equipment, and therefore are fair and equitable to all makes, and are for your protection." It also stated:

> The practice by dealers of allowing more for a used machine than it is worth is merely another way of cutting the price, and price cutting in any form is the greatest menace to dealer's profits. The dealer who cuts his price or offers an excessive trade-in allowance not only sacrifices his rightful profit but also encourages his competitors to compete on the same basis.
>
> Remember, when you take in a piece of equipment on a trade you are buying and paying for it just as much as though you went out and bought it and gave your check for it. It costs real money to condition and resell it, and you cannot afford to take a loss, or make two deals for one profit.

This Blue Book listed under the names of the various manufacturers the models sold by each and set forth an "average appraisal value" for each such model that had been in use for 2 years, 3 years, 4 years, and 5 years or over.

PAR. 4. On March 26, 1934, a code of fair competition for the power and gang lawn mower manufacturing industry negotiated with the National Recovery Administration was approved. This code carried into effect many of the practices previously established by the association and included provision for the filing of prices and strict adherence to prices on file, various restrictive rules relating to the marketing of mowers, uniform cash discounts, and the establishment of trade-in allowances on used mowers, and also prohibited the granting of any trade-in allowance in excess of the amount so established.

An executive order (No. 6767) was issued by the President which provided in substance that bids might be made to the Government or its agencies as much as fifteen percent below filed prices. The attitude of the industry toward members individually availing themselves of the provisions of executive order No. 6767 is indicated by letter of July 31, 1934, from the secretary of the Code Authority, an officer of the Jacobsen Manufacturing Co., to the Outboard Motors Corporation, stating:

> In response to your letter of the 26th, advising your quoting the State of Wisconsin a discount of 10 percent as per Executive Order 6767, you will note enclosed application to the Administration for exemption to this order. Since this order is not generally being recognized by the Power and Gang Mower Industry, the Code Authority would greatly appreciate it if you would kindly cooperate with the industry by disregarding this Executive Order for the time being.

Your taking advantage of this order at the present time will only serve to stampede all other members of the industry into doing likewise, which will soon react to your own disadvantage.

The action taken by the mower manufacturers regarding the executive order appears in the following extract from the minutes of a meeting of the industry in Chicago on December 15, 1934, which was attended by most of respondents in this proceeding:

After considerable discussion of Executive Order 6767, it was the consensus of opinion that the Government may be granted a special discount not to exceed 15% from list prices at the discretion of the bidder, but that no cash discount should be given on any Federal sales where bids are entered at a discount of 15%, and that local freight rates should be added in submitting Government bids.

Further discussion on the subject of discounts to State and Municipalities developed the fact that while under Executive Order #6767, and the recommendation of the Board of Directors a 15% discount might be accorded to States and Municipalities, it was the opinion of the majority of those present that State and Municipal departments requesting bids on a single power mower should be quoted list prices or possibly a discount ranging from 5 to 10% depending upon the individual circumstances involved.

PAR. 5. After the abandonment of N. R. A. codes following the decision of the Supreme Court in A. L. A. Schechter Poultry Corporation, et al. vs. United States (295 U. S. 495), the Power and Gang Mower Manufacturers Association was anxious to retain the restrictions upon competition enjoyed under N. R. A. The minutes of a meeting of officers of that association in Detroit on July 12, 1935, recite in part:

The meeting was called to order by Colonel George for the purpose of discussing in a preliminary way, recommendations to be submitted to the Board of Directors for a meeting to be called in Detroit on or about September Sixth, particularly to formulate a plan to salvage such provisions of the power and gang mower code as were found of value under the NRA.

Colonel George advised that the following concerns had already expressed themselves in favor of continuing cooperative effort, in responding to his recent questionnaire to members of the industry—

Worthington Lawn Mower Company,
Ideal Power Lawn Mower Company,
Jacobsen Manufacturing Company,
Coldwell Lawn Mower Company,
Toro Manufacturing Company,
Eclipse Lawn Mower Company,
Outboard Motors Corporation,
Moto-Mower Company.

On motion of Colonel George, seconded by Mr. Smith, it was resolved that Directors of the Association be requested to inform the Secretary immediately as to any changes desired in the present consumer price policy as established by the Association on February 21, 1935, or of the consumer price policy established by several of the gang mower manufacturers and as announced by Mr. McCartney of the Toro Company on April 12, 1935.

All recommendations and suggestions received by the Secretary were to be submitted to another meeting of the Officers to be held in Detroit on July 25.

On July 22, 1935, Mr. Hayden W. Wagner of the Coldwell Co., in a letter to the association's secretary, stated as follows:

The sole objective of the Power and Gang Mower Manufacturers Association at this time should be to secure the sincere voluntary co-operation of all members of the industry. With such cooperation prices, discounts and terms of sales can be stabilized, uniform marketing provisions adopted and unfair trade practices controlled or eliminated.

On July 26, 1935, the officers of the association held a further meeting in Detroit, Mich., at which a revised code for the industry prepared by Mr. Hayden W. Wagner was adopted and at a meeting of the association in Chicago on November 22, 1935, according to the minutes:

The proposed Code of Fair Trade Practices, as submitted by Colonel Hayden Wagner, July 26, 1935, was then read and approved.

The marketing rules thus adopted included a provision for the filing of prices with the association and furnishing copies to all known members of the industry, and a prohibition against the sale of any product "at a price or discount other than or more favorable than set forth in published price sheets of such member at the time outstanding and in force under the conditions applicable to such sale therein set forth." Uniform cash discount terms and uniform guarantees to purchasers of equipment were provided and members were prohibited from:

Repurchasing or taking in trade any product of the industry or paying or granting credit or allowances therefor in amounts in excess of the amount for such product as set forth in a trade-in allowance schedule adopted by the Association.

PAR. 6. The Blue Book setting forth trade-in values for used equipment was also published by the association in 1935, 1936, and 1937. The maintenance of the trade-in values thus established was of both direct and indirect interest to members of the association. Some members of the association make few sales at retail while others maintain very little dealer organization and themselves make many sales at retail. The allowances made on equipment traded in on retail sales made by the manufacturer is obviously of direct interest to such manufacturer. Manufacturers are frequently obliged to extend credit to their dealers and sometimes in large measure finance their handling of power and gang mower equipment.

Consequently, insofar as the profitable handling of used equipment affects the success of the dealer, it is of material interest to a manufacturer. It is also apparent that a manufacturer making direct sales in competition with dealers representing other manufacturers would be affected by such dealers granting larger trade-in allowances than the association rules permitted a manufacturer to grant.

The allowances which might be made for used equipment as set out in the Blue Book were apparently less than the average actual value of the equipment in question. The president of the Moto-Mower Co., in writing to the Toro Manufacturing Co. with regard to the schedule of allowances in the Blue Book, said in part:

I again, however, bring to your attention my letter of October 26th, in which I wrote that the two year allowance be 30%; the three year allowance be 20%; the four year allowance 10% and the five year allowance 5%. If you received a report of the last meeting of the dealers in Chicago you will notice that they went on record as being in favor of the two year allowance being 25%.

I am just trading in my Ford automobile toward a new car. I have used it two full years and the allowance for my machine is $400.00, and I paid approximately $650.00 for this car completely equipped, and this allowance is with the understanding that the radio is to be removed from my present car and placed in my new car. You will observe that this two year allowance is more than 60%.

One thing is sure, our branches would be glad to take in all the trade-in Moto-Mower they could secure that would be brought to them by dealers provided we could turn against them the other makes of mowers handled by such dealers. Maybe some makes of used mowers have a greater resale value than others. I know that our branches are always able to resell Moto-Mowers that they have traded in, and reconditioned, and make a profit on them. They believe that a used mower such as our City Model, or our Standard or Super, that has been used two or three years, traded in and reconditioned, and which can be offered to the new purchaser for from $100.00, $125.00 and $150.00, is a good buy, and we know that it is. I do not believe it is good business to maintain conditions that exist at present whereby dealers can make more money off of selling reconditioned mowers, based on Blue Book allowances, than they can on the sale of new mowers, and that is a known statement by Moto-Mower dealers.

PAR. 7. The Power and Gang Mower Manufacturers Association on November 22, 1935, established a uniform rate of discount to be granted to agencies of the Federal Government. The minute recording this action reads:

On motion of Colonel Hayden Wagner, seconded by Mr. H. L. McCartney, it was unanimously moved that the discount to be accorded all departments of the Federal Government should not exceed 10%.

A variation from this with respect to sales to the Veterans' Bureau was provided as follows:

After considerable discussion on the matter of submitting bids on proposals from the Veterans' Bureau, the following motion was unanimously carried:

Resolved, that any manufacturer bidding on proposals from the Veterans' Bureau may be privileged to enter his bid at a price equivalent to any agreed upon Federal discount from the lowest published list price of any competitor, F. O. B. factory, the net amount of bid not to be less than such manufacturer's extreme distributor's net price.

No further cash discount or trade-in allowance should be offered on such bids.

Some of the questions which arose among association members with reference to bidding on sales to the Federal Government are indicated in a letter of December 16, 1935, from the Moto-Mower Co. to the Jacobsen Manufacturing Company, reading:

You undoubtedly have received from the Treasury Department the proposed specifications on power lawn mowers. All of us were supposed to send in our suggestions as regards changes. We did that, and I presume you did likewise. Ramsey today asked the following question:

"If the Government adopts this new proposed specification when purchasing mowers, then doesn't it reasonably follow that if the bidder is able to conform to the specifications, the man submitting the lowest bid will certainly get the business?"

I think Ramsey's point is well taken. If this is the case then why should we not, on Government bids, bid in exactly the same manner that it was proposed to bid when proposals were submitted by the Veterans Bureau? Otherwise I can see where all the business again will go to the man who has the lowest list price.

The machine that we are all going to bump up against next year, when submitting bids to the Government, will be the Ideal, with a list price of $285.00 for a 30'' wheel type mower. Ours is $295.00 and yours, I believe, is $300.00. Milbradt has one at $295.00; Toro has one at $295.00, and Coldwell's latest list price shows $290.00.

I do not want to cut the price on our Super-Detroit under $295.00, but I do not want to lose a lot of business just because we submit our bid on a basis of $5.00 greater list than some other manufacturer.

Will you please give some consideration to the advisability of our submitting all Government bids based on the resolution passed as governing bids submitted to the Veterans' Bureau?

The proportion of the output of the power and gang mower industry purchased by agencies of the Federal Government is apparently substantial. On July 31, 1934, the secretary of the Code Authority for this industry wrote to the Deputy Administrator of the National Recovery Administration, stating in part:

It is estimated that approximately 80% of the industry's sales are made to some branch of the Government or public institutions, such as State and Federal grounds, hospitals, county court houses, city park departments, city-owned play grounds, golf courses, cemeteries, etc.

The remaining 20% of the industry's sales, going to private estates and golf clubs, would be entitled to the same discount as a public institution.

The action of the association with respect to bids to governmental agencies resulted in substantially reducing the discounts to such purchasers, and that this action was reasonably successful is indicated in a letter of protest under date of March 3, 1937, from the Jacobsen Manufacturing Co., to the purchasing agent for the city of New York reading in part as follows:

We note that you received lower bids on Moto Mower, Milbradt, and Toro mowers, all representing a discount of approximately 25% from the manufacturers' list prices, all of which are a direct violation of the policy adopted by the Power and Gang Mower Manufacturers Association of which these parties are members.

The standard discount to municipalities, where the purchase of ten or more power mowers is involved, is 10%, the same as quotations to the Federal Government. No discount is accorded to municipalities purchasing only one machine.

These rules were adopted in code form under the NRA and have been effective since.

This sudden departure on the part of certain manufacturers from the established marketing fair practice code of our industry is a surprise to us and we are at a loss to understand the reason for it. Had we known that bids were going to be submitted on this basis, we would have quoted you an equivalent discount on Jacobsen mowers.

PAR. 8. In order to more fully effectuate the policies of the Power and Gang Mower Manufacturers Association, the association late in 1935 took steps to organize distributors in various territories in the United States. This was done in Chicago, St. Louis, Indianapolis, and Philadelphia. In this work the association employed and paid for the assistance of F. S. Jefferies Associates (trade association counsellors) and Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co. (accountants and auditors). Some of the distributor associations thus created were more successful and longer lived than others and apparently they all lapsed before the summer of 1937, and this effort on the part of the Power and Gang Mower Manufacturers Association was abandoned. The minutes of the meeting of the Chicago Power Mower Distributors Association for May 1936, state in part:

Luncheon was served to all present after which the Meeting was called to order by Mr. Charles Smith, who explained that the purpose of this Meeting was to check up the results of the agreements made at the previous Meeting, ten days earlier, with respect to Consumer Price Policy adopted at that Meeting.

All reported that there had been no known violation and that retail prices and Blue Book trade-in allowances had been properly maintained.

On May 22, 1936, the Chicago group "agreed that beginning Monday, May 25, they would file all copies of their invoices to consumers and to dealers," and subsequently F. S. Jefferies Associates reported to the group upon the filing of invoices by its members. The minutes of this group for the meeting of November 9, 1936, stated in part:

The distributors were informed at the previous meeting that the services of F. S. Jefferies Associates had been discontinued by the Manufacturers Association and now wanted to know what arrangements had been made to replace this service which had proven so successful during the past season.

It was explained that Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Company of Chicago would continue to serve the Chicago Distributors in the same manner as the F. S. Jefferies Associates. Unfortunately, Mr. E. L. Coleman, of the Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Company did not receive notice of this meeting in time to enable him to attend but assured us of his attendance at all future meetings. The distributors were emphatic in their opinion that their organization could not function successfully without the aid of an outside agency to assist in the conduct of meetings, filing of invoices, etc. Regret was also expressed as to the absence of two members and the necessity for faithful attendance by all members at all meetings was stressed.

It was agreed that all regulations pertaining to the sale of power mowers would apply to the sale of fairways mowers.

In order to further the association's program, compliance with it by dealers was necessary. Representatives of association members frequently met with the dealer organizations created and also exerted pressure upon dealers to secure compliance. For example, the Coldwell Lawn Mower Co. on March 30, 1936, wrote to the Jacobsen Manufacturing Co. in part:

We will be very glad to cooperate with the other members of the Power and Gang Mower Manufacturers Association in using every effort to have our dealers and distributors maintain the marketing practices which have been adopted by the Association.

On April 23, 1936, the Toro Manufacturing Corporation wrote the Jacobsen Manufacturing Co. and in discussing a report of excessive trade-in allowances said to have been given by a Toro distributor said in part:

Our distributors are naturally not price cutters, but of course when the other fellow gets in and takes a deal or two away from them by giving discounts or paying an exorbitant price for used equipment, they are very apt to retaliate. This, however, does not excuse the Indianapolis deal so far as I know, and I do not believe that after receiving the letter I have written him that Mr. Cohee will let anything of this kind happen again.

On December 8, 1936, Ideal Power Mower Company wrote to one of its distributors in part as follows:

What I want to convey to you is this, that you cannot improve a situation by retaliating. The only way to improve a situation is to get together, discussing common problems and agreeing on certain business ethics, then if the situation does not improve and there is still those who will not either join or live up to agreements, the manufacturer will step in and we are confident that mistakes that have been made can be corrected.

On February 17, 1937, the Jacobsen Manufacturing Co. wrote to Worthington Mower Co., and in referring to apparent price cutting on the sale of Worthington mowers by a dealer distributing both Jacobsen and Worthington machines stated:

We, therefore, feel disposed to request Mr. Riley to take his choice between the Worthington and Jacobsen line unless you will instruct him in writing, sending us a copy, that he must maintain your published prices and comply with the policies that may be adopted by the Indianapolis distributors association as constituting fair and ethical competition on Power and Gang Mower equipment in that territory.

In view of the assurances you gave me in Washington that you were for price maintenance, I anticipate the pleasure of receiving your fullest cooperation in this matter.

PAR. 9. Active furtherance of the association's program ceased at about the time the Commission's inquiry began, or soon thereafter. Complete compliance by members of the association and their dealers was never obtained but substantial results were secured. The following extracts from correspondence indicate the results secured, and the attitude of those concerned with respect to occasional infractions of the restrictive regulations imposed.

In letter of October 10, 1935, from the secretary of the Power and Gang Mower Manufacturers Association to the president of the Moto-Mower Co., with copies to several other association members, it was stated in part:

I recognize, of course, that regardless of what we do it is a physical impossibility to secure 100% compliance where a considerable portion of our sales go through dealers who have no further interest than the purchase and sale of a single machine. Nevertheless, I am sure that we could all be satisfied to tolerate a certain amount of non-compliance from this source, if we can get at least 90% compliance among ourselves and our principal distributors.

On April 4, 1936, the secretary of the Power and Gang Mower Manufacturers Association wrote to Ideal Power Lawn Mower Co.:

The enclosed summary of bids, received by the Veterans' Bureau on Proposal No. 450–M, is submitted for your information.

While bids were submitted by three leaders, only in one instance were such bids disturbing to our present plan of bidding on Federal specifications.

On June 15, 1936, the secretary of the Power and Gang Mower Manufacturers Association wrote the Toro Manufacturing Corporation in part:

Without a doubt, you have been considerably vexed this year by the half-dozen competitive dealers who have not complied with our Association federal discount, which has caused you to reach the conclusion as expressed in your letter of the 12th.

We likewise, have lost two or three deals on this account, but this has not been enough to disturb us. As far as I know, there have only been a few Moto-Mower dealers and one Ideal dealer who did not comply. Candidly, I think that is a pretty good record for the first year and that we all have benefited immeasurably by the 10 percent discount adopted last November. It has enabled us to put most of this Government business through our dealers and protect them with a reasonable margin on the business that should be theirs.

I am further convinced that the few infractions which we have suffered are easily corrected. I believe the Moto-Mower Company are reversing the policy they set out on at the beginning of the year, and with the aid of Mr. Jefferies, we will have their future cooperation in keeping their dealers in line.

PAR. 10. The membership of respondent association represented a substantial portion of the power and gang mower manufacturing industry. Their combined sales approximated from 65 to 85 percent of the total sales of such equipment. The agreements among respondents for the filing of list prices and adherence to the prices filed did not, and were not intended to, create absolute price uniformity. The mowers sold by each of the several respondents vary from those sold by the others and are not identical products intended to be marketed at identical prices. However, in the case of sales to the Veterans' Bureau where price was the only factor considered by the purchaser, provision was made by agreement among respondents for offering each of their several products upon the basis of the lowest list price of any competitor. The agreement for maintenance of prices on file with the association, plus the agreements for standard discounts and terms of sale to the more important classes of purchasers and for uniform trade-in allowances on used equipment, resulted in substance in an agreement among respondents as to stabilization of the prices of their products, although such prices were not necessarily identical. The further implementation of these agreements by the organization of dealer groups and participation in the conduct thereof, aided in more effectually reflecting to consumers the effects of the several agreements among respondents. The agreements and acts and practices of respondents as heretofore found did unduly and unreasonably restrict and restrain competition in the sale of their products to purchasers and have had a dangerous tendency to, and did, actually hinder and prevent competition between and among said respondents and enhance the prices of their products to the consuming public, and otherwise deprive the public of the benefits which would flow from normal competition between and among said respondents.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and have had a dangerous tendency to, and did, hinder and prevent competition in the sale and distribution of power and/or gang mowers in trade and commerce between and among the several States of the United States and constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answers of certain of the respondents, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto taken before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments of counsel, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent Power and Gang Mower Manufacturers Association, a voluntary unincorporated association, and respondents Coldwell Lawn Mower Co., Jacobsen Manufacturing Co., Moto-Mower Co., Toro Manufacturing Corporation, Ideal Power Lawn Mower Co., and Eclipse Lawn Mower Co., corporations, their officers, directors, agents, and employees, either with or without the cooperation of others not parties hereto, do forthwith cease and desist from following a common course of action pursuant to or in connection with any mutual understanding, agreement, combination, or conspiracy for the purpose and with the effect of maintaining the prices of their products, establishing and maintaining uniform rates of discounts and terms of sale to any purchasers or classes of purchasers, establishing and maintaining uniform trade-in allowances for used mowing equipment, or otherwise hindering or lessening competition in the sale and distribution of power and/or gang mowers or mowing equipment in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, by:

1. Agreeing to maintain and maintaining prices published through the Power and Gang Mower Manufacturers Association, or otherwise.

2. Establishing and maintaining uniform discounts on or terms of sale for their products, or any of them.

3. Establishing and maintaining uniform prices for, or allowances on, equipment purchased or taken in trade in connection with the sale of other products.

4. Organizing or participating or cooperating in the actions of any groups or associations of dealers with the purpose and effect of accomplishing or furthering the accomplishment of any of the things prohibited in the preceding paragraphs of this order.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall, within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

It is further ordered, For the reasons set out in paragraph 1 of the findings as to the facts, that this proceeding be, and the same hereby is, dismissed as to respondents Milbradt Manufacturing Co., Outboard Motors Corporation, and Roseman Tractor Mower Co.

IN THE MATTER OF

BILT-RITE BOX CORPORATION, AND JACOB GLEKEL AND JACOB PRESS, INDIVIDUALLY AND AS OFFICERS THEREOF

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4177. Complaint, July 10, 1940—Decision, Oct. 15, 1941

Where a corporation, engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of corrugated paper garment boxes and shipping containers, and its president and treasurer who formulated, directed, and controlled its policies, acts and practices; in letterheads, invoices and other printed matter distributed to customers and prospective customers—

Represented that it owned, operated or controlled the plant or factory wherein its said products were manufactured, through such statements, in connection with its corporate name, as "Manufacturers of Corrugated Boxes and Shipping Containers" and "Manufacturers of Cloak, Suit, Dress, and Fur Shipping Containers";

Facts being it purchased all of its said products from manufacturers, who delivered to it "knock-down" boxes, i. e., products in which all the scoring, creasing, trimming and slotting had been done by the manufacturer, and it merely set up the parts of the boxes and stitched or stapled them together, and was not, as represented, a manufacturer, from whom a portion of the purchasing public prefers to buy direct as, in its belief, enabling it to avoid the middleman's profit and obtain a more uniform line of merchandise;

With effect of misleading and deceiving purchasers into believing that it actually owned and operated or controlled the plant or factory wherein, and machinery whereby, its products were made, and to purchase substantial amounts of its said products on acount of such erroneous beliefs:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Lewis C. Russell, trial examiner.
Mr. B. G. Wilson for the Commission.
Mr. Louis H. Solomon, of New York City, for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Bilt-Rite Box Corporation, a corporation, Jacob Glekel and Jacob Press, indiviuals, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows.

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Bilt-Rite Box Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York with its office and principal place of business at 242 West Forty-first Street, New York, N. Y.; Jacob Glekel and Jacob Press are, respectively, president and treasurer of said corporate respondent and have their business offices at the same address of said Bilt-Rite Box Corporation.

Respondents, Jacob Glekel and Jacob Press, as officers of said corporation, formulate, control, and direct the policies, acts, and practices thereof. Respondents act together and in cooperation with each other in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged. Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing paper boxes, more especially designated as corrugated garment boxes and shipping containers, in commerce between and among various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Respondents cause and have caused said products, when sold, to be shipped from their aforesaid place of business, in the city of New York, State of New York, to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, respondents, in soliciting the sale of, and in selling, their products as above described, have caused letterheads, invoices, and other printed matter to be distributed through the United States mails and by other means to customers and prospective customers located in States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. Among and typical of said statements and representations are the following:

BILT-RITE BOX CORPORATION
Manufacturers of Corrugated Garment Boxes and Shipping Containers
BILT-RITE BOX CORPORATION
Manufacturers of Cloak, Suit, Dress and Fur Shipping Containers

The use of the word "manufacturers" on respondents' letterheads, invoices and other printed matter serves as a representation that respondents own, operate, or control the plant or factory wherein, or machinery whereby, the products they sell are made or manufactured.

PAR. 3. In truth and in fact, respondents do not own, operate, or control, and have not owned, operated, or controlled a plant, factory or machinery for the manufacture of the products which they sell and distribute as hereinabove alleged, but respondents have filled and now fill orders for such articles of merchandise with products which are made or manufactured in a plant or factory or by machinery which they neither own, operate, nor control.

PAR. 4. There is a preference on the part of certain purchasers and prospective purchasers located in the various States of the United States, for buying said products and like or similar products directly from the manufacturer or factory producing the same. There is an impression and belief existing among certain of said purchasers or prospective purchasers of said products that by purchasing directly from the manufacturer a saving of the middleman's profit may be obtained; that a more uniform line of merchandise may be purchased, and that other advantages may be obtained by purchasing goods directly from a manufacturer or plant operator.

PAR. 5. The use by respondents of the word "manufacturers" contained in its advertising matter as hereinabove alleged has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, purchasers and prospective purchasers by causing them to mistakenly and erroneously believe that the respondents actually own and operate or control the plants or factories wherein, or the machinery whereby, said products are made or manufactured, and to purchase substantial amounts of respondents' products on account of such mistaken and erroneous belief.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 10th day of July, A. D., 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents named in the caption hereof, charging them with unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondents answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of, and in opposition to, the allegations of the complaint were introduced by the attorneys for the Commission and the attorney for respondent before Lewis C. Russell, a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the complaint, the answer thereto, the testimony and other evidence, the report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, and briefs in support of, and in opposition to the complaint; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Bilt-Rite Box Corporation, is a corporation existing under the laws of the State of New York. Respondent Glekel is president of respondent corporation and respondent Jacob Press is its treasurer. The principal place of business of the respondents is located at 242 West Forty-first Street, in the city and State of New York.

PAR. 2. The corporate respondent, since the date of its incorporation, has been engaged in the business of selling and distributing paper boxes which are designated by the trade as corrugated garment boxes, and shipping containers, and ships or causes its products to be shipped, when sold, from its principal place of business to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States. Respondents, Jacob Glekel and Jacob Press formulate, direct, and control the policies, acts, and practices of the corporate respondent, and act together in cooperation with each other in doing the things and acts hereinafter set forth.

PAR. 3. The corporate respondent, in the course and conduct of its business as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, in soliciting the sale of and selling its products, has caused letterheads, invoices, and other printed matter to be distributed to customers and prospective customers located in States other than the State of New York. Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in said literature are the following:

BILT-RITE BOX CORPORATION
Manufacturers of Corrugated
Boxes and Shipping Containers
BILT-RITE BOX CORPORATION
Manufacturers of Cloak, Suit, Dress and Fur
Shipping Containers

The corporate respondent, by use of the word "manufacturers," as above stated, represents that it owns, operates, or controls the plant or factory wherein, and the machinery whereby, the products themselves are made or manufactured.

PAR. 4. None of the respondents owns, or has ever owned, operated, or controlled a plant, factory, or machinery for manufacturing the products sold by the corporate respondent. The corporate respondent purchases all of the boxes sold by it from manufacturers who deliver to the respondent what are known as "knock-down" boxes. By this is meant that all the scoring, creasing, trimming, and slotting is done by the manufacturer, and the respondent merely sets up the parts of the boxes and stitches or staples them together.

PAR. 5. The railroads demand that all paper shipping boxes bear a certificate stamp stating the name of the manufacturer of the boxes. The Agar Manufacturing Company, from whom the corporate respondent purchased its knock-down boxes, at the request of respondent stamped its boxes with a certificate showing that the boxes were manufactured by the corporate respondent; but because of the action of the Federal Trade Commission in similar cases, it ceased this practice in April 1939.

PAR. 6. A portion of the purchasing public prefers to buy directly from manufacturers, because of the belief that by so doing they may avoid the middleman's profit and will obtain a more uniform line of merchandise.

PAR. 7. The use by the corporate respondent of the word "manufacturer," as hereinbefore set forth, has a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived purchasers and prospective purchasers of shipping boxes or containers, causing them to erroneously believe that the corporate respondent actually owns and operates or controls the plant or factory wherein, and the machinery whereby, its products are made or manufactured, and to purchase substantial amounts of said respondent's products on account of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondents, the testimony and other evidence taken before Lewis C. Russell, a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, the report of the trial examiner thereon and the exceptions to said report, and briefs filed in support of and in opposition to, the complaint, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent Bilt-Rite Box Corporation, a corporation, its officers, directors, agents, representatives, and employees, and the respondents, Jacob Glekel and Jacob Press, individually and as officers of the Bilt-Rite Box Corporation, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of paper boxes or other shipping containers, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Representing in any manner that respondents, or any one or more of them, own and operate or control a plant or factory wherein paper boxes or other shipping containers are manufactured.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF FOOD SERVICE EQUIPMENT INDUSTRY, INC., ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4433. Complaint, Dec. 26, 1940—Decision, Oct. 15, 1941

Where most of the leading dealers throughout the United States in food service equipment for hotels, restaurants, clubs, institutions, etc., members of an association consisting of about 100 such dealers and including certain manufacturers of kitchen, restaurant, and cafeteria equipment especially designed for each particular installation, but with members' primary business consisting in purchase and resale of said equipment, which they bought from selected manufacturers designated by said association as "Honor Roll Members," as below set forth, and also from members of a china association; and who would have been in competition with one another, but for acts and practices below set forth, as would have been said "Honor Roll" and China Association manufacturers in sales to dealers, and also with member dealers in sales to ultimate users;

Acting through and by means of said dealers' association, its officers and directors—

(a) Entered into and carried out agreements and understandings with said Honor Roll member manufacturers and said China Association, and pursued a concerted course of action and undertaking among themselves and with others, to adopt, carry out, enforce, and maintain, throughout the United States, certain restrictive and unfair policies and trade practices, including (1) classification of jobbers and dealers in food service equipment as being, or not being, "legitimate jobbers" or "recognized dealers," as defined by said association as those who carry a stock, maintain display rooms, etc., (2) acceptance of applications for membership in said association only from firms who, in its judgment, conformed to aforesaid classification, securing new members principally upon invitation of association members, as finally passed upon by the association directors, (3) the urging of all manufacturers to sell exclusively to and through aforesaid "legitimate" or "recognized" jobbers or dealers, and of protesting to manufacturers who sold to any others, (4) the selecting of certain cooperating manufacturers as recipients of the association's "Honor Roll Certificates," and the urging upon the association members that, in their purchases, they give preference to such "Honor Roll Members," (5) the protesting to manufacturers who sold food service equipment directly to public service companies, chain stores, and other large purchasers, unless such sales were made on a competitive equality with the prices which said purchasers could receive from "legitimate jobbers" or "recognized dealers" and (6) the entering into and carrying out of specific agreements and understandings with Honor Roll and China Association members with intent and effect of carrying out said policies and practices; and

Where said association members, to make effective and require compliance with said policies and practices, and, in effect, a general policy and practice of reducing competition throughout the United States in the sale and offer of food service equipment by manufacturers, and of tending to create and maintain a monopoly in such trade by aforesaid Honor Roll and China Association members, and of reducing competition in the resale of such equipment and tending to create and maintain a monopoly in said association members and in "legitimate" or "recognized" dealers and jobbers—

(b) Entered into agreements under which they held at least one national meeting each year, formed local organizations of their association members in various cities and held frequent meetings thereof, and held directors' meetings, all for discussion of and agreement on, policies, and appointed special committees to enforce such policies and practices and enter into agreements and understandings with "Honor Roll" and other manufacturers;

(c) Agreed to and did issue and disseminate, through their association, a monthly bulletin to dealers and manufacturers herein concerned, in which association's activities were summarized and its membership and the current holders of Honor Roll certificates were listed, and agreed to and did issue, from time to time, to Honor Roll members and other manufacturers, a complete list of "legitimate" or "recognized" jobbers and dealers;

(d) Agreed to and did issue annually to Honor Roll members, Honor Roll certificates signifying that such members had carried out certain restrictive undertakings, as described below, and agreed to and did give preference to them in the purchase by association members of food service equipment;

(e) Agreed to and did submit complaints with reference to Honor Roll members to the association's committee on merchandising, for investigation and report as to whether such manufacturers should be dropped from the Honor Roll;

(f) Entered into and carried out an agreement and understanding with five manufacturers of stainless steel and enamel cooking utensils and other similar products for food service equipment, pursuant to which, and following certain restrictive undertakings by said manufacturers as below set forth, said association members gave preference in their purchases of said products to such manufacturers, with effect of monopolizing in said members resale of such equipment to institutional buyers throughout the United States, and of tending to monopolize in said manufacturers all purchases of such equipment by association members and by "legitimate" and "recognized" jobbers and dealers;

(g) Entered into and carried out, in many instances, an agreement and understanding with members of aforesaid China Association, pursuant, to which, and following certain restrictive undertakings on their part as hereinafter described, said association members specifically agreed to (1) cease pitting one manufacturer against another in an endeavor to force down prices, (2) cease requesting the copying of other American manufacturers' designs, (3) cease demanding and accepting volume discounts, (4) cease soliciting business on the same decoration on the same makes of china as now being supplied by another dealer, and (5) "practice better ethics," i. e., that a dealer given the exclusive right to quote on some specific proposition on one make of china, should confine his offering to the consumer to that particular brand and not accept an order for any other make; with effect of monopolizing in said association members and in "legitimate jobbers" and "recognized dealers" resale of various types of vitrified china products made by China Association members, to hotels, clubs, institutions, and similar buyers throughout the United States, and of monopolizing in said china manufacturers all purchases of such equipment by association members and "legitimate" and "recognized" jobbers and dealers;

(h) Agreed to and did attempt to prevent, and in some cases did prevent, said Honor Roll members and other manufacturers from selling directly to chain stores, hotels, restaurants, and similar large volume purchasers, on any basis other than that of a competitive equality with the prices of said "legitimate jobbers" or "recognized dealers"; and

(i) Agreed to and did supervise and investigate, through said association and otherwise, the practices and policies of competing dealers in food service equipment, and agreed to and did act concertedly to maintain the policies and practices hereinbefore described; and

Where said "Honor Roll members," pursuant to above understanding and agreement and in furtherance thereof—

(j) Agreed not to sell their food service equipment through any other than said "recognized dealers" or "legitimate jobbers"; and in many instances discontinued selling to curbstone brokers, commission agents, and others, and selling direct to hotels, restaurants, chain stores, and similar large volume purchasers, on any basis other than that of a competitive equality with "legitimate jobbers'" or "recognized dealers'" prices; and

Where said China Association members, pursuant to their said understanding and agreement, acting through their association—

(k) Agreed to sell directly to department stores for their restaurants only where such stores had china departments, and to use their best endeavors to sell through dealers, to others and to chain stores; to cease immediately from taking on any new direct-to-consumer accounts or any new broker or commission agent accounts; and to refrain from quoting prices to consumers without first having received the dealer's consent as to the mark-up to be used;

Capacity, tendency, and effect of which agreements, policies, practices, and acts were—

(1) To create and set up said Honor Roll Members as a "White List" of manufacturers of food service equipment, signifying thereby that only those manufacturers who received Honor Roll Certificates from said association were to receive preference in the placement of business by its members;

(2) To prevent dealers who were not members of said association or were not classified by it as "legitimate" or "recognized" from procuring food service equipment from Honor Roll manufacturers and from other cooperating manufacturers, including the China Association members; to eliminate and discriminate against them; and to interfere with, suppress and hamper their interstate supply of food service equipment;

(3) To unreasonably restrain competition in the sale or offer of food service equipment throughout the United States, and thus to deprive hotels, restaurants, clubs, institutions, and other similar purchasers of the advantages they would receive under conditions of free and fair competition, and otherwise to operate as a restraint upon competition;

(4) To reduce substantially direct sales by manufacturers of food service equipment to hotels, restaurants, chain stores, and similar large volume purchasers;

(5) To burden, hamper, and interfere with the normal and natural flow of trade in food service equipment in interstate commerce;

(6) To cause said Honor Roll and China Association members to boycott and refuse to sell present and would-be dealers, distributors, and brokers of food service equipment who (a) were not members of said association, or (b) were not classified by it as "legitimate jobbers" or "recognized dealers";

(7) To prejudice and injure manufacturers of food service equipment who did not conform to said association members' policies and practices, or who did not desire to so conform but were compelled to do so by the concerted action of said association, its Honor Roll Members, and said China Association; and

(8) To injure the competitors of said association, Honor Roll, and China Association members by unfairly diverting business and trade from them:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of competitors and the public; had a dangerous tendency to, and actually did, hinder and prevent competition in the sale and distribution of food service equipment in commerce; unreasonably restrained such commerce; had a dangerous tendency to create in them a monopoly in the sale of such equipment; and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the respondents named and represented in the caption hereof, and more particularly described hereinafter, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Food Service Equipment Industry, Inc., hereinafter referred to as "respondent industry" is a nonprofit corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois on July 25, 1933, and existing and doing business by virtue of the laws of said State since that date, with its office and principal place of business being located at 2155 Pershing Road, Chicago, Ill.

Its officers are now, and since its organization have been, the following respondents hereinafter referred to as "respondent Industry Officers":

Each of the respondents named in the caption hereof acted, and now acts, in concert and in cooperation with one or more of the other respondents, either directly, or through or by means of respondents, Industry, Industry officers, Industry directors, China association, or China association officers, or by other means or methods, in doing and performing the acts and things, hereinbefore alleged, in effectuating, furthering and requiring compliance with the restricting, restraining and unfair policies and trade practices adopted and carried into effect by respondent Industry members, as hereinabove alleged.

PAR. 20. The capacity, tendency and effect of the aforesaid agreements, combinations, policies, practices, and the acts and things done and performed by all of the respondents named in the caption hereof, in pursuance thereof, are, and have been:

1. To monopolize in respondent Industry members the selling and distribution of food service equipment to hotels, restaurants, clubs, institutions, and similar users of such equipment, throughout the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

2. To monopolize in respondents, honor roll members, China association members, Illinois Brass Manufacturing Co. and Columbia Stamping and Enameling Co., and such other manufacturers of various types of food service equipment whom respondent Industry members, acting through and by means of respondents, Industry officers and Industry directors, and by other means and methods, approve the manufacture and sale of such equipment throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia.

3. To create and set up the respondent honor roll members as a "White List" of manufacturers of various types of food service equipment signifying thereby that only those manufacturers of various types of food service equipment who receive honor roll certificates from respondent Industry, are to receive the business of respondent Industry members.

4. To prevent dealers in food service equipment throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia who are not members of respondent Industry from securing various types of food service equipment from the manufacturers thereof, especially from those manufacturers of such equipment who are recipients of honor roll certificates from respondent Industry.

5. To suppress, eliminate, and discriminate against those who are, or have been, engaged in, or desire to engage in, the sale and distribution of food service equipment anywhere in the United States, but who are not members of, or cannot become members of, or who do not wish to become members of, respondent Industry.

6. To unreasonably lessen, eliminate, restrain, stifle, hamper and suppress competition in the sale, or offering for sale, of various types of food service equipment throughout the United States, and in the District of Columbia, and thus to deprive hotels, restaurants, clubs, institutions and other similar users of such equipment of the advantages in price, service and other considerations which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal, unmolested, free and fair competition in the sale, and offering for sale, to them of such equipment, and to otherwise operate as a restraint upon, obstruction and deterrent to, the freedom of fair and legitimate competition in such trade and industry.

7. To obstruct and prevent the establishment throughout the United States and the District of Columbia of new dealers in food service equipment.

8. To prevent direct sales throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia by manufacturers of various types of food service equipment to hotels, restaurants, clubs, institutions and other similar users of same, chain stores, brokers, "price-cutters" and noncooperation nonmembers of respondent Industry.

9. To prevent competitive sales throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia by gas and electric utility companies to consumers of such equipment who ordinarily are customers of respondent Industry members.

10. To prevent manufacturers of various types of food service equipment from bidding in competition with respondent Industry members on W. P. A. projects.

11. To obstruct and prevent the establishment throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia of new manufacturers of various types of food service equipment.

12. To burden, hamper, and interfere with the normal and natural flow of trade in commerce of food service equipment into, through and from the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

13. To interfere with, suppress, and hamper the interstate supply of various types of food service equipment of those who are, or who desire to, engage in the sale and distribution of such equipment throughout the United States, and in the District of Columbia, but who are not now members of, or cannot become members of, or do not desire to become members of, respondent Industry.

14. To result in respondents, honor roll members, China association members, Illinois Brass Manufacturing Co. and Columbia Stamping and Enameling Co. boycotting and refusing to sell to, dealers, distributors and brokers of various types of food service equipment and those who desire to become such dealers, distributors and brokers, throughout the United States, and in the District of Columbia, but who are not members of, or cannot become members of, or who do not wish to become members of, respondent Industry.

15. To prejudice and injure manufacturers of various types of food service equipment, throughout the United States, and in the District of Columbia, who do not conform to respondents' said restricting, restraining and unfair policies and practices, or who do not desire to so conform, but are compelled to do so, by the concerted action of all of the respondents named in the caption hereof, as hereinbefore alleged.

16. To injure the competitors of respondents, Industry members, honor roll members, China association members, Illinois Brass Manufacturing Co., and Columbia Stamping and Enameling Co., by unfairly diverting business and trade from said competitors and otherwise oppressing them.

PAR. 21. The acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of competitors of respondents and of the public; have a dangerous tendency to and have actually hindered and prevented competition in the sale of various types of food service equipment in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act; have unreasonably restrained such commerce in said food service equipment; have a dangerous tendency to create in respondents a monopoly in the sale of such equipment, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 26th day of December 1940, issued, and thereafter had served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents named in the caption hereof, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, in violation of the provisions of the said act. All of said respondents, except respondents, United States Stamping Co. and Scammell China Co., have duly filed their answers in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts, signed and executed by all of the respondents (including the aforementioned respondents, United States Stamping Co. and Scammell China Co.) except respondent, Illinois Brass Manufacturing Co., and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument, the filing of briefs or the filing of a report on the evidence by a trial examiner for the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answers and stipulations, said stipulation having been approved, accepted and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

PAR. 2. The control, direction, and management of respondent Industry's affairs, policies and actions have been vested in respondent Industry officers and Industry directors, and still are, with the exception of the aforementioned respondents H. C. Davis, P. L. Ezekiel, and C. Winkler.

PAR. 3. The membership of respondent Industry consists of approximately 100 corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals, all of whom are dealers in various types of food service equipment for hotels, restaurants, clubs, institutions and other such classes of business, the primary business of said members being the purchase and resale of such equipment, with said members constituting most of the leading dealers in such equipment throughout the United States. Certain of the members of respondent Industry are manufacturers of kitchen, restaurant and cafeteria equipment, which, in a large part, must be especially designed and manufactured for each particular installation.

The number of members of said respondent Industry vary from year to year. The following respondents, hereinafter referred to as "respondent Industry members," are represented members of respondent Industry:

A. L. Cahn & Sons, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York with its office and principal place of business located at 46 Cooper Square, New York, N. Y.

Duke Manufacturing Co., a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business located at 2222 North 9th Street, St. Louis, Mo.

PAR. 4. Respondent Industry annually selects certain manufacturers of the various types of food service equipment, which are resold by respondent Industry members to receive honor roll certificates from respondent Industry, in recognition of said manufacturers' cooperation with, and adoption of, the policies and practices of respondent Industry, which policies and practices are hereinafter set out.

The honor roll certificates which respondent Industry thus awards read as follows:

Presented to _____ in recognition of your cooperation with the policies of the Food Service Equipment Industry, Inc., in promoting friendly relations between manufacturers and dealers who (1) carry stocks, (2) maintain display rooms, (3) employ a sales organization, (4) extend credit facilities, (5) offer delivery service.

Expires June 30, 19——

S. R. SPERENS,
Treasurer,

S. S. ANOFF,
Chairman.

The recipients of such honor roll certificates, hereinafter referred to as "Honor Roll Members," are invited to attend meetings of respondent Industry. The status of being an honor roll member is not permanent, but honor roll certificates are granted from year to year by respondent Industry, respondent Industry members each year deciding as to what manufacturers should be placed on the honor roll.

Just prior to the close of the fiscal year on June 30, in each year, ballots are mailed out by respondent Industry to all respondent Industry members, containing the names of all manufacturers who appeared on the "Roll of Honor" during the preceding year, and respondent Industry members are required to check the list and suggest any changes or additions thereto; the ballots are then submitted to respondent Industry directors for approval.

To remain an honor roll member the manufacturer is required to observe the sales policy hereinafter set out in subdivision 9 of paragraph 17. Questions as to whether manufacturers on the Honor Roll have observed such sales policy have at various times been the subject of disagreement between respondents, Industry members and honor roll members.

The Commission finds that through the selection of honor roll members by respondent Industry, in the manner herein described, the respondent Industry compels or attempts to compel compliance by said honor roll members with the sales policy of said respondent, hereinafter set out in subdivision 9 of paragraph 17.

There are approximately 40 or 45 manufacturers of food service equipment who are honor roll members of respondent Industry, with the number of said members varying from year to year. The following respondents, hereinafter referred to as "respondent Honor Roll Members," all of whom were recipients of said honor roll certificates from respondent Industry for the year 1940, are representative of the honor roll members:

Such trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia in such equipment, to said jobbers and dealers, have been hindered and forestalled, in the manner and by the methods hereinafter found.

PAR. 13. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, respondent honor roll members and China association members, but for the policies, acts and practices hereinafter found, naturally and normally would be in competition with each other, and with other manufacturers of the same types of equipment used for food service which they manufacture, in selling and seeking to sell such equipment in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to respondent Industry members, competitors of said respondent Industry members, who are not classified as "legitimate jobbers" or "recognized dealers" by respondent Industry, and also directly to the ultimate users of said equipment.

PAR. 14. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, respondent honor roll members and China association members, but for the policies, practices and acts herein found, naturally and normally would be in competition with respondent Industry members in selling and seeking to sell, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to the ultimate users thereof, the various types of food service equipment manufactured by said respondent honor roll members and China association members.

PAR. 15. PAR. 16. Among the said policies and trade practices referred to in the preceding paragraph, which were so formulated, adopted and put into effect by the respondents, are the following:

1. A policy and practice of selecting and classifying, according to certain standards set up by respondent Industry, jobbers and dealers in food service equipment throughout the United States as being or not being "legitimate jobbers" or "recognized dealers," who are defined by respondent Industry as being those dealers or jobbers who carry stock, maintain display rooms, employ a sales organization, extend credit facilities, and offer delivery service.

2. A policy and practice of accepting applications for membership in respondent Industry only from firms that, in the judgment of respondent Industry, (a) are "legitimate jobbers" or "recognized dealers" as those terms are defined by respondent Industry, and (b) are of good reputation and standing.

3. A policy and practice of securing new members upon application of prospective members submitted generally and principally upon invitation of respondent Industry members; such applications have, however, in some instances been submitted and accepted without prior invitation from respondent Industry members. All applications, regardless of source, are submitted to respondent I. S. Anoff, Chairman of respondent Industry, by whom such applications are thereafter referred to respondent Industry directors for final action.

4. A policy and practice of urging all manufacturers of food service equipment to sell same through respondent Industry members or through the jobbers or dealers in such equipment, whom respondent Industry has selected and classified as "legitimate" or "recognized," and not to sell such equipment directly to the ultimate users thereof.

5. A policy and practice of selecting certain specific manufacturers of food service equipment who cooperate with respondent Industry's purposes and policies, as recipients of respondent Industry's "Honor Roll Certificates."

6. A policy and practice of protesting to manufacturers of food service equipment who sell such equipment to any jobbers or dealers other than respondent Industry members or those jobbers or dealers who are classified by respondent Industry as "legitimate" or "recognized."

7. A policy and practice of protesting to manufacturers of food service equipment who sell same directly to public service companies, chain stores and other large purchasers of such equipment unless such sales are made on a competitive equality with the prices which such purchasers could receive from "legitimate jobbers" or "recognized dealers," as the same are classified by respondent Industry.

8. A policy and practice of urging and suggesting to respondent Industry members that they give preference to respondent honor roll members in the purchase by said respondent Industry members of the various types of food service equipment which are manufactured by said respondent honor roll members.

9. A policy and practice of entering into, and thereafter carrying out, specific agreements and understandings with respondent honor roll members and China association members, for the purpose, intent, and with the effect of carrying out the policies and practices hereinbefore enumerated in this paragraph.

The Commission finds that, in effect, the respondent Members have adopted and carried out a general policy and practice of reducing competition throughout the United States, in the sale and offering for sale of various types of food service equipment by the manufacturers thereof, and of tending to create and maintain a monopoly in such trade by respondent honor roll members and China association members and also of reducing competition throughout the United States in the resale of such equipment, and of tending to create and maintain a monopoly in respondent Industry members and in those dealers and jobbers in food service equipment whom respondent Industry classifies as "legitimate jobbers" or "recognized dealers," in such trade and commerce throughout the United States.

PAR. 17. For the purpose of making such policies and practices effective, and of requiring compliance therewith by all food service equipment dealers and manufacturers of such equipment, throughout the United States, respondents have done, and performed, among other acts and things, the following:

1. Respondent Industry members agreed to formulate, adopt, follow, carry out and make effective, and have formulated, adopted, followed, and in a great number of instances made effective, the policies and practices described in the preceding paragraph.

2. Respondent Industry members agreed to hold, and have held, at least one national meeting each year, at which said policies and practices were discussed, adopted and agreed to.

3. Respondent Industry members agreed to form, and have formed, local organizations of Industry members, particularly in New York, N. Y.; Boston, Mass.; Chicago, Ill.; Miami, Fla.; and St. Louis, Mo.

4. Respondent Industry members agreed to hold, and have held, frequent meetings of the respondent membership of said local organizations, at which said policies and practices were discussed, adopted and agreed to.

5. Respondent Industry directors agreed to hold, and have held, meetings at which said policies and practices were discussed, adopted and agreed to.

6. Respondent Industry members have agreed to appoint, and have appointed, through and by means of respondent Industry, Industry officers and Industry directors, special committees to enforce said policies and practices, and also to confer and enter into agreements and understandings with representatives of respondent honor roll members and other manufacturers of various types of food service equipment which are resold by said respondent Industry members, for the purpose, intent and with the effect of, carrying out said policies and practices.

7. Respondent Industry members agreed to issue and disseminate, and have issued and disseminated, through and by means of respondent Industry, Industry officers and Industry directors, a monthly bulletin entitled "Food Service Equipment Industry Bulletin," to respondents, Industry members, honor roll members and other manufacturers of food service equipment, in which Bulletin the activities of respondent Industry are summarized, a complete list of the membership of respondent Industry given and also a full list of the current holders of honor roll certificates from respondent Industry.

8. Respondent Industry members have agreed to issue, and have issued, from time to time, through and by means of respondent Industry, to respondent honor roll members and other manufacturers of food service equipment throughout the United States, a complete list of all such jobbers and dealers of food service equipment throughout the United States, numbering approximately 600, as respondent Industry has selected and classified as "legitimate jobbers" or "recognized dealers".

9. Beginning in 1937, and continuing thereafter, respondent Industry members have, through respondent Industry, agreed to issue, and have issued, annually to honor roll members, honor roll certificates, which signify that said respondent Honor Roll Members have entered into, and thereafter carried out, an agreement, understanding and combination with respondent Industry, acting for and on behalf of respondent Industry members, in the sale of food service equipment by the manufacturers thereof, and in the resale and distribution of such equipment in said commerce by dealers thereof. Pursuant to said understanding, agreement and combination, and in furtherance thereof, respondent honor roll members, in effect:

(a) agreed, and agree, not to sell, and, in many instances, do not sell, the various types of food service equipment manufactured by them, through any broker, jobber or dealer, other than the "recognized dealers" or "legitimate jobbers" so defined and classified by respondent industry.

(b) agreed, and agree, to discontinue selling, and, in many instances, have discontinued selling, the various types of food service equipment manufactured by them, to curbstone brokers, commission agents, and others who are not "legitimate jobbers" or "recognized dealers" as defined and classified by respondent industry.

(c) agreed, and agree, to discontinue selling, and, in many instances, have discontinued selling, directly to hotels, restaurants, chain stores and similar large volume purchasers of food service equipment, on any basis other than that of a competitive equality, with the prices such purchasers could receive from "legitimate jobbers" or "recognized dealers" as same are defined and classified by respondent Industry.

10. Pursuant to said understanding, agreement and combination, hereinbefore set out in subparagraph 9, and in furtherance thereof, respondent Industry members agreed to, and do, give preference to respondent honor roll members in the purchase by said respondent Industry members of the various types of food service equipment which are manufactured by said respondent honor roll members.

11. Respondent Industry members agreed to submit, and do submit, any complaints with reference to respondent honor roll members to respondent Industry's committee on merchandising.

12. Respondent Industry members agreed to require, and do require, said respondent Industry's committee on merchandising to investigate such complaints and report back to respondent Industry directors as to whether such manufacturers should be dropped from respondent Industry's honor roll, and respondent Industry directors decide whether or not this should be done.

13. Respondent Industry members agreed to publish, and do publish, in each issue of its monthly bulletins all of the names of respondent honor roll members.

14. In about 1937, respondent Industry members agreed to enter into, and did enter into, and thereafter carry out, by means of respondent Industry, Industry officers and Industry directors, an agreement and understanding with respondents Carrollton Metal Products Co., Polar Ware Co., Lalance-Grosjean Manufacturing Co., United States Stamping Co. and Vollrath Co., all of whom are manufacturers of stainless steel and enamel cooking utensils and other similar products, for food service equipment. Said agreement and understanding tend to have the effect of monopolizing in respondent Industry members the resale of such equipment to hotels, restaurants, clubs, institutions and similar buyers of same throughout the United States, and also have had the effect of tending to monopolize in said respondent manufacturers of food service equipment all purchases of same by respondent Industry members and by those jobbers and dealers of such equipment whom respondent Industry classifies as "legitimate jobbers" and "recognized dealers." Pursuant to said agreement and understanding, and in furtherance thereof, the respondent manufacturers made the following specific agreements which were, to a substantial extent, observed and carried out by said respondents:

(a) To refrain from selling to any new hotel accounts or like buyers, directly, or through any commission agent, broker or any other channel of distribution other than "legitimate jobbers" and "recognized dealers," as defined by respondent Industry.

(b) To attempt to eliminate before October 1, 1937, all existing direct or brokerage accounts and divert this business exclusively to respondent Industry members.

15. Pursuant to said agreement and understanding, hereinbefore set forth in subparagraph 14, and in furtherance thereof, respondent Industry members agreed to give, and do give, preference in their purchases of stainless steel and enamel cooking utensils and similar products used as food service equipment to said respondent manufacturers.

16. In about 1939, respondent Industry members agreed to enter into, and did enter into, and thereafter carry out, in many instances, an agreement and understanding with respondent China association members, acting through and by means of respondents China association and China association officers, which tends to have the effect of monopolizing in respondent Industry members, and in those dealers and jobbers whom respondent Industry classifies as "legitimate jobbers" and "recognized dealers," the resale of various types of vitrified china products manufactured by respondent China association members to hotels, restaurants, clubs, institutions and similar buyers of same throughout the United States, and which likewise tends to have the effect of monopolizing in respondent China association members all purchases of such equipment by respondent Industry members and those jobbers and dealers whom the respondent Industry classifies as "legitimate jobbers" and "recognized dealers." Pursuant to said understanding and agreement, respondent China association members, acting through and by means of respondents China association and China association officers, specifically agreed:

(a) To sell directly to department stores for their restaurants, only where such stores have china departments.

(b) To use their best endeavors to sell, through dealers, department stores having no china departments.

(c) To sell chain stores through dealers where this is possible.

(d) To cease immediately from taking on any new direct-to-consumer accounts.

(e) To cease immediately taking on any new broker or commission agent accounts; and (f) To refrain from quoting prices to consumers without having first received the consent of the dealer as to the mark-up to be used.

Pursuant to said understanding and agreement respondent Industry members specifically agreed to:

(a) Cease pitting one manufacturer against another in an endeavor to force down prices.

(b) Cease requesting the copying of other American Manufacturers' designs.

(c) Cease demanding and accepting volume discounts.

(d) Cease soliciting business on the same decoration on the same makes of china as now being supplied by another dealer.

(e) Practice better ethics; that is, if a dealer is given the exclusive right to quote on some specific proposition on one make of china, he should confine his offering to the consumer to that particular brand and not accept an order for any other make of china.

17. Respondent Industry members agreed to attempt, and did attempt, by the various methods hereinbefore set forth to prevent, and in some cases did prevent, the respondent honor roll members and other manufacturers of food service equipment from selling directly to chain stores, hotels, restaurants and similar large volume purchasers of food service equipment, on any basis other than that of a competitive equality with the prices such purchasers could receive from the "legitimate jobbers" or "recognized dealers," which are defined, selected and classified as such by respondent Industry;

18. Respondent Industry members agreed to supervise and investigate, and did supervise and investigate, through and by means of respondent Industry, Industry officers and Industry directors, and by other means and methods, the practices and policies of competing dealers in food service equipment, and agreed to act, and did act, concertedly to maintain the policies and practices, hereinbefore described in paragraph 16.

PAR. 18. Although respondent Columbian Enameling and Stamping Co., Inc., had a representative at the meeting, in about 1937, at which the respondents Carrollton Metal Products Co., Polar Ware Co., Lalance-Grosjean Manufacturing Co., United States Stamping Co., and Vollrath Co., entered into the agreement with the respondent Industry members which has hereinbefore been set forth in subparagraph 14 of paragraph 17 this representative of respondent Columbian Enameling and Stamping Co., Inc., took no part in the actual discussions regarding the agreement and was not present at the meeting when the resolution embodying such agreement was adopted. The Commission, therefore, finds that said respondent Columbian Enameling & Stamping Co., Inc., was not a party to such agreement.

PAR. 19. Each of the respondents named in the caption hereof, except respondents Illinois Brass Manufacturing Co. and Columbian Enameling & Stamping Co., Inc., acted in concert and in cooperation with one or more of the other respondents, either directly or through or by means of respondent Industry, Industry officers, Industry directors, China association or China association officers, or by other means or methods, in doing and performing the acts and things hereinbefore found, in effectuating, furthering and requiring compliance with the policies and trade practices adopted and carried into effect by respondent Industry members, as hereinabove found; and which, with respect to respondents China association, China association officers and China association members, who do not hold honor roll certificates, appear in subparagraph 16 of paragraph 17 hereof.

PAR. 20. The Commission finds, from all of the foregoing facts, that the capacity, tendency, and effect of the aforefound agreements, combinations, policies, practices, and acts and things done and performed in pursuance thereof, as have hereinbefore been found, have been and are:

1. To create and set up the respondent honor roll members as a "White List" of manufacturers of various types of food service equipment, signifying thereby that only those manufacturers of various types of food service equipment who receive honor roll certificates from respondent Industry, are to receive preference in the placement of business by respondent Industry members.

2. To prevent dealers in food service equipment throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia who are not members of respondent Industry or who are not selected and classified by respondent Industry as "legitimate jobbers" or "recognized dealers" from procuring various types of food service equipment from the manufacturers thereof, who are recipients of honor roll certificates from respondent Industry, and from those other manufacturers of such equipment who cooperate with respondent Industry, including respondent China association's members.

3. To suppress, eliminate and discriminate against those who are, or have been, engaged in, or desire to engage in, the sale and distribution of food service equipment anywhere in the United States, but (a) who are not members of, or cannot become members of, or who do not wish to become members of, respondent Industry, or (b) who are not selected, classified and designated by, respondent Industry as "legitimate jobbers" or "recognized dealers".

4. To unreasonably lessen, eliminate, restrain, stifle, hamper, and suppress competition in the sale, or offering for sale, of various types of food service equipment throughout the United States, and in the District of Columbia, and thus to deprive hotels, restaurants, clubs, institutions, and other similar purchasers and users of such equipment of the advantages in price, service and other considerations which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal, unmolested, free and fair competition in the sale, and offering for sale, to them of such equipment, and to otherwise operate as a restraint upon, obstruction and deterrent to, fair and legitimate competition in such trade and industry.

5. To reduce substantially direct sales throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia by manufacturers of various types of food service equipment to hotels, restaurants, chain stores and similar large volume purchasers of food service equipment.

6. To burden, hamper, and interfere with the normal and natural flow of trade in commerce of food service equipment into, through and from the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

7. To interfere with, suppress and hamper the interstate supply of various types of food service equipment of those who are engaged in or who desire to engage in, the sale and distribution of such equipment throughout the United States, and in the District of Columbia, but (a) who are not now members of, or cannot become members of, or do not desire to become members of, respondent Industry, or (b) who are not selected, classified and designated as "legitimate jobbers" or "recognized dealers" by respondent Industry.

8. To cause respondent honor roll members and China association members to boycott and refuse to sell dealers, distributors, and brokers of various types of food service equipment and those who desire to become such dealers, distributors and brokers, throughout the United States, and in the District of Columbia, but who (a) are not members of, or cannot become members of, or who do not wish to become members of respondent Industry, or (b) who are not selected, classified and designated by respondent Industry as "legitimate jobbers" or "recognized dealers".

9. To prejudice and injure manufacturers of various types of food service equipment, throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia, who do not conform to respondent Industry members' policies and practices, or who do not desire to so conform, but are compelled to do so, by the concerted action of the respondent Industry, Industry officers, Industry directors, honor roll members, China association, China association officers and China association members, as hereinbefore set out.

10. To injure the competitors of respondent Industry members, honor roll members and China association members by unfairly diverting business and trade from said competitors.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of competitors of the respondents and to the public; have a dangerous tendency to hinder and prevent, and have actually hindered and prevented competition in the sale and distribution of various types of food service equipment in commerce within the intent and meaning of section 4 of the Federal Trade Commission Act; have unreasonably restrained such commerce in said food service equipment; have a dangerous tendency to create in respondents a monopoly in the sale of such equipment, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

IN THE MATTER OF

FORD MOTOR COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3174. Complaint, July 16, 1937—Decision, Oct. 20, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture of passenger motor vehicles and in the competitive interstate sale and distribution thereof to its authorized retail dealers throughout the United States, whom it furnished with suggested price lists for their sales to the consuming public; predicating such retail prices on an advertised f. o. b. price plus transportation to retailer, cost of such equipment as bumpers, bumper guards, spare tires, and other necessary accessories, and, in addition, taxes, advertising assessments, and handling and conditioning charges, so that the actual delivered price of a vehicle to the retail purchaser was far in excess of its advertised f. o. b. price plus actual transportation; in a nation-wide advertising campaign in newspapers, magazines, price lists, radio broadcasts, and other advertising media, describing and illustrating its said products—

Misrepresented the price to be paid by the consumer purchaser for a particular vehicle through featuring f. o. b. prices which pertained, not to the model displayed, but to a less expensive car, setting forth in fine print almost totally obscured by the larger type featuring the f. o. b. price, the additional charges needed to make up the full price of the car ready for operation, and in some instances accompanying the featured price by the legend, in small letters, "and up f. o. b. Detroit" or said legend plus some such words as "standard accessories group including bumpers and spare tires extra," which explanatory matter was either inadequate or so inconspicuous as to be of no value in correcting the inherent deceptive tendencies;

With result that the false impression was conveyed that the car pictured was obtainable at the price featured and more expensive models were available at higher prices; readers of its advertisements would expect to obtain cars equipped exactly as shown for the prices emphasized at place of manufacture plus actual transportation charges; and persons who might not otherwise consider purchase of the type of car illustrated, visited the show-rooms of authorized dealers and in some instances purchased such cars at the prices above indicated which were much higher than the figures stated in its advertisements; and with tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the belief that its vehicles could be purchased at prices much less than those at which they were actually obtainable, and to induce it to visit said dealers and purchase such cars, whereby trade was unfairly diverted to it from its competitors who truthfully represent the prices of their products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and its competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard and Mr. John P. Bramhall, trial examiners.

Mr. James M. Hammond for the Commission.

Bodman, Longley, Bogle, Middleton & Farley, of Detroit, Mich., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Ford Motor Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as the respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Ford Motor Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its office and principal place of business at 3674 Schaefer Road, Dearborn, Mich. It is now, and for a number of years last past has been engaged in the business of manufacturing passenger motor vehicles and in the sale and transportation thereof in commerce among and between the various States in the United States, and in foreign countries. It causes, and has caused, said passenger motor vehicles, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business, in Michigan to purchasers thereof located in the various other States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries.

In the course and conduct of its business, the respondent, Ford Motor Co., has been at all times herein referred to, in substantial competition with other corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in similar businesses involving the sale and distribution of passenger motor vehicles in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, Ford Motor Co., sells and distributes its passenger motor vehicles to the purchasing and consuming public through designated agents or dealers located at points throughout the United States and in foreign countries. These agents or dealers are individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations and are not owned by said Ford Motor Co. or directly controlled by it except insofar as their relationship is sustained by contracts relating to the manufacture and delivery of motor vehicles by the respondent, Ford Motor Co., and the purchase thereof by said agents and dealers, who in turn resell the same to the purchasing and consuming public at prices suggested by the respondent, Ford Motor Co. The respondent's retail prices are predicated upon an advertised f. o. b. or delivered retail price, usually at its factories or assembly plants, plus additional charges for transportation from said factories or assembly plants to its retail dealers, plus the cost of certain equipment, such as bumpers, bumper guards, spare tires, and similar material necessary for the proper operation of the vehicle, which varies in accordance with the model or type of car delivered. This so-called extra equipment is charged for in addition to respondent's advertised retail sales price. Other additional charges are generally or frequently made by the respondent to its local agents or dealers, such as taxes, advertising assessments, handling charges, and conditioning charges. All of these charges are added to the advertised f. o. b. or delivered price of each vehicle sold by the respondent, and are, in turn, included in the retail price charged the local purchaser by respondent's agents and dealers. The actual delivered price of respondent's cars to a retail purchaser is therefore far in excess of respondent's published f. o. b. price at a designated point plus actual transportation costs to place of sale and delivery and the retail purchaser is not informed of these additional charges over and above respondent's advertised retail delivery or f. o. b. prices.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, as described hereinabove, respondent, Ford Motor Co., for the purpose of promoting the sale of its passenger motor vehicles, conducts and has conducted a nationwide advertising campaign in newspapers, magazines, price lists, by radio broadcasts, and in other ways, whereby it describes and illustrates its products. Accompanying these illustrations or descriptions, it features, usually in large numerals, a designated f. o. b. price for the cars so illustrated or described, in such a way as to convey or create the impression in the minds of members of the purchasing public that fully equipped cars so illustrated or described may be purchased complete and ready for operation at the said f. o. b. or delivery point for the prices so designated and featured, or at other or distant points, for the designated and featured prices plus actual cost of transportation thereto.

In truth and in fact, the passenger motor vehicles described and illustrated in connection with or in immediate proximity with the featured f. o. b. prices are not the motor vehicles usually and commonly sold by the respondent for the featured price, and generally the said featured price is the price charged by the respondent for its less expensive cars. The cars so described or illustrated in respondents' advertisements and price lists cannot be purchased at retail for the price featured in said advertisements or price lists at the f. o. b. or delivery point named therein or at the ultimate destination, plus actual freight or transportation charges thereon, without the payment of additional charges for added items, such as bumpers, bumper guards, spare tire, tube, or tire lock, and other accessories necessary for the actual or legal operation of the car or constituting part of what the public understands to be a complete car ready for operation, as illustrated or described by the respondent for sale at a designated point at a definite price. To these charges, over and above respondents' advertised delivered prices are frequently or generally added further and additional charges to retail purchasers for items among others, such as taxes, advertising, handling, and conditioning. In instances where statements are made of charges in addition to the specified f. o. b. price, such statements are printed in such fine print as to be almost totally obscured by the large type or figures featuring the said f. o. b. price.

PAR. 4. The practice of the respondent, Ford Motor Co., in falsely advertising and representing a fully equipped and higher priced vehicle for sale at the price of a lower priced car and charging purchasers a price much higher than the featured price for the car so described and illustrated, and in the other ways set out in paragraph 3 hereof, was and is calculated to mislead and deceive, and has misled and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public into the belief that upon the payment of the designated f. o. b. price plus transportation charges to a point of actual delivery, full title to and possession of said car, fully equipped and ready for operation, may be had. Respondent has also placed in the hands of retailers, agents, and dealers the means of making such false and misleading representations to the purchasing public and has enabled its retailers, agents, and dealers to increase their own sales of respondent's products, so described and represented, thereby lessening the market for similar goods made by other manufacturers of motor vehicles, the true delivered price of which is truthfully stated.

PAR. 5. Motor vehicles of sundry competitors of respondent likewise engaged in commerce as herein set out, are and have been sold and distributed to the purchasing and consuming public in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia in competition with respondent's motor vehicles but without fictitious and erroneous statements and representations in reference to "f. o. b." or delivered prices or retail sales prices as used or made by the respondent herein.

PAR. 6. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent as hereinabove set out, in offering for sale and selling its passenger vehicles, was and is calculated to, and had and now has, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true. Further, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs, induced by the acts, advertisements and other representations of respondent as hereinabove set out, a substantial number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's passenger motor vehicles with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling passenger motor vehicles who truthfully advertise and represent their products and who sell the same at the retail delivered prices published, represented, or designated by them. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been, and is now being done by respondent to substantial competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondent have been and are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors as aforesaid, and have been and are, unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of section 5 of an act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 16th day of July, A. D., 1937, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding on the respondent, Ford Motor Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by James M. Hammond, attorney for the Commission, and evidence in opposition thereto was introduced by Bodman, Longley, Bogle, Middleton & Farley, attorneys for the respondent, before Wm. W. Sheppard, and John P. Bramhall, duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission theretofore designated by it to serve in this proceeding; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, the testimony and other evidence, the report of the trial examiners and the exceptions to said report, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto; oral argument not having been requested, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Ford Motor Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Delaware in 1919, and having its principal place of business in Dearborn, Mich.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and has been at all times since the date of its incorporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing passenger motor vehicles and in their sale and distribution. Respondent causes the motor vehicles sold by it to be transported from the place of their manufacture to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of its business respondent has been, at all times referred to herein, in substantial competition with other corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of passenger motor vehicles in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. All sales by respondent of the passenger motor vehicles manufactured by it are made to authorized dealers located throughout the United States who sell the same at retail to the purchasing and consuming public. The contracts entered into between respondent and all of its authorized dealers, set forth generally the manner in which the dealer shall buy and sell the products of respondent. Respondent furnishes the dealers with suggested price lists at which the dealers are to sell its products, and the dealers sell said products to the consuming public at the prices suggested by the respondent. The retail prices fixed by respondent are predicated on an advertised f. o. b. price, usually at its factories, plus additional charges for transportation to its retail dealers, plus the cost of certain equipment such as bumpers, bumper guards, spare tires, and other necessary accessories and similar material necessary for the proper operation of the vehicle, which vary in accordance with the model or type of car delivered. Generally, or frequently, taxes, advertising assessments, handling charges, and conditioning charges are added to the advertised retail price. All of these charges are added to the advertised f. o. b. or factory delivered price of each vehicle sold by said dealers. The actual delivered price of respondent's automobiles to retail purchasers is, therefore, far in excess of respondent's advertised f. o. b. price at a designated point, plus actual transportation cost to place of sale and delivery.

PAR. 4. Respondent, for the purpose of promoting the sales of its passenger motor vehicles, conducts and has conducted a nation-wide advertising campaign in newspapers, magazines, price-lists, radio broadcasts, and other advertising media, whereby, it describes and illustrates its products. Accompanying these illustrations or descriptions, it features, usually in large numerals, the designated f. o. b. price of the car so illustrated or described, in such a way as to convey or create the impression in the minds of the purchasing public that fully equipped cars so illustrated or described may be purchased complete and ready for operation at the said f. o. b. or delivery point for the prices so designated and featured, or at other and distant points for the designated and featured prices plus actual cost of transportation thereto.

In truth and in fact, the passenger motor vehicles described and illustrated in connection with, or in immediate proximity to, the featured f. o. b. prices are not the motor vehicles usually and commonly sold by respondent's dealers for the featured prices, and generally the said featured prices are the prices charged by respondent's dealers for respondent's less expensive cars. The cars so described or illustrated in respondent's advertisements and price lists cannot be purchased at retail for the prices featured in said advertisements or at the f. o. b. or delivery point named therein, or at the ultimate destination plus actual freight or transportation charges thereon, without the payment of additional charges for added items, such as bumpers, bumper guards, spare tire, tube or tire lock, and other accessories constituting part of what the general public understands to be a complete car ready for operation, as illustrated or described by the respondent, for sale at a designated point at a definite price. In addition to these extra charges, there are generally, or frequently, added, further and additional charges to retail purchasers, such as taxes, advertising, handling, and conditioning. In some instances, where statements concerning these extra charges appear in respondent's advertisements, such statements are printed in such fine print as to be almost totally obscured by the larger type or figures featuring the f. o. b. price.

PAR. 5. The record contains numerous specific instances where the price stated in the advertisement was not the true price of the car illustrated or described, either at the factory or at the point of delivery. The following instances are typical illustrations of respondent's practices as hereinbefore described.

An advertisement of respondent illustrates the Ford V-8 cabriolet for the featured price of $505 in large figures, accompanied by the legend in small letters, "and up, F.O.B. Detroit." The car illustrated in this advertisement, as shown by respondent's price list, was sold to the purchasing public at Detroit for $653.60, or $148.60 more than the price featured. At the time this advertisement was issued none of respondent's cars was sold at retail in Detroit for the featured price of $505; the cheapest of its cars was sold at retail for $566.38, and the actual selling price of the car illustrated in this advertisement was built up as follows:

List price f. o. b. Detroit	$590.00
Standard group accessories	31.50
Delivery charge	4.00
Conditioning and handling	9.00
Approximate Federal tax	19.10
Total selling price at Detroit	[1] 653.60

[1] Plus State taxes.

In another of respondent's advertisements is featured a DeLuxe Fordor Sedan, and in large figures adjacent thereto appears the price of $495 accompanied by a legend in fine print reading "and up f. o. b. Detroit." This car was sold to the public in Detroit for $712.03, or for a price of $217.03 more than the price advertised. The actual selling price of the car so illustrated is shown by respondent's price list to be built up as follows:

List price f. o. b. Detroit	$635.00
Delivery charge at Detroit	4.00
Standard group accessories	31.50
Conditioning and handling	9.00
White side wall tires	12.24
Approximate Federal taxes	20.29
Retail selling price of car illustrated, exclusive of State taxes	712.03

In another of respondent's advertisements a Tudor Touring Sedan is illustrated and a price of $510 is featured in large figures on the face of the advertisement adjacent to the illustration, followed by the fine print legend, "and up Detroit standard accessory group including bumpers and spare tire extra." Respondent's price list shows that this car was sold to the public in Detroit for the sum of $667.67, being $157.67 more than the price featured, without considering the State tax, which was also added to the purchase price.

In another of respondent's advertisements a DeLuxe Fordor Touring Sedan is illustrated, and in large figures the price is stated as $480, and immediately following, in fine print, is the legend, "base at Dearborn plant—taxes, delivery and handling, bumpers, spare tire and accessories additional." Respondent's price list shows that this car was not sold to the public in Detroit for $480, as featured in said advertisement, but was sold for $757.46 built up as follows:

List price of car illustrated f. o. b. Detroit	$665.00
Standard group accessories, including bumpers and spare tire	50.50
Delivery charge	4.00
Conditioning and handling	18.00
Approximate Federal taxes	19.96
Total selling price at Detroit, not including State taxes	757.46

Respondent's advertisement in the March 30, 1939, issue of the Washington D. C. "Star" illustrates a "Mercury 8" Sedan-Coupe and the Detroit delivered price is featured in large figures as $934. Below, in small type, it is stated that State and Federal taxes are extra. The car thus featured was not sold in Washington, D. C., for the listed price, but was sold by respondent's dealers to a retail buyer for $1,078.60, being $144.60 more than the advertised price. Of this extra amount, $46.25 is for transportation to Washington, which is a proper charge, assuming that sum was spent for transportation. Included in the additional amount is a charge of $24.40 for Federal taxes, $23.95 for District of Columbia business privilege taxes, and $50 to cover over allowance on used cars.

PAR. 6. The advertisements set forth in paragraph 5 hereof, and numerous other advertisements of respondent of a similar nature and import, when compared with the price lists issued by respondent at the time said advertisements appeared, and with the prices actually charged by its authorized agents at the time mentioned, show that respondent's pricing practices were misleading and deceptive, for the reason that the prices stated in such advertisements were not, in fact, the prices at which the various cars illustrated or described were sold to the public, and the explanatory matter appearing in said advertisements was either inadequate or so inconspicuous as to be of no value in removing or curing the inherent deceptive tendencies present in respondent's advertisements. In some instances the pictorial illustrations appearing in the advertisement were of a higher-priced car, and shown in conjunction with the price of a cheaper car, and the words, "and up" were coupled with the price quoted, thus conveying the false impression that the car pictured was obtainable at the price featured, and that more expensive models were available at a higher price.

The testimony shows that persons reading respondent's advertisements would expect to obtain the cars illustrated for the prices emphasized in large figures, at the place of manufacture, plus actual transportation charges if purchased at some other place; that they would expect the cars to be equipped exactly as shown in the advertisements, and that the explanatory matter appearing in the advertisements escaped their attention.

Respondent's advertisements created in the minds of the purchasing public the impression that the prices charged for its cars were much less than the prices at which they could in fact be obtained, and as a result, persons who might not otherwise have considered purchasing the type of car so advertised, visited the show-rooms of respondent's authorized dealers and in some instances purchased the advertised cars at the prices hereinbefore set forth, which were much higher than the prices stated in respondent's advertisements.

PAR. 7. The acts, practices, and methods of respondent, as herein set forth, had the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the belief that respondent's passenger motor vehicles could be purchased at prices much less than the prices at which they were actually obtainable, and as a result of such mistaken and erroneous belief, a substantial portion of the purchasing public were induced to visit respondent's authorized dealers and to purchase respondent's passenger motor vehicles, with the result that trade was unfairly diverted to respondent from its competitors who truthfully advertise and represent the prices of their passenger motor vehicles.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of the competitors of respondent, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony, and other evidence introduced before Wm. W. Sheppard, and John P. Bramhall, duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, the report of the trial examiners thereon and exceptions thereto, briefs filed on behalf of the Commission by James M. Hammond, counsel for the Commission, and by Bodman, Longley, Bogle, Middleton & Farley, counsel for the respondent; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Ford Motor Co., a corporation, its officers, directors, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its passenger motor vehicles in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing as the price of any passenger motor vehicle, in or through the quotation of prices in connection with illustrations or descriptions of passenger motor vehicles, or otherwise, in any advertisement promoting the sale of such passenger motor vehicles at retail, any price other than the true retail price of said passenger motor vehicles at the place designated for their sale, such retail price to include all charges for any equipment or accessories illustrated or described in such advertisement, or necessary to the operation of such motor vehicle, or customarily included as standard equipment, and any charge or charges whatsoever for advertising, delivery, handling, or for any similar or like purpose, or for any other purpose except transportation charges where the passenger motor vehicle so advertised is transported from the point where advertised for sale to another or different point for delivery to a retail purchaser. The provisions of this subparagraph 1 are subject to the provisions of subparagraph 3 hereof with respect to taxes.

2. Using a designated price in any advertisement illustrating a passenger motor vehicle offered for sale at retail, unless the true retail price as defined in subparagraphs 1 and 3 hereof, of the passenger motor vehicle illustrated is set out in juxtaposition thereto, in words or figures equal in size and conspicuousness to the words or figures designating the price of any other passenger motor vehicle referred to in said advertisement.

3. Advertising passenger motor vehicles for sale at retail at a designated price, unless the said retail price includes all Federal, State and local taxes, or unless the advertisement clearly and legibly states, immediately adjacent to the price quoted, that the price is subject to additional charges for Federal, State, or local taxes, or any of them as the case may be.

4. Advertising or representing a passenger motor vehicle as being for sale at retail at a designated price, unless such passenger motor vehicle is, in fact, made available and sold to the public at the point specified for the price stated, or at a point distant therefrom, for the price stated plus transportation charges thereto. This paragraph is subject to the provisions of subparagraph 3 hereof regarding taxes.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail, the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

SNAP-ON TOOLS CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4429. Complaint, Dec. 20, 1940—Decision, Oct. 20, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture of tools and in the competitive interstate sale and distribution thereof—

Sold its said products to members of the public in accordance with sales plans outlined to its branch office managers in sales posters and circular letters, which involved games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, a typical method suggested and advocated by contemplating a "Tool Club" of at least 100 members each of whom was to pay $1.00 weekly for not to exceed 10 weeks, under a program pursuant to which, and in accordance with weekly drawings, the first lucky member received his set for $1.00, the second for $2.00, etc., each member, at the end of the 10 weeks, being entitled to a $10.00 set and eligible to participate in a drawing for grand prizes, and under which, or other similar plans, the amount paid and the fact as to which members received the final prizes were determined wholly by lot or chance, and there was involved a game of chance to procure articles at much less than their normal retail prices, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government and in violation of criminal laws, and in competition with many who, unwilling to adopt and use said or any methods involving chance, or contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With the result that many persons were attracted by its said sales plans and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy its merchandise in preference to that of competitors who do not use such methods, and substantial trade in commerce was unfairly diverted to it from its said competitors, to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Mr. D. C. Daniel for the Commission.

Mr. Harry C. Alberts, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Snap-On Tools Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Snap-On Tools Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business and a manufacturing plant located at Eightieth Street and Twenty-eighth Avenue, Kenosha, Wis. Respondent maintains a second manufacturing plant at Mount Carmel, Ill., and branch offices in various States of the United States. Respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of tools and in the sale and distribution thereof to the public. Respondent causes, and has caused, said merchandise when sold to be transported from its aforesaid places of business to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than the States in which said places of business are located and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in said merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business respondent is, and has been, in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells, and has sold, its merchandise to members of the public in accordance with a sales plan which involves a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Respondent has supplied the managers of its said branch offices with sales posters and circular letters outlining the sales plans or methods by means of which said merchandise was to be, and has been, sold and distributed to members of the purchasing public. The sales plan or method as suggested and advocated by respondent is substantially as follows:

The sales plan or method is described as a "Tool Club." Each club has a minimum of 100 members. Each member of the club pays $1 each week for a period not to exceed 10 weeks. At the end of the first week a drawing is held and the member whose name or number is drawn receives a $10 set of tools for the $1 paid. Each succeeding week the same procedure is followed, and the member whose name is drawn receives a set of tools for the amount paid up until the time of such drawing. Thus one member receives a set of said tools for $1, another for $2, another for $3, and so on to the end of the fixed period. At the end of such period each member of the club is entitled to and receives a $10 set of said tools. Also at the end of the 10 weeks a drawing is held for grand prizes in which drawing all of the members of the club are eligible to participate. Thus the amount which an ultimate purchaser pays for a set of said tools and the fact as to which club members receive the final prizes are determined wholly by a lot or chance.

Respondent uses, and has used, various club plans or methods in the sale and distribution of its merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, but all of said plans or methods are similar to the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Respondent's merchandise is being and has been sold and distributed to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans or methods. Respondent thus conducts lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plans or methods in the sale of its merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise at prices much less than the normal retail prices thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with respondent as above alleged are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any methods involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other methods that are contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise and the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert substantial trade, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to the respondent, from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on December 20, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Snap-On Tools Corporation, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission by order entered herein granted respondent's request for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Snap-On Tools Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business and a manufacturing plant located at Eightieth Street and Twenty-eighth Avenue, Kenosha, Wis. Respondent maintains a second manufacturing plant at Mount Carmel, Ill., and branch offices in various States of the United States. Respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of tools and in the sale and distribution thereof to the public. Respondent causes, and has caused, said merchandise when sold to be transported from its aforesaid places of business to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than the States in which said places of business are located and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, a course of trade by said respondent in said merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business respondent is, and has been, in competition with other corporations and with individual and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells, and has sold, its merchandise to members of the public in accordance with a sales plan which involves a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme. Respondent has supplied the managers of its said branch offices with sales posters and circular letters outlining the sales plans or methods by means of which said merchandise was to be, and has been, sold and distributed to members of the purchasing public. The sales plan or method as suggested and advocated by respondent is substantially as follows:

The sales plan or method is described as a "Tool Club." Each club has a minimum of 100 members. Each member of the club pays $1 each week for a period not to exceed 10 weeks. At the end of the first week a drawing is held and the member whose name or number is drawn receives a $10 set of tools for the $1 paid. Each succeeding week the same procedure is followed, and the member whose name is drawn receives a set of tools for the amount paid up until the time of such drawing. Thus one member receives a set of said tools for $1, another for $2, another for $3, and so on to the end of the fixed period. At the end of such period each member of the club is entitled to and receives a $10 set of said tools. Also at the end of the 10 weeks a drawing is held for grand prizes in which drawing all of the members of the club are eligible to participate. Thus the amount which an ultimate purchaser pays for a set of said tools and the fact as to which club members receive the final prizes are determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent uses, and has used, various club plans or methods in the sale and distribution of its merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, but all of said plans or methods are similar to the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Respondent's merchandise is being and has been sold and distributed to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan or methods. Respondent thus conducts lotteries in the sale of its merchandise in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plans or methods in the sale of its merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise at prices much less than the normal retail prices thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with respondent as above found are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any methods involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other methods that are contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its merchandise and the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert substantial trade in said commerce to the respondent, from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in said commerce.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding, having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the substitute answer of the respondent in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Snap-On Tools Corporation, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of tools or any other merchandise in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing tools or any other merchandise by the use of any sales plan, by means of which said tools or other merchandise are sold or distributed to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others any sales plan together with assortments of tools or other merchandise, which said sales plan is to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said tools or other merchandise to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

LUX-VISEL, INC., TRADING AS THE LUX COMPANY AND SUPERLUX

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4577. Complaint, Aug. 25, 1941—Decision, Oct. 20, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture of an electric water heater for use in the home, shop, or office, consisting essentially of a small aluminum disc together with a wire heating element, designated variously by it as the "Magic Disc," "Super-Lux Heater," and the "Lux," and in interstate sale and distribution of its said product through agents employed on a commission basis, and also through salesmen to whom it sold large number outright for resale;

In advertisements in newspapers and periodicals soliciting inquiries as to its product and its plans of employment and sale, and in letters, circulars, and other follow-up literature sent in response to such advertisements, and in which were included purported quotations from testimonials—

(a) Represented and implied to agents and salesmen and to the purchasing public that its said electric water heater operated on a new principle, heated water instantly, and was capable of heating substantial quantities of water, such as required for bathing, cooking, the family laundry, and for every home use, in a shorter time than would be required by gas, coal, or oil, and at only a fraction of the cost, and that use thereof was capable of saving up to 75 percent of gas bills;

Facts being said heater operated on the principle used for many years by other manufacturers of similar electric water heaters, was incapable of heating water in the quantities claimed in a shorter time than that required by gas, coal, or oil, and at a fraction of their cost, and was incapable of effecting any substantial reduction in gas bills; and (b) Represented that said heater was safe and that it had been tested and approved by the American Public Service Testing System, which said corporation implied to be a duly qualified testing laboratory having facilities and competent employees to make such tests;

Facts being said heater was not entirely safe when used under recommended conditions, since hazards of electric shock and fire were present, and the American Public Service Testing System was not in existence at the time and had never had laboratory facilities or competent employees necessary to make efficient tests of such devices;

With effect of misleading and deceiving purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, and of causing a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such belief, to purchase substantial quantities of its said product:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Merle P. Lyon for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Lux-Visel, Inc., a corporation trading and doing business under the names The Lux Co. and Superlux, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Lux-Visel, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Indiana, with its principal office and place of business located at 415 West Franklin Street, in the city of Elkhart, State of Indiana. The respondent trades and does business under the names The Lux Co. and Superlux.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of an electric water heater designated variously as the "Magic Disc," the "Super-Lux Heater," and the "Lux." Respondent's said heater consists essentially of a small aluminum disc, combined with a wire heating element designed for use in the home, shop, or office in heating water. Respondent has caused and now causes its said product, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Indiana to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of Indiana, and in the District of Columbia. The respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said electric water heaters in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, respondent employs agents to sell some of its said water heaters on a commission basis. Respondent also sells a large number of its heaters outright to salesmen, to be resold by said salesmen throughout the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Under one plan the agents or salesmen take orders for respondent's heaters, which orders are transmitted to and filled by the respondent. Under the other plan, the salesmen purchase the heaters from the respondent and resell them to the public at a profit. For the purpose of obtaining the services of said agents and salesmen, and for the purpose of promoting the sale of its heaters to said salesmen, respondent publishes advertisements in newspapers, periodicals, and magazines soliciting inquiries as to its product and as to its plans of employment and sale. When an inquiry is received by the respondent indicating an interest on the part of a person in becoming a representative for the sale of respondent's said product, respondent sends to such person letters, circulars, and other "follow-up" literature. In said advertisements, letters, circulars, and other "follow-up" literature, many false and misleading statements and representations are made by the respondent in describing its said water heater and the qualities thereof. Among and typical of the statements and representations so made and circulated by the respondent are the following:

Hot water from your light socket. Amazing new way.

Amazing new principle. Makes cold water almost instantly seething, steaming, bubbling hot.

The Lux works on a new principle.

This MAGIC-DISC heats water instantly!

Sizzling, Steaming, Hot water in a fraction of the time required by gas or coal! Slip the LUX into dishpan or tub of water—plug in nearest light socket and presto!—it boils. New principle . . .

What strange element is hidden in this mysterious magic disc which makes people gasp when they see it placed in a pan of water—dish, a boiler or tub—and amazingly produces boiling, sizzling, steaming hot water at a fraction of the cost required by gas, coal or oil.

CUTS GAS BILL 75%

I use "The Lux" constantly and could not get along now without it. As well as heating my water so quickly, it has slashed my gas bill 75%—Mrs. Aldrich.

The LUX has been awarded the Certificate of Merit by the American Public Service Testing System.

The LUX has been awarded the FIRST CLASS SEAL OF APPROVAL by the American Public Service Testing System. They have tested the LUX and found it to be safe, sanitary, fast, dependable and economical.

The amazing new Super-Lux Double-Action Water Heater has completely revolutionized home water heating for every purpose—bathing, shaving, laundering, dishwashing, filling hot water bags, cooking, house-cleaning and every other domestic chore in which hot water is needed.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents and implies to prospective agents and salesmen and to the purchasing public that its said electric water heater operates on a new principle; that it heats water instantly; that it is capable of heating substantial quantities of water such as are required for bathing, cooking, and family laundry, and for every home use, in a shorter time than would be required by gas, coal, or oil, and at only a fraction of the cost; that the use of the said heater is capable of saving up to 75 percent of gas bills; that the said heater is safe, and that it has been tested and approved by the American Public Service Testing System, which respondent impliedly represents to be a duly qualified testing laboratory having facilities and competent employees to make such tests.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations and implications are grossly exaggerated, are false and misleading. In truth and in fact, the respondent's said heater is not based on a new principle. It operates, in fact, on the same principle that has for many years been used by other manufacturers of similar electric water heaters. It is incapable of heating substantial quantities of water such as are needed for use in the home in a shorter time than that required by gas, coal, or oil. It cannot be operated at only a fraction of the cost of gas, coal, or oil, and it is incapable of effecting a 75 percent reduction in gas bills or any other substantial reduction in gas or other fuel bills. The said heater is not, in fact, entirely safe when used under the conditions recommended by the respondent, as hazards of electric shock and fire are present. The American Public Service Testing System, does not exist as a business enterprise at this time, and at no time did it have laboratory facilities or competent employees necessary to make efficient tests of such devices as the respondent's electric water heater.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading statements and representations, as aforesaid, has had, and now has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and has caused, and now causes, a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said product.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORTS, FINDING AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 25, 1941, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Lux-Visel, Inc., a corporation, trading and doing business under the names The Lux Company and Superlux, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On October 8, 1941, the respondent filed its answer, in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Lux-Visel, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Indiana, with its principal office and place of business located at 415 West Franklin Street, in the city of Elkhart, State of Indiana. The respondent trades and does business under the names The Lux Company and Superlux.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, respondent employs agents to sell some of its said water heaters on a commission basis. Respondent also sells a large number of its heaters outright to salesmen, to be resold by said salesmen throughout the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Under one plan, the agents or salesmen take orders for respondent's heaters, which orders are transmitted to and filled by the respondent. Under the other plan, the salesmen purchase the heaters from the respondent and resell them to the public at a profit. For the purpose of obtaining the services of said agents and salesmen, and for the purpose of promoting the sale of its heaters to said salesmen, respondent publishes advertisements in newspapers, periodicals and magazines soliciting inquiries as to its product and as to its plans of employment and sale. When an inquiry is received by the respondent indicating an interest on the part of a person in becoming a representative for the sale of respondent's said product, respondent sends to such person letters, circulars, and other "follow-up" literature. In said advertisements, letters, circulars, and other "follow-up" literature, many false and misleading statements and representations are made by the respondent in describing its said water heater and the qualities thereof. PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents and implies to prospective agents and salesmen and to the purchasing public that its said electric water heater operates on a new principle; that it heats water instantly; that it is capable of heating substantial quantities of water such as are required for bathing, cooking, the family laundry, and for every home use, in a shorter time than would be required by gas, coal, or oil, and at only a fraction of the cost; that the use of the said heater is capable of saving up to 75 percent of gas bills; that the said heater is safe, and that it has been tested and approved by the American Public Service Testing System, which respondent impliedly represents to be a duly qualified testing laboratory having facilities and competent employees to make such tests.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Lux-Visel, Inc., a corporation, trading and doing business under the names The Lux Company and

5. That said heater is safe.

6. That said heater has been tested and approved by the American Public Service Testing System.

7. That said heater has been subjected to any tests at all, unless it has in fact been subjected to scientific tests by a reputable recognized testing laboratory properly equipped and staffed for the testing of such products.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

WILLIAM B. BARTLETT, TRADING AS CHAMPION BATTERY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4578. Complaint, Aug. 27, 1941—Decision, Oct. 20, 1941

Where a corporation long engaged, under a corporate name including the word "champion," in the manufacture and in the interstate sale and distribution of spark plugs and other mechanical apparatus, had built up a valuable good will in aforesaid name as applied thereto, and members of the purchasing public had, through long usage, come to identify electrical and other mechanical apparatus and accessories bearing said name as products of aforesaid well and favorably known company, and manifested a preference therefor; and

Thereafter an individual engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of a so-called sales stimulator plan which included certificates and electric lanterns with batteries, and bulbs for use in connection therewith, and in soliciting sale of and selling his said plan under a method pursuant to which he took from the retailer a form of written order or contract by which latter ordered a certain number of certificates, depositing with said individual's agent a portion of the purchase price, balance to be paid upon delivery, and under which it was further provided that when the certificate was returned for redemption to the dealer by the customer it must be accompanied by a "trial order" for six Champion "heavy duty" batteries, at 10 cents each, and two bulbs at 10 cents each, the dealer deducting and retaining, as a refund for the certificate purchased, the sum of 10 cents and an additional 5 cents as a commission, and forwarding to said individual the 65 cent balance, whereupon latter was to send customer lantern, bulbs, and batteries—

(a) Made use of word "Champion" in trade name and on said lanterns and on labels of said batteries, to induce the erroneous belief that his business was connected with, and his products manufactured by or purchased from, aforesaid long, well, and favorably known corporation, and thereby caused many members of the public to purchase his said products in such belief, and placed in the hands of retailers, a means whereby the purchasing public was misled and deceived;

(b) Represented, in many instances, in soliciting dealers that they were purchasing outright a certain number of lanterns for 10 cents each, making no mention of the certificates whatsoever, while representing in other instances that he would redeem each of such certificates through the dealer without any further cost or obligation by furnishing to the latter for delivery to each customer who held a certificate "One nationally advertised Champion 'Red Guard' electric lantern";

Facts being that when contract, which called for a specified number of certificates and not lanterns, at 10 cents each, was presented to dealer, his signature was secured before he was given opportunity carefully to read the same; letters acknowledging receipts of orders were worded so as to imply an outright purchase, with dealer to receive a certain number of lanterns when shipment was made of certificates and advertising matter called for by the contract; the material was packed in container much larger than necessary and sufficiently large to package the number of lanterns expected by dealers, who did not discover that the packages sent contained certificates, advertising material, waste paper, and excelsior, and no lanterns, or only a few, until after payment of full balance of purchase price; and said individual did not redeem certificates by furnishing lanterns for delivery to dealer's customer-holders of certificates, but required dealer with each certificate returned for redemption, to secure from customer aforesaid purchase order for batteries and bulbs, and to forward him 65 cents before delivering lantern, batteries, and bulbs to customer;

(c) Furnished to the dealer purchasing said plan, certain advertising matter for display and distribution, which represented that the pictured lantern had a retail value of $1.29 and would be given by the dealer without charge to the customer upon the purchase of batteries, and bulbs therefor, at the regular price;

Facts being the lantern depicted did not have such value, never sold for said sum, and was not given by dealers without charge since the price charged by said individual for such batteries and bulbs was far in excess of their customary retail value and was sufficient to cover also the fair retail value of the lantern; and

(d) Represented, further, through his agents and salesmen, to the customer dealers, that at the end of the 3-months' period mentioned in the contract any and all lanterns remaining in customer dealer's hands would be redeemed by said individual at the price paid therefor, and that such dealers were to have the right to exclusive distribution of such lanterns in certain specified territories;

Facts being such remaining lanterns were not redeemed by said individual at any price, and said individual entered into contracts with other persons for distribution of lanterns in the same territory in which dealers had theretofore been granted such "exclusive rights";

With effect of leading a substantial number of retail merchants and members of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that aforesaid representations were true, and of causing them, because of such belief, to purchase his certificates and to execute contract in connection therewith:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Maurice C. Pearce for the Commission.

Mr. Henry Junge, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that William B. Bartlett, individually and trading as Champion Battery Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, William B. Bartlett, is an individual doing business under the trade name of Champion Battery Co., with his office and principal place of business located at 549 West Washington Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and since June 1940 has been, engaged in the business of offering for sale, selling, and distributing in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to retail dealers a certain so-called sales stimulator plan, including in connection therewith the sale and distribution of certain certificates and various articles of merchandise which are used in connection with putting his plan into operation and effect. Respondent causes such certificates and articles of merchandise, including electric lanterns, batteries, and bulbs used in connection with the operation of his so-called sales stimulator plan, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in the sale and distribution of said so-called sales stimulator plan and articles of merchandise used in connection with the operation of the same in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent, through his agents and salesmen, solicits and sells his so-called sales stimulator plan to retail dealers located in the various States of the United States. Respondent, in order to sell his so-called sales stimulator plan and said articles of merchandise, takes from the dealer a form of written order or contract in which the dealer orders a certain number of certificates, for which he deposits at the time with the agent of the respondent a portion of the purchase price, the balance to be paid upon delivery. The dealer is to distribute such certificates among his customers and prospective customers upon such basis as he may choose. The contract executed by the dealer provides that when the certificate is returned for redemption to the dealer by the customer it must be accompanied by a "trial order" for six Champion "heavy duty" batteries at 10 cents each and two bulbs at 10 cents each, and that the dealer is to deduct and retain as a refund for the certificate purchased the sum of 10 cents and an additional sum of 5 cents as a commission and must forward to the respondent the balance totaling 65 cents, whereupon the respondent is to send the customer the lantern, bulbs, and batteries. Respondent places the word "Champion" upon said lanterns and upon the labels of said batteries.

PAR. 3. Respondent, through his salesmen and agents, makes many false and misleading statements and representations with respect to his so-called sales stimulator plan. In soliciting dealers, and with a view to making sales contracts and increasing his business, respondent represents in some instances to prospective customer-dealers that they are purchasing outright a certain number of lanterns for the price of 10 cents each and no mention is made of the certificates whatsoever. In other instances respondent represents that he will redeem each of these certificates through the dealer without any further cost or obligation on the part of the dealer or customer by furnishing to the dealer for delivery to each customer who is the holder of a certificate "One nationally advertised Champion 'Red Guard' electric lantern." In truth and in fact the contract or order entered into by the dealer calls for the specified number of certificates at the price of 10 cents each instead of the number of lanterns the dealers are led to believe, and believe, they are purchasing. The contract is presented to the dealer and his signature secured before he is given an opportunity carefully to read the same, and a deposit is collected from him as a part of the purchase price for the plan, the balance to be paid upon the delivery of the order.

Respondent's letter to the customer-dealers acknowledging receipt of the order is worded so as to infer that the customer-dealers have made an outright purchase and will receive a certain number of lanterns. Thereafter, when respondent ships the order of certificates and advertising matter actually called for by the contract or order, signed by the customer-dealer, the material is packed in a container much larger than is necessary to package such certificates and advertising matter and large enough to package the number of lanterns the customer-dealer expects to receive. The customer-dealers do not discover that the package contains certificates, advertising material, waste paper, and excelsior and no, or only a few, lanterns until they have paid the full balance of the purchase price. In truth and in fact, respondent does not redeem these certificates through the dealer by furnishing lanterns to the dealer for delivery to the customers who are holders of certificates. The dealer, when a certificate is returned for redemption, is required to secure from such customer a purchase order for batteries and bulbs, together with a remittance of 80 cents as the purchase price thereof, and to forward the sum of 65 cents to the respondent, before the lantern, batteries, and bulbs are delivered to the customer by the respondent.

Respondent furnishes the dealer purchasing said plan with certain advertising matter to be displayed and distributed by the dealer which represents that the lantern pictured and described in such advertising matter has a retail value of $1.29 and that it will be given by the dealer without charge to customers upon the purchase by such customers of batteries and bulbs for said lantern at the regular price thereof.

The lantern pictured and described in the advertising matter furnished the dealers by the respondent does not have a retail value of $1.29, nor has said lantern ever sold for such sum; such lantern is not given by the dealers without charge to their customers upon the purchase by such customers of batteries and bulbs at the regular price, as the price charged by the respondent for the batteries and bulbs is far in excess of their usual and customary retail value and is sufficient to cover also the fair retail value for the lantern.

Respondent's agents and salesmen represent to the customer-dealers that at the end of the 3-months' period mentioned in the contract any and all lanterns remaining in the customer-dealer's hands will be redeemed by the respondent at the price paid for them and that such customer-dealers are to have the right to exclusive distribution of such lanterns in certain specified territories.

The lanterns remaining in the customer-dealer's hands at the expiration of the 3-months' period mentioned in the contract are not redeemed by the respondent at the price paid for them nor does the respondent redeem such lanterns at any price. Customer-dealers are not given the right to exclusive distribution of such lanterns in certain specified territories nor does respondent intend or attempt to give such dealer customers exclusive rights to certain territory. Respondent enters into contracts with other persons for distribution of said lanterns in the same locality and territory in which dealers have theretofore been granted "exclusive rights."

PAR. 4. Respondent has caused the word "Champion" to be placed upon said lanterns and upon the labels of said batteries and has used the word "Champion" in said trade name to induce the belief upon the part of the public that respondent's said business is in some manner connected with, and that said products are manufactured by or purchased from the Champion Spark Plug Co.

The Champion Spark Plug Co. is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its factory and principal place of business located at 900 Upton Avenue in the city of Toledo, State of Ohio. The Champion Spark Plug Company is now and for many years last past has been engaged in the manufacture of spark plugs and other mechanical apparatus, and in the sale and distribution of said products throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said products are sold under, and designated by, the trade name "Champion." Said company has built up and enjoys a valuable good will in the word "Champion" as applied to its respective products. Members of the purchasing public have through long usage and over a long period of time identified electrical and other mechanical apparatus and accessories which bear the name "Champion" as the products of the well and favorably known Champion Spark Plug Co. and have manifested a preference for such "Champion" products.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondent of the word "Champion" in its trade name and as a mark or brand for his said products is confusing, misleading, and deceptive and causes many members of the purchasing public to believe that respondent's said business is connected with, and that said products are manufactured by or purchased from, the Champion Spark Plug Co. and causes them to purchase said products as a result of said belief. In truth and in fact, respondent's business is not in any manner connected with, and said products are not manufactured by or secured from, said Champion Spark Plug Co.

The use of the word "Champion" as a mark or brand on said products places in the hands of retailers a means and instrumentality whereby the purchasing public is misled and deceived.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading representations has had the capacity and tendency to and does lead a substantial number of retail merchants into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid representations made by the respondent and his representatives are true, and to cause them, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's certificates and to execute the contract in connection therewith.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 27, 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, William B. Bartlett, individually and trading as Champion Battery Co., charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. The respondent subsequently filed his answer in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, William B. Bartlett, is an individual doing business under the trade name of Champion Battery Co. with his office and principal place of business located at 549 West Washington Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now, and since June 1940 has been, engaged in the business of offering for sale, selling and distributing in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to retail dealers a certain so-called sales stimulator plan, including in connection therewith the sale and distribution of certain certificates and various articles of merchandise which are used in connection with putting his plan into operation and effect. Respondent causes such certificates and articles of merchandise, including electric lanterns, batteries, and bulbs used in connection with the operation of his so-called sales stimulator plan when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in the sale and distribution of said so-called sales stimulator plan and articles of merchandise used in connection with the operation of the same in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent, through his agents and salesmen, solicits and sells his so-called sales stimulator plan to retail dealers located in the various States of the United States. Respondent, in order to sell his so-called sales stimulator plan and article of merchandise, takes from the dealer a form of written order or contract in which the dealer orders a certain number of certificates, for which he deposits at the time with the agent of the respondent a portion of the purchase price, the balance to be paid upon delivery. The dealer is to distribute such certificates among his customers and prospective customers upon such basis as he may choose. The contract executed by the dealer provides that when the certificate is returned for redemption to the dealer by the customer it must be accompanied by a "trial order" for six Champion "heavy duty" batteries at 10 cents each and two bulbs at 10 cents each, and that the dealer is to deduct and retain as a refund for the certificate purchased the sum of 10 cents and an additional sum of 5 cents as a commission and must forward to the respondent the balance totalling 65 cents, whereupon the respondent is to send the customer the lantern, bulbs, and batteries. Respondent places the word "Champion" upon said lanterns and upon the labels of said batteries.

PAR. 3. Respondent, through his salesmen and agents, makes many false and misleading statements and representations with respect to his so-called sales stimulator plan. In soliciting dealers, and with a view to making sales contracts and increasing his business, respondent represents in some instances to prospective customer-dealers that they are purchasing outright a certain number of lanterns for the price of 10 cents each and no mention is made of the certificate whatsoever. In other instances respondent represents that he will redeem each of these certificates through the dealer without any further cost or obligation on the part of the dealer or customer by furnishing to the dealer for delivery to each customer who is the holder of a certificate "One nationally advertised Champion 'Red Guard' electric lantern." In truth and in fact the contract or order entered into by the dealer calls for the specified number of certificates at the price of 10 cents each instead of the number of lanterns the dealers are led to believe, and believe, they are purchasing. The contract is presented to the dealer and his signature secured before he is given an opportunity carefully to read the same, and a deposit is collected from him as a part of the purchase price for the plan, the balance to be paid upon the delivery of the order.

Respondent's letter to the customer-dealers acknowledging receipt of the order is worded so as to infer that the customer-dealers have made an outright purchase and will receive a certain number of lanterns. Thereafter, when respondent ships the order of certificates and advertising matter actually called for by the contract or order, signed by the customer-dealer, the material is packed in a container much larger than is necessary to package such certificates and advertising matter and large enough to package the number of lanterns the customer-dealer expects to receive. The customer-dealers, do not discover that the package contains certificates, advertising material, waste paper, and excelsior and no, or only a few, lanterns until they have paid the full balance of the purchase price. In truth and in fact, respondent does not redeem these certificates through the dealer by furnishing lanterns to the dealer for delivery to the customers who are holders of certificates. The dealer, when a certificate is returned for redemption, is required to secure from such customer a purchase order for batteries and bulbs, together with a remittance of 80 cents as the purchase price thereof, and to forward the sum of 65 cents to the respondent, before the lantern, batteries, and bulbs are delivered to the customer by the respondent.

Respondent furnishes the dealer purchasing said plan with certain advertising matter to be displayed and distributed by the dealer which represents that the lantern pictured and described in such advertising matter has a retail value of $1.29 and that it will be given by the dealer without charge to customers upon the purchase by such customers of batteries and bulbs for said lantern at the regular price thereof.

The lantern pictured and described in the advertising matter furnished the dealers by the respondent does not have a retail value of $1.29 nor has said lantern ever sold for such sum; said lantern is not given by the dealers without charge to their customers upon the purchase by such customers of batteries and bulbs at the regular price, as the price charged by the respondent for the batteries and bulbs is far in excess of their usual and customary retail value and is sufficient to cover also the fair retail value of the lantern.

Respondent's agents and salesmen represent to the customer-dealers that at the end of the 3-months' period mentioned in the contract any and all lanterns remaining in the customer-dealer's hands will be redeemed by the respondent at the price paid for them and that such customer-dealers are to have the right to exclusive distribution of such lanterns in certain specified territories.

The lanterns remaining in the customer-dealer's hands at the expiration of the 3-months' period mentioned in the contract are not redeemed by the respondent at the price paid for them nor does the respondent redeem such lanterns at any price. Customer-dealers are not given the right to exclusive distribution of such lanterns in certain specified territories nor does respondent intend or attempt to give such customer-dealers exclusive rights to certain territory. Respondent enters into contracts with other persons for distribution of said lanterns in the same locality and territory in which dealers have heretofore been granted "exclusive rights."

PAR. 4. Respondent has caused the word "Champion" to be placed upon said lanterns and upon the labels of said batteries and has used the word "Champion" in said trade name to induce the belief upon the part of the public that respondent's business is in some manner connected with, and that said products are manufactured by or purchased from, the Champion Spark Plug Co.

Conclusion

The Champion Spark Plug Co. is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its factory and principal place of business located at 900 Upton Avenue in the city of Toledo, State of Ohio. The Champion Spark Plug Co. is now and for many years last past has been engaged in the manufacture of spark plugs and other mechanical apparatus, and in the sale and distribution of said products, throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said products are sold under, and designated by, the trade name "Champion." Said company has built up and enjoys a valuable good will in the word "Champion" as applied to its respective products. Members of the purchasing public have through long usage and over a long period of time identified electrical and other mechanical apparatus and accessories which bear the name "Champion" as the products of the well and favorably known Champion Spark Plug Co., and have manifested a preference for such "Champion" products.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondent of the word "Champion" in his trade name and as a mark or brand for his products is confusing, misleading, and deceptive, and causes many members of the purchasing public to believe that respondent's business is connected with, and that said products are manufactured by or purchased from, the Champion Spark Plug Company and causes them to purchase said products as a result of said belief. In truth and in fact, respondent's business is not in any manner connected with, and said products are not manufactured by, or purchased from, said Champion Spark Plug Co.

The use of the word "Champion" as a mark or brand on said products places in the hands of retailers a means and instrumentality whereby the purchasing public is misled and deceived.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading representations has had the capacity and tendency to, and does, lead a substantial number of retail merchants and members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid representations made by the respondent and his representatives are true, and to cause them, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's certificates and to execute the contract in connection therewith.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, William B. Bartlett, individually and trading as Champion Battery Co., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of so-called sales stimulator plans, and the certificates and lanterns, batteries and bulbs, or other merchandise used in connection with such plans, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that dealers purchasing respondent's said plan will receive a designated number of lanterns or other articles of merchandise, when in fact the contract for the purchase of such plan provides only that a number of so-called trade certificates will be delivered to the dealer.

2. Representing that respondent will effect the redemption of trade certificates without further cost or obligation to the dealer or the dealer's customer.

3. Representing as the value of respondent's lanterns any amount which is in excess of the usual and customary retail price of such lanterns.

4. Supplying to dealers advertising matter which represents that lanterns furnished by such dealers to their customers are furnished free or without charge.

5. Supplying to dealers advertising matter representing that the prices charged for the batteries and bulbs to be purchased by the dealer's customer in order to receive a lantern are the usual and customary retail prices of such batteries and bulbs.

6. Representing that lanterns remaining in dealers' hands at the termination of said so-called sales stimulator plan will be redeemed by respondent.

7. Representing that respondent's dealers are given the right to exclusive distribution of respondent's products within certain designated territories.

8. Using the word "Champion" to designate or describe respondent's products or otherwise representing that respondent's products are the products of the Champion Spark Plug Co., of Toledo, Ohio.

9. Using the word "Champion" as a part of respondent's trade name or otherwise representing that respondent is connected in any manner with the Champion Spark Plug Co., of Toledo, Ohio.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after the service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answers, a stipulation was entered into by respondents whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by respondents by their attorneys, and W. T. Kelley, chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answers of respondents, and stipulation of facts, said stipulation of facts having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, and being of the opinion that subsection (c) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, has been violated by the respondents, now makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

IN THE MATTER OF

LOUIS KELLER AND WILLIAM CARSKY, INDIVIDUALLY AND TRADING AS CASEY CONCESSION COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3413. Complaint, May 10, 1938—Decision, Oct. 28, 1941

Where two individuals engaged in the competitive interstate sale and distribution, to operators and concessionaires of moving pictures, moving picture and burlesque theaters, tent shows, medicine shows and circuses, of assortments of candy and other merchandise, such as toy cameras, hosiery, perfume, etc. so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme or game of chance, when sold and distributed to the consuming public, typical assortment being composed of 110 small uniform cartons each containing an equal number of pieces of candy and an additional article of merchandise, some of which had a retail value in excess of the 5 cent charged for the carton—

Sold such assortments to their customers, by whom they were resold to the consuming public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan, and thereby placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries or games of chance in the sale of their products;

With the result that many dealers in and ultimate consumers of candy were attracted by their said method of packing said products and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof, and were thereby induced to purchase such candy in preference to that of their competitors who do not use such methods, and with tendency and capacity to divert to themselves trade and custom from their said competitors and exclude them from the candy trade, lessen competition in such trade and create a monopoly thereof in themselves and in such other distributors as do use such a method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and their competitors, and contrary to established public policy of the United States Government, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. Charles F. Diggs, Mr. John W. Addison, and Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiners.

Mr. Morris A. Haft, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Louis Keller and William Carsky, are individuals doing business as a copartnership under the trade name and style of Casey Concession Co., with their principal office and place of business located at 1132 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill. They are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and other merchandise to operators of and concessionaires with moving picture and burlesque theaters and tent shows, medicine shows, and repertoire companies located at points in the various States of the United States. Respondents also sell their merchandise direct to the consuming public in theaters located in several of the States of the United States. They cause their said products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondents in such candy and other merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are in competition with other partnerships and with corporations and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of candy or other merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to operators of and concessionaires with moving picture and burlesque theaters and medicine shows, tent shows, and repertoire companies, assortments of candy and other merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is composed of a number of packages containing pieces of candy and other articles of merchandise. The said packages of candy each have approximately the same number of pieces of candy therein, but the other articles of merchandise contained in said packages are of varying value. The said packages are identical in appearance and the purchaser of one of said packages cannot ascertain what the other article of merchandise contained therein is, or the value thereof, until after a purchase has been made and the package broken open. The sale of said packages of candy and other articles of merchandise in the manner above described thus constitutes the operation of a lottery scheme, game of chance, or gift enterprise. Respondents sell and distribute various assortments of said candy and other articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plan or method varies in detail, but the above described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

PAR. 3. The customers of respondents resell said assortments to the consuming public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. Respondents have what is commonly referred to as the candy concession in various theaters in several States of the United States, and offer for sale and sell their said products in accordance with the above described sales plan direct to the consuming public in such theaters. The respondents' merchandise is shipped or transported from their place of business to such theaters at their various points of location for resale to the consuming public.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy and other merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure packages of candy and other articles of merchandise of varying value. The use by respondents of said method in the sale of candy and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and which is in violation of criminal laws. The use by respondents of said method has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or to create a monopoly in this, to wit: That the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the candy trade competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondents as above alleged are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondents' said method and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondents in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondents trade and custom from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful, to lessen competition in said candy trade, to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondents, and in such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by respondents has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use the said method or an equivalent method.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of their business as hereinabove related, respondents cause and have caused various false, deceptive, and misleading statements or representations concerning their said candy to appear in advertising matter distributed or caused to be distributed by respondents, of which the following statements or representations are examples but are not all-inclusive:

Hawaiian Health Confection—Rich in Vitamin "D."

The candy in this package contains the rare Sunshine Vitamin D.

ALOHA, the Hawaiian Confection. A wonderful chocolate sweetmeat containing the Sunshine Vitamin D, which has the same effect as the Hawaiian sun in building strong, straight bones and bodies. You don't have to go to Hawaii to get this wonderful confection.

675 U. S. P. units of Vitamin D in every pound, which is equal to four teaspoonfuls of Cod Liver Oil.

Respondents' advertising matter also contains the following statement:

To introduce this tasty and beneficial confection, we are giving away free with every package a valuable gift. Here are just a few of the hundreds of presents given away. The candy is worth many times the price paid for it, so try a package now * * * Buy the Candy * * * Get a valuable gift * * *

The effect of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations of the respondents in selling and offering for sale such items of merchandise as hereinabove referred to, is to mislead and deceive a substantial part of the purchasing public in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia by inducing them to mistakenly believe (1) that respondents' candy contains vitamin D in sufficient amount to be beneficial to the purchaser's health and that the amount of vitamin D contained in every pound of respondents' candy is equal to that contained in four teaspoons of cod liver oil, and (2) that respondents give away certain of their articles of merchandise without cost to the purchasers of said packages of candy.

PAR. 7. In truth and in fact respondents' candy does not contain a sufficient amount of vitamin D to be beneficial to the purchaser's health, and every pound of said candy does not contain vitamin D in a quantity which is equivalent to that contained in four teaspoons of cod liver oil, as represented by respondent; and none of repondents' so-called premiums or gifts or prizes is given away "free," but the prices thereof are included in the prices of said packages of candy.

PAR. 8. The use by respondents of the false, deceptive, and misleading statements and misrepresentations set forth herein has had and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements and representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of said respondents' products as a result of such erroneous belief. There are among the competitors of respondents, as mentioned hereinabove, manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who do not make such false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations concerning their products. By the statements and representations aforesaid, trade is unfairly diverted to respondents from such competitors, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being done and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 10, A. D., 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents Louis Keller and William Carsky, individually and as copartners trading as Casey Concession Co., charging them with unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto were introduced by the attorneys for the Commission and the attorney for the respondents before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding. The testimony and other evidence introduced were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission, on the complaint, the answer thereto, the testimony, and other evidence, report of the trial examiners and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and oral arguments; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Louis Keller and William Carsky, have been copartners since December 1, A. D., 1936, and during all of said time have traded as Casey Concession Co. Their principal place of business during all of said time has been located at 1132 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

PAR. 2. Respondents, during all the time herein mentioned, have been and now are engaged in the business of selling and distributing candy and other merchandise, consisting in part of cardboard toy cameras, women's hosiery, boxes of face powder, bottles of perfume, small note books and pencils, dolls, and cigarette cases, to operators and concessionaires of moving pictures, moving picture and burlesque theaters, tent shows, medicine shows, and circuses located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause their products, when sold, to be transported from their principal place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and during all the period herein mentioned has been, a course of trade by said respondents in such candy and other merchandise between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their business have been and are in competition with other partnerships and with individuals and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of candy and other merchandise similar to that sold and distributed by respondents, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents, in the course and conduct of their business as hereinafter described, sell and have sold assortments of candy and other merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme or game of chance, when sold and distributed to the consuming public. One of said assortments is composed of 110 small cartons of uniform size, shape and appearance in each of which is placed an equal number of pieces of candy and an additional article of merchandise. Sales are 5 cents per carton. The various additional articles of merchandise vary in retail value, some thereof having a retail value in excess of 5 cents. The said additional articles of merchandise are effectively concealed in said cartons from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a purchase has been made, the carton broken open and the additional article of merchandise removed therefrom. The said additional articles of merchandise are thus distributed to the consuming public wholly by lot or chance. Others of said assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale or distribution of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove described.

PAR. 3. Respondents' customers resell said assortments to the consuming public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. The respondents thus place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries, or games of chance in the sale of their product.

PAR. 4. Many dealers in and ultimate consumers of candy are attracted by respondents' said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondents in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents has the tendency and capacity, because of said element of chance, to divert to respondents trade and custom from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method, to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondents and in such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and are contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States of America, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondents, the testimony, and other evidence taken before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, the report of the trial examiners and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and oral arguments; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents, Louis Keller and William Carsky, individually and as copartners trading as Casey Concession Co., have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondents, Louis Keller and William Carsky, individually and trading as Casey Concession Co., or trading under any other name or designation, their representatives, agents, and employees, jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy, cardboard toy cameras, women's hosiery, face powder, perfume, note books, pencils, dolls, cigarette cases, or any other merchandise, in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, shall forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of such merchandise to the public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others any merchandise together with a sales plan or device, or separately, which said sales plan or device is to be used or may be used in the sale or distribution of said merchandise to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

OHIO ART COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4183. Complaint, July 12, 1940—Decision, Oct. 28, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in interstate sale and distribution of toy musical tops, and, in said connection, in importing musical reeds made in Germany, stamped with the word "Germany" as indicating their foreign origin, which, in enclosing said reeds in its tops, was hidden from view—

Stamped or imprinted upon its said tops, containing such imported reeds, legend "Made in U. S. A.," and placed upon the carton or container enclosing the top notation "Made by The Ohio Art Co., Bryan, Ohio," with no disclosure of any kind upon its said product informing members of the purchasing public that the musical reeds contained therein were of German origin;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that its said products were wholly of domestic origin and manufacture, decidedly preferred over products made in Germany and many other foreign countries, with result that a substantial portion of the public was induced to and did purchase its said tops, and with effect of placing in the hands of unscrupulous and uninformed dealers means whereby they were enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Lewis C. Russell, trial examiner.

Mr. R. A. McQuat and Mr. Maurice C. Pearce for the Commission.

Gebhard & Hogue, of Bryan, Ohio, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Ohio Art Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Ohio Art Co., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its principal place of business at Bryan, Ohio.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of toy musical tops. Respondent causes its said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. At all times mentioned herein respondent has maintained a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent uses constituent parts of materials of both foreign and domestic origin in its aforesaid toy musical tops. Such foreign parts and materials when imported and received by the respondent bear marks and imprints indicating the country of their origin. Among such foreign-made parts used by respondent are the musical reeds within the top which are imported from the country of Germany, and stamped thereon is the word "Germany."

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business, it has been, and is, the practice of respondent in assembling the toy musical tops to conceal or hide from view of the prospective purchasers of the assembled tops the word "Germany," and such toy musical tops are then sold and distributed by the respondent in commerce as aforesaid without any marking thereon to inform members of the purchasing public that the musical reeds of said tops are of German or foreign origin.

PAR. 5. A further practice of respondent in connection with the sale and distribution of its toy musical tops is the stamping or imprinting upon such toy musical tops the legend "Made in U. S. A." The carton in which the top is contained bears the words "Made by The Ohio Art Co., Bryan, Ohio," representing that such tops are manufactured at the respondent's place of business in Bryan, Ohio, and that such tops are wholly of domestic origin and manufacture rather than foreign origin and manufacture. In truth and in fact, such tops are not wholly of domestic origin and manufacture, as the musical reeds therein which constitute the musical part of the tops are made in Germany.

PAR. 6. For many years last past there has been maintained among manufacturers in the United States an established custom and practice of marking products of foreign origin in such manner as to indicate that such products are in fact of foreign rather than domestic origin. The purchasing public is familiar with and relies upon such custom and practice and when products bear no marking indicating that they are of foreign origin the purchasing public assumes that such products are of domestic origin.

PAR. 7. There is among the members of the purchasing public a decided preference for products which are manufactured in the United States over products manufactured in Germany or any other foreign country.

PAR. 8. The practice of the respondent of obliterating or obscuring the word "Germany" appearing on the reeds used in the manufacture of its tops, and of imprinting on its tops the legend "Made in U. S. A.," and of using on the cartons in which said tops are packaged and offered for sale the words "Made by The Ohio Art Co., Bryan, Ohio," without disclosing to prospective purchasers that the musical reeds used in such tops are made in Germany, has a tendency and capacity to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent's toy musical tops are wholly of domestic origin and manufacture. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief, engendered as herein set forth, a substantial portion of the purchasing public is induced to, and does, purchase respondent's product.

Through the practices herein set forth, the respondent places in the hands of unscrupulous or uninformed dealers a means and instrumentality whereby such dealers have been and are enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public as to the source or origin of said tops and the parts thereof.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 12, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, The Ohio Art Co., a corporation (designated in the complaint as Ohio Art Co.), charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by R. A. McOmat, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Messrs. Gebhard and Hogue, attorneys for the respondent, before Lewis C. Russell, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and exceptions filed thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto and oral argument before the Commission, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, The Ohio Art Co., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its principal place of business at Bryan, Ohio.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of toy musical tops. Respondent causes its said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. At all times mentioned herein respondent has maintained a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, the respondent purchased and imported musical reeds manufactured in the country of Germany, which reeds were used in the manufacture of respondent's musical tops. These reeds consisted of a small metal plate or disk containing a number of slots or openings over which brass strips were riveted. When such reeds were imported into the United States they bore the word "Germany" stamped thereon to indicate the foreign origin of said reeds. The use of such reeds in a musical top operates to make a wind instrument, and in the manufacture of such tops it is necessary to so construct them that a current of air passes through the reeds to give the desired musical effect. In manufacturing such tops and enclosing the reeds therein, the word "Germany" stamped on such reeds and indicating their foreign origin, is concealed or hidden from view.

PAR. 4. It was the practice of the respondent, in connection with the sale and distribution of its musical tops containing reeds imported from Germany, to stamp or imprint thereon the legend "Made in U. S. A.," and also to place upon the carton or container in which the musical top is marketed, the notation "Made by The Ohio Art Co., Bryan, Ohio." No marking of any kind appears upon said products informing members of the purchasing public that the musical reeds contained in said tops are of German or foreign origin.

PAR. 5. In addition to the reeds imported from Germany, the respondent also purchases reeds made in the United States, and as of December 5, 1940, the respondent had on hand 7,049 gross of reeds made in Germany and 785 gross of reeds manufactured in the United States.

PAR. 6. There is among members of the purchasing public a decided preference for products which are manufactured in the United States over products manufactured in Germany and many other foreign countries. When the unqualified legend "Made in U. S. A." or words of similar import or meaning are stamped upon or attached to an article of merchandise, it is understood by members of the purchasing public to indicate that such article of merchandise is wholly of domestic origin and manufacture. In like manner the unqualified use of the words "Made by" or words of similar import and meaning in conjunction with trade names of geographic significance in the United States or with geographic locations within the United States, is understood by members of the purchasing public to indicate that such articles of merchandise are wholly of domestic origin and manufacture.

PAR. 7. The practice of the respondent in obscuring the legend "Germany" appearing on the reeds used in the manufacture of its musical tops and in offering for sale, selling, and distributing such musical tops bearing the notations "Made in U. S. A." and "Made by The Ohio Art Co., Bryan, Ohio," without disclosing that the reeds contained therein were made in Germany, has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent's tops are wholly of domestic origin and manufacture. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief engendered as herein set forth, a substantial portion of the public are induced to, and do, purchase respondent's products.

By the use of the practices herein set forth, respondent has also placed in the hands of unscrupulous and uninformed dealers a means and instrumentality whereby such dealers have been enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, answer of the respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before Lewis C. Russell, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiner thereon and exceptions filed thereto, and briefs filed in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments of counsel, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, The Ohio Art Co., a corporation, its officers, directors, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of musical tops and other similar products in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the term "Made in U. S. A." or any other term of similar import or meaning, on labels, containers, or in advertising of musical tops or other similar products which contain reeds manufactured in Germany, or any other foreign country, without clearly disclosing the foreign origin of such reeds.

2. Using the unqualified words "Made by" or any other word or words of similar import or meaning in conjunction with trade names having a geographical significance in the United States or in conjunction with geographic locations within the United States, on labels, containers, or in any other manner, so as to imply that respondent's musical tops or other similar products which contain reeds manufactured in Germany or any other foreign country, are wholly of domestic origin and manufacture without clearly disclosing the foreign origin of such reeds.

3. Representing in any manner whatsoever that respondent's musical tops or other similar products are made in the United States when in fact such products are manufactured, in whole or in part, in Germany, or any other foreign country.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

JOHN MARICAK, DOING BUSINESS AS CONTINENTAL SILVER COMPANY OF AMERICA

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4369. Complaint, Oct. 31, 1940—Decision, Oct. 28, 1941

Where an individual engaged in interstate sale and distribution to retailers of a so-called sales stimulator plan which involved premium cards, advertising material, and silverware and was similar to other such plans made use of by him at other times during the last several years;

In offering his said plan, which (1) involved the purchase of so-called premium cards at $4.50 a thousand by the dealer for issuance to his customers upon their purchases in specified amounts and his undertaking to redeem such cards in Wm. A. Rogers silverware, he supplying to dealer-purchasers various advertising posters for use in putting plan into effect and, in some instances, sets of silverware for display purposes, and which (2) was presented to dealers by his representatives or agents who, traveling extensively through the United States, were supplied by him with contract forms and with samples of the advertising posters and display sets—

(a) Represented, through his representatives and agents, that he was connected with, or was a representative of, Wm. A. Rogers, Ltd., Oneida, Ltd., Successor, manufacturers of the silverware used in the operation of his said plan, and that such plan was an advertising campaign conducted by or on behalf of said manufacturers;

Facts being he was not in any manner connected with said concern, but purchased Wm. A. Rogers silverware in the open market, usually from independent jobbers, and his said plan was a commercial enterprise conducted for his own profit;

(b) Represented that he would provide retailers purchasing his plan with display sets of silverware which would become their property, making specific and prominent reference in the contract to such display set along with such representation;

Facts being that in some cases he failed to supply such dealers with any sets for aforesaid purposes;

(c) Represented, as aforesaid, and through advertising matter used by his agents in presenting the plan, that the dealer's customers, upon forwarding to him a certain designated number of premium cards, would receive silverware without cost; and

(d) Represented that after a designated percentage of such premium cards had been forwarded to him by dealer's customers for redemption, he would refund to the dealer entire amount paid by him, and that the operation of the plan would therefore be without cost to the dealer;

The facts being that premium cards forwarded to him for redemption in silverware were not thus redeemed without cost, but holders of such cards were required to remit certain amounts of money therewith in order to obtain silverware; his plan did not contemplate a refund to the dealer of the entire amount paid for the premium cards, his contracts being couched in ambiguous language, particularly so as to clauses respecting redemption of such cards and cash refunds to dealers, and it being impossible, as a practical matter, under his construction and interpretation of the contract, for the dealer to recover more than a small part of the amount paid for the cards; With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial number of retail dealers into the mistaken belief that such representations were true, and to cause them to purchase his sales stimulator plan as a result thereof: Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.
Mr. Eldon P. Schrup for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that John Maricak, an individual, trading and doing business under the name Continental Silver Co. of America, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, John Maricak, is an individual trading and doing business under the name and style of Continental Silver Co. of America, with his office and principal place of business located at 921 Charlevoix Building, Detroit, Mich. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the business of offering for sale and selling a so-called sales stimulator plan, including premium cards, tableware, silverware, and other materials which are used in carrying said plan into effect, to retail merchants located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. The respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid causes said premium cards, tableware, silverware, and other materials used in connection with said so-called sales stimulator plan, when sold, to be transported from his office and principal place of business in Detroit, Mich., to purchasers thereof located at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Michigan and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said premium cards, tableware, silverware, and other materials used in connection with said plan, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course of the operation of his business, and in order to sell his said plan and premium cards, and the tableware, silverware, and other materials used in connection therewith, respondent enters into a form of agreement with retail merchants who are contacted by respondent's selling agents.

Respondent's form of agreement provides for the purchase by the retail merchant of premium cards, upon which the merchant's name appears, at $4.50 per thousand which are to be given by the merchant to the merchant's customers upon the purchase by the customers of certain specified amounts of the merchant's goods.

By the terms of said form of agreement, respondent is to redeem in designated items of merchandise such premium cards when forwarded to respondent in specified numbers by such merchant's customers.

The form of agreement provides that respondent, as a part of such plan, is to furnish participating retail merchants with various display posters, circulars, redemption catalogs and advertisements to be used by said retail merchants in putting the aforesaid sales stimulator plan into effect and operation.

PAR. 4. In the course of the operation of his business and for the purpose of inducing retail merchants to purchase and use said plan and the premium cards, and the tableware, silverware, and other materials used in connection therewith, respondent makes the following representations:

1. That respondent is a representative of, or is connected with, or is putting into effect an advertising campaign for, Wm. A. Rogers, Ltd., Oneida, Ltd., Successor, of Sherrill, N. Y., manufacturers of tableware and silverware.

2. That respondent, for the purpose of putting such plan into operation, will provide retail merchants purchasing and using respondent's said plan and premium cards, with exhibit or display sets of tableware or silverware.

3. That respondent will redeem, without cost, in designated items of merchandise, such premium cards as are forwarded to him in specified numbers by the merchant's customers, and that respondent will refund to the retail merchant the entire purchase price of such premium cards after a designated number of such cards has been sent in by customers of such merchant for redemption.

4. That retail merchants may participate in said so-called sales stimulator plan and secure the cards, display or exhibit sets of tableware or silverware and the premiums for their customers without cost to the merchant.

PAR. 5. Respondent's representations as above set forth are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and deceptive. In truth and in fact, respondent is not in any manner connected with, representing, or conducting an advertising campaign for Wm. A. Rogers, Ltd., Oneida, Ltd., Successor. Respondent does not provide all merchants purchasing and using respondent's said plan and premium cards, with exhibit or display sets of tableware or silverware for use by such merchants in putting respondent's said plan into effect; nor does respondent refund to participating retail merchants the entire purchase price of said premium cards after a designated number of said premium cards has been sent to respondent by customers of said merchants for redemption. Retail merchants cannot participate in said plan and secure the premium cards, display or exhibit sets, and the premiums for their customers without cost to them.

PAR. 6. The use by respondent of the aforesaid false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations has a capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive retail merchants, situated in various States of the United States, into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and into the purchase and use of respondent's said so-called sales stimulator plan and the premium cards used in connection therewith.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of said respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on October 31, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, John Maricak, an individual, trading and doing business under the name Continental Silver Co. of America, charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint (no answer thereto being filed by respondent), testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Eldon P. Schrup, attorney for the Commission, before William C. Reeves, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and such testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, testimony, and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. For more than 2 years immediately prior to June 1940 the respondent, John Maricak, was trading and doing business under the name of Continental Silver Co. of America, with his office and principal place of business located at 921 Charlevoix Building, 2033 Park Avenue, Detroit, Mich. Respondent's business was that of selling to retail dealers a so-called sales stimulator plan, which plan involved premium cards, advertising material, and silverware. Respondent has at other times during the last several years been engaged in the sale of various other sales stimulator plans and has operated under various trade names. These plans were similar in all material respects to the more recent plan referred to above.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business respondent caused his sales stimulator plan, including premium cards, advertising material, and silverware, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Michigan to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. At all times mentioned herein respondent maintained a course of trade in his sales stimulator plan in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent's sales stimulator plan involved the purchase by retail dealers of so-called premium cards from respondent at $4.50 per thousand cards. These cards, bearing the name of the dealer, were issued by the dealer to his customers upon the purchase by such customers of certain specified amounts of merchandise from the dealer, usually one card being given with each 25-cent purchase. Respondent agreed to redeem these premium cards in Wm. A. Rogers silverware. To dealers purchasing the sales stimulator plan, respondent supplied various advertising posters for use in putting the plan into effect, and in some instances sets of silverware to be used by the dealer for display purposes.

PAR. 4. For the purpose of contacting dealers and selling them his sales stimulator plan, respondent employed representatives or agents who traveled extensively throughout various sections of the United States. These representatives were supplied by respondent with forms of contracts to be executed by dealers purchasing the plan, and also with sample advertising posters and samples of the display sets of silverware to be used in the operation of the plan.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of his business and for the purpose of inducing dealers to purchase his sales stimulator plan, the respondent, acting through his representatives and agents, made certain statements and representations to prospective purchasers. Among these statements and representations were the following:

1. That respondent was a representative of, or was connected with, Wm. A. Rogers, Ltd., Oneida, Ltd., Successor, manufacturers of the silverware used in the operation of respondent's sales stimulator plan, and that such sales stimulator plan was in the nature of an advertising campaign conducted by or on behalf of such silverware manufacturers.

2. That respondent would provide retail dealers purchasing respondent's sales stimulator plan with display sets of silverware which would become the property of the dealer.

3. That the dealer's customers, upon forwarding to the respondent a certain designated number of premium cards, would receive silverware without cost.

4. That after a designated percentage of such premium cards had been forwarded to respondent by the dealer's customers for redemption, respondent would refund to the dealer the entire amount paid by the dealer for such premium cards, and that the operation of the sales stimulator plan would therefore be without cost to the dealer.

The advertising matter supplied by respondent to his agents, and used by the agents in presenting the plan to dealers, featured the word "Free" and otherwise represented that the redemption of the premium cards in silverware would be without cost to the holders of the cards. Certain portions of the form of contract presented to the dealer were couched in ambiguous language, this being true particularly as to the clauses in the contract with respect to the redemption of the premium cards and the cash refund to the dealer. Specific and prominent reference was made in the contract to the display set of silverware, the representation being that the display set would be supplied to the dealer "Free" and would become the dealer's property.

PAR. 6. The Commission finds that these statements and representations were false and misleading. Respondent has not at any time been a representative of, or in any manner connected with, Wm. A. Rogers, Ltd., Oneida, Ltd., Successor. While the silverware used by respondent in connection with his sales stimulator plan was manufactured by such silverware concern, respondent purchased the silverware in the open market, usually from independent jobbers. Respondent's sales stimulator plan was in no sense an advertising campaign for or on behalf of such silverware manufacturers, but was merely a commercial enterprise conducted by respondent for his own profit. In some cases respondent failed to supply dealers purchasing his plan with any sets of silverware for display purposes. The premium cards forwarded to respondent for redemption in silverware were not redeemed without cost to the holders of such cards, but such holders were required to remit certain amounts of money along with such cards in order to obtain the silverware. Respondent's plan did not contemplate the refund to the dealer of the entire amount paid by the dealer for the premium cards. In fact, under the construction and interpretation placed upon the contract by respondent, it was impossible as a practical matter for the dealer to recover more than a small part of the amount paid for the cards.

PAR. 7. The Commission further finds that the use by the respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading representations had the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial number of retail dealers into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations were true, and to cause such dealers to purchase respondent's sales stimulator plan as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission (no answer thereto having been filed by respondent), testimony, and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (respondent not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, John Maricak, an individual, trading and doing business under the name Continental Silver Co. of America, or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of his sales stimulator plan, including premium cards, advertising matter, silverware, or any other merchandise, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing either directly or by implication that respondent is a representative of, or has any connection with, the manufacturer of Wm. A. Rogers silverware: Provided, however, That this order shall not be construed to prohibit the respondent from dealing in such silverware.

2. Representing either directly or by implication that repondent's sales stimulator plan is in the nature of an advertising campaign conducted by or on behalf of the manufacturer of Wm. A. Rogers silverware.

3. Representing that respondent will supply dealers purchasing his sales stimulator plan with display sets of silverware for use in putting such plan into operation, when respondent does not in fact supply such display sets as represented.

4. Representing that respondent will give silverware or other merchandise free, when such silverware or other merchandise is not in fact given free.

5. Representing that premium cards or other similar devices will be redeemed in silverware or other merchandise, unless and until all of the terms and conditions of such offer are clearly stated in immediate connection or conjunction with such offer, and there is no deception as to the price to be paid in connection with the obtaining of such silverware or other merchandise.

6. Representing that upon the redemption of a specified number of premium cards respondent will refund any sum of money to dealers purchasing such cards, when such refund is not in fact made, and if there are any conditions connected with such refund, such conditions must be clearly stated in immediate connection or conjunction with such offer of refund.

7. Representing that the operation of respondent's sales stimulator plan is without cost to dealers purchasing such plan.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

J. FRED MALONE AND JOE P. MALONE, TRADING AS HARPER MANUFACTURING COMPANY, MALONE CLOTHING MANUFACTURING COMPANY, AND VARIOUS OTHER NAMES

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4516. Complaint, June 5, 1941—Decision, Oct. 29, 1941

Where two individuals engaged in manufacture and in interstate offer and sale of men's clothing through traveling salesmen or agents, whom it equipped with kits including order blanks and sample swatches from which the purchaser made selections of material, and who, upon securing an order took and recorded the customers' measurements on order blanks and forwarded them, together with a number identifying the material selected, to said individuals at their place of business, collecting as their commission a substantial down payment on the purchase price, following which and transmission of order to said individuals, clothing was shipped to customer in question via parcel post, C. O. D. balance of contract, or purchase price—

(a) Represented that the garments would be made to order of the material selected, and that the material to be used contained no cotton, said salesmen making use of order blanks containing blank spaces for the height, weight, and general build of the customer and implying that the clothing sold by them was tailor made or made to measure—

The facts being garments thus ordered were of the ready-made variety or stock type of clothing, altered by individuals in question when deemed necessary partially to conform to the measurements shown on the order blank; many of the garments sent to their customers were not made in accordance with measurements submitted and of a cloth of a grade, texture, and weave corresponding with those selected by customer, but were made from material substantially inferior; said individuals in some instances failed to return purchase price received from customer, or to deliver garment selected by him; and materials from which products were made contained predominant quantities of cotton;

(b) Represented that the du Pont Company was back of, or associated with, said individuals in connection with the sale of their garments, that material used by them was made by said company, and that it was furnishing the goods free, the customer paying only for the labor involved;

The facts being that the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., or, as also known, the du Pont Co., long engaged, among other things, in the manufacture of textile fabrics and possessed of a valuable good-will in the word "du Pont" as applied to its products, was not connected in any way with said individuals, and was not the maker of the material used by them; and

(c) Represented that the customer would have an opportunity to inspect and try on the garments before finally accepting them and paying the balance due, and that they manufactured all of the garments sold by their agents and shipped them to the customer direct from their own factory;

The facts being the C. O. D. shipment of the garments prevented the customer's exercise of such so-called choice or privilege, and said individuals did not make all the garments sold by them, nor ship the same to customers direct from their own factory;

With effect of misleading and deceiving prospective purchasers into the belief that said garments were made to order and manufactured according to the individual measurements recorded on said order blanks, as understood from said terms and as preferred by a substantial portion of the purchasing public, and that representations above set forth were otherwise true, as a result whereof a substantial number of purchasing public bought said garments in substantial volume:

Held, that such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Joseph C. Fehr for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that J. Fred Malone and Joe P. Malone, individuals trading as Harper Manufacturing Co., Malone Clothing Manufacturing Co., Gray-Dickson Clothing Co, and Piedmont Clothing Co., and various other names, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, J. Fred Malone and Joe P. Malone, hereinafter referred to as respondents, are individuals trading under the names Harper Manufacturing Co., Malone Clothing Manufacturing Co., Gray-Dickson Clothing Co., and Piedmont Clothing Co., with their principal office and place of business located at 1806–8–10 North Broad Street, in the city of Rome, in the State of Georgia.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for more than 2 years last past have been, engaged in the business of manufacturing, offering for sale, and selling men's clothing through salesmen or agents who travel throughout the United States soliciting and accepting orders for such clothing.

PAR. 3. Respondents cause their said men's clothing, when sold, to be transported from their said place of business in the city of Rome, Ga., into and across the several States of the United States, to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the said several States of the United States other than in the State of Georgia, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their said business, as aforesaid, employ sales agents located throughout the several States of the United States to solicit and accept orders for their said clothing. Said salesmen or agents are equipped by respondents with order blanks containing spaces for entering thereon the individual measurements of each purchaser, and are furnished by respondents with sample swatches of materials forming parts of kits from which the purchaser makes selections as to color, weave, and quality of material from which the suit or other garment ordered is to be made. When a salesman or sales agent obtains an order for a suit or other garment, he takes the measurements of the purchaser and enters this and other information regarding the weight, height, general build, and appearance of the purchaser on the said order blank, together with a number identifying the material selected by the purchaser, and forwards the same to respondents at their said place of business in Rome, Ga., where the garment ordered is purportedly to be made to order from the material so selected by the customer from samples shown, and according to the individual measurements of the purchaser thereof. When the clothing is delivered to the customer, it is shipped to him by respondents via parcel post C. O. D. The prices at which said clothing is sold vary, according to the quality of the material selected, and said salesman or sales agent collects from the customer in each instance a substantial down payment or installment on the purchase price. The cash deposit thus collected by the agent or salesman constitutes the said salesman's commission. The balance of the contract or purchase price is to be paid to respondents by the customers when the garment is delivered C. O. D., as aforesaid.

PAR. 5. The said salesmen and sales representatives taking orders as aforesaid from members of the purchasing public represent themselves to be, and are accepted by the said purchasing public as being, agents of the respondents, and the proceeds of their said sales, after deducting agent's commission therefrom, as aforesaid, are received and accepted by, and inure to the financial benefit of, said respondents. Respondents furnish each of said sales agents and representatives with a credential card introducing him to the customer or prospective customer as an agent of respondents, authorized to sell pants and suits and to collect deposits thereon. Said identification cards are issued in one of the trade names employed by respondents in the operation of their said business.

PAR. 6. Made-to-measure or made-to-order clothing is understood by the trade and the purchasing public generally to be, and to mean, garments which are cut and made to the individual measurements of the person for whom intended. In order to produce a made-to-measure or made-to-order garment, as understood by the trade and purchasing public, it is necessary and essential that a person experienced and skilled in taking and making measurements for such garments shall measure the person for whom the garment is to be made so as to convey to the tailor actually making the garment accurate and specific measurements and information regarding the weight, height, general build, and appearance of the person measured. To obtain this information with any degree of accuracy and exactness, experience and skill on the part of the person taking or making the measurements are required. There exists among the purchasing public the belief that made-to-measure or made-to-order garments fit with more accuracy than do garments which are not so made, and there exists a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for made-to-measure or made-to-order garments.

PAR. 7. E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., also known as The du Pont Co., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its factory and principal place of business located in the city of Wilmington, in the State of Delaware. It is now and for many years has been engaged, among other things, in the manufacture of rayon and other textile fabrics used in the manufacture of men's as well as women's garments. It has for several years last past also been engaged in the sale and distribution of said products, in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, causing said products, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in the State of Delaware, or from its factories or places of business in various States of the United States, to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of Delaware, or other than the States in which said factories or places of business are located. Said Company has built up and enjoys a valuable good will in the word "du Pont" as applied to its products, particularly rayon and other textile fabrics. Purchasers and prospective purchasers of men's and women's garments made of rayon and other textile fabrics as well as members of the respective trades dealing therein have, through long usage and over a long period of time, identified many rayon and other textile fabrics represented as "du Pont," as being the products of the du Pont Company, and have purchased substantial quantities of said products by reason of their superior quality and reputation.

PAR. 8. For the purpose of selling respondents' said garments and inducing purchasers to sign orders therefor, sales representatives of respondents, in sales talks employed by them, make many false and misleading statements and representations. Among and typical of said statements and representations are the following:

That the guarantee will be made to order or measure.

That said garments will be of a certain material, color, design, weave, or pattern, as per sample shown.

That the material from which said garments were to be made contained no cotton.

That the du Pont Co. is back of or is associated with respondents in connection with the sale of their said garments; that the material used by respondents is manufactured by the du Pont Co.; that the du Pont Co. is furnishing free the goods to be used in the making of the said garments, the customer paying only for the labor involved in the making thereof.

That the customer will have an opportunity to inspect and try on the garments before finally accepting the same and paying the balance due thereon.

That respondents manufacture all of the garments sold by their said agents, and ship the same to the customer direct from their own factory.

PAR. 9. In truth and in fact, the men's garments delivered by respondents to purchasers who are induced to order, as aforesaid, were not and are not made-to-measure or made-to-order garments as those terms are understood by the purchasing public but were, and are, of the ready-made variety or stock type of clothing, and which are altered by respondent when deemed necessary partially to conform to the measurements shown on the order blanks, but at no time does the customer receive clothing made to measure or made to order. Further, in many instances, the garments sent to such customers do not correspond to the sample displayed to the said customer by said sales agents or sales representatives and as selected by said customers. Said garments are not made in accordance with measurements submitted by said salesmen, agents, or representatives of a cloth of the grade, texture, and weave the same as those displayed by respondents' said sales agents and representatives and selected by said customers. In many instances, garments delivered to purchasers are made from materials substantially inferior in quality, grade, weave, and texture to, and different from, the samples selected by the purchasers. The respondents in many instances have failed and refused to return the purchase price received from the customer or to deliver a garment made from the material selected by him.

The du Pont Co. is not in any manner associated with respondents in connection with the sale of their said garments. The material used in the manufacture of said products is not made by the du Pont

Co., nor does the du Pont Co. supply such materials to the respondents free or otherwise. The customer does not pay only for the labor involved, but pays for the materials used and a profit to respondents. The materials from which respondents' products are made are composed of, or contain predominant quantities of, cotton.

Customers do not have an opportunity to inspect or to try on the garments before finally accepting the same and paying the balance due thereon, the C. O. D. shipment thereof preventing the exercise of such so-called choice or privilege. Respondents do not manufacture all of the garments sold by them, nor ship the same to customers direct from their own factory.

PAR. 10. The foregoing false and misleading statements and representations made by and on behalf of the respondents, as aforesaid, in connection with the sale of their said garments, as above set out, were and are calculated to have, and have had and do now have, the tendency and capacity to and do mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are and were true. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief so induced, a substantial number of the purchasing public have purchased a substantial volume of respondents' said products.

PAR. 11. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices, in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 5th day of June 1941, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, J. Fred Malone and Joe P. Malone, individuals, trading as Harper Manufacturing Co., Malone Clothing Manufacturing Co., Gray-Dickson Clothing Co., Piedmont Clothing Co., and various other names, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On July 16, 1941, the respondents filed their answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondents and Richard P. Whiteley, assistant chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charge stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Respondent expressly waived the filing of a report upon the evidence by the trial examiner. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, J. Fred Malone and Joe P. Malone, hereinafter referred to as respondents, are individuals trading under the names Harper Manufacturing Co. and Piedmont Clothing Co., with their principal office and place of business located at 1806–8–10 North Broad Street, in the city of Rome, in the State of Georgia. Since on or about January 1, 1941, respondents have discontinued trading under the names Malone Clothing Manufacturing Co., Gray-Dickson Clothing Co., and various other names.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for more than 2 years last past have been, engaged in the business of manufacturing, offering for sale, and selling men's clothing through salesmen or agents who travel throughout the United States soliciting and accepting orders for such clothing.

PAR. 3. Respondents caused their said men's clothing, when sold to be transported from their said place of business in the city of Rome, Ga., into and across the several States of the United States, to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the said several States of the United States other than in the State of Georgia, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their said business, as aforesaid, employ sales agents located throughout the several States of the United States to solicit and accept orders for their said clothing. Said salesmen or agents are equipped by respondents with order blanks containing spaces for entering thereon the individual measurements of each purchaser. Said order blanks contain descriptions of various styles of men's suits, including coats, pants, and vests, together with pictorial designs showing a man going through the various stages of being measured for a coat, vest, and pants. Said order blanks also contain blank spaces calling for information as to the height, weight, and general build of a customer and the names and addresses of respondents' sales agent or representative and the customer. Respondents also furnish said salesmen or agents with sample swatches of materials forming parts of kits from which the purchaser makes selections as to color, weave, and quality of material from which the suit or other garment ordered is to be made. When a salesman or sales agent obtains an order for a suit or other garment, he takes the measurements of the purchaser and enters this and other information regarding the weight, height, general build, and appearance of the purchaser on the said order blank, together with a number identifying the material selected by the purchaser, and forwards the same to respondents at their said place of business in Rome, Ga., where the garment ordered is purportedly to be made to order from the material so selected by the customer from samples shown, and according to the individual measurements of the purchaser thereof.

When the clothing is delivered to the customer, it is shipped to him by respondents via parcel post C. O. D. The prices at which said clothing is sold vary according to the quality of the material selected, and said salesman or sales agent collects from the customer in each instance a substantial down payment or installment on the purchase price. The cash deposit thus collected by the agent or salesman constitutes the said salesman's commission. The balance of the contract or purchase price is to be paid to respondents by the customer when the garment is delivered C. O. D. as aforesaid.

PAR. 5. The said salesmen and sales representatives taking orders as aforesaid from members of the purchasing public represent themselves to be, and are accepted by the said purchasing public as being, agents of the respondents, and the proceeds of their said sales, after deducting agent's commission therefrom, as aforesaid, are received and accepted by, and inure to the financial benefit of, said respondents. Respondents furnish each of said sales agents and representatives with a credential card introducing him to the customer or prospective customer as an agent of respondents, authorized to sell pants and suits and to collect deposits thereon. Said identification cards are issued in one of the trade names employed by respondents in the operation of their said business.

PAR. 6. Made-to-measure or made-to-order clothing is understood by the trade and the purchasing public generally to be, and to mean, garments which are cut and made to the individual measurements of the person for whom intended. In order to produce a made-to-measure or made-to-order garment, as understood by the trade and purchasing public, it is necessary and essential that a person experienced and skilled in taking and making measurements for such garments shall measure the person for whom the garment is to be made so as to convey to the tailor actually making the garment accurate and specific measurements and information regarding the weight, height, general build and appearance of the person measured. To obtain this information with any degree of accuracy and exactness, experience and skill on the part of the person taking or making the measurements are required. There exists among the purchasing public the belief that made-to-measure or made-to-order garments fit with more accuracy than do garments which are not so made, and there exists a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for made-to-measure or made-to-order garments.

PAR. 7. E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., also known as The du Pont Co., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its factory and principal place of business located in the city of Wilmington, in the State of Delaware. It is now and for many years has been engaged, among other things, in the manufacture of rayon and other textile fabrics used in the manufacture of men's as well as women's garments. It has for several years last past also been engaged in the sale and distribution of said products, in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, causing said products, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in the State of Delaware, or from its factories or places of business in various States of the United States, to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of Delaware, or other than the States in which said factories or places of business are located. Said company has built up and enjoys a valuable good will in the word "du Pont" as applied to its products, particularly rayon and other textile fabrics. Purchasers and prospective purchasers of men's and women's garments made of rayon and other textile fabrics as well as members of the respective trades dealing therein have, through long usage and over a long period of time, identified many rayon and other textile fabrics represented as "du Pont" as being the products of the du Pont Co., and have purchased substantial quantities of said products by reason of their superior quality and reputation.

PAR. 8. For the purpose of selling respondents' said garments and inducing purchasers to sign orders therefor, sales representatives of respondents, in sales talks employed by them, have made many false and misleading statements and representations. Among and typical of said statements and representations were the following:

That the garments would be made to order or measure.

That said garments would be of a certain material, color, design, weave, or pattern, as per sample shown.

That the material from which said garments were to be made contained no cotton.

That the du Pont Co. was back of or was associated with respondents in connection with the sale of their said garments; that the material used by respondents was manufactured by the du Pont Co.; that the du Pont Co. was furnishing free the goods to be used in the making of the said garments, the customer paying only for the labor involved in the making thereof.

That the customer would have an opportunity to inspect and try on the garments before finally accepting the same and paying the balance due thereon.

That respondents manufactured all of the garments sold by their said agents, and shipped the same to the customer direct from their own factory.

PAR. 9. In truth and in fact, the men's garments delivered by respondents to purchasers who are induced to order, as aforesaid, were not and are not made-to-measure or made-to-order garments as those terms are understood by the purchasing public but were, and are, of the ready-made variety or stock type of clothing, and which are altered by respondents when deemed necessary partially to conform to the measurements shown on the order blanks, but at no time does the customer receive clothing made to measure or made to order. The use of said order blanks by respondents' salesmen and representatives as hereinabove described has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive prospective purchasers into the belief that said men's suits and pants when delivered are made-to-measure or made-to-order garments and are manufactured according to the individual measurements taken and recorded on said order blanks by respondents' said agents and representatives.

In some instances, the garments sent to respondents' customers did not correspond to the sample displayed to such customers by respondents' sales agents or sales representatives, and as selected by such customers. Many of said garments were not made in accordance with measurements submitted by said salesmen, agents or representatives of a cloth of the grade, texture, and weave the same as those displayed by respondents' said sales agents and representatives and selected by said customers. In many instances, garments delivered to purchasers were made from materials substantially inferior in quality, grade, weave, and texture to, and different from, the samples selected by the purchasers. The respondents in some instances failed to return the purchase price received from the customer or to deliver a garment made from the material selected by him.

The du Pont Co. is not in any manner associated with respondents in connection with the sale of their said garments. The material used in the manufacture of said products is not made by the du Pont Co., nor does the du Pont Co. supply such materials to the respondents, free or otherwise. The customer does not pay only for the labor involved, but pays for the materials used and a profit to respondents. The materials from which respondents' products are made are composed of, or contain predominant quantities of, cotton.

Customers do not have an opportunity to inspect or to try on the garments before finally accepting the same and paying the balance due thereon the C. O. D. shipment thereof preventing the exercise of such so-called choice or privilege. Respondents do not manufacture all of the garments sold by them, nor ship the same to customers direct from their own factory.

PAR. 10. The foregoing false and misleading statements and representations made by salemen and agents representing the respondents, as aforesaid, in connection with the sale of respondents' said garments, as above set out, had the tendency and capacity to, and did, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations were true. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief so induced, a substantial number of the purchasing public purchased a substantial volume of respondents' said garments.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondents, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondents herein and Richard P. Whiteley, assistant chief counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondents herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, J. Fred Malone and Joe P. Malone, individuals trading as Harper Manufacturing Co., Malone Clothing Manufacturing Co., Gray-Dickson Clothing Co., Piedmont Clothing Co., and various other names, whether trading under said trade names or otherwise, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of men's clothing in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using order blanks in taking orders for ready-made clothing which contain illustrations showing measurements being taken for the fitting of men's tailor-made or made-to-measure clothes, instructions for such fittings, or blank spaces for the entry of such fittings, or which otherwise import and imply that the clothing sold by respondents is tailor-made or made to measure.

2. Representing that the ready-made suits and other garments sold by respondents will be made from the materials selected by the purchasers from samples exhibited by their salesmen or agents, unless and until ready-made suits and other garments sold by respondents are made from materials of the identical quality, color, design, weave, and pattern selected by such purchasers.

3. Representing that the material from which respondents' ready-made suits and other garments are made contains no cotton, when such is not the fact.

4. Representing that E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., also known as the du Pont Co., is in any manner associated with respondents in connection with the sale of their ready-made suits and other garments, or that the material contained in respondents' ready-made suits and other garments is manufactured by said du Pont Co. or that said du Pont Co. is furnishing free the goods to be used in the making of respondents' said ready-made suits and other garments, and that the customer is paying only for the labor involved in the making thereof.

5. Representing that respondents' customers will have an opportunity to inspect and try on the ready-made suits and other garments shipped to such customers by respondents before finally accepting the same and paying the balance due thereon, unless and until an opportunity for such inspection and trying on of respondents' suits and other garments is actually provided before such customers finally accept such clothing and pay any balance due thereon.

6. Representing that respondents manufacture all of the ready-made suits and other garments sold by them or their agents and ship same to the customer direct from their own factory.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

IMPERIAL KNIFE COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4573. Complaint, Aug. 21, 1941—Decision, Oct. 29, 1941

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture and competitive interstate sale and distribution of assortments of knives so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the purchasing public, a typical assortment including a card with 12 knives and a push card, for use, as thereon explained, under a plan by which the amount paid for a knife, each of which was of the same value, varied from 1 cent to 39 cents in accordance with the number secured by chance from card;

Sold such assortments to wholesalers and jobbers, and, directly or indirectly, to retailers, by whom they were exposed and sold to the purchasing public in accordance with such sales plan, under which the prices of said knives were determined wholly by lot or chance, and involving a game of chance to procure said articles at much less than their normal retail price; and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who, unwilling to use any method involving chance or otherwise contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With the result that many persons were attracted by such sales plan and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell its knives in preference to those of its competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, whereby trade was unfairly diverted to it from its said competitors; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, as above set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and its competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr., for the Commission.

Mr. Francis J. Fazzano, of Providence, R. I., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Imperial Knife Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH. 1. Respondent, Imperial Knife Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Rhode Island, with its office and principal place of business located at 14 Blount Street, Providence, R. I. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of knives to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said knives, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the city of Providence, R. I., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than Rhode Island, and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 1 year last past a course of trade by respondent in such knives in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of knives in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of knives so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the purchasing public. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment includes a card containing 12 pocket knives and a push card. Appearing on the face of the push card is the following legend:

EVERY PUNCH WINS
1¢ TO 39¢

PAY WHAT YOU PUNCH
FROM 1¢ TO 39¢
NO HIGHER
EVERY PLAYER WINS

Said knives are distributed to the purchasing public in accordance with the foregoing legend and in the following manner:

The push card bears 12 partially perforated disks on the face of which is printed the word "Push." Concealed within each disk is a number ranging from 1 cent to 39 cents. When the disks are pushed or separated from the card one of these numbers is disclosed. Purchasers punching numbers 1, 26, 39, etc., pay respectively 1 cent, 26 cents, 39 cents. The purchaser of each punch receives a knife, all of the knives being of the same retail value. The numbers are effectively concealed from the purchasers and prospective purchasers until the disks are pushed or separated from the card. The prices of said knives are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent furnishes and has furnished various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of its knives by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in the sale of all of said merchandise by means of push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's knives directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its knives and the sales of said knives by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of knives to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure knives at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute knives in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its knives and in the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's knives in preference to knives of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 21, 1941, issued, and thereafter served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Imperial Knife Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Imperial Knife Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Rhode Island, with its office and principal place of business located at 14 Blount Street, Providence, R. I. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of knives to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said knives, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the city of Providence, R. I., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than Rhode Island, and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 1 year last past a course of trade by respondent in such knives in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of knives in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of knives so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the purchasing public. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment includes a card containing 12 pocket knives and a push card. Appearing on the face of the push card is the following legend:

EVERY PUNCH WINS
1¢ to 39¢
PAY WHAT YOU PUNCH
FROM 1¢ to 39¢
NO HIGHER
EVERY PLAYER WINS

Said knives are distributed to the purchasing public in accordance with the foregoing legend and in the following manner:

The push card bears 12 partially perforated disks on the face of which is printed the word "Push." Concealed within each disk is a number ranging from 1 cent to 39 cents. When the disks are pushed or separated from the card one of these numbers is disclosed. Purchasers punching numbers 1, 26, 39, etc., pay respectively 1 cent, 26 cents, 39 cents. The purchaser of each punch receives a knife, all of the knives being of the same retail value. The numbers are effectively concealed from the purchasers and prospective purchasers until the disks are pushed or separated from the card. The prices of said knives are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent furnishes and has furnished various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of its knives by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in the sale of all of said merchandise by means of push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's knives directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its knives and the sales of said knives by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of knives to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure knives at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute knives in competition with respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its knives and in the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's knives in preference to knives of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, either with assortments of knives or other merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing said knives or other merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any knives or other merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

DIGEST OF GENERAL STIPULATIONS OF THE FACTS AND AGREEMENTS TO CEASE AND DESIST [2]

2839.[3] Garden Hose—Composition, Qualities, and Comparative Merits.—Sears, Roebuck & Co., a corporation, operating a number of catalog mail order houses and conducting a large number of retail stores throughout the United States, sold and shipped merchandise, including garden hose, from its several places of business to purchasers thereof located in States other than that in which such shipments have their origin, in competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce as set forth therein.

The term "ply," when used alone or only in connection with a number or numeral as descriptive of garden hose, is understood by the trade and purchasing public to refer to a hose having incorporated therein a layer or a designated number of separate layers of cotton duck, as distinguished from braided fabric.

1. The use of the term "3-ply" as descriptive of garden hose which is not constructed of three layers of cotton duck; and from the use of the word "ply" either alone or in connection with a designated num-

Digests of previous stipulations of this character accepted by the Commission may be found in vols. 10 to 32 of the Commission's decisions.

[2] In the interest of brevity there is omitted from the published digests of the published stipulations agreements under which the stipulating respondent or respondents, as the case may be, agree that, should such stipulating respondent or respondents ever resume or indulge in any of the practices, methods, or acts in question, or in event of issuance by Commission of complaint and institution of formal proceedings against respondent, as in the stipulation provided, such stipulation and agreement, if relevant, may be received in such proceedings as evidence of the prior use by the respondent or respondents of the methods, acts, or practices herein referred to.

ber or numeral so as to import or imply or the effect of which tends or may tend to convey the belief to purchasers that said garden hose contains the indicated number of plies, each ply consisting of a separate layer of cotton duck. If the hose has incorporated therein one or more braided reinforcements, and the word "ply" is used to refer to the braided reinforcement in said hose, then in such case, the word "ply" shall be immediately accompanied by the word "braided" printed in equally conspicuous type so as to indicate clearly that the ply in said hose is braided;

(June 3, 1941.)

FORD MOTOR COMPANY v. FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION[1]

No. 8510

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit. June 5, 1941)

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—DETERMINATION OF—COMPETITIVE CONDITIONS AND PARTICULAR INSTANCES—ULTIMATE DECISION AS FOR COURT.

In determining validity of cease and desist order of Federal Trade Commission based on alleged violation of Federal Trade Commission Act by use of "unfair methods of competition" in interstate commerce, what constitutes "unfair methods of competition" must be decided in particular instances upon incidents in the light of existing competitive conditions and the court, not the commission, must ultimately determine, as a matter of law, what the phrase includes. Federal Trade Commission Act, Sec. 5, 15 U. S. C. A. sec. 45.

[1] Reported in 120 F. (2d) 175. For case before Commission, see 30 F. T. C. 49. Rehearing denied June 25, 1941. Petition for certiorari denied by Supreme Court on October 20, 1941, 314 U. S. 668, 62 S. Ct. 130.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—ADVERTISING FALSELY OR MISLEADINGLY—WHERE CAPACITY OR TENDENCY TO MISLEAD PUBLIC INTO PURCHASE OF PRODUCT, PROCESS OR METHOD ESSENTIALLY DIFFERENT FROM ONE SUPPOSED—WHETHER INTENT MATERIAL ALSO.

"Unfair methods of competition," as used in the Federal Trade Commission Act prohibiting unfair methods of competition in interstate and foreign commerce, may consist generally of false advertising of a product, process or method which misleads, or has the capacity or tendency to mislead, the purchasing public into buying such product, process or method in the belief it is acquiring one essentially different, and the question does not depend upon the purpose of the advertisement nor upon the good faith or bad faith of the advertiser.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—PROHIBITION OF—PREREQUISITES TO APPLICATION OF STATUTE—UNFAIR INTERFERENCE WITH INTERSTATE TRADE AND DECEPTION OF PUBLIC AS.

A prerequisite to the application of the Federal Trade Commission Act prohibiting unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce is the unfair interference with interstate trade and such deception of the public as to cause it to buy and pay for something which it is in fact not getting.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—ADVERTISING FALSELY OR MISLEADINGLY—FINANCING PLANS—AUTOMOBILES—PRACTICES IN INDUSTRY CONCERNED AND THOSE RELATED—IF PUBLIC IN ANY EVENT MISLED INTO PURCHASE AT PRICE HIGHER THAN OTHERWISE.

In determining whether a "six percent plan" of financing retail sales of automobiles advertised by automobile manufacturer was unfair method of competition within Federal Trade Commission Act, the practices in the automobile industry or those in similar related enterprises were immaterial if the automobile manufacturer's advertisement misled the members of the public into purchasing manufacturer's automobiles at a higher cost than they otherwise would have paid.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—FALSE REPRESENTATIONS—IF FALSITY KNOWN AND NOT DECEPTIVE TO THOSE IN SAME OR SIMILAR ENTERPRISES.

A method of competition inherently unfair does not cease to be so because the falsity of the public representation has become so well known to those engaged in identical or similar enterprises as to no longer deceive them.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—ADVERTISING FALSELY OR MISLEADINGLY—FINANCING PLANS—AUTOMOBILES—"SIX PERCENT PLAN"—PROSPECTIVE PURCHASERS' VIEWPOINT AND PLAN AS A WHOLE AS CRITERIA.

In determining whether "six percent plan" of financing retail sales of automobiles advertised by automobile manufacturer violated Federal Trade Commission Act prohibiting unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce, the advertisement was required to be considered from the viewpoint of prospective purchasers of the manufacturer's automobiles and in determining its capacity or tendency to mislead was required to be judged from its general fabric and not its single threads.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—ADVERTISING FALSELY OR MISLEADINGLY—FINANCING PLANS—AUTOMOBILES—"SIX-PERCENT PLAN"—IF INTEREST IN FACT ABOUT 11½ PERCENT AND AVERAGE MEMBER PUBLIC THEREBY DECEIVED.

Where automobile manufacturer's advertised "six percent plan" of financing retail sales of automobiles was such as to give impression to average member of public that manufacturer meant six percent simple interest annually on the remaining balance after deducting each successive monthly payment, whereas the actual credit charge computed in accordance with the [176] "six percent plan" amounted to approximately 11½ percent simple annual interest on the unpaid balance of installments due on automobile sold, the method used by manufacturer in sale of automobiles was an "unfair method of competition" within Federal Trade Commission Act.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ACT—SCOPE—AS PREVENTATIVE AND NOT COMPENSATORY.

The Federal Trade Commission Act prohibiting unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce was intended to afford a preventative remedy, not a compensatory one.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—IF DAMAGE EITHER TO PURCHASER OR COMPETITOR NOT SHOWN.

In proceeding by Federal Trade Commission against automobile manufacturer for using unfair methods of competition, the alleged fact that no damage had been shown by the offense complained of to purchaser of manufacturer's automobiles or to a competitor was no defense.

PUBLIC INTEREST—DETERMINATION OF IN UNFAIR METHOD OF COMPETITION PROCEEDINGS—FACTS OF EACH CASE AS SUBJECT FOR COMMISSION DISCRETION.

In determining whether a proceeding by Federal Trade Commission on complaint charging use of unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce is in the public interest, the commission exercises a broad discretion and each case must be determined upon its own facts.

ADVERTISING FALSELY OR MISLEADINGLY—IF CUSTOMERS ATTRACTED BY ADVERTISER'S DECEPTION—UNFAIR COMPETITIVE DIVERSION—PRESUMPTION OF.

Where misleading advertisements attract customers by means of deception perpetuated by the advertiser, it is presumed that business is thereby unfairly diverted from a competitor who truthfully advertises his process, methods or goods.

PUBLIC INTEREST—UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—ADVERTISING FALSELY OR MISLEADINGLY—"SIX PERCENT" FINANCE PLAN—AUTOMOBILES—WHERE INTEREST IN FACT ABOUT 11½ PERCENT AND AVERAGE MEMBER PUBLIC THEREBY DECEIVED.

A proceeding by Federal Trade Commission against automobile manufacturer, charged with use of unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce by advertising a "six percent plan" of financing retail sales of automobiles which gave average member of public impression that only six percent interest annually on remaining balance after deducting each successive monthly payment was meant, whereas the actual credit charge computed in accordance with the six percent plan amounted to approximately 11½ percent simple annual interest on the unpaid balance of installments due on automobile sold, was in the interest of the public and was therefore within jurisdiction of the commission.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE—WHAT DOES AND DOES NOT CONSTITUTE—INTERCOURSE FOR PURPOSE OF TRADE, ETC.

"Interstate commerce" includes intercourse for the purpose of trade which results in the passage of property, persons or messages from within one state to within another state.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE—REGULATION—ESSENTIAL ADJUNCTS—COMMISSION POWER.

All of those things which stimulate or decrease the flow of commerce, although not directly in its stream, are essentially adjuncts thereto and Congress has power to confer their regulation on the Federal Trade Commission.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE—ADVERTISING FALSELY OR MISLEADINGLY—"SIX PERCENT" FINANCE PLAN—WHERE FOR SALE OF AUTOMOBILES BY DEALERS—WHETHER RELATION TO INTERSTATE COMMERCE SUBSTANTIAL AND CONTROL OF SUCH ACTIVITIES APPROPRIATE TO PROTECTION THEREOF.

Where automobile manufacturer sold automobiles wholesale to dealers, dealers' resale of automobiles to public, had such substantial relationship to "interstate commerce" that control of such activities was appropriate to its protection, so that Federal Trade Commission was justified in ordering manufacturer to cease and desist from advertising a misleading plan of financing retail sales of automobiles, as against contention that neither the plan itself nor its advertisement affected the sales of automobiles by manufacturer to its dealers, nor their transportation in interstate commerce, and that by time automobiles reached dealers manufacturer had received payment therefor and had no further interest therein.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—SCOPE—IF REASONABLY LIMITED TO EVIL INVOLVED AND PRESERVATION OF COMPETITIVE AND PUBLIC RIGHTS.

Cease and desist orders of the Federal Trade Commission should go no further than reasonably necessary to correct the [177] evil complained of and preserve the rights of competitors and the public.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—ADVERTISING FALSELY OR MISLEADINGLY—"SIX PERCENT" FINANCE PLAN—AUTOMOBILES—WHERE CHARGES IN FACT IN EXCESS OF.

Where automobile manufacturer was guilty of using unfair methods of competition by advertising a "six percent plan" of financing retail sales of automobiles, order of Federal Trade Commission requiring manufacturer to cease and desist from using the words "six percent" or the figure and symbol "6%" in certain forms of advertising in connection with the cost of or the additional charge for the use of deferred or installment plan of purchasing automobiles manufactured by it was proper.

Before HICKS, SIMONS, and HAMILTON, Circuit Judges.

HAMILTON, Circuit Judge:

This is a petition by the Ford Motor Company to review an order of the Federal Trade Commission requiring it to cease and desist from the use of the words "six percent" or the figure and symbol "6%" in certain forms of advertising in connection with the cost of, or the additional charge for, the use of a deferred or installment payment plan of purchasing automobiles manufactured by it.

On December 1, 1936, the Federal Trade Commission issued a complaint against the petitioner and the Universal Credit Corporation, which was served on petitioner, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, U. S. C. A. title 15, section 45, 38 Stat. 717, 719, 720.

After the filing of separate answers by the petitioner and the Universal Credit Co. and before taking testimony in support of the complaint as to petitioner, the Commission, on May 9, 1937, approved a stipulation executed by the Universal Credit Corporation agreeing to cease and desist and on May 5, 1937, the Commission dismissed the complaint as to it. On January 10, 1938, petitioner filed a motion to dismiss the complaint, which motion was denied by the Commission.

Evidence was thereafter introduced by the Commission before a duly designated examiner who filed an intermediate report.

The proceedings thereafter came before the Commission for a final hearing upon the complaint, the answer of petitioner, testimony, briefs and oral argument and the Commission, after finding that the proceeding was in the interest of the public, found substantially as follows: that petitioner was a corporation organized and existing pursuant to the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business at Dearborn, Michigan, where it engages in the business of manufacturing all types of automobiles, including trucks, which are shipped from its place of business and from its assembly plants located at various points in the United States, to purchasers in the various states of the United States and in the District of Columbia. To assist in carrying out distribution of its products, petitioner maintains numerous assembly plants in various states other than Michigan, where parts manufactured in Michigan are shipped and assembled into completed automobiles and trucks and shipped to purchasers or prospective purchasers in zones covering various states within shipping radius of said assembly plants. Petitioner is one of the largest producers, manufacturers and distributors of automobiles in the United States with wide influence in the automobile manufacturing industry as a whole.

The Chrysler Corporation, Nash-Kelvinator, Graham-Paige Motors Corporation, the Hudson Motor Car Co., the Reo Motor Co., and the Packard Motor Co., all are also engaged in the manufacture of automobiles in competition with petitioner and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among [178] the various states of the United States and the District of Columbia, cars manufactured by them being shipped from their factories in Michigan and elsewhere to all parts of the United States for sale to the purchasing public. Petitioner maintains several thousand retail dealer outlets throughout the United States with whom it has contracts to sell its cars wholesale at prices fixed by petitioner, the dealers agreeing to maintain places of business of a definite kind and nature and to sell the cars in a manner specified by petitioner. The dealers purchase their cars from petitioner for cash, sight draft or through the Universal Credit Corporation, a Michigan corporation organized by petitioner in 1928, for the purpose of furnishing credit to its dealers and retail purchasers. In May 1933, petitioner sold its entire stock in the Universal to the Commercial Investment Trust Co.

Petitioner's dealers agree to take retail orders for new cars on a specified order blank and operate their business generally in the manner outlined in their contracts with it. Petitioner sells its cars direct to dealers who take title to them and in turn the dealers sell to the public, but petitioner assists in the sales through wide and extensive advertising in newspapers, magazines, billboards and in other ways.

The business of the Universal Credit Corporation is confined entirely to financing the sale of petitioner's cars, accessories and parts sold to petitioner's dealers and to the financing of retail sales by dealers to the public, except where a used car of another make is traded in, when if requested, it will also finance the sale of such cars. Retail contracts are entered into between the buyer and the dealer, whereby the retail buyer makes a down payment either in cash or by trading in a used car or sometimes both, leaving an unpaid balance which the purchaser agrees to pay over a period of twelve, eighteen or twenty-four months. The Universal Credit Corporation, pursuant to its arrangement with petitioner, and, if the dealer desires, purchases the installment contract and collects the payments.

Petitioner, in some instances, makes sales of its cars direct to dealers on a cash and delivery basis, payment being made direct to petitioner at time of delivery but usually payments are through transactions such as bill of sale and trust receipt, conditional sales contract, lease or chattel mortgage, having varying methods in the different localities. Petitioner then transfers its interest and title to the cars thus sold on a credit basis to the Universal Credit Corporation, receives the cash and the dealer thereafter deals direct with Universal in making payment.

The so-called "six percent plan" of financing the retail sale of automobiles was first used in 1935 by the General Motors Corporation, through its wholly-owned subsidiary, the General Motors Acceptance Corporation and was as follows:

"GENERAL MOTORS ACCEPTANCE CORPORATION REDUCES TIME PAYMENT COSTS
ON NEW CARS
With a new 6% Plan
SIMPLE AS A, B, C

A—TAKE YOUR UNPAID BALANCE.
B—Add cost of insurance.
C—Multiply by 6%—12 Months' plan.
(One-half of one percent per month for periods more or less than 12 months.)

That's your whole financing cost. No extras. No service fees. No other charges.[1]

GMAC announces today a new, economical way to buy any new General Motors car from General Motors dealers all over the United States.

It's the plan you've been waiting for—a plan you can understand at a glance. It is far simpler and more economical than any other automobile time payment arrangement you've ever tried.

[1] In some states a small legal documentary fee is required.

Actually as simple as A, B, C—this new plan provides for convenient time payments of the unpaid balance on your car—including cost of insurance and a financing cost of 6%. This represents a considerable reduction in the cost of financing car purchases. It is not 6% interest, but simply a convenient multiplier anyone can use and understand. Nothing is added in the way of so-called service or carrying charges. There are no extras. Simply a straightforward, easy to-understand transaction.

This single step brings the world's finest cars within reach of thousands who have long needed new cars. When you buy a new Cadillac or Buick, Chevrolet or Pontiac, Oldsmobile or LaSalle, on this new plan, you actually save money!

And finally—buyers under this new plan receive an insurance policy in the Gen[179]eral Exchange Insurance Corporation which protects them against Fire, Theft and Accidental Damage to their cars.

(Block here asking owners to make comparison with other finance plan.)

OFFERED ONLY BY DEALERS IN

CHEVROLET CARS & TRUCKS—PONTIAC—OLDSMOBILE—

BUICK—LASALLE—CADILLAC"

General Motors, through its subsidiaries, published many thousands of advertisements featuring this so-called "6% plan," some with the above explanation, others merely referring to a "6%" plan without explanation.

Other leading automobile manufacturing concerns promptly announced similar plans, all featuring the "6%" plan, determined approximately in the same manner as the General Motors, the first to do so being Chrysler, followed by Nash Motors, Reo, Hudson, Graham-Paige, Packard, and the petitioner, all appearing in advertisements in newspapers of general and wide circulation and all featuring in a conspicuous manner, the symbol "6%" or the words "six percent," and all determined in the same manner as the plan of petitioner.

Many independent finance companies engaged primarily in financing retail sales of automobiles were obliged to abandon their preexisting methods of computing charges in order to meet competitive disadvantages to which they were put by the publication and operation of the so-called "6%" plans of petitioner and others. Before that, the charges of all automobile finance companies were slightly higher than the rates under the so-called "6%" plan and were based on a flat charge for a specified credit over a definite period.

In January 1936, petitioner announced it had adopted the "6%" plan and issued throughout the country the advertisement found in the margin.[1]

Petitioner published many similar advertisements, some with the explanatory data in the advertisement quoted in the margin, others merely referring to the plan as follows:

Ask your Ford dealers about the new $25-a-month new U. C. C. 6% finance plan.

6% Plan of Financing. Total cost of credit is only ½% monthly on original unpaid balance and insurance.

(6% for 12 months)

Petitioner published similar advertisements which it paid for out of a fund collected and controlled by it called the "Local or Dealers Fund," created by the collection from the dealers of a fixed charge for advertising on all cars sold by them, and charged on the invoice to the dealer and in turn passed on to the public by him. The "6%" plan of advertising was discontinued by petitioner about July 1936.

At the same time petitioner published the above outlined advertisements, the Universal Credit Corporation, acting concertedly with petitioner, published similar advertisements at its own expense, all of which were for the purpose of promoting the sale of petitioner's cars.

The respondent issued complaints against all the other larger automobile manufacturing companies at about the same time it issued the present complaint against petitioner, all of which were disposed of by a stipulation by each that it would cease [180] and desist from the practices complained of by the Commission with the exception of the petitioner and the General Motors Corporation. The stipulations in each case were similar and provided in part:

FORD
ANNOUNCES $25-A-MONTH
TIME PAYMENTS AND A
NEW UCC 6% FINANCE PLAN
Any New Ford V-8 Car
Can Now Be Purchased for $25 a Month with Usual Low Down-Payment

This $25-a-month time payment plan enables you to buy a New Ford V-8 car through your Ford dealer on new low monthly terms.

After the usual low down payment is made, $25 a month is all you have to pay for any type of new car, including insurance and financing.

Your cost for this extension of credit is only one half of 1 percent a month on your original unpaid balance and insurance. This plan reduces financing charges for twelve months to 6 percent. For example, if you owe a balance of $400 for your car and insurance, you pay $24 for the year of credit; if the balance is $200 you pay $12. Your credit cost for one year is the original unpaid balance multiplied by 6 percent.

UCC plans provide you with insurance protection at regular conference rates. You have not only fire and theft insurance, but $50 deductible collision, and protection against other accidental physical damage to your car.

The Universal Credit Company has made these plans available through Ford dealers in the United States.

Certain purchasers and prospective purchasers did interpret and understand that the advertising of said finance plan or method as above set forth did contemplate a simple interest charge at 6% per annum upon the deferred and unpaid balance of the purchase price of motor vehicles, and this did cause such members of the purchasing public to buy motor vehicles in that belief.

All of the companies executing these agreements to cease and desist carried them into effect and the respondent found that in the event petitioner resumed the advertisement of a "6%" plan, the companies which had agreed to cease and desist from the plan would be at a competitive disadvantage in the industry.

The "6%" plan was computed in actual practice as follows:

On a new car, the purchase price of which is $643 and on which the purchaser makes a down payment of $243, there is an unpaid balance of $400 due and if the dealer furnishes the insurance, its cost on the above transaction would be $15, the total balance to be paid by the purchaser would be $415 and where this amount is paid according to the 6% plan (or ½ of 1% a month) in 18 consecutive monthly payments of substantially $25 each, the charge of ½ of 1% a month for 18 months, or 9% on $415 would be $37.35, which, added to the original balance of $415, makes a total sum of $452.35.

This same transaction with an unpaid balance of $415 paid in a like manner at $25 a month over a period of 18 months on a straight 6% simple interest per annum basis, computed on the declining balances as reduced by monthly installments, would amount to $19.34 interest charge or $18.01 less than the charge made pursuant to petitioner's plan. Comparative tables prepared by an expert accountant in evidence in the case indicated that the credit charge under petitioner's "6%" plan amounted to approximately 11½% simple annual interest.

The 6% plan of all of petitioner's competitors were also computed in the above described manner and the average member of the public was under the impression the "6%" plan as advertised by petitioner and the other manufacturers meant 6% simple interest annually on the remaining balance after deducting each successive monthly payment.

The cars manufactured by petitioner at Dearborn, Michigan, and sold through retail dealers to the retail purchasers thereof throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia are in the regular flow of interstate commerce. The Commission found that the statements contained in petitioner's advertising matter with reference to its "6%" plan had the tendency to mislead and deceive, and did mislead and deceive, a substantial part of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that petitioner's finance plan or method as outlined contemplates a simple 6% interest charge upon the deferred and unpaid balance of the purchase price of cars and tended to cause, and has caused, the public to purchase automobiles from the petitioner through its dealers and agents because of this mistaken belief, when the actual credit charge, computed in accordance with the "6%" plan, amounts to approximately 11½% simple annual interest on the unpaid balance of the installments due on cars sold. It also found that these acts and practices of petitioner tended to unfairly divert trade to the petitioner and its dealers from competitors who correctly represented the cost of the credit charges for purchasing cars on the installment or deferred payment plan and a substantial injury had been done by petitioner to competitors in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

The order to cease and desist of the Commission is found in the margin.[2]

[181] Petitioner seeks to avoid the questioned order on the following grounds:

1. That the method used by it in the sale of its automobiles was not unfair.

2. That the proceedings by the Commission to prevent the use of the method by the petitioner is not in the public interest.

3. That the method of the petitioner does not affect competition in interstate commerce.

4. That the desist order goes further than is reasonably necessary to correct the alleged evil and to protect the rights of competitors and the public.

---

[2] This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the stipulation as to the facts, agreement to cease and desist and dismissal heretofore entered herein as to the respondent, Universal Credit Corporation, the answer of respondent, Ford Motor Co., the testimony and other evidence taken before Edward E. Reardon, an examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint, briefs filed herein and oral arguments by James M. Hammond, counsel for the Commission, and by Henry C. Bogle, counsel for the respondent, Ford Motor Co., and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent, Ford Motor Co., has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act:

It is ordered, That the respondent, Ford Motor Co., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of motor vehicles in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the words "six percent" or the figure and symbol "6%," or any other words, figures, or symbols indicating percentage, in connection with the cost of, or the additional charge for, the use of a deferred or installment payment plan of purchasing motor vehicles, when the amount of such cost or charge collected from, or to be paid by, the purchaser of a motor vehicle under such plan is in excess of simple interest at the rate of 6 percent per annum, or at the rate indicated by such words, figures, or symbols, calculated on the basis of the unpaid balance due as diminished after crediting installments as paid.

2. Acting concertedly or in cooperation with any company, firm, or individual, or with any of its agents or dealers, in a way calculated to further the sale of motor vehicles through use of the methods referred to in paragraph 1 of this order.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Ford Motor Co., shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

By the Commission.

The relevant portion of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act as it read at the time the present complaint was issued (Act of September 26, 1914, c. 311, 38 Stat. 717, 719–720; U. S. C. 1934 ed., title 15, § 45, 15 U. S. C. A. § 45) is as follows:

That unfair methods of competition in (interstate and foreign) commerce are hereby declared unlawful.

The phrase is not statutorily defined and its scope cannot be precisely determined and what constitutes "unfair methods of competition" must be decided in particular instances upon incidences in light of existing competitive conditions. Schechter Poultry Corp. v. United States, 295 U. S. 495, 532–533. The courts, and not the Commission, must ultimately determine, as a matter of law, what this phrase includes. Federal Trade Commission v. Beech-Nut Packing Company, 257 U. S. 441, 453.

Unfair methods of competition as used in the act may consist generally of false advertising of a product, process, or method which misleads, or has the capacity or tendency to mislead, the purchasing public into buying such product, process, or method in the belief it is acquiring one essentially different. Federal Trade Commission v. Winsted Hosiery Company, 258 U. S. 483, 492–493; Procter & Gamble Company, et al. v. Federal Trade Commission, 11 F. (2d) 47 (C. C. A. 6). The question does not depend upon the purpose of the advertisement nor upon the good or bad faith of the advertiser. The point for consideration here is whether, under the facts and circumstances in connection with the publication of the advertisement, the language in and of itself, without regard to good or bad faith, is calculated to deceive the buying public into believing it is purchasing petitioner's cars at one price when in fact it is purchasing them at another. A prerequisite to the application of the statute in any case is the unfair interference with interstate trade and such deception of the public as to cause it to buy and pay for something which it is in fact not getting.

Petitioner contends that the method of competition here complained of is not unfair within the meaning of the act nor of the foregoing general rule, as it long has been the established practice of automobile manufacturers and vendors of merchandise on the deferred payment plan to charge an advance over what would be charged in a cash sale and that it also has been the common practice of banks and small loan [182] companies to advertise loans with a percentage added to the principal payable over fixed periods without calculating interest upon a declining balance. It also charges that the Federal Housing Administration and the Federal Electric Home and Farm Authority, two governmental agencies, use the same plan. It thus argues that the present advertisements were subject to the interpretation only that petitioner was adding a charge to the cash price of its cars because of the extension of credit to the purchaser.

The practices in the automobile industry or those in similar related enterprises are immaterial, if petitioner's advertisements misled the members of the public into purchasing its cars at a higher cost than they otherwise would have paid.

A method inherently unfair does not cease to be so because the falsity of the public representation has become so well known to those engaged in identical or similar enterprises as to no longer deceive them. Federal Trade Commission v. Winsted Hosiery Company, 258 U. S. 483, 494.

The average individual does not make, and often is incapable of making, minute calculations to determine the cost of property purchased on the deferred payment plan. Mechanization, industrialization, and urbanization have transformed the structure of our society and raised to the proportions of a major social problem, the protection of the installment purchaser against his own ignorance and the pressure of his need.

The present advertisement must be considered from the view of the prospective purchasers of petitioner's cars and, in determining its capacity or tendency to mislead, must be judged from its general fabric, not its single threads.

Kindred senses in the use of language may be so interwoven that the perplexities cannot be disentangled nor any reason be assigned why one should be ranged before the other. The advertisement here in question is susceptible to the construction that it contains two ideas; one, that it means simply an addition of six percent to the cash price of the car, charged for an extension of credit and the other, that it means ordinary interest at the rate of 6% on deferred installment payments. Either idea is so obscure that one blends into the other. The uncertainty of terms and commixture of ideas expressed by petitioner in its advertisement had the tendency to mislead. General Motors Corp., et al. v. Federal Trade Commission, 114 F. (2d) 33 (C. C. A. 2).

Petitioner's contention that the present proceedings were not in the interest of the public must be rejected. The Federal Trade Commission Act was intended to afford a preventative remedy, not a compensatory one, so that the suggestion no damage has been shown by the offense complained of to a purchaser of petitioner's cars or a competitor is no defense to the proceeding. National Harness Manufacturers Asssociation v. Federal Trade Commission, 268 F. 705 (C. C. A. 6).

The primary consideration in carrying out the purpose of the present act is the promotion and continuance of free enterprise and competition in interstate commerce. Installment credit in varying forms is widely used in this country in the purchase of many types of property and especially affects the manufacturers of automobiles. No one can deny it is in the public interest in the sale on credit of such devices to prevent the use of methods which have a tendency and capacity to mislead the purchasing public and to unfairly damage the manufacturer's present or potential competitors and that such practices may be restrained. In determining whether a proceeding is in the public interest, the Commission exercises a broad discretion (Federal Trade Commission v. Klesner, 280 U. S. 19, 28) and each case must be determined upon its own facts. Federal Trade Commission v. Beech-Nut Company, 257 U. S. 441, 453. When misleading advertisements attract customers by means of deception perpetrated by the advertiser, it is presumed that business is thereby unfairly diverted from a competitor, who truthfully advertises his process, method or goods. Federal Trade Commission v. Winsted Hosiery Company, supra.

The advertisement in the case before us was in a concededly highly competitive field of business and its context was susceptible of attracting to petitioner the business of those who wished to finance the installment sales of automobiles at a simple 6% rate of interest. We conclude that under the circumstances of the instant case, the proceedings were in the interest of the public.

[183] Petitioner urges on us that neither the 6% plan itself, nor its advertisement, affected the sale of automobiles by the petitioner to its dealers, nor their transportation in interstate commerce, that petitioner sells only to its dealers and that by the time its cars reach them, wherever located, petitioner has received its payment therefor and has no further interest therein. It urges that the 6-percent plan and its advertising relate solely to the financing of payments on time sales of cars sold by its dealers to their customers and are matters with which it is not concerned, also that sales by its dealers to its customers are purely intrastate transactions.

Advertising goes hand in hand with volume of production and retail distribution. It operates to increase the demand for and availability of goods and to develop quickly consumers' acceptance of the manufactured products. Expressed another way, it breaks down consumers' resistance, creates consumers' acceptance, and develops consumers' demand.

The Federal Trade Commission Act was enacted under the power of Congress to regulate interstate and foreign commerce and by its express terms (sec. 4) (15 U. S. C. A. sec. 44) deals only with such commerce. Interstate commerce includes intercourse for the purpose of trade which results in the passage of property, persons or messages from within one State to within another State. All of those things which stimulate or decrease the flow of commerce, although not directly in its stream, are essential adjuncts thereto and the Congress has power to confer on the Federal Trade Commission their regulation. Stafford v. Wallace, 258 U. S. 495, 516.

The use of advertising as an aid to the production and distribution of goods has been recognized so long as to require only passing notice. The economy of mass production is just as well known and the effects of advertising may be described as mass selling without which distribution would be lessened and a fortiori production correspondingly decreased. The present advertisement of the method for financing the purchase of petitioner's cars on credit was an integral part of their production and distribution.

The sale on credit of petitioner's cars by its local dealers, when separately considered, may be intrastate in character but when the activities of petitioner's local agencies are weighed in the light of their relationship to the petitioner, and its financing sales of cars, it is at once apparent that there is such a close and substantial relationship to interstate commerce that the control of such activities is appropriate to its protection.

Petitioner urges that the case of Federal Trade Commission v. Bunte Bros., Inc. (decided Feb. 17, 1941, 61 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580, 312 U. S. 349), is decisive here. In that case the alleged unfair method of competition was admittedly confined to activities wholly within the State of Illinois, and the Commission claimed jurisdiction on the ground that it had the duty to regulate intrastate activities in order to protect interstate commerce. The court held that no such power was implied in the act and declined to enforce the Commission's order. The cited case is without point.

Cease and desist orders of the Commission should go no further than reasonably necessary to correct the evil complained of and preserve the rights of competitors and the public and we are of the opinion that the order here did not violate this rule, but was necessary to protect the public against the species of deception alleged in the complaint. General Motors Corporation v. Federal Trade Commission, supra. The Commission's findings are supported by substantial evidence. Petition denied and order of Commission affirmed.

HERSHEY CHOCOLATE CORPORATION, PETER CAILLER KOHLER SWISS CHOCOLATES COMPANY, INC., LAMONT, CORLISS & COMPANY, SANITARY AUTOMATIC CANDY CORPORATION, BERLO VENDING COMPANY, AND CONFECTION CABINET CORPORATION v. FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION[1]

No. 7103

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Third Circuit. June 30, 1941)

FINDINGS OF COMMISSION—WHERE SUPPORTED BY EVIDENCE.

The findings of the Federal Trade Commission are conclusive if supported by the evidence. Federal Trade Commission Act, Sec. 5 (c), 15 U. S. C. A. sec. 45 (c).

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—CONCERT OF ACTION—DEALING ON EXCLUSIVE AND TYING BASIS—CANDY BAR MANUFACTURERS AND VENDING MACHINE OPERATORS.

An arrangement between candy bar manufacturers and certain operators of vending machines under which sale of candy bars suitable for vending machine trade was restricted to such operators, which cut off competitors' source of sup[969]ply, constituted "unfair competition" which was proper subject of order of Federal Trade Commission.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—CONCERT OF ACTION—DEALING ON EXCLUSIVE AND TYING BASIS—WHERE UNDULY RESTRICTIVE OR MONOPOLISTIC EFFECT.

An arrangement between manufacturers and distributors which tends unduly to hinder competitors or create a monopoly is unlawful.

PUBLIC INTEREST—COMPETITORS' SOURCES OF SUPPLY—WHERE MONOPOLISTIC TENDENCY IN RESPECT OF.

The making available to all competitors of commodities essential to open competition in the industry, thereby insuring a free and unobstructed flow of such commodities from manufacturer to consumer is in the "public interest" and any tendency to create a monopoly may become subject of an order of the Federal Trade Commission.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—PUBLIC INTEREST—CONCERT OF ACTION—DEALING ON EXCLUSIVE AND TYING BASIS—CANDY BAR MANUFACTURERES AND VENDING MACHINE OPERATORS—WHERE ARRANGEMENT BETWEEN MANUFACTURER OF LEADING VENDING MACHINE BARS AND THREE LARGEST OPERATORS, AND COMPETITORS AND CUSTOMERS HAMPERED AND CUT OFF.

Where result of an arrangement, under which manufacturers of candy bars which enjoyed a greater consumer demand than any competing brands furnished bars suitable for vending machine trade only to the three largest operators of vending machines, had effect of making it difficult for operators' competitors to conduct their business because of inability to obtain bars at profitable prices, and the competitors' customers desiring to purchase the bars were deprived of opportunity to do so, an order of the Federal Trade Commission was appropriate, on ground that the "public interest" was involved.

[1] Reported in 121 F. (2d) 968. For case before Commission, see 28 F. T. C. 1057.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—APPELLATE PROCEDURE AND PROCEEDINGS—PETITIONS FOR REVIEW—FULL AND FAIR HEARING—PROFFER OF PROOF AND CROSS-EXAMINATION—REJECTION AND RESTRICTION OF—WHERE OBJECTIONS NOT SEASONABLY TAKEN.

Where petitioners who sought review of order of Federal Trade Commission failed to avail themselves of remedy provided by the provision of the Federal Trade Commission Act relating to review of an order and rehearing, petitioners could not raise contention that they were deprived of full and fair hearing because of striking from record of proffer of proof and restriction on cross-examination of certain witnesses.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—METHODS, ACTS AND PRACTICES—ABANDONMENT—IF SHORTLY PRIOR TO COMPLAINT.

Alleged fact that unfair trade practices which were subject of order of the Federal Trade Commission were discontinued shortly before complaint was issued did not preclude the Commission from entering the order.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—SCOPE—IF CERTAIN ITEMS EMBRACED NOT INCLUDED IN COMPLAINT.

An order of the Federal Trade Commission was not invalid because it referred to unfair practices in connection with certain items which were not included in the complaint, since the Commission's power was not limited to the enjoining of unfair acts of competitors only as evidenced in the past.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—PARTIES—PARTICIPATION AS TEST OF BINDING EFFECT ON—WHERE PARTY PARTICIPANT AS PRINCIPAL OF EXCLUSIVE SELLING AGENT.

An order entered by the Federal Trade Commission was binding on all parties who participated in the unfair trade practices involved, including a party whose participation occurred through its exclusive selling agent.

Before MARIS, CLARK, and GOODRICH, Circuit Judges.

CLARK, Circuit Judge:

The Federal Trade Commission finds that two of the petitioners, Hershey Chocolate Corp., and Peter Cailler Kohler Swiss Chocolate Co., are manufacturers of chocolate bars which enjoy a greater consumer demand than any competing brands. By contract the petitioners' sale of these bars in a size suitable for the vending machine trade was restricted to the three largest operators of vending machines, Sanitary Automatic Candy Corp., Berlo Vending Co. and Confection Cabinet Corp. This limitation in the selection of retail outlets is found to continue even after the expiration of the contract. Its effect is held to unfairly injure the competitors of the three chosen vending machine operators and to deprive the public to some extent of their most popular chocolate bars. The Commission further finds that the agreement and understanding which succeeded it was a practice which unduly restricted competition and tended to create a monopoly. It therefore ordered the two chocolate manufacturers, the sales agent of one, and the three vending machine companies, to cease and desist the continuance of the unfair methods of competition implicit in the agreement and understanding.

The six companies at whom the order was directed[1] have raised numerous objections to the findings and order. These objections seem to us to go to the weight of the evidence and to the inferences to be drawn therefrom. The petitioners have, in fact, worked at cross purposes. Hershey contends that its practices are not harmful because "there were thirty or forty other companies in the United States similarly engaged with 'Hershey' and 'Kohler' in the manufacture of chocolate candy products and many made solid chocolate bars suitable for vending machine use", whereas Kohler refutes this and objects to a lack of proof of substantial competition, claiming that Lamont and Hershey have but one competitor in this field.

The findings are conclusive upon us if supported by evidence.[2] This evidence discloses that the limitation and selection of retail outlets was brought about by an agreement between Lamont and the three vending machine operators. This agreement provided that the sale of Kohler chocolate bars for use in vending machines be restricted to the three largest operators of those machines. The nineteen other vending machine companies which formerly purchased Kohler products were notified that the manufacture of vending machine bars was discontinued. To keep the trade of the three largest vendors, Hershey was forced into a similar arrangement. Even after the termination of the exclusive distributor contracts neither Hershey nor Lamont, with a single exception, offered to sell to any other vending machine company a solid chocolate bar equal in size and weight to and at a price as low as the size, weight and price of the items sold to the three largest operators. This was clearly a cutting off of a competitor's source. This was unfair competition even under the National Industrial Recovery Act Codes.[3] The analogous situation of boycotts by wholesalers of certain retailers who violate trade provisions have been held unfair competition.[4] A scheme like the one be[971]fore us is unlawful where it tends unduly to hinder competitors or create a monopoly:

> The dogma has been that the Commission is not a censor of business morals, but that the practice must be characterized by deception, bad faith, fraud or oppression, or must be against public policy because of its dangerous tendency to hinder competition unduly or to create monopoly.
> Unfair Competition—Unfair Methods of Competition Within the Federal Trade Commission Act, 82 University of Pennsylvania Law Review 664, 665.[5]

The petitioners make three additional arguments. They assert that the proceeding is not in the public interest, that they were deprived of a full and fair hearing, and that the Board's jurisdiction had ended. As authority for their first point, they cite F. T. C. v. Klesner.[6] This case holds that the Commission has no jurisdiction where the public interest is not specific and substantial.[7] But the decision merely makes the point that the Commission cannot decide private quarrels between competitors. There can be no question about public interest where there is a clear tendency to monopoly. The making available to all competitors of commodities essential to open competition in the industry and thereby insuring a free and unobstructed flow of such commodities from the manufacturer to the consumer is certainly in the public interest. Under the exclusive distributor arrangements competitors of the three largest vending machine operators had difficulty in conducting their business because of their inability to obtain Hershey and Kohler products at profitable prices. Their customers desiring to purchase Hershey and Kohler products have been deprived of an opportunity to do so.

An alleged striking from the record of a proffer of proof and an alleged restriction on the cross-examination of certain witnesses are the bases for the claim that the petitioners were deprived of a full and fair hearing. Even if these contentions had merit, they cannot now be raised since the petitioners have failed to avail themselves of the remedy provided by section 5 (c) of the Federal Trade Commission Act.[8]

Finally the petitioners contend that the order is invalid in that the practices ordered ceased were discontinued shortly before the complaint was issued, and in that the order refers to unfair practices in connection with several confectionary items whereas the complaint was limited to one item. The Commission would have no power at all if it lost jurisdiction every time a competitor halted an unfair practice just as the Commission was about to act. The practice may have been discontinued but without the Commission's order it could be immediately resumed.[9] Likewise the Commission's power would be limited indeed if it were restricted to enjoining unfair acts of competitors only as evidenced in the past. To be of any value the order must proscribe the method of unfair competition as well as the specific [972] acts by which it has been manifested. In no other way could the Commission fulfill its remedial function.[10] The order is binding upon all petitioners, even Kohler whose participation in the arrangement occurred through Lamont, its exclusive selling agent.

The order of the Federal Trade Commission is affirmed. A decree enforcing it will be entered.

PERMA-MAID COMPANY, INC. v. FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION [1]

No. 8516

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit. June 25, 1941)

FINDINGS OF COMMISSION—WHERE BASED ON STIPULATION, CHIEFLY—EFFECT.

The findings of the Federal Trade Commission in a proceeding for prevention of unfair methods of competition, based almost entirely upon stipulation, were conclusive. Federal Trade Commission Act, sec. 5, 15 U. S. C. A. sec. 45.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—DISPARAGEMENT AND MISREPRESENTATION OF COMPETITIVE PRODUCT—SALESMEN'S FALSE REPRESENTATIONS—WHERE INCLUDED AMONG COMPETITORS THOSE WHO DO NOT ENGAGE IN SUCH PRACTICE, AND TENDENCY TO INDUCE PURCHASE BY PUBLIC THEREBY—STAINLESS STEEL AND ALUMINUM COOKING UTENSILS.

Findings of the Federal Trade Commission that salesmen for corporation which sold and distributed stainless steel cooking utensils made false representations that food prepared or kept in aluminum utensils was detrimental to health, that there were among the corporation's competitors, distributors of utensils who did not make false statements concerning products of their competitors and that representations made by salesmen had tendency to induce public to purchase corporation's utensils, were sufficient to support cease and desist order entered against corporation.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—DISPARAGEMENT AND MISREPRESENTATION OF COMPETITIVE PRODUCT—SALESMEN'S FALSE REPRESENTATIONS—IF PREVENTIVE EFFORTS THERETOFORE DIRECTED AGAINST BY EMPLOYER-SELLER, ABSENT SHOWING ACTION PRIOR TO COMPLAINT OR SUCCESS THEREOF—STAINLESS STEEL AND ALUMINUM COOKING UTENSILS.

Where Federal Trade Commission found that salesmen for corporation which sold and distributed stainless steel cooking utensils made false representations concerning effect of cooking food in aluminum utensils, finding of commission that corporation forbade its salesmen to make such representations, and for more than a year had on every occasion where a violation of its instructions had been called to its attention penalized its salesmen, did not require setting aside of cease and desist order entered against corporation, in absence of finding showing that corporation made any attempt to prevent unlawful practices prior to filing of complaint or of conclusive showing that effort made by corporation to prevent the practices was successful.

METHODS, ACTS AND PRACTICES—ABANDONMENT—WHERE AFTER COMPLAINT—WHETHER CONTROVERSY THEREBY MOOT.

Abandonment of unfair trade practices after complaint was filed by Federal Trade Commission would not render controversy "moot", even if abandonment was clearly shown.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—ABANDONMENT—COMMISSION DUTY.

The duty of Federal Trade Commission to prevent use of unfair method of competition in commerce is not discharged by abandoning complaint upon a showing that unlawful practices have been discontinued, since such showing constitutes no guaranty that they will not be resumed and the law prescribes only one effective method by which commission may discharge its duty, that is, by issuance of appropriate cease and desist order.

Before HICKS, ALLEN, and HAMILTON, Circuit Judges.

HICKS, Circuit Judge:

Petition by the Perma-Maid Co., Inc., to review an order of the Federal Trade Commission directing it to cease and desist from,—

1. Representing that food prepared or kept in aluminum utensils is detrimental to the user thereof;

2. Representing that the preparation of food in aluminum utensils causes the formation of poisons;

3. Representing that the consumption of food prepared or kept in aluminum utensils will cause ulcers, cancers, cancerous growths and various other ailments, afflictions and diseases.

The Commission seeks the enforcement of the order.

The order is based upon findings from the evidence and upon a stipulation of the parties. In substance the findings are that petitioner, a corporation, has its principal place of business in Cincinnati, Ohio; that it is a subsidiary of the Electric Auto-Lite Co. and the selling agent and distributor of stainless steel cooking utensils manufactured by that company; that it has offices in various cities of the country and employs about three hundred salesmen who work therefrom and obtain orders for the purchase of cooking utensils in house to house canvassing; that utensils so ordered have been delivered by petitioner from Cincinnati to the purchasers in other states; that petitioner for more than one year prior to December 13, 1937, the date of its answer to the complaint, has been thus engaged in interstate commerce; that in the sale of such utensils it is, and has been, engaged in substantial competition with other individuals, firms and corporations, who are and have been engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling and distributing in interstate commerce cooking utensils made from steel and other metal or materials; that petitioner's agents and salesmen have exhibited samples of its products to prospective purchasers and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its products, have, upon their own initiative, made false, misleading and unfairly disparaging statements and representations with respect to the danger from the use of aluminum in the manufacture of kitchen utensils and the dire effects produced by aluminum materials upon foods prepared therein; that these false and misleading statements have been made in pamphlets, leaflets and circulars, and in sales talk to prospective purchasers. The Commission found the following to be typical of the various statements and representations made by petitioner's salesmen to would-be purchasers:

(1) Scientific information pertaining to the ingestion of aluminum compounds is now available. With all the Governmental reports of the deleterious effects of this metal before us, surely we should heed the warnings when we consider the fact that many millions of dollars worth of aluminum is used for the purpose of cooking and storing foods throughout the United States.

(2) The metal is soft and forms various poisons with the foods with which it is in contact.

(3) There is no objection to the use of this metal for casket purposes or as a mordant in the dye which is used to color the clothing which covers a corpse.

(4) The manufacturers of dyes state in their literature that we should NOT do our dyeing in aluminum—There is a reason.

(5) The substance is used for tanning hides, wall paper sizing, etc. It is the principal metal base used in making bricks, sewer pipe and road building materials. * * *

(6) Boil some of your drinking water in an aluminum dish for one-half hour, pour in a clear glass can and after cooling several hours note the white feathery substance in the bottom of the can. This is the poison dissolved from the utensil which readily combines with other chemicals forming aluminum compounds, some of these are: Aluminum acetate, chloride of aluminum, aluminum phosphate, aluminum sulphate. A host of other potent poisons are manufactured during the ordinary [284] process of cooking foods in aluminum dishes. These are formed according to the kind of food cooked therein.

(7) Did you ever find maggots in your aluminum pans? Do you know that such pans may be full of the most deadly bacteria known to science?

(8) Almost daily you read in the press of hundreds being poisoned by eating food cooked in aluminum. Do you know how such poisonings occur? If you do not, this circular will tell you.

(9) It has frequently happened that sauerkraut has eaten holes completely through the aluminum kettles in which it was prepared.

(10) Vegetables that are cooked with soda and salt will produce similar results.

(11) Corned beef corrodes most aluminum utensils. * * *

The Commission further found that these statements and representations have served as representations that food prepared or kept in aluminum utensils was detrimental to health and caused formation of poisons and that the consumption of such food would cause ulcers, cancers, cancerous growths and other ailments, afflictions and diseases.

It found that aluminum has for many years been used in the manufacture of cooking utensils and has been found to be satisfactory; that the consumption of food prepared or kept in aluminum kitchen utensils will not cause ulcers, cancers, cancerous growths or other ailments or diseases and that the preparation of food in aluminum utensils does not cause the formation of poison.

It further found that there are among the competitors of petitioner distributors of similar utensils made from aluminum, steel and other materials who do not falsely represent their products or make false and disparaging statements concerning the products of their competitors; that the false, misleading and unfairly disparaging representations made by petitioner's salesmen had the tendency to, and did, mislead and deceive a substantial number of persons, to whom they were made, into erroneously believing that aluminum cooking utensils are harmful and dangerous, thus inducing them to purchase petitioner's utensils instead of those of its competitors.

These findings based almost entirely upon stipulation are conclusive [Federal Trade Commission Act, Sec. 5] and sufficient to support the cease and desist order unless the order is completely negatived and destroyed by certain other findings upon which petitioner relies, i. e., the Commission found from the stipulation that the false and misleading statements and representations made in the pamphlets, leaflets and circular heretofore referred to were not printed, obtained or paid for by petitioner but were obtained and paid for by its agents and representatives from persons having no connection with or interest in petitioner's business. However, petitioner agrees that the acts of its agents were within the scope of their employment and that it must assume full responsibility therefor.

The Commission further found that upon discovering that certain of its agents had made the statements and representations and had distributed the pamphlets and other literature referred to, petitioner forbade them to make such statements and representations or to distribute such literature; and for more than one year had on every occasion, where a violation of its instructions had been called to its attention, discharged or otherwise penalized its agents for violating its orders.

These findings afford no warrant for setting aside the cease and desist order. They do not show that petitioner made any attempt to prevent the unlawful practices prior to the filing of the complaint on November 20, 1937. They do not conclusively show that any effort at any time made by it to prevent the practices was successful. Moreover, an abandonment of the practices, even if clearly shown, does not render the controversy moot. Such is the latest pronouncement of the Supreme Court. Federal Trade Commission v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 304 U. S. 257, 260. It is the duty of the Commission [Sec. 5 of Federal Trade Commission Act] "to prevent persons, partnerships or corporations from using unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce." [Italics ours.]

This duty is not discharged by abandoning the complaint upon a showing, not clearly made here, that the unlawful practices have been discontinued. Such showing constitutes no guaranty that they will not be resumed. See Fed. Tr. Commission v. Wallace, 75 F. (2d) 733, 738 (C. C. A. 8). The law prescribes one effective method, and one only, by which the Commission [285] may discharge its duty, i. e., the issuance of an appropriate cease and desist order. The order in no wise injures petitioner and will be an effective aid to it in its efforts to put a stop to the unfair practices.

The petition to review is denied and an appropriate decree will be entered affirming the order and decreeing its enforcement.

PEP BOYS—MANNY, MOE & JACK, INC. v. FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION [1]

No. 7613

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Third Circuit. June 30, 1941)

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ACT—SECTION 5—PROCEDURE—PUBLIC, RATHER THAN PRIVATE, INTEREST AS UNDERLYING

The procedure in the Federal Trade Commission Act is prescribed in the public interest as distinguished from provisions intended to afford remedies to private persons. Federal Trade Commission Act, sec. 5, 15 U. S. C. A. sec. 45.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—WHETHER EQUIVALENT TO UNFAIR COMPETITION, MERELY.

Under the Federal Trade Commission Act as originally enacted, the expression "unfair methods of competition in commerce are hereby declared unlawful" was intended to have a broader meaning than [159] "unfair competition."

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION AND UNFAIR OR DECEPTIVE ACTS OR PRACTICES —WHEELER-LEA AMENDMENT—INTENT—COMPETITIVE PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENT THERETOFORE SET UP—EFFECT.

Under the Wheeler-Lea Act provision that unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce, are hereby declared unlawful, the failure to mention competition in the later phrase manifests a legislative intent to remove the procedural requirements set up by a prior decision of the Supreme Court, and the Federal Trade Commission may now center its attention on the direct protection of the consumer. Federal Trade Commission Act, sec. 5, 15 U. S. C. A. sec 45, as amended.

[1] Reported in 122 F. (2d) 158. For case before Commission, see 31 F. T. C. 973.

METHODS, ACTS, AND PRACTICES—TRADE AND PRODUCT NAMES—APPROPRIATION AND USE OF EXTENSIVELY ADVERTISED, TO LESSEN OR INJURE COMPETITIVE BUSINESS—RADIOS.

Where seller of radios in interstate commerce took an extensively advertised name used by others and placed it upon seller's receiving sets, and name was selected because of contemplated advantage to seller by lessening or injuring business of present or potential rivals, the Federal Trade Commission, provided there was a specific and substantial public interest, could protect competitors against such methods of seller, or consumers against such practices.

METHODS, ACTS, AND PRACTICES—TRADE AND PRODUCT NAMES—APPROPRIATION AND USE OF EXTENSIVELY ADVERTISED, TO LESSEN OR INJURE COMPETITIVE BUSINESS—USE "REMINGTON" BY SELLER OF RADIOS—WHETHER UNFAIR METHOD, ETC.—UNINTENDED AND UNWITTING PURCHASE OF AVERAGE BUYER AS THEREBY INDUCED, AND PUBLIC INTEREST AS CRITERIA, RATHER THAN DECEPTIVE INTENT OR ACTUAL DECEPTION.

In determining whether seller of radios in interstate commerce under the name "Remington" was guilty of unfair methods of competition and unfair or deceptive practices in commerce in violation of Federal Trade Commission Act, the test was whether natural and probable result of seller's use of "Remington," made the average purchaser, unwittingly, under ordinary conditions, purchase that which he did not intend to buy, and a deliberate effort to deceive was not necessary nor was the Commission bound to find actual deception or that any competitor of seller had been damaged, but Commission was bound to find a specific and substantial public interest involved.

METHODS, ACTS, AND PRACTICES—TRADE AND PRODUCT NAMES—APPROPRIATION AND USE OF EXTENSIVELY ADVERTISED, TO LESSEN OR INJURE COMPETITIVE BUSINESS—USE "REMINGTON" BY SELLER OF RADIOS—WHETHER UNFAIR METHOD, ETC., AND PUBLIC INTEREST—WHERE LARGE NUMBER OF PURCHASES THEREBY EFFECTED BY UNADVISED PUBLIC.

Evidence that seller, which sold radios in competition with others in interstate commerce, had adopted the name "Remington," which had been used by others in business, for use on radios, and that as result thereof purchasers of 5,800 radios from 1935 to 1939 might have been deceived into purchasing an article which they might not have purchased if correctly informed as to its origin, warranted conclusion that purchasing public had a "specific and substantial interest" in protection against deception practiced by seller and that seller's acts constituted "unfair methods of competition in commerce", and "unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce" within Federal Trade Commission Act.

On petition to review and set aside an order of the Commission, order affirmed and decree enforcing it entered.

Mr. Edward A. Kelly, of Philadelphia, Pa. (Mr. Edward A. Kelly, of Philadelphia, Pa., on the brief), for petitioner.

Mr. Martin A. Morrison, of Washington, D. C. (Mr. W. T. Kelley, chief counsel, Federal Trade Commission, and Mr. Carrel F. Rhodes and Mr. James W. Nichol, special attorneys, all of Washington, D. C., on the brief), for the Commission.

Before MARIS and JONES, Circuit Judges, and WALKER, District Judge.

WALKER, District Judge:

The petitioner [1] is charged with unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in [160] commerce in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act.[2] It is a Pennsylvania corporation and for a number of years prior to the cease and desist order of the Federal Trade Commission,[3] it engaged in the sale of radios, radio tubes, other radio parts, and automobile accessories through 52 stores operated by it and located in 7 of the States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the conduct of its business petitioner adopted certain brands for a number of its products and in connection therewith obtained charters of incorporation under different titles, included among which was Windsor-Lloyd Products, Inc. The Windsor-Lloyd Products, Inc., was incorporated under the laws of the State of Delaware and thereafter caused to be registered in the United States Patent Office a certain trade-mark, to wit, "Remington," and in its statement to the United States Patent Office it said that the trade-mark had been adopted and used for radio receiving sets and radio tubes, electrical appliances, machines, and supplies. Petitioner entered into contracts with manufacturing companies for the manufacture of radio receiving sets to be sold exclusively by it, and to said sets it attached name plates which bore the name "Remington," the name or part of the name of a number of corporations transacting and doing business in the United States which are and have been favorably known to the purchasing public and which are and have been long established in various industries. Some of these, and we need name only Remington Rand, Inc., and Remington Arms, use the name "Remington" as a trade name, mark, or brand for the products manufactured and sold by them.

The aforesaid radios were transported to the purchasers thereof in States other than the State where the shipment originated, and in the course and conduct of said business, petitioner was in substantial competition with corporations, firms, and individuals engaged in the sale and transportation of radios in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

The Commission concluded that the said acts and practices of Pep Boys were to the prejudice and injury of the public and petitioner's competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

In 1914 the state of affairs with regard to the combatting of unlawful restraint of trade was unsatisfactory, and Congress yielding to continual demands offered as remedies the Federal Trade Commission Act[4] and the Clayton Act.[5] The procedure in the Federal Trade Commission Act is prescribed in the public interest as distinguished from provisions intended to afford remedies to private persons.[6] As enacted, section 5[7] provided: "Unfair methods of competition in commerce are declared unlawful." This expression, new in the law, was intended to have a broader meaning than "unfair competition" and it was to be determined in particular instances upon evidence in the light of particular competitive conditions and of what is found to be specific and substantial public interest.[8] When the Supreme Court was required to pass thereon in Federal Trade Commission v. Raladam Co.,[9] it emphasized competition and minimized public interest, by holding there must be a finding or evidence from which the conclusion legitimately can be drawn, that the unfair methods of competition substantially injure or tend to injure the business of a competitor or of competitors generally whether legitimate or not. It is said the decision provoked serious criticism in many quarters because it left the consumer virtually unprotected by weakening if not actually nullifying the powers expressly delegated to the Commission for the protection of the public and the consumer.[10] whether or not the criticism was justified [161] is now immaterial because Federal Trade Commission v. Royal Milling Co., et al.[11] and Federal Trade Commission v. Algoma Lumber Co.[12] paved the way for Federal Trade Commission v. R. F. Keppel & Bros., Inc.,[13] wherein the court recognized the Commission's jurisdiction in cases of unfair trading regardless of whether or not it is the public in general or a particular class of competitors whose interest demands the suppression of the practice complained of. This recognition of public interest was approved by Congress in 1938 with the enactment of the Wheeler-Lea Act,[14] the pertinent part of which reads: "Unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce, are hereby declared unlawful." The failure to mention competition in the later phase shows a legislative intent to remove the procedural requirement set up in the Raladam case and the Commission can now center its attention on the direct protection of the consumer where formerly it could protect him only indirectly through the protection of the competitor.[15]

The logic of the prseent trend of the law is apparent when we realize how helpless the Commission would be under the rule of the Raladam case where all the competitors in the industry were using the same practice or where the offender had a monopoly in a field which did not compete with any other field.

In this matter however, we do have competition. The record shows there are about 50 different radio manufacturers making radio sets, tubes, and parts; that it is a competitive industry. Therefore, when the petitioner took an extensively advertised and well known name and placed it upon its radio receiving sets, it did so because the name had, in its opinion, certain intangible qualities which would promote sales, and we must conclude that it was selected because of contemplated advantage by lessening or otherwise injuring the business of present or potential rivals. The Commission, provided there is a specific and substantial public interest, can protect competitors against such methods or consumers against such acts or practices.

The test is whether the natural and probable result of the use by petitioner of the name "Remington" makes the average purchaser unwittingly, under ordinary conditions purchase that which he did not intend to buy. A deliberate effort to deceive is not necessary nor must the Commission find actual deception or that any competitor of petitioner has been damaged,[16] but it must find a specific and substantial public interest.[17] Various ways in which the public interest may be involved have been stated, namely, an unfair method employed under circumstances which include flagrant oppression of the weak by the strong, or when the aggregate loss entailed may be so serious and widespread as to make the matter one of public consequence and no private suit would be brought to stop the unfair conduct, since the loss to each of the individuals affected is too small to warrant it,[18] or where consumers or dealers prefer to purchase a given article because it was made by a particular manufacturer or class of manufacturers, they have a right to do so and this right cannot be satisfied by imposing upon them an exactly similar article or one equally as good but having a different origin.[19]

The result of petitioner's act or practice is that purchasers of 5,800 radios from 1935 to 1939 may have been deceived into purchasing an article which they might not have bought if correctly informed as to its origin. We are of the opinion that the purchasing public is entitled to be protected against the species of deception practiced by the petitioner and that its interest in such protection is specific and substantial.

The order of the Commission is affirmed. A decree enforcing it will be entered.

Mr. Merle P. Lyon, of Washington, D. C., for the Commission.
Mr. Eldon V. Soper, of Los Angeles, Calif., for defendant.

Before HARRISON, District Judge.

The COURT: Gentlemen, this presents an interesting and intriguing question of law, one that has interested the Court considerably. He has not only been interested in studying and reading the authorities submitted by counsel on both sides, but has spent considerable time in independent research. And it is true that there is a conflict in authorities, and some of the conflicts cannot be reconciled, in my way of thinking.

In this case the facts are virtually agreed to, but there is a wide difference of opinion as to the law that is applicable to those particular facts.

The affidavit and answer recognizes the fact that the complaint was filed before the Federal Trade Commission after the effective date of the 1938 amendment.[2] An answer was filed, Mr. Clarke appeared before the Commission at a hearing, answered certain questions and refused to answer such questions as would tend to reveal the formula of his product, claiming that it would be revealing a trade secret. Upon that basis he declined to answer.

An order for an application was made to the Court for an order requiring Mr. Clarke to appear and to give evidence and, in pursuance to that order, Mr. Clarke did appear and did give evidence, but declined to answer the question, "What are the proportions of those different ingredients?" which question followed the testimony of Mr. Clarke wherein he testified concerning the various ingredients that went into this products, but he declined to reveal the proportions of each ingredient.

It seems to me that in view of the language of the complaint filed by the Federal Trade Commission under the 1938 amendment, the [2] Complaint in question, in the matter of Frederick A. Clarke, trading as Boncquet Laboratories, Docket 3660, which issued on December 8, 1938, alleged that respondent disseminated false and misleading advertisements in connection with the offer and sale of his so-called "Boncquet Blood Building Tablets," also known as "Boncquet Tablets" or "Boncquet Hemo-Tabs," which he falsely represented as a food which would regenerate the blood and was scientifically processed so as to have and retain vitamins A, B, E, and G, and which, as represented by him, would accomplish various valuable results, when in fact it was not a food, but a drug, and would not accomplish the results claimed therefor, and was without significant value in any anemic condition.

Commission had jurisdiction to conduct the hearing. It also appears to me that the question as to the contents of his product or the formula was a material question. So it comes down to the question as to whether or not Mr. Clarke could refuse to testify on the ground that it would tend to reveal a trade secret.

Under section 46 of title 15, U. S. C. A. under subdivision (f), it would appear that it was contemplated that under some circumstances there would be revealed to the Federal Trade Commission trade secrets.

The powers of the Commission are broad and the scope of its investigative powers is also broad, providing that a proper complaint has been filed indicating that the Commission has jurisdiction.

Counsel for Mr. Clarke has cited a number of cases on page 3, particularly the case of Federal Trade Commission v. P. Lorillard Company, 283 Fed. 999, and I think that the three cases there cited all hold in substance the same.

I notice in this case of Federal Trade Commission v. P. Lorillard Company, the case in 283 Fed., this language:

> It was not intended to grant an unlimited power of inquisition or an unlimited right of access to books and papers of private parties not engaged in any public service or a search without basis of some facts tending to establish a charge of wrongdoing.

That case naturally wouldn't apply to the case at bar, for there is a complaint charging wrongdoing.

Of course, some of the other cases go off on the question of whether or not the parties are engaged in interstate commerce. In this case that question is not involved because it is recognized by both parties that Mr. Clarke is so engaged.

I have read this case of Carver v. Pinto Leite, found in 7 Law Reports, page 90, also the case of Tetlow v. Savournin, 15 Phila. 170, and other Federal cases cited by counsel for Mr. Clarke. There is no question in the Court's mind but that that Philadelphia case and the case found in the Law Reports tend to uphold him in his position.

Reference is also made to the case of United States v. Basic Products Company, 260 Fed. 472 and, like I mentioned a moment ago, that case went off on the fact that the party against whom the complaint had been filed was not engaged in interstate commerce.

I feel that the case of Moxie Nerve Food Company v. Beach, 35 Fed. 465, also tends to uphold Mr. Clarke's counsel, as well as the Star Kidney Pad Company v. Greenwood, 3 Ontario Reps. 280.

However, I doubt whether, if that case were tried in an American court, that an American court would hold as it was held in that case. That was a case where a suit was had on a promissory note that had been given for certain pads, and the defense was that the notes were obtained by a fraudulent representation, and I believe that our present-day method of trying cases would have permitted the defendant to have demonstrated that the pads were not as represented. And while the court did say in there, "That question would have to be solved by the experience of the sufferer rather than the skill of an expert, and the composition of the pads having formed no part of the inducement of the defendant to buy them," it indicates that the composition and the representations as to composition were not the real issue.

It is rather interesting to note that the cases that tend to uphold Mr. Clarke's position are, most of them, from 60 to 70 years old. I do not mean to infer that a rule that was recognized by a court in 1871 or 1881 or 1883 should be disregarded because of the lapse of time, but it is interesting because it indicates a trend of authorities.

I feel, as I stated before, that the question was material to the issue being tried by the Commission and that Mr. Clarke should have answered the question unless, as stated, that it be deemed a trade secret.

I also feel that in referring to the cases cited by Mr. Clarke's counsel by reason of their age have been, to a marked extent, overruled by more recent cases. The tendency of courts and of fact-finding bodies is to find the most direct method of ascertaining the truth.

I think that was boiled down and very clearly set forth in the case of Funk v. United States, 290 U. S. 371, wherein the court states:

> The fundamental basis upon which all rules of evidence must rest if they are to rest upon reason is their adaptation to the successful development of the truth, and since experience is of all teachers the most dependable, and since experience is also a continuous process, it follows that a rule of evidence at one time thought necessary to the ascertainment of truth should yield to the experience of a succeeding generation whenever that experience has clearly demonstrated the falsity or unwisdom in the old rule.

If I remember correctly, that case goes into the question and discusses somewhat the matter of privilege, and tends to restrict privileges afforded to witnesses wherever the granting of such privilege would tend to withhold the truth from the court.

We have a case from our own district entitled Perkins Oil Well Cementing Company v. Owen, 293 Fed. 759, wherein Judge James wrote the opinion. Among other things, he said:

> Courts have held, and not a few of them, especially in earlier decisions, that the mere fact that a party might in a suit, even a civil one, be required by the judgment to pay a sum in excess of a compensatory amount to his adversary, would entitle him, when examined as a witness, to claim the privilege. This was extending the constitutional protection under the plea of analogy to a limit which is not now recognized to be reasonable. In 28 Ruling Case Law, page 425, the editor gives expression to what seems to be the modern rule, where it is stated:

"However, it has been held that the privilege of a witness does not apply to penalty of a purely remedial character, and the distinction between the provisions of a remedial statute for the enforcement of the remedy and a penal statute has been stated to be that the penalty imposed by the remedial statute is not imposed as a punishment for a public wrong, but as a redress for a private grievance."

Now, you take again, following some of the authorities cited by counsel by Mr. Clarke, he cites Wigmore and he underlines this part:

What the state of the law actually is would be difficult to formulate precisely. It is clear that no absolute provision for trade secrets is recognized. On the other hand courts are apt not to require disclosure except in such cases and to such extent as may appear to be indispensable for the ascertainment of truth.

In the first place, that citation recognizes that there is no absolute provision for the protection of a man and his trade secrets, and he is required to disclose them except where it is not indispensable for the ascertainment of the truth.

I believe there is another citation that also recognizes that. In the case of DuBois v. Thomas, 122 Southern 495 and 154 Miss. 286, referred to in Mr. Clarke's counsel's memorandum, it is cited to show that where a trade secret is relative to an issue being tried, and its disclosure is essential in order that the issue may be correctly determined and justice administered, a witness is not privileged to refuse to disclose it. The case of DuBoise v. Thomas, found in 122 Southern at 495, clearly makes it incumbent upon a witness to reveal his trade secrets.

We also have the case In Re Edge Ho Holding Corporation, 176 N. E. 537, which tends to so hold, as well as other cases cited by counsel for the Commission, which it is not necessary to review.

But after a careful study I feel confident that the present tendency of the law is to require a person to answer questions that are necessary to be answered in the ascertainment of the truth.

We have here a number of cases in which the litigants were private parties and only private rights were involved. In this case we have as the moving party the Federal Trade Commission which, in effect, is the Government itself acting in the interests of the public, because if its activities were not in the interests of the public, it would not have the right to conduct such hearings.

It seems to me that the question asked is material, that in order to ascertain the facts it will be necessary for the witness to answer the question heretofore referred to.

I am not unmindful of the fact that this may work a hardship on Mr. Clarke. I approached this question really as a mediator between the parties because I felt, when it was first presented to me, that Mr. Clarke was perfectly justified in taking the position that he took. But after studying the authorities and giving it considerable thought, I feel that the position of the Federal Trade Commission is correct.

I also recognize the fact that there is a probability that the revealing of this trade secret may be injurious to Mr. Clarke, but private rights must give way where the good order of society is involved.

It seems to me that it would be a very peculiar situation that the Federal Trade Commission, in holding hearings, could not obtain answers to material questions. Counsel has questioned the jurisdiction of this Court and the proceeding by which we have arrived at the present point in the proceedings, but if Mr. Clarke would decline to answer such questions it would absolutely thwart the Federal Trade Commission in its investigation promulgated by reason of the complaint.

I feel that it is going to be incumbent upon Mr. Clarke to answer the question as to what are the proportions of the different ingredients contained in his product.

I do not feel inclined at this time to unceremoniously direct a commitment against Mr. Clarke for contempt, because I feel that this is a serious question and he is entitled to his day in court to have the matter heard and passed upon, and I am going to give Mr. Clarke an opportunity to answer the question. Of course, if he desires to stand pat and not answer the question, the Court will be called upon and compelled at that time to exercise whatever authority it may have. It may even become necessary for the issuance of a commitment.

I think in that respect that the parties involved should not overlook the fact that not only are we involved here with a question of a commitment for contempt, but if the Commission had seen fit they could have proceeded under section 50 of title 15 U. S. C. A., which provides a very severe penalty, of a fine of not less than $1,000 nor more than $5,000, or for not more than one year in jail, or both such fine and imprisonment. It isn't the responsibility of the Court, but it will be a matter for the Federal Trade Commission to determine whether they want to proceed through contempt or through criminal prosecution, or by both.

May I inquire as to when the present hearing is continued to?

Mr. LYON. The present hearing has been continued to next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, July 22, 1941, at room 229 in the Post Office Building, Los Angeles, Calif.

The COURT. It is the order of the court that Frederick A. Clarke appear before the trial examiner of the Federal Trade Commission next Tuesday afternoon at 2:00 p. m., July 22, 1941, and there continue with his examination and testimony and answer the question, "What are the proportions of those different ingredients?" referred to in his examination heretofore taken and referred to in the transcript. If Mr. Clarke appears and answers the question, the Court will dismiss these proceedings, otherwise we will see you all again, gentlemen.

Mr. SOPER. I appreciate the industry with which Your Honor has approached this question, and I regret the apparent conclusion you have come to.

Mr. LYON. May we have a short continuance of this case for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not Mr. Clarke will answer the question?

The COURT. If he fails to answer this, you will have to present it by a petition and order to show cause.[3]

No. 17197

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Second Circuit. August 4, 1941)

Ordered, pursuant to stipulation, that petition to review order of Commission in Docket 3556, 30 F. T. C. 665, 703, requiring petitioners, as included in respondents in said proceeding, to cease and desist from entering into, etc., or aiding or abetting the carrying out of any agreement, etc., with intent or effect of restricting, restraining, or monopolizing or eliminating competition in the purchase or sale in commerce of fruit and vegetable veneer containers, and, in pursuance of any such agreement, etc., fixing or maintaining uniform prices, discounts, etc., and doing other acts and things, as in order in detail set forth, be withdrawn and the proceedings dismissed without prejudice, etc., as below set forth.

Mr. William W. Corlett, of New York City, for petitioners.

RALADAM COMPANY v. FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION[1]

No. 8026

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit. Oct. 7, 1941)

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—APPELLATE PROCEDURE AND PROCEEDINGS—PETITIONS FOR REVIEW—WHERE PRIOR PROCEEDING, INVOLVING SAME CONCERN AND PRODUCT, SUBJECT SUPREME COURT DECISION—WHETHER RES JUDICATA—IF DIFFERENT PERIOD OF TIME AND REPRESENTATIONS.

Where the United States Supreme Court affirmed an order of the Circuit Court of Appeals vacating a cease and desist order of the Federal Trade Commission, on ground that no substantial competition was shown by proof to have been injured or threatened with injury to a substantial extent by use of alleged unfair methods complained of, the Supreme Court's judgment was not "res judicata" on issues presented by a subsequent petition to set aside an order of the commission which involved a different period of time and representations and raised additional issues. Federal Trade Commission Act, sec. 1 et seq., as amended, 15 U. S. C. A., sec. 41 et seq.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—APPELLATE PROCEDURE AND PROCEEDINGS—PETITIONS FOR REVIEW—WHERE PRIOR PROCEEDING, INVOLVING SAME CONCERN AND PRODUCT, SUBJECT SUPREME COURT DECISION—WHERE HOLDING OF LATTER NO JURISDICTION FOR LACK OF INJURY TO OR THREAT TO SUBSTANTIAL COMPETITION—IF EVIDENCE IN SUBSEQUENT AND INSTANT PROCEEDING NOT RADICALLY DIFFERENT.

Where the United States Supreme Court in reviewing an order vacating cease and desist order of Federal Trade Commission held that commission had no jurisdiction to make the order because there was no showing that substantial competition was injured or threatened with injury by [35] use of alleged unfair methods complained of, the Circuit Court of Appeals was required to follow Supreme Court on issue of jurisdiction in subsequent proceeding involving same company unless evidence in subsequent proceeding presented radically different situation.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—APPELLATE PROCEDURE AND PROCEEDINGS—PETITIONS FOR REVIEW—METHODS, ACTS, AND PRACTICES—JURISDICTION—DETERMINATION OF AS PREREQUISITE PRELIMINARY TO CONSIDERATION OF MERITS.

On petition to review order of Federal Trade Commission, requiring petitioner to cease and desist from engaging in certain type of advertising, the Circuit Court of Appeals was required to resolve question of jurisdiction preliminarily to any consideration of the petition on the merits.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ACT—SECTION 5—COMPLAINTS UNDER—PREREQUISITES TO.

The Federal Trade Commission must, as a prerequisite to complaint under statute, determine whether there is reason to believe that unfair method of competition in commerce is being used, that proceeding would be to interest of the public and that such interest is specific and substantial.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—UNFAIR TRADE METHODS—WHETHER PER SE EMBRACED IN TERM.

Unfair trade methods are not per se "unfair methods of competition" within statute authorizing restraint.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—CORRECTIVE ACTION—PREREQUISITES—INJURY, OR THREAT OF SUBSTANTIAL, TO COMPETITION, PRESENT OR POTENTIAL, AS SUFFICING.

In proceeding to restrain unfair methods of competition, it is sufficient to show that present or potential substantial competition is injured or threatened with substantial injury.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—APPELLATE PROCEDURE AND PROCEEDINGS—PETITIONS FOR REVIEW—FINDINGS—WHERE FOUNDED ON SPECULATION—ADVERTISING PRACTICES.

On petition to review order of the Federal Trade Commission requiring petitioner to cease and desist from engaging in certain types of advertising, the Circuit Court of Appeals cannot approve finding of commission based upon pure speculation.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—METHODS, ACTS AND PRACTICES—ADVERTISING FALSELY OR MISLEADINGLY—IF INJURY OR THREATENED INJURY TO COMPETITORS NOT ESTABLISHED—OBESITY REMEDY.

Evidence failed to establish injury or threatened injury to competitors of petitioner as result of allegedly misleading advertisements made by petitioner in connection with sale and distribution in interstate commerce, of preparation used in treatment of obesity, and hence the Federal Trade Commission was without jurisdiction to enter cease and desist order against petitioner.

(The syllabus, with substituted captions, is taken from 123 F. (2d) 34)

On petition to review and set aside a cease and desist order of Commission, order of the Commission set aside.

Mr. Rockwell T. Gust, of Detroit, Mich. (Butzel, Eaman, Long, Gust & Bills, Mr. Rockwell T. Gust, and Mr. David A. Howell, all of Detroit, Mich., on the brief), for petitioner.

Mr. Martin A. Morrison, of Washington, D. C. (Mr. W. T. Kelley, Mr. Martin A. Morrison, Mr. Harry D. Michael, and Mr. James W. Nichol, all of Washington, D. C., on the brief), for the Commission.

Before HICKS, SIMONS, and ALLEN, Circuit Judges.

HICKS, Circuit Judge:

For the second time the Raladam Company petitions this court to review and set aside an order of the Federal Trade Commission directing it to cease and desist from certain practices with reference to offering for sale, and sale and distribution, in interstate commerce, of a preparation known as Marmola and used in the treatment of obesity.

In the previous case [42 F. (2d) 430] we vacated the order of the Commission on the ground that the evidence failed to disclose the existence of competition within the meaning of the act [15 U. S. C., sec. 41 et seq.]; and on the further ground that it was not shown that the representations in the advertising of Marmola that it was a safe and scientific remedy were in fact false.

[36] The Supreme Court affirmed the order [F. T. C. v. Raladam Co., 283 U. S. 643] on the ground that no substantial competition, present or potential, was shown by the proof or from necessary inference, to have been injured, or threatened with injury to a substantial extent by the use of the alleged unfair methods complained of. The court held that jurisdiction of the Commission to make the order was lacking in the absence of a showing of competition, and that the proceeding must be dismissed. The Supreme Court and this court refused to grant motions to modify the order to permit the taking of additional evidence on the question of injury to competitors. Thereupon the Commission filed its amended complaint charging petitioner with certain violations of the act subsequently to the date of its cease and desist order in the first proceeding and in due course it issued an order requiring petitioner to cease and desist from making certain specified representations in its advertising of Marmola.

Petition for review was filed here on May 19, 1938, which was subsequent to an amendment of the Act effective March 21, 1938 (52 Stat. 112, 15 U. S. C. A., sec. 41 et seq., 1940 Cum. Pocket Part). Under the amendment the Commission is not required to file a petition for an order of enforcement, this Court having jurisdiction upon the filing of the petition to review the record. However, since the amended complaint was filed prior to the amendment, the violations charged, if we come to that question, must be construed in the light of the wording of the act as of that time.

Petitioner contends that the issues here are res adjudicata. We do not agree thereto. This case involves a different time period and representations which raise issues other than whether Marmola is a safe and scientific remedy. Moreover, all that was decided by the Supreme Court was that the Commission had no jurisdiction to issue the order under the evidence presented. The holding of this court that it appeared that the safe and scientific nature of Marmola as a remedy for obesity was a matter of opinion rather than one for factual determination must yield to the Supreme Court's opinion that there was no jurisdiction to issue the order in the first place. In the light of the ruling of the Supreme Court the assumption by that court that the advertisements of Marmola were dangerously misleading and that a proceeding to prevent their use was in the interest of the public, must be regarded by us as it was by the Supreme Court, i. e., simply an assumption for the purposes of its decision.

We must follow the Supreme Court upon the issue it decided, that of jurisdiction, unless the evidence in this case presents a radically different situation as to petitioner's competitors. We are bound to resolve the question of jurisdiction preliminarily to any consideration on the merits. In considering jurisdiction the Supreme Court stated that there are three distinct prerequisites for a cease and desist order, namely, (1) that the methods complained of are unfair; (2) that they are methods of competition in commerce; and (3) that a proceeding by the Commission to prevent a use of the methods appears to be in the interest of the public. In order to simplify its consideration of the second prerequisite, the court, as we have noted, assumed the existence of the first and third. As to the second, it said:

> Thus, the Commission is called upon first to determine, as a necessary prerequisite to the issue of a complaint, whether there is reason to believe that a given person, partnership or corporation has been or is using any unfair method of competition in commerce; and, that being determined in the affirmative, the Commission still may not proceed unless it further appear that a proceeding would be to the interest of the public, and that such interest is specific and substantial. Federal Trade Comm. v. Klesner, 280 U. S. 19, 28, Unfair trade methods are not per se unfair methods of competition.

It continued that the word "competition" imported the existence of present or potential substantial competition and that the unfair methods must be such as unjustly affected or tend to affect the business of these competitors; that—

> While it is impossible from the terms of the act itself, and in the light of the foregoing circumstances leading up to its passage, reasonably to conclude that Congress intended to vest the Commission with the general power to prevent all sorts of unfair trade practices in commerce apart from their actual or potential effect upon the trade of competitors, it is not necessary that the facts point to any particular trader or traders. It is enough that there be present or potential substantial coompetition, which is shown by proof, or appears by necessary inference, to have been injured, or to be [37] clearly threatened with injury, to a substantial extent, by the use of the unfair methods complained of.

The court then applied these principles to the facts, saying:

> Findings of the Commission justify the conclusion that the advertisements naturally would tend to increase the business of respondent; but there is neither finding nor evidence from which the conclusion legitimately can be drawn that these advertisements substantially injured or tended thus to injure the business of any competitor or of competitors generally, whether legitimate or not. None of the supposed competitors appeared or was called upon to show what, if any, effect the misleading advertisements had, or were likely to have, upon his business. The only evidence as to the existence of competitors comes from medical sources not engaged in making or selling "obesity cures," and consists in the main of a list of supposed producers and sellers of "antifat remedies" compiled from the files and records of the Bureau of Investigation of the American Medical Association, a list which appears to have been gathered mainly from newspapers and advertisements.

The court went on to say that it was impossible to determine from the record whether these "competitors" were injured by petitioner's advertising or whether they were in any sense real competitors, and if the preliminary assumption of competition is without foundation, jurisdiction to make the order fails.

On the issue of competition the Commission in paragraph 3 of its "Findings as to the Facts" had this to say:

> During the time above mentioned, other individuals, firms and corporations in various States of the United States are and have been engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of medicines, preparations, systems, methods, books of instruction, and other commodities, articles, and means designed, intended, and used for the purpose of effecting weight reduction. Such other individuals, firms and corporations have caused and do now cause their said medicines, preparations, systems, methods, books of instruction, and other articles and means, when sold by them, to be transported from various States of the United States to, into and through States other than the State of origin of the shipments thereof. Respondent has been, during the aforesaid time, in substantial competition, in the sale of Marmola, with such other individuals, firms and corporations. Some of such competing products are sold direct to the consuming public while others are sold to wholesale and retail dealers through whom they are in turn sold to members of the public for their use.
>
> Respondent's preparation is in competition with all medical preparations sold and used for reducing purposes regardless of whether such preparations are of the so-called "patent medicine" type or are pharmaceutical preparations which may be bought by members of the consuming public on their own initiative or on the prescription of a physician. Competing products include, also, the following: Medical preparations which are used as adjuvants in the treatment of obesity, such as laxative salts; preparations sold and used for the purpose of effecting the lessening of the consumption of fat producing foods; and books of instruction on the subjects of diet or exercise, or both, intended and used for the purpose of effecting reduction by one or both of these means; * * *
>
> Respondent, in its advertising matter, recognizes that competing products are not confined to those preparations or products of the same general character as Marmola by specifically advising and urging the use of Marmola for reducing, instead of the use of diet, exercises, purgatives, cathartics, salts, laxatives, and other methods used for effecting reduction.

These findings were based upon the testimony of two or three drug and chain store operators that they sold, over the counter, several patented reducing remedies in addition to Marmola. They testified that ordinarily these remedies were stocked after advertising had created a demand for them. There was slight evidence that one or two companies selling the patented remedies had had a recent decline in sales. Only one or two witnesses were expressly questioned as to whether they considered Marmola a competing preparation. One emphatically disclaimed any such competition. There was no substantial evidence supporting the formula of the Supreme Court "that these advertisements substantially injured, or tended thus to injure the business of any competitor * * *." It appears that the majority in number of these "competitors" were likewise in the business of commercially exploiting obesity remedies by advertising them to the general public.

In the previous case we expressed our disbelief "that the machinery of the Commis[38]sion was intended to give governmental aid to the protection of this kind of trade and commerce." The Supreme Court although not finding it necessary to decision, tentatively approved our view upon this feature.

We have greater difficulty with those "competitors" who have published books of instruction on the subject of diet or exercise, and those who are engaged strictly in the sale and distribution of ethical remedies which were advertised and otherwise made known to physicians, but even in these instances there was no substantial evidence that the Marmola advertising even tended to injure the sale of these publications and preparations. We find no evidence in the record upon which a substantial inference can be based that this was so. We cannot approve the finding of the Commission upon pure speculation. Marmola's sole connection with these distributees is through the slender thread that each has some relation to obesity reduction. These so-called "competitors" are not engaged in the sale of an apparently standardized product as in the case of Federal Trade Commission v. Winsted Co., 258 U. S. 483. In the present case "the competitors" approached the treatment of obesity from widely divergent viewpoints. We cannot say that the class who consult physicians about their ailments or "who read up" thereon, were, or would be, drawn by this advertising into the class of those who have been deceived by nostrums held out to accomplish miracles of healing.

The order of the Commission is set aside.

PENALTY PROCEEDINGS

UNITED STATES V. PIUMA[1]

Civ. No. 927-RJ

(District Court, Southern District of California, Central Division July 22, 1941)

JURISDICTION OF COMMISSION—INTRASTATE COMMERCE—IF UNFAIR METHODS IN AFFECT DETRIMENTALLY INTERSTATE COMPETITORS.

Under Federal Trade Commission Act, Federal Trade Commission has power to control only transactions in interstate commerce, and has no power to control purely intrastate businesses, even though unfair methods of competition are used which detrimentally affect interstate competitors. Federal Trade Commission Act, sec. 1 et seq., 15 U. S. C. A., sec. 41 et seq.

CIVIL PENALTY PROCEEDINGS—JURISDICTION OF COMMISSION—INTERSTATE COMMERCE—COMPLAINTS—ADVERTISING FALSELY OR MISLEADINGLY—IF FAIRLY DEDUCIBLE IN CONNECTION WITH INTERSTATE BUSINESS AND NO OBJECTION RAISED.

In action by Federal Government to recover civil penalties prescribed by Federal Trade Commission Act, where it was fairly deducible from complaint that advertisements complained of as unfair competition were made in connection with interstate business, and defendant raised no objection to form of complaint, lack of definiteness in complaint would not prevent giving judgment for Federal Government if it was otherwise so entitled. Federal Trade Commission Act, sec. 5 (1), 15 U. S. C. A., sec. 45 (1).

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—ADVERTISING FALSELY OR MISLEADINGLY—JURISDICTION OF COMMISSION—COMMERCE, COMPETITION, AND PUBLIC INTEREST AS PREREQUISITE TO.

Where complaint before Federal Trade Commission charged and commission found that defendant was engaged in interstate commerce, that he falsely advertised his products, that he was in substantial competition with others in interstate commerce, and that proceeding was in interest of public, commission had jurisdiction to issue cease and desist order requiring defendant to refrain from making certain representations concerning merits of his product.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ACT—FINALITY OF ORDERS, FAILING STATUTORY APPEAL—WHEELER-LEA AMENDMENT—PURPOSE.

The purpose of 1938 amendment to Federal Trade Commission Act, providing that a cease and desist order of Federal Trade Commission becomes final unless defendant files a petition for review with Circuit Court of Appeals within 60 days from date of service of commission's order, is to bring doctrine of "res judicata" [120] into commission's jurisprudence. Federal Trade Commission Act, sec. 5 (g), 15 U. S. C. A., sec. 45 (g), as amended by Wheeler-Lea Act of 1938.

CIVIL PENALTY PROCEEDINGS—CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—FINALITY OF ORDERS, FAILING STATUTORY APPEAL—ADVERTISING FALSELY OR MISLEADINGLY.

Where Federal Trade Commission found that defendant's advertisements of defendant's product were false and issued a cease and desist order, and defendant's opportunity to challenge commission's findings was lost when defendant failed to petition for a review prior to time provided in 1938 amendment to Federal Trade Commission Act, defendant was not entitled to trial on facts determined by commission in an action brought by Federal Government in District Court to recover civil penalties prescribed by act for violation of cease and desist order. Federal Trade Commission Act, sec. 5 (d, g, l), 15 U. S. C. A., sec. 45 (d, g, l), as amended by Wheeler-Lea Act, of 1938.

[1] Reported in 40 F. Supp. 119. For case before Commission, see 24 F. T. C. 939.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ACT—FINALITY OF ORDERS, FAILING STATUTORY APPEAL—DUE PROCESS.

The giving finality to cease and desist order of Federal Trade Commission under Federal Trade Commission Act upon defendant's failing to petition for a review by Circuit Court of Appeals within time prescribed in act is consonant with "due process of law."

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—ADVERTISING FALSELY OR MISLEADINGLY—IF COMPETITORS INJURED.

The use of false and misleading advertising which injures competitors in interstate commerce constitutes "unfair competition" within meaning of Federal Trade Commission Act.

CIVIL PENALTY PROCEEDINGS—CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—ADVERTISING FALSELY OR MISLEADINGLY—"GLENDALE" PREPARATION AS GLAND TONIC AND BEST GLAND REMEDY KNOWN—IF ADVERTISEMENT, AFTER BECOMING FINAL OF ORDER, AS "GLAND TABLET" AND "ONE OF BEST GLAND REMEDIES KNOWN."

Where cease and desist order of Federal Trade Commission required defendant to refrain from representing that his product "Glendage" was a gland tonic, and that preparation was best gland remedy known, and order became final upon defendant's failing to petition for a review by Circuit Court of Appeals within time prescribed by Federal Trade Commission Act, subsequent advertisements by defendant of his product as a "gland tablet", and that it was "one of best gland remedies known," constituted violations of the order, authorizing Federal Government to recover civil penalties prescribed by the act.

(Syllabus, with substituted captions, is taken from 40 F. Supp. 119)

On plaintiff's motion for summary judgment upon the pleadings, judgment for plaintiff.

Mr. Wm. Fleet Palmer, United States Attorney, by Mr. John M. Gault, Assistant United States Attorney, both of Los Angeles, Cal., for plaintiff.

Mr. C. M. Castruccio, of Los Angeles, Calif., for defendant.

JENNEY, District Judge:

This is an action by the United States to recover civil penalties prescribed by the Federal Trade Commission Act, 15 U. S. C. A. § 41 (l). The plaintiff has moved for summary judgment upon the pleadings.

Defendant sells and distributes, from his place of business in Los Angeles to customers in various States and in the District of Columbia, a medical preparation known as "Glendage."

The complaint alleges and the answer admits the issuance and service by the Federal Trade Commission of a complaint dated September 5, 1934; the appearance and answer of the defendant before the Commission; the issuance and service upon the defendant of a cease and desist order dated April 6, 1937; and the failure of the defendant to seek review of that order. The pleadings in the proceeding before the Commission are attached to the complaint.

The cease and desist order of the Commission requires defendant to refrain from representing, directly or indirectly:

1. That said preparation is a gland tonic.
[121] 2. That said preparation will restore vigorous health.
3. That said preparation is the best gland remedy known.
4. That said preparation constitutes a remedy for glands.

The order further requires defendant to refrain from making, or continuing to make, six other statements concerning the merits of the product.

It is further alleged in the complaint that defendant has caused to be published, in newspapers having a wide interstate circulation, advertisements soliciting the sale of Glendage in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. The advertisements are each alleged to be substantially as follows:

Money-Back
Gland Tablet
Calls for Trial

Every cent will be refunded if results from Glendage are unsatisfactory. That's how sure we are that we have one of the best gland tablets known. Thousands of tests have proven this to our full satisfaction. You, too, may prove it without risking a penny.

Glendage, in convenient tablet form, is the private prescription of Jos. A. Piuma, Graduate Pharmacist. It contains the extracts from the glands of healthy animals and its purpose is to help stimulate all the glands to healthy activity. You will be surprised at its invigorating action. Vigorous health is necessary for success in all activity today.

Asthma, * * *

Thirteen publications are alleged, the complaint setting forth the name of the newspaper and the date published. Defendant admits that, "as alleged in paragraphs VIII and IX of the complaint, he has continued the sale of his said product, and has since advertised the same in the manner and form alleged * * *." There is no denial of any of the publications charged.

In paragraph IX it is alleged that by reason of the representations the defendant did violate the order and become liable to pay not more than $5,000 for each violation. The prayer asks $60,000 with costs.

Plaintiff failed to allege directly that the advertisements were made in connection with offers or sales in interstate commerce. The limitation of the power of the Federal Trade Commission to transactions in interstate commerce is settled by a recent decision of the Supreme Court in Federal Trade Commission v. Bunte Brothers, Inc., 312 U. S. 349, 61 S. Ct. 580, 85 L. Ed. 881. The court there held that under the Federal Trade Commission Act, 15 U. S. C. A § 41 et seq., the Commission has no power to control purely intrastate businesses even though unfair methods of competition are used which detrimentally "affect" interstate competitors. The court placed its decision upon principles of statutory construction, and did not question the constitutional power of Congress to confer upon the Commission power over intrastate transactions which "affect" interstate commerce. From the complaint in the instant case it is fairly deducible that the advertisements were made in connection with interstate business. Since the defendant has not raised any objection to the form of the complaint, this possible lack of definiteness will not prevent the court from giving judgment for the plaintiff if it is otherwise so entitled.

The question before the court is this: Except as to the amount of damages, is there here raised a genuine issue as to any material fact? If not, plaintiff may be entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

Defendant opposes the motion for a summary judgment, first, on the ground that the order of the Commission was void as beyond the jurisdiction of the Commission. This question has already been decided adversely to the defendant by our associate, Judge McCormick, who denied defendant's motion to dismiss. This court concurs in the holding of its associate that the prerequisites to the exercise of power by the Commission set forth in Federal Trade Commission v. Raladam Co., 1931, 283 U. S. 643, 646, 51 S. Ct. 587, 75 L. Ed. 1324, 79 A. L. R. 1191, were disclosed in the proceeding before the Commission. The complaint before the Commission charged and it was found that defendant was engaged in interstate commerce; that he falsely advertised his product; that he was in substantial competition with others in interstate commerce; and that the proceeding was in the interest of the public. There is no need to look to amendments to the Federal Trade Commission Act to determine whether the Commission had jurisdiction, and the court does not do so.

Defendant's second objection is that, before the court can hold that the order was [122] violated, it must be determined by this court, as a question of fact, whether Glendage is "a gland tonic."

In 1937, even after the issuance of a cease and desist order, the burden of moving under the statute as it then read was upon the Commission. To secure compliance with the order, the Commission was then required to seek an order of enforcement from the Circuit Court of Appeals. It was only after a further violation of the court's order that sanctions might be imposed upon the defendant. The defendant was permitted, if he desired, to appeal to the Circuit Court for an order setting aside the Commission's order even though the Commission had not theretofore petitioned for an order of enforcement. No time limit was set by the Act within which either of such actions had to be taken. However, under the amendatory Wheeler-Lea Act of 1938, Section 45 (g) of Title 15, U. S. C. A., it is provided that an order of the Commission becomes final unless the defendant files a petition for review with the Circuit Court of Appeals within sixty days from the date of service of the Commission's order. This 1938 amendment also provides that, as to orders served on or before the date of the enactment of the amendment, the sixty-day period shall run from the date of the enactment of the amendment (March 21, 1938). See footnote following 15 U. S. C. A. § 45 (l). The cease and desist order issued against the defendant in this suit, therefore, became final May 20, 1938.

Is it the province of this court to try the truth or falsity of the defendant's advertisements already found to be false by the Commission? The answer to this question depends upon the meaning to be given the word "final" as used in subsection (g).

The purpose of the provision was to bring the doctrine of res judicata into the Federal Trade Commission's jurisprudence. Hearings before the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce on H. R. 3143, 75th Cong. 1st Sess. (1937) 56–58; 39 Columbia L. Rev. 271; 34 Ill. L. Rev. 626–629; The Control of False Advertising under the Wheeler-Lea Act, Milton Handler, 6 Law and Contemp. Prob. 91.

Other subsections of Section 45, Title 15, U. S. C. A. should be considered in determining the meaning to be given subsection (g). The review by the Circuit Court of Appeals is upon the entire record, including all evidence taken. The findings of the Commission, if supported by evidence, are conclusive. The court is, therefore, in a position to pass upon the facts. In this court we do not have the record before the Commission, and must necessarily accept the findings of that body. Moreover, subdivision (d) provides: "The jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals of the United States to affirm, enforce, modify, or set aside orders of the Commission shall be exclusive."

Considering the scheme of the statute in its entirety, it is apparent that the defendant is not entitled thereunder to a trial in this court on facts determined by the Commission. Defendant's opportunity to challenge the Commission's findings was lost when he failed to petition for review prior to May 20, 1938. Giving finality to the order of the Commission when the defendant has the right of appeal is consonant with due process. Shields v. Utah Idaho Cent. R. Co., 305 U. S. 177, 59 S. Ct. 160, 83 L. Ed. 111.

The Commission determined that the advertising, against which the order was issued, was false and misleading. In his affidavit in opposition to the motion for summary judgment defendant states that he will present expert testimony and evidence of users to establish the capacity and tendency of the product to produce beneficial results. Such evidence should have been submitted in the proceeding before the Commission. This court will not now retry that issue.

At the time the complaint was issued by the Commission the use of false and misleading advertising which injures competitors was an unfair method of competition within the meaning of the statute. Federal Trade Commission v. Winsted Hosiery Co., 1922, 258 U. S. 483, 42 S. Ct. 384, 66 L. Ed. 729; L. & C. Mayers Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 2 Cir., 1938, 97 F. (2d) 365; Justin Haynes & Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 2 Cir., 1939, 105 F. (2d) 988.

In Federal Trade Commission v. Raladam, supra, the review was upon the entire record before the Commission, and the court held that there was no evidence of the existence of competitors. Here the court is bound by the finding of the Commission that there were interstate competitors who were injured.

Although paragraphs IV and V of the answer deny that the defendant has violated the order of the Commission, defendant does not take the position that this mat[123]ter cannot be decided by the Court on the motion for summary judgment. No testimony is necessary to enable the Court to determine that the meaning and spirit of the advertisements violate the order. The substitution of "gland tablet" for "gland tonic" or "one of the best gland remedies known" for "the best gland remedy known" does not materially change the nature of the representations. In addition to these particular violations, the Court is of the opinion that the advertisement as a whole violated the cease and desist order.

There being no substantial issue of fact in dispute, the plaintiff is entitled to summary judgment upon the present state of the pleadings.

The motion to vacate Judge McCormick's order of January 25, 1941, is denied.

Judgment for plaintiff on account of 13 violations in the amount of $250 each, or a total of $3,250, in addition to costs.

It is so ordered.

During the period covered by this volume, i. e., June 1, 1941 to October 31, 1941 inclusive, two other cases involving civil penalty proceedings under Section 5 (1) of the Federal Trade Commission Act for violation of cease and desist orders of the Commission were settled and civil penalties amounting to $2,000.00, in addition to those set forth in the preceding case, collected.

Said cases were—

United States v. Oppenheim, Collins & Co., Inc. United States District Court for the Southern District of New York; consent decree entering judgment in the sum of $1,500 and costs and also enjoining the conduct proscribed by the order to cease and desist, September 5, 1941.

Respondent, Oppenheim, Collins & Co., Inc., their representatives, etc., in connection with the offering for sale, etc., of wearing apparel in interstate commerce, had been ordered to cease and desist from using the words "silk," "crepe," "taffeta," or "satin", as descriptive of products which are not composed of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm, but which are composed of a material or materials other than silk.[3]
