(a) Respondent jobbers fixed the resale prices at which fresh broadleaf spinach purchased by them from respondent shippers through respondent broker should be sold in the Chicago market.

(b) Respondent jobbers aided and assisted by respondent broker and respondent Steinberg, entered into an agreement with respondent shippers whereby respondent shippers agreed to ship and thereafter did ship all of their pack of fresh broadleaf spinach to the respondent jobbers exclusively through the respondent broker.

(c) Respondent shippers agreed upon and fixed the prices paid for broadleaf spinach to the growers.

(d) Respondent shippers agreed to and did prorate the tonnage of fresh broadleaf spinach throughout the season, all handled through respondent broker, to the respondent jobbers.

(e) The respondent jobbers agreed to and did purchase all of their requirements of fresh broadleaf spinach for the Chicago market from the respondent shippers through the respondent broker.

(f) Respondent Steinberg actively aided and assisted in negotiating the said agreement between respondent jobbers and shippers, and cooperated in enforcing said agreement.

PAR. 5. Said agreement, understanding, combination and conspiracy and the things done thereunder and pursuant thereto and in furtherance thereof as hereinbefore alleged, have had and do have the capacity, tendency and effect of:

(a) Unduly restricting and restraining competition in the purchase and sale of fresh broadleaf spinach in commerce between and among the several States of the United States, particularly between the State of Washington and the State of Illinois.

(b) Enabling the respondents to control and substantially monopolize the business of buying, selling and distributing fresh broadleaf spinach in interstate commerce.

(c) Preventing competitors of respondent jobbers from purchasing fresh broadleaf spinach from respondent shippers, the sole source of supply of said product, to their injury and detriment.

(d) The enhancement of the retail price of fresh broadleaf spinach to the dealers and to the public in the city of Chicago and surrounding area.

PAR. 6. The agreements, combination and conspiracy and acts described in the foregoing paragraphs have continued to the present.

PAR. 7. The acts and practices of respondents as aforealleged are all to the prejudice of the public and have a dangerous tendency to hinder, and have actually hindered and prevented, price competition between and among respondents in the purchase and sale of fresh broadleaf spinach in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act; have placed in respondents the power to control and enhance prices of said commodity; have increased and fixed the prices of said commodity paid by purchasers thereof, and consequently the prices paid by the public; have created in said respondents a substantial monopoly in the dealings in said commodity in commerce throughout the several States of the United States; have unreasonably restrained such commerce in fresh broad-leaf spinach, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on April 16 A. D. 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint upon the respondents, Pacific Fruit & Produce Co., a corporation; Walla Walla Gardners' Association, a cooperative association; Mojonnier & Sons, Inc., a corporation; Walla Walla Produce Co., a corporation; Ewing M. Stephens and Eugene Tausich, copartners, trading as Valley Fruit Co.; C. H. Robinson Co., a corporation; LaMantia Brothers Arrigo Co., a corporation; Owen T. Hill and Robert S. Hill, copartners, trading as Mark Owen & Co.; John Plennert and John Mahoney, copartners, trading as P. & M. Distributing Co.; Arthur Applebaum and Maurice J. Missner, copartners, trading as Applebaum-Missner Co.; and Robert M. Steinberg, individually and as manager of the Chicago branch of C. H. Robinson Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, testimony, and other evidence in support of said complaint were introduced by Everett F. Haycraft, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Howard W. Sanders, Marvin Evans, John F. Watson, Ewing M. Stephens, William E. Berney, S. R. Moore, David L. Bazelon, and Martin J. Harris, attorneys for the respondents, before William C. Reeves and W. W. Sheppard, trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon said complaint, answers thereto, testimony, and other evidence, report of the trial examiners upon the evidence and exceptions filed thereto, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Pacific Fruit & Produce Co., sometimes hereinafter referred to as a respondent shipper, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with one of its principal offices, and place of business and shipping plants, at Walla Walla, Wash. Said respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of brokers, jobbers, shippers, and distributors, in commerce, of various fresh fruits and fresh vegetables, including broadleaf spinach.

Respondent, Walla Walla Gardners' Association, sometimes hereinafter referred to as a respondent shipper, is a cooperative association organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Washington, with its principal office and place of business in Walla Walla, Wash. Said respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of brokers, jobbers, shippers, and distributors, in commerce of various fresh fruits and fresh vegetables, including broadleaf spinach.

Respondent, Mojonnier & Sons, Inc., sometimes hereinafter referred to as a respondent shipper, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Washington, with its principal office and place of business in Walla Walla, Wash. Said respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of brokers, jobbers, shippers, and distributors, in commerce, of various fresh fruits and fresh vegetables, including broadleaf spinach.

Respondent, Walla Walla Produce Co., sometimes hereinafter referred to as a respondent shipper, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Washington, with its principal office and place of business in Walla Walla, Wash. Said respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of brokers, jobbers, shippers, and distributors, in commerce, of various fresh fruits and fresh vegetables, including broadleaf spinach.

Respondents, Ewing M. Stephens and Eugene Tausich, are co-partners trading as Valley Fruit Co., sometimes referred to as a respondent shipper, with their principal office and place of business in Walla Walla, Wash. Said co-partners are now, and for several years last past have been, engaged in the business of brokers, jobbers, shippers, and distributors, in commerce, of various fresh fruits and fresh vegetables, including broadleaf spinach.

Respondent, C. H. Robinson Co., sometimes hereinafter referred to as a respondent broker, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of South Dakota, with its principal office and place of business at 430 Oak Grove Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn. Said respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of brokers, jobbers, shippers, and distributors, in commerce, of various fresh fruits and fresh vegetables, including broadleaf spinach.

Respondent, LaMantia Brothers Arrigo Co., sometimes hereinafter referred to as a respondent jobber, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business at 28-32 South Water Market, Chicago, Ill. Said respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the business of brokers, jobbers, dealers, and distributors, in commerce, of various fresh fruits and fresh vegetables, including broadleaf spinach.

Respondents, Owen T. Hill and Robert S. Hill, are copartners trading as Mark Owen & Co., sometimes hereinafter referred to as a respondent jobber, with their principal office and place of business at 33 South Water Market, Chicago, Ill. Said copartners are now, and for several years last past have been, engaged in the business of brokers, jobbers, dealers, and distributors, in commerce, of various fresh fruits and fresh vegetables, including broadleaf spinach.

Respondents, John Plennert and John Mahoney, are copartners trading as P. & M. Distributing Co., sometimes hereinafter referred to as a respondent jobber, with their principal office and place of business at 8 South Water Market, Chicago, Ill. Said copartners are now, and for several years last past have been, engaged in the business of brokers, jobbers, dealers, and distributors, in commerce, of various fresh fruits and fresh vegetables, including broadleaf spinach.

Respondents, Arthur Applebaum and Maurice J. Missner, up until November 1940, were copartners trading as Applebaum-Missner Co., sometimes hereinafter referred to as a respondent jobber, with their principal office and place of business at 13 South Water Market, Chicago, Ill. In November 1940 Maurice J. Missner died, leaving Arthur Applebaum as his surviving partner. For several years prior to November 1940, said copartners were engaged in the business of brokers, jobbers, dealers, and distributors, in commerce, of various fresh fruits and fresh vegetables, including broadleaf spinach.

Respondent, Robert M. Steinberg, an individual, is now, and for the last several years has been, manager of the Chicago branch of respondent broker C. H. Robinson Co., with his office and place of business at 1425 South Racine Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Said respondent, as manager of respondent broker C. H. Robinson Co., has, for the last several years past, actively directed the business of said respondent broker in Chicago.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their said businesses, said respondent shippers have shipped various fresh fruits and fresh vegetables, including broadleaf spinach, from their respective packing houses in the State of Washington to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States, and particularly to customers, including respondent jobbers, for resale to dealers in, and consumers of, said products in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, and surrounding areas.

All of said respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their businesses, the respondent shippers are engaged in the sale and distribution of a distinct type of spinach known to the trade as Walla Walla or Washington spinach, which is of the broadleaf or flatleaf variety of spinach. During the shipping season, which is from the early part of September to the latter part of November, this product has a ready market in the Chicago area. There are other areas which supply the Chicago market with broadleaf or flatleaf variety of spinach. These are chiefly Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio, which are considered in the Chicago area, and Texas. Under normal weather conditions, the season for spinach in the Chicago area is practically closed by the early part of September, and the season for Texas spinach does not begin until around December. Consequently, the Walla Walla spinach does not meet any substantial competition in the Chicago market during its season, except possible overlapping at the beginning and end of the season during normal weather conditions. There are times, however, when the weather conditions continue abnormally warm in the Chicago area in the fall season, resulting in greater quantities of spinach being shipped into Chicago from that area.

The broadleaf spinach received from the Chicago area, and also that received from Texas, is customarily shipped into the Chicago market in bushel baskets and packed in such a way as to cause loss by deterioration of the product. The shippers in Walla Walla,

Findings

however, due to the necessity of transporting their spinach for considerable distance, have adopted the practice of carefully grading all spinach shipped, so that on inspection it shows "U. S. Grade 1." In addition, the spinach is carefully packed in twenty-pound boxes lined with paper, with ice placed in the center, and after being packed in freight cars, such cars are carefully top-iced. As a result of this treatment, the Walla Walla spinach reaches the Chicago market in good condition, with little or no shrinkage or loss from deterioration, and, by reason of this fact, this spinach commands a higher price on the Chicago market than the spinach received from the other localities mentioned.

PAR. 4. Prior to 1939 the shippers located in the Walla Walla district sold their spinach either direct to jobbers in the Chicago district or through various brokers. Among the brokers who dealt in Walla Walla spinach were C. H. Robinson Co., Riley McFarland Co., McCaffrey Brothers Co., and Chandler-Allen Co. Among the jobbers in the Chicago area who purchased either direct from the shippers in the Walla Walla district or the brokers above mentioned were LaMantia Brothers Arrigo Co., Mark Owen & Co., P. & M. Distributing Co., Applebaum-Missner Co., Cooney & Korshak, Schoenburg, Price & Co., and others. In making such sales, the spinach was offered through brokers, or direct for sale, at a price in line with what was thought to be the market and what the buyers would pay.

PAR. 5. In the sale and distribution of said Walla Walla spinach to the Chicago district, the respondent shippers, prior to 1939, were in competition between each other and with other shippers in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and would now be in free and open competition with one another in said commerce but for the agreements, practices, and methods as hereinafter set forth.

Prior to 1939 the respondent jobbers were in competition with one another and with other jobbers and dealers in the purchase of said fresh broadleaf spinach from the producers and shippers thereof located in the State of Washington and in the resale thereof to customers located in the Chicago market, and would now be in competition with the others but for the agreements, practices, and methods hereinafter set out.

PAR. 6. In the early part of February 1939 Robert M. Steinberg, manager of the Chicago branch of respondent C. H. Robinson Co. J. J. Mahar, manager of respondent Walla Walla Gardeners' Association, and Anton Ernst, sales manager of respondent Applebaum-Missner Co., held a meeting in Chicago, for the purpose of discussing and arranging for an agreement or combination between certain shippers of broadleaf spinach located in the Walla Walla district and certain jobbers located in the Chicago area, under which arrangement the shippers were to sell only through the respondent C. H. Robinson Co., as broker, to certain selected jobbers in the Chicago area, shipments by the shippers to be prorated among such shippers, and the spinach received in the Chicago market to be prorated among the selected jobbers.

PAR. 7. Subsequent thereto, after various meetings held by the shippers, the respondent shippers agreed to sell said broadleaf spinach only through the respondent broker C. H. Robinson Co., shipments to be allotted to the shippers on the basis of sales of previous years, and on August 25, 1939, J. J. Mahar, manager of respondent Walla Walla Gardeners' Association, advised R. M. Steinberg, manager of respondent, C. H. Robinson Co., by letter, of the conclusion of this arrangement among the shippers and that the proration among the respondent shippers would be as follows: Walla Walla Gardeners' Association, 50 percent; Mojonner & Sons, Inc., 22 percent; Pacific Fruit & Produce Co., 16 percent; Walla Walla Produce Co., 11 percent; and Valley Fruit Co., 1 percent.

PAR. 8. In like manner, after discussions between R. M. Steinberg and various jobbers, and also correspondence between various jobbers and certain of the respondent shippers, it was agreed that the purchase and sale in the Chicago market would be handled by four jobbers in the Chicago area, these four jobbers being the respondent jobbers Applebaum-Missner Co., LaMantia Bros. Arrigo Co., Mark Owen & Co., and P. & M. Distributing Co. It was agreed among such respondent jobbers that they would purchase Walla Walla broadleaf spinach only from the respondent shippers, through the respondent broker C. H. Robinson Co., and would rotate the cars or portions of cars in such manner as might be considered equitable by such respondent jobbers, based upon purchases of previous years. It was further agreed between the respondent shippers, the respondent jobbers, and the respondent broker that any requests for the purchase of spinach received by the respondent shippers from any jobber or dealer other than the respondent jobbers would be referred to respondent broker C. H. Robinson Co. and that said respondent broker would advise such jobbers or dealers that there were no cars of broadleaf spinach from the Walla Walla district available.

This agreement or understanding was maintained during the 1939 season and continued during the 1940 season, with only a slight change in proration of shipments by the respondent shippers, reducing respondents Mojonner & Sons, Inc., and Pacific Fruit & Produce Co. 1 percent and increasing respondent, Valley Fruit Co. 2 percent.

Findings

PAR. 9. Pursuant to this agreement, understanding, combination and conspiracy, and in furtherance thereof, the respondent shippers shipped approximately 100 cars during the 1939 season through respondent broker C. H. Robinson, exclusively, which cars were distributed exclusively to the respondent jobbers. Due to unfavorable weather conditions during the 1940 season, only 25 cars of spinach were shipped pursuant to this arrangement and agreement. Although requests for shipments were received by jobbers other than the respondent jobbers, including Cooney & Korshak and Schoenburg, Price & Co., shipments to said jobbers were refused by the respondent shippers, and they were referred to the respondent broker, who either ignored such requests or advised that there were no cars available. During the 1939 and 1940 seasons, the respondent shippers prorated the tonnage of fresh broadleaf spinach in accordance with their agreement and shipped exclusively through respondent broker to the respondent jobbers, exclusively. The respondent jobbers purchased all of their requirements of fresh broadleaf spinach for the Chicago market during the 1939 and 1940 seasons from the respondent shippers through the respondent broker. During said seasons of 1939 and 1940 the respondent shippers supplied all of the fresh broadleaf spinach shipped from the Walla Walla district of Washington to the Chicago market.

PAR. 10. In addition, the respondent jobbers, pursuant to said agreement, understanding, combination, and conspiracy, and in furtherance thereof, did establish and maintain a fixed resale price at which said fresh broadleaf spinach purchased by them from the respondent shippers should be sold in the Chicago market. From September 19 to September 30, 1939, this resale price ranged from $1.15 to $1.40 per 20-pound box. From October 2 to October 14, 1939, the price ranged from $1.15 to $1.20, with some sales on October 10, 11, and 12 at $1 to $1.10, due to market conditions. From October 16 to October 30, 1939, the price was $1.25 per box, with two exceptions of $1.15 on October 20 and October 30. From November 1 to November 20, 1939, the price was maintained at $1.25 per box, and from November 21 to November 30, 1939, at $1.50 per box.

The prices received by the shippers during the 1939 season ranged from 65 cents to 55 cents per box f. o. b. Walla Walla. The first few cars in the 1939 season were priced at 65 cents per box. The remaining shipments for September were priced at 60 cents per box. Around October 1 the price per box was reduced to 55 cents, with the understanding that the price would be increased as conditions improved. Although the resale price of the jobbers to retail dealers increased to $1.50 per box in November 1939 the price to the shippers remained at 55 cents per box for the remainder of the season. After deducting expenses of boxes and commission, the prices received during the same period by the growers of spinach who sold through the respondent Walla Walla Gardeners' Association were 32 cents per box from September 1 to September 16, 26.6 cents from September 18 to September 30, and 22.1 cents for the remainder of the season. The prices paid by the other respondent shippers were approximately the same.

PAR. 11. A comparative effect of this agreement, understanding, combination and conspiracy on the resale price may be obtained from comparison of the price of Walla Walla spinach with Seattle and Sumner spinach, both of which are of the same grade and variety, and both of which are similarly packed. The Seattle and Sumner spinach season overlaps the Walla Walla spinach for a short period at the beginning of the Walla Walla season. Comparative figures are as follows:

	Walla Walla	Seattle and Sumner
Tuesday, Sept. 19, 1939-----	$1.40	$1.00-$1.10
Wednesday, Sept. 20, 1939-----	1.25	1.00
Thursday, Sept. 21, 1939-----	1.30	.85- 1.00
Friday, Sept. 22, 1939-----	1.25-1.30	.75- 1.00
Saturday, Sept. 23, 1939-----	1.30	.75- 1.00
Tuesday, Sept. 26, 1939-----	1.25-1.20	.75- .85
Wednesday, Sept. 27, 1939-----	1.25	.50- .85
Thursday, Sept. 28, 1939-----	1.25	.75
Friday, Sept. 29, 1939-----	1.15	.50- .75
Saturday, Sept. 30, 1939-----	1.15	1.15

PAR. 12. Said agreement, understanding, combination, and conspiracy, and the things done thereunder and pursuant thereto and in furtherance thereof, as hereinabove described, have had, and now have, the capacity, tendency, and effect of—

(a) Unduly restricting and restraining competition in the purchase and sale of fresh broadleaf spinach in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, particularly between the State of Washington and the State of Illinois;

(b) Enabling the respondents to control and substantially monopolize the business of buying, selling, and distributing fresh broadleaf spinach in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, particularly between the State of Washington and the State of Illinois;

Order

34 F. T. C.

(c) Preventing competitors of respondent jobbers from purchasing fresh broadleaf spinach from respondent shippers, the sole source of supply of said product, to their injury and detriment; and

(d) Enhancing the retail price of fresh broadleaf spinach to the dealers and to the public in the city of Chicago and the surrounding area.

PAR. 13. The acts and practices of the respondents, as aforesaid, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and have a tendency to hinder, and have actually hindered and prevented, price competition between and among the respondents in the purchase and sale of fresh broadleaf spinach in commerce among and between the various States of the United States; have placed in respondents the power to control and enhance the prices of said commodity; have increased and fixed the prices of said commodity paid by purchasers thereof, and consequently the prices paid by the public; have created in said respondents a substantial monopoly in the dealings in said commodity in commerce among and between the various States of the United States; and have unreasonably restrained such commerce in fresh broadleaf spinach.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answers of the respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves and W. W. Sheppard, trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiners upon the evidence and exceptions filed thereto, and briefs filed in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act;

It is ordered, That the respondents, Pacific Fruit & Produce Co., a corporation; Walla Walla Gardeners' Association, a cooperative association; Mojonier & Sons, Inc., a corporation; Walla Walla

Robinson Co.; and their respective agents, representatives, and employees, or any two or more of said respondents, with or without the cooperation of others not party hereto, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of broadleaf spinach or other produce in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Entering into, continuing, or carrying out, or directing, instigating, or cooperating in any common course of action, mutual agreement, combination, or conspiracy which is designed to, or has the capacity, tendency, or effect of, restricting, restraining, suppressing, or eliminating competition in, or monopolizing the trade in, broadleaf spinach or other produce in commerce among and between the several States of the United States, and particularly that produced in the Walla Walla district of the State of Washington and sold in the trade area in and around the city of Chicago in the State of Illinois.

2. Entering into, continuing, or carrying out, or directing, instigating, or cooperating in, any common course of action, mutual agreement, combination, or conspiracy which is designed to, or has the capacity, tendency, or effect of—

(a) Restricting the sale and purchase of broadleaf spinach or other produce, to selected shippers and jobbers.

(b) Determining, controlling, or limiting the number of jobbers or wholesalers who shall purchase or offer said broadleaf spinach or other produce for sale in any designated area or market.

(c) Causing all purchases and sales of broadleaf spinach and other produce to be made through C. H. Robinson Co. or any other designated broker or brokers.

(d) Preventing jobbers and wholesalers not parties to such agreement, from purchasing from selected shippers of broadleaf spinach and other produce from the Walla Walla district of the State of Washington.

IN THE MATTER OF

WESTERN CHEMICALS, INC., MAFFETT SALES CORPORATION, BARTELL DRUG COMPANY, AND FRANK L. WILSON, N. B. WILSON, AND REUEL K. YOUNT

Docket 3735. Complaint, Mar. 9, 1939—Decision, Mar. 2, 1942

Where two corporations, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of their "Alcoban" treatment for alcoholism, to be given in alcoholic drinks or other liquids, or in soft foods; three individuals who were their controlling officers, directors and stockholders; and a third corporation, engaged in the retail drug business; by advertisements of said product, through the mails and in newspapers and periodicals of wide circulation—

(a) Represented, directly and by implication, that their said "Alcoban" constituted a competent and effective treatment for alcoholism which might be used with safety and without danger of ill effects, through such statements, among others, as "Has aided thousands addicted to the excess use of alcohol," "A doctor's prescription used for years for those addicted to the excessive use of alcohol * * * now offered to the public as Alcoban * * . Aids the sufferer to overcome the craving for liquor and to build up his resistance," "Contains no narcotics or habit-forming drugs," " * * leaves no ill effects upon any organ of the body," and "Can be given secretly in alcoholic liquors, other liquids or food * * *";

The facts being that, while nausea induced thereby may cause patient to lose his taste for alcohol, the effect is only temporary; correct treatment of alcoholism, according to the medical consensus, is directed to ascertainment and removal of causes responsible for individual's resort to alcohol and building up his general condition and powers of resistance; active ingredients of product possess substantial capacities for harm in that emetine, used in substantial quantities, produces toxic effects, while ephedrine, in older people, may increase blood pressure sufficiently to injure cerebral vessels, and pilocarpine, in repeated doses, may affect heart action to a marked extent and result in edema of the lungs; and unsupervised use thereof in dosage and over period of time prescribed is dangerous, particularly so in view of the usually low level of physical resistance of alcoholics; and

(b) Failed to reveal that use of their said product under usual or prescribed conditions might result in serious injury to health, as above indicated;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations were true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of said preparation because of such mistaken belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Complaint

34 F. T. C.

As respects the question as to whether or not the toxic properties of certain drugs contained in a preparation offered for the treatment of alcoholism to a certain extent off-set or neutralize one another by their respective counteraction, as asserted, for example, in the action of the stimulant ephedrine in counterbalancing the depressant effects of pilocarpine: any such neutralizing effect was only temporary, and the substantial preponderance of the expert testimony, contrary to sellers' contention, was to the effect that the harmful potentialities of the various ingredients contained therein were not materially affected by their combination into one preparation.

In regard to the evidential value of experiments performed on rats, cats and monkeys, for their bearing on possible toxic and dangerous properties of a preparation offered for alcoholism: it appeared that the experiments were conducted primarily for the purpose of ascertaining the lethal dose rather than the effect of the preparation on the various organs, such as the heart and lungs; results tended to substantiate testimony to the effect that preparation did possess toxic and dangerous properties, and were insufficient to meet expert testimony supporting conclusion that preparation did indeed have such properties.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan, Mr. Randolph Preston, Mr. Charles A. Vilas and Mr. Miles J. Furnas, trial examiners.

Mr. Gerard A. Rault and Mr. DeWitt T. Puckett for the Commission.

Rosen, Francis & Cleveland, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Western Chemicals, Inc., Maffett Sales Corporation, Bartell Drug Co., corporations, and Frank L. Wilson, N. B. Wilson, and Reuel K. Yount, individuals, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Western Chemicals, Inc., is a corporation organized and created under the laws of the State of Washington, with its office and principal place of business located at 1417 Fourth Avenue, Seattle, Wash.

PAR. 3. The corporate respondents and the individual respondents hereinabove named have acted together and in cooperation with each other in carrying out the acts and practices herein alleged.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said drug, by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States; and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said drug; and have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said drug, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said drug in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Complaint

34 F. T. C.

Among, and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Excessive drinking—try Alcoban. Alcoban has aided thousands addicted to the excess use of alcohol * * *.

A doctor's prescription used for years for those addicted to the excessive use of alcohol. It is now offered to the public as Alcoban * * *. Aids the sufferer to overcome the craving for liquor and to build up his resistance.

Alcoban contains no narcotics or habit-forming drugs. It leaves no ill effects upon any organ of the body.

The representations hereinbefore set out and other representations similar thereto but not set out herein appearing in respondents' advertisements are false, misleading and untrue. This preparation is not a competent, safe, nor scientific treatment for alcoholism. Its use may have ill effects upon the human body. Said advertisements of respondents are also false in that they fail to reveal that the use of this product, under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, and under such conditions as are customary and usual, may result in the serious illness and in some cases the death of the user.

The true facts are that the preparation Alcoban contains the following active ingredients:

Emetine hydrochloride.
Ephedrine hydrochloride.
Pilocarpine hydrochloride.

Each of these drugs is in itself potent and harmful, and when combined with the others as in this preparation results in a compound which may have marked toxic, and in some cases fatal, effects upon the human system.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations with respect to the product Alcoban, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations are true, and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase respondents' preparation containing injurious drugs.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on March 9, 1939, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Western Chemicals, Inc., a corporation; Maffett Sales Corporation, a corporation; Bartell Drug Co., a corporation; and Frank L. Wilson, N. B. Wilson, and Reuel K. Yount, individuals, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by attorneys for the respondents, before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and such testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, answer, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiners upon the evidence and the exceptions to such report, and brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed by respondents and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Western Chemicals, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Washington. While the corporation has not been legally dissolved, it ceased active business operations in January 1939, having previously transferred all of its assets to respondent Maffett Sales Corporation. During the period of its business activities it maintained its office and principal place of business at 1417 Fourth Avenue, Seattle, Wash.

Respondent, Maffett Sales Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Washington, with its office and principal place of business located at 1417 Fourth Avenue, Seattle, Wash.

Respondent, Bartell Drug Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Washington, with its office and principal place of business located at 1906 Boren Avenue, Seattle, Wash.

Respondent, Frank L. Wilson, an individual, is president of respondents, Western Chemicals, Inc., and Maffett Sales Corporation, his office being located at 1417 Fourth Avenue, Seattle, Wash.

Respondent, N. B. Wilson, an individual, is vice president of respondents, Western Chemicals, Inc., and Maffett Sales Corporation, her office being located at 1417 Fourth Avenue, Seattle, Wash.

Respondent, Reuel K. Yount, an individual, is secretary-treasurer of respondents, Western Chemicals, Inc., and Maffett Sales Corporation, his office being located at 1417 Fourth Avenue, Seattle, Wash.

The individual respondents are also directors and stockholders of respondents, Western Chemicals, Inc., and Maffett Sales Corporation, and formulate the policies and direct and control the business practices and methods of the two corporations.

PAR. 2. For several years immediately preceding January 1939 respondent, Western Chemicals, Inc., was engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of a medicinal preparation known as Alcoban and intended as a treatment for alcoholism.

Respondent, Maffett Sales Corporation, is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution, in commerce among and between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of this same medicinal preparation.

Both of these respondents maintain or have maintained a course of trade in their medicinal preparation in commerce among and between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent, Bartell Drug Co., is engaged in the retail drug business in the city of Seattle, Wash., and sells the preparation Alcoban as well as numerous other drugs.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their businesses the respondents, acting in cooperation with each other, have advertised their preparation Alcoban through the United States mails, and by means of advertisements inserted in newspapers and periodicals having wide circulation among and between numerous States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. All of these advertisements were for the purpose of inducing or were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of respondents' preparation in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among the statements and representations appearing in advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated in this manner by respondents, Western Chemicals, Inc., and Maffett Sales Corporation, were the following:

Excessive drinking—try Alcoban. Alcoban has aided thousands addicted to the excess use of alcohol * * *.

A doctor's prescription used for years for those addicted to the excessive use of alcohol. It is now offered to the public as Alcoban * * *. Aids the sufferer to overcome the craving for liquor and the build up his resistance.

Alcoban contains no narcotics or habit-forming drugs. It leaves no ill effects upon any organ of the body.

Respondent Bartell Drug Co. has disseminated, in addition to the first advertisement quoted above, the following advertisements:

Liquor Habit—Alcoban has aided thousands; a doctor's prescription used for years. The nationally advertised aid for excessive drinking.

Liquor Habit. Alcoban has aided many addicted to the excessive use of alcohol. It can be given secretly in alcoholic liquors, other liquids or food. Praised from coast to coast.

PAR. 4. Through the use of these advertisements and others of a similar nature the respondents have represented, directly or by implication, that their preparation Alcoban constitutes a competent and effective treatment for alcoholism, and that it may be used with safety and without danger of ill effects upon the body.

PAR. 5. The preparation Alcoban is sold in capsules and each capsule contains:

Emetine hydrochloride, $\frac{1}{8}$ grain.

Ephedrine hydrochloride, $\frac{1}{8}$ grain.

Pilocarpine hydrochloride, $\frac{1}{8}$ grain.

Milk sugar in quantity sufficient to complete a No. 3 capsule.

The preparation is intended to be given in alcoholic drinks or in other liquids such as coffee, tea, soup, milk, or water, or in soft food. The pertinent portions of respondents' directions for the use of the preparation are as follows:

A. When ALCOBAN can be given in separate Alcoholic Drinks:

1. Open 1 capsule and empty contents into one drink of alcoholic liquor. Repeat every 10 minutes until 3 capsules have been given. By this time you should see desired results, which are sweating or vomiting, or both.

2. This shows ALCOBAN is starting to do its work, and from then on you should expect vomiting to occur in from 5 to 15 minutes after each drink containing ALCOBAN.

3. After taking from two to four capsules in the manner described above, it is to be expected that the drinker will not be able to retain the liquor he has drunk, but, if possible, persuade him to have another drink and another, each containing Alcoban, until he cannot take another drink.

4. IMPORTANT. If you do not see either sweating or vomiting within one-half hour, after the 3rd capsule is given, then continue the treatment and give the contents of 2 capsules in each drink, 10 minutes apart, until 3 doses have been given. When person drinks again, repeat the treatment as directed above.

5. The more freely alcoholic drinks are taken when ALCOBAN is being given, the more effect the treatment should have.

B. When ALCOBAN can be put into the bottle of Alcoholic Liquor:

6. Let the drinker drink from the bottle as freely as he wishes.

7. Table of MINIMUM amounts to be put into bottle: In 1 pint of beer put the powder of 2 capsules. In 1 quart of beer put the powder of 4 capsules. In 1 pint of wine or "hard" liquor put powder of 6 capsules. In 1 quart of wine or "hard" liquor put powder of 12 capsules.

8. If this is not enough ALCOBAN to cause sweating and vomiting in 15 or 20 minutes, then double the amount of ALCOBAN when you continue the treatment.

(Giving ALCOBAN according to paragraphs A or B should give best and quickest results.)

C. When ALCOBAN cannot be given in Alcoholic Liquor but can be given when Person is intoxicated; or even near the Time when he will drink Alcohol:

9. In this case give the contents of 1 capsule of ALCOBAN in coffee, tea, soup, milk, water, or soft food and repeat if possible 10 minutes apart until 3 capsules have been given.

10. Then wait one-half hour for proper results. If vomiting does not occur, then double the dose, and give the contents of 2 capsules in each cup of liquid, until 3 doses are given. Repeat this program with single or double dose, as necessary, each time possible when person is intoxicated.

PAR. 6. Emetine, as the name implies, is an emetic. It induces nausea and causes emesis or vomiting. It is a gastrointestinal irritant and when used in substantial quantities produces toxic effects in the system.

Ephedrine is frequently used in the treatment of respiratory disorders. It has a stimulating effect upon the heart and the circulation as well as the nervous system and tends to produce a nervous excitability. In the case of older persons the drug may increase the blood pressure sufficiently to injure the cerebral vessels.

Pilocarpine acts as a depressant on the heart and circulation as well as on the respiratory system. When given in repeated doses and retained in the body it may affect the heart action to a marked extent. It is occasionally used by physicians to produce sweating and also to stimulate the kidneys and increase the flow of urine. One of the principal dangers from the use of pilocarpine is that it may result in edema of the lungs.

PAR. 7. The theory upon which respondents assert the effectiveness of their preparation as a treatment for alcoholism is that the nausea and vomiting caused by the preparation have a psychological effect upon the patient and cause him to form an aversion toward alcohol. Respondents urge that if the preparation is used over a substantial period of time this aversion to alcoholic beverages becomes so strong that the very thought of drinking such beverages causes a sensation of nausea, with the result that the patient comes to abstain from the use of alcohol. A further value asserted by the respondents for the preparation is that the pilocarpine content causes sweating and that thus a portion of the alcohol in the system is removed.

A number of outstanding authorities in the field of medicine and pharmacology were introduced as witnesses at the instance of the Commission, and these witnesses were a unit in their opinion that Alcoban is not a competent or effective treatment for alcoholism. The nausea induced by the preparation may cause the user to lose his taste for alcohol, but the effect is only temporary. There is no basis upon which to assume that the patient will abstain from the use of alcohol after the feeling of nausea has passed.

Neither the preparation Alcoban nor any of its ingredients is recognized by the medical profession as a treatment for the liquor habit. The consensus among physicians is that the treatment of alcoholism must be approached primarily from the psychological angle. The causes which prompt an individual to resort to alcohol must be ascertained and these causes must, if possible, be removed. The fundamental objective is to create in the individual a genuine desire and determination to abstain from the excessive use of liquor. Attention is also given by physicians to the general physical condition of the user, and an effort is made through the regulation of the diet and otherwise to build up the patient's general condition and powers of resistance.

The expert testimony further shows that respondents' preparation is not safe for use by the lay public. As indicated above, the active ingredients of the preparation are recognized by physicians and pharmacologists as possessing substantial capacities for harm to various organs of the body, and these drugs are administered by physicians with caution. The unsupervised use of the drugs by the public in the dosage and over the period of time prescribed by respondents is dangerous, and this is particularly true in view of the fact that the general physical resistance of persons addicted to the excessive use of alcohol is usually at a low level.

The expert testimony introduced by respondents recognizes in the main that each of the drugs contained in the preparation possesses toxic properties, but it is insisted that as a result of combining the drugs into one preparation the toxic properties of each drug are to a substantial measure offset or neutralized by the counteraction of the other ingredients. For example, it is contended that the ephedrine in the preparation, by reason of its properties as a stimulant, has the effect of counterbalancing the depressant effects of the pilocarpine. The record shows, however, that any neutralizing effect which the ephedrine may have upon the pilocarpine is only temporary. The substantial preponderance of the expert testimony in the record is to the effect that the harmful potentialities of the various ingredients in the preparation are not materially affected by combining the ingredients into one preparation.

Findings

In addition to the testimony of expert witnesses the respondents also offered in evidence the results of certain experiments performed on animals—rats, cats, and monkeys, some of which had been given alcohol until they were intoxicated. While the amounts of the preparation required to cause death to the animals were substantially larger than the amounts which ordinarily would be consumed by a user of the preparation, the results of the experiments tend to substantiate the testimony offered by the Commission to the effect that the preparation possesses toxic and dangerous properties. Moreover, the experiments were conducted primarily for the purpose of ascertaining the lethal dose, rather than the effect of the preparation on the various organs of the body such as the heart and lungs. After giving full consideration to all of the evidence offered by respondents, including the expert testimony and the results of the experiments, the Commission is of the opinion that the evidence is insufficient to meet the expert testimony introduced at the instance of the Commission.

PAR. 8. The Commission therefore finds that respondents' preparation does not constitute a competent or effective treatment for alcoholism; that it cannot be used with safety and without danger of ill effects upon the body; and that the representations made by the respondents, as set forth in paragraphs 3 and 4 hereof, are misleading and deceptive and constitute false advertisements. Respondents' advertisements are false for the further reason that they fail to reveal that the use of respondents' preparation under the conditions prescribed in the advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in serious injury to the health of the user.

PAR. 9. The Commission further finds that the use by the respondents of these false advertisements has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents' preparation possesses therapeutic properties which it does not in fact possess, and that the preparation is safe for use, when such is not the fact, and the tendency and capacity to cause such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' preparation as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

Order

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint, report of the trial examiners upon the evidence and the exceptions to such report, and brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed by respondents and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Western Chemicals, Inc., a corporation; Maffett Sales Corporation, a corporation; Bartell Drug Co., a corporation; and their officers, and Frank L. Wilson, N. B. Wilson, and Reuel K. Yount, individuals, and respondents' representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of respondents' preparation "Alcoban" or any other preparation of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or by implication, that said preparation constitutes a competent or effective treatment for alcoholism; or that said preparation may be used with safety or without danger of ill effects upon the body; or which advertisement fails to reveal that the use of said preparation may produce toxic conditions in the body, and may result in serious injury to the nerves, heart and lungs.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof, or which fails to reveal that the use of said preparation may produce toxic conditions in the body, and may result in serious injury to the nerves, heart, and lungs.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 10 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing stating whether they intend to comply with this order and, if so, the manner and form in which they intend to comply; and that within 60 days after service upon them of this order, said respondents shall file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF PARFUMS RONNI, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4569. Complaint, Aug. 14, 1941—Decision, Mar. 2, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of a cosmetic preparation for the eyelashes variously designated as "Ronni Mascara," "Ronni Cream Mascara," "Mascara by Ronni," and "Mascara"; by advertisements disseminated through the mails and otherwise—

Falsely represented, directly and by implication, that its said product would not smudge or run, and was waterproof and tearproof;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations were true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of said preparation because of such mistaken belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. John W. Addison, trial examiner.

Mr. R. P. Bellinger for the Commission.

Berlin & Hellman, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Parfums Ronni, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Parfums Ronni, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business at 18 West Twentieth Street, New York, N. Y.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and for more than one year last past has been engaged in the business of selling and distributing a cosmetic preparation variously designated as "Ronni Mascara," "Ronni Cream Mascara," "Mascara by Ronni" and "Mascara."

Respondent causes said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said preparation by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said preparation; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said preparation by various means, for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said preparation in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated by respondent as aforesaid, are the following:

"Ronni Mascara—Smudge proof, Tearproof, Waterproof, Runproof."

PAR. 4. By the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondent represents, directly and by implication, that its cosmetic preparation variously designated as "Ronni Mascara," "Ronni Cream Mascara," "Mascara by Ronni" and "Mascara," will neither smudge nor run, and that it is waterproof and tearproof.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations and advertisements are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading. In truth and in fact the respondent's said preparation is not smudge proof nor runproof, neither is it waterproof or tearproof.

PAR. 6. The use by respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, misleading and exaggerated advertisements and representations with respect to said preparation has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said advertisements and representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's said preparation because of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 14, 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Parfums Ronni, Inc., a corporation, charging the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint (no answer having been filed by respondent), testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by an attorney for the Commission before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it (respondent having been represented at said hearing by one of its officers), and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner, and brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed by respondent and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and make this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Parfums Ronni, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business at 18 West Twentieth Street, New York, N. Y.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for a number of years last past has been, engaged in selling and distributing a cosmetic preparation variously designated as "Ronni Mascara," "Ronni Cream Mascara," "Mascara by Ronni," and "Mascara." Respondent causes said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business respondent, by means of the United States mails and by various means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said cosmetic preparation; and respondent, by various means, has also disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said cosmetic preparation in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated by respondent, as aforesaid, are statements and representations that said cosmetic preparation is "tearproof," "waterproof," "runproof," and "smudge proof."

PAR. 4. By the use of the statements set forth in the preceding paragraph, respondent has represented directly and by implication that its preparation designed for application to the eyelashes, and variously designated as aforesaid, will not smudge or run and that it is waterproof and tearproof.

PAR. 5. The cosmetic preparation variously designated by respondent as "Ronni Mascara," "Ronni Cream Mascara," "Mascara by Ronni," and "Mascara" is manufactured for it by another concern and delivered to respondent in bulk form. Said preparation consists of stearic acid, triethanolamine, lanolin, ozocerite, carnauba, perfume, coloring, and hot water. In the use for which it is intended, respondent's said preparation is not proof against smudging or running, nor is it waterproof or tearproof.

PAR. 6. The use by respondent of the aforesaid false, deceptive, misleading, and exaggerated advertisements and representations with respect to its aforesaid preparation has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said advertisements and representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's said preparation because of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Order

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint taken before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and report of the trial examiner, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act:

It is ordered, That respondent, Parfums Ronni, Inc., a corporation, its officers, directors, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of the cosmetic preparation variously designated as "Ronni Mascara," "Ronni Cream Mascara," "Mascara by Ronni," and "Mascara," or any other cosmetic preparation which is substantially similar in composition, or possesses substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or any other name or names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated, by means of the United States mails or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, any advertisement which represents, directly or through inference, that respondent's said cosmetic preparation is "smudge proof," or "waterproof," or "run-proof," or "tearproof" by the use of any of the terms stated or by the use of any other words or terms of similar import or meaning.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated, by any means, any advertisement for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said cosmetic preparation, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That respondent shall, within 60 days after the service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

H. M. WILLIAMS, TRADING AS WILLIAMS CANDY
COMPANYCOMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 4252. Complaint Aug. 21, 1940—Decision, Mar. 3, 1942*

Where an individual, engaged in manufacture and competitive sale and distribution of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to consumers, a typical assortment consisting of 40 uniform bars, together with a push card for use in their sale under a plan in accordance with which purchaser's payment ranged from 1 cent to 5 cents as determined by number secured by chance;

Sold such assortments to distributors, to members of the purchasing public for resale, and to retailers, by whom they were exposed and sold in accordance with aforesaid sales plan involving a game of chance to procure candy bars at much less than their normal retail price; and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products, contrary to an established policy of the United States Government, and in violation of criminal laws, and in competition with many who, unwilling to use such or other method contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With the result that many persons were attracted by said plan and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell his candy in preference to products of aforesaid competitors, from whom substantial trade was thereby diverted to him;

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, Mr. Arthur F. Thomas and Mr. John W. Addison, trial examiners.

Mr. L. P. Allen, Jr. and Mr. J. V. Mishou for the Commission.

Mr. H. L. Taylor and Mr. Thaddeus A. Adams, of Charlotte, N. C., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that H. M. Williams, individually and trading as Williams Candy Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, H. M. Williams, is an individual trading as Williams Candy Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 2819 Monroe Road, Charlotte, N. C. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers. Respondent causes and has caused said products, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the city of Charlotte, N. C., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than the State of North Carolina. There is now and has been for more than 1 year last past a course of trade by respondent in said candy in commerce between and among various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment is composed of a number of bars of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a device commonly called a push card. The said push card has 40 partially perforated disks, on the face of which is printed the word "Push." Concealed within the said disks are numbers ranging from 1 to 5, inclusive. When the disks are pushed or separated from the card a number is disclosed. Purchasers punching numbers 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, pay 1¢, 2¢, 3¢, 4¢ and 5¢, respectively. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the disks are pushed or separated from the card. The prices of said bars of candy are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent furnishes, and has furnished various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of his candy by means of a game of chance, gift, enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such cards are similar to the one herein described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who directly or indirectly purchase respondent's said candy, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of his candy and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure bars of candy at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his candy and in the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among various States of the United States to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by the attorney for the respondent, before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiners upon the evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed by respondent and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, H. M. Williams, is an individual trading as Williams Candy Co., with his office and place of business located at 2819 Monroe Road, Charlotte, N. C. For some 5 years last past respondent has been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of candy to distributors and retail dealers, and to members of the purchasing public who in turn resell such candy to other members of the public.

Respondent causes, and has caused, his products, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of North Carolina to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States. Respondent has for some 5 years last past maintained a course of trade in his products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. At all times mentioned herein respondent has been in active competition with other individuals, and with corporations and partnerships, engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his business as described above, respondent has sold to distributors and retail dealers, and to members of the purchasing public, for resale, certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when such candy was sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of these assortments, which was typical of the plan or method used by respondent, was as follows:

This assortment was composed of a number of bars of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a device commonly called a push-card. The push-card had 4 partially perforated disks, on the face of each of which was printed the word "Push". Concealed within the disks were numbers ranging from "1" to "5", inclusive. When the disks were pushed or separated from the card a number was disclosed. Purchasers pushing the disks paid for a bar of candy the number of cents corresponding to the figure concealed within the disk pushed. For example, a purchaser who pushed a disk disclosing the figure 2 paid 2 cents for a bar of candy, while a purchaser pushing a disk disclosing the number 5 paid 5 cents for a bar of candy. The numbers within the disks were effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until the disk had been pushed or separated from the card. The prices paid for the bars of candy were thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 4. Retail dealers and other purchasers of respondent's candy exposed and sold such candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan described above. Respondent thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products in accordance with such sales plan. The use by the respondent of such sales plan or method in the sale of his candy and the sale of such candy through the use and with the aid of such sales plan, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 5. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the plan or method herein described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure bars of candy at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many of respondent's competitors are and have been unwilling to adopt and use this method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons were attracted by the sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his candy, and by the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to the products of respondent's competitors who do not use such methods. The use by respondent of the sales plan or method herein described had the tendency and capacity to, and did, divert substantial trade to the respondent from his competitors who do not use such methods.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiners upon the evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed by respondent and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, H. M. Williams, individually and trading as Williams Candy Co., or trading under any other name, and his agents, representatives and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others assortments of candy or other merchandise, together with push- or pull-cards, punchboards or other lottery devices, which said push- or pull-cards, punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such candy or other merchandise to the public.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push- or pull-cards, punchboards or other lottery devices, either with candy or other merchandise or separately, with said push- or pull-cards, punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing respondent's merchandise or any other merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

LOGAN-CACHE KNITTING MILLS

Docket 4075. Complaint, Mar. 30, 1940—Decision, Mar. 9, 1942

Where a corporation chartered in 1926 and engaged in the manufacture and interstate sale and distribution, through house-to-house solicitors, and through its retail stores, of women's knitted suits, dresses and sweaters, made to the individual's measurements, and in thus selling such products through its subsidiary organized in 1934 as Logan Sportswear Co., under registered trade name "Loganknit," to which it had given wide publicity and had featured in periodical and radio advertising campaigns at large expense, so that said trade name "Loganknit" had become widely known, particularly in the western States, and its knitted garments become known to the public as "Loganknits"; and

Thereafter a competitive corporation, organized in 1937, and engaged as Logan-Cache Knitting Mills, in soliciting orders through house-to-house canvassers for women's knitted garments made to the individual's measure—

- (a) Passed off as "Loganknits" its said products, and represented that it was the manufacturer of "Loganknits," through direct representations of its salesmen and through artifice and use of half-truths and other misleading and deceptive statements and expressions;

With result that in numerous instances members of the public purchased its said products in the mistaken belief that they were purchasing the genuine products thus named; and

- (b) Used such expressions in advertising and on its letterheads and otherwise as "Established in 1890," "The Old Reliable Since 1890," and "Pioneer Knitters of the West";

The facts being that its founder in 1935 purchased the assets of the Cache Knitting Works—which, while organized in 1890, with place of business in Logan, Utah, had discontinued operations in 1932—and operated such business under said name until its dissolution in 1937, when it organized the corporation here in question, which facts did not support its contention that it was the successor of said Cache Knitting Works and thus entitled to represent itself as having been established in 1890 or being the pioneer knitters of the West; individual acquiring aforesaid assets was in no way connected with said older concern which, as aforesaid, had not been engaged in active business for three or four years, so that in no event could corporation here involved be considered as having started business earlier than 1935; a number of knitting mills were established and in active operation in Logan prior to that time; and it was not, as claimed, an old, established concern such as preferred by a substantial portion of the purchasing public as, in its belief, offering purchasers certain definite advantages;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the identity of its products and its business status, and to cause purchase of its products by reason thereof, whereby substantial trade was diverted to it from its competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.

Mr. W. M. King and Mr. D. E. Hoopengarner for the Commission.

Mr. Melvin C. Harris and Mr. Ernest T. Young, of Logan, Utah, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Logan-Cache Knitting Mills, a corporation, herein referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Logan-Cache Knitting Mills, is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Utah, with its principal office and place of business located in the city of Logan, State of Utah.

PAR. 2. Respondent corporation was chartered in December 1937, and is the successor of Logan Woolen Mills, a Utah corporation chartered in April 1937. Respondent is now, and has been, since the date of its original incorporation, engaged in the manufacture, sale and distribution of ladies' knitted suits, dresses, and sweaters, and in a lesser degree, in the sale and distribution of underwear, woolen shirts, cassocks, blankets, and various other kinds of merchandise. Little advertising is done by respondent, sales being solicited and made by salesmen who canvass from house to house, taking orders for merchandise direct from the purchasing public. For the most part, respondent's garments are made for particular persons from individual measurements made by its salesmen. Orders taken by such salesmen are mailed to respondent and such garments are made in its factory in Logan, Utah, and when completed are sent direct by parcel post to the purchasers located in various States of the United States. There is now, and has been at all times since the organization of respondent, a constant current of trade and commerce in said merchandise between and among various States of the United States.

Complaint

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business respondent is now, and has been since its organization, in substantial competition with other corporations, firms and individuals, likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing similar merchandise, in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 4. Among the competitors of respondent referred to in paragraph 3 hereof is the Logan Knitting Mills & Garment Co., a Utah corporation, which has its factory and principal place of business also located at Logan, Utah. Said corporation was originally chartered under the name of Logan Garment Co. in 1926; in July 1937, the corporate name was changed to Logan Garment and Knitting Co. and subsequently in the same year was again changed to Logan Knitting Mills & Garment Co., and since that time has been operating under said last mentioned name. Said company sells, generally speaking, the same kinds of merchandise as respondent and in the same manner; that is, through salesmen who canvass from house to house, taking orders upon individual measurements of purchasers. In addition, this company sells its merchandise through a chain of retail stores owned and operated by it, some of which are located in States other than the State of Utah. By means of extensive radio advertising, by insertion of large quantities of advertising matter in newspapers and periodicals, by the distribution of numerous pamphlets and booklets, and by the general excellency of its merchandise, said company has built up and maintained a wide reputation and extensive good will among purchasers of its merchandise and said merchandise has become and is well and favorably known to the public and particularly to the public in the western States of the United States.

PAR. 5. Logan Sportswear Co. is a corporation organized in 1934 under the laws of the State of Utah and is a subsidiary of the said Logan Knitting Mills & Garment Co. On December 31, 1935, the said Logan Sportswear Co. registered with the United States Patent Office the trade-mark "Loganknits" and thereupon granted to the Logan Knitting Mills & Garment Co. the exclusive right to use said trade-mark in labeling, advertising, and identifying its merchandise sold in its direct mail order business throughout the United States. Since the time of acquiring the right to use the said trade-mark, the said Logan Knitting Mills & Garment Co. has featured said trade-mark "Loganknits" in all forms of its advertising and said trade-mark has become definitely associated in the minds of the general public with said company's merchandise.

PAR. 6. The name adopted and used by the respondent, Logan-Cache Knitting Mills, so closely imitates and simulates the name of its competitor, Logan Knitting Mills & Garment Co., and its trade-mark "Loganknits," that its use confuses, misleads, and deceives purchasers and prospective purchasers of knitted wear into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the respondent is the manufacturer of the well and favorably known line of knitted wear sold under the trade-mark "Loganknits" and that by purchasing the knitted wear of respondent they are securing the product of Logan Knitting Mills & Garment Co. Respondent has furthered the mistaken and erroneous belief, created by the use of its corporate name, by inserting in advertising media circulated among prospective purchasers of knitted wear statements containing the words "Logan Knits" in simulation of said trade-mark. Typical of these advertisements is the following:

THE LOGAN CACHE KNITTING MILLS

Manufacturers Logan Knits

Established in 1890

Logan, Utah.

Manufacturers of exclusive styles in ladies suits and dresses. Write for illustrations and sample materials.

Good Territory Open for Aggressive Men with Sales Ability.

Respondent has also furthered this erroneous and mistaken belief through representations made by its salesmen when calling on prospective purchasers of its products. Respondent's salesmen, both by direct and positive statements and by artifice and concealment of the truth, represent that they are selling products manufactured by Logan Knitting Mills & Garment Co., and that the products offered for sale by them are genuine "Loganknit" manufactured by said company.

PAR. 7. There exists in the minds of a substantial portion of the purchasing public a well-founded belief that certain definite advantages are afforded a purchaser of products and merchandise from an old established concern. With the intent and purpose of capitalizing and taking advantage of this belief, respondent by means of letters written to customers and prospective customers, by the use of letter-heads, newspaper advertisements, and by labels attached to certain of its merchandise falsely represents that it was established in 1890; that it is "The Old Reliable"; "The Old Reliable Since 1890" and that it is "Pioneer Knitters of the West." In truth and in fact, all of said statements and representations are false and untrue, since the business of respondent was not started until 1936 and the company not incorporated until 1937, and many other knitting mills were organized and engaged in business prior to the time respondent was organized and so engaged.

Findings

34 F. T. C.

PAR. 8. The acts and practices of the respondent in adopting and using the name "Logan-Cache Knitting Mills" and in making and using the statements and representations in connection with the sale and distribution of its products in said commerce as aforesaid have the tendency and capacity to and do cause many members of the public to purchase its said products under the mistaken and erroneous belief that respondent's said products are the well and favorably known products of Logan Knitting Mills & Garment Co., and under the mistaken and erroneous belief that they are dealing with a well-known and long-established firm, whereby trade in said commerce is unfairly diverted to the respondent from its competitors who do not engage in such acts and practices in connection with the sale and distribution of their respective products in said commerce.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts, practices, and representations of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on March 30, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Logan-Cache Knitting Mills, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by the attorney for the respondent, before Randolph Preston, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Logan-Cache Knitting Mills, is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Utah, with its principal office and place of business located in the city of Logan, Utah.

PAR. 2. Respondent is engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of women's knitted wear, including suits, dresses, and sweaters. Sales are solicited by respondent through traveling salesmen who make house to house calls on prospective purchasers. Orders obtained by such salesmen are mailed to respondent, and the garments ordered are made to order by respondent from individual measurements taken by such salesmen. When the garments are completed by respondent they are shipped from respondent's factory in Logan, Utah, direct to the purchasers, many of whom are located in various States of the United States other than the State of Utah. Respondent maintains and has maintained a course of trade in its products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business respondent is, and has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of similar merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 4. Among such competitors of respondent is the Logan Knitting Mills & Garment Co., a Utah corporation, which has its factory and principal place of business located in Logan, Utah. This corporation was originally chartered under the name of Logan Garment Co. in 1926 and operated under this name until about July 7, 1937, when its name was changed to Logan Garment & Knitting Co. On August 9, 1937, the name of the corporation was again changed to Logan Knitting Mills & Garment Co., and the corporation has continued to operate under that name down to the present time. This company manufactures and sells the same type of merchandise as that sold by respondent and solicits its sales in the same manner, that is, through salesmen who canvass from house to house and take orders upon individual measurements of purchasers. In addition, however, to this sales method, the company also operates a number of retail stores, some of which are located in States other than the State of Utah.

The Logan Knitting Mills & Garment Co. has a subsidiary known as Logan Sportswear Co., a corporation organized in 1934 under the laws of the State of Utah. In December 1935 the Logan Sportswear Co.

Findings

registered with the United States Patent Office the trade name "Loganknit" and granted to the parent corporation, Logan Knitting Mills & Garment Co., the right to use this trade name in labeling, advertising and identifying the knitted wear sold by the Logan Knitting Mills & Garment Co.

PAR. 5. In 1890 a corporation known as Cache Knitting Works was organized under the laws of the State of Utah, and this corporation had its place of business in Logan, Utah. The corporation continued in business until 1932, when it discontinued operations. In 1935 E. J. Wilson, the founder of the respondent corporation, purchased the assets of the Cache Knitting Works and operated the business under that name until 1937. Upon the dissolution of the corporation in 1937, Wilson organized a new corporation known as Logan Knitting Mills, the name of which was changed a few months later to Logan Woolen Mills, and shortly thereafter again changed to Logan-Cache Knitting Mills, under which name respondent is now operating.

PAR. 6. Upon acquiring the right to the use of the trade name "Loganknit," the Logan Knitting Mills & Garment Co. proceeded to give wide publicity to the name and to feature it in the company's advertising campaigns. Large sums have been expended by the company for advertising purposes, the advertising having been conducted by means of radio broadcasts and also by means of advertisements inserted in periodicals having wide circulation throughout the United States. As a result of these advertising campaigns the trade name "Loganknit" has become widely known throughout certain sections of the United States, particularly in the western States, and has become associated in the minds of many members of the public with the knitted garments manufactured and sold by the Logan Knitting Mills & Garment Co. These garments are known to such portion of the public as "Loganknits."

PAR. 7. In the course and conduct of its business and for the purpose of furthering the sale of its products, the respondent, Logan-Cache Knitting Mills, has engaged in the practice of passing off its own products as Loganknits and of representing itself as the manufacturer of Loganknits. In a substantial number of instances respondent's salesmen have made the direct representation to prospective purchasers that the products offered for sale by such salesmen were Loganknits. In many other instances, while there was no direct representation to this effect, the respondent's salesmen have by artifice and the use of half-truths and the other misleading and deceptive statements and expressions implied that respondent's products were Loganknits. The record discloses numerous instances in which members of the public have purchased respondent's products under the erroneous and mistaken belief, caused or contributed to by respondent through its salesmen, that they were purchasing Loganknits.

PAR. 8. The respondent has also engaged in the practice of misrepresenting its business status, such representations being made through the use by respondent in its advertising and on its letterheads and otherwise of the legends, "Established in 1890," "The Old Reliable Since 1890," and "Pioneer Knitters of the West." Respondent contends that it is the successor of the Cache Knitting Works and that as such successor it is entitled to make such representations. While as stated above, E. J. Wilson, the founder of the respondent corporation, did in 1935 acquire the assets of the Cache Knitting Works, the respondent is not in fact the successor of such concern in any such sense as would entitle it to represent itself as having been established in 1890 or as being the pioneer knitters of the West. At the time E. J. Wilson acquired the assets of the Cache Knitting Works he was not connected in any way with such concern but was connected with an entirely separate business organization. Moreover, at the time Wilson acquired the assets of the Cache Knitting Works this concern was not engaged in active business operations and had not been so engaged for some 3 or 4 years. In no event can the respondent corporation be considered as having started business earlier than 1935. There are a number of knitting mills in Logan, Utah, which were established and were in active operation prior to the time at which respondent was organized.

There exists in the minds of a substantial portion of the purchasing public a belief that certain definite advantages are to be obtained by purchasing merchandise from an old established concern, and there is a preference on the part of such members of the public for purchasing from such concerns.

PAR. 9. The Commission finds further that the acts and practices of the respondent as herein described have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the identity of respondent's products and with respect to respondent's business status, and the tendency and capacity to cause such portion of the public to purchase respondent's products as a result of the erroneous and mistaken belief so engendered. In consequence thereof, substantial trade has been diverted to the respondent from its competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint (oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Logan-Cache Knitting Mills, a corporation, and its officers, agents, representatives and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of respondent's knitted wear in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word "Loganknit" or "Loganknits" to designate or describe respondent's products, or otherwise representing, directly or by implication, that respondent's products are "Loganknits" or are the products of the Logan Knitting Mills & Garment Co., of Logan, Utah;

2. Representing, directly or indirectly, that respondent is the same company as said Logan Knitting Mills & Garment Co., or that respondent is in any manner associated or connected with said company;

3. Representing, directly or indirectly, that respondent was established in 1890, or that it is the "Pioneer Knitters of the West," or that respondent was organized or established at any time prior to 1935.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

HEROLIN COMPANY, INC., AND BERT H. RUBIN

Docket 4399. Complaint, Dec. 4, 1940—Decision, Mar. 9, 1942

Where a corporation and its president-treasurer, who administered its business policies, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of various cosmetics and medicinal preparations, toilet articles, and related items, and also of certain "curios" and "charms"; by advertisements in newspapers, circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, price lists, and other media—

(a) Represented that their "Original Herolin Beautifier Hair Dressing" (formerly designated as "Herolin Double-Strength Quinine Hair Grower" and otherwise), penetrated to the roots of the hair, revived hair cells and caused hair to grow, furnish necessary oils and nourishment to hair, and would prevent dandruff and other scalp ailments, and that their "Hair Gloss and Temple Oil" combined the properties of hair grower, brilliantine, and pressing oil, promoted the growth of hair around the temples and prevented burning hair or scalp with hot combs and irons;

The facts being former was nothing more than a perfumed emollient, the quinine and betanaphthol contents of which were too small to have any appreciable counterirritant or stimulant effect; and both preparations were without therapeutic value in treatment of hair or scalp and would not accomplish results claimed therefor;

(b) Represented that their "Tetter Salve" would clear up all common skin or scalp of all infections or diseases or stop falling hair;

The facts being that while preparation in question, in some cases, might be effective in clearing the skin of ringworm and some forms of itch, it would not cure eczema, tetter, or other skin ailments due to systemic factors, it had no therapeutic value in treatment of dandruff in excess of softening dandruff scales and facilitating removal thereof, and would not clear the scalp of all infections or diseases or stop falling hair;

(c) Represented that their "Nayko Tablets" would relieve menstrual pains, and cure and relieve headaches, backaches, nausea, neuralgia, colds, and similar ailments; and that their "Herolin Female Tonic" was a uterine and sedative preparation that would cure female irregularity, and relieve suppressed, painful, and excessive menstruation and other similar female disorders;

The facts being that former preparation had little, if any, therapeutic value and in dosage recommended was incapable of any sedative action; and, while the latter had the therapeutic properties of a laxative and an alcoholic depressant, neither would cure or relieve the conditions claimed;

(d) Represented that their "Moonbeam Pills" would relieve constipation, cure sick headaches and nausea, and were very beneficial in the treatment of disorders of the liver; and that their "Moonbeam Tonic" would cure constipation, headache, biliousness, dizziness, and back pains, and would correct and cure most systemic disorders of the stomach, kidneys, and liver;

34 F. T. C.

The facts being that while both preparations had laxative properties, they were not cures or remedies for constipation, and had no therapeutic value in the treatment of the other ailments mentioned, in excess of affording temporary relief when such conditions were due to constipation, and were without value in treatment of any disorders of the stomach, kidneys, or liver;

(e) Represented that their "Blood Tonic" built blood and was valuable in the treatment of boils, pimples, sores, skin infections, dizziness, and troubles arising from poor circulation and disordered conditions of the blood stream;

The facts being it would not accomplish such results, and was without therapeutic value in treatment or cure of conditions above set forth; and was not, as indicated by name, a blood tonic;

(f) Represented that their "Healing Oil," formerly designated "Rattlesnake Oil," possessed the power of penetrating through the skin to the muscles and joints and was a cure or remedy for rheumatism, lumbago, muscle cramps, sore muscles, sprains, stiff joints, neuralgia, and lame back, and constituted a competent and effective treatment therefor;

The facts being that said oil would not penetrate the skin, and was not a remedy or effective treatment for the ailments above set forth, and did not, as indicated by name, contain healing ingredients;

(g) Represented that their "Croup Salve" would cure head and chest colds, croup, inflammation, and congestion of the respiratory tract;

The facts being that while use of said preparation, a mildly semivolatile counter-irritant emollient, might afford soothing temporary relief for discomforts of congested respiratory passages, it did not constitute a cure for head or chest colds;

(h) Failed to reveal facts material in the light of representations in advertisements in question as respects said "Blood Tonic," in that indiscriminate use thereof, due to its bichloride of mercury content, might result in subacute or chronic mercury poisoning, while, by virtue of potassium iodide content, such indiscriminate use might induce toxic thyroid activity in goiter cases and reactivate latent tuberculosis;

(i) Failed to reveal, similarly, facts material in light of representations in question with respect to its said "Healing Oil," indiscriminate use of which strong irritant with its oil of mustard, oil of sassafras, ether and gasoline content, might cause severe dermatitis; and

(j) Falsely represented that their so-called curios and charms, consisting of such varied articles as incense, powders, oil, lodestones, horseshoes, and bones, and referred to as "Lucky Charm Mystic Curios," "Lucky Charm Mon Jon Incense," "Magnetic Lodestone in Love Oil," "Adam and Eve Roots in Love Oil," "High John the Conqueror Root in Love Oil," and "Lucky Charm Love Powder Sachet," had mystic and supernatural powers to drive off and guard against evil spirits, bring the wearer or user good luck, love, money, and success in love and marriage, and that they charmed and attracted others; and

Where said corporation and individual, engaged as aforesaid—

(k) Represented, through use on letterheads and advertising material of the words "manufacturer" and "manufacturing chemists," that they were manufacturers of their products, and chemists who operated the laboratory for origination of their formulae and compounding their cosmetics and medicinal preparations therefrom;

When in fact they were not chemists, did not own, control or operate any chemical laboratory, and made only about 5 percent of their products for export to foreign countries; and

(1) Represented to prospective agents and purchasers in their advertising material that they would supply other articles free with certain combinations of merchandise, when in fact the price of the so-called "free" merchandise was included in that paid for the combination offered;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of purchasing public with respect to their products and prices thereof, and their business status, thereby causing it to purchase substantial quantities of their products as a result:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, trial examiner.

Mr. John W. Carter, Jr. for the Commission.

Mr. Harry M. Wengrow, of Atlanta, Ga., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Herolin Co., Inc.—a corporation and Bert H. Rubin—individually and as president of Herolin Co., Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof, would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Herolin Co., Inc., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Georgia with its principal place of business located at 201 Mitchell Street, Southwest, Atlanta, Ga.

Respondent, Bert H. Rubin, is an individual and is president and treasurer of Herolin Co., Inc. This respondent, acting in his individual capacity, for his own interest and as president of Herolin Co., Inc., determines, directs and administers the business policies, and is personally and actively engaged in controlling, conducting, and operating the business activities of the aforesaid corporation at its place of business aforesaid as hereinafter set forth.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various cosmetics and medicinal preparations, "Mystic Charms," toilet articles and related items, mainly under the trade name of "Herolin," and some items under the trade names "Duke" and "Lady Constance," in commerce among and between the various States of the United States. Respondents cause said products when sold to be transported from their place of business in the State of Georgia to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States. At all times mentioned herein respondents have maintained a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business respondents have disseminated, and are now disseminating and have caused, and are now causing, the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said products by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondents have also disseminated, and are now disseminating and have caused, and are now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said products by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and by circulars, leaflets, enclosures, pamphlets, price lists, and other media, are the following:

1. That respondents' preparation "Original Herolin Beautifier Hair Dressing," formerly designated by respondent as "Herolin Quinine Hair Dressing" and sometimes designated by respondents as "Herolin Double-Strength Quinine Hair Grower," "Herolin, the Super-Fine Hair Dressing with Quinine Added" and "Herolin Hair Dressing With Real Quinine and Betanaphthol" is a preparation that penetrates to the roots of the hair; revives hair cells and causes hair to grow; that it furnishes necessary oils and nourishment to the hair and that it will prevent dandruff and other scalp ailments.

2. That respondents' preparation "Herolin Hair Gloss and Temple Oil," sometimes designated by respondents as "Herolin Hair Gloss and Temple Oil Brilliantine Temple Gloss Pressing Oil" is a preparation combining the properties of hair grower, brilliantine and pressing oil; that it promotes the growth of hair around the temples and prevents burning hair or scalp with hot combs and irons.

3. That respondents' preparation "Herolin Tetter Salve" is a preparation that will clear up all common skin or scalp diseases, and infections, such as tetter, itchy scalp, dandruff and falling hair.

4. That respondents' preparation "Herolin Nayko Tablets" is a preparation that will relieve women from the pains suffered during the menstruation period; it will cure and relieve headaches, backaches, nausea, neuralgia, colds, and similar ailments.

Complaint

5. That respondents' preparation "Herolin Female Tonic" is a uterine and sedative preparation that will cure chronic functional irregularity of the female reproductive organs; it will relieve suppressed, painful, and excessive menstruation and other similar female disorders.

6. That respondents' preparation "Herolin Moonbeam Pills" is a preparation that will relieve constipation, cure sick headaches, nausea, and is very beneficial in the treatment of disorders of the liver.

7. That respondents' preparation "Herolin Moonbeam Tonic" is a preparation that will cure constipation, headache, biliousness, dizziness and back pains; and that it will correct and cure most systemic disorders of the stomach, kidneys, and liver.

8. That respondents' preparation "Herolin Blood Tonic" is a preparation that builds blood and is valuable in the treatment of boils, pimples, sores, skin infections, dizziness, and troubles arising from poor circulation and disordered conditions of the blood stream.

9. That respondents' preparation "Herolin Healing Oil," formerly designated by respondents as "Rattlesnake Oil," is a preparation possessing the power of penetration through the skin to the muscles and joints and is a cure or remedy for rheumatism, lumbago, muscle cramps, sore muscles, sprains, stiff joints, neuralgia, and lame back, and constitutes a competent and effective external treatment therefor.

10. That respondents' preparation "Herolin Croup Salve" is a preparation that will cure head and chest colds, croup, inflammation, and congestion of the respiratory tract.

11. That respondents' items "Lucky Charm Mystic Curios," "Lucky Charm Moon Jon Incense," "Magnetic Lodestone in Love Oil," "Adam and Eve Roots in Love Oil," "High John the Conqueror Root in Love Oil," "Lucky Charm Love Powder Sachet," are items that have mystic and supernatural powers to drive off and guard against evil spirits; to bring to the wearer or user good luck, love, money, and success in marriage and in love; they will charm, attract, draw, and hold in love, romance, and marriage.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid representations and claims, as well as others of similar import which have not been specifically set out herein, are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue, and constitute false advertising in that the respondents represent that some of their items possess supernatural powers and that other various preparations are cures or remedies for, or competent treatments of, various diseases and ailments for which said preparations have little or no therapeutic value.

In truth and in fact respondents' preparation "Original Herolin Beautifier Hair Dressing," formerly and sometimes designated as aforesaid, is nothing more than a perfumed emollient, the quinine and betanaphthol contents of which are so small that no appreciable local counterirritating or circulatory stimulation would result from its use.

This preparation, under whatever name it may be designated, has no therapeutic value in the treatment of the hair or scalp. It will not penetrate to the roots of the hair, revive hair cells, or cause hair to grow. It will not furnish necessary oils or nourishment to the hair. It has no value in the treatment or prevention of dandruff or other scalp ailments.

Respondents' "Herolin Hair Gloss and Temple Oil," sometimes otherwise designated by respondents as aforesaid, is nothing more than an oily emollient that has no therapeutic value in the treatment of either the hair or the scalp. It will not promote the growth of hair around the temples. It will not prevent hot combs or hot irons from burning the hair or scalp.

Respondents' preparation "Herolin Tetter Salve" is a combination of counterirritant, fungicidal, and emollient principles that may promote local healing and afford some temporary relief from the symptoms of itching associated with many skin disorders; it has no therapeutic value in the treatment of dandruff in excess of softening dandruff scales and facilitating the removal thereof. It may in some cases be effective in clearing the skin of ringworm and some forms of itch. It will not cure eczema, tetter, or other skin infections and ailments due to systemic factors. It will not clear the scalp of all infections or diseases or stop falling hair.

Respondents' preparation "Herolin Nayko Tablets" have little if any therapeutic value and in the dosage recommended is incapable of providing any sedative action. It will not stop the pains associated with menstruation. It will not cure or relieve headaches, backaches, nausea, neuralgia, or colds.

Respondents' preparation "Herolin Female Tonic" has the therapeutic properties of a laxative and an alcoholic depressant. It will not afford relief during the menstruation period from suppressed painful or excessive menstruation. This preparation will not cure or remove the cause of female disorders due to functional female trouble of the reproductive organ or have any therapeutic value in the treatment of such disorders.

Respondents' preparation "Herolin Moonbeam Pills" has laxative properties.

It is not a cure or remedy for constipation and is not a competent or effective treatment therefor in excess of furnishing temporary relief from such conditions. It has no therapeutic value in the treatment of disorders of the liver. It is not a cure or remedy for sick headaches or nausea, and does not constitute a competent or effective treatment therefor in excess of affording temporary relief when such conditions are due to constipation.

Respondents' preparation "Herolin Moonbeam Tonic" is a bitter saline laxative possessing little of any diuretic action. It is not a cure or remedy for constipation and is not a competent or effective treatment therefor in excess of furnishing temporary relief from such conditions. It has no therapeutic value in the treatment of headaches, biliousness, dizziness, or back pains in excess of affording temporary relief when such conditions are due to constipation. Said preparation has no value in the treatment of any systemic disorder of the stomach, kidney, or liver.

Respondents' preparation "Herolin Blood Tonic" will not build blood. It has no therapeutic value in the treatment or cure of boils, pimples, sores, skin infection, dizziness or any other trouble arising from or occasioned by poor circulation or poor blood. The name is false and misleading as it will not supply any substance that will overcome blood deficiency. It is not a blood tonic.

Respondents' preparation "Herolin Healing Oil" is a volatile irritant capable of causing severe dermatitis. It will not penetrate the skin. It is not a cure or remedy for rheumatism, lumbago, muscle cramps, sore muscles, sprains, stiff joints, neuralgia or lame back, and does not constitute a competent or effective treatment therefor. The name is false and misleading as it contains no healing ingredients.

In truth and in fact respondents' preparation "Herolin Croup Salve" is a mildly semivolatile counterirritant emollient, the use of which may afford soothing temporary relief for discomforts of congested respiratory passages but does not constitute a cure or remedy for head or chest colds.

Respondents' items "Lucky Charm Mystic Curios," "Lucky Charm Mon Jon Incense," "Magnetic Lodestone In Love Oil," "Adam and Eve Roots In Love Oil," "High John the Conqueror Root In Love Oil," "Lucky Charm Love Powder Sachet," possess none of the supernatural or mystic powers claimed for them by respondents; they will not drive off or guard against evil spirits; they will not bring to the wearer or user good luck, love, money or success in marriage or love; they will not charm, attract, draw or hold in love, romance or marriage; they are valueless and possess none of the virtues indicated in respondent's advertisements.

PAR. 5. Respondents' items "Lucky Charm Mystic Curios," "Lucky Charm Mon Jon Incense," "Magnetic Lodestone in Love Oil," "Adam and Eve Roots In Love Oil," "High John the Conqueror Root in Love Oil," "Lucky Charm Love Powder Sachet," due to their names and because of the mystic and supernatural qualities attributed to them by respondents, have and make a definite appeal to that section of the buying public whose emotional nature is easily fired by superstition. Many types of individuals belong to this group of the buying public. Respondents' items find a ready customer among members of this group who are induced to purchase an item that is worthless. These items of respondents, because of the false and misleading statements made by respondents in reference to their qualities and powers, appeal to the ignorant and the superstitious and, because of this appeal, have a tendency to and they do, aid in the development of this type of character.

PAR. 6. In addition to the false and misleading statements hereinabove set forth, the respondents are also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements, for the further reason that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained therein, and fail to reveal:

(a) That the use of respondent's preparation "Herolin Blood Tonic" under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may cause subacute or chronic mercury poisoning and that this preparation should not be used by persons having either active or quiescent tuberculosis or goiter.

(b) That the use of respondents' preparation "Herolin Healing Oil" under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may cause severe dermatitis and that said preparation is highly inflammable and should be kept away from heat or fire.

By reason of the existence of bichloride of mercury and potassium iodide in respondents' preparation "Herolin Blood Tonic," the use of the preparation would be definitely harmful in two ways:

(a) Although bichloride of mercury may be eliminated with relative rapidity there is a tendency towards excretory decline and the establishment of absorption depots in the system. Therefore, in the main, indiscriminate use of the preparation may result in subacute or chronic mercury poisoning.

(b) By reason of the potassium iodide content of the preparation, the use of it is harmful to users who have pulmonary tuberculosis, either active or quiescent. The indiscriminate use of this preparation may, therefore, result in inducing toxic thyroid activity or reactivate latent tuberculosis.

By reason of the presence of oil of mustard, oil of sassafras, ether and gasoline, in respondents' preparation "Herolin Healing Oil," this preparation is highly inflammable and may be explosive and it is also a strong irritant. The indiscriminate use of this preparation may cause severe dermatitis. The careless handling of the preparation around open flames, lights, or other hot objects may cause serious and irreparable injury to the user.

PAR. 7. In addition to the false and misleading statements hereinabove set forth, respondents by the use of the word "manufacturer" and the use of the phrase "creators of guaranteed beauty aids" on their letterheads and the use of the phrase "manufacturing chemists" on some of their printed matter, have represented and are now representing that they are:

(a) Manufacturers—owning, controlling or operating a plant or factory for the manufacture of their products;

(b) Creators—That by chemical research or otherwise they formulate new and not heretofore known beauty aids; and

(c) Chemists—owning, controlling or operating a chemical laboratory for the creation and the compounding of formulae from which their cosmetic and medical preparations are manufactured.

Respondents are not now and they never have been manufacturers, creators or chemists. They do not now own, control or operate, directly or indirectly, any plant or factory for the manufacture of these products, or any laboratory for, or employ any chemist for research work in, the creation or compounding of any formula or formulae for the manufacture of their cosmetic and medicinal preparations.

PAR. 8. Respondents in the course and conduct of their business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of many of their products, have set forth in printed circulars and form letters distributed through the mails and by other media, various offers and combination offers under several designations, purporting to be introductory and get-acquainted offers to new agents and money savers to other purchasers, all offers purporting to carry free items of respondents' products and some in addition thereto carrying other free merchandise.

Respondents' so-called introductory and get-acquainted offers to new agents, however designated, are not and never have been restricted and limited to new purchasers. On the contrary, such offers have been and are now available to any and all purchasers.

The products and article of merchandise which the respondents represent are given free or without charge are not free in any instance. The prices of the so-called "free" goods, under whatever name designated, are included in the price of the other items of respondents' offer. The price paid by the purchaser is the regular price which would be paid for the combination offered, including the so-called "free" goods.

PAR. 9. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations and others of a similar nature, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' products.

PAR. 10. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on December 4, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Herolin Company, Inc., a corporation, and Bert H. Rubin, individually and as president of the corporate respondent, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, a hearing was held before a trial examiner of the Commission therefore duly designated by it, during the course of which testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by the attorney for the Commission. Thereafter, during the course of the hearing, a stipulation was entered into between the attorney for the Commission and the attorney for the respondents, wherein it was stipulated and agreed that the allegations of fact contained in the complaint (with certain exceptions) were admitted by the respondents to be true, and that the Commission might proceed without further hearings or other procedure to make its findings as to such facts and its conclusion based thereon, and might proceed also to issue its order based upon such findings and conclusion. Subsequent to the execution of said stipulation and during the course of said hearing, testimony and other evidence in support of the matters excepted from said stipulation were introduced by the attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by the attorney for the respondents, and such testimony and other evidence, together with the testimony and other evidence originally introduced, and the stipulation entered into between the attorneys, were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, stipulation, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed by respondents and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Herolin Co., Inc. is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Georgia, with its principal place of business located at 201 Mitchell Street, SW, Atlanta, Ga.

Respondent, Bert H. Rubin, is an individual and is president and treasurer of respondent, Herolin Co., Inc. He directs and administers the business policies of the corporation and also participates personally and actively in the business activities of the corporation.

PAR. 2. The respondents are now, and for a number of years last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various cosmetics and medicinal preparations, toilet articles and related items, and also certain articles designated by respondents as "curios" and "charms." Respondents' products are generally sold under the trade name "Herolin."

In the course and conduct of their business the respondents cause and have caused their products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Georgia to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States. Respondents maintain, and have maintained, a course of trade in their products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, the respondents have disseminated and have caused the dissemination of various advertisements concerning their products, by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondents have also disseminated and have caused the dissemination of advertisements concerning their products by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in such advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as set forth above, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, price lists, and other media, are the following:

1. That respondents' preparation "Original Herolin Beautifier Hair Dressing," formerly designated by respondents as "Herolin Double-Strength Quinine Hair Grower," "Heroline, the Super-Fine Hair Dressing with Quinine Added" and "Herolin Hair Dressing With Real Quinine and Betanaphthol," penetrates to the roots of the hair; revives hair cells and causes hair to grow; that it furnishes necessary oils and nourishment to the hair and that it will prevent dandruff and other scalp ailments.

2. That respondents' preparation "Herolin Hair Gloss and Temple Oil," sometimes designated by respondents as "Herolin Hair Gloss and Temple Oil Brilliantine Temple Gloss Pressing Oil," is a preparation combining the properties of hair grower, brilliantine and pressing oil; that it promotes the growth of hair around the temples and prevents burning hair or scalp with hot combs and irons.

3. That respondents' preparation "Herolin Tetter Salve" will clear up all common skin or scalp diseases and infections, such as tetter, dandruff, and falling hair.

4. That respondents' preparation "Herolin Nayko Tablets" will relieve women from the pains suffered during the menstruation period; that it will cure and relieve headaches, backaches, nausea, neuralgia, colds, and similar ailments.

5. That respondents' preparation "Herolin Female Tonic" is a uterine and sedative preparation that will cure chronic functional irregularity of the female reproductive organs; that it will relieve suppressed, painful, and excessive menstruation and other similar female disorders.

6. That respondents' preparation "Herolin Moonbeam Pills" will relieve constipation, cure sick headaches and nausea, and that it is very beneficial in the treatment of disorders of the liver.

7. That respondents' preparation "Herolin Moonbeam Tonic" will cure constipation, headache, biliousness, dizziness, and back pains; and that it will correct and cure most systemic disorders of the stomach, kidneys, and liver.

8. That respondent's preparation "Herolin Blood Tonic" builds blood and is valuable in the treatment of boils, pimples, sores, skin infections, dizziness, and troubles arising from poor circulation and disordered conditions of the blood stream.

9. That respondents' preparation "Herolin Healing Oil," formerly designated by respondents as "Rattlesnake Oil," possesses the power of penetration through the skin to the muscles and joints and is a cure or remedy for rheumatism, lumbago, muscle cramps, sore muscles, sprains, stiff joints, neuralgia, and lame back, and constitutes a competent and effective treatment therefor.

10. That respondents' preparation "Herolin Croup Salve" will cure head and chest colds, croup, inflammation and congestion of the respiratory tract.

PAR. 4. The Commission finds that respondents' preparation Original Herolin Beautifier Hair Dressing is in fact nothing more than a perfumed emollient, the quinine and betanaphthol contents of which are so small that no appreciable local counterirritating or circulatory stimulation would result from its use. This preparation has no therapeutic value in the treatment of the hair or scalp. It will not penetrate to the roots of the hair, revive hair cells or cause hair to grow. It will not furnish necessary oils or nourishment to the hair. It has no value in the treatment or prevention of dandruff or other scalp ailments.

Respondents' Herolin Hair Gloss and Temple Oil is nothing more than an oily emollient that has no therapeutic value in the treatment of either the hair or the scalp. It will not promote the growth of hair around the temples. It will not prevent hot combs or hot irons from burning the hair or scalp.

Respondents' preparation Herolin Tetter Salve is a combination of counterirritant, fungicidal, and emollient principles that may promote local healing and afford some temporary relief from the symptoms of itching associated with many skin disorders. It has no therapeutic value in the treatment of dandruff in excess of softening dandruff scales and facilitating the removal thereof. It may in some cases be effective in clearing the skin of ringworm and some forms of itch. It will not cure eczema, tetter, or other skin infections and ailments due to systemic factors. It will not clear the scalp of all infections or diseases or stop falling hair.

Respondents' preparation Herolin Nayko Tablets has little if any therapeutic value and in the dosage recommended is incapable of providing any sedative action. It will not stop the pains associated with menstruation. It will not cure or relieve headaches, backaches, nausea, neuralgia, or colds.

Respondents' preparation Herolin Female Tonic has the therapeutic properties of a laxative and an alcoholic depressant. It will not afford relief during the menstruation period from suppressed, painful, or excessive menstruation. This preparation will not cure or remove the cause of female disorders due to functional female trouble of the reproductive organs, or have any therapeutic value in the treatment of such disorders.

Respondents' preparation Herolin Moonbeam Pills has laxative properties. It is not a cure or remedy for constipation and is not a competent or effective treatment therefor in excess of furnishing temporary relief from such condition. It has no therapeutic value in the treatment of disorders of the liver. It is not a cure or remedy for sick headaches or nausea, and does not constitute a competent or effective treatment therefor in excess of affording temporary relief when such conditions are due to constipation.

Respondents' preparation Herolin Moonbeam Tonic is a bitter saline laxative possessing little if any diuretic action. It is not a cure or remedy for constipation and is not a competent or effective treatment therefor in excess of furnishing temporary relief from such condition. It has no therapeutic value in the treatment of headaches, biliousness, dizziness, or back pains in excess of affording temporary relief when such conditions are due to constipation. The preparation has no value in the treatment of any systemic disorder of the stomach, kidneys, or liver.

Respondents' preparation Herolin Blood Tonic will not build blood. It has no therapeutic value in the treatment or cure of boils, pimples, sores, skin infection, dizziness or any other trouble arising from or occasioned by poor circulation or poor blood. The name is false and misleading as the preparation will not supply any substance that will overcome blood deficiency. It is not a blood tonic.

Respondents' preparation Herolin Healing Oil is a volatile irritant capable of causing severe dermatitis. It will not penetrate the skin. It is not a cure or remedy for rheumatism, lumbago, muscle cramps, sore muscles, sprains, stiff joints, neuralgia, or lame back, and does not constitute a competent or effective treatment therefor. The name is false and misleading as the preparation contains no healing ingredients.

Respondents' preparation Herolin Croup Salve is a mildly semi-volatile counterirritant emollient, the use of which may afford soothing temporary relief for discomforts of congested respiratory passages but does not constitute a cure or remedy for head or chest colds.

PAR. 5. The Commission therefore finds that the representations made by respondents with respect to their preparations as set forth above are false, misleading, and deceptive, and constitute false advertisements. The advertisements with respect to the preparations Herolin Blood Tonic and Herolin Healing Oil are false for the further reason that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained in such advertisements, and fail to reveal that the use of these preparations under the conditions prescribed in the advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in injury to the health of the user.

The preparation Herolin Blood Tonic contains bichloride of mercury. While ordinarily bichloride of mercury may be eliminated from the system with relative rapidity, there is a tendency toward excretory decline and the establishment of absorption depots in the system. The indiscriminate use of this preparation may therefore result in subacute or chronic mercury poisoning.

This preparation also contains potassium iodide, and the use of the preparation is harmful to users who have goiter or pulmonary tuberculosis in either the active or quiescent stage. The indiscriminate use of the preparation in such cases may result in inducing toxic thyroid activity and may reactivate latent tuberculosis.

The preparation Herolin Healing Oil contains oil of mustard, oil of sassafras, ether and gasoline, and is a strong irritant. The indiscriminate use of the preparation may cause severe dermatitis.

PAR. 6. The articles designated by respondents as "curios" and "charms" consist of numerous and varied articles such as incense, powders, oil, lodestones, horseshoes, and bones. Among the names given by respondents to these articles are "Lucky Charm Mystic Curios," "Lucky Charm Mon Jon Incense," "Magnetic Lodestone In Love Oil," "Adam and Eve Roots in Love Oil," "High John the Conqueror Root in Love Oil," and "Lucky Charm Love Powder Sachet." In connection with the sale and distribution of these articles, respondents represent that they have mystic and supernatural powers to drive off and guard against evil spirits; to bring to the wearer or user good luck, love, money and success in love and marriage; and that they charm and attract others. These representations are false in their entirety. The articles in question are valueless and possess none of the powers or virtues indicated in respondents' advertisements.

PAR. 7. The respondents have also used on their letterheads and on certain of their advertising material the legends, "manufacturer" and "manufacturing chemists." Through the use of these legends the respondents have represented that they are the manufacturers of the products sold by them, and also that they are chemists and own, control or operate a chemical laboratory for the origination and compounding of formulas from which their cosmetics and medicinal preparations are manufactured.

Respondents are not in fact chemists and do not own, control, or operate any chemical laboratory. While respondents manufacture that portion of their products which is exported to foreign countries, this portion now constitutes only about 5 percent of respondents' total volume of business. The reason given by respondents for manufacturing the products which are exported is that by manufacturing such products they are able to effect certain savings in the way of federal excise taxes. The Commission finds that the use by respondents of the legend "chemists" in connection with their trade name is misleading and deceptive; and also that such use of the legend "manufacturer" is misleading and deceptive unless the application of such legend be restricted to that portion of respondents' products which is exported to foreign countries.

PAR. 8. In their advertising material the respondents also represent to prospective agents and other prospective purchasers that upon the purchase from respondents of certain combinations of merchandise, the respondents supply certain other articles of merchandise "free" to such agents and purchasers. In fact, the merchandise designated by respondents as "free" is in no sense free or without charge, but the price of such merchandise is included in the price paid by the purchaser for the combination offered.

PAR. 9. The Commission finds further that the use by respondents of the false and misleading representations and advertisements herein described has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the properties, value and safety of respondents' products, and with respect to respondents' business status and the prices of their products, and the tendency and capacity to cause such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' products as a result of the erroneous and mistaken belief so engendered.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony, and other evidence taken before a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, stipulation entered into between the attorney for the Commission and the attorney for respondents, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (no brief having been filed by respondents and oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Herolin Co., Inc., a corporation, and its officers, and Bert H. Rubin, individually and as president of said corporation, and respondents' agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of their medicinal and cosmetic preparations hereinafter named, or any other preparations of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or by implication:

(a) That respondents' preparation "Original Herolin Beautifier Hair Dressing" penetrates to the roots of the hair; that it revives hair cells or causes hair to grow; that it furnishes necessary oils or nourishment to the hair; or that it prevents dandruff or other scalp ailments.

(b) That respondents' preparation "Herolin Hair Gloss and Temple Oil" combines the properties of hair grower, brilliantine, and pressing oil; that it promotes the growth of hair; or that it prevents hot combs or irons from burning the hair or scalp.

(c) That respondents' preparation "Herolin Tetter Salve" will stop falling hair; that it possesses any therapeutic value in the treatment of dandruff in excess of softening dandruff scales and facilitating the removal thereof; or that it constitutes a cure for eczema, tetter or other skin infections or ailments due to systemic factors.

(d) That respondents' preparation "Herolin Nayko Tablets" will relieve women from the pains suffered during the menstruation period; or that it will cure or relieve headaches, backaches, nausea, neuralgia, or colds.

(e) That respondents' preparation "Herolin Female Tonic" will cure, or have any therapeutic value in the treatment of, chronic functional irregularity of the female reproductive organs; or that it will relieve suppressed, painful, or excessive menstruation.

(f) That respondents' preparation "Herolin Moonbeam Pills" possesses any therapeutic value in the treatment of disorders of the liver; or that it constitutes a cure for sick headaches or nausea, or possesses any therapeutic value in the treatment thereof in excess of affording temporary relief when such conditions are due to constipation.

(g) That respondents' preparation "Herolin Moonbeam Tonic" will correct or cure systemic disorders of the stomach, kidneys or liver; that it will cure constipation, or is a competent or effective treatment therefor in excess of furnishing temporary relief; or that it constitutes a cure for headaches, biliousness, dizziness, or back pains, or possesses any therapeutic value in the treatment thereof in excess of affording temporary relief when such conditions are due to constipation.

(h) That respondents' preparation "Herolin Croup Salve" constitutes a cure for head or chest colds, croup, or inflammation or congestion of the respiratory tract, or that it possesses any therapeutic value in the treatment thereof in excess of affording soothing temporary relief from the discomforts associated with such conditions.

(i) That respondents' preparation "Herolin Blood Tonic" will build blood, or that it has any therapeutic value in the treatment of boils, pimples, sores, skin infections, dizziness, or any troubles arising from disordered conditions of the blood stream or from poor circulation; or which advertisement uses the words "Blood Tonic" as a part of the name of said preparation or otherwise represents that said preparation is a blood tonic; or which advertisement fails to reveal that the continued use of said preparation may result in chronic mercury poisoning, and that said preparation should not be used by those having tuberculosis or goiter; provided, however, that such advertisement need contain only the statement, "Caution: Use Only as Directed," if and when the directions for use, wherever they appear on the label, in the labeling, or in both label and labeling, contain a warning to the above effect.

(j) That respondents' preparation "Herolin Healing Oil" is capable of penetrating the skin to the muscles or joints; or that it constitutes a cure or remedy or a competent or effective treatment for rheumatism, lumbago, muscle cramps, sore muscles, sprains, stiff joints, neuralgia, or lame back; or which advertisement uses the word "Healing" as a part of the name of said preparation or otherwise represents that said preparation possesses healing properties; or which advertisement fails to contain a warning against the repeated application of said preparation to the same place; provided, however, that such advertisement need contain only the statement, "Caution: Use Only as Directed," if and when the directions for use, wherever they appear on the label, in the labeling, or in both label and labeling, contain a warning to the above effect;

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparations, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof, or which advertisement with respect to said preparations Herolin Blood Tonic and Herolin Healing Oil fails to comply with the affirmative requirements set forth in subparagraphs (i) and (j) above;

It is further ordered, That the respondents and their officers, agents, representatives and employees, as aforesaid, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of respondents' so-called "curios" and "charms," including incense, powders, oils, lodestones, horseshoes, and bones, or any other articles, do forthwith cease and desist from;

Representing that said articles possess any mystic or supernatural powers; that they will bring to the wearer or user good luck, love, money, or success in love and marriage; or that they will charm or attract others;

It is further ordered, That the respondents and their officers, agents, representatives, and employees, as aforesaid, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of respondents' medicinal and cosmetic preparations and so-called curios and charms, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word "Chemists," or any other word of similar import, to designate or describe respondents' business, or otherwise representing that respondents are chemists, or that they own, control or operate a chemical laboratory.

2. Using the unqualified word "manufacturer," or any other word of similar import, to designate or describe respondents' business, or otherwise representing that respondents manufacture all of the products sold by them; provided, however, that this provision shall not be construed to prohibit the use of such term when its application is expressly restricted to that portion of respondents' products which is exported to foreign countries and which is in fact manufactured by respondents.

3. Using the word "free," or any other word of similar import, to designate or describe any articles of merchandise which are not in fact given free and without charge, or otherwise representing that any merchandise is given free or without charge when such is not the fact.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF INTERNATIONAL PARTS CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4513. Complaint, May 29, 1941—Decision, Mar. 9, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of replacement automobile mufflers—

- (a) Represented, directly or by implication, that the occupant of an automobile equipped with a muffler, the seams of which were spot-welded, locked or crimped, was in danger of injury from carbon monoxide gas as a result of leakage of exhaust gas, and that such danger was avoided through the use of a muffler with continuous electric-welded seams, through such statements on cartons and tags attached to its said product (together with a depiction of a police officer) as "WARNING! To Protect Yourself Against Leaking Carbon Monoxide Gas Be Sure Your Muffler is Made With Continuous ELECTRIC-WELDED SEAMS Throughout * * * Not Locked, Crimped or Spot-Welded—Your Safeguard is An INTERNATIONAL";
- The facts being that in the customary operation of an automobile there is little or no danger of such poisoning as a result of such leakage, regardless of how its muffler seams are closed; and its said products in such respect had no practical advantage over other types, some of which in fact were equipped with small drainage holes; and
- (b) Represented that the finish on its mufflers afforded permanent protection against rust or corrosion, through use of statement "Finest Quality Metallic Finish Prevents Rust and Corrosion" in advertising circulars;

The facts being that while the finish used thereon, consisting of powdered metal suspended in a varnish-like binder, might prevent rust and corrosion for a limited time, it did not afford permanent protection, as implied;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of purchasing public into the belief that there was substantial danger of injury from use of mufflers with locked, crimped or spot-welded seams, and that by use of muffler here in question such danger was removed; and that finish on said mufflers afforded protection against rust and corrosion; whereby such public was induced to purchase its products, and trade was diverted unfairly to it from competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiner.

Mr. Donovan Divet for the Commission.

Jacobson, Merrick, Nierman & Silbert, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that International Parts Corporation, a corporation, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, International Parts Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois and having its office and principal place of business at 1814 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

PAR. 2. The respondent is now and for more than two years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of replacement mufflers for use on automobiles. The respondent sells its products to members of the purchasing public situated in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes said products, when sold, to be transported from its said place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein, has maintained, a course of trade in its products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Various corporations, associations, partnerships and persons who do not engage in the methods used by the respondent, as hereinafter alleged, are engaged, and at all times herein mentioned, have been engaged, in offering for sale and selling both new and replacement mufflers, including locked-seam, crimped, and spot-welded mufflers, in commerce among and between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent, in the course and conduct of its said business, is in substantial competition with such corporations, associations, partnerships and persons so engaged in offering for sale and selling said products in said commerce.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business in said commerce, for the purpose of promoting the sale of its said products, the respondent for more than two years last past, has engaged in the practice of making false representations as to the merits of its said mufflers. Said false representations are, and have been, made by means of statements inserted in catalogs, pamphlets, circulars and other printed matter distributed among customers and prospective customers.

Complaint

34 F. T. C.

PAR. 4. Among the false and misleading representations so made and distributed concerning respondent's said replacement mufflers are the following:

Electric welded seams throughout—not locked, crimped or spot-welded.

Double shell construction for added strength and quiet operation, exclusive feature.

Finest quality metallic finish prevents rust and corrosion.

They increase gas mileage.

Warning! To protect yourself against leaking carbon monoxide gas, be sure your muffler is made with continuous electric-welded seams throughout, not locked, crimped or spot-welded.

As a part of the advertising material used and distributed by respondent, the respondent displays a cross-section representation of one of its said mufflers, in which said representation a cross-section of a baffle plate in said muffler appears. Said representation of said baffle plate is connected by an arrow pointing to said baffle plate with the following words: "New engineering achievement."

By the use of said advertisements, representations, picturizations and others of similar import and meaning not herein specifically set forth and described, the respondent represents that its said mufflers are not spot-welded; that the baffle plates in its said mufflers are a new engineering achievement; that by reason of the double shell construction of respondent's said mufflers, said mufflers are more efficient than those offered for sale by other manufacturers and vendors of mufflers; that respondent's said mufflers are coated with a metallic finish which permanently prevents rust and corrosion; that the use of respondent's said mufflers gives increased gas mileage; that the occupant of a car equipped with a locked-seam, crimped or spot-welded muffler is in danger of injury from carbon monoxide gas through leakage of exhaust gases through the seam.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations are false and misleading. In truth and in fact respondent's mufflers are spot-welded; the baffle plates used in respondent's said mufflers are not a new engineering achievement; the double shelled feature of respondent's said mufflers is not exclusive but has long been used by other persons and companies selling mufflers and the said double shelled feature of respondent's said mufflers does not render them more efficient than mufflers ordinarily offered for sale by some of respondent's said competitors; the finish used on respondent's said mufflers will not prevent rust and corrosion permanently; the use of respondent's said mufflers does not result in increased gas mileage; the occupants of a car equipped with a locked-seam, crimped or spot-welded muffler are in no danger from carbon monoxide gas escaping from openings of the seam in the muffler for such methods of manufacture produce seams equally as effective as the method used by respondent in preventing the escape of exhaust gases; furthermore, the escape of exhaust gases through a defect in the seam of the muffler on a car would not place the occupants thereof in danger of injury from carbon monoxide gas.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid representations has had and now has the tendency and capacity to mislead and has misled purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof, into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations are true, and to induce them to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said products, and unfairly to divert trade in said commerce to respondent from its said competitors to the injury of said competitors and of the public.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, and unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 29th day of May, 1941, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, International Parts Corporation, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Donovan Divet, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Jacobson, Merrick, Nierman & Silbert, attorneys for the respondent, before Randolph Preston, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and the exceptions to such report, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral argument; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, International Parts Corporation, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 1814 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for some four years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of replacement mufflers for use on automobiles. Respondent sells its products to dealers and members of the purchasing public, and causes its products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business the respondent is now, and at all times mentioned herein has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of both new and replacement mufflers for automobiles.

PAR. 4. The respondent, in the course and conduct of its business, and for the purpose of promoting the sale of its mufflers, has advertised such mufflers in various ways, including the use of labels which are affixed to the cartons in which the mufflers are displayed and offered for sale to the public, and tags which are attached to the mufflers themselves. On these labels and tags appears a picturization of a police officer, together with the following legend:

WARNING!
To Protect Yourself Against Leaking Carbon Monoxide Gas
Be Sure
Your Muffler Is Made With Continuous
ELECTRIC-WELDED SEAMS
Throughout
* * * Not Locked, Crimped or Spot-Welded Your Safeguard INTERNATIONAL

PAR. 5. Through the use of these representations and others of a similar nature the respondent represents, directly or by implication, that the occupant of an automobile equipped with a muffler the seams of which are spot-welded, locked or crimped, is in danger of injury from carbon monoxide gas as a result of the leakage of exhaust gases through the seams of the muffler, and that this danger is avoided through the use of a muffler which has continuous electric-welded seams.

PAR. 6. A continuous electric weld of metallic material is usually made by a continuous process, with no break either in the operation of the welding machine or in the weld itself. A spot weld, as the term implies, is one in which the material is welded in spots only. The mufflers sold by respondent are manufactured for it by another concern, and the welding of the seams of the mufflers is done through the use of a type of machine which is ordinarily used for spot-welding. Respondent insists, however, that although the welding may be done by means of a spot-welding machine, the result in the case of respondent's mufflers is a continuous electric weld of the entire seam because the spots where the material is welded are made to overlap and the result is a complete welding of the entire seam of the muffler.

Some of respondent's competitors sell mufflers which have continuous electric welded seams throughout. Others sell mufflers which are spot-welded, and still others sell mufflers which are not welded at all but on which the seams are fastened together by means of locking or crimping.

The evidence shows that in the customary and usual operation of an automobile there is little or no danger of carbon monoxide gas poisoning as a result of the leakage of exhaust gases from the muffler, and this is true irrespective of the manner in which the seams of the muffler are closed. No well-made muffler, whether its seams are closed by a continuous electric weld, by spot-welding, or by locking or crimping, is a source of danger insofar as the gases escaping therefrom are concerned. In this respect respondent's mufflers have no practical advantage over mufflers of other types. In fact, certain automobiles are equipped by the manufacturer with mufflers which have small drain holes in the bottom for the purpose of permitting water to drain out of the muffler, and it is not an infrequent occurrence for dealers and users of automobiles to punch small holes in their mufflers for draining purposes. The Commission therefore finds that the representations made by respondent as set forth above are misleading and deceptive, that they assume the presence of a danger which does not in fact exist.

34 F. T. C.

PAR. 7. In promoting the sale of its mufflers, the respondent also distributes among prospective purchasers certain advertising circulars which contain, among other representations with respect to its mufflers, the following:

Finest Quality Metallic Finish
Prevents Rust and Corrosion.

The finish used for respondent's mufflers is powdered metal which is held or suspended in some kind of binder similar to varnish. While the finish may serve to prevent rust and corrosion for a limited period of time, it does not afford permanent protection against such conditions. The Commission finds that as used by respondent the word "Prevents" implies permanency, and that respondent's representation is therefore misleading to the public.

PAR. 8. The Commission further finds that the use by the respondent of these misleading and deceptive representations has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the belief that there is substantial danger of injury from the use of mufflers which have locked, crimped or spot-welded seams and that by using respondent's muffler such danger is removed; also that the finish on respondent's mufflers afford permanent protection against rust and corrosion. As a result of the erroneous and mistaken beliefs so engendered by respondent's representations, a substantial portion of the purchasing public has been induced to purchase respondent's products rather than the products of respondent's competitors, and in consequence substantial trade has been diverted to the respondent from its competitors.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Randolph Preston, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and the exceptions to such report, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral argument, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act;

It is ordered, That the respondent, International Parts Corporation, a corporation, and its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of respondent's automobile mufflers in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or by implication, that the use on an automobile of a muffler having seams which are spot-welded, locked or crimped results in greater danger of carbon monoxide gas poisoning to the occupant of such automobile than does the use of a muffler having continuous electric-welded seams;

2. Representing, through the use of the unqualified word "Prevents," or any other unqualified word of similar import, or by any other means, that the finish on respondent's mufflers affords permanent protection against rust or corrosion.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF

PRATT FOOD COMPANY

Docket 4599. Complaint, Sept. 29, 1941—Decision, Mar. 9, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of its "Pratt's Inhalant" and "Pratt's Poultry Regulator;" by advertisements in periodicals, circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature—

- (a) Falsely represented that its said "Inhalant" poultry preparation constituted a competent and effective treatment for colds in fowls, helped prevent serious respiratory diseases in chickens, and was germ killing, antiseptic and healing, preventing serious outbreaks of diseases, and killing germs in the air; and
- (b) Falsely represented that the use of its said "Poultry Regulator" would start hens producing more eggs in fifteen days; when in fact it would not accomplish such result within said or any period of time;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into mistaken belief that such statements were true, and of inducing it, because of such mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of said products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Maurice C. Pearce for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Pratt Food Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Pratt Food Co., is a corporation duly organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its office and principal place of business located at 124-130 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and for more than one year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of certain medicinal preparations for chickens designated "Pratt's Inhalant" and "Pratt's Poultry Regulator." Respondent causes said preparations when sold to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said products, by the United States mails, and by various other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said products, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said products in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in periodicals and circulars, and by leaflets, pamphlets and other advertising literature, all of general circulation, are the following:

Its germ-killing, antiseptic and healing medicines are held in a base that mixes readily with these secretions.

Pratt's Inhalant not only causes infected material to be expelled by coughing and sneezing, but unlike ordinary poultry inhalants, Pratt's germ-killing, antiseptic and healing medicines are enabled to give a greater measure of relief.

Prevents serious disease outbreaks.

Kills Germs in Air.

We Guarantee this famous old reliable Pratt's Poultry Regulator to start more eggs coming in just 15 short days * * * or we refund your money.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondent has represented that its said poultry preparation "Pratt's Inhalant" constitutes a competent and effective treatment for colds in fowl and helps prevent serious respiratory diseases in chickens; that it is germ killing, antiseptic and healing; that it prevents serious disease outbreaks in chickens; and that it will kill germs in the air. Respondent further represents that the use of its poultry preparation "Pratt's Poultry Regulator" will start hens producing more eggs within a short period of time.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading. In truth and in fact respondent's poultry preparation "Pratt's Inhalant" does not constitute a competent or effective treatment for colds in fowl, or does it help prevent serious respiratory diseases in chickens. It is not germ killing, nor is it antiseptic or healing. It will not prevent serious disease outbreaks in chickens nor will it kill germs in the air. The use of "Pratt's Poultry Regulator" will not start hens producing more eggs within a short period of time.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false, deceptive and misleading statements, representations and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid with respect to its said preparations has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true and induces a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such mistaken and erroneous belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said products.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on September 29, 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Pratt Food Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. The substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Pratt Food Co., is a corporation duly organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its office and principal place of business located at 124-130 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and for more than one year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of certain medicinal preparations for chickens designated "Pratt's Inhalant" and "Pratt's Poultry Regulator." Respondent causes said preparations when sold to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its products, by the United States mails, and by various other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act and respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its products, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its products in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations contained in respondent's false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in periodicals and circulars, and by leaflets, pamphlets and other advertising literature, all of general circulation, are the following:

NEW WATER SOLUBLE Inhalant Gives Better Control of Colds helps prevent serious respiratory diseases.

Findings

34 F. T. C.

Its germ-killing, antiseptic and healing medicines are held in a base that mixes readily with these secretions.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondent has represented that its poultry preparation "Pratt's Inhalant" constitutes a competent and effective treatment for colds in fowl and helps prevent serious respiratory diseases in chickens; that it is germ killing, antiseptic and healing; that it prevents serious disease outbreaks in chickens; and that it will kill germs in the air. Respondent further represents that the use of its poultry preparation "Pratt's Poultry Regulator" will start hens producing more eggs within 15 days.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading. In truth and in fact respondent's poultry preparation "Pratt's Inhalant" does not constitute a competent or effective treatment for colds in fowl, nor does it help prevent serious respiratory diseases in chickens. It is not a germicide, nor is it antiseptic or healing when used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements. It will not prevent serious disease outbreaks in chickens. The use of "Pratt's Poultry Regulator" will not start all hens producing more eggs within 15 days or within any other period of time.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false, deceptive and misleading statements, representations and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid with respect to its preparations has had and now has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such mistaken and erroneous belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's products.

Order

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission, upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Pratt Food Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of its medicinal preparations for chickens designated "Pratt's Inhalant" and "Pratt's Poultry Regulator," or any other preparations of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or by implication:

(1) That respondent's preparation "Pratt's Inhalant" constitutes a competent or effective treatment for colds in fowl.

(2) That "Pratt's Inhalant" helps prevent serious respiratory diseases in chickens.

(3) That "Pratt's Inhalant" is a germicide or has antiseptic and healing properties.

(4) That "Pratt's Inhalant" prevents serious outbreaks of disease in chickens.

(5) That respondent's preparation "Pratt's Poultry Regulator" will start all hens producing more eggs within 15 days or within any other period of time.

34 F. T. C.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparations, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

SAMUEL MARTIN, TRADING AS SAMUEL MARTIN, LTD.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4660. Complaint, Dec. 18, 1941—Decision, Mar. 9, 1942

Where an individual, engaged in Seattle, Wash., in the interstate sale and distribution to retailers and to the general public of men's clothing and blankets—

(a) Represented that he was an English limited company, with principal place of business in London, and that the men's clothing offered and sold by him was made by such company in its factory in Leeds and imported by it and stored in a warehouse at the address given, through use of words "London," "Limited," and "Ltd." in connection with his trade name, and through such statements in connection therewith as "English Top Coats and Lounge Suits, U. S. Warehouse—Seattle, Wash.," and "Pacific Coast Warehouse, 600 Textile Tower, Seattle, Washington, U. S. A.," along with picture of a three-story factory building bearing said trade name above the words "Factory in Leeds, England," on stationery and invoices, in newspaper advertisements, and on labels attached to his garments;

When in fact he was not an English concern, but an individual doing business under the trade name indicated, with no place of business in London; little, if any, of his clothing was made by him, or in Leeds or any place in England, for which there is a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public; and the location given was not a warehouse, but his only place of business in which some of the garments sold by him were made;

(b) Represented that his blankets were products of the Hudson Bay Company through designating them as "Imported Hudson Bay Blankets" and "Hudson Bay Blanket" in newspaper advertisements and on invoices or otherwise;

When in fact the blankets in question were not those widely sold, favorably known and preferred blankets long sold and distributed by the Hudson Bay Co., advertised, labeled and designated "Hudson's Bay 'Point' Blanket," and known generally as "Hudson Bay Blanket";

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that such statements were true, and thereby causing it to purchase substantial quantities of his products, and with result also of placing in the hands of retailers means with which to mislead and deceive the purchasing public;

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Samuel Martin, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PAR. 2. Said respondent is now and for more than one year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of men's clothing and blankets to retailers for resale and to the general public. Respondent causes said merchandise, when sold, to be shipped from his place of business in Seattle, Wash., to the purchasers thereof, who are located at points in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his men's clothing, respondent has made many false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations respecting his business status and the origin and place of manufacture of merchandise, on stationery and invoices and in advertisements inserted in newspapers, all of which are disseminated and circulated among the purchasing public and on labels attached to said garments. Among and typical of the representations so made by the respondent are the following:

Factory, Leeds, England

PAR. 4. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations and other similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondent represents that Samuel Martin, Ltd., is an English limited company, with its principal place of business at London, England; that the men's clothing offered for sale and sold by him is made by said company in a factory owned or controlled by it in Leeds, England, and imported by it from England to the United States; that the location described at 600 Textile Tower, Seattle, Wash., is the warehouse in which the imported garments are stored when received from England.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, respondent is not an English limited company, or an English concern or enterprise, but he is an individual doing business under the trade name of Samuel Martin, Ltd., as described in paragraph 1 hereof. Respondent has no office or place of business in London, England. Little, if any, of the men's clothing offered for sale and sold by respondent is made by him or by a company or concern which he owns or controls or in a factory owned or controlled by him in Leeds, England, or at any other place or location in England or is imported from England. The location at 600 Textile Tower, Seattle, Wash., is not a warehouse for the storage of imported garments but is the respondent's only place of business and is the place where some of the garments sold by respondent are made.

There has long been and is now a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for men's clothing manufactured in England and there is a demand among the purchasing public for such clothing.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of his business, as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his blankets, respondent has falsely represented by various means, such as advertisements inserted in newspapers and on invoices sent to purchasers, that said blankets are products of the Hudson's Bay Co. by designating and describing said blankets as "Imported Hudson Bay Blankets" and "Hudson Bay Blanket."

Hudson Bay Company is a corporation organized under the laws of England in the year 1670, having its principal place of business at Vancouver, British Columbia. For a great number of years it has sold and distributed blankets throughout the United States under its corporate name, such blankets being advertised, labeled and designated "Hudson's Bay 'Point' Blanket" and generally known to the purchasing public as "Hudson Bay Blanket." These blankets have enjoyed a wide sale and are well known for their excellent qualities and there is a preference and demand among the purchasing public for such blankets.

The blankets designated as "Imported Hudson Bay Blankets" and "Hudson Bay Blanket" offered for sale and sold by respondent, while imported from England, are not the product of Hudson Bay Co. nor are they Hudson Bay Point Blankets or Hudson Bay Blankets.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true and has caused a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's products.

The respondent's aforesaid practices with respect to his said products places in the hands of retailers of said products a means and instrumentality wherewith to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public in the manner and form hereinabove set out and described.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on December 18, 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Samuel Martin, individually and trading as Samuel Martin, Ltd., charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On January 10, 1942, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Samuel Martin, is an individual trading and doing business under the name of Samuel Martin, Ltd., with his principal office and place of business located at 600 Textile Tower, Seattle, Wash.

PAR. 2. Said respondent is now and for more than one year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of men's clothing and blankets to retailers for resale and to the general public. Respondent causes said merchandise, when sold, to be shipped from his place of business in Seattle, Wash., to the purchasers thereof, who are located at points in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his men's clothing, respondent has made many false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations respecting his business status and the origin and place of manufacture of said merchandise, on stationery and invoices and in advertisements inserted in newspapers, all of which are disseminated and circulated among the purchasing public and on labels at-

 Factory, Leeds, England

PAR. 4. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations and others similiar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondent represents that Samuel Martin, Ltd., is an English limited company, with its principal place of business at London, England; that the men's clothing offered for sale and sold by him is made by said company in a factory owned or controlled by it in Leeds, England, and imported by it from England to the United States; that the location described as 600 Textile Tower, Seattle, Wash., is the warehouse in which the imported garments are stored when received from England.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, respondent is not an English limited company, or an English concern or enterprise, but he is an individual doing business under the trade name of Samuel Martin, Ltd., as described in paragraph 1 hereof. Respondent has no office or place of business in London, England. Little, if any, of the men's clothing offered for sale and sold by respondent is made by him or by a company or concern which he owns or controls or in a factory owned or controlled by him in Leeds, England, or at any other place or location in England or is imported from England. The location at 600 Textile Tower, Seattle, Wash., is not a warehouse for the storage of imported garments but is the respondent's only place of business and is the place where some of the garments sold by respondent are made.

There has long been and is now a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for men's clothing manufactured in England and there is a demand among the purchasing public for such clothing.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of his business, as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his blankets, respondent has falsely represented by various means, such as advertisements inserted in newspapers and on invoices sent to purchasers, that said blankets are products of the Hudson's Bay Co. by designating and describing said blankets as "Imported Hudson Bay Blankets" and "Hudson Bay Blanket."

Hudson Bay Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of England in the year 1670, having its principal place of business at Vancouver, British Columbia. For a great number of years it has sold and distributed blankets throughout the United States under its corporate name, such blankets being advertised, labeled and designated "Hudson's Bay 'Point' Blanket" and generally known to the purchasing public as "Hudson Bay Blanket." These blankets have enjoyed a wide sale and are well known for their excellent qualities and there is a preference and demand among the purchasing public for such blankets.

The blankets designated as "Imported Hudson Bay Blankets" and "Hudson Bay Blanket" offered for sale and sold by respondent, while imported from England, are not the product of Hudson Bay Co. nor are they Hudson Bay Point Blankets or Hudson Bay Blankets.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true and has caused a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's products.

The respondent's aforesaid practices with respect to his said products place in the hands of retailers of said products a means and instrumen-tality wherewith to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public in the manner and form hereinabove set out and described.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act;

It is ordered, That the respondent, Samuel Martin, individually and trading as Samuel Martin, Ltd., or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of men's clothing and blankets in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word "London" in conjunction with respondent's name or in conjunction with any trade name used by respondent, or in any manner representing that the respondent's enterprise is a British corporation or an English concern.
2. Representing in any manner, directly or indirectly, that any merchandise sold and distributed by respondent is manufactured in the British Isles, unless the merchandise so described has been manufactured in the British Isles.
3. Using the words "Factory, Leeds, England," or representing in any manner that the merchandise sold and distributed by respondent is manufactured by him, unless and until the respondent actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the plant or factory in which such merchandise is manufactured.
4. Representing, directly or indirectly, that respondent operates a warehouse or other building in connection with his business for the storage of imported merchandise, unless such is the fact.

Order

5. Using the words "Imported Hudson Bay Blankets" and "Hudson Bay Blanket" or words of similar import in connection with and as descriptive of blankets sold and distributed by respondent unless such blankets are the same as those sold and distributed by Hudson Bay Company, incorporated under the laws of England in 1670 with its principal place of business located in Vancouver, British Columbia.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

HERBERT NEBENZAHL AND IRVING NEBENZAHL,
TRADING AS OLANDO MANUFACTURERS

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4664. Complaint, Jan. 7, 1942—Decision, Mar. 9, 1942

Where two individuals, engaged in the manufacture and interstate sale and distribution of sweaters—

- (a) Represented through use of trade name "Kamelo" that their said products were composed in whole or in part of camel hair, and displayed on labels attached to said products such name superimposed in large, dark-faced type upon a camel, with the words "cotton and rayon" in much smaller and less conspicuous type on the borderline of the label where they might be easily hidden or covered in attaching the same to the garment;

Notwithstanding the fact that the material from which garments in question were made was not composed, either in whole or in part, of camel hair—yarn and garments of which have long enjoyed a substantial public demand and preference for certain purposes—but were made of cotton fiber and of rayon which, when, as here, manufactured to simulate camel hair, has the appearance and feel thereof, and is readily accepted by the purchasing public as camel hair; and

- (b) Failed to disclose adequately the rayon content of their said sweaters, which, labeled as aforesaid, were so manufactured as to simulate camel hair and had the appearance and feel thereof;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public, and inducing it to purchase substantial quantities of said products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. James M. Hammond for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Herbert Nebenzahl and Irving Nebenzahl, individually and trading as Olando Manufacturers, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Herbert Nebenzahl and Irving Nebenzahl, are individuals trading as Olando Manufacturers, with their office and principal place of business located at 1318 Milwaukee Avenue, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for more than one year last past have been, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling and distributing sweaters. Respondents cause their said products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said products, the respondents have engaged, and now engage, in the practice of falsely representing the constituent fiber or material of which their products are made. Such false representations have been, and are, made by means of statements and legends appearing on labels attached to said products, and otherwise, and by failing to disclose the rayon content of such products.

Typical of the aforesaid practice is the use by respondents of the trade name "Kamelo" to describe and designate their said products, and the appearance on the labels attached to said products of the trade name "Kamelo" superimposed, in large, dark-faced type, upon an outline or vignette of a camel. Below this illustration, but in much smaller and less conspicuous type on the borderline of the label, where they may be easily hidden or covered in the process of attaching the label to the garment, appear the words "cotton and rayon."

By the use of said labels, words and representations, the respondents have represented, and still represent, that the material of which their said products are made is composed in whole or in part of camel hair.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid representations of the respondents are false and misleading. In truth and in fact, the material of which are made the garments to which said labels have been, and are, attached have not been, and are not, composed either in whole or in part of camel hair. Said garments have been, and are, made entirely of cotton fiber and rayon.

PAR. 5. Camel hair for a long period of time has been woven into yarn, and there exists a substantial public demand and preference, for some purposes, of yarn and garments made in whole or in part of camel hair.

Rayon is a chemically manufactured fiber or fabric which may be so manufactured as to simulate camel hair, and when so manufactured has the appearance and feel of camel hair and is practically indistinguishable by the purchasing public from camel hair. By reason of these qualities, rayon, when manufactured to simulate camel hair and not designated as rayon, is readily believed to be camel hair, and products made of rayon are accepted by the purchasing public as being made of camel hair even though such products are not designated by terms representing or implying that they are camel hair. The rayon contained in respondents' products labeled "Kamelo" as aforesaid is so manufactured as to simulate camel hair and has the appearance and feel of camel hair.

PAR. 6. The acts and practices of the respondents, as herein set forth, including the aforesaid method of representing and labeling their said products, and the failure to disclose adequately the rayon content thereof, have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the constituent fiber or material of which respondents' products are made, and have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, induce such portion of the purchasing public to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' products.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on January 7, 1942, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Herbert Nebenzahl and Irving Nebenzahl, individually, and trading as Olando Manufacturers, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On January 26, 1942, the respondents filed their answer, in which answer they admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Herbert Nebenzahl and Irving Nebenzahl are individuals trading as Olando Manufacturers, with their office and principal place of business located at 1318 Milwaukee Avenue, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for more than one year last past have been, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling and distributing sweaters. Respondents cause their said products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said products, the respondents have engaged, and now engage, in the practice of falsely representing the constituent fiber or material of which their products are made. Such false representations have been, and are, made by means of statements and legends appearing on labels attached to said products, and otherwise, and by failing to disclose the rayon content of such products.

Typical of the aforesaid practice is the use by respondents of the trade name "Kamelo" to describe and designate their said products, and the appearance on the labels attached to said products of the trade name "Kamelo" superimposed in large, dark-faced type upon an outline or vignette of a camel. Below this illustration, but in much smaller and less conspicuous type on the borderline of the label, where they may be easily hidden or covered in the process of attaching the label to the garment, appear the words "cotton and rayon."

By the use of said labels, words and representations, the respondents have represented, and still represent, that the material of which their said products are made is composed in whole or in part of camel hair.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid representations of the respondents are false and misleading. In truth and in fact, the material from which the garments to which said labels have been and are attached has not been, and is not, composed either in whole or in part of camel hair. Said garments have been, and are, made entirely of cotton fiber and rayon.

PAR. 5. Camel hair for a long period of time has been woven into yarn and there exists a substantial public demand and preference for some purposes of yarn and garments made in whole or in part of camel hair.

Rayon is a chemically manufactured fiber or fabric which may be so manufactured as to simulate camel hair and when so manufactured has the appearance and feel of camel hair and is practically indistinguishable by the purchasing public from camel hair. By reason of these qualities, rayon, when manufactured to simulate camel hair and not designated as rayon, is readily believed to be camel hair, and products made of rayon are accepted by the purchasing public as being made of camel hair even though such products are not designated by terms representing or implying that they are camel hair. The rayon contained in respondents' products labeled "Kamelo" as aforesaid is so manufactured as to simulate camel hair and has the appearance and feel of camel hair.

PAR. 6. The acts and practices of the respondents, as herein set forth, including the aforesaid method of representing and labeling their said products, and the failure to disclose adequately the rayon content thereof, have had and now have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the constituent fiber or material of which respondents' products are made, and have had and now have the tendency and capacity to, and do, induce many members of the purchasing public to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act;

It is ordered, That the respondents Herbert Nebenzahl and Irving Nebenzahl, individually and trading as Olando Manufacturers, their employees, agents and representatives, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of sweaters or other garments in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing in any manner, or by any means, that respondents' products are composed of fibers or materials other than those of which such products are actually composed.

2. Using the word "Kamelo," or any word or words of similar import or meaning, alone or in conjunction or connection with the picture of a camel, to describe, designate, or in any way refer to, any product which is not composed entirely of camel hair; provided, however, that in the case of a product composed in part of camel hair and in part of other material, such as cotton or rayon, the words "Camel Hair" or "Kamelo," or other descriptive words, may be used to designate or describe the camel-hair content when immediately accompanied by a word or words in equal size and conspicuousness accurately describing or designating each constituent fiber or material thereof.

3. Advertising, offering for sale or selling fabrics, garments or other products composed in whole or in part of rayon, without disclosing the fact that such fabrics or products are composed of rayon, and when such fabrics or products are composed in part of rayon and in part of other materials, such fibers or materials, including the rayon, shall be named in the order of their predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent.

OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 4555. Complaint, Aug. 5, 1941—Decision, Mar. 12, 1942*

Where a corporation, and its three officers, who formulated and directed its policies and practices, engaged in the manufacture and interstate sale and distribution of leather goods and novelties—

Sold and distributed, prior to April 2, 1940, certain of their billfolds labeled "Genuine Leather Composition Barkhyde," and prior to February 15, 1941, certain of such products which they represented as being made of genuine leather;

Notwithstanding the fact their said products were manufactured largely of a nonleather material with which some leather fibers had been combined, which did not have the qualities of leather, and was not made from the hide of an animal;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that such labels and representations were true, and of inducing it to purchase substantial quantities of such billfolds as a result of such belief:

Held. That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Jesse D. Kash for the Commission.

Mr. Leon Savage, of New York City, for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Felder Bros., Inc., a corporation, Abraham Felder, David Felder, and Louis Felder, individually and officers of said corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Felder Bros., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business located at 583-587 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Respondent, Abraham Felder, is an individual and is president of the corporate respondent, with his office and principal place of business located at 583-587 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Respondent, David Felder, is an individual and is secretary of the corporate respondent, with his office and principal place of business located at 583-587 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Respondent, Louis Felder, is an individual and is vice president and treasurer of the corporate respondent, with his office and principal place of business located at 583-587 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

The individual respondents formulate, control, and direct the policies, practices and methods of the corporate respondent.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for more than two years last past have been, engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling leather and imitation leather goods and novelties, including billfolds. Respondents cause their said products, when sold by them, to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their said leather and imitation leather goods and novelties, including billfolds, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said billfolds, the respondents have represented, and are now representing, that certain of the billfolds manufactured, sold and distributed by them are of genuine leather composition designated "Barkhyde," such representations having been made and now being made by means of labels, tags and typed impressions stamped or attached to said billfolds, as follows:

Label:

_____	Genuine Leather Composition	_____
_____	Barkhyde	_____
Fine,	Made Exclusively for	Quality
_____	Felder Bros., Inc.,	_____
	New York, N. Y.

Impression on billfolds:

Genuine Leather

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, respondents have represented and now represent, directly or by implication, that their said billfolds are manufactured wholly from genuine leather, the hide of an animal.

Findings

34 F. T. C.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading. In truth and in fact respondents' said billfolds labeled "Genuine Leather Composition Barkhyde" and bearing a legend stamped thereon reading, "Genuine Leather," are manufactured largely of a paper material with which some leather fibers have been combined. Said products are not made of genuine leather and do not have the qualities or characteristics of leather, and are not made from the hide of any animal.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false and misleading advertising, disseminated as aforesaid, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false advertisements are true, and to induce the purchasing public to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' products as a result of such belief.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein alleged are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on August 5, 1941, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents Felder Brothers, Inc., a corporation, Abraham Felder, David Felder, and Louis Felder, individually and as officers of said corporation, Felder Bros., Inc., charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On September 15, 1941, the respondents filed an answer to this proceeding, and on December 15, 1941, at a hearing duly scheduled and held in Brooklyn, New York, it was agreed by and between counsel for the respondents and counsel for the Commission that, subject to the approval of the Commission, a stipulation as to the facts read into the record may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto, and that the Commission may proceed upon such statement of facts to make its findings as to the facts (including inferences which it may draw from the said stipulated facts) and its conclusion based thereon and issue its order disposing of this proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. The respondents expressly waived the filing of the trial examiner's report on the evidence. Thereafter, this proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved and accepted, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Felder Bros., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business located at 583-587 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Respondent, Abraham Felder, is an individual and is president of the corporate respondent, with his office and principal place of business located at 583-587 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Respondent, David Felder, is an individual and is secretary of the corporate respondent, with his office and principal place of business located at 583-587 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Respondent, Louis Felder, is an individual and is vice president and treasurer of the corporate respondent, with his office and principal place of business located at 583-587 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

The individual respondents formulate, control and direct the policies, practices and methods of the corporate respondent.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for more than 2 years last past have been, engaged in the business of manufacturing, and selling leather and imitation leather goods and novelties, including billfolds. Respondents cause their said products when sold by them, to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their said leather and imitation leather goods and novelties, including billfolds, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said products the respondents, prior to April 2, 1940, sold and distributed certain billfolds bearing the label "Genuine Leather Composition Barkhyde." Prior to February 15, 1941, respondents manufactured, sold and distributed certain billfolds and represented them as being made of genuine leather.

PAR. 4. The Commission finds that through the use of the above described labels and representations, respondents have represented that their said billfolds are manufactured wholly from genuine leather, the hide of an animal. Such labels and representations were misleading and deceptive. In truth and in fact, none of said billfolds were manufactured wholly of genuine leather, but were manufactured largely of a nonleather material with which some leather fibers had been combined. Said nonleather material did not have the qualities and characteristics of leather and was not made from the hide of an animal.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondents of the foregoing misleading and deceptive labels and representations had the tendency and capacity to, and did, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such labels and representations were true and induced the purchasing public to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' products as a result of such belief.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondents and a stipulation as to the facts entered into by counsel for respondents herein and counsel for the Commission which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondents herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that the said respondents have violated the provisions of the said Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Felder Bros., Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents and employees and Abraham Felder, David Felder, and Louis Felder, as individuals, and as officers of Felder Bros., Inc., their representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of leather goods, imitation leather goods, novelties and other similar products in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing in any manner that products which are not manufactured wholly from the hide of an animal are leather or genuine leather.

2. Using the words or legends "Genuine Leather Composition Barkhyde," "Composition Barkhyde" or the words "Barkhyde" or "leather," or any other word or words whose spelling or written appearance simulates or suggests the word "hide" or "leather" as descriptive of the composition of any products which are not made of leather, the hide of an animal.

3. Using the words "leather" or "hide" or any simulation thereof, in connection with or as descriptive of their products, made partly of leather and partly of other materials which simulate leather, unless that part which is leather and that part which simulates leather are clearly distinguished.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

INGENUITIES CORPORATION OF AMERICA, GOLDBERG,
SQUIRE, LESSER AND COHEN, INC., AND T. P.
McCUTCHEON AND BROTHER, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4593. Complaint, Sept. 22, 1941—Decision, Mar. 13, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in licensing a patent for the construction of neckties and the use, in connection therewith, of the registered trade-mark "Silkallo" (also licensed in combinations such as, particularly, "Duo-Silk-Allo"), which (1) paid an agreed percentage of licensees' cost of advertising the ties and furnished them with counter-cards and labels, on all of which it caused to be displayed the phrase "Duo-Silk-Allo," (2) designated approved firms for embossing said trade-marks on ties, and (3) charged royalties for neckties made and embossed under its licenses—

- (a) Represented that the neckties involved were silk through use of phrase "Duo-Silk-Allo" and other similar phrases; and failed to make it a condition precedent to the issuance of a license that licensee agree to use such phrases only on and in connection with products made entirely from silk, and to determine whether ties were entirely thus made, and to revoke licenses of those selling, shipping, labeling, embossing or advertising such products not thus made; and

Where two of its corporate licensees—

- (b) Embossed, or caused to be embossed, with words "Duo-Silk-Allo" and sold, thus embossed, rayon and rayon-and-silk ties, with woolen interlining; and
(c) Failed, in case of one of said licensees, to disclose rayon content of its products, and in other so to do except through placing on ties involved detachable paper labels reading "Silk and Rayon," and to designate each constituent fiber of such ties in order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single one;

The facts being that many of the ties concerned, including those sold by other of its said licensees and similarly advertised, labeled, embossed and sold, were, except for woolen interlining, composed entirely or predominantly of rayon which, when made to simulate silk, is practically indistinguishable by the purchasing public from the genuine and long preferred product of the cocoon of the silkworm; and

Where said corporate licensor—

- (d) Placed in the hands of its said two corporate licensees aforesaid methods of misrepresenting their respective ties, and participated in the misrepresentation thereof; and

Where said licensor and its licensees—

- (e) Failed to disclose and to cause to be disclosed the fact that said products were composed in whole or in part of rayon, except as above set forth;

With tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers of said neckties into the mistaken belief that such representations were true and that rayon used therein was silk, thereby inducing them to purchase substantial numbers of said ties:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Donovan Divet for the Commission.

Munn, Liddy, Glaccum & Kane and Mr. Murray Rosof, of New York City, for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Ingenuities Corporation of America, a corporation and Goldberg, Squire, Lesser & Cohen, Inc., a corporation and T. P. McCutcheon & Brother, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as the respondents, have violated the provisions of said act and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Ingenuities Corporation of America, is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York and having its principal place of business at 745 Fifth Avenue, in the city of New York, State of New York.

Respondent, Goldberg, Squire, Lesser & Cohen, Inc., is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York and having its principal place of business at 3 East Twenty-eighth Street, in the city of New York, State of New York.

Respondent, T. P. McCutcheon & Brothers, Inc., is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania and having its principal place of business at 1216 Arch Street, in the city of Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Ingenuities Corporation of America, Inc., is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the business of licensing the use of a certain patent for the construction of neckties and the use in connection with neckties of a registered trade mark "Silkallo," the use of which the said respondent licenses in combination with other words and with hyphens particularly as "Duo-Silk-Allo." The said respondent issues said licenses to manufacturers of neckties located in various States of the United States and in accordance with the provisions of the agreements under which said licenses are issued and in the course and conduct of its said business pays an agreed percentage of the cost of the advertising of said neckties by the individual licensees. In the course and conduct of its said business said respondent also furnishes said licensees with counter cards advertising neckties manufactured and labeled in accordance with said licenses, and also supplies them in some cases with labels to be used on said neckties, and also designates embossing firms which emboss the said trade mark on the said neckties upon which neckties respondent receives royalties as hereinafter alleged. Respondent controls the activities of said designated embossing firms to such an extent that such embossing firms refuse to emboss neckties except under conditions not objected to by said respondent. The embossing on said neckties, the said labels, the said advertisements and the said counter cards all display the phrase "Duo-Silk-Allo." In accordance with the provisions of said licensing agreements and in the course and conduct of its said business, said respondent charges and receives a certain royalty for the neckties manufactured and embossed under said licenses.

The said neckties after being embossed by one of the said designated embossing firms as heretofore alleged, are returned to the licensees from the places of business of said embossing firms to said licensees located in States other than those in which said embossing firms are located; said counter cards and the said labels supplied by said respondent are shipped by said respondent from its principal place of business in the State of New York to said licensees in States other than New York and are by said licensees shipped from their respective places of business to persons and firms located in States other than the State in which said licensees are respectively located and from which they make said shipments; the said advertisements paid for in part by said respondent as heretofore alleged are published in newspapers and magazines which are distributed in the various States of the United States; the said neckties after being embossed by one of said designated embossing firms and returned to said licensees as aforesaid are transported with the embossing from the respective places of business of said licensees to purchasers located in States other than those from which shipment was made.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business and for the purpose of promoting the sale of its said licenses and of the neckties manufactured under said licenses, the said respondent, Ingenuities Corporation of America, in connection with its respective licensees has engaged in the practice of falsely representing the constituent fabric or material of certain of the neckties manufactured by its said licensees by means of false representations appearing in said labels, countercards, embossed neckties and advertisements in newspapers and magazines and by failing to disclose and to require the disclosure of the rayon content of said neckties and has placed in the hands of other persons and companies a means of so misrepresenting said products.

PAR. 4. Among the said neckties manufactured by the licensees of said respondent, Ingenuities Corporation of America. and shipped, embossed, labeled, and advertised as heretofore alleged, are many which contain no silk, but which are made entirely of rayon with woolen interlining and others which are made partly of silk and partly of rayon with a woolen interlining. In the advertising, labeling and embossing of said neckties, respondent, Ingenuities Corporation of America, has used and has permitted its licensees to use the phrase "Duo-Silk-Allo," or other phrases of similar import or meaning and has failed to make it a condition precedent to the issuance of a license to use the phrase "Duo-Silk-Allo," or other phrases of similar import or meaning, that said licensees agree to use such phrases only on and in connection with neckties made entirely from silk, and has failed to determine whether said neckties are made entirely of silk and has failed to revoke licenses when the neckties so sold, shipped, labeled, embossed, or advertised as aforesaid were not made entirely of silk. By using and by permitting the use of the phrase "Duo-Silk-Allo" and other phrases of similar import or meaning not herein specifically set forth, the respondent has made and caused to be made the representation that said neckties are composed entirely of silk and has placed in the hands of its licensees a means of making said representation.

Among the said licensees of respondent, Ingenuities Corporation of America, are the respondents Goldberg, Squire, Lesser & Cohen, Inc., a corporation and T. P. McCutcheon & Brother, Inc., a corporation, each of which said respondents under a license to use said patent, has manufactured or caused to be manufactured certain neckties composed in some cases of rayon with a woolen interlining and in other cases of rayon and silk with a woolen interlining, which neckties each of said respondents has embossed or caused to be embossed with the words "Duo-Silk-Allo" under a license from said respondent, Ingenuities Corporation of America, and which neckties so embossed said respondent licensees have sold in "commerce" as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. The respondent, T. P. McCutcheon & Brother, Inc., in selling its said neckties as aforesaid has entirely failed to disclose the rayon content thereof; the respondent Goldberg, Squire, Lesser & Cohen, Inc., has failed to disclose the rayon content of its said neckties except by placing thereon a detachable paper label reading "Silk and Rayon," and has failed to designate each constituent fiber of said neckties in the order of its predominance by weight beginning with the largest single constituent. The respondent, Ingenuities Corporation of America, has received a royalty on each of the neckties so manufactured, embossed and sold by the two other respondents and in the ways and by the methods heretofore alleged has placed in the hands of each of said two respondent licensees a method of misrepresenting their respective neckties and has participated in the misrepresentation thereof.

PAR. 5. The said representations of the respondents as heretofore alleged are false and misleading. In truth and in fact many of the neckties sold by each of said respondent licensees, as well as many of the neckties of other licensees of respondent licensor similarly advertised, labeled, embossed and sold in "commerce" as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, are composed of rayon with a woolen interlining, or of rayon and silk with a woolen interlining and with the rayon predominating.

PAR. 6. The word "silk" for many years last past has had and still has in the minds of the purchasing and consuming public generally a definite and specific meaning, to wit: the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk products for many years have held and still hold, public esteem for their preeminent qualities and because of such reputation there is a substantial demand on the part of the purchasing public for such products. Rayon is the name of a chemically manufactured fiber or fabric which may be manufactured so as to simulate silk and when so manufactured has the appearance and feel of silk and is practically indistinguishable by the purchasing public from silk. By reason of these qualities rayon, when manufactured to simulate silk, and not designated as rayon, is readily believed to be and is accepted by the purchasing public as being silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. All of the rayon contained in the aforesaid neckties labeled "Duo-Silk-Allo" is manufactured so as to simulate silk and has the appearance and feel of silk. In the sale and in the offering for sale of said neckties the respondents have failed to disclose and have failed to cause to be disclosed by labels or in any other manner except as heretofore alleged the fact that said neckties were composed in whole or in part of rayon.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid methods and representations and the failure to disclose and to cause to be disclosed the rayon content of said neckties has had and has the tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers of said neckties into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true and that the rayon fabric and fiber used in the makeup of said neckties is silk and to induce them to purchase substantial numbers of said neckties.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on September 22, 1941, issued, and on September 23, 1941, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Ingenuities Corporation of America, a corporation, Goldberg, Squire, Lesser & Cohen, Inc., a corporation, and T. P. McCutcheon & Brother, Inc., a corporation, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondents' answers, the Commission by orders entered herein granted respondents' motions for permission to withdraw said answers and to substitute therefor answers admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answers were duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and substitute answers, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Ingenuities Corporation of America, is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York and having its principal place of business at 745 Fifth Avenue, in the city of New York, State of New York.

Respondent, Goldberg, Squire, Lesser & Cohen, Inc., is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York and having its principal place of business at 3 East Twenty-eighth Street, in the city of New York, State of New York.

Respondent, T. P. McCutcheon & Brother, Inc., is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania and having its principal place of business at 1216 Arch Street, in the city of Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Ingenuities Corporation of America, Inc., is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the business of licensing the use of a certain patent for the construction of neckties and the use in connection with neckties of a registered trademark "Silkallo," the use of which the said respondent licenses in combination with other words and with hyphens particularly as "Duo-Silk-Allo." The said respondent issues said licenses to manufacturers of neckties located in various States of the United States and in accordance with the provisions of the agreements under which said licenses are issued and in the course and conduct of its said business pays an agreed percentage of the cost of the advertising of said neckties by the individual licensees. In the course and conduct of its said business, said respondent also furnishes said licensees with counter-cards advertising neckties manufactured and labeled in accordance with said licenses, and also supplies them, in some cases, with labels to be used on said neckties, and also designates embossing firms which emboss the said trade-mark on the said neckties upon which neckties respondent receives royalties as hereinafter found. Respondent controls the activities of said designated embossing firms to such an extent that such embossing firms refuse to emboss neckties except under conditions not objected to by said respondent. The embossing on said neckties, the said labels, the said advertisements and the said counter-cards all display the phrase "Duo-Silk-Allo." In accordance with the provisions of said licensing agreements, and in the course and conduct of its said business, said respondent charges and receives a certain royalty for the neckties manufactured and embossed under said licenses.

The said neckties after being embossed by one of the said designated embossing firms, as heretofore found, are returned to the licensees from the places of business of said embossing firms to said licensees located in States other than those in which said embossing firms are located; said counter-cards and the said labels supplied by said respondent are shipped by said respondent from its principal place of business in the State of New York to said licensees in States other than New York and are by said licensees shipped from their respective places of business to persons and firms located in States other than the State in which said licensees are respectively located, and from which they make said shipments; the said advertisements paid for in part by said respondent as heretofore found are distributed in the various States of the United States; the said neckties after being embossed by one of said designated embossing firms and returned to said licensees as aforesaid are transported with the embossing from the respective places of business of said licensees to purchasers located in States other than those from which shipment was made.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, and for the purpose of promoting the sale of its said licenses and of the neckties manufactured under said licenses, the said respondent, Ingenuities Corporation of America, in connection with its respective licensees has engaged in the practice of falsely representing the constituent fabric or material of certain of the neckties manufactured by its said licensees by means of false representations appearing in said labels, counter cards, embossed neckties and advertisements in newspapers and magazines and by failing to disclose and to require the disclosure of the rayon content of said neckties and has placed in the hands of other persons and companies a means of so misrepresenting said products.

PAR. 4. Among the said neckties manufactured by the licensees of said respondent, Ingenuities Corporation of America, and shipped, embossed, labeled and advertised as heretofore found, are many which contain no silk, but which are made entirely of rayon with woolen interlining and others which are made partly of silk and partly of rayon with a woolen interlining. In the advertising, labeling and embossing of said neckties, respondent, Ingenuities Corporation of America, has used and has permitted its licensees to use the phrase "Duo-Silk-Allo," or other phrases of similar import or meaning and has failed to make it a condition precedent to the issuance of a license to use the phrase "Duo-Silk-Allo," or other phrases of similar import or meaning, that said licensees agree to use such phrases only on and in connection with neckties made entirely from silk, and has failed to determine whether said neckties are made entirely of silk and has failed to revoke licenses when the neckties so sold, shipped, labeled, embossed, or advertised as aforesaid were not made entirely of silk. By using and by permitting the use of the phrase "Duo-Silk-Allo" and other phrases of similar import or meaning not herein specifically set forth, the respondent has made and caused to be made the representation that said neckties are composed entirely of silk and has placed in the hands of its licensees a means of making said representation.

Among the said licensees of respondent, Ingenuities Corporation of America, are the respondents, Goldberg, Squire, Lesser & Cohen, Inc., a corporation, and T. P. McCutcheon & Brother, Inc., a corporation, each of which said respondents, under a license to use said patent, has manufactured or caused to be manufactured certain neckties composed in some cases of rayon with a woolen interlining and in other cases of rayon with silk with a woolen interlining, which neckties each of said respondents has embossed or caused to be embossed with the words "Duo-Silk-Allo" under a license from said respondent, Ingenuities Corporation of America, and which neckties so embossed said respondent licensees have sold in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. The respondent T. P. McCutcheon & Brother, Inc., in selling its said neckties as aforesaid has entirely failed to disclose the rayon content thereof; the respondent, Goldberg, Squire, Lesser & Cohen, Inc., has failed to disclose the rayon content of its said neckties except by placing thereon a detachable paper label reading "Silk and Rayon," and has failed to designate each constituent fiber of said neckties in the order of its predominance by weight beginning with the largest single constituent. The respondent, Ingenuities Corporation of America, has received a royalty on each of the neckties so manufactured, embossed and sold by the two other respondents, and in the ways and by the methods heretofore found, has placed in the hands of each of said two respondent licensees a method of misrepresenting their respective neckties and has participated in the misrepresentation thereof.

PAR. 5. The said representations of the respondents as heretofore found are false and misleading. In truth and in fact many of the neckties sold by each of said respondent licensees, as well as many of the neckties of other licensees of respondent licensor similarly advertised, labeled, embossed and sold in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, are composed of rayon with a woolen interlining, or of rayon and silk with a woolen interlining, and with the rayon predominating.

PAR. 6. The word "silk" for many years last past has had and still has in the minds of the purchasing and consuming public generally a definite and specific meaning, to wit: the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk products for many years have held and still hold public esteem for their preeminent qualities and because of such reputation there is a substantial demand on the part of the purchasing public for such products. Rayon is the name of a chemically manufactured fiber or fabric which may be manufactured so as to simulate silk and when so manufactured has the appearance and feel of silk and is practically indistinguishable by the purchasing public from silk. By reason of these qualities rayon, when manufactured to simulate silk, and not designated as rayon, is readily believed to be and is accepted by the purchasing public as being silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. All of the rayon contained in the aforesaid neckties labeled "Duo-Silk-Allo" is manufactured so as to simulate silk and has the appearance and feel of silk. In the sale and in the offering for sale of said neckties, the respondents have failed to disclose and have failed to cause to be disclosed by labels or in any other manner except as heretofore found the fact that said neckties were composed in whole or in part of rayon.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid methods and representations and the failure to disclose and to cause to be disclosed the rayon content of said neckties has had, and has, the tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers of said neckties into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true and that the rayon fabric and fiber used in the makeup of said neckties is silk and to induce them to purchase substantial numbers of said neckties.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answers of the respondents, in which answers respondents admit all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure, and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent Ingenuities Corporation of America, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the use of or the licensing of the use of the trade mark "Silkallo" or the use of any other word or words of similar import or meaning indicative of silk for use in designating neckties, fabrics or any other similar products offered for sale, sold or distributed in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using or authorizing the use of the unqualified term "silk" or any other term or terms of similar import or meaning indicative of silk to describe or designate any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm; provided, however, that in the case of a fabric or product composed in part of silk and in part of materials other than silk such term or terms may be used as descriptive of the silk content if there are used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness words truthfully describing and designating each constituent fiber thereof.

2. Using or authorizing the use of the term "Duo-Silk-Allo" or any other term of similar import or meaning to describe, designate or refer to any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

It is further ordered, That the respondents, Goldberg, Squire, Lesser & Cohen, Inc., a corporation, and T. P. McCutcheon & Brother, Inc., a corporation, their officers, representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of neckties and other similar merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the unqualified term "silk," or any other term or terms of similar import or meaning indicative of silk, to describe or designate any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm: Provided, however, That in the case of a fabric or product composed in part of silk and in part of materials other than silk, such term or similar terms may be used as descriptive of the silk content, if there are used in immediate connection and conjunction therewith in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness words truthfully describing and designating each constituent fiber thereof.

2. Using the term "Duo-Silk-Allo," or any other term of similar import or meaning, on labels or otherwise to describe, designate or refer to any fabric or product which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

3. Advertising, offering for sale, or selling neckties or other products composed in whole or in part of rayon without clearly disclosing the fact that such fabrics or products are composed of rayon, and when such fabrics or products are composed in part of rayon and in part of other fibers or materials, such fibers or materials, including rayon, shall be named in letters of equal size and conspicuousness by words truthfully describing and designating each constituent fiber and material thereof; and such disclosure of the fiber content of such fabrics or products shall be made by accurately designating and naming each constituent fiber thereof in the order of its predominance by weight, beginning with the largest single constituent.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall within 60 days after the service upon them of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
CORN PRODUCTS REFINING CO. AND CORN PRODUCTS
SALES CO., INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SUBSECTIONS (a) AND (e) OF SEC. 2, AND OF SEC. 3 OF AN ACT OF CON-GRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY ACT OF JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 3633. Complaint, Mar. 25, 1939¹—Decision, Mar. 16, 1942

Where a corporation which (1) constituted a large and important processor and refiner of corn and manufacturer of products and byproducts of such processing and refining; (2) owned and operated corn grinding and refining plants in Illinois, Missouri, and New Jersey, with facilities for the production of many products and byproducts of corn, including all known corn starch products for both household and industrial use, and including starch, glucose or corn sirup, corn sugar, corn oil, glucose feed, corn oil cake, corn oil meal and other products, and selling, in addition, many branded products including its Kingsford and Duryea starches, Karo sirup, Mazola oil, Argo corn starch, Argo gloss starch, Kre-mel desserts, Linit, and Cerelose; (3) owned and operated can, carton and printing plants for the production of containers for many of the packaged products; and (4) distributed the products so manufactured to purchasers in New York and Illinois, and through its wholly owned subsidiary, to purchasers elsewhere; in competition with seven other concerns; manufacturers and distributors, together with its said subsidiary;

In selling their glucose or corn sirup, used principally in the manufacture of candy and the mixing of table sirup, to purchasers, of whom many were candy manufacturers, competitively engaged in the sale of candy to various customers, including wholesalers, chain stores and retailers—

- (a) Discriminated in price unlawfully through concurrently selling glucose of like grade and quality to different purchasers at differing delivered prices which were calculated upon the basis of the price in Chicago plus the railroad tariff rate from Chicago to the destination of the purchaser, irrespective of whether shipments were made from their Chicago plant or, as was their usual practice, from their Kansas City plant; and thereby, depending upon purchaser's location, included in or excluded from, particular delivered price, artificial, or actual freight, as case might be;
- (b) Discriminated in price unlawfully through concurrently selling glucose of like grade and quality to different purchasers at differing prices which were created through their practice of adding to the railroad tank car price additional sums, depending upon the type of container in which the glucose was delivered, ranging from $1.08 over tank car prices for 5-gallon kegs to 2 cents on tank trucks in which delivery was made by customer's equipment and 10 cents where delivered by their own equipment; and
- (c) Discriminated in price through concurrently selling glucose of like grade and quality to different purchasers at differing prices through allowing some purchasers, under their order "booking" system, a period of days after a price increase had been announced within which to purchase glucose at the price in effect before the announcement of the increase, in some cases making deliveries to those favored more than 30 days after date of the increase while requiring other customers to take delivery within the 30-day period or suffer cancellation of the undelivered portion of the order, and in others permitting favored customers who had no trackage or storage facilities for the acceptance of railroad tank car deliveries and purchased in tank wagon quantities, to purchase tank car lots at the price in effect before an advance, delivering such purchasers' order in tank wagon quantities over extended periods of time; and through modifications of said booking practices;

With the result that the higher prices paid by competitors of aforesaid favored customers for glucose—a major raw material particularly in low-priced candies sold at narrow margins of profit—resulted in higher material costs to them, so that, especially in the case of manufacturers of candies priced at but a few cents a pound and bearing no differing name or brand, in sales of which to large quantity purchasers a small fraction of a cent is determinative, the ability of those paying the higher prices to compete with those paying the lower prices was diminished;

In selling their gluten feed and meal byproduct (used principally for livestock feed) of which they produced 40 to 50 percent of all that used in the United States, selling and shipping more than 250,000 tons annually to 3,000 different purchasers in various States, in competition with other producers and also with other types of feed produced by distillers, cotton seed mills, wheat flour mills and soy bean crushers—

(d) Discriminated in price in favor of at least six dealers through allowing them discounts of 50 cents a ton or more from regular market prices, while selling said products without any such allowances or other compensation to their competitors;

In selling their corn starch (employed, in addition to its household uses, in various forms in the paper, laundry and cloth making industries), one of their principal products which they sold and distributed on a large scale throughout the United States—

(e) Discriminated in price through selling and delivering many millions of pounds to two concerns at prices which reflected a substantial discount or allowance from their regular prices while selling to competitors of said concerns at current market or list prices without any such discounts:

With the result that such unlawful discounts or allowances were sufficient to increase substantially said dealers' and said concerns' margins of profits over and above those otherwise obtainable and if reflected in resale prices, to enable favored dealers and concerns to attract business from their competitors, or to force latter to resell at substantially reduced profits, or refrain from reselling:

Held, That such discrimination in price resulted in substantial injury to competitors, obstructed and tended to suppress competition and to create a monopoly in said corporations in the processing and refining of corn and the sale of products and byproducts thereof, resulted in substantial injury to competition among purchasers through affording material and unjustified price advantages to preferred buyers, and violated subsection (a) of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act; and

Where said corporations, in sale of their powdered dextrose "Cerelese" to the baking, soft drink and canning industries and to candy manufacturers—

(f) Entered into an understanding with a certain candy manufacturer—which, for a period of years, had advertised its products as much as all other candy manufacturers in the United States combined and had as wide a distribution of its candy as any manufacturer in the United States—to induce it to use such dry dextrose in its candies and to advertise them as containing the same, pursuant to which, in consideration of the addition of the “dextrose message” to said candy company’s advertising, they appropriated large sums of money for expenditure by their advertising agency for advertising in newspapers, magazines and on the radio depicting the candy products of said company as being “Rich in dextrose” or “Enriched with dextrose”; while failing and declining to enter into any similar arrangements with other purchasers of dry dextrose, competitors of said candy company, which used the dextrose thus purchased from them in amounts which varied from a small percentage to as much as 90 percent of the weight of the candy, and which constituted a substantial and frequently a major portion of its candy products:

Held, That said acts of such corporations, in furnishing or contributing to the furnishing of advertising services and facilities to one of their customers in the resale of dextrose purchased from them and not to competing customers upon proportionally equal terms or upon any terms whatever, violated the provisions of subsection (e) of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended; and

Where said corporations, in sale of their various starches and starch products—

(g) Entered into contracts with two large purchasers, who had theretofore been engaged in the grinding and refining of corn and manufacture of starch and starch products, under the terms of which 15-year contracts, subject to a 10-year extension, the buyers obligated themselves, directly or in effect, to purchase their entire requirements of various starches and starch products—such as thin boiling pearl, chlorinated and other special starches, ordinary thick boiling pearl, powdered corn starches, edible pearl and powdered corn starches—at prices which were below the cost at which they could have been made by such concerns; and required that said purchasers refrain from using or dealing in starches or starch products of any competitor;

With the result that such purchasers wholly ceased manufacture of starches and starch products from corn during period concerned, within which period one or more competitors of corporations here involved were ready, willing and able to supply some of said purchasers’ requirements, and with further result of substantially lessening competition between said corporations and their competitors and tending to create a monopoly in the former, in the sale and distribution of starches of the type manufactured by them for aforesaid purchaser:

Held, That said contracts providing that aforesaid concerns should purchase their requirements of starch and starch products from said corporations to the exclusion of latter’s competitors, and the acts and practices pursuant thereto, constituted a violation of section 3 of the Clayton Act as amended.

Before Mr. Charles F. Diggs, Mr. John P. Bramhall and Mr. John L. Hornor, trial examiners.

Mr. A. W. DeBirny, Mr. Curtis C. Shears, Mr. D. E. Hoopingarner, Mr. Frank Hier, and Mr. P. R. Layton for the Commission.

Mr. Frank H. Hall and Lord, Day & Lord, of New York City, for respondents.

AMENDED COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the parties respondent named in the caption hereof, and hereinafter more particularly designated and described, since June 19, 1936, have violated and are now violating the provisions of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19 1936 (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges with respect thereto as follows:

COUNT I

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Corn Products Refining Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of New Jersey with its principal office and place of business at 17 Battery Place in the city and State of New York. Respondent, Corn Products Sales Co., Inc., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey and has its principal office and place of business at 17 Battery Place, city and State of New York. Respondent, Corn Products Sales Co., Inc., is a wholly owned sales subsidiary of respondent Corn Products Refining Co., through which products manufactured by Corn Products Refining Co. are sold and distributed. Corn Products Refining Co. owns the entire capital stock of Corn Products Sales Co., Inc. and controls and directs Corn Products Sales Co., Inc.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Corn Products Refining Co., has an authorized capital stock of $100,000,000. Corn Products Refining Co. owns and operates plants at Pekin and Argo, Ill.; North Kansas City, Mo.; and Edgewater, N. J. The Argo, Pekin, and North Kansas City plants have a corn grinding capacity in excess of 155,000 bushels per day, with complete facilities for the finished fabrication of all known corn starch products, both for household and industrial use, and including well equipped carton and can plants and printing establishments for use in producing the many packaged products of the company. The Edgewater plant has a reserve corn grinding capacity of 30,000 bushels daily. Respondents grind of corn approximates that of all of its competitors combined.

PAR. 3. For many years respondents have been and are now engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling and distributing in interstate commerce products derived from corn. The principal products derived from corn are (1) starch, both for food and other purposes; (2) glucose or corn sirup; and (3) corn sugar. Starch is first manufactured from the corn, and glucose and grape sugar are made by treating the starch with certain acids, the resulting solid product being sugar and the resulting sirup being glucose.

Complaint

34 F. T. C.

Glucose is largely used in the manufacture of candy, jellies, jams, preserves, and the like as well as in the mixing of sirups.

The principal byproducts of corn resulting in the corn products business are gluten feed, corn oil, corn-oil cake and corn-oil meal.

The Corn Products Refining Co., in addition to bulk products, produces the following branded products:

Kingsford and Duryea Starches, Karo Syrup, Mazola Oil, Argo Corn Starch, Argo Gloss Starch, Kre-mel Dessert, Linit and Cerelose.

PAR. 4. For many years in the course and conduct of their business, the respondents have been and are now manufacturing the aforesaid commodities at the aforesaid plants and have sold and shipped and do now sell and ship such commodities in commerce between and among the various States of the United States from the States in which their factories are located across State lines to purchasers thereof located in States other than the States in which respondents' said plants are located in competition with other persons, firms and corporations engaged in similar lines of commerce.

PAR. 5. Since June 19, 1936, and while engaged as aforesaid in commerce among the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia, the respondents have been and are now, in the course of such commerce, discriminating in price between purchasers of said commodities of like grade and quality, which commodities are sold for use, consumption or resale within the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia in that the respondents have been and are now selling such commodities to some purchasers at a higher price than the price at which commodities of like grade and quality are sold by respondents to other purchasers generally competitively engaged with the first mentioned purchasers.

PAR. 6. The effect of said discriminations in price made by said respondents, as set forth in paragraph 5 herein, may be substantially to lessen competition in the sale and distribution of corn products between the said respondents and their competitors; tend to create a monopoly in the line of commerce in which the respondents are engaged; and to injure, destroy, or prevent competition in the sale and distribution of corn products between the said respondents and their competitors.

PAR. 7. The effect of said discriminations in price made by said respondents, as set forth in paragraph 5 herein, may be substantially to lessen competition between the buyers of said corn products from respondents receiving said lower discriminatory prices and other buyers from respondents competitively engaged with such favored buyers who do not receive such favorable prices; tend to create a monopoly in the lines of commerce in which buyers from respondents are engaged; and to injure, destroy, or prevent competition in the lines of commerce in which those who purchase from respondents are engaged between the said beneficiaries of said discriminatory prices and said buyers who do not and have not received such beneficial prices.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts of respondents constitute a violation of the provisions of subsection (a) of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936, (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13).

COUNT II

The Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe the party respondents named in the caption hereof, and heretofore more particularly designated and described, since June 19, 1936, have violated and are now violating the provisions of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), hereby issues this its complaint against respondents and states its charges with respect thereto, as follows, to wit:

PARAGRAPH 1. For its charges under this paragraph of this count, said Commission relies upon the matters and things set out in paragraphs 1 to 4, inclusive, of count I of this complaint to the same extent and as though the allegations of said paragraphs 1 and 4, inclusive, of said count I were set out in full herein, and said paragraphs 1 to 4, inclusive, of said count I are incorporated herein by reference and made a part of the allegations of this count.

PAR. 2. Respondents have entered into advertising arrangements with certain of their purchasers, to wit, Curtiss Candy Co. of Chicago, Ill., and the Bachman Chocolate Manufacturing Co. of Mount Joy, Pa. of dextrose, as a result of which large sums of money have been spent by them since June 19, 1936, in cooperatively advertising with such purchasers the dextrose so purchased and the respondents have not accorded such services or facilities to other of their purchasers competitively engaged with the aforementioned purchasers on proportionally equal terms.

PAR. 3. Since June 19, 1936, in the course and conduct of their business described in paragraphs 1 to 4, inclusive, of count I hereof, respondents have discriminated and are discriminating in favor of certain purchasers against other purchasers of corn products bought for resale by contracting to furnish or furnishing, or by contributing to the furnishing of, services and facilities connected with the offering for sale, of such commodity so purchased upon terms not accorded all purchasers on proportionally equal terms.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid acts of respondents constitute a violation of section 2 (e) of the above mentioned act of Congress.

COUNT III

The Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the party respondents named in the caption hereof, and heretofore more particularly designated and described, have violated and are now violating the provisions of section 3 of the act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes", approved October 15, 1914 (the Clayton Act), hereby issues this its complaint against respondents and states its charges with respect thereto as follows, to wit:

PARAGRAPH 1. For its charges under this paragraph of this count, said Commission relies upon the matters and things set out in paragraphs 1 to 4, inclusive, of count I of this complaint to the same extent and as though the allegations of said paragraphs 1 to 4, inclusive, of said count I were set out in full herein, and said paragraphs 1 to 4, inclusive, of said count I are incorporated herein by reference and made a part of the allegations of this count.

PAR. 2. That the respondents, for several years last past, in the course of interstate commerce, have sold to and made contracts for sale of large quantities of corn starch with the Keever Starch Co. of Columbus, Ohio, and the Huron Milling Co. of Harbor Beach, Mich., for use, consumption and resale within the United States and the District of Columbia, and have fixed and are now fixing the price charged therefor on the condition, agreement and understanding that the purchasers thereof shall not use the goods, wares, merchandise, supplies or other commodities of a competitor or competitors of respondents, and that the effect of such sales and contracts of sale or conditions and agreements and understandings may be to substantially lessen competition between respondents and their competitors; and to tend to create a monopoly in respondents in the sale and distribution of corn starch in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. The aforesaid acts of respondents constitute a violation of the provisions of section 3 of the hereinabove mentioned act of Congress.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (Clayton Act), as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936 (Robinson-Patman Act), the Federal Trade Commission on October 21, 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Corn Products Refining Co., a corporation, and Corn Products Sales Co., Inc., a corporation, charging them with violation of the provisions of subsection (a) of section 2 of the said Clayton Act, as amended. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of and in opposition to the allegations of said complaint were introduced before examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it.

On March 25, 1939, the Commission issued and thereafter served upon said respondents an amended complaint charging violation of subsections (a) and (e) of section 2 and of section 3 of the aforesaid Clayton Act, as amended. After the filing of respondents' answer to the amended complaint, testimony and other evidence in support of and in opposition to the allegations of said complaint were introduced before examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and the testimony and other evidence taken pursuant to both complaints were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the amended complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments by counsel; and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Corn Products Refining Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New Jersey, having its principal office and place of business at 17 Battery Place, New York, N. Y. Respondent, Corn Products Sales Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New Jersey, having its principal office and place of business at 17 Battery Place, New York, N. Y. Corn Products Sales Co., Inc., is a wholly owned subsidiary of Corn Products Refining Co. and is engaged in the sale and distribution of products manufactured by Corn Products Refining Co. The policies and operations of Corn Products Sales Co., Inc., are controlled and directed by Corn Products Refining Co.

Findings

34 F. T. C.

PAR. 2. Respondent Corn Products Refining Co. is a large and important processor and refiner of corn and manufacturer of products and byproducts of such processing and refining. It has an authorized capital stock of $100,000,000 and owns and operates corn grinding and refining plants at Pekin and Argo, Ill.; North Kansas City, Mo.; and Edgewater, N. J. The Argo, Pekin, and North Kansas City plants have a corn grinding capacity in excess of 155,000 bushels per day, with facilities for the production of many products and byproducts of corn, including all known corn starch products for both household and industrial use. It owns and operates can, carton, and printing plants for the production of containers for many of its packaged products. It distributes the products so manufactured to purchasers located in the States of New York and Illinois, and its subsidiary, Corn Products Sales Co., Inc., sells and distributes the products of its parent company in the other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of the aforesaid business respondents for many years have been, and are now, engaged in the sale and distribution of their various products which, when sold, are transported in commerce from their plants through and into the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and respondents have maintained, and now maintain, a course of trade in such various products in commerce in and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, respondents produce, sell, and distribute starch, glucose or corn syrup, corn sugar, corn oil, gluten feed, corn oil cake, corn oil meal, and other products. In addition to the products sold in bulk, respondents have many branded products distributed to the public, including Kingsford and Duryea starches, Karo syrup, Mazola oil, Argo corn starch, Argo gloss starch, Kre-mel desserts, Linit, and Cerelose.

Of the many products and byproducts of corn produced and sold by respondents, the ones of primary interest for the purposes of this proceeding are bulk glucose or corn syrup, corn starch and starch products derived therefrom, dextrose, and corn gluten feed and meal. Bulk glucose is a standard syrup used principally in the manufacture of candy and the mixing of table syrups. Corn starch, in addition to its well-known household uses, is extensively used in various forms in the paper, laundry, and cloth-making industries. Dextrose is a dry white sugar which is not as sweet as sugar produced from sugar cane or beets and is used principally in the candy, canning, and soft drink industries. Gluten meal is a byproduct of corn refining consisting of corn hulls, husks, gluten, and other residues remaining after the starch and germ have been removed from corn, and when sweetened with molasses is known as gluten meal. Both gluten feed and meal are principally used for the feeding of livestock.

Respondents' competitors in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of corn products and byproducts, including the location of the plant of each, are: A. E. Staley Manufacturing Co., Decatur, Ill.; Clinton Company, Clinton, Iowa; Penick & Ford, Limited, Inc., Cedar Rapids, Iowa; American Maize-Products Co., Roby, Ind.; Union Starch & Refining Co., Granite City, Ill.; Anheuser-Busch, Inc., St. Louis, Mo.; and The Hubinger Co., Keokuk, Iowa. Each of these concerns has national distribution of its products.

PAR. 4. (a) Respondents began the distribution of glucose or corn syrup from their Argo plant, which is within the railroad switching district of Chicago, Ill., in 1910 and from their Kansas City plant in 1922. This product is sold by respondents largely to candy manufacturers in railroad tank car lots of approximately 95,000 pounds each, in tank wagon or truck lots of approximately 12,000 pounds each, and in drums, barrels, half barrels, 10-gallon kegs, and 5-gallon kegs. Respondents have concurrently sold glucose of like grade and quality to different purchasers at differing prices. Since June 19, 1936, and for many years prior thereto, respondents have sold bulk glucose to purchasers throughout the United States at delivered prices which were, and are, calculated upon the basis of the price in Chicago plus the railroad tariff rate from Chicago to the destination of the purchaser. Additional price differences among purchasers of glucose have been, and are, created by respondents through their practice of adding to the railroad tank car price additional sums, the amounts of such additions depending upon the type of container in which the glucose is delivered. Respondents have created other price differentials among purchasers through preferential application to some purchasers of their practice of allowing customers a period of days after a price increase has been announced within which such customers may purchase an amount of glucose at the price in effect before the announcement of the increase. This is known as the order "booking" system.

(b) Respondents have been, and are now, selling and shipping glucose or corn syrup, unmixed, of like grade and quality from their plants in Chicago, Ill., and Kansas City, Mo., to purchasers throughout the United States, some of which purchasers are located in the following cities: Chicago, Ill.; Kansas City, St. Joseph, and Springfield, Mo.; Fort Smith, Ark.; Hutchinson, Kans.; Lincoln, Nebr.; Sioux City, Iowa; Waco, Sherman, and San Antonio, Tex.; Denver, Colo.; and Salt Lake City, Utah. Sales to purchasers, including those in the cities named, are fulfilled by shipments of glucose from respondents' plant at Chicago, Ill., or from their plant at Kansas City, Mo., depending in each instance upon the judgment of and subject to the entire control of respondents. With the exception of a few sales, shipments to fulfill which were made from respondents' plant at Chicago, Ill., sales to purchasers located in all of the cities named above except Chicago (which cities are used for the purpose of illustrating respondents' selling and delivery practices) were fulfilled by shipments from respondents' plant at Kansas City, Mo.; a substantial number of the sales to purchasers in Chicago were fulfilled by deliveries from respondents' filling station in Chicago to which glucose had been shipped by respondents from their plants in Kansas City and Chicago; and a few such sales were fulfilled by shipments directly to customers in Chicago from respondents' plant in Kansas City. Many purchasers who bought glucose from respondents also purchased glucose from competitors of respondents. To illustrate the differing prices at which glucose was sold by respondents on particular dates, the following tabulation shows the prices per hundred pounds to purchasers in the cities named above for 43° Baumé glucose in tank car lots on the dates stated:

Chicago, Ill.....	$2.94	$3.04	$2.29	$2.09

Denver, Colo.....	3.79	3.64	2.95	2.75
Salt Lake City, Utah.....	3.79	3.74	3.06	2.86

At all times between the dates set forth substantially the same differences in and relationships between and among said prices illustrated above existed as to purchasers so located, and these prices were charged and paid by such purchasers regardless of whether the glucose or corn syrup unmixed was shipped to such purchasers in the city named from respondents' plant at Chicago, Ill., or respondents' plant at Kansas City, Mo.

(c) The illustrative prices set forth above were determined by respondents by following their general practice of adding to the prices shown for Chicago on the dates set forth, respectively, the then effective railroad tariff rate from Chicago to destination without reference to whether the sale would be fulfilled by shipment from Kansas City or from Chicago. Such rates in cents per hundred pounds, together with similar rates from Kansas City to the same destinations, were as follows:

(d) Insofar as sales which are fulfilled by shipments from respondents' Chicago plant are concerned, although the differential in price to purchasers at various locations may not be precisely justified by the cost to respondents of delivery, because of milling in transit rates and other freight rate adjustments, it does not appear that there is substantial unjustified discrimination under the pricing plan set forth above. It is plain, however, that a purchaser located in Kansas City who received delivery from respondent's Kansas City plant on the dates set out above paid respondents prices higher than the prices to a customer in Chicago by approximately the following percentages: August 1, 1936, 13 percent; August 1, 1937, 12 percent; August 1, 1938, 17 percent; August 1, 1939, 19 percent. The percentages vary with variations in the Chicago price as well as with rate changes. These higher prices were in no way warranted by additional delivery costs. Any purchaser who is located closer freightwise to Kansas City than to Chicago, Ill., and who received delivery from Kansas City, was forced to pay a price which included delivery costs not incurred or paid by respondents. For example, the price to a purchaser in Waco, Tex., for such delivery included "phantom" freight delivery costs which made the price to him approximately 10 percent higher than to a Chicago purchaser. It is also plain that a purchaser in Chicago who received delivery from Kansas City purchased at a price which not only did not include any artificial freight, but which did not take into account the freight actually incurred and paid by respondents. Similarly, any purchaser located closer freightwise to Chicago than to Kansas City, and who received delivery from respondents' Kansas City plant, received a price which not only did not include any artificial freight but which did not include all the freight actually paid by respondents.

(e) Respondents did not attempt to show that the price differences illustrated in the first table in this paragraph made only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such corn syrup was to such purchasers sold or delivered.

PAR. 5. (a) In addition to the price differences as among customers of respondents which are created by the pricing system illustrated in the preceding paragraph, respondents have sold, and are now selling, glucose or corn syrup unmixed to different purchasers, wherever located, in containers of different sizes at prices per hundredweight in addition to the tank car price as follows:

Type of container:	Additional price per hundredweight over tank car prices
Barrels-----	$0.33.
Half barrels-----	$0.58.
10-gallon kegs-----	$0.98.
5-gallon kegs-----	$1.08.
Returnable steel drums-----	$0.13 where there is no return freight paid on empty drums.
Do-----	$0.18 where the return freight on the empty drum is between 50 and 75 cents per hundredweight.
Do-----	$0.23 where the return freight on the empty drum is between 76 and 90 cents per hundredweight.
Do-----	$0.28 where the return freight on the empty drum is between 91 cents and $1 per hundredweight.
Do-----	$0.33 where the return freight on the empty drum is more than $1 per hundredweight.
Tank trucks-----	$0.10 where delivered by respondents' equipment.
Do-----	$0.02 where delivered by customer's equipment.

(b) Respondent made no effort to show that the price differences among their customers created by the aforesaid container differentials were price differences which made only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such commodities were to such purchasers sold or delivered.

PAR. 6. (a) Price differences as among customers, in addition to those illustrated in paragraphs 4 and 5, have been created by respondents through the operation of the "booking" system hereinbefore mentioned. In case of a decline in their price for glucose it is the general policy of respondents to correspondingly reduce their prices to all customers as to undelivered orders or portions of orders which were taken at higher prices. In case of an advance in their price for glucose respondents attempt to notify the trade generally of such increase and by means of telephone calls, personal calls by their salesmen, or letter they inform all their customers of such increase. The general policy further provides that customers, within a period of days (formerly 10 and now 5) after an increase in price, may "book" or order from respondents, at the price in effect before the increase, an amount of glucose not to exceed the customer's requirements for 30 days, and delivery of amounts so ordered must be accepted by the customer within 30 days from the date of the price increase under penalty of cancellation if not accepted. All such orders or bookings must be approved at the principal office of respondents, and they are there considered before acceptance, modification, or refusal. "Bookings" are not firm contracts of purchase but mere options. Actual sales pursuant to "bookings" occur when delivery of the glucose is ordered and it is then that the amount delivered is invoiced. The granting of preferential treatment to favored customers under the guise of the booking system has resulted in substantial discriminations in price among candy manufacturers purchasing glucose from respondents.

(b) In some instances respondents, after the expiration of the time during which such booking is permitted to other customers, have allowed favored customers to purchase at the price in effect before an increase; in other instances respondents have made deliveries of glucose to favored customers more than 30 days after the date of the increase at the price in effect before an increase was made, while requiring other customers to take delivery within the 30-day period or suffer cancellation of the undelivered portion of the order; in still other instances respondents have permitted favored customers who purchase in tank wagon quantities, and who have no trackage or storage facilities for the acceptance of railroad tank car deliveries, to purchase tank car lots at the price in effect before an advance and have delivered such purchases in tank wagon quantities over extended periods of time, thus giving such favored customers the benefit of prices lower than those in effect to other tank wagon purchasers following the increase in price. There have also been price differences created among respondents' customers by various combinations or modifications of the booking practices described.

(c) To illustrate some of the booking practices of respondents, they booked for E. J. Brach and Sons 27 tank cars of glucose on March 25.

1937, at $3.04 per hundredweight preceding a price advance to $3.49 early in April, and a second price advance about the middle of May to $3.59. Deliveries under this order were commenced on May 19, 1937, and completed on July 3, 1937, during all of which time respondents sold to other customers at base prices of $3.49 and $3.59 per hundredweight. On March 25, 1937, respondents booked 7 tank cars of glucose for the Crystal Pure Candy Co., at a time when the base price was $3.04 per hundredweight and delivered this glucose during April, May, and June when sales were made to other purchasers at base prices of $3.49 and $3.59. The Crystal Pure Candy Co. has no facilities to accept delivery by tank car or in tank car quantities, and deliveries by respondents against the 7-tank-car booking were in fact made by tank wagon from respondents' general storage tanks at their Chicago filling station. Such deliveries were made from day to day as required by the purchaser, who was thus afforded the benefit of the $3.04 price at a time when other tank wagon customers were buying upon a base price of $3.54 and $3.59.

PAR. 7. (a) Many of those who purchase glucose or corn sirup of like grade and quality from the respondents pursuant to the aforesaid pricing plan, container differentials, and booking practices are candy manufacturers located in various States of the United States and are competitively engaged among themselves and with others in the sale of candy to various customers, including wholesalers, chain stores, and retailers located in the various States of the United States. The glucose so purchased is used as an ingredient to some extent in the manufacture of most kinds of candy and is one of the major raw materials used in the production of many varieties of candy, constituting from about 5 to approximately 90 percent of the finished weight thereof. Generally, glucose is used in greatest proportion in candies which are sold by such manufacturers at prices of a few cents a pound and at narrow margins of profit. The higher prices paid for glucose purchased from respondents by candy manufacturers located in cities other than Chicago, Ill., result to a greater or lesser degree in higher material costs to them than to manufacturers in Chicago who purchase from respondents, the degree in each instance depending upon the difference in price and the proportion of glucose in the particular candy manufactured. Some of such candy manufacturers who were located in cities other than Chicago before the construction and operation of respondents' plant in Kansas City, and some candy manufacturers formerly located in such cities, have since 1922 relocated in Chicago. Those manufacturers who have purchased, and purchase, glucose from respondents in quantities smaller than a tank car and are charged prices established pursuant to the aforesaid container differentials have higher material costs for glucose than do those candy manufacturers who purchase from respondents in tank car quantities. Those manufacturers who purchase glucose from respondents and do not receive a preferential treatment under the booking practices of respondents also have higher material costs for glucose than do those manufacturers who purchase from respondents and receive such preferential treatment.

(b) As to candies priced at but a few cents a pound and bearing no differentiating name or brand, candy manufacturers may attract customers by selling such candies at only a small fraction of a cent per pound lower than a competitor's price. This is especially true in selling such candies to chain stores and other purchasers of large quantities of candy to whom a small difference is determinative in the placing of their business. Under such circumstances candy manufacturers paying higher prices for glucose than competitors may attempt to recover such increased costs by increasing the price of such candy, or may make only selected sales on a nonprice or other basis. The result in either case is to reduce profit. This result may occur either directly through the absorption by the manufacturer of higher syrup costs in the sale of candies at competitive prices or indirectly through a reduced volume of sales, or the result may be to diminish the ability of those paying the higher prices to compete with those paying the lower prices. These results may be avoided or augmented by differences in the costs to such candy manufacturers of other factors, such as labor, taxes, rents, insurance, other ingredients, proximity to markets, and delivery of the finished candies, no matter how such differences are brought about.

PAR. 8. (a) As a byproduct of their corn refining, respondents produce and sell gluten feed and meal to the amount of more than 250,000 tons annually, which is approximately 40 to 50 percent of all such products used in the United States. Respondents sell and ship such products to approximately 3,000 different purchasers located in various States of the United States. Gluten feed and meal compete with similar products produced and sold by the aforesaid corn refining competitors of respondents, and also compete with other types of feed produced by distillers, cottonseed mills, wheat flour mills, and soybean crushers. Respondents sell such feed and meal produced at their Pekin and Argo plants on the basis of a gross price for delivery in Chicago plus freight from Chicago to any other destination. The gluten feed and meal produced by respondents at their Kansas City plant are sold at a bulk price for delivery in Kansas City plus freight from Kansas City to any other destination. While selling to the majority of their customers at prices arrived at in the manner set out above, respondents have, over a period of years, discriminated in favor of at least 6 purchasers of such products by means of discounts, commissions, rebates, refunds, or allowances. The purchasers so favored were, and are: Allied Mills, Inc., Chicago, Ill.; Cooperative G. L. F. Mills, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.; E. W. Bailey & Co., Montpelier, Vt.; Jesse C. Stewart & Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Marshfield Milling Co., Marshfield, Wis.; and Farley Feed Co., Janesville, Wis.

(b) Pursuant to various contracts and agreements respondents have, since June 19, 1936, sold Buffalo corn gluten feed and Diamond corn gluten meal to Cooperative G. L. F. Mills, Inc., in the following amounts at respondents' regular prices:

Date:	Feed (in tons)	Meal (in tons)
June 19-Dec. 31, 1936.....	29, 917½	2, 070
1937.....	40, 474½	770
1939.....	58, 652	2, 796

By the contracts and agreements under which these sales were made respondents agreed to pay to Cooperative G. L. F. Mills, Inc., an allowance of 50 cents per ton from their regular market prices on sales and shipments of such feed and meal in quantities of from 1,500 to 2,499 tons per month, and an allowance of 65 cents per ton on feed and meal on monthly shipments in excess of 2,500 tons. Respondents have paid to Cooperative G. L. F. Mills, Inc., substantial sums of money pursuant to such agreements. Cooperative G. L. F. Mills, Inc., has resold the corn gluten feed and meal purchased from respondents, both unmixed and as ingredients in prepared, mixed, or branded feeds of its own, to authorized agents, buyers, and retail stores owned or controlled by it in the States of New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. Respondents have, since June 19, 1936, sold corn gluten feed and meal products of like grade and quality in substantial quantities at their full market price without discount, allowance, commission, rebate, or other compensation to dealers in such products and feed mixers located in and doing business in New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. Such dealers and feed mixers were, and are, in direct competition with Cooperative G. L. F. Mills, Inc., in the resale of respondents' products unmixed or as substantial and essential ingredients in prepared, mixed, or branded feed products.

(c) Pursuant to certain contracts or agreements, respondents have since June 19, 1936, sold to Allied Mills, Inc., Buffalo corn gluten feed and Diamond corn gluten meal in the following amounts at respondents' regular market prices for such products:

Date:	Feed (in tons)	Meal (in tons)
June 19-Dec. 31, 1936.....	6, 623	1, 702
1937.....	11, 446	2, 252
1939.....	9, 013	5, 143½

Under said contracts and agreements respondents agreed to pay to Allied Mills, Inc., an allowance of 50 cents per ton from their regular market prices for such products on sales and shipments of feed and meal of not less than 1,200 tons per month, and as a result thereof respondents have paid to Allied Mills, Inc., substantial sums of money. Allied Mills, Inc., has resold the said products purchased from respondents, both unmixed and as ingredients in prepared, mixed, or branded feeds of its own, to feed dealers in 31 States of the United States. Respondents have, since June 19, 1936, sold similar products of like grade and quality in substantial quantities at their regular market prices without discount, allowance, commission, rebate, or other compensation to dealers in these products and feed mixers located in and doing business in a substantial number of the 31 States above referred to, and said dealers and feed mixers were, and are, in direct competition with Allied Mills, Inc., in the resale of these products unmixed or as substantial and essential ingredients in prepared, mixed, or branded feed products.

(d) Pursuant to an understanding and agreement respondents have, since June 19, 1936, sold to E. W. Bailey & Co., of Montpelier, Vt., Buffalo corn gluten feed and Diamond corn gluten meal in the following amounts at their regularly established market prices:

June 19-Dec. 31, 1936.....	290	-----
1937.....	1, 548½	110½
1939.....	1, 968	141

As a result of said understanding and agreement respondents have paid E. W. Bailey & Co. an allowance on said purchases at the rate of 50 cents per ton. E. W. Bailey & Co. has resold such products, both unmixed and as ingredients in prepared, mixed, or branded feeds of its own, to feed dealers in the States of Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, and New York. Respondents have, since June 19, 1936, sold their aforesaid products of like grade and quality in substantial quantities at their regular market prices without any discount, allowance, commission, rebate, or other compensation to dealers in such products and feed mixers located and doing business in the States of Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, and New York, and said dealers and feed mixers are in direct competition with E. W. Bailey & Co. in the resale of said products unmixed or as a substantial and essential ingredient in prepared, mixed, or branded feed products.

(e) Pursuant to an understanding and agreement respondents have, since June 19, 1936, sold to Jesse C. Stewart & Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., Buffalo corn gluten feed and Diamond corn gluten meal in the following amounts at their regular market prices:

June 19-Dec. 31, 1936.....	240	90
1937.....	840	170
1939.....	915	175

As a result of said agreement and understanding, respondents have paid to Jesse C. Stewart & Co. an allowance of 50 cents per ton on such products resold unmixed. Jesse C. Stewart & Co. has resold said products purchased from respondents, unmixed, to feed dealers in the State of Pennsylvania and in the area immediately surrounding Pittsburgh, Pa. Respondents have, since June 19, 1936, sold their said products of like grade and quality in substantial quantities at their regular market prices therefor without discount, allowance, commission, rebate, or other compensation to dealers in such products located in and doing business in Pennsylvania and in the area immediately surrounding Pittsburgh, Pa., and who are in direct competition with Jesse C. Stewart & Co. in the resale of such products.

(f) Pursuant to an understanding and agreement respondents have, since June 19, 1936, sold to Marshfield Milling Co. of Marshfield, Wis., Buffalo corn gluten feed and Diamond corn gluten meal in the following amounts at their regular market prices therefor:

June 19-Dec. 31, 1936.....	155	165
1937.....	341	141
1939.....	180	50

As a result of said agreement and understanding respondents have paid to the Marshfield Milling Co. allowances at the rate of 50 cents per ton on said products resold unmixed, and said purchaser has resold these products, unmixed, to feed dealers in the State of Wisconsin. Respondents have, since June 19, 1936, sold their aforesaid products in substantial quantities at their regular market prices therefor without discount allowance, commission, rebate, or other compensation to dealers in such products located in and doing business in the State of Wisconsin and who are in direct competition with Marshfield Milling Co. in the resale of said products.

(g) Pursuant to an understanding and agreement respondents have, since June 19, 1936, sold to Farley Feed Co., Janesville, Wis., Buffalo corn gluten feed and Diamond corn gluten meal in the following amounts at their regular market prices therefor:

June 19-Dec. 31, 1936.....	10	10
1937.....	93	73

As a result of said agreement and understanding respondents have paid to the Farley Feed Co. allowances at the rate of 50 cents per ton on said products resold unmixed, and said company has resold these products, unmixed, to feed dealers in the State of Wisconsin. Respondents have, since June 19, 1936, sold their aforesaid products in substantial quantities at their regular market prices therefor without discount, allowance, commission, rebate, or other compensation to dealers in such products located in and doing business in the State of Wisconsin who are in direct competition with Farley Feed Co. in the resale of said products.

(h) The allowances granted and paid by respondents to the aforesaid Cooperative G. L. F. Mills, Inc., Allied Mills, Inc., E. W. Bailey & Co., Jesse C. Stewart & Co., Marshfield Milling Co., and Farley Feed Co. are sufficient, if and when reflected in whole or in substantial part in resale prices, to attract business to Cooperative G. L. F. Mills, Inc., Allied Mills, Inc., E. W. Bailey & Co., Jesse C. Stewart & Co., Marshfield Milling Co., and Farley Feed Co. away from their respective competitors, or to force said competitors to resell such feed and meal products purchased from respondents at a substantially reduced profit, or to refrain from reselling. The allowances thus paid by respondents to the favored customers are sufficient to substantially increase the respective margins of profit of such customers over and above the margins of profit otherwise obtainable in the resale of such feed and meal products. Respondents did not produce any evidence to show that the lower prices granted to the above-named favored purchasers of feed and meal products made no more than due allowance for differences, if any, in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery of their said feed and meal products resulting from the differing methods or quantities, if any, in which such products were to said purchasers sold or delivered.

PAR. 9. (a) One of the principal products resulting from respondents' grinding and refining of corn is corn starch. Such corn starch is sold and distributed by respondents on a large scale throughout the United States. It is sold in many different forms varying in moisture content, viscosity, and in other ways. The form known as thick boiling pearl starch of 12 percent moisture is usually considered the basic form and is customarily used as a base to which the prices of other forms of starch are related.

(b) Since June 19, 1936, and up to the present time respondents have sold and delivered substantial quantities, amounting to many millions of pounds, of starches and starch products to Kever Starch Co., Columbus, Ohio, hereafter referred to as Kever, and to Stein, Hall and Co., of New York, N. Y., and/or Stein, Hall Manufacturing Co., of Chicago, Ill., hereafter referred to as Stein-Hall, for use, consumption, and resale within the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents have also sold substantial quantities of starches and starch products of like grade and quantity to individuals, firms, partnerships, and other corporations located in the several States of the United States and competitively engaged with Kever and Stein-Hall in the use, consumption, and resale of such products.

(c) The sales made by respondents to Kever and Stein-Hall were at prices which reflected a substantial discount, rebate, commission, or other allowance from respondents' regular market or list prices at the time of such sales. Respondents, during the same period of time, made sales to competitors of Kever and Stein-Hall at their market or list prices current at the time of such sales without any discount, rebate, commission, or other allowance. The discount, rebate, commission, or allowance granted to Kever and to Stein-Hall was, and is, sufficient to substantially increase their respective margins of profit over and above the margins of profit otherwise obtainable in the use, consumption, and resales of starches and starch products; and is sufficient, if and when reflected in whole or in substantial part in resale prices, to attract business to Kever and to Stein-Hall away from their competitors, or to force such competitors to resell said starches and starch products at substantially reduced profit, or to refrain from reselling. The said discount, rebate, commission, or other allowance granted to Kever and to Stein-Hall may be sufficient to attract the business of such purchasers away from competitors of respondents, or to force said competitors to sell such starches and starch products at substantially reduced profit, or to refrain from selling. Respondents did not produce any evidence to show that the discount, rebate, commission, or other allowance granted by them to Keever and to Stein-Hall, respectively, made no more than due allowance for differences, if any, in the cost of manufacture, sale or delivery of their starches and starch products resulting from differing methods or quantities, if any, in which such products were to such purchasers sold or delivered.

PAR. 10. (a) Since about 1933 respondents have produced, sold, and distributed dextrose in dry, powdered form under the trade name "Cerelese" to the baking, soft drink, and canning industries, and for a shorter period of time to candy manufacturers. Glucose, or corn syrup unmixed, contains a substantial quantity of dextrose, but the product here under consideration is dry, powdered dextrose.

(b) In 1935 or 1936 respondents entered into negotiations with the Curtiss Candy Co. of Chicago, Ill., for the purpose of inducing that company to use dry dextrose in its candies and to advertise them as containing dextrose. The Curtiss Candy Co. has as wide distribution of its candies as any candy manufacturer in the United States and is an aggressive company which has, over a period of years, advertised its products approximately as much as all other candy manufacturers in the United States combined. Its advertising has appeared in newspapers, magazines, on billboards, stationery, envelopes, candy wrappers, cartons, and boxes, and on radio broadcasts. Prior to September 1936 the Curtiss Candy Co. had purchased small quantities of dry dextrose from manufacturers other than respondents but prior to that date was not using such dextrose in its candies to any appreciable extent.

(c) After a year or more of experimentation and negotiation with respondents, the Curtiss Candy Co. undertook to use dry dextrose in the manufacture of most of its candy products and to advertise the presence of dextrose in its candies and explain the nature of dextrose. It has, since September 1936, added to its advertising representations statements to the general effect that its candies are enriched by dextrose or rich in dextrose, that dextrose is a quick source of energy, and that it is energizing and aids in relieving fatigue, all for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its candies by members of the consuming public in order to get the benefit of the dextrose contained therein. By means of various advertising media the Curtiss

Candy Co. has advertised certain of its candy products in a manner of which the following is typical:

RICH IN DEXTROSE
Step Out With Vigor!

For pep and energy that take you to the end of the trail without tiring, carry these energy-food candies wherever you go * * *. That's because all four of these famous Curtiss candy bars are enriched with dextrose—the sugar your body uses directly for energy.

* * * * *

The satisfying goodness of Baby Ruth is as natural as the pure foods combined to make this big delicious candy bar. Milk, butter, eggs, fine chocolate, plump crisp peanuts—and dextrose, the sugar your body uses directly for energy—these are among the choice ingredients which give Baby Ruth its fine flavor, fresh fragrance and its real food value.

* * * * *

Yes, in every bar of fresh, fragrant Baby Ruth candy is an abundance of food energy. Deliciously blended in Baby Ruth are such natural foods as milk, butter, eggs, fine chocolate, top grade peanuts—and pure dextrose, the sugar your body uses directly for energy. Is it any wonder that millions agree "Baby Ruth is fine candy and fine food?"

And by radio announcements such as:

Wise parents insist upon their children eating Baby Ruth candy. It's pure, delicious, and energizing because it's rich in dextrose.

* * * * *

Lots of mothers have written us asking for more information about dextrose, the energy sugar * * * and how it makes Baby Ruth candy so good for everyone. Well, it's simple to explain. Dextrose is a pure white sugar * * * which doctors call "body" or "muscle" sugar. It is the substance which makes your heart beat, your lungs breathe, your muscles move. Delicious Baby Ruth candy is so rich in dextrose that it is more than just a fine pure candy * * * Baby Ruth is a real energizing food.

(d) Pursuant to the negotiations with the Curtiss Candy Co. but without any written contract with regard thereto, respondents, in consideration of the addition of the "dextrose message" to the Curtiss Candy Co.'s advertising, appropriated various sums of money which were paid to and expended by their advertising agency in the purchase of advertising in newspapers, magazines, and on the radio depicting Curtiss candy products as being "rich in dextrose" or "enriched with dextrose." Respondents were not obligated to expend any specific amount in advertising Curtiss candies, and the money actually expended was not paid to the Curtiss Candy Co. but was paid to and expended by respondents' advertising agency in the aforesaid manner. Respondents have expended in advertising the Curtiss Candy Co. products in the aforesaid manner approximately $100,000 in 1936, $250,000 in 1937, $200,000 in 1938, and $200,000 in 1939.

(e) Officials of the Curtiss Candy Co. and of respondents testified that there was no agreement that Curtiss would purchase its requirements of dry dextrose from respondents. However, in testifying with regard to the arrangements made with the Curtiss Candy Co. the vice president in charge of sales for Corn Products Refining Co., who is also president of Corn Products Sales Co., referred to his belief that Curtiss would use 12,000,000 pounds of dextrose the first year, and when asked why he thought this would be the case, replied:

A. Because we knew what his volume was and we thought we could put a certain percentage of dextrose in that volume. And we were fooled.

Q. Well, it was to get that percentage of volume, that 12 million pounds from Curtiss that you entered into the advertising arrangements?

A. No, it wasn't. We entered into the advertising arrangements because we thought it was a first class advertising campaign for dextrose. The 12 million was just velvet, that's all.

Q. Why do you say you were fooled?

A. Well, because 12 million pounds is a nice amount of business to shoot at. But our main object was to—was to publicize dextrose * * *

(f) As a matter of fact, after the agreement with respondents the Curtiss Candy Co. purchased the following amounts of dry dextrose from respondents and made no purchases from any other source:

Date:	Pounds	Date:	Pounds
1937.....	2, 046, 015	1939.....	7, 090, 863

Curtiss also began purchasing glucose from respondents in 1938 but its purchasing agent testified that such purchases of glucose were not made pursuant to any understanding as to advertising. Glucose purchases by Curtiss during the 4 years mentioned were:

Date:	Glucose from all sources	Glucose from respondents	Date:	Glucose from all sources	Glucose from respondents
1936..	22, 997, 379	0	1938..	27, 808, 709	3, 549, 260
1937..	22, 746, 549	0	1939..	24, 712, 254	14, 609, 138

(g) Respondents, during the time sales of dry dextrose were being made to the Curtiss Candy Co., also sold and delivered substantial quantities of dry dextrose to other candy manufacturers located in various States of the United States who were, and are, competitors of the Curtiss Candy Co. However, respondents did not enter into any arrangement with any of such purchasers similar to the arrangement with the Curtiss Candy Co., or into any arrangement to supply services or facilities of any kind. As to substantially all, if not all, of these competing candy manufacturers no offer of any such arrangement on proportionally equal terms, or upon any terms whatever, was made. In fact, respondents since June 19, 1936, have instructed their salesmen to advise customers to whom they sell products to be used in the manufacture of confectionery that they do not contribute to the advertising done by customers. Respondents have not, during the time the aforesaid arrangements have been in effect with the Curtiss Candy Co., appropriated, turned over, or paid to their advertising agency, or to any one else, any money with which advertising services were, or could be, purchased for the advertising of products of any purchaser of dry dextrose except the Curtiss Candy Co., and they have not furnished any advertising services or facilities, either similar or of any kind or character whatever, to their customers who purchase dry dextrose from them and who compete with the Curtiss Candy Co. in the sale of candy containing dextrose.

(h) The Curtiss Candy Co. used dextrose purchased from respondents in most of the candies it made and sold. The amount used varied in different products from a small percentage to as much as 90 percent of the weight of the candy. Such dextrose was mixed with other products, as indicated in subparagraph (e) of paragraph 10 hereof, to produce the candy sold by Curtiss, and it constituted a substantial, and frequently a major, portion of the products advertised and sold by the Curtiss Candy Co.

PAR. 11. (a) The Huron Milling Co. of Harbor Beach, Michigan, and the Keever Starch Co. of Columbus, Ohio, are large purchasers of pearl starch and other starches and were each engaged in the grinding and refining of corn and manufacture of starch and starch products until 1927 in the case of the Huron Milling Co. and until 1932 in the case of the Keever Starch Co..

(b) On April 21, 1927, respondents entered into a contract with the Huron Milling Co. by which that company agreed to purchase from respondents its entire requirements of thin boiling pearl, chlorinated and other special starches, including Hercules gum, up to a maximum of 30,000,000 pounds annually, and to purchase from respondents its entire requirements of ordinary thick boiling pearl and powdered corn starches and edible pearl and powdered corn starches up to a maximum of 20,000,000 pounds annually. This contract was for a period of 15 years from the date of execution thereof, with provision for an extension of 10 years at the option of the buyer. On July 12, 1932, respondents entered into a contract with the Keever Starch Co. whereby they agreed to sell and that company agreed to purchase from respondents its entire requirements of corn starch products up to a maximum of 20,000,000 pounds per annum. Said contract was for a term of 15 years from the date of execution thereof, with provision for an extension of 10 years at the option of the buyer.

(c) The prices at which said starches and starch products were contracted to be sold by respondents, and at which they have been sold to said purchasers in the course of interstate commerce, did, and do, approximate, or were, and are, below the cost at which said starches and starch products were then, and since could have been, manufactured by Huron Milling Co. and Keever Starch Co. Said starches and starch products were sold by respondents for use, consumption, and resale within the United States, territories thereof, and the District of Columbia.

(d) Said contracts are, in fact, for the entire requirements of the Huron Milling Co. and Keever Starch Co., respectively, and require for their performance that said purchasers refrain from using or dealing in starches and starch products manufactured by any competitor or competitors of respondents, and the parties to said contracts so understood the meaning of said contracts and the effect of the performance thereof. These contracts have been, and are being, faithfully performed by said purchasers, and in so doing they have refrained, and are refraining, from using or dealing in starches or starch products manufactured by any competitor or competitors of respondents. Although the purchasers reserve the right in said contracts to manufacture and sell starches and starch products produced from corn by the use of their own facilities, the prices charged them by respondents are so satisfactory to said purchasers that since the execution of said contracts said purchasers have wholly ceased the manufacture of starches and starch products from corn. At times and from time to time one or more competitors of respondents were, and have been, ready, willing, and able to supply some of said purchasers' requirements of such products.

(e) The effect of the execution and performance of said contracts, as aforesaid, may have been to substantially lessen competition between the respondents and their competitors and may have tended to create a monopoly in the respondents in the sale and distribution of starches of the type manufactured by respondents for such purchasers.

CONCLUSION

The discriminations in price by respondents as hereinabove set forth have resulted, and do result, in substantial injury to their competitors, hinder, obstruct, and tend to suppress competition with respondents, and tend to create a monopoly in them in the processing and refining of corn and the sale of products and byproducts of such processing and refining, and have resulted, and do result, in substantial injury to competition among purchasers of such products and byproducts by affording material and unjustified price advantages to preferred purchasers and not to others, and violate subsection (a) of section 2 of an act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (Clayton Act), as amended by the act of June 19, 1936 (Robinson-Patman Act). The acts of respondents as hereinabove set forth in furnishing or contributing to the furnishing of advertising services and facilities to one of their customers in the resale of dextrose purchased from them and not to competing customers purchasing said dextrose upon proportionally equal terms, or upon any terms whatever, violate subsection (e) of section 2 of said Clayton Act as amended. The contracts with Huron Milling Co. and Keever Starch Co. providing that said companies shall purchase their requirements of starch and starch products from respondents to the exclusion of respondents' competitors, and the acts and practices pursuant to said contracts, constitute violation by respondents of section 3 of the aforesaid Clayton Act as amended.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, the amended complaint of the Commission and respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments by counsel, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondents have violated subsections (a) and (e) of section 2 and section 3 of "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (Clayton Act), as amended by act of June 19, 1936 (Robinson-Patman Act):

It is ordered, That respondents Corn Products Refining Co., a corporation, and Corn Products Sales Co., Inc., a corporation, and their officers, directors, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of products resulting from the grinding and refining of corn in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the aforesaid Clayton Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Directly or indirectly discriminating in price between different purchasers of glucose or corn syrup unmixed of like grade and quality in the manner and degree set forth in paragraphs 4 and 5 of the findings as to the facts herein, or in any manner or degree substantially similar thereto, or from continuing or resuming any such discriminations in price.

2. Discriminating in price between purchasers of glucose or corn syrup unmixed by the methods set out in paragraph 6 of the findings as to the facts herein, or otherwise discriminating in price between purchasers by means of the booking or entry of orders for glucose or corn syrup unmixed, where the price differences between purchasers resulting therefrom substantially approximate or exceed those set forth in paragraph 4 or 5 of the findings as to the facts herein, provided this shall not prohibit actual sales of glucose or corn syrup unmixed for future delivery which do not involve such discriminations in price at the time of actual sale.

3. Directly or indirectly discriminating in price between different purchasers of starch or starch products of like grade and quality in the manner and degree set forth in paragraph 9 of the findings as to the facts herein, or in any manner or degree substantially similar thereto, or from continuing or resuming any such discriminations in price.

4. Directly or indirectly discriminating in price between different purchasers of corn gluten feed and corn gluten meal of like grade and quality in the manner and degree set forth in paragraph 8 of the findings as to the facts herein, or in any manner or degree substantially similar thereto, or from continuing or resuming any such discriminations in price.

5. Furnishing advertising services to the Curtiss Candy Co. as set forth in paragraph 10 of the findings as to the facts herein, or directly or indirectly furnishing services or facilities to the Curtiss Candy Co. or to any purchaser of dextrose or other of respondents' products in connection with the processing, handling, sale, or offering for sale thereof, when such services or facilities are not accorded to all competing purchasers of any such product on proportionally equal terms.

6. Contracting to sell to, or selling to, the Huron Milling Co., the Keever Starch Co., or any other customer buying in quantities approximating those of the purchasers named, corn starch or other starch products, or fixing a price therefor or discount or rebate therefrom, on the condition, agreement, or understanding that any such purchaser shall not use or deal in corn starch or other starch products of a competitor or competitors of respondents, or from performing, enforcing, or continuing in operation or effect any such condition, agreement, or understanding.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall, within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

CLINTON COMPANY AND CLINTON SALES COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 2 (a) OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY ACT OF JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 3800. Complaint, June 1, 1939—Decision, Mar. 17, 1942

Where a corporation, with principal place of business in Iowa, where it had a corn grinding plant with capacity in excess of 32,000 bushels a day and complete facilities for the production of all known corn products, both for household and industrial use; including starch for food and other purposes, glucose or corn syrup, and corn sugar, and, as by-products, gluten feed, corn oil, corn oil cake and corn oil meal; and its wholly owned subsidiary, with principal office at Chicago; together long engaged in manufacture, sale and distribution of said corn products, and, in addition, various branded products—

In selling their glucose or corn syrup, used in most kinds of candy, and constituting from 50 to 90 percent of the finished weights of many varieties, largely to manufacturers of candies and mixers of table syrups—

- (a) Discriminated in price unlawfully through sales of like grade and quality, fulfilled by shipments from their Iowa plant to purchasers in various cities, at differing delivered prices, through a pricing system based upon their Chicago tank car price, to which was added as differentials the amounts of the railroad tariff from Chicago to destinations;
- (b) Discriminated in price unlawfully between different purchasers through adding to their base railroad tank car price, certain "container differentials" which varied from ten cents, where delivery was by tank trucks owned by such corporations, to $1.08 for 5-gallon cans; and
- (c) Discriminated in price between different purchasers through preferential operation or application of their booking system—under which, following announcement of new price increase, purchasers were granted a period of five days within which to purchase at the old and lower price, provided shipment was made within 30 days—through making shipments at times to various purchasers, after expiration of 30-day period, at the older and lower price, while concurrently charging other and competing purchasers who ordered after expiration of the 5-day period, the new and higher prices, and through accepting, upon one occasion, an order for glucose at the old and lower price, while concurrently selling the same product to competing purchasers at the new and higher price;

With the result that—

(1) Candy manufacturers located in cities other than Chicago had higher raw material and total costs than did Chicago manufacturers; and manufacturers of low-priced candies selling at a narrow margin of profit—in which the cost of glucose is a major portion of the total manufacturing costs, and in the case of which chain stores and other large quantity purchasers are attracted by a difference as little as one-eighth of a cent per pound—could only sell their product at competitive prices by absorbing the higher glucose costs or by selling on a non-price basis, with consequence, in either event, that manufacturer's profit was reduced directly through such absorption or indirectly through reduced sales volume and resulting increased overhead unit costs, and some who otherwise would have entered upon manufacture of candy in cities where glucose prices were higher were deterred from so doing; and

(2) Customer-purchasers engaged in mixing, for sale to wholesalers and other distributors, table sirup, in which approximately 85 percent of content is glucose, and located in cities other than Chicago, had higher raw material and total costs than Chicago mixers; sales of those who sell their product at but a few cents per case lower than a competitor were substantially diminished or prevented by reason of the lower glucose cost to Chicago mixers; and sales and profits of mixers paying the higher prices were less than they otherwise would have been; and potential new mixers were deterred from entering the industry in those cities in which corporations in question sold their corn sirup at such higher prices:

Held, That such discriminations in price resulted in substantial injury to competition among purchasers of glucose by affording material and unjustified price advantages to some and not to others, and constituted violation of Subsection (a) of section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

Before Mr. John L. Hornor, trial examiner.

Mr. Frank Hier and Mr. P. R. Layton for the Commission.

Lowenhaupt, Waite & Stolar, of St. Louis, Mo., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the parties respondent named in the caption hereof, and hereinafter more particularly designated and described, since June 19, 1936, have violated and are now violating the provisions of Section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges with respect thereto as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Clinton Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of Iowa with its principal office and place of business in the city of Clinton and State of Iowa. Respondent, Clinton Sales Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois and has its principal office and place of business at 1525 South Sangamon Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent, Clinton Sales Co., is a wholly owned sales subsidiary of respondent Clinton Co., through which products manufactured by Clinton Co. are sold and distributed. Clinton Co. owns the entire capital stock of Clinton Sales Co., and controls and directs Clinton Sales Co.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Clinton Co., owns and operates a plant at Clinton, Iowa. This plant has a corn grinding capacity in excess of 32,000 bushels per day, with complete facilities for the finished fabrication of all known corn products, both for household and industrial use.

PAR. 3. For many years respondents have been and are now engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling and distributing in interstate commerce products derived from corn. The principal products derived from corn are (1) Starch, both for food and other purposes; (2) Glucose or corn syrup; and (3) Corn sugar. Starch is first manufactured from the corn, and glucose and grape sugar are made by treating the starch with certain acids, the resulting solid product being sugar and the resulting syrup being glucose. Glucose is largely used in the manufacture of candy, jellies, jams, preserves, and the like as well as in the mixing of syrups.

The principal byproducts of corn resulting in the corn products business are gluten feed, corn oil, corn-oil cake and corn-oil meal.

The Clinton Co., in addition to bulk products, produces branded products.

PAR. 4. For many years in the course and conduct of their business, the respondents have been and are now manufacturing the aforesaid commodities at the aforesaid plant and have sold and shipped and do now sell and ship such commodities in commerce between and among the various States of the United States from the State in which their factory is located across State lines to purchasers thereof located in States other than the State in which respondents' said plant is located in competition with other persons, firms, and corporations engaged in similar lines of commerce.

PAR. 5. Since June 19, 1936, and while engaged as aforesaid in commerce among the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia, the respondents have been and are now, in the course of such commerce, discriminating in price between purchasers of said commodities of like grade and quality, which commodities are sold for use, consumption or resale within the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia in that the respondents have been and are now selling such commodities to some purchasers at a higher price than the price at which commodities of like grade and quality are sold by respondents to other purchasers generally competitively engaged with the first mentioned purchasers.

PAR. 6. The effect of said discriminations in price made by said respondents, as set forth in paragraph 5 herein, may be substantially to lessen competition in the sale and distribution of corn products between the said respondents and their competitors; tend to create a monopoly in the line of commerce in which the respondents are engaged; and to injure, destroy, and prevent competition in the sale and distribution of corn products between the said respondents and their competitors.

PAR. 7. The effect of said discriminations in price made by said respondents, as set forth in paragraph 5 herein, may be substantially to lessen competition between the buyers of said corn products from respondents receiving said lower discriminatory prices and other buyers from respondents competitively engaged with such favored buyers who do not receive such favorable prices; tend to create a monopoly in the lines of commerce in which buyers from respondents are engaged; and to injure, destroy, and prevent competition in the lines of commerce in which those who purchase from respondents are engaged between the said beneficiaries of said discriminatory prices and said buyers who do not and have not received such beneficial prices.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts of respondents constitute a violation of the provisions of subsection (a) of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C. title 15, sec. 13).

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (Clayton Act), as amended by act approved June 19, 1936 (Robinson-Patman Act), the Federal Trade Commission on June 1, 1939, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Clinton Co., a corporation, and Clinton Sales Co., a corporation, charging them with discrimination in price among purchasers of their products in violation of subsection (a) of section 2 of said act, as amended.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, certain stipulated facts were read into the record and exhibits introduced before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and such evidence was duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, answer, evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments of counsel; and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Clinton Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Iowa, having its principal office and place of business in Clinton, Iowa. Clinton Sales Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, having its principal office and place of business at Chicago, Ill. Clinton Sales Co. is a wholly owned subsidiary of the Clinton Co. and is engaged in the sale and distribution of the products manufactured by the Clinton Co.

PAR. 2. For many years respondents have been, and are now, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing products derived from corn. They have a plant at Clinton, Iowa, which has a corn grinding capacity in excess of 32,000 bushels per day and complete facilities for the production of all known corn products both for household and industrial use. The principal products so made are starch, both for food and other purposes, glucose or corn syrup, and corn sugar. Glucose is largely used in the manufacture of candy, jellies, jams, preserves, and in the mixing of syrups. The principal byproducts resulting from such processing of corn are gluten feed, corn oil, corn oil cake, and corn oil meal. In addition to the products sold by respondents in bulk, they also produce and sell various branded products.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid respondents have been, and are now, selling and shipping such commodities in commerce between and among the various States of the United States from the State in which their plant is located across State lines to purchasers thereof located in other States, and maintain, and have maintained, a course of trade in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 4. (a) Respondents sell glucose or corn syrup largely to manufacturers of candy and mixers of table syrups on a delivered price basis, the price in each instance depending upon the location of the purchaser freightwise to Chicago, Ill. Respondents' railroad tank car price in Chicago is the base from which its prices to purchasers at all other locations are determined, and such other prices are arrived at by adding to the Chicago tank car price the amount of the railroad tariff from Chicago to the purchaser's location. This pricing plan has been followed by respondents since the establishment of their plant at Clinton, Iowa, in 1906, and similar pricing plants have been, and are being, used by respondents' competitors. These competitors and the plant locations of each are: Corn Products Refining Co., with plants at Chicago, Ill., and Kansas City, Mo.; A. E. Staley Manufacturing Co., Decatur, Ill.; Penick & Ford, Ltd., Inc., Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Anheuser-Busch, Inc., St. Louis, Mo.; Union Starch and Refining Co., Granite City, Ill.; American Maize-Products Co., Roby, Ind.; and Hubinger Co., Keokuk, Iowa.

(b) In order to illustrate respondents' pricing system to customers in various cities of the United States, their prices per hundred pounds for 43° glucose in railroad tank car lots to customers in a few of such cities on particular dates were:

Chicago, Ill.	$2.94	$3.04	$2.29	$2.09
Clinton, Iowa	3.11	3.20	2.47	2.27
Dubuque, Iowa	3.11	3.20	2.47	2.27
Marshalltown, Iowa	3.23	3.31	2.59	2.39

Lincoln, Nebr.	3.37	3.45	2.74	2.64
Oklahoma City, Okla.	3.62	3.68	2.99	2.79

At all times between the dates set forth substantially the same differences in and relationships between and among said prices illustrated above existed as to purchasers so located.

(c) The railroad tariff stated in cents per hundred pounds of glucose from Chicago, Ill., to each of the cities shown in the table above for the periods shown was:

Cities	June 19, 1936, through Dec. 31, 1936	Jan. 1, 1937, through Apr. 10, 1937	Apr. 20, 1937, through Dec. 19, 1937	Dec. 20, 1937, through Mar. 27, 1938	Mar. 28, 1938, through Aug. 14, 1938	Aug. 15, 1938, through —

Ogden, Utah	85	80	70	73	77	77

(d) All sales of glucose made by respondents are fulfilled by shipments made from their plant at Clinton, Iowa, and the railroad tariff stated in cents per hundred pounds applicable to such shipments from Clinton, Iowa, to the above-named cities were as follows for the periods shown:

Cities	June 19, 1936, through Dec. 31, 1936	Jan. 1, 1937, through Apr. 19, 1937.	Apr. 20, 1937, through Dec. 19, 1937	Dec. 20, 1937, through Aug. 14, 1938	Aug. 15, 1938, through —
Chicago, Ill.....	17	16	16	17½	18
Dubuque, Iowa.....	12	11	11	12	12
Marshalltown, Iowa.....	19½	17½	17½	19½	19½
Sioux City, Iowa.....	31	28	28	31	31
Sioux Falls, S. Dak.....	32½	29½	29½	32½	32½
Fort Worth, Tex.....	73	70	70	77	77
Dallas, Tex.....	73	70	70	77	77
Kansas City, Mo.....	31	28	28	31	31
St. Louis, Mo.....	17½	16	16	17½	18
Lincoln, Nebr.....	36	33	33	36	36
Oklahoma City, Okla.....	64	61	61	67	67
Salt Lake City, Utah.....	85	80	85½	88½	72
Ogden, Utah.....	85	80	85½	88½	72

From a comparison of the price differences as among customers in different cities with the applicable railroad rates it is evident that the price differences created by respondents' pricing system do not reflect actual differences in delivery costs to respondents. Milling in transit and other rate adjustments would not operate to cause respondents' actual delivery costs to coincide with such price differences.

PAR. 5. As a part of their pricing plan to purchasers of glucose or corn syrup, respondents follow the practice of granting to purchasers a period of 5 days after the announcement of any price increase by them within which purchasers may buy at the price which was in effect before the increase, provided shipment of glucose so ordered be made within 30 days after the date of the price increase. Upon orders entered within such 5-day period respondents at times have shipped glucose to various purchasers after the expiration of the 30-day period, charging and receiving therefor the older and lower price, while at the same time charging and receiving the new increased and higher prices for similar glucose from other and competing purchasers who ordered after the expiration of the 5-day period. Upon one occasion respondents accepted an order for glucose at the old and lower price after the 5-day period had expired, and sold glucose to such purchaser at the old and lower price while concurrently selling glucose of like grade and quality to other and competing purchasers at the new and higher price. When respondents accepted said order the purchaser stated that competitors of respondents were offering to sell such glucose to him at such lower price, but respondents did not attempt to determine whether such statement was true.

Findings

PAR. 6. In addition to the price differences among their customers created by respondents through the method of basing all delivered prices upon the Chicago price, and price differences created by reason of preferential treatment given some customers in the operation of the order booking system used, respondents create further price differences among their customers by means of "container differentials." Respondents sell corn syrup or glucose in railroad tank car lots, in tank truck or tank wagon quantities, in steel drums, barrels, half barrels, 10-gallon cans, and 5-gallon cans. Respondents' base price for glucose is in tank car quantities, and in the event a purchaser takes delivery in a smaller quantity or smaller containers the price to him is increased above the tank car price as shown in the following table:

Type of container:	Additional price per hundredweight over tank car price
Barrels.....	$0.33
Half barrels	$0.58
10-gallon cans.....	$0.98
5-gallon cans.....	$1.08
Returnable steel drums..	$0.13	where there is no return freight paid on empty drums.
Returnable steel drums..	$0.18	where the return freight on the empty drum is 75 cents or less per hundredweight.
Returnable steel drums..	$0.23	where the return freight on the empty drum is between 76 and 90 cents per hundredweight.
Returnable steel drums..	$0.28	where the return freight on the empty drum is between 91 cents and $1 per hundredweight.
Returnable steel drums..	$0.33	where the return freight on the empty drum is more than $1 per hundredweight.
Tank trucks	$0 10	where delivered by respondents' equipment.

PAR. 7. (a) Some of the customers who purchase glucose of like grade and quality from respondents are candy manufacturers located in the cities heretofore named. These manufacturers use the glucose so purchased in the manufacture of candy which is sold in competition with candy manufactured by others to various customers such as wholesalers, retailers, and chain stores, who purchase for resale. Glucose is used to some extent in the manufacture of most kinds of candy and is one of the major raw materials used in the production of many varieties, constituting from 5 to 90 percent of the finished weight thereof. The cost of glucose is a substantial part of the raw material cost and of the total cost of manufacturing many candies and is a major portion of the raw material and total cost of manufacturing candies which have a high glucose content. The higher prices paid for glucose by candy manufacturers located in cities other than Chicago, Ill., such as those previously enumerated, contribute to a greater or lesser degree to their having higher raw material and total costs than those manufacturers located in Chicago, Ill., the degree in each instance depending upon the difference in price and the proportion of glucose used in the candy manufactured. Generally, glucose is used in greater proportion in candies which are sold at but a few cents per pound and at a narrow margin of profit. As to low-priced candies which have no differentiating name or brand, candy manufacturers may, and do, attract customers by selling such candies at as little as one-eighth cent per pound lower than competitors, and this is especially true in selling candies to chain stores and other large quantity purchasers to whom such a small difference in price is determinative in the placing of their business. Under such circumstances, candy manufacturers paying higher prices for glucose can only sell candies at competitive prices by absorbing the higher glucose costs or by increasing the price of such candies and selling them on a nonprice basis. The result in either case is to reduce the manufacturer's profit either directly through such absorption or indirectly through reduced sales volume of high glucose content candies at higher than competitive prices, and in the latter alternative reduced sales volume usually results in increased overhead unit costs. The lower profits or any of the other results stated above to candy manufacturers paying higher prices for glucose diminishes their incentive and ability to compete with those candy manufacturers paying lower prices for glucose and deters some who otherwise would enter the manufacture of candy in those cities where respondents' glucose prices are higher.

(b) Some customers who purchase glucose from respondents are located in the cities previously named and are engaged in the business of mixing or preparing sirup for table use for sale to wholesalers and other food product distributors. Such table sirups contain approximately 85 percent of glucose or corn sirup. A typical and usual method of packaging and selling such mixed table sirup is in cases containing six 10-pound cans or twelve 5-pound cans, or 60 pounds net of table sirup, of which approximately 50 pounds is glucose or corn sirup sold by respondents. The higher prices paid for such glucose by table sirup mixers located in cities other than Chicago, Ill., contributes in greater or lesser degree to their having higher raw material and total costs than the comparable costs of table sirup mixers located in Chicago, Ill., the degree in each case depending upon the difference in price paid for glucose. Table sirup mixers may, and do, attract customers by selling table sirup at but a few cents per case lower than the price at which a competitor is selling. The lower cost of glucose to table sirup mixers located in Chicago, Ill., when reflected in the selling price of such table sirup, substantially diminishes or prevents sales of such table sirup by mixers located in cities other than Chicago, Ill., to customers in areas where, and to the extent that, transportation costs on such mixed table sirup from Chicago, Ill., to such areas is less than the amount of the difference in the price or cost of glucose to such mixers, or is less than such price difference plus transportation costs from such other cities to such areas. If the table sirup mixers paying the higher prices for glucose were paying lower prices they could, and would, sell table sirup mixed by them to customers located in areas where they cannot now sell to the extent and degree that they would be able to reduce their delivered prices because of lower glucose prices. Under such circumstances the sales and profits of table sirup mixers paying the higher prices for glucose have been less than they would have been, or would be, if the price of such glucose were lower; and such lessening or lowering of sales and profits has diminished their incentive to compete with table sirup mixers paying lower prices for glucose, and has deterred potential new mixers of table sirup from entering the industry in those cities where respondents sell their corn sirup at such higher prices.

PAR. 8. Respondents have introduced no evidence to show that the aforesaid price differentials, or any of them, as among their customers, made only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery, if any, resulting from differing methods or quantities, if any, in which glucose was to such purchasers sold or delivered.

CONCLUSION

The discriminations in price by respondents, as hereinabove set forth, have resulted, and do result, in substantial injury to competition among purchasers of glucose by affording material and unjustified price advantages to some purchasers and not to others, and violate subsection (a) of section 2 of an act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (Clayton Act), as amended by the act of June 19, 1936 (Robinson-Patman Act).

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, respondents' answer thereto, certain stipulated facts read into the record and exhibits introduced, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments of counsel, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of subsection (a) of section 2 of "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (Clayton Act), as amended by the act approved June 19, 1936 (Robinson-Patman Act).

It is ordered, That respondents Clinton Co., a corporation, and Clinton Sales Co., a corporation, and their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of glucose or corn syrup unmixed in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the aforesaid Clayton Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Directly or indirectly discriminating in price between different purchasers of glucose or corn syrup unmixed of like grade and quality in the manner and degree set forth in paragraphs 4 and 6 of the findings as to the facts herein, or in any manner or degree substantially similar thereto, or from continuing or resuming any such discriminations in price.

2. Discriminating in price between different purchasers of glucose by the methods set out in paragraph 5 of the findings as to the facts herein, or otherwise discriminating in price between purchasers by means of the booking or entry of orders for glucose or corn syrup unmixed, where the price differences between purchasers resulting therefrom substantially approximate or exceed those set out in paragraphs 4 or 6 of the findings as to the facts herein, provided this shall not prohibit actual sales of glucose or corn syrup unmixed for future delivery which do not involve such discriminations in price at the time of actual sale.

3. Otherwise discriminating in price as between purchases of glucose or corn syrup unmixed of like grade and quality where the effect may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in the lines of commerce in which customers of respondent are engaged, or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with any recipient of the benefit of such discrimination, provided that this shall not prevent price differences which make only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which said glucose is to such purchasers sold or delivered, and provided further that this shall not prevent respondents from showing that any lower price to any purchaser was made in good faith to meet an equally low price of a competitor of respondents.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall, within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF WARNER'S RENOWNED REMEDIES COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
 OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4063. Complaint, Mar. 12, 1940—Decision, Mar. 23, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in interstate sale and distribution, among other medicinal preparations, of its "Warner's Renowned Prescription No. 6," "Warner's Renowned Laxative Tablets," and "Warner's Renowned Alkaline Douche Tablets," which were sold separately and in combination under the designations "Prescription No. 6 Complete," "Prescription No. 6 Method," and "Formula No. 6 Method"; by means of advertisements through the mails, newspapers and periodicals, and by circulars, leaflets, and other advertising literature—

- (a) Represented that its said preparations were cures or remedies for functional sterility and constituted a competent and effective treatment therefor, and possessed beneficial properties in relation to the functioning of the female reproductive organs;
- (b) Represented that one of the general causes of functional sterility is lack of proper timing between ovulation and menstruation, and that its products served to synchronize such phenomena and thereby bring about pregnancy; and that another general cause of functional sterility is constriction of the mouth of the womb, which prevents fertilization, causing scanty menstruation and toxic accumulation, and that "Warner's Renowned Prescription No. 6" would relax the tension so that the mouth of the womb would be sufficiently open to permit pregnancy and prevent toxic accumulations;
- (c) Represented that the alkalinizing hot douche provided by "Prescription No. 6" counteracted an acid condition of the womb, represented as another general cause of functional sterility, and thereby made fertilization or pregnancy possible; and that use of its products would tone up the female organs and relieve sluggishness, and thereby overcome functional sterility; and
- (d) Represented that its preparation would relieve itchy, sensitive, tender, and sore breasts associated with the menstrual period;

The facts being that such assertions as to ailments and their causes, and the functions concerned, were erroneous; its said preparations would not, either by reason of the theory upon which based or the ingredients therein contained accomplish results claimed; they were not, used either singly or in combination, cures or effective treatments for sterility, functional or otherwise, and possessed no beneficial properties with relation to the functioning of the female reproductive organs; and there was nothing in its "Prescription No. 6" or its combination treatment which could in any way affect the peculiar sensations in the breasts associated with menstruation; With the effect of misleading a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such false representations were true, and of thereby inducing it to purchase its said preparations:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Arthur F. Thomas and Mr. Robert S. Hall, trial examiners.

Mr. William L. Taggart for the Commission.

Nash & Donnelly, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Warner's Renowned Remedies Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Warner's Renowned Remedies Co., is a corporation, organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Minnesota with its principal office and place of business located at 13 East Twenty-fifth Street and 2451 Nicollet Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn. Said respondent trading under the name Warner's Renowned Medicine Co., is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various medicinal preparations. Among the preparations sold and distributed by the respondent are "Warner's Renowned Prescription No. 6" and "Warner's Renowned Alkaline Douche Tablets."

Respondent causes its products when sold to be shipped from its place of business in Minneapolis, Minn., to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparations in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said products by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said products; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said products, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said products in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove described, by the United States mails, by advertisements inserted in newspapers and periodicals, by circulars, leaflets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

1. That respondent's preparations are cures or remedies for functional sterility and constitute competent and effective treatment therefor;
2. That respondent's preparations possess beneficial properties in relation to the functioning of the female reproductive organs;
3. That one of the general causes of functional sterility is lack of proper timing between ovulation and menstruation and that the Warner products serve to synchronize such phenomena thereby bringing about pregnancy;
4. That another general cause of functional sterility is constriction or closing of the mouth of the womb which prevents fertilization causing scanty menstruation and toxic accumulation and that "Warner's Renowned Prescription No. 6" will relax the tension so that the mouth of the womb will be sufficiently opened to permit pregnancy and prevent toxic accumulations;
5. That the alkalizing hot douche provided by "Prescription No. 6" counteracts an acid condition of the womb which is another general cause of functional sterility and thereby makes fertilization or pregnancy possible;
6. That the use of the Warner products will tone up the female organs and relieve sluggishness and thereby overcome functional sterility; and
7. That respondent's preparations will relieve itchy, sensitive, tender, and sore breasts associated with the menstrual period.

PAR. 3. The respondent's aforesaid representations and claims, as well as others of similar import which have not been specifically set out herein, are grossly exaggerated, misleading and untrue. In truth and in fact respondent's preparations have no therapeutic value in the treatment of the female organs or in relieving any form of functional sterility. Said preparations do not constitute cures or remedies for functional sterility and are not competent or effective treatments therefor. Said preparations possess no value or beneficial properties in reference to the functioning of the female reproductive organs. Representations to the effect that the use of respondent's preparations will serve to synchronize the phenomena of ovulation and menstruation are false and deceptive in that menstruation is entirely dependent upon ovulation and there is no lack of synchronization between ovulation and menstruation but they must occur simultaneously. Respondent's representations as to the effect of its preparations in relaxing the mouth of the uterus and removing toxic accumulations is false, deceptive and misleading for the reason that when menstruation occurs the cervical opening will be sufficient to admit the passage of spermatozoa since it is through the cervix that drainage of menstrual discharges must take place. Furthermore, there is no toxic accumulation in the female organs arising from the causes or in the manner described by the respondent in its various advertising material. Any alkalization or neutralization of the acid condition of the vaginal secretions is contrary to nature since the normal reaction of the vagina is acid and consequently there would be no benefit derived from the use of respondent's alkalizing douche. Respondent's preparations have no therapeutic value in toning up the organs and relieving itchy, sensitive, tender or sore breasts associated with the menstrual period.

PAR. 4. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid with respect to its preparations has had and now has a tendency and capacity to and does mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true and induces a substantial portion of the purchasing public because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase respondents' preparations containing drugs.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on March 12 A. D. 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint upon the respondent, Warner's Renowned Remedies Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After issuance of said complaint, testimony, and other evidence in support of said complaint were introduced by William L. Taggart, attorney for the Commission and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by John A. Nash and Horace J. Donnelly, attorneys for the respondent, before Arthur F. Thomas and Robert S. Hall, trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon said complaint, testimony and other evidence, report of Trial Examiner Arthur F. Thomas upon the evidence and exceptions filed thereto, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Warner's Renowned Remedies Co., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Minnesota, with its principal office and place of business located at 2451 Nicollet Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn. Said respondent, trading under the name of "Warner's Renowned Medicine Co.," is now, and for more than one year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various medicinal preparations. Among the preparations sold and distributed by the respondent are "Warner's Renowned Prescription No. 6," "Warner's Renowned Laxative Tablets," and "Warner's Renowned Alkaline Douche Tablets," which are sold separately and in combination under the designations "Prescription No. 6 Complete," "Prescription No. 6 Method," and "Formula No. 6 Method."

Respondent causes its products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Minnesota to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said medicinal preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said preparations, by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said preparations, by various means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said products in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove described, by United States mails, by advertisements inserted in newspapers and periodicals, and by circulars, leaflets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

1. That respondent's preparations are cures or remedies for functional sterility and constitute a competent and effective treatment therefor;

2. That respondent's preparations possess beneficial properties in relation to the functioning of the female reproductive organs;

3. That one of the general causes of functional sterility is lack of proper timing between ovulation and menstruation, and that the Warner products serve to synchronize such phenomena, thereby bringing about pregnancy;

4. That another general cause of functional sterility is constriction or closing of the mouth of the womb, which prevents fertilization, causing scanty menstruation and toxic accumulation, and that Warner's Renowned Prescription No. 6 will relax the tension so that the mouth of the womb will be sufficiently open to permit pregnancy and prevent toxic accumulation;

5. That the alkalizing hot douche provided by Prescription No. 6 counteracts an acid condition of the womb, which is another general cause of functional sterility, and thereby makes fertilization or pregnancy possible;

6. That the use of Warner's products will tone up the female organs and relieve sluggishness, and thereby overcome functional sterility; and

7. That respondent's preparation will relieve itchy, sensitive, tender, and sore breasts associated with the menstrual period.

PAR. 3. From examination of the testimony in this case, it appears that it is the respondent's contention that the general health of a woman has a direct bearing upon sterility and that the administration of the various tonics combined in respondent's preparation tones up the general health, with a favorable reaction upon the female organs, causing them to function properly and permit conception to occur. For the purpose of accomplishing this tonic effect, the respondent has developed its combination treatment, which consists of its preparations "Warner's Renowned Prescription No. 6," "Warner's Renowned Laxative Tablets," and "Warner's Renowned Alkaline Douche Tablets."

PAR. 4. Respondent's tablet preparation "Warner's Renowned Prescription No. 6" is designed for use as a tonic and contains three ingredients: Ferrous sulfate, gentian, and nux vomica, which are designed as tonics to tone up the general health. Ferrous sulfate is an iron preparation effective in cases of anemia; gentian is a drug, the use of which in modern medicine has, to a great extent, been discontinued, and which was formerly used as a stomachic, with perhaps some tonic value; and nux vomica is the original organic substance from which strichnine is obtained, which has been used considerably in the past as a tonic but less in recent years, and has a stimulating effect upon gastric secretions and is a nerve stimulant which tends to relax the nerve endings.

In addition to the above ingredients used for general tonic effect, there are other ingredients contained in this tablet which are designed to tone up the female organs and directly affect sterility. These ingredients are viburnum pruniflorous, a drug formerly used as a uterine tonic or sedative, which, since the use of more specific medication, has been largely discontinued and is now thought to be relatively inert; ovarian substance, a preparation made from whole ovary, which is considered to be inert and of no value when administered orally, particularly in quantities provided in respondent's preparation; and wheat germ oil, which contains vitamin E, sometimes referred to as a sterility vitamin. The value of vitamin E as affecting pregnancy or sterility in women has not been definitely determined. In tests upon rats it has been found to be effective in preventing repeated abortions, the minimum dose required being a half gram a day. If the ordinary pharmacological scale is used, it would require the use of a minimum of one hundred of respondent's pills, three times daily, to provide a comparable dose of this vitamin for human beings.

Respondent's laxative tablets designated "Warner's Renowned Laxative Tablets" are designed to assist in beneficially affecting sterility by toning up the system, relieving sluggishness, and eliminating constipation. This preparation consists of three drugs: Cascarin, podophyllin, and aloin, which combination constitutes a harsh laxative, the value of which is limited to the temporary relief of constipation and is of no value in the treatment of sterility.

Respondent's third preparation in its combination treatment is a douche tablet designated "Warner's Renowned Alkaline Douche Tablets" containing ten grains soda bicarbonate. The use of this douche in combination with the other preparations hereinabove described, is designed to assist in toning up the female organs by removing toxic accumulations and particularly the thickened mucous secretion forming a cervical plug or barrier against the entry of male spermatozoa, and by neutralizing the acid condition of the vagina, considered to be unfavorable to the spermatozoa.

PAR. 5. Based upon the medical testimony, the Commission finds that there are a large number of causes for sterility in women, many of which are unknown to the medical profession. The term "functional sterility" as used by the respondent is a misnomer and incorrect. By "functional" is meant that the organs are normally functioning, that the ovaries, tubes, uterus, and vagina are all normally developed and functioning within the normal realm, as contrasted to "pathological," where they would be improperly developed or where disease process has taken place. The conditions under which respondent asserts that sterility takes place are, by their nature, pathological and require specific treatment.

It is an established medical fact that women suffering from anemia, tuberculosis, and other debilitating diseases have become pregnant and the toning up of the general health of the individual will not in itself, overcome sterility, which may be due to many various causes of a pathological nature.

The lack of proper timing between ovulation and menstruation is not generally considered as a cause of sterility. In any event, there is nothing in respondent's "Prescription No. 6" or its combination treatment which will in any way effect the timing between ovulation and menstruation or serve to synchronize such phenomena.

The statements made by the respondent with reference to the constriction or closing of the mouth of the womb as being a general cause of functional sterility, are false and misleading. The mouth of the womb is never closed unless there is a congenital condition requiring surgery. Menstrual fluid is not normally held within the uterus due to constriction of the uterine outlet, and in event the uterine outlet should remain closed and the menstrual fluid accumulate, a very acute illness would undoubtedly result. It is normal between the periods of menstruation for a small amount of mucus to be present in the cervix or mouth of the womb. The presences of such mucous material is not generally considered as an obstruction to pregnancy, as the spermatozoa are able to penetrate this mucous, which is normally present. None of respondent's said preparations, used either singly or in combination will have the effect of relaxing the womb, so that the mouth of the womb will be sufficiently open to permit pregnancy or have any value in the prevention of so-called toxic accumulations.

The normal condition of the vagina is acid, and such acidity is essential for normal functioning. The use of the preparations contained in respondent's combination treatment, with the exception of the douche tablets, has no effect upon the acid condition of the vagina. The use of the bicarbonate of soda douche as provided in this prescription might have a tendency to temporarily neutralize the acid condition of the vagina. This, however, is contrary to the normal process of the vagina and has no value in favorably affecting sterility.

Respondent's preparations, used either singly or in combination as provided in "Prescription No. 6 Complete," "Prescription No. 6 Method," or "Formula No. 6 Method," are not cures or remedies for sterility, functional or otherwise, and do not constitute competent or effective treatments for sterility and possess no beneficial properties which have any value in promoting or aiding the functioning of the female reproductive organs. The use of said preparations will not tone up the female organs, relieve sluggishness, or in any way overcome sterility. Increased sensitivity of the breasts at or about the time of menstruation is considered to be physiological and normal in a great many women. There is nothing in respondent's "Prescription No. 6" or its combination treatment which can in any way affect the peculiar sensations in the breasts associated with menstruation, described by the respondent as itchy, sensitive, tender, and sore breasts.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to its preparations, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and induces a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's preparations containing drugs.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, answer of the respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before Arthur F. Thomas and Robert S. Hall, trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, report of Trial Examiner Arthur F. Thomas upon the evidence and exceptions filed thereto, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act;

It is ordered, That the respondent, Warner's Renowned Remedies Co., a corporation, trading as Warner's Renowned Medicine Co., or under any other trade name, and its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its preparations designated "Warner's Renowned Prescription No. 6," "Warner's Renowned Laxative Tablets," and "Warner's Renowned Alkaline Douche Tablets," either singly or in combination under the designations "Prescription No. 6 Complete," "Prescription No. 6 Method," or "Formula No. 6 Method," or any other products of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other name or names, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference,

(a) That respondent's preparations, either singly or in combination, are cures or remedies for, or constitute competent or effective treatments for, functional sterility.

(b) That respondent's preparations, either singly or in combination, have any therapeutic value in the treatment of any form of sterility.

(c) That respondent's preparations, either singly or in combination, possess any properties which have any value in promoting or aiding the functioning of the female reproductive organs.

(d) That respondent's preparations, either singly or in combination, possess any properties which will in any way affect the timing between ovulation and menstruation, or serve to synchronize such phenomena.

(e) That the use of said preparations, either singly or in combination, will be effective in relaxing the womb, cause the mouth of the womb to be sufficiently open to permit pregnancy, or prevent toxic accumulations.

(f) That the use of respondent's preparation "Warner's Renowned Alkaline Douche Tablets" has any value in the treatment of sterility by neutralizing the acid condition of the vagina, or that the use of said preparation will remove toxic accumulations or any barrier in the cervix, or in any way affect sterility or make fertilization and pregnancy possible.

(g) That the use of said preparations, either singly or in combination, will tone up the female organs, relieve sluggishness, or overcome sterility.

(h) That the use of said preparations, either singly or in combination, can in any way affect the sensations of the breasts associated with menstruation or that said preparations have any therapeutic value in the treatment of itchy, sensitive, tender, or sore breasts associated with the menstrual period.

2. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement, by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act of respondent's preparations, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof and the respective subdivisions thereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF DE FOREST'S TRAINING, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4441. Complaint, Dec. 31, 1940—Decision, Mar. 23, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in the sale of a course of home study in electronics, including radio, sound and television, and branches thereof, such as facsimile, sound pictures, public address system, and many uses of the electric eye, which might be concluded, at the student's option, with 2 weeks of shop training at said corporation's place of business, in any branch the student might select; by means of booklets, pamphlets, etc., circulated to prospective students by mail, and by numerous salesmen to whom it referred inquiries received in response to advertising—

Made such representations concerning the opportunities in television open to those who completed said course as "If Television develops as we anticipate, it won't be very long until many of the 23,000,000 homes in the U. S. will want Television receivers. * * "; "So it seems that Television will soon be one of the big industries of this country—possibly as large as the Radio and Sound Picture business combined. It will hold wonderful opportunities for the young man who has the vision and foresight to get into it at the very beginning and pioneer and grow with it"; " * *. Our Employment Service is available to every enrollee * * *. Through this service we have helped scores of men obtain employment. * * * What we have done for others we can do for you, when you are properly trained. * * *"; and "To the young man seeking to fit himself into this exciting new picture of modern opportunity, everything may depend on one factor. That is—whether he has the ambition and foresight to seize this fine chance; whether he makes himself ready for Television NOW, before its pioneering opportunities pass on into history";

The facts being that delay after delay has occurred to postpone commercial development in the television field, involvement of the Nation in active hostilities will undoubtedly result in further delay, and no one can say when it will reach a stage assuring opportunities for the employment of large numbers of men; up to the present, opportunities for employment in that field have been limited to a few individuals with wide training and experience in radio and allied problems, and much broader scientific education than offered by course in question; and while said corporation, during a 3-year period, placed in employment with a large number of different concerns, 1,077 of a total of 1,155 graduates, such employment was usually in beginners' positions for which no training was necessary, and in such instances completion of the course was helpful merely as indicating sustained interest on the part of the individual for that particular field;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, and of causing it to purchase said course; thereby diverting trade unfairly from competitors who do not misrepresent their courses, to their injury and that of the public:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that De Forest's Training, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, De Forest's Training, Inc., is an Illinois corporation, with its principal office and place of business located at 2533 North Ashland Avenue, Chicago, Ill. It is now, and for more than one year last past has been, engaged in conducting a vocational school in television, radio, and motion picture sound equipment maintenance and manufacture, and in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of combination home study and shop training courses therein. It has caused and is causing said printed courses of instruction, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said courses of instruction in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is now and has been at all times herein referred to, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with individuals, firms and partnerships, also engaged in the sale and distribution in said commerce of similar courses of instruction intended for preparing students thereof by correspondence for various positions, employments, and trades in the television, radio, motion picture sound equipment and related fields.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business in said commerce as aforesaid, and for the purpose of promoting the sale of its said course of instruction, respondent has secured, and does secure, prospective students and purchasers of its said course by means of mailing lists. Prospective students who answer the circulars mailed to them and who request further information are solicited by various field agents of the respondent, who undertake to enroll said prospective purchasers for the course. Said field agents are furnished by the respondent with sales literature consisting of instructions in the manner in which the course is to be presented to prospective purchasers, illustrations of the motion picture machine which forms part of the equipment furnished to the students, numerous photographs and reprints from newspaper articles, letters of recommendation from other students, and other advertising literature. In the prepared sales talk supplied by respondent and which is to be so used by said agents there appear, among others, the following statements:

This is a new field and one that offers great opportunities for young men—there are real possibilities for the man who is fortunate enough to get into the industry in the near future. Therefore, it is important that only the right type of young man be considered.

If Television develops as we anticipate, it won't be very long until many of the 23,000,000 homes in the U. S. will want television receivers. In addition to broadcasting, this should require the services of thousands of men to design, manufacture, install, and service these units.

There is still another big Television field that should develop in the near future. As you no doubt know, many newspaper pictures are now transmitted by wire, a process which is really a form of wired Television. When this method is speeded up enough to transmit movies, theaters should make daily use of the equipment. When this comes to pass it should bring theaters all over the country into circuits, and no matter where a person is, he should be able to hear and see news events and other things of national interest just as they happen. * * *

So it seems that Television will soon be one of the big industries of this country—possibly as large as the Radio and Sound Picture business combined. It will hold wonderful opportunities for the young man who has the vision and foresight to get into it at the very beginning and pioneer and grow with it.

In the advertising material supplied by respondent and distributed by said agents among prospective purchasers, there appear, among others, the following statements:

Sound, television, radio present world-wide opportunities. Television, a new branch of the Electronic field, is developing rapidly, * * *. After a man is trained the De Forest way, he is ready to enter the Electronic industry and really go places. Our employment service is available to every enrollee no matter where he lives. Through this service we have helped scores of men obtain employment. Because we train our men well, manufacturers, dealers, and distributors are glad to consider our advanced students and graduates.

What we have done for others we can do for you when you are properly trained. Start your preparation now so you can soon take advantage of our employment service.

Consider TELEVISION a moment! Developments have come so rapidly that the beginning of a new industry is already here. Television is estimated to expand into a billion dollar field. * * *

And Television, like the automobile and other industries in their earlier days, should offer some of the most outstanding opportunities to those who get into the field when it counts most—on the ground floor!

And another demand for trained Television men should come from the installation and servicing of Television receivers. * * *

Yes, the future of TELEVISION, RADIO, SOUND, and SOUND PICTURES—and therefore your future—promises to be one of great growth and possibilities.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements hereinabove set forth, and many others of like import and effect, the respondent represents, directly or by implication, that there are at the present time great opportunities for persons who enter upon the field of television: That within a short time there will be a market for large numbers of television receivers; that by vastly increased use of television apparatus thousands of men will be required in said field; that television will soon be as large a business as the radio and sound picture business combined and will offer extraordinary opportunities to people who enter upon the field now; that any man who is trained in the work of television as taught by respondent will be ready to enter the electronic industry and be assured of lucrative employment.

PAR. 5. The foregoing statements and representations are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading and deceptive. In truth and in fact, while television is now occupying the serious attention of scientists, it is still in its infancy, and opportunities for employment and rapid advancement in said field are very few and limited. There is at the present time no assurance that many television receivers will be manufactured and will find their way into the homes of the public. At the present time there are still a number of technical difficulties to be overcome before television apparatus can be sold and distributed on the scale and in the quantity indicated by respondent's representations. It is therefore very doubtful that any great number of men trained and experienced in the field of television will be needed within the near future. While television may at some future time become as large an industry as the radio and sound picture business, there is at the present time no indication that persons entering said field will have unusual opportunities to practice their profession. The demand at the present time for men trained in the television field is not large enough to warrant respondent's representation that graduates of respondent's school may be readily placed in positions in such field.

Moreover, graduates of respondent's school do not possess sufficient practical experience to qualify as skilled employees or craftsmen in the radio and television industry. The taking of a correspondence course, together with a 2-weeks' shop training, is not sufficient to equip a student with the practical knowledge required in positions in said field, nor will such students be qualified as competent servicemen.

PAR. 6. The representations made by respondent as set out herein have had and now have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true, and cause such portion of the public to purchase respondent's said course of instruction instead of the courses of instruction sold by competitors of the respondent who do not in any manner misrepresent their courses of instruction. As a consequence thereof substantial trade has been diverted from said competitors to the respondent, to the injury of such competitors and to the injury of the public.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on December 31, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon De Forest's Training, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of and in opposition to the allegations of said complaint were introduced before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments by counsel; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, De Forest's Training, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business at 2533 North Ashland Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is engaged in the sale of a course of home study in the general field of electronics. This course consists of various books, pamphlets and other written material, and some items of mechanical equipment. Upon completion of the home study by correspondence, respondent furnishes a short period of shop training at its place of business in Chicago.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, respondent causes the books, pamphlets, other written material, and mechanical equipment used in connection with its correspondence courses to be transported from its place of business in Chicago, Ill., to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the several States of the United States other than the State of Illinois, and respondent maintains, and has maintained, a constant course of trade in said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In order to induce the sale of said courses of instruction, respondent advertises its school by various means, including booklets, pamphlets, and other written material circulated to prospective students by mail and by salesmen employed by respondent. Among the statements and representations made to prospective students by means of said written material and by respondent's salesmen are the following:

If Television develops as we anticipate, it won't be very long until many of the 23,000,000 homes in the U. S. will want Television receivers. In addition to broadcasting, this should require the services of thousands of men to design, manufacture, install, and service these units.

There is still another big Television field that should develop in the near future. As you no doubt know, many newspaper pictures are now transmitted by wire, a process which is really a form of wired Television. When this method is speeded up enough to transmit movies, theatres should make daily use of the equipment. When this comes to pass it should bring theatres all over the country into circuits, and no matter where a person is, he should be able to hear and see news events and other things of national interest just as they happen. * * *

So it seems that Television will soon be one of the big industries of this country—possibly as large as the Radio and Sound Picture business combined. It

Present World-Wide Opportunities

* * * Television, a new branch of the Electronic field, is developing rapidly. * * * After a man is trained the De Forest way, he is ready to enter the Electronic industry and really "go places." Our Employment Service is available to every enrollee, no matter where he lives. Through this service we have helped scores of men obtain employment. To date, Television has progressed true to prediction. The beginning of a new American industry is already with us—one that may exceed even the spectacular record of Radio—one that should provide an even wider range of opportunities for interesting and profitable careers.

All of these future possibilities * * * all of the present activity in Television * * * combine to spell one word in the mind of the forward-looking, ambitious man, and that is—OPPORTUNITY! Opportunity for the fascinating career he is seeking * * * opportunity to realize some of the material things in life he has always wanted.

* * * * *

Today, the whole brilliant story of Radio's early growth, development and opportunities may repeat itself in TELEVISION. To the ambitious young man, here may be one of his greatest fields of possibilities.

* * * * *

Ambitious men who want steady, big-paying jobs are needed in the fast-growing TELEVISION, RADIO, and SOUND PICTURE INDUSTRY. De Forest's Master Training, planned by Dr. Lee De Forest, will properly prepare those selected for responsible jobs.

* * * * *

A word to the Wise About the Future. We will recommend the men we train to numerous manufacturers and dealers to design—manufacture—install—operate and maintain Television, Radio, and Sound Equipment.

* * * * *

But to the young man seeking to fit himself into this exciting new picture of modern opportunity, everything may depend on one factor. That is—whether he has the ambition and foresight to seize this fine chance; whether he makes himself ready for Television Now, before its pioneering opportunities pass on into history.

PAR. 4. Respondent's course consists of approximately 140 lessons which an earnest student may complete in 12 to 18 months by the application thereto of 7 to 12 hours of study per week but which respondent will allow the student to continue for a maximum of 3 years. In connection with the course of lessons respondent furnishes to each student a small motion picture projection machine and a number of films designed to aid the student in understanding the action of electricity. The films remain the property of respondent, but the student is allowed to retain the projector. Upon satisfactory completion of the lessons given by correspondence the student, at his option, may have as a part of his course 2 weeks of shop training at respondent's place of business in Chicago at which time the student may devote himself particularly to any branch of the electronics industry he selects. The respondent does not offer separate courses in particular branches of the electronics field but offers a single course which includes radio, sound, and television and branches thereof such as facsimile, sound pictures, public address systems, and many uses of the electric eye. The charge made by respondent for its course is $145 if payment is made in cash, or $165 if paid on the installment plan. If the student so elects, for an additional $60 respondent will furnish transportation to and from Chicago and room and board while there to the student taking the 2 weeks of shop training. Otherwise, the student may make his own arrangements for transportation to and from Chicago and lodging while there. Under the contract between respondent and a student the student may quit at any time upon certain terms and conditions. Respondent maintains the right to sue for performance of such contract but rarely resorts to suit.

The principal method used by respondent in promoting the sale of its course in electronics is to circularize by mail young men in the classes graduating from high school. Respondent has some 50 salesmen located at various points in the United States and when an inquiry is received in response to any advertising circular a salesman calls upon the prospect and attempts, by means of a sales routine and instructions furnished by respondent, to secure his enrollment as a student. Prospective students are not promised a job upon satisfactory completion of the course, but are informed of the employment assistance furnished and advised that respondent will use every reasonable effort to secure employment for them. Graduates of the school are not termed "engineers" but are referred to as "technicians." Students are generally high school graduates and approximately 90 percent have had no practical experience at the time they undertake respondent's course.

Respondent began its present business in 1931 and about 1936 or 1937 added to its advertising, promotional literature, and representations various statements concerning television, its future growth, and the opportunities for employment of trained men in television.

Findings

34 F. T. C.

PAR. 5. Television has been the subject of research, experimentation, and development for many years. The introduction of television to the general public began at the opening of the World's Fair in New York in April 1939, at which time television was practicable, and several thousand television receivers have been manufactured and a substantial number thereof sold to members of the public. The question of the establishment of standards to avoid undue obsolescence of receiving equipment which might be sold to the public was before the Federal Communications Commission, and on April 30, 1941, that Commission approved, with certain reservations, a set of standards and authorized the limited commercialization of television. At hearings in the present proceeding prior to the action taken by the Federal Communications Commission a number of officials of concerns prominent in the radio, television, and broadcasting fields testified to the general effect that television was then commercially practicable and its commercialization was largely dependent upon the action taken by the Federal Communications Commission with respect to authorizing its commercial development. They were agreed that television would become a large and important industry, perhaps as large or larger than the radio industry; that its possibilities were immense in many directions; and that when its commercial development began large numbers of men would be employed in the production, sale, and servicing of television receivers and in various ways in connection with broadcasting of television programs and other technical aspects of the art. The greatest divergence of opinion was with respect to the time element involved; that is, when commercialization on a substantial scale would occur. Some witnesses felt that this was in the immediate future or that it would immediately follow the establishment of standards by the Federal Communications Commission and authorization for its introduction to the public. Some felt that the prospects were not nearly so immediate, and it was pointed out that even after standardization there could be no immediate substantial development because of problems which must be solved with respect to the erection of broadcasting equipment, with respect to the provision of suitable programs, the sale of a sufficient number of sets whereby the heavy cost of broadcasting programs might be met by securing sponsors for programs, and many other practical considerations the solution of which would all require time. One well qualified witness expressed the view that for many years television has been plagued by wishful thinking and optimistic statements as to its immediate future by those who failed to consider the fact that commercial development even at best would require several years to become substantial.

PAR. 6. It is plain that, regardless of the optimism of various individuals engaged in the television field with respect to its commercial development, delay after delay has occurred to postpone that development. Even after the action of the Federal Communications Commission referred to above, the involvement of the nation in active hostilities will undoubtedly result in further delay. The fact is that no one can say with certainty when the commercial development of television will reach a stage which assures opportunities for the employment of large numbers of men.

However, during the past several years respondent has made various representations presenting an entrancing prospect of the possibilities and opportunities in television said to be open to those who have completed its course. The fact is that during those years and up to the present time there have been no opportunities for the employment of graduates of respondent's school in the television field, and there is no evidence that any graduates were actually placed in employment in that field by respondent. Only a limited number of people have up to this time been employed in television, and it has been principally an experimental and research problem for which respondent's course does not qualify students. In fact, the field has been limited to a few individuals with wide training and experience in radio and allied problems and a few graduates of recognized technical colleges and universities having a much broader scientific education and training than is offered by respondent's course.

PAR. 7. Respondent has maintained, and does maintain, an employment service for advanced students in, or graduates of, its school and has an employment manager to seek the establishment of relations with employers which would aid in placing students of respondent's course. From 1937 to 1940 a total of 1,155 men were graduated from respondent's school, and during this period of time 1,077 were placed in employment with some 137 different employers, including many large and well-known concerns such as General Electric Co., Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., Illinois Bell Telephone Co., Western Electric Co., and numerous others. The employment found for graduates is usually work as beginners at wages ranging from $15 to $25 weekly, and frequently is in positions for which mastery of respondent's course is not needed and for which no training is necessary. In such instances the completion of respondent's course is helpful merely to the extent of indicating sustained interest and enthusiasm on the part of the individual student for the particular field in which employment is sought.

PAR. 8. Respondent's representations have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true, and cause such portion of the purchasing public to purchase respondent's said course of instruction, and as a consequence thereof substantial trade has been diverted from competitors of respondent who do not misrepresent their courses of instruction, to the injury of such competitors and of the general public.

34 F. T. C.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence in support of and in opposition to the allegations of said complaint taken before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by counsel; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent, De Forest's Training, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of any course of study in television or electronics in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing directly or by implication that there are possibilities or opportunities for employment of students or graduates of respondent's course in the television field until substantial numbers of such students or graduates have been, and can be, employed directly in such field.

2. Representing directly or by implication that there are now, or in the near future will be, possibilities or opportunities for the employment of students or graduates of respondent's course in the television field until the commercial development of television is sufficiently advanced to assure immediate availability of such possibilities or opportunities.

Order

3. Misrepresenting in any manner the possibilities or opportunities for employment of students or graduates of respondent's course in the television field or any other branch of the electronics industry.

It is further ordered, That respondent shall, within 60 days after the service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

WILLIAM E. BOYER AND ROBERT J. BOYER, TRADING
AS BOYER BROTHERSCOMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 4475. Complaint, Mar. 25, 1941—Decision, Mar. 23, 1942*

Where two individuals, engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of assortments of candy and push cards, such as their "Round House" assortment, consisting of a number of uniform candy bars, together with a push card for use in their resale under a plan by which the purchaser received for the five cents paid 1, 2, 3, or 4 bars, in accordance with number selected by chance from card as explained thereon, and person making last push received a "large delicious candy surprise"—

Sold such assortments to wholesalers, jobbers and retailers, by whom they were exposed and sold to the purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid plan; and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their candy in accordance with such plan, under which the number of bars of candy received for the money paid was determined wholly by lot or chance, and there was involved sale of a chance to procure additional bars without additional cost; contrary to an established policy of the Government of the United States, and in competition with many who, unwilling to use a method involving chance or contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With the result that many persons were attracted by said sales plan and were thereby induced to buy and sell such individual's candy in preference to that of their said competitors, and that because of said game of chance, trade was unfairly diverted to them from their competitors aforesaid; to the substantial injury or competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that William E. Boyer and Robert J. Boyer, individually and trading as Boyer Brothers, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, William E. Boyer and Robert J. Boyer, are individuals trading as Boyer Bros., with their principal office and place of business located at 821 Seventeenth Street, Altoona, Pa. Respondents are now and for more than 8 years last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers. The respondents cause and have caused said candy when sold to be transported from their place of business in the city of Altoona, Pa., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now and for more than eight years last past, has been a course of trade by respondents in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents are and have been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and have sold to wholesale dealers and jobbers certain assortments of candy and cause and have caused push cards which are designed to be and are used with the said assortments of candy to be transported by means of respondents' salesmen and otherwise to the aforesaid wholesale dealers and jobbers. The wholesale dealers and jobbers aforesaid, in turn assemble the push cards and candy into one assortment and sell the same to the retail trade. Respondents distribute, and have distributed, various push cards for use in the sale and distribution of their candy to the consuming public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondents and is as follows:

This assortment consists of a number of bars of candy of uniform size and shape together with a device commonly called a push card. The push card contains 60 partially perforated disks and on the face of each of said disks is printed the word "push." Concealed within the said disks are numbers which are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a push or selection has been made and the selected disk pushed or separated from the card. The sales of respondents' candy by means of said push card are made in accordance with the above-described legend or instructions. Said bars of candy are allotted to customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legend or instruction. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one or more bars of candy for the amount of money paid is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondents sell and distribute and have sold and distributed various assortments of candy along with push cards involving a lot or chance feature but such assortments are similar to the one hereinabove described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who directly or indirectly purchase respondent's said candy expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondents thus supply to, and place in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their candy in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said sales plan or method in the sale of their candy and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the method and plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure additional bars of candy without additional cost. Many persons, firms and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their candy and the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondents because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to and does unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being done and has been done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on March 25, 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, William E. Boyer, an individual, and Robert J. Boyer, an individual, copartners trading as Boyer Bros., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of and in opposition to the allegations of said complaint were introduced before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (respondents not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

Boyer Bros., with their principal place of business located at 821 Seventeenth Street, Altoona, Pa. Respondents are now, and for a number of years last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of candy, including candy bars, package goods, and specialties to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and others.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their said business respondents cause, and have caused, candy, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in Altoona, Pa., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and for a number of years last past has been, a course of trade by respondents in such candy in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course of their said business respondents are, and have been, in competition with other individuals and partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, respondents sell, and have sold, to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and others certain assortments of candy, and have furnished, or caused to be furnished, in connection therewith push cards designed to be used with said assortments of candy in the resale thereof. One of said assortments, known as the "Round House" assortment, is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the methods used, as follows:

The "Round House" assortment consists of a number of bars of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a device commonly called a push card. The push card contains 60 partially perforated disks on the face of each of which is printed the word "Push." Within said disks are numbers which are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a push or selection has been made and the disk so selected has been pushed or separated from the card. Sales of respondents' candy by means of said push card are made in accordance with the above instructions and said candy is allotted to customers or purchasers in accordance with the above instructions. The fact as to whether a purchaser receives one or more bars of candy for the amount of money paid is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 4. Retail dealers who directly or indirectly purchase respondents' said candy expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their candy. The use by respondents of said sales plan or method in the sale of their candy, and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 5. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the method and plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure additional bars of candy without additional cost. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondents are unwilling to adopt and use a method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their candy and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods. As a result thereof, substantial injury is being done, and has been done, by respondents to competition in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony, and other evidence in support of and in opposition to the allegations of said complaint taken before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and brief in support of the complaint, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent, William E. Boyer, an individual, and respondent, Robert J. Boyer, an individual, jointly or severally, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy or other merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of such merchandise to the public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.
2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others push or pull cards, punch boards, or other lottery devices, either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punch boards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.
3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

FOLDING FURNITURE WORKS, INC., ALSO DOING BUSINESS AS COAST TO COAST DISTRIBUTORS AND MANUFACTURERS AND NATIONAL MERCANTILE REPORTERS

Docket 4611. Complaint, Oct. 9, 1941—Decision, Mar. 23, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in manufacture of children's cribs and bassinets; tables, and other furniture, and in interstate sale and distribution thereof from its factory and place of business in Wisconsin, and maintaining an address in Chicago for the receipt and dispatch of mail under the trade names "Coast to Coast Distributors and Manufacturers" and "National Mercantile Reporters"—

(a) Made such typical statements in circulars and by its salesmen as "An Annual Production Capacity of One-Hundred-Thousand Children's Cribs," "The largest manufacturer of low price children's cribs in the world," and the "Largest exclusive manufacturers of children's cribs and beds in the world"; and

(b) Represented that its business was so large and the quantity of its production such as to require warehouses and branch offices which it maintained at convenient locations throughout the United States;

The facts being that its annual production capacity was substantially less than that claimed above, it did not maintain offices at any other place than its Wisconsin place of business, and other representations, above set out, were false;

(c) Represented that "Coast to Coast Distributors and Manufacturers" was separate and distinct from, and in nowise connected with, the business conducted by it under its corporate name; and

(d) Represented that "National Mercantile Reporters" maintained an office and place of business in Chicago, Ill., and branch offices at various other points, preparing accurate reports on paying ability, unpaid accounts, and trade experience, and making collections of mercantile accounts for various manufacturers, and was an independent bona fide collection business in nowise connected with its business;

The facts being that said supposed separate businesses were, as noted above, mere trade names employed by it, the latter, i. e., National Mercantile Reporters, being used by it to force collection on accounts of merchandise shipped on "padded" orders;

(e) Made use of said latter trade name to collect from customers, through use of threats to sue and other intimidation, price of unordered goods which it shipped to them under its practice of "padding" orders by shipping to customers goods greatly in excess of the quantity ordered; advising said customers "under no circumstances to return the shipment or any part thereof as that would only mean an unnecessary expense and which you probably then would not care to assume"; and

(f) Made use of its trade name "Coast to Coast Distributors & Manufacturers" in securing repeat orders from customers who had had unsatisfactory dealings with it under its corporate name without disclosing to them its identity therewith;

With effect of causing a substantial portion of the purchasing public to believe that such representations were true, and, as a result of such mistaken belief, to purchase its said products; to their injury and that of the public:

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Folding Furniture Works, Inc., a corporation, also trading as Coast to Coast Distributors and Manufacturers and National Mercantile Reporters, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Folding Furniture Works, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Wisconsin, with its offices, factory, and principal place of business located at Portage and First Streets, Stevens Point, Wis. It also does business under the style and trade name of "Coast to Coast Distributors & Manufacturers," maintaining an address for the receipt and despatch of mail under this name in the Transportation Building, Chicago, Ill., and under the name "National Mercantile Reporters." Respondent is now, and has been for more than 2 years last past, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of children's cribs and bassinets, tables, and other furniture. Respondent causes, and at all times mentioned herein has caused, its said products, when sold, to be transported from its factory and place of business in Stevens Point, Wis., to purchasers thereof and dealers therein located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business in said commerce as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said products, respondent has circulated among prospective purchasers circulars containing representations as to the quality of its said products and the size of its plant and factory. Typical of the statements and representations made by respondent in said circulars and by its salesmen are the following:

On its letterheads and stationery the respondent has represented that it maintains offices and warehouses in the following cities: New York, N. Y.; Buffalo, N. Y.; St. Louis, Mo.; Dallas, Tex.; and San Francisco, Calif.; and under its trade name "Coast to Coast Distributors & Manufacturers" it has represented that it maintains offices and warehouses in New York, N. Y., and San Francisco, Calif.

Respondent, in doing business under the name of "National Mercantile Reporters," represents that National Mercantile Reporters is located in Consumers Building, 220 South State Street, Chicago, Ill. On a typical letterhead used by respondent under said name appears the following:

Complaint

PAR. 3. In the manner and by the means aforesaid, respondent represents and implies that it has an annual production capacity of over 100,000 cribs; that it is the largest manufacturer of low-priced children's cribs in the world, the largest exclusive manufacturer of children's cribs and beds in the world, the largest exclusive manufacturer of this line in the world, and the largest crib manufacturer in the world; that its business is so large and the quantity of its production such as to require and justify warehouses and branch offices which it maintains at convenient locations throughout the United States; that Coast to Coast Distributors and Manufacturers is separate and distinct from and in nowise connected with the business conducted by respondent under its corporate name; that National Mercantile Reporters maintains an office and place of business in Chicago, Ill., and branch offices at various other points, prepares accurate reports on paying ability, unpaid accounts, and trade experience, and makes collections of mercantile accounts for various manufacturers; and that National Mercantile Reporters is an independent bona fide collection business in nowise connected with the business of respondent.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact, the respondent does not have an annual production capacity of over 100,000 cribs, but its annual production capacity is substantially less than that number; it is not the largest manufacturer of low-priced children's cribs in the world, nor the largest exclusive manufacturer of children's cribs and beds in the world, nor the largest exclusive manufacturer of this line in the world, nor is it the largest crib manufacturer in the world; and it does not maintain branch offices or warehouses in New York, N. Y.; Buffalo, N. Y.; St. Louis, Mo.; Dallas, Tex.; or San Francisco, Calif.; or at any place other than Stevens Point, Wis. National Mercantile Reporters is not an independent bona fide collection business with a place of business in Chicago, Ill., and branch offices at other points throughout the United States, which prepares accurate reports on paying ability, unpaid accounts, and trade experience, and which makes commercial collections for manufacturers, but is simply a trade name used by respondent in the manner described in paragraph 5 hereof to force collection on accounts of merchandise shipped on "padded" orders.

PAR. 5. The respondent, both under its name Folding Furniture Works, Inc., and under its name Coast to Coast Distributors & Manufacturers, has accepted the practice of "padding" orders received from customers by shipping to such customers goods greatly in excess of the quantity ordered. Respondent attempts to, and does, under the name National Mercantile Reporters, collect from such customers the price of the unordered goods. In attempting to make and in making such collections, respondent uses threats to sue and other forms of intimidation, advising such customers to retain such unordered goods and "under no circumstances return the shipment or any part thereof, as that would only mean an unnecessary expense and which you probably then would not care to assume."

Respondent has also used its trade name Coast to Coast Distributors & Manufacturers in securing repeat orders from customers who have had unsatisfactory dealings with respondent under its corporate name, without disclosing to such customers the identity of corporate respondent and Coast to Coast Distributors & Manufacturers.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid acts, practices, and methods is deceptive and misleading and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public erroneously to believe that said statements and representations are true, and that respondent's business and the quantity of its production are much larger than they are in fact; that it maintains and operates branch offices or warehouses at various convenient points throughout the United States; that Coast to Coast Distributors & Manufacturers is in nowise connected with the business of respondent; that National Mercantile Reporters is an independent bona fide collection agency in nowise connected with the business of respondent; that National Mercantile Reporters has a place of business in Chicago, Ill., and maintains branch offices at various other points, prepares accurate reports on paying ability, unpaid accounts, and trade experience, and makes collections of mercantile accounts for various manufacturers.

As a result of the aforesaid mistaken beliefs, engendered as aforesaid, many members of the purchasing public have purchased respondent's said products in said commerce to their injury and to the injury of the public.

PAR 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on October 9, 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Folding Furniture Works, Inc., a corporation, also doing business as Coast to Coast Distributors & Manufacturers and National Mercantile Reporters, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On February 17, 1942, the respondent filed its answer in which answer it admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Folding Furniture Works, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Wisconsin, with its offices, factory, and principal place of business located at Portage and First Streets, Stevens Point, Wis. It also does business under the style and trade name of Coast to Coast Distributors and Manufacturers, maintaining an address for the receipt and dispatch of mail under this name in the Transportation Building, Chicago, Ill., and under the name National Mercantile Reporters. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 2 years last past, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of children's cribs and bassinets, tables, and other furniture. Respondent causes, and at all times mentioned herein has caused, its said products, when sold, to be transported from its factory and place of business in Stevens Point, Wis., to purchasers thereof and dealers therein located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent has also used its trade name Coast to Coast Distributors and Manufacturers in securing repeat orders from customers who have had unsatisfactory dealings with respondent under its corporate name, without disclosing to such customers the identity of corporate respondent and Coast to Coast Distributors and Manufacturers.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid acts, practices, and methods is deceptive and misleading and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public erroneously to believe that said statements and representations are true, and that respondent's business and the quantity of its production are much larger than they are in fact; that it maintains and operates branch offices or warehouses at various convenient points throughout the United States; that Coast to Coast Distributors & Manufacturers is in nowise connected with the business of respondent; that National Mercantile Reporters is an independent bona fide collection agency in nowise connected with the business of respondent; that National Mercantile Reporters has a place of business in Chicago, Ill., and maintains branch offices at various other points, prepares accurate reports on paying ability, unpaid accounts, and trade experience, and makes collections of mercantile accounts for various manufacturers.

As a result of the aforesaid mistaken beliefs, engendered as aforesaid, many members of the purchasing public have purchased respondent's said products in said commerce to their injury and to the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Folding Furniture Works, Inc., a corporation, also doing business as Coast to Coast Distributors & Manufacturers and as National Mercantile Reporters, and its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its children's cribs and bassinets, tables, and other furniture in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from.

1. Representing that it is the largest manufacturer of low-priced children's cribs in the world, or the largest exclusive manufacturer of children's cribs and beds in the world, or the largest crib manufacturers in the world, or the largest exclusive manufacturer of this line in the world, or that it has an annual production capacity of over 100,000 cribs, or any other quantity of cribs in excess of its actual annual production capacity.

2. Representing that its business is so large and the quantity of its production such as to require and justify warehouses and branch offices, or that it maintains warehouses and branch offices, at various points throughout the United States.

3. Representing that it maintains branch offices or warehouses in New York, N. Y.; Buffalo, N. Y.; St. Louis, Mo.; Dallas, Tex.; or San Francisco, Calif.; or at any other point, unless such warehouses and branch offices are actually maintained by respondent.

4. Representing that the business conducted under the name Coast to Coast Distributors & Manufacturers is separate and distinct from and not connected with the business conducted under respondent's corporate name, Folding Furniture Works, Inc., or dealing with customers under two or more names without disclosing to such customers that the business operated under the several names used is one and the same.

5. Representing that National Mercantile Reporters is an independent, bona fide collection agency not connected with the business of respondent or that it has a business in Chicago, Ill., which maintains branch offices at various other points, and prepares accurate reports on paying ability, unpaid accounts, and trade experience, and makes collections of mercantile accounts for various manufacturers.

6. Engaging in the practice of "padding" orders received from customers by shipping goods to such customers in excess of the quantity ordered or attempting to collect the price of such unordered goods by threats of suit or other forms of intimidation; or of advising such customers to retain such unordered goods because the return thereof will mean unnecessary expense to such customers.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
ASSOCIATED MOTOR OILS, INC., ALSO DOING BUSINESS
 UNDER THE NAME OF ASSOCIATED PRODUCTS COM-PANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
 OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4621. Complaint, Oct. 31, 1941—Decision, Mar. 23, 1942

Where the distinctive emblem of an Association—dating from 1923 and composed of practically all of the refiners of motor oils produced in the Pennsylvania oil fields and of a number of jobbers and distributors of such oils—featuring the words "Guaranteed 100% Pure Pennsylvania Oil" along with insignia or advertising matter signifying that distributor concerned was a member of the Association, together with the name "Pennsylvania" and derivations thereof, had acquired a definite secondary meaning to the purchasing public when used in connection with motor oils, indicating unadulterated oil produced from the Pennsylvania oil fields; and thereafter, a corporation engaged in blending and canning motor oils and greases, both under its own trade brands and under brands which it packaged for marketers and jobbers, and in competitive interstate sale and distribution of said products—

- (a) Represented that it controlled and operated a refinery, and that purchasers of its products were dealing directly with the manufacturer thereof through use on its labels and in its catalogs and other advertising material of its former corporate name in which were included words "Associated Refineries;"
- (b) Placed on some of its products an emblem bearing the legend "All motor oils bearing this seal Guaranteed 100% pure Pennsylvania Motor Oils. Spec. No. —," which, in size and shape, simulated that of aforesaid Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association, and shared with it as the most conspicuous words the statement "Guaranteed 100% pure Pennsylvania oil," substituting for the words "Permit No. —" on the Association emblem, the meaningless words "Spec. No. —;" and set forth on containers the representation that the contents were "100% pure Pennsylvania Motor Oil," or "Certified 100% pure Pennsylvania Motor Oil;" and
- (c) Made use of abbreviations of words coined from the word "Pennsylvania" in naming some of its motor oils and greases to suggest that they were made entirely from oil derived from the Pennsylvania fields;

Notwithstanding the fact it did not own, operate, or control an oil refinery, or refine and prepare virgin crude oil for use as a motor oil, or have equipment for such purpose, but was engaged solely in blending and canning the products concerned; its said motor oils and greases contained, to a substantial extent, oils and additives from other than the Pennsylvania oil fields, while some contained no Pennsylvania oil whatever; and it was not a member of said Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association, nor entitled to the use of the emblem thereof;

- (d) Placed on its cans and other containers the letters and numbers used by the Society of Automotive Engineers to indicate relative viscosity of motor oils, which, through long usage, had come to have a definite meaning in such connection;

Notwithstanding the fact the oil contained in aforesaid containers did not have the relative viscosity so indicated;

- (e) Represented in its catalogs and other advertising material, and on its cans and other containers, among other claims, that its "Zeroil Motor Oil" would flow more freely and lubricate more perfectly at lower temperatures than many other oils; that its "Three Star Penn Motor Oil" would not thin out and break down under service, but would hold its body under high temperatures and would not sludge; and that its "Penn-Durance Motor Oil" would not break down or thin out and was super-refined;

The facts being all oils constantly change their viscosity with changes of temperature, and will break down, thin out and sludge, and said representations were false;

- (f) Represented that use of its "Pensile-Vis," by virtue of scientific refining process employed, assured superior lubrication which would reduce friction, heat and drag with result of saving of power usually lost, and also brought about lower gas and oil consumption; that uniformity of its "Safety Seal" was such that each package was labeled with its "Certified 2000 mile money-back guarantee;" that regular use of its "Ultra-Penn" could be expected to give savings up to 50 percent in motor oil and 10 percent or more on gas, and also prevent one-third the usual wear on motor parts; and that constant use of its "Graf-O-Lyne" would double motor life and reduce the danger of scored cylinder walls and burnt bearings, insuring against former during the starting period;

The facts being that use of its "Ultra-Penn" motor oil, as compared with other standard motor oils, would not result in substantial saving; and none of said products would substantially increase motor life, or reduce the danger of scored cylinders more than other lubricants;

- (g) Set forth on cans and containers of many of the products concerned herein another emblem bearing the legend "Automotive Test Laboratories of America—Tested and Approved," thereby leading purchasing public to believe that its oils and greases had been approved by laboratories used extensively in the oil industry for testing motor oils as to their value, quality and efficacy in use;

Notwithstanding the fact said Automotive Test Laboratories was not a bona fide laboratory for the testing of automotive oils nor disinterested, and, further, ceased to function in 1938;

- (h) Falsely represented and implied, through aforesaid acts and practices that the motor oils and greases offered for sale and sold by it were superior to the ordinary standard types of oils and greases offered for sale by competitors;

Notwithstanding fact most of the standard competitive products of comparable type were equal in grade, quality, and performance to, and in many instances excelled, its said products:

Tendency, capacity and effect of which various acts, practices and methods were to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into believing that aforesaid representations were true, with result that many members of such public purchased its products, thereby unfairly diverting trade to it from its competitors, including many who do not in any manner misrepresent their business status or products; to the injury of said competitors and that of the public:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and its competitors, and con-

Before Mr. John P. Bramhall, trial examiner.

Mr. J. R. Phillips, Jr. for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Associated Motor Oils, Inc., a corporation, also doing business under the name of Associated Products Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provision of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Associated Motor Oils, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 2313 South LaSalle Street, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. For several years last past the respondent has been engaged in the business of blending and canning motor oils and greases, both directly under its own trade brands and under brands which it packages for marketers and jobbers, and in the sale and distribution of said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. Respondent causes said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent, previously engaged in said business under the corporate name Associated Refineries, Inc. On March 25, 1940, the corporate name of respondent was changed from Associated Refineries, Inc., to Associated Motor Oils, Inc.

In the course and conduct of its business, respondent has been and is in substantial competition with other corporations and with partnerships, firms and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of motor oils and greases in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among said competitors of the respondent are many who do not in any manner misrepresent their business status or the grade, quality or performance of their said products.

PAR. 2. The Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association is a non-profit association organized in 1923, and has been in continuous operation since that time. Its membership is composed of practically all of the refiners of motor oils produced in the Pennsylvania oil fields and a number of jobbers and distributors of such oils. The purpose of said Association is to establish higher standards of quality for oils produced in Pennsylvania, to advertise such oils, to protect the Pennsylvania oil industry against adulteration of its products and to prevent the sale of oils produced elsewhere as Pennsylvania products. The Association provides an emblem and advertising matter to be used, which signify that such distributor is a member of the Association. The emblem certifies that the oil sold under it is a pure, unadulterated oil produced from the Pennsylvania oil fields, and a bond is given by each member as a guarantee of these facts. The emblem is quite distinct in arrangement, shape, coloring and wording; the featured wording being "Guaranteed 100% Pure Pennsylvania Oil." As a result of the activity of the Association, the emblem and insignia referred to, as well as the name Pennsylvania and derivations thereof, have acquired a definite secondary meaning to the purchasing public when used in connection with motor oils; they indicate and suggest pure, unadulterated oil produced from the Pennsylvania oil fields, for which there exists a substantial public demand.

PAR. 3. Through the use on its labels and in its catalogs and other advertising material of the name Associated Refineries, Inc., either alone or in conjunction with respondent's present corporate name, Associated Motor Oils, Inc., respondent represents to members of the purchasing public, and the purchasing public is thereby led to believe, that respondent controls and operates a refinery wherein its said products are made or refined and that purchasers of its products are dealing directly with the manufacturer of said products.

A substantial part of the purchasing public prefer to purchase motor oil directly from the refiner of the oil, believing that in so doing they secure better products, prices, and other advantages not ordinarily procurable through dealers or other middlemen.

PAR. 4. On some of its products sold and distributed in commerce as aforesaid respondent has also caused to be placed an emblem bearing the following legend: "All Motor Oils Bearing this Seal Guaranteed 100% Pure Pennsylvania Motor Oils. Spec. No. —," superimposed upon an outline map of the State of Pennsylvania. The containers or cans also contain the representation that the contents are "100% Pure Pennsylvania Motor Oil" or "Certified 100% Pure Pennsylvania Motor Oil." In general size and shape respondent's emblem simulates the emblem of the Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association, and the most conspicuous words on both the "Guaranteed 100% Pure Pennsylvania Oil." In respondent's emblem appear the words, "Spec. No. —" and upon that of the Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association appears "Permit No. —." The words "Spec. No. —" appearing in respondent's emblem are of no significance and are meaningless.

In naming and designating some of its motor oils and greases, respondent uses abbreviations of and words coined from the name Pennsylvania in such a way as to suggest to the purchaser or prospective purchaser that they are made entirely of Pennsylvania oil.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact respondent does not own, operate or control an oil refinery, it does not refine and prepare virgin crude oil for use as motor oil nor does it have the proper and usual equipment for such purpose. Respondent is engaged solely in the blending and canning of motor oils and greases and its motor oils and greases contain to a substantial extent oils and additives other than those produced from the Pennsylvania oil fields, and some of said products contain no Pennsylvania oil whatever. Respondent is not a member of the Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association and is not entitled to use the emblem of said Association.

PAR. 6. The Society of Automotive Engineers has developed a system of numbers to indicate relative viscosity of motor oils and through long usage this system of letters and numbers has come to have a definite meaning when used in connection with motor oils. The higher numbers used in the system indicate heavier oils to be used in higher temperatures and in fast driving and the lower numbers a lighter oil to be used when the temperature is lower. There is a substantial demand on the part of the consuming public for oils with the true viscosity indicated by the said numbers.

Respondent places on its cans and other containers the letters and numbers used by the Society of Automotive Engineers to indicate relative viscosity, but the oil contained therein does not have the relative viscosity indicated by said letters and numbers.

PAR. 7. In the course and conduct of its business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its products, the respondent has made certain representations concerning its products, in its catalogs and other advertising material and on its oil cans and other containers, purporting to be descriptive of its products. The following representations, among others, have been used by the respondent:

Zeroll Motor Oil. Especially refined for sub-zero temperature. Zeroll will flow freely and lubricate perfectly at lower temperatures than any other motor oil known. Peps up sluggish motors in cold weather.

Three Star Penn Motor Oil will not thin out or break down under the hardest, toughest service. Holds its body under high temperatures. Will not sludge.

Penn-Durance Motor Oil. Super-refined and compounded from high grade bright stocks and neutral oils. Will not break down or thin out.

Pensile-Vis. The scientific refining process used in the manufacture of this oil produces a pure dewaxed heat-resisting stock, having a low cold test and a high flash and fire. Superior lubrication such as Pensile-Vis assures reduced friction, heat and drag so that power usually lost through these sources is saved. Therefore because of more scientific operation, brought about by the use of this pre-tested motor oil, lower gasoline and oil consumption results.

Safety Seal. Uniformity is such that we fearlessly label each package of Safety Seal with the certified 2,000 mile money-back guarantee. This guarantee is your definite assurance that this oil has been refined to meet the high standards required of any motor oil. Strict supervision and analysis in our modern laboratory such as is applied to all premium motor oils now on the market also protects you.

Ultra Penn. Regular use of Ultra Penn can be expected to give you savings up to 50 percent in motor oil alone. The better performance it brings about in your motor can save you 10 percent and more on gasoline. Besides these savings, about one third the usual wear on motor parts is prevented.

Graf-O-Lyne. Evens up minute abrasions and produces an oil having a high film strength and greater oiliness. If consistently used it will double motor life and reduce the danger of scored cylinder walls and burnt bearings. Insures against scored cylinders during the starting period.

PAR. 8. In truth and in fact, respondent's product "Zeroil" will not flow more freely and lubricate more perfectly at lower temperatures than many other oils. "Three Star Penn Motor Oil" will thin out and break down under service and will not hold its body under high temperatures, and will sludge. "Penn-Durance Motor Oil" will break down and thin out, and it is not super-refined. In fact, all oils constantly change their viscosity with changes of temperature and will break down and thin out and sludge. The use of respondent's product "Ultra Penn" motor oil, as compared with the use of other standard motor oils, will not result in a saving of up to 50 percent, or any substantial percentage, on motor oils, or result in a savings of 10 percent, or any other substantial percentage, of the usual wear on motor parts. None of respondent's said products, including the product "Graf-O-Lyne," will, if consistently used, double or substantially increase motor life; nor will such products reduce the danger of scored cylinders more so than other lubricants on the market.

PAR. 9. On the cans and containers of many of the oils and greases of respondent appears another emblem bearing the following legend:

Automotive Test Laboratories of America—Tested and Approved.

The purchasing public is thereby led to believe that respondent's oils and greases have been tested and approved by laboratories used extensively in the oil industry for the testing and approving of motor oils as to quality, value and efficacy in use.

Complaint

34 F. T. C.

In truth and in fact, the Automotive Test Laboratories of America is not a bona fide laboratory for the testing of automotive oils and its reports as such are not the result of bona fide tests and are not disinterested. Furthermore, this so-called laboratory ceased to function in about July 1938, but respondent has continued since that time to use such emblem.

PAR. 10. The use by the respondent of the emblem simulating the emblem of the Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association and the statements and representations thereon and the use of the abbreviations of the word Pennsylvania and words coined therefrom, as hereinabove alleged, are misleading and deceptive and cause the purchasing public to believe that the products in connection with which said emblem and said abbreviations and coined words are used are manufactured from Pennsylvania oil in their entirety, whereas in truth and in fact some of said products contain no Pennsylvania oil at all, while others contain some Pennsylvania oil and a substantial quantity of oil produced in States other than Pennsylvania.

Through all the aforesaid acts, practices and methods, the respondent falsely represents and implies that the motor oils and greases offered for sale and sold by it in said commerce are superior in grade, quality and performance to the ordinary standard types of oils and greases offered for sale by competitors. In truth and in fact, most standard competitive products, of comparative type, are equal in grade, quality and performance to, and in many instances excel, respondent's said products.

PAR. 11. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid acts, practices and methods has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public and cause it erroneously to believe that the aforesaid representations and implications are true, and that respondent owns, operates or controls a refinery where said products are produced, that said products are 100 percent pure Pennsylvania oil, that said products have been tested and approved by a recognized testing laboratory and that said products are superior in grade, quality and performance to ordinary standard oils and greases, of comparative type, and as a result of said erroneous and mistaken belief, induced as aforesaid, many members of the purchasing public have purchased respondents' said products, thereby unfairly diverting trade to the respondent from its competitors in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to the injury of said competitors and to the injury of the public.

PAR. 12. The aforesaid acts, practices and methods of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on October 31, 1941, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Associated Motor Oils, Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Associated Motor Oils, Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 2313 South LaSalle Street in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. For several years last past respondent has been engaged in the business of blending and canning motor oils and greases, both directly under its own trade brands and under brands which it packages for marketers and jobbers, and in the sale and distribution of said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. Respondent causes said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent previously engaged in the said business under the corporate name, Associated Refineries, Inc. On March 25, 1940, the corporate name of respondent was changed from Associated Refineries, Inc., to Associated Motor Oils, Inc.

In the course and conduct of its business, respondent has been and is in substantial competition with other corporations and with partnerships, firms, and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of motor oils and greases in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among said competitors of the respondent are many who do not in any manner misrepresent their business status or the grade, quality or performance of their said products.

PAR. 2. The Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association is a non-profit association organized in 1923, and has been in continuous operation since that time. Its membership is composed of practically all the refiners of motor oils produced in the Pennsylvania oil fields and a number of jobbers and distributors of such oils. The purpose of said association is to establish higher standards of quality for oils produced in the Pennsylvania oil fields, to advertise such oils, to protect the Pennsylvania oil industry against adulteration of its products and to prevent the sale of oils produced elsewhere as Pennsylvania products. The association provides an emblem and advertising matter to be used, which signify that such distributor is a member of the association. The emblem certifies that the oil sold under it is a pure unadulterated oil produced from the Pennsylvania oil fields, and a bond is given by each member as a guarantee of these facts. The emblem is quite distinct in arrangement, shape, coloring and wording, the featured wording being "Guaranteed 100% Pure Pennsylvania Oil." As a result of the activity of the association, the emblem and the insignia referred to, as well as the name "Pennsylvania" and derivations thereof, have acquired a definite secondary meaning to the purchasing public when used in connection with motor oils. They indicate and suggest pure unadulterated oil produced from the Pennsylvania oil fields, for which there exists a substantial public demand.

PAR. 3. Through the use on its labels and in its catalogues and other advertising material of the name Associated Refineries, Inc., either alone or in conjunction with respondent's present corporate name, Associated Motor Oils, Inc., respondent represents to members of the purchasing public, and the purchasing public is thereby led to believe, that respondent controls and operates a refinery wherein its said products are made or refined and that the purchasers of its products are dealing directly with the manufacturer of said products.

A substantial part of the purchasing public prefers to purchase motor oils directly from the refiner of the oil, believing that in so doing they secure better products, prices and other advantages not ordinarily procurable through dealers or other middlemen.

PAR. 4. On some of its products sold and distributed in commerce as aforesaid, respondent has also caused to be placed an emblem bearing the following legend, superimposed upon an outline map of the State of Pennsylvania. The containers or cans also contain the representation that the contents are "100% Pure Pennsylvania Motor Oil" or "Certified 100% Pure Pennsylvania Motor oil." In general size and shape respondent's emblem simulates the emblem of the Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association, and the most conspicuous words on both are "Guaranteed 100% Pure Pennsylvania Oil." On respondent's emblem appear the words "Spec. No. —" and on that of the Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association appears "Permit No. —." The words "Spec. No. —" appearing on respondent's emblem have no significance and are meaningless.

In naming and designating some of its motor oils and greases, respondent uses abbreviations of words coined from the name Pennsylvania in such a way as to suggest to the purchaser or prospective purchaser that they are made entirely of oil derived from the Pennsylvania oil fields.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact respondent does not own, operate or control an oil refinery, it does not refine and prepare virgin crude oil for use as motor oil, nor does it have the proper and usual equipment for such purpose. Respondent is engaged solely in the blending and canning of motor oils and greases and its motor oils and greases contain to a substantial extent oils and additives other than those produced from the Pennsylvania oil fields, and some of said products contain no Pennsylvania oil whatever. Respondent is not a member of the Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association and is not entitled to the use of the emblem of said Association.

PAR. 6. The Society of Automotive Engineers has developed a system of numbers to indicate relative viscosity of motor oils and through long usage this system of letters and numbers has come to have a definite meaning when used in connection with motor oils. The higher numbers used in the system indicate heavier oils to be used in higher temperatures and in fast driving, and the lower numbers of lighter oil to be used when the temperature is lower. There is a substantial demand on the part of the consuming public for oils with the true viscosity indicated by the said numbers.

Respondent places on its cans and other containers the letters and numbers used by the Society of Automotive Engineers to indicate relative viscosity, but the oil contained therein does not have the relative viscosity indicated by said letters and numbers.

PAR. 7. In the course and conduct of its business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its products, the respondent has made certain representations concerning its products in its catalogues and other advertising material and on its oil cans and other containers' purporting to be descriptive of its products. The following representations, among others, have been used by the respondent:

Zeroil Motor Oil. Especially refined for sub-zero temperatures. Zeroil will flow freely and lubricate perfectly at lower temperatures than any other motor oil known. Peps up sluggish motors in cold weather.

Three Star Penn Motor Oil will not thin out or break down under the hardest, toughest service. Holds its body under high temperatures. Will not sludge.

Penn-Durance Motor Oil. Super-refined and compounded from high grade bright stocks and neutral oils. Will not break down or thin out.

Pensile-Vis. The scientific refining process used in the manufacture of this oil reduces a pure dewaxed heat-resisting stock, having a low cold test and a high flash and fire. Superior lubrication such as Pensile-Vis assures reduced friction, heat and drag so that power usually lost through these sources is saved. Therefore because of more scientific operation brought about by the use of this pre-tested motor oil, lower gasoline and oil consumption results.

Safety Seal. Uniformity is such that we fearlessly label each package of Safety Seal with the certified 2,000 mile money-back guarantee. This guarantee is your definite assurance that this oil has been refined to meet the high standards required of any motor oil. Strict supervision and analysis in our modern laboratory such as is applied to all premium motor oils now on the market also protects you.

Ultra Penn. Regular use of Ultra Penn can be expected to give you savings up to 50 percent in motor oil alone. The better performance it brings about in your motor can save you 10 percent and more on gasoline. Besides these savings, about one third the usual wear on motor parts is prevented.

Graf-O-Lyne. Evens up minute abrasions and produces an oil having a high film strength and greater oilness. If consistently used it will double motor life and reduce the danger of scored cylinder walls and burnt bearings. Insures against scored cylinders during the starting period.

PAR. 8. In truth and in fact respondent's product "Zeroil" will not flow more freely and lubricate more perfectly in lower temperatures than many other oils. "Three Star Penn Motor Oil" will thin out and break down under service and will not hold its body under high temperatures, and will sludge. "Penn-Durance Motor Oil" will break down and thin out and it is not super-refined. In fact all oils consistently change their viscosity with changes of temperature and will break down and thin out and sludge. The use of respondent's product "Ultra Penn" motor oil, as compared with the use of other standard motor oils, will not result in a saving of up to 50 percent or any substantial percentage, on motor oils, or result in a saving of 10 percent, or any other substantial percentage, of the usual wear on motor parts. None of respondent's said products, including the product "Graf-O-Lyne," will, if consistently used, double or substantially increase motor life; nor, will such products reduce the danger of scored cylinders more than other lubricants on the market.

PAR. 9. On the cans and containers of many of the oils and greases of respondent appears another emblem bearing the following legend: "Automotive Test Laboratories of America—Tested and Approved." The purchasing public is thereby led to believe that respondent's oil and greases have been tested and approved by laboratories used extensively in the oil industry for the testing and approving of motor oils as to their value, quality, and efficacy in use.

In truth and in fact, the Automotive Test Laboratories of America is not a bona fide laboratory for the testing of automotive oils and its reports as such are not the result of bona fide tests and are not disinterested. Furthermore, this so-called laboratory ceased to function in about July 1938, but respondent has continued since that time to use such emblem.

PAR. 10. The use by the respondent of the emblem simulating the emblem of the Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association and the statements and representations thereon and the use of the abbreviations of the word "Pennsylvania" and words coined therefrom, as hereinabove set forth, are misleading and deceptive and cause the purchasing public to believe that the products in connection with which said emblem and said abbreviations and coined words are used are manufactured from oils derived from the Pennsylvania oil fields in their entirety, whereas in truth and in fact some of said products contain no Pennsylvania oil at all, while others contain some Pennsylvania oil and a substantial quantity of oil derived from fields other than the Pennsylvania oil fields.

Through all the aforesaid acts, practices and methods, the respondent falsely represents and implies that the motor oils and greases offered for sale and sold by it in said commerce are superior in grade, quality and performance to the ordinary standard types of oils and greases offered for sale by competitors. In truth and in fact, most of the standard competitive products, of comparative type, are equal in grade, quality and performance to, and in many instances excel, respondent's said products.

PAR. 11. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid acts, practices and methods has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public and cause it erroneously to believe that the aforesaid representations and implications are true, and that the respondent owns, operates or controls a refinery where said products are produced; that said products are 100 percent pure Pennsylvania oil; that said products have been tested and approved by a recognized testing laboratory and that said products are superior in grade, quality and performance to ordinary standard oils and greases of comparative type, and as a result of said erroneous and mistaken belief, induced as aforesaid, many members of the purchasing public have purchased said respondent's products, thereby unfairly diverting trade to the respondent from its competitors in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to the injury of said competitors and to the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act;

It is ordered, That the respondent, Associated Motor Oils, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its motor oils and greases, or any products of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or any other name, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or by implication, that Associated Motor Oils, Inc., owns, controls, or operates a refinery wherein its said products are made or refined.

2. The use of any design, insignia, or emblem in advertising or on containers, labels, or in any other manner, which simulates the emblem or insignia of the Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association.

3. The use of the word "Pennsylvania" or any abbreviation or colorable simulation thereof, or the use of an outline of the State of Pennsylvania in advertising or on containers, labels, or in any other manner to designate or describe any oil product which is not composed wholly of oil derived from the Pennsylvania oil fields, Provided, however, That in the case of a product composed in part of oil derived from the Pennsylvania oil fields and in part from oil derived from other oil fields, such word or abbreviation thereof may be used as descriptive of the proportion of the oil derived from the Pennsylvania oil fields if there are used in immediate connection and conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words or figures truthfully designating or describing the percentage of oil in said product which is derived from the Pennsylvania oil fields.

4. Representing, directly or by implication, that any oil product sold and distributed by the respondent which is not composed in its entirety of oils produced and having their origin in the Pennsylvania oil fields, is a pure Pennsylvania motor oil.

5. Representing, directly or by implication, that the respondent's oils and greases have been tested and approved by a disinterested laboratory as to quality, value and efficacy in use, unless said oils and greases have been tested and approved by a bona fide, disinterested automotive oils testing laboratory.

6. The use of any letters or numbers developed by the Society of Automotive Engineers which do not indicate the true, relative viscosity of respondent's products.

7. Representing, directly or by implication, that its product now designated "Zeroil Motor Oil," or any motor oil of similar character or quality, will flow more freely and lubricate more perfectly in lower temperatures than many other oils; or that its product now designated "Three Star Penn Motor Oil," or any motor oil of similar quality or character, will not thin out, break down, or sludge under service or that it will hold its body under high temperatures; or that its product now designated "Penn-Durance Motor Oil," or any motor oil of similar quality or character, will not break down or thin out, or that it is a super-refined oil; or that the use of its product now designated "Ultra Penn," or any motor oil of similar quality or character, as compared with other standard motor oils, will effect a saving up to 50 percent, or any substantial percentage, of motor oils, or result in a saving of 10 percent, or any substantial percentage of the usual wear on motor parts; or that its product now designated "Graf-O-Lyne," or any motor oil of similar quality or character, will consistently double, or to any substantial extent increase, motor life and reduce the danger of scored cylinders more than any other lubricants on the market.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
WALTER L. MILLER, TRADING AS WAMILL QUILT FACTORIES

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
 OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4108. Complaint, Apr. 25, 1940—Decision, Mar. 31, 1942

Where an individual, engaged in the manufacture and interstate sale and distribution of quilts, bed coverings, and other products; through agents soliciting orders, and through advertising folders, pamphlets, circulars post-cards, sales slips, and other literature—

- (a) Represented that the filling in his "Wamill Feather-Down Quilts" consisted of 50 percent goose down and 50 percent feather down, that the feathers therein were treated in a special manner which afforded complete and lifelong deodorization, and that such quilts were of extra large size, light weight, extra warm, free from lint, mothproof, and would last a lifetime, and would not slide;

The facts being "Feather-Down" was a misnomer, down being the undercoating of water fowl, consisting of light, fluffy filaments growing from one quill point without any quill shaft, of a softer and finer texture and fluffier than feathers, which consist of quill shafts and barbs growing therefrom; and its said "Feather-Down Quilt" were not, during the period concerned, filled with goose down and feather down in proportions set forth, but were filled with chicken feathers with only a slight trace of down; neither treatment in question nor any other applied to such quilts will afford lifelong deodorization and make them permanently mothproof, or do more than temporarily mask objectionable odors and temporarily repel moths; and other representations above set forth were also false;

- (b) Represented that the quoted price of $18.95 or two for $37.50 was an introductory or special price, limited as to time:

The facts being $18.95 or two for $37.50 was the regular and customary price at which he sold his said product; and he never sold them at $37.50;

- (c) Represented that he maintained a laboratory fully and properly equipped with facilities for experimenting with and testing said products, materials of which they were composed, and durability thereof; and that quilts in question were developed and tested under supervision and direction of experts, qualified by special education, training and experience, and had been tested and found satisfactory as to quality, workmanship, and durability of materials; and

- (d) Represented that he had been in business for over fifteen years and had sold such products to over 40,000 customers without having received a single complaint or expression of dissatisfaction;

The facts being he did not maintain any laboratory equipped with necessary facilities for experimenting with and testing his products, or the materials of which they were composed, and had not sold his products to over 40,000 customers;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that such statements were true, and of inducing it, because of such belief, to purchase substantial quantities of said products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.

Mr. Carrel F. Rhodes for the Commission.

Van Cise, Robinson & Charlton, of Denver, Colo., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Walter L. Miller, individually, and trading as Wamill Quilt Factories, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Walter L. Miller, is an individual operating and doing business under the trade name Wamill Quilt Factories, with his principal office and place of business located at 1026 Seventeenth Street, Denver, Colo.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the business of manufacturing selling and distributing quilts, comforts, bedding, and like products, under the trade name Wamill Quilt Factories. Said respondent now causes and for more than 1 year last past has caused his said products to be sold directly by mail and by agents through various advertising mediums and has caused the same when sold to be transported from his principal place of business in Denver, Colo., to purchasers thereof located at points in various States of the United States other than the aforesaid State of Colorado, and in the District of Columbia.

There is now and has been for more than 1 year last past a course in trade of said products so sold by respondent in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of the business set out and described in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, respondent, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of commodities offered for sale by him, has circulated by mail to purchasers and prospective customers throughout the United States advertising folders, pamphlets, circulars, post cards, sales slips, letters, and other literature and through agents, personally soliciting orders, statements, and representations concerning the value, “Down” means the under coating of water fowl, consisting of the light, fluffy filaments growing from one quill point, but without any quill shaft.

The 50 percent alleged feather down filling in respondent's said Wamill feather-down quilts—“50 percent finest Goose Down and 50 percent finest Feather down (quills out)”—is deceptive and misleading. There is no such thing as feather down. The phrase “quills out” shows that the said feather down is of an entirely different structure from down, which has no quill except a mere stub protruding from the skin of the fowl and carrying a tuft of filaments instead of veins composed of parallel ribs attached to a central quill. The word “feathers” as used in the quilt and bed padding industry means the natural feather of the goose, duck, chicken, and other birds or fowls, and there is no such classification recognized as feather-down.

Said statements and representations, together with similar statements and representations not herein set out in full, purport to be descriptive of respondent's Wamill feather-down quilts and like products and serve as representations on the part of the respondent to members of the purchasing public that said quilts were designed by specialists after extensive research work and experimentation; that the filling in said quilts is 50 percent goose down and 50 percent feather down; that the feathers in said quilts are treated in a special manner which affords complete and lifelong deodorization; that said quilts are of extra large size, light weight, extra warm, free from lint, mothproof, and will last a lifetime and will not slide; that $37.50 is the usual, regular, and customary retail price for said quilts; that the quoted price of $18.95 is an introductory or other special price limited as to time and is one-half the usual, regular, and customary selling price therefor; that respondent maintains a laboratory fully and properly equipped with facilities for experimenting with and testing said products and the materials of which they are composed and the durability thereof, and that they were supervised and tested by experts qualified by virtue of special education, training, and practice for developing and testing the same, and that said products have been tested as to quality, workmanship, and durability of the materials of which they are composed and have been found satisfactory; that respondent had been in business for over 15 years and had sold over 40,000 customers who had purchased and are using said quilts without a single complaint or dissatisfaction.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact, the statements and representations and prices quoted pursuant thereto, hereinabove set out, are deceptive, false, and misleading. Respondent does not maintain a laboratory fully and properly equipped with facilities for experimenting with and testing quilts and like products and the materials of which they are composed; respondent's quilts and other products and the materials of which they are composed are not developed, designed, and tested by specialists after extensive research work and experimentation; said quilts are not filled with 50 percent goose-down and 50 percent feather-down and are not extra large in size, light in weight, and extra warm; said quilts are not free from lint, are not mothproof and will not last a lifetime with ordinary use and care, and the statement that said quilts will not slide is untrue; said quilts have never had the usual, customary, and regular retail sales price of $37.50; the purported introductory half price, $18.95, or other special reduced price, is not, in fact, a reduced, introductory or special price reduced for a limited time. The price, $18.95, quoted as an alleged introductory one-half price or other special price for an alleged limited period of time is, in fact, the usual, regular, and customary retail selling price of said quilts at all times, and respondent has regularly and customarily sold said quilts to all purchasers for a period of several years at said price. Respondent has not been engaged in this business for more than 15 years, nor had he, at the date of the advertisement containing the representations with regard to more than 40,000 persons having purchased said quilts, sold that quantity of quilts or any quantity approaching that number.

PAR. 5. The use by respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to its products disseminated as aforesaid has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's quilts, comforts, bedding and like products.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on April 25, 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Walter L. Miller, individually and trading as Wamill Quilt Factories, charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On May 31, 1940, the respondent filed his answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondent, Walter L. Miller, individually, and trading as Wamill Quilt Factories, and Richard P. Whiteley, Assistant Chief Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of the facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs.

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed; and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Walter L. Miller is an individual trading and doing business under the trade name, Wamill Quilt Factories, with his principal office and place of business located at 1026 17th St., Denver, Colo.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than five years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of quilts, bed coverings, and other products. Respondent causes, and has caused, his quilts and other products, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Colorado to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and has maintained, and now maintains, a course of trade in said products in commerce in competition with other individuals, firms, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of the aforesaid business respondent has, by means of agents engaged in the solicitation of orders from purchasers or prospective purchasers and by means of advertising folders, pamphlets, circulars, post cards, sales slips, and other literature circulated by mail to such purchasers or prospective purchasers, made various false and misleading statements and representations concerning the value, price, composition, workmanship, and materials of the quilts, bed coverings, and other products sold by him. These statements and representations have been made for the purpose of inducing the purchase of respondent's said quilts, bed coverings, and other products. Among and typical of such statements and representations are the following:

Why Freeze Nights? Sleep warm under one Wamill Feather-Down Quilt. Warmest Quilt known to mankind. One Wamill Feather-Down Quilt is as warm as three wool blankets or four cotton quilts. Save Money on your bedding, have delivery made later if desired. We have a budget plan. * * *

Wamill Quilts are the final achievement of many years of Wamill Quilt Factories and subsidiary organizations.

Employ only men who are considered as authorities in the field. * * *

After carefully charting the ideal desires of our customers we work in our laboratories until we have developed the products which fully meet these qualifications.

* * * * *

Our policy greatly simplifies our marketing methods, save otherwise the extra cost of selling, we find out what you want, we develop it to perfection, manufacture it in economic volume, and we tell you about it.

Wamill Feather and Down Quilts—50% finest Goose Down, 50% finest Feather Down (quills out). Regular price $37.50; sale price, 2 for $37.50 * * * $37.50 for 2, $18.95 for one.

* * * Wamill Quilts are beyond comparison * * *. They cost less than ordinary bedding due to their long life. (With good care our quilts will last a lifetime.)

Research work * * * testing, surveying * * * for years was secretly carried on to find the elements that could possibly combine to form the ideal.

This work necessitated developing special manufacturing processes and machines; raw materials were tried, changed, discarded for others. Finally all these elements essential to the ideal quilt were developed.

Wamill quilts give you all these features—Extra large size; light weight; extra warmth; durability; non-slide; moth proof no lint; economy; long life; beauty * * *.

To protect against the disgusting odor common with ordinary feather bedding we treat all feathers in a special manner to afford complete and lifelong deodorization.

We have been engaged in manufacturing for over 15 years and enjoy the good will of thousands of satisfied customers.

There has been over 40 thousand customers who have purchased, and are using, Feather Quilts without a single complaint or dissatisfaction.

Respondent admits making the aforesaid statements and representations up to September 1, 1938.

PAR. 4. The statements quoted in the preceding paragraph purporting to be descriptive of respondent's products serve as representations by him to members of the purchasing public that "Wamill Feather-Down Quilts" were designed by specialists after extensive research work and experimentation; that the filling in said quilts consists of 50 percent goose-down and 50 percent feather-down; that the feathers in said quilts are treated in a special manner which affords complete and lifelong deodorization; that said quilts are of extra large size, light weight, extra warm, free from lint, moth proof, will last a lifetime, and will not slide; that $37.50 is the usual, regular, and customary price for said quilts; that the quoted price of $18.95, or two for $37.50, is an introductory or other special price limited as to time; that respondent maintains a laboratory fully and properly equipped with facilities for experimenting with and testing said products, the materials of which they are composed, and the durability thereof; that said quilts were developed and tested under the supervision and direction of experts qualified by virtue of special education, training, and experience for developing and testing such products; and that said quilts have been tested and found satisfactory as to quality, workmanship, and durability of the materials of which they are composed; and that respondent has been in business for over 15 years and has sold such quilts to over 40,000 customers without having received a single complaint or expression of dissatisfaction from any purchaser.

PAR. 5. "Feather-Down" is a misnomer, as the composition of down is different from that of feathers. Down is the undercoating of water fowl, consisting of light, fluffy filaments growing from one quill point without any quill shaft, and is of a softer and finer texture and more fluffy than feathers. Feathers consist of quill shafts and barbs growing therefrom. Respondent's "Wamill Feather-Down Quilts" were not, during the period prior to September 1938, filled with 50 percent finest goose-down and 50 percent finest feather-down, but were in fact filled with chicken feathers and contained only a slight trace of down. Respondent's said quilts will not last a lifetime, and they will not retain their original appearance for 25 years, nor will the sateen covering of said quilts retain its original sheen and appearance during the entire life of the quilts. Said quilts are not the world's warmest bed covering, nor are they free from lint. The treatment applied to said quilts by respondent, or any known treatment, will not afford lifelong deodorization and make them permanently moth-proof, but will only temporarily mask objectionable odors and temporarily repel moths. Respondent does not maintain any laboratory equipped with the necessary facilities for experimenting with and testing quilts, bed coverings, and other products or the materials of which they are composed.

During the period prior to September 1, 1938, the regular and customary price at which respondent sold "Wamill Feather-Down Quilts" in the usual and ordinary course of business was $18.95, or two for $37.50, and those prices, though represented as special or reduced prices offered for a limited time, were in fact respondent's regular prices and were not limited as to time. Respondent has never sold such quilts at the price of $37.50 and has not sold them to over 40,000 customers.

PAR. 6. The use by respondent of the false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to his products, as found above, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and induces, and has induced, members of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said products.

34 F. T. C.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondent herein and Richard P. Whiteley, Assistant Chief Counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent, Walter L. Miller, individually and trading as Wamill Quilt Factories, or trading under any other name or names, his agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of quilts, comforts, bedding or other products in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing as the customary or regular prices of quilts, bed coverings, or other products, prices which are in excess of the prices at which such products are regularly and customarily sold by respondent in the normal and usual course of business.

2. Representing that the prices at which respondent offers for sale and sells his products constitute a discount to the purchaser, or that such prices are special or reduced, or sale or introductory prices, or one-half price, or that such prices are applicable for a limited time only, when in fact such prices are the usual and customary prices at which respondent sells such products in the normal and usual course of business.

3. Using the word "down," either alone or in combination with any other word or words, to designate feathers or feather products other than the undercovering of water fowl as distinguished from feathers.

4. Representing that any of said products are composed of 50 per cent down, or any other percentage of down in excess of the actual percentage by volume of down in such product or products.

5. Representing that said quilts or other bed coverings are free from lint; or will last a lifetime, or any other period of time in excess of the time such products will last under ordinary conditions of use.

6. Representing that respondent has, or maintains a laboratory with the necessary facilities for experimenting with and testing quilts or bed coverings or the materials of which they are composed.

7. Representing that respondent has sold "Wamill Feather-Down Quilts," under that or any other name, to over 40,000 customers or any other number of customers in excess of the actual number of purchasers of such quilts.

8. Representing that respondent's quilts or other products, by reason of special treatments or otherwise, are rendered permanently mothproof or more than temporarily moth repellent.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

NATHAN E. HERZFELD AND SAUL S. HERZFELD, TRADING AND DOING BUSINESS UNDER THE NAME STEPHEN RUG MILLS¹

COMPLAINT, MODIFIED FINDINGS AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4222. Complaint, Aug. 6, 1940—Decision, Mar. 31, 1942

Where two individuals engaged in the importation and competitive interstate distribution and sale of rugs to wholesale and retail dealers—

- (a) Used the word "Bombay" to designate certain rugs which closely resembled true Orientals, and word "Manchu" to designate rugs which closely resembled true Chinese Orientals, in invoices and other references to said rugs in sale to dealers, and on labels attached thereto, together with depiction of an Oriental scene, and, on other labels set forth inadequate and contradictory qualification "Made in Belgium" or "Made in Italy";

Notwithstanding fact rugs thus designated were not, as thus suggested, made in Bombay, India, or in China, and were not true Oriental or Chinese Oriental rugs, as generally understood, made by hand in the Orient and more particularly southwestern Asia, of pleasing texture and of original and beautiful design, with pile of wool or silk and wool, and threads individually knotted in a special manner, but, while so closely resembling Orientals as to be indistinguishable therefrom by a large portion of the purchasing public, were made on power looms in Belgium and Italy of cotton or jute, or both;

- (b) Represented that certain of their rugs were in all respects reproductions of true Chinese Oriental rugs through labels attached thereto upon which appeared the words, among others, "Chinese Ovalette Replica," together with an Oriental scene, along with other labels, "Made in Italy" or "Made in Belgium";

Notwithstanding fact rugs thus described were not exact copies of true Chinese Orientals in structure, method of manufacture or material, but merely simulated them;

¹ Original findings and order to cease and desist made as of January 7, 1942 (not published), were set aside by "Order Reopening Case for Amendment of Stipulation as to the Facts" which, made on March 9, 1942, was as follows:

This matter coming on to be heard by the Commission upon respondents' "Motion for an Order Amending and Amplifying the Record of this Proceeding" by incorporating in the Stipulation as to the Facts in this proceeding respondents' exhibits "A" to "II," inclusive, attached and annexed to said motion, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises.

It is ordered, That this case be, and the same hereby is, reopened for the purpose of amending and amplifying said Stipulation as to the Facts by incorporating therein and making a part thereof said exhibits "A" to "H," inclusive, attached and annexed to said motion.

It is further ordered, That the Findings as to the Facts and the Order to Cease and Desist issued herein on January 7, 1942, be, and the same hereby are, set aside.

It is further ordered, That respondents' said exhibits "A" to "H," inclusive, be incorporated in and made a part of said Stipulation as to the Facts.

Complaint

(c) Made use of name "New Bedford," widely known Massachusetts textile manufacturing center, to designate certain hooked rugs, in invoices to dealers and upon labels attached thereto, together with other labels reading "Made in Italy" or "Made in Belgium";

Notwithstanding fact the cheap rugs in question were of European and not of domestic manufacture; and

(d) Made use of words "Rug Mills" in their trade name, and on invoices, letterheads and other business stationery and literature accompanied said name by words "Importers and Wholesalers of Floor Covering";

The facts being that, while they had arrangements with certain European mills under which they designated design to be used exclusively in rugs made for them and also designated size, quantity, quality, and structure; had other arrangements under which they purchased all the raw material used by a certain mill operated wholly for them, and had a mortgage on all its looms, machines, etc., and a lease of its premises; had similar arrangements with 22 rug mills in China, and owned a substantial minority of the capital stock of a Pennsylvania rug manufacturer—thereby exercising a measure of control over certain mills which supplied them—said facts did not constitute them manufacturers or warrant use by them of words "Mills," and use of legend "Importers and Wholesalers," etc., was insufficient to correct erroneous impression thus caused;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the belief that aforesaid rugs were genuine Oriental or Chinese Oriental rugs or copies or reproductions thereof, or that they were of domestic rather than foreign manufacture, and to mislead and deceive a substantial number of dealers and members of the public in aforesaid respects and as to their business status as manufacturers—from whom a substantial number purchase in preference to wholesalers—and thereby cause such dealers and public to buy their products, and with effect of placing in the hands of dealers a means of misleading a substantial portion of the purchasing public, and of thereby diverting substantial trade unfairly to them from their competitors, many of whom do not misrepresent the nature or origin of their products or their business status:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. Randolph W. Branch for the Commission.

Mr. Leon Herzfeld, of New York City, for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Nathan E. Herzfeld and Saul S. Herzfeld, individuals, trading and doing business under the name Stephen Rug Mills, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Nathan E. Herzfeld and Saul S. Herzfeld, are individuals trading and doing business under the name of Stephen Rug Mills, and having an office and principal place of business at 135 Madison Avenue, city and State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and have been for more than two years last past, engaged in the business of importing, distributing, and selling rugs. In the course and conduct of their business respondents sell said rugs to various wholesale and retail dealers and cause them, when sold, to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of New York, to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said rugs in commerce between and among various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents are now, and have been at all times mentioned herein, in substantial competition with other partnerships and with firms, corporations and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of rugs in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among such competitors are many who do not misrepresent the nature of their products and the place or method of manufacture thereof, or their business status, and who do not furnish their dealer-customers with means or instrumentalities for deceiving the public.

PAR. 4. A substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public understands, and for many years has understood, Oriental rugs to be rugs made in the Orient, or more particularly in certain parts of southwestern Asia, by hand, of pleasing texture and original and beautiful design and having a pile of wool or silk and wool, the threads of which are individually knotted in a special manner. Such rugs are usually designated by names which are indicative of the Orient and Oriental origin and manufacture. A substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public understands, and for many years has understood, Chinese Oriental rugs to be rugs made in China, by hand, in the same manner and possessing the same qualities and characteristics as the Oriental rug. Both Oriental and Chinese Oriental rugs have been for many years, and still are, held in great public esteem because of their texture, beauty, durability, and other qualities, and by reason thereof there is a decided preference on the part of the purchasing public for such rugs.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said rugs, respondents have engaged in the practice of describing and designating certain of their rugs which closely resemble true Oriental and Chinese Oriental rugs in appearance by the names of "Bombay" and "Manchu." The names used by respondents connote places in India and China and have the capacity and tendency to, and do, create the mistaken and erroneous belief that the rugs so designated are made, respectively, at Bombay, India, and in China, by hand, and are in all respects, including materials, true Oriental or Chinese Oriental rugs. Respondents use the names "Bombay" and "Chinese" to designate the said rugs in invoices to dealers and in otherwise referring to the same in the sale thereof to dealers. To said rugs are firmly attached labels upon which the word "Manchu" or "Bombay" appears in connection with a depiction of an Oriental scene.

Respondents have also engaged in the practice of describing certain of their rugs, designated as "New Avalon," as being in all respects, including materials, reproductions and copies of true Chinese Oriental rugs by the use of the phrase "Chinese Ovalette Replica," which appears upon labels firmly attached to the said rugs in connection with a depiction of an Oriental scene.

All of said labels are plainly discernible to members of the purchasing public when said rugs are displayed for sale by retail dealers.

In truth and in fact, respondent's said "Bombay" and "Manchu" rugs are made on power looms in factories in Belgium and Italy. They are not made by hand, nor are the individual threads knotted in the distinctive manner of the true Oriental or Chinese Oriental rug. Said rugs are made of cotton or of jute or of the two combined. They do not possess all of the characteristics of the true Oriental or Chinese Oriental rug, but do in fact so closely resemble such rugs in appearance as to be indistinguishable from them by a large portion of the purchasing public, and are in consequence readily accepted as being true Oriental or Chinese Oriental rugs. The rugs described as "Chinese Ovalette Replicas" are not exact copies or reproductions of true Chinese Orientals in structure, method of manufacture or material, but merely simulate them in appearance.

PAR. 6. The manufacture of hooked rugs has been carried on in this country since early in its Colonial history and was one of the early forms of artistic expression of the early settlers. Hooked rugs always have been and still are generally regarded as being a distinctively American product.

34 F. T. C.

PAR. 7. In the course and conduct of their business and for the purpose of inducing the sale of certain of their rugs, respondents have engaged in the practice of describing and designating certain of their hooked rugs by the name "New Bedford." Said name carries so definite an American connotation as to have the tendency and capacity to create the mistaken and erroneous belief that the rugs so designated were made in the United States. Respondents used said name to designate said rugs in invoices to dealers, and also caused labels bearing the said name to be securely attached to the said rugs so as to be plainly discernible to the purchasing public when such rugs are displayed for sale by retail dealers. In truth and in fact, the rugs were made in Europe.

PAR. 8. In the course and conduct of their business and in furtherance thereof, respondents have represented, and now represent, themselves to be the manufacturers of the rugs offered for sale and sold by them. This representation is made through the use of the words "Rug Mills" in their firm or trade name, which appears on their letterheads and invoices, and through other means.

In truth and in fact, respondents do not manufacture the rugs which they offer for sale and sell nor have they during any of the times mentioned herein made or manufactured such rugs. Respondents do not, and have not during any of such times, owned or operated or directly and absolutely controlled any mill or factory in which rugs are made or manufactured.

PAR. 9. There is a substantial portion of those who purchase rugs for resale which prefers to purchase direct from the manufacturer, believing that advantages over purchases from those who are not manufacturers in price and in other respects may be obtained.

PAR. 10. The use by respondents of the designations and representations, as set forth herein, in connection with the offering for sale and sale of their said rugs, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations and designations are true and correct, and to induce them to purchase said rugs on account thereof. Respondent's said acts and practices have the effect of placing in the hands of retail dealers who purchase said rugs and resell the same to the purchasing public, means and instrumentalities of misleading and deceiving the public in the particulars aforesaid.

As a result of respondents' said acts and practices, trade has been unfairly diverted to respondents from their competitors engaged in the sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of rugs of various kinds, including genuine Oriental, Chinese Oriental and domestic rugs, who truthfully represent their products as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 11. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, MODIFIED FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 6, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Nathan E. Herzfeld and Saul S. Herzfeld, individuals trading and doing business under the name Stephen Rug Mills, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On August 24, 1940, the respondents filed their answer to the complaint. Thereafter a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts executed by the respondents through their counsel, and Richard P. Whiteley, assistant chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, might be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto, and that the Commission might proceed upon such statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts (including inferences which it might draw from the stipulated facts) and its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for hearing before the Commission on the complaint, answer and stipulation, the stipulation having been approved and accepted by the Commission and entered of record, and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being fully advised in the premises, on January 7, 1942, issued and subsequently served upon the respondents its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and its order requiring the respondents to cease and desist from the practice charged in the complaint.

Findings

Thereafter, on February 14, 1942, the respondents, through their attorney, filed with the Commission a motion requesting that the aforesaid stipulation as to the facts be amended and amplified by adding thereto as exhibits, certain samples of business stationery used by respondents, and on March 9, 1942, the Commission, in response to such motion, entered its order setting aside its findings as to the facts and order to cease and desist issued on January 7, 1942, and reopening the proceeding for the purpose of amending and amplifying the stipulation as to the facts as requested by respondents.

Thereafter the proceeding again came on for consideration by the Commission on the record as set forth above, including the amended and amplified stipulation as to the facts, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its modified findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, Nathan E. Herzfeld and Saul S. Herzfeld, are individuals trading and doing business under the name of Stephen Rug Mills, with their office and principal place of business at 135 Madison Avenue, New York City, N. Y.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for more than 9 years last past have been, engaged in the business of importing, distributing, and selling rugs. In the course and conduct of their business respondents sell their rugs to various wholesale and retail dealers and cause their rugs, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their rugs in commerce among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business respondents are now, and at all times mentioned herein have been, in substantial competition with other individuals, partnerships, and firms, and with corporations, engaged in the sale and distribution of rugs in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among such competitors are many who do not misrepresent the nature of their products or the place or method of manufacture thereof or their business status, and who do not furnish their dealer-customers with means or instrumentalities for deceiving the public.

PAR. 4. A substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public understands, and for many years has understood, Oriental rugs to be rugs made in the Orient or more particularly in certain parts of southwestern Asia, by hand, of pleasing texture and original and beautiful design, and having a pile of wool or silk and wool, the threads of which are individually knotted in a special manner. Such rugs are usually designated by names which are indicative of the Orient and Oriental origin and manufacture. A substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public understands, and for many years has understood, Chinese Oriental rugs to be rugs made in China, by hand, in the same manner and possessing the same qualities and characteristics as the Oriental rug. Such Oriental and Chinese Oriental rugs have been for many years and still are held in great public esteem because of their texture, beauty, durability, and other qualities, and by reason thereof there is a substantial demand on the part of the purchasing public for such rugs.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their business respondents have engaged in the practice of describing and designating certain of their rugs which closely resemble true Oriental and Chinese Oriental rugs in appearance, by the names "Bombay" and "Manchu." The names used by respondents connote places in India and China and have had the capacity and tendency to create the belief that the rugs so designated were made respectively at Bombay, India, and in China, by hand, and were in all respects, including materials, true Oriental or Chinese Oriental rugs. Respondents used the names "Bombay" and "Chinese" to designate these rugs in invoices to dealers and in otherwise referring to the rugs in the sale thereof to dealers. To these rugs were firmly attached labels approximately 4 by $3\frac{3}{8}$ inches upon which the word "Bombay" or "Manchu" appeared in letters approximately $\frac{3}{8}$ inch in height, in connection with a depiction of an Oriental scene. Also sewn to the rugs were other labels upon which the words "Made in Belgium" or "Made in Italy" appeared in letters not less than $\frac{1}{4}$ inch in height.

Respondents have also engaged in the practice of representing that certain of their rugs were in all respects reproductions or copies of true Chinese Oriental rugs. Such representation was made by means of labels firmly attached to such rugs, and approximately $4\frac{3}{4}$ by $2\frac{3}{4}$ inches, upon which appeared the words "New Avalon" in letters $\frac{3}{8}$ inch in height and the words "Chinese Ovalette Replica" in letters $\frac{5}{32}$ inch in height, in connection with a depiction of an Oriental scene. Also sewn to these rugs were other labels upon which the words "Made in Italy" or "Made in Belgium" appeared in letters not less than $\frac{1}{4}$ inch in height.

Respondents' "Bombay" and "Manchu" rugs were in fact made on power looms in factories in Belgium and Italy. They were not made by hand, nor were the individual threads knotted in the distinctive manner of the true Oriental or Chinese Oriental rug. The rugs were made of cotton or of jute or of the two combined. They did not possess all of the characteristics of the true Oriental or Chinese Oriental rug, but did in fact so closely resemble such rugs in appearance as to be indistinguishable from them by a large portion of the purchasing public, and were in consequence readily accepted as being true Oriental or Chinese Oriental rugs. The rugs described as "Chinese Ovalette Replicas" were not exact copies or reproductions of true Chinese Orientals in structure, method of manufacture or material but merely simulated them in appearance.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of their business in hooked rugs, respondents have engaged in the practice of describing and designating such rugs by the name "New Bedford." Respondents used this name to designate such rugs in invoices to dealers and also caused labels bearing the name to be securely attached to the rugs. Such labels were approximately 4 inches by $3\frac{3}{8}$ inches and upon them appeared the words "New Bedford" in letters $\frac{5}{16}$ inch in height. Also sewn to the rugs were other labels upon which the words "Made in Italy" or "Made in Belgium" appeared in letters not less than $\frac{1}{4}$ inch in height.

New Bedford is a city in Massachusetts widely known in the United States as a textile manufacturing center.

A questionnaire was sent by the Federal Trade Commission to various members of the public in Greater New York whose names were selected at random from telephone directories. The pertinent portion of this questionnaire read as follows:

If hooked rugs were identified or described to you by the names given below, would you or would you not, from those names, form any opinion or gain any impression as to the country where they were made? If you would not, please write "No" on the "Answer" line; otherwise please insert the name of the country. It is requested that you give your answer as to each of the names.

"New Bedford."

Answer.

Thirty-eight of these persons answered the questionnaire. As to the name "New Bedford" 16 answered that they would not form any opinion or gain any impression from this name as to the country of manufacture of the rugs, while 22 answered that they would form the opinion or gain the impression that the rugs were of domestic manufacture.

The stipulation provided that these answers to the questionnaire may be considered by the Commission to the same extent and to the same effect as if the members of the public who gave the answers had appeared as witnesses in this proceeding and had answered the same question in the same manner.

The rugs designated by respondents as "New Bedford" were in fact made in Europe.

PAR. 7. The trade name used by respondents includes the words "Rug Mills." On respondents' letterheads, invoices, and other business stationery and literature the trade name is accompanied by the words "Importers and Wholesalers of Floor Covering."

A questionnaire was sent by the Commission to a number of retail rug dealers in several of the eastern States of the United States, the names of such dealers being taken at random from the classified sections of the telephone directories. The questions contained in the questionnaire are set forth below, together with tabulations of the answers received to the questions:

Question. In buying cheap rugs (not Orientals) do you or do you not have any general preference for purchasing from manufacturers over purchasing from wholesalers?

Answer. Yes—16. No—18. Preference for wholesaler—5.

Question. A concern is known as the "XYZ Rug Mills." Would you or would you not conclude from this name that this concern actually owned a rug mill?

Answer. Yes—34. No—7.

Question. On this concern's stationery, etc., under the name "XYZ Rug Mills" appears "Importers and Wholesalers of Floor Covering." Would you or would you not conclude from this that its business was exclusively that of importers and wholesalers?

Answer. Yes—30. No—8.

The rugs sold by respondents come within the general category of "cheap," nonoriental rugs.

Of the 34 dealers to whom the words "Rug Mills" would indicate ownership of a rug mill, 26 would be induced by the addition of "Importers and Wholesalers of Floor Covering" to believe that the concern was exclusively an importer and wholesaler.

The stipulation provided that the answers to the foregoing questions may be considered by the Commission to the same extent and to the same effect as if the dealers who gave the answers had appeared as witnesses in this proceeding and had answered the same questions in the same manner as indicated above.

PAR. 8. The facts set forth by respondents as warranting the use in their trade name of the word "Mills" are as follows:

For some time prior to April 1940 respondents had arrangements with certain mills in Europe under which respondents designated the designs to be used by such mills in rugs manufactured for respondents, which designs were exclusively respondents'. Respondents also designated the size and quantity of rugs manufactured for them by such mills, as well as the quality and structure of the rugs. No one other than respondents could obtain these rugs, and respondents had the exclusive disposition of the entire output of the mills making these rugs.

Since about June 1940 respondents have had arrangements with a certain mill under which respondents purchase and pay for all of the raw materials used by the mill. The mill operates wholly for the respondents and the only rugs made by the mill are made at respondents' orders. The size, quantity, color, weight and quality of the rugs and carpets made by the mill are designated by the respondents, and the mill cannot sell rugs or carpets to anyone other than respondents. Respondents have had a mortgage on all of the looms, machinery, equipment and raw materials of this mill and on the lease of the premises on which the mill is located.

Since about November 1940 respondents have had arrangements with some 22 rug mills in China under which respondents purchase and pay for all of the raw materials used by the mills. The mills operate wholly for respondents and the only rugs made by the mills are at respondents' orders. The size, quantity, color, weight and quality of the rugs made by these mills are designated by respondents, and the mills cannot sell rugs to anyone other than respondents.

Since sometime prior to June 1940 respondents have owned a substantial minority portion of the capital stock of a Pennsylvania corporation known as the Crown Products Corporation, which manufactures rug cushions and kindred articles incidental to the use of rugs, and one of the respondents (representing both respondents) is a director in this corporation.

PAR. 9. While these facts disclose that the respondents have exercised and are now exercising a measure of control over certain mills which supply them with rugs, the Commission is of the opinion and finds that these facts do not constitute respondents manufacturers or warrant the use by respondents of the word "Mills" in their trade name. Respondents have never owned any rug mill, nor have they operated any mill within the real meaning of the term. To a substantial number of dealers the use by respondents of the word "Mills" in their trade name constitutes a representation that respondents actually own a rug mill. There is a preference on the part of a substantial number of dealers for purchasing from manufacturers rather than from wholesalers. The practice of respondents in accompanying their trade name with the legend "Importers and Wholesalers of Floor Covering" is insufficient, in a substantial number of cases, to correct the erroneous impression conveyed by the use of the word "Mills" in the trade name.

PAR. 10. The Commission further finds that the use by respondents of the terms "Bombay," "Manchu" and "Chinese," and other terms of a similar nature, to designate certain of their rugs, particularly when such terms are accompanied by a depiction of an Oriental scene, has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that the rugs so designated are genuine Oriental or Chinese Oriental rugs. Likewise, the use by respondents of the legend "Chinese Oval-ette Replica," together with a depiction of an Oriental scene, to designate certain of their rugs, has the tendency and capacity to cause a substantial portion of the purchasing public to believe that the rugs so designated are copies or reproductions of genuine Chinese Oriental rugs in all respects, including material, structure, and method of manufacture.

The use by the respondents of the words "New Bedford" to designate and describe certain of their rugs has the tendency and capacity to cause a substantial portion of the purchasing public to believe that the rugs so designated are of domestic rather than foreign manufacture.

The legends "Made in Belgium" and "Made in Italy," which appear on other labels attached to respondents' rugs, are insufficient to correct the misleading impression conveyed by the terms and legends referred to above. These legends, being wholly inconsistent with respondents' representations with respect to the nature and origin of their rugs, are incapable of properly qualifying such representations so as to avoid their misleading effect upon the public. A prospective purchaser could believe one but not both of the conflicting representations.

PAR. 11. The Commission therefore finds that the acts and practices of the respondents as herein described have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial number of dealers and members of the purchasing public with respect to the nature and origin of respondents' products, and with respect to respondents' business status, and to cause such dealers and such portion of the public to purchase respondents' products as a result of the erroneous and mistaken belief so engendered. Such acts and practices of the respondents have the effect also of placing in the hands of dealers a means and instrumentality whereby such dealers may be enabled to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public. In consequence thereof substantial trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors, many of whom do not misrepresent the nature or origin of their products or their business status.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondents, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondents and Richard P. Whiteley, assistant chief counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondents findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding (such stipulation having subsequently been amplified upon motion of the respondents), and the Commission having made its modified findings as to the facts and conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Nathan E. Herzfeld and Saul S. Herzfeld, individually and trading as Stephen Rug Mills, or trading under any other name, their representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of their rugs in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word "Bombay," or any other word indicative of the Orient, or any pictorial representation of a typically Oriental scene, to designate or describe rugs which are not in fact made in the Orient and which do not possess all of the essential characteristics of Oriental rugs.

2. Using the words "Manchu" or "Chinese," or any other words indicative of Chinese origin, or any pictorial representation of a typically Oriental or Chinese scene, to designate or describe rugs which are not in fact made in China and which do not possess all of the essential characteristics of Chinese Oriental rugs.

Order

3. Using the word "Replica," or any other word of similar import, to designate or describe rugs which are not in fact reproductions in all respects of the type named, including material.

4. Using the words "New Bedford," or any other distinctively American name, to designate or describe rugs which are not in fact made in the United States.

5. Using the word "Mills" as a part of respondents' trade name, or otherwise representing that respondents manufacture the rugs sold by them.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

STANLEY LABORATORIES, INC., EDWARD A. BACHMAN TRADING AS STILLMAN PRODUCTS COMPANY AND AS STANLEY LABORATORIESCOMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF
SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 4130. Complaint, May 7, 1940—Decision, April 1, 1942*

Where a corporation and its president, who controlled and directed its business activities, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of drug products for feminine hygiene; in advertisements of their "M. D. Medicated Douche Powder" through the mails, in newspapers, circulars, leaflets, folders, pamphlets, and other advertising literature; directly and by implication—

- (a) Represented that said powder was a recent development of scientific research which was endorsed by leading physicians and surgeons; that it was an antiseptic and germicide which would combat any form of bacteria; and that it had competent remedial qualities for use on cuts, sores, and burns, and would relieve fatigue and annoying discharge sometimes connected therewith; and
- (b) Represented that said preparation constituted a contraceptive and a prophylactic against disease through use of such descriptive words and phrases as "dependable," "insure—personal hygiene," "dependable safeguard," "reliable safeguard," and "effective, reliable antiseptic powder" in referring thereto;

When in fact said preparation was neither such a recent development, nor thus endorsed; while the ingredient oxyquinolin sulphate, commonly used in such powders, has a spermatocidal action in direct concentration, under conditions of use the proportion thereof was so small as to have little or no value; the ingredient phenol under conditions of use would have no germicidal properties, but solely an antiseptic effect; use of the two together in sufficient concentration to act as a germicide would have a tendency to irritate and damage the tissues; and while laboratory tests indicated that the product contained a bacteriostatic, or germ-inhibiting, substance and had antiseptic properties, under the dissimilar conditions of use the value thereof was limited to that of a mild antiseptic; product had little or no therapeutic value in treatment of cuts, sores, and burns; use as a douche had no value in relieving fatigue, and would not affect the cause of any discharge; it did not constitute a preventative against conception in excess of the mechanical effect of flushing the vagina, and was not a prophylactic against disease; and

Where said corporation and individual—

- (c) Represented, through use of the term "Laboratories" in their corporate and trade names, and in their advertising material, that they owned, operated, and controlled a laboratory equipped for compounding medicinal preparations and for research in connection therewith;

The facts being they were merely distributors of products compounded and manufactured by other concerns; and

(d) Falsely represented that their products were either prescribed or compounded by physicians or bore the endorsement or recommendation of the medical profession by use of the letters "M. D." in designating their product "M. D. Medicated Douche Powder" and by including in advertising thereof the likeness of nurses and doctors, with a red cross; tendency and capacity of which was to cause the purchasing public to believe that such products were endorsed and recommended by the medical profession or by the American Red Cross.

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that such statements were true, thereby causing it, because of such mistaken belief, to purchase said products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves and Mr. Charles A. Vilas, trial examiners.

Mr. R. P. Bellinger and Mr. Carrel F. Rhodes for the Commission.

Mr. James J. Hayden, of Washington, D. C., and Mr. Leo Levinson, of Portland, Oreg., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Stanley Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, and Edward A. Bachman, an individual trading as Stillman Products Co. and as Stanley Laboratories, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues this complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Stanley Laboratories, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Oregon, with its principal place of business located in Portland, Oreg. Respondent, Edward A. Bachman, is an individual, trading as Stillman Products Co. and as Stanley Laboratories, who also has his office and principal place of business in Portland, Oreg., in connection with and located at the same address as the corporate respondent above named. The respondent Edward A. Bachman is also president of the corporate respondent Stanley Laboratories, Inc., and controls and directs the business activities, sales policies and practices of the corporate respondent.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing certain drug products for feminine hygiene.

Respondents designate their said products so sold and distributed as "M. D. Medicated Douche Powder," "Contra-Jel," "Femeze," and "M. D. Supercones."

Respondents cause said products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in Oregon to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said products, by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said products; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said products, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers, and by circulars, leaflets, folders, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

1. As to M. D. Medicated Douche Powder:

A VALUABLE PRESCRIPTION FOR DISCRIMINATING WOMEN * * * produced for discriminating modern women who desire a sanitary, and dependable douche to insure their personal hygiene. It is but recently that scientific research has developed new and improved methods to safeguard the health and happiness of married women. Endorsed by physicians and surgeons. M. D. Medicated Douche Powder not only cleans the vagina, and soothes the delicate membrane tissue, but it has the added advantage of the protective action of oxyquinolin sulphate, a dependable safeguard. Because of its many other beneficial uses, "M. D." is also a very valuable household remedy * * * for cuts, sores and burns.

M. D. Medicated Douche Powder, endorsed by leading physicians and surgeons, is a germicide—soothing and cooling to delicate membranes with the addition of oxyquinolin sulphate—a reliable safeguard.

Medical science now answers the problems of millions of women with a truly effective, reliable antiseptic powder.

Effective in combatting any form of bacteria.

It relieves women of fatigue and the annoying discharge, often occasioned by all day standing.

Manufactured by Stanley Laboratories.

2. As to Contra-Jel:

Contra-Jel is the highest quality vaginal antiseptic in jelly form. Its consistency insures even distribution and prolonged contact with every part of the vaginal tract, and its protective action endures as long as it remains within the vagina * * *

Contra-Jel is a harmless, non-irritating, vaginal antiseptic and prophylactic * * * It is more convenient, sanitary and effective than are douches, tablets, capsules, or suppositories.

3. As to M. D. Supercones:

They are stable and do not lose their antiseptic strength * * * a powerful yet non-irritating antiseptic * * * M. D. Supercones remain in effective antiseptic contact for many hours * * * They are actually soothing and beneficial as well as antiseptic.

4. As to Femeze:

Femeze has been found to be a simple effective prescription affording relief for the functional pains and cramps which accompany menstruation * * * bringing relief in a short time by relaxing the contracted womb muscles, allowing them to react in a natural way. It does not merely deaden your nerves with drugs or narcotics to stop the pain. Femeze contains no narcotics.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations and others of similar import and meaning not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent directly and by implication:

1. That M. D. Medicated Douche Powder is a recent development of scientific research which is endorsed by leading physicians and surgeons; that said preparation is a competent and effective contraceptive; that said preparation is an antiseptic and germicide which will combat any form of bacteria; that such preparation has competent remedial qualities for use on cuts, sores, and burns, and that said preparation will relieve fatigue and annoying discharge connected with the menstrual period.

2. That Contra-Jel gives immunity from pregnancy, protection from venereal disease, and has germicidal and antiseptic properties.

3. That M. D. Supercones constitute an effective contraceptive which has powerful antiseptic properties.

4. That Femeze is an effective treatment for functional pains and cramps which accompany menstruation and that said preparation will relax the womb muscles, allowing them to react in a natural way.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact none of said products distributed by the respondents constitute competent or effective contraceptives and will not give immunity from pregnancy. None of said products constitute an adequate prophylactic and will not give protection from venereal diseases.

The product M. D. Medicated Douche Powder is not a recent development of scientific research and is not endorsed by leading physicians or surgeons. Under the conditions of use recommended by the respondents this product is not a germicide and is not a reliable antiseptic effective in combatting any form of bacteria. This preparation would have very little therapeutic value in the treatment of cuts, sores, and burns generally. Such preparation has no therapeutic value in relieving fatigue or discharge connected with the menstrual period.

Respondents' preparation Femeze is not an effective treatment for functional pains and cramps in excess of possible lessening of sensitivity to pain which might accompany menstruation. There is no scientific basis for the representation that this preparation will relieve menstrual pain by relaxing the womb muscles and allowing them to react in a natural way, and respondents' said preparation will not accomplish such results.

Respondents' preparations, Contra-Jel and M. D. Supercones do not have germicidal properties nor do they constitute powerful antiseptics as the antiseptic properties of these preparations are comparatively mild.

PAR. 6. In addition to the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, the respondents make false, deceptive, and misleading representations to the effect that their products are either prescribed or compounded by physicians or that they bear the endorsement or recommendation of the medical profession by means of the use of the letters "M. D." in designating their products M. D. Medicated Douche Powder and M. D. Supercones and by including therewith in advertising the likeness of nurses and doctors with the figure of a cross in simulation of the Red Cross emblem.

In truth and in fact said products are not prescribed or compounded by a physician or physicians and they have not received the endorsement or recommendation of the medical profession.

PAR. 7. In addition to the above representations, the respondents, by the use of the term "laboratories" in their corporate and trade names, and in their advertising literature, also represent that they own, operate, and control a laboratory equipped for the compounding of medicinal preparations and for research in connection therewith. In truth and in fact the respondents neither own nor control any factory, plant, or laboratory wherein their medicinal preparations are compounded or wherein any research activities are conducted, but instead the respondents are merely distributors of products compounded and manufactured by other concerns.

PAR. 8. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and causes a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken beliefs, to purchase respondents' said preparations.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on May 7 A. D. 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Stanley Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, and Edward A. Bachman, an individual trading as Stillman Products Company and as Stanley Laboratories, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of said complaint were introduced by R. P. Bellinger and Carrel F. Rhodes, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by James J. Hayden and Leo Levinson, attorneys for the respondents, before William C. Reeves, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon said complaint, answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and exceptions filed thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments of counsel; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Stanley Laboratories, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Oregon, with its principal place of business located in Portland, Oreg.

Respondent, Edward A. Bachman, is an individual trading as Stanley Laboratories, who also has his office and principal place of business in Portland, Oreg., in connection with, and located at the same address as, the corporate respondent. The respondent Edward A. Bachman is also president of the corporate respondent Stanley Laboratories, Inc., and controls and directs the business activities, sales policies and practices of the corporate respondent.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing certain drug products for feminine hygiene, including a product designated "M. D. Medicated Douche Powder." Respondents cause said products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Oregon to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination, of false advertisements concerning their said products, by United States mails and by various other means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said products, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said products in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers, and by circulars, leaflets, folders, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

insure their personal hygiene. It is but recently that scientific research has developed new and improved methods to safeguard the health and happiness of married women. Endorsed by physicians and surgeons. M. D. Medicated Douche Powder not only cleans the vagina, and soothes the delicate membrane tissue, but it has the added advantage of the protective action of oxyquinolin sulphate, a dependable safeguard. Because of its many other beneficial uses, "M. D." is also a very valuable household remedy * * * for cuts, sores, and burns.

M. D. Medicated Douche Powder, endorsed by leading physicians and surgeons, is a germicide—soothing and cooling to delicate membranes with the addition of oxyquinolin sulphate—a reliable safeguard.

Medical science now answers the problems of millions of women with a truly effective, reliable antiseptic powder.

Effective in combatting any form of bacteria.

It relieves women of fatigue and the annoying discharge, often occasioned by all day standing.

Manufactured by Stanley Laboratories.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations, and others of similar import and meaning not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent, directly and by implication, that "M. D. Medicated Douche Powder" is a recent development of scientific research which is endorsed by leading physicians and surgeons; that said preparation is an antiseptic and germicide which will combat any form of bacteria; that such preparation has competent remedial qualities for use on cuts, sores, and burns; and that said preparation will relieve fatigue and annoying discharge sometimes connected therewith.

The use by the respondents of such descriptive words and phrases as "dependable," "insure personal hygiene," "dependable safeguard," "reliable safeguard," and "effective, reliable antiseptic powder" in referring to, designating and describing said "M. D. Medicated Douche Powder," has a tendency and capacity to cause purchasers and prospective purchasers to believe that said preparation is a preventative against conception and a prophylactic against disease.

PAR. 5. Respondents' preparation "M. D. Medicated Douche Powder" is composed of the following ingredients: Alum, zinc sulphate, boric acid powder, oxyquinolin sulphate, oil of white thyme, oil of peppermint, phenol, and eucalyptol. This preparation is not a recent development of scientific research and is not endorsed by leading physicians or surgeons. The ingredient oxyquinolin sulphate is commonly used in douche powders and has a spermaticidal action in direct concentration. Under conditions of use, however, the proportion of oxyquinolin sulphate is so small as to have little or no therapeutic value. The ingredient phenol appearing in respondents preparation is a germicide when used in sufficient concentration, but under the conditions of use in this preparation, this ingredient would have no germicidal properties and its effect would be solely that of an antiseptic. The use of oxyquinolin sulphate and phenol in sufficient concentration to act as a germicide, would have a tendency to irritate and damage the mucous membrane and other tissue with which it might come in contact.

A bacteriologist who testified on behalf of the respondents made a test of respondents' preparation "M. D. Medicated Douche Powder" and found that dilutions of one teaspoonful to a pint, and one teaspoonful to a quart, had the ability to restrain the growth of test organism, indicating that the preparation had a bacteriostatic or germ-inhibiting substance in it and indicating antiseptic properties. Under the conditions of use, the germ-inhibiting ingredients of respondents' preparation do not remain in direct or concentrated contact similar to that of a laboratory test and, consequently, the therapeutic value of this preparation is limited to that of a mild antiseptic. This preparation has little or no therapeutic value in the treatment of cuts, sores, and burns. The use of this preparation in the form of a douche might temporarily clean out the vaginal tract but has no value in relieving fatigue and will not affect the cause of any discharge. Under conditions of use this preparation does not have either spermatocidal or germicidal properties and will not constitute a preventative against conception in excess of the mechanical effect of flushing the vagina, and is not a prophylactic against disease.

PAR. 6. In addition to the above representations, the respondents, by the use of the term "laboratories" in their corporate and trade names, and in their advertising literature, also represent that they own, operate, and control a laboratory equipped for the compounding of medicinal preparations and for research in connection therewith. In truth and in fact, the respondents neither own nor control any factory, plant, or laboratory wherein their medicinal preparations are compounded or wherein any research activities are conducted, but, instead, respondents are merely distributors of products compounded and manufactured by other concerns.

PAR. 7. In addition to the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, the respondents make false, deceptive, and misleading representations to the effect that their products are either prescribed or compounded by physicians or that they bear the endorsement or recommendation of the medical profession by means of the use of the letters "M. D." in designating their product "M. D. Medicated Douche Powder" and by including therewith, in advertising, the likeness of nurses and doctors, with the figure of a cross in simulation of the American Red Cross emblem. In truth and in fact, said products are not prescribed or compounded by a physician or physicians and they have not received the endorsement or recommendation of the medical profession, and the use of the letters "M. D.", either alone or in combination with the likeness of nurses and doctors and the figure of a cross has a tendency and capacity to cause members of the purchasing public to believe that products so designated and described are endorsed and recommended by the medical profession. The use of a cross simulating the American Red Cross emblem in design, either alone or in combination with the letters "M. D." or with the picture of a nurse or doctor, has a tendency and capacity to cause members of the purchasing public to believe that the product is in some way endorsed or approved by the American Red Cross.

PAR. 8. The Commission further finds that there is not sufficient evidence in the record as to the dissemination of any particular advertisement with reference to respondents' preparations "Contra-Jel," "Supercones," and "Femeze" to warrant any finding involving these products.

PAR. 9. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true, and causes a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' preparations.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before William C. Reeves, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and exceptions filed thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments of counsel; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Stanley Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, and its officers, and Edward A. Bachman, an individual trading as Stanley Laboratories, and their respective representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of their preparation "M. D. Medicated Douche Powder," or any other preparation of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement, by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference.

(a) That respondents' preparation is a recent development of scientific research, or that it is endorsed by physicians and surgeons.

(b) That respondents' preparation has either germicidal or spermaticidal properties under conditions of use.

(c) That respondents' preparation will combat any form of bacteria, or that it will have any effect upon any bacteria in excess of that of a mild antiseptic.

(d) That respondents' preparation has any substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of cuts, sores, or burns.

(e) That the use of respondents' preparation will relieve fatigue or have any effect upon the cause of vaginal discharge.

(f) That the use of respondents' preparation constitutes a preventative against conception, in excess of the mechanical effect of flushing the vagina.

(g) That respondents' preparation constitutes a prophylactic against disease.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement in designating or describing respondents' preparation "M. D. Medicated Douche Powder" or any other preparation of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, or the effectiveness of the use of such preparation, uses the words "dependable," "dependable safeguard," "reliable safeguard," "effective reliable antiseptic powder," or any other words of similar import or meaning, in such a manner as to infer or imply that such preparation is a contraceptive or prophylactic.

3. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of respondents' preparation, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraphs (1) and (2) hereof and the respective subdivisions thereof.

4. The use of the letters "M. D." in respondents' trade name, or in any other manner, either alone or in conjunction with the picturization of a doctor, nurse, or cross, to designate or describe respondents' preparation or any other preparation which has not been endorsed or recommended by the medical profession.

5. The use of the picturization of a cross or any other simulation of the American Red Cross emblem, either alone or in conjunction with the picturization of a doctor or a nurse, to designate or describe respondents' preparation.

6. Use of the word "Laboratories" or any other word of similar import or meaning in respondents' corporate or trade name, or representing through any other means or device, or in any manner, that the respondents own, operate, or control a laboratory equipped for the compounding of medicinal preparations and for research in connection therewith.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

FRANK G. HUNTINGTON, JOSEPH PUSTERHOFER, HERMAN PUSTERHOFER, AND LOUIS WALTON, TRADING AND DOING BUSINESS UNDER THE NAME EUCLID RUBBER & MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Docket 4394. Complaint, Nov. 30, 1940—Decision, Apr. 3, 1942

Where two individuals, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of electric lamp guards, rubber handles for safety lights, and other electrical devices—

(a) Represented, through statements in catalogues and letters, and through placing letters "U L" on devices sold and distributed by them, that their products had been approved and tested by Underwriters' Laboratories, Electrical Testing Laboratories, and Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario;

Notwithstanding fact they had not submitted their products to any such testing organizations, which had not approved such products, and they had not been authorized to mark any of their goods in any manner signifying that they had been thus tested or approved; and

(b) Made misrepresentations with respect to a competitor, through such typical statements as that name of the concern, which included word "manufacturing," was a false and misleading representation of such concern's business, as they did not then or never had manufactured anything "but lies concerning this company," and did not own "a stitch of machinery for the manufacture of their rubber handles or lamp guards," as all of their "manufacturing" is "jobbed out to the lowest bidder and they merely pack and ship the goods";

When in fact such concern manufactured 15 to 20 percent of its total sales, amounting to about $125,000 annually, including some of the rubber handles used on its products;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that such statements were true, thereby causing it, because of such mistaken belief, to purchase said products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Clark Nichols and Mr. James I. Rooney for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Frank G. Huntington, Joseph Posterhofer, Herman Posterhofer, and Louis Walton, trading as Euclid Rubber & Manufacturing Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Frank G. Huntington, Joseph Posterhofer, Herman Posterhofer, and Louis Walton, are individuals, trading and doing business under the firm name, Euclid Rubber & Manufacturing Co., with their principal office and place of business at 19730 Tyronne Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. Respondents are now, and for more than two years last past have been, engaged in the manufacture and sale of rubber handles for safety lights, electric lamp guards and other electrical devices. Respondents cause said devices, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers thereof located in various points in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said devices in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business in said commerce as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their rubber handles for safety lights, lamp guards, and other electrical devices, respondents have circulated among prospective purchasers of said devices through advertisements in trade catalogues, circulars and letters, many statements concerning the efficiency and merits of said devices, statements concerning the length of time respondents have been in business, and statements disparaging certain of their competitors, and statements that their products have been approved by certain laboratories and associations which test products of similar character as those manufactured and sold by respondent. Among the statements so used and circulated among prospective purchasers by the respondents, with reference to their products, their business and their competitors, are the following:

For the past 10 years we have specialized in the manufacture of these products, have our own molding equipment and machine shop facilities for their complete fabrication.

Our products have been approved by the Underwriter Laboratories, Electrical Testing Laboratories, and the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario.

There is another outfit here in Cleveland who call themselves Ericson Manufacturing Co., who will give you no worth-while competition. Their name is a false and misleading representation of their business as they do not now, and never have, manufactured anything except lies concerning this company, and own not a stitch of machinery for the manufacture of their rubber handles or lamp guards.

Complaint

The respondents also place, on certain of their products, letters and designs indicating that such products have been tested by Underwriters Laboratories or Electrical Testing Laboratories.

Through the use of the foregoing statements, letters and designs, and others of similar import and meaning not herein set out, the respondents represent and imply that they have been in the business of manufacturing said products for a period of ten years and that their products have been inspected, tested and approved by Underwriters Laboratories, Electrical Testing Laboratories, and the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario, Canada; that the Ericson Manufacturing Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, a competitor of respondents, is a small, insignificant concern not worthy of mention as a competitor of the respondents and that the use of a name by this concern indicating that it is a manufacturer is false and misleading, that this concern has circulated falsehoods concerning respondents' business and that it has no machinery of any kind for the manufacture of the products sold by it.

PAR. 3. The above and foregoing representations and implications are false, misleading and deceptive, for in truth and in fact respondents have not been engaged in business for a period of ten years but only since 1933; their products have not been submitted to, inspected, tested or approved by, Underwriters Laboratories, Electrical Testing Laboratories, or the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario, Canada. The statements and representations aforesaid concerning the Ericson Manufacturing Co., a competitor of respondents, are false, misleading and deceptive, and falsely defame and disparage that company and its products. In truth and in fact, the Ericson Manufacturing Co. is a substantial, growing concern, actively engaged in manufacturing rubber handles and lamp guards on machinery owned and operated by it, which products are sold in competition with those sold by respondents, and said Ericson Manufacturing Co. has not circulated falsehoods concerning the respondents or their business.

A substantial portion of the purchasing public prefers rubber handles for safety lights, lamp guards and other electrical devices that have been tested, inspected and approved by laboratories, or governmental agencies, equipped and qualified to make scientific tests of such products. Both Underwriters Laboratories and Electrical Testing Laboratories are well known to the purchasing public as agencies equipped and qualified to make scientific tests of such products. The belief on the part of the purchasing public that either of these concerns has tested and approved the products is a substantial and material factor in inducing the public to purchase said products.

PAR. 4. The acts and practices of respondents in circulating and using the aforesaid statements, representations and implications in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of their products in said commerce have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to, and did and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that such statements, representations and implications are true, and cause a substantial portion of the purchasing public because of such mistaken and erroneous belief, to purchase said products.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on November 30, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Frank G. Huntington, an individual, Joseph Posterhofer, an individual, and Herman Posterhofer, an individual, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint (no answer having been filed by respondents thereto) testimony and other evidence in support of and in opposition to the allegations of said complaint were introduced before examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiners, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Frank G. Huntington and Herman Pusterhofer (the person referred to in the complaint as Herman Pusterhofer) are brothers and have for several years last past traded and carried on business under the name, Euclid Rubber & Manufacturing Co., with their principal office and place of business at 19730 Tyronne Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. It was testified that Joseph Pusterhofer (the person referred to in the complaint as Joseph Posterhofer), a brother of the two respondents named, has had no connection with the business for more than five years. The identity of respondent Louis Walton was not established either as being Louis Pusterhofer or any other individual. Respondents Frank G. Huntington and Herman Pusterhofer during several years last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of electric lamp guards, rubber handles for safety lights, and other electrical devices, and respondents have caused said articles, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers thereof located at various points in the United States other than the State of Ohio. Respondents have maintained, and now maintain, a course of trade in said devices in commerce between and among the several States of the United States.

Findings

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business and for the purpose of aiding in the sale of and inducing the purchase of various electrical devices, respondents have circulated among prospective purchasers of such devices various representations such as the statement on page 5 of the catalog distributed to prospective purchasers:

SPRING ACTION

Safety Attachment Plugs

Approved by Underwriters Laboratories, Electrical Testing Laboratories, and Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

By means of letters such as that of February 27, 1939, to the Chandler-Boyd Company of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, they have represented to prospective purchasers that:

Our products have been approved by the Underwriters' Laboratories, Electrical Testing Laboratories, and Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

They have sold and distributed electrical devices on which they have placed the letters "U L," which letters signify to dealers and other purchasers in the trade, and are understood to mean, that the product so marked has been tested and approved by the Underwriters' Laboratories. One of the respondents testified that the letters "U L" had been used to determine whether their use would result in easier or readier sale of such products.

Respondents have not, in fact, submitted their products to the Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc., Electrical Testing Laboratories, or the Hydro-Electrical Power Commission of Ontario for testing, nor have such products been approved by any of the testing organizations named, nor have respondents been authorized to mark any of their products in any manner signifying that they have been tested or approved by any of said organizations.

PAR. 3. Respondents, in the sale and distribution of their said products, are in competition with other concerns engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products, including the Ericson Manufacturing Co., of Cleveland, Ohio. Respondents have circulated letters to dealers and other prospective purchasers of products offered for sale by Ericson Manufacturing Co., which letters contained statements substantially similar to those contained in a letter of May 16, 1939, to McKinley-Mockenhaupt Co. of Chicago, Ill., a dealer handling Ericson products:

Our business is not a monopoly built up around patents. We have two long established active competitors, namely the McGill Manufacturing Co., Valparaiso, Ind., and the Daniel Woodhead Co., of your city. There is another outfit here in Cleveland who call themselves the Ericson Manufacturing Co., who will give you no worth-while competition. Their name is a false and misleading representation of their business, as they do not now, and never have manufactured anything but lies concerning this company, and own not a stitch of machinery for the manufacture of their rubber handles or lamp guards. All their "manufacturing" is jobbed out to the lowest bidder and they merely pack and ship the goods.

Ericson Manufacturing Co., is a concern doing a substantial business in electrical devices similar to those sold by respondents and whose annual sales amount to approximately $125,000. The Ericson Manufacturing Co., manufactures certain of the products which it offers for sale, including some of the rubber handles used by it on its products, the extent of such manufacture approximating 15 to 20 percent of its total sales.

4. The acts and practices of respondents in using and circulating the statements and representations set out above in connection with the sale and distribution of their products have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that such representations and statements are true, and cause a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such mistaken and erroneous belief, to purchase said products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Order

34 F. T. C.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, testimony and other evidence taken before examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, report of the trial examiner, and briefs filed herein in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondents, Frank G. Huntington, an individual, and Herman Pusterhofer, an individual, jointly or severally, trading as the Euclid Rubber & Manufacturing Co., or under any other name, directly or through any corporation or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of electric lamp guards, handles for safety flights, and other electrical devices in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing directly or by implication that any product or products not tested or approved by Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc., Electrical Testing Laboratories or Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario have been so tested or approved.

2. Representing directly or by implication that any product or products have been tested or approved by any organization when such product or products have not been so tested or approved.

3. Disparaging the Ericson Manufacturing Co., or any other competitor, by representing that its manufacturing facilities, or the size and scope of its business, are less than is the fact, or by making other false representations with respect to any such competitor or its business operations.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall, within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That the case growing out of the complaint herein be, and the same hereby is, closed as to respondents Joseph Pusterhofer and Louis Walton for the reasons set out in the findings as to the facts herein without prejudice to the right of the Commission, should future facts so warrant, to reopen the same and resume trial thereof in accordance with its regular procedure.

Syllabus

IN THE MATTER OF
INDIANAPOLIS SOAP COMPANY, WILLIAMS SOAP COM-PANY, ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
 OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3971. Complaint, Dec. 13, 1939—Decision, Apr. 6, 1942

Where two corporations, under common family ownership and control, and their three officers and owners, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of soap and soap products largely to "medicine and street men," which type of trade they solicited in a periodical of national circulation, offering among other things, their "NATURE'S WONDER * * * golden yellow soap * * * put up in attractive cartons bearing price mark of 25¢ per carton" at $3.95 per gross, their "CUTICLEAR * * * pure white cocoanut oil soap" in cartons bearing price mark of 25¢ per cake, and their "Velvatex Cream Compound" and "Marie Martell * * * luxurious cleansing preparation," in one carton combination deals marked "75¢" and also packaged separately or in combination with other soaps such as laundry or cleaning powders—

- (a) Represented and implied that said soap had the retail value and price of figure marked on such cartons, through such practice; and
- (b) Placed in the hands of canvassers, peddlers and others, means and instrumentality whereby they were enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public who generally placed confidence in such price markings and representations as to retail values and prices; and
- (c) Placed on their soaps and on the cartons in which they were packed such statements as "Made from mineral and vegetable oils, nature's own products compounded with other pure materials by the most improved methods of modern soap making * * * absolutely free from impure or rancid animal fats or greases, chemicals, strong alkalies or other harmful substances * * * purifies and invigorates the skin, opens up the pores and gives nature the opportunity to function properly;"

Notwithstanding fact products in question were inferior in quality and contained an excessive proportion of water, increasing the size and weight without adding to the actual quantity, which type of soap soon dries out, shrinks and hardens so as to become substantially unsuited for the use intended; and external application of no soap can "open up the pores," etc., as above claimed;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of purchasing public into the mistaken belief that said soaps had a value greatly in excess of their actual retail price and value, and possessed qualities which they did not in fact possess; of placing in the hands of others a means to mislead and deceive said public, and of inducing it, because of its mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantity of the soaps in question:

Held. That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Indianapolis Soap Co., a corporation, Williams Soap Co., a corporation, and Jesse M. Daily, Maude S. Daily, Robert S. Daily and Sidney F. Daily, Jr., individually and as officers of Indianapolis Soap Co. and Williams Soap Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Indianapolis Soap Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Indiana. Said respondent operates under various trade names, including the names Union Soap Co., Sanisoap Co., Sanisoap Co., Inc., W & W Soap Mfg. Co., Crescent Soap Co., Cleanaid Products Co., Utility Cleaner Co., Hoosier Mfg. Co., and Nature's Products Co.

Respondent, Williams Soap Co., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Indiana. Said respondent operates under various trade names, including the names Unisoap Co. and Unisoap Sales Co.

Respondent, Jesse M. Daily, is an individual, and is President of the Indianapolis Soap Co. and secretary and treasurer of the Williams Soap Co. Said respondent is the principal stockholder in and, together with the other individual respondents named herein, formulates, controls and dominates the practices and policies of the corporate respondents.

Respondent, Maude S. Daily, is an individual and is vice president of both the Indianapolis Soap Co. and the Williams Soap Co.

Respondent, Robert S. Daily, is an individual and is secretary and treasurer of the Indianapolis Soap Co.

Respondent, Sidney F. Daily, Jr., is an individual and is president of the Williams Soap Co.

All of the respondents have their office and principal place of business at 1249 Roosevelt Avenue, in the city of Indianapolis, Ind. All have acted in conjunction and cooperation with each other in carrying out the acts, practices and methods hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 2. The respondents are now, and for more than one year last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of soap products. Respondents cause their said products, when sold, to be shipped from their place of business in the State of Indiana to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, respondents sell and distribute certain varieties of soaps known as canvassers' soaps, which are sold by respondents to canvassers or peddlers and in turn sold by such canvassers and peddlers to the purchasing public. Such soaps are packed by respondents in cartons and on such cartons are placed false and misleading representations with respect to the value and price of such soap. Among and typical of such false and misleading representations are the following:

Velvatex Creme Compound—a combination of vegetable oils and mineral salts for the toilet, bath and shampoo—One carton of combination deal—price of complete unit—75¢.

Marie Martell—a luxurious cleansing preparation—One carton of combination deal—price of complete unit—75¢.

By the use of the foregoing representations, together with other representations of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondents represent that such cartons of soap have an actual retail value or retail selling price of 75¢ each.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid representations are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading. In truth and in fact the prices placed by respondents on said cartons are fictitious prices and do not in any sense represent the actual retail value or the retail price of such soap. Said prices are far in excess of the prices at which said soaps are customarily sold in the normal and regular course of business. In truth and in fact said soaps are sold by respondents to canvassers and peddlers at a price of approximately 5 cents per carton.

PAR. 5. The public generally understands the custom of marking or stamping the retail price or value on various commodities, and has been led to, and does, place its confidence in the price markings so stamped on the commodities and the representations thereby made as to the value and retail price of such products.

PAR. 6. By this means respondents have also placed directly in the hands of unscrupulous canvassers and peddlers a means and instru-mentality whereby such canvassers and peddlers have been and are enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public.

PAR. 7. The respondents also cause to be placed on their soaps and on the cartons in which such soaps are packed and sold, false and misleading representations with respect to the grade, quality and ingredients of said soaps. Among and typical of such false and misleading representations are the following:

This soap is made from mineral and vegetable oils, nature's own products, compounded with other pure materials by the most improved methods of modern soap making. It is absolutely free from impure or rancid animal fats or greases, chemicals, strong alkalies or other harmful substances. It cleanses thoroughly, purifies and invigorates the skin, opens up the pores and gives nature the opportunity to function properly.

Through the use of the foregoing representations and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, respondents represent that their said soaps are absolutely free from impurities or other harmful substances; that they are made from natural mineral and vegetable oils; that they purify and invigorate the skin and open up the pores of the skin; that said soaps are of superior grade and quality.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid representations are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading. In truth and in fact said soaps are not free from impurities nor are they made entirely from natural mineral and vegetable oils. Said soaps contain caustic soda, which is irritating and injurious to the skin. Said soaps do not purify or invigorate the skin, nor do they serve to open the pores of the skin. They are not superior in grade or quality, but are of the most inferior grade and quality, in that in addition to the caustic soda content hereinbefore referred to, they contain an unusually large quantity of water, which evaporates rapidly and causes the soap to become dry and unfit for use.

PAR. 9. The acts and practices of the respondents, as herein set forth, have had and now have the capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent's soaps have a value greatly in excess of their actual retail price and value and that said soaps possess qualities and ingredients which they do not in fact possess. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief the purchasing public has been induced to purchase a substantial quantity of respondent's products.

PAR. 10. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on December 13, 1939, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Indianapolis Soap Co., a corporation, Williams Soap Co., a corporation, and upon Jesse M. Daily, Maude S. Daily, Robert S. Daily, and Sidney F. Daily, Jr., individually, and as officers of said corporations, charging said respondents with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said Act.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, certain stipulated facts were read into the record and testimony and other evidence in support of and in opposition to the allegations of said complaint were introduced before examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answers thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiners and exceptions thereto, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint (oral arguments not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Indianapolis Soap Co., is a corporation organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of Indiana, having its principal place of business at 901 High Street, Indianapolis, Ind. It also uses the trade names "Cleanaid Products Company" and "Nature's Products Company," and has at various times used other trade names including "Sanisoap Company," "W & W Soap Manufacturing Company," and "Crescent Soap Company."

Respondent, Williams Soap Co., is a corporation organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of Indiana, having its principal place of business at 901 High Street, Indianapolis, Ind. It uses the trade name "Unisoap Sales Company" and has at various times used numerous other trade names.

Both respondent corporations formerly had their principal place of business at 1249 Roosevelt Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

Respondent, Jesse M. Daily, an individual, is president of respondent Indianapolis Soap Co. and secretary and treasurer of respondent, Williams Soap Co. He is, and for a number of years last past has been, the active manager of both corporations and has controlled and directed their business operations.

Respondent, Maud S. Daily (the individual referred to in the complaint as Maude S. Daily), now deceased, was the wife of respondent Jesse M. Daily and was formerly an officer, director, and stockholder in both respondent corporations.

Respondent, Robert S. Daily, an individual, is a son of respondent Jesse M. Daily and is secretary of respondent, Indianapolis Soap Co. He is engaged to some extent in the sale of the products of respondent corporations, and in the absence of his father directs and controls the business of the corporate respondents.

Respondent, Sidney F. Daily, Jr., an individual, is a son of respondent Jesse M. Daily and is president of respondent, Williams Soap Co. He attends stockholders' meetings and business meetings of the corporation and acts to a limited degree in an advisory capacity.

The capital stock of the Indianapolis Soap Co. consists of 100 shares, 96 shares of which are owned by respondent Jesse M. Daily, 2 shares are owned by respondent, Robert S. Daily, and 2 shares were formerly owned by respondent, Maud S. Daily. The capital stock of the Williams Soap Co. consists of 5 shares, 2 shares of which are owned by respondent, Sidney F. Daily, Jr., 1 share is owned by respondent, Jesse M. Daily, and 2 shares were formerly owned by respondent, Maud S. Daily. The corporate respondents have a joint office from which the affairs of each are directed, and are wholly owned, dominated, controlled, and directed by the individual respondents and constitute the means through which various acts and practices of respondents have been done and performed. The several respondents have acted in conjunction and cooperation with one another in carrying out such acts and practices.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for a number of years last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of soap and soap products. Respondents cause their said products, when sold, to be shipped from their place of business in Indianapolis, Ind., to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and have maintained a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the sale and distribution of soap and soap products, respondents have specialized largely in a particular type of trade.

Findings

They have advertised under the name of the Indianapolis Soap Co. in a magazine of national circulation known as "The Billboard" in the following manner:

FOR MEDICINE
SOAPS AND STREET MEN

For more than 35 years we have specialized on pure Coconut Oil Soaps for Streetmen. Large Assortment Stock Brands, also Private Brands to order. Write today for price list and samples.

Among the soaps offered in the price list of respondent Indianapolis Soap Co. are:

NATURE'S WONDER

This is a golden yellow soap, made from pure Cochin Oil, pressed and put up in attractive cartons bearing price mark of 25 cents per carton. Very flashy package.

Price

No. 2 size----- $3.95 per gross.

CUTICLEAR

Cuticlear is a pure white Coconut Oil Soap; looks unusually large for its weight. Each cake neatly pressed with brand name across the front and packed in very attractive yellow cartons printed in black ink, bearing price mark of 25 cents per cake. A new and very attractive brand for medicine men.

Price $3.35 per gross

Respondents, through the Williams Soap Co., sell and distribute a soap designated as "Velvatex Creme Compound" packed three cakes to a carton. Across the top of the face of the carton appears the legend, "One Carton of Combination Deal," and at one end of the face of the carton are two concentric circles. In the center of the inner circle are the figures "75¢" and in the space between the inner and outer circles is the lettering, "Price of Complete Unit." Another soap offered for sale and sold through the Williams Soap Co. is designated "Marie Martell, a luxurious cleansing preparation." This soap is also packed three cakes to a carton, and the carton carries on its face the words and figures, "One Carton of Combination Deal—Price of Complete Unit—75¢" arranged in the same manner as in the case of the soap designated as "Velvatex." By such statements respondents represent and imply that such soaps have a retail value of 75 cents per carton, and such representations have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead members of the purchasing public into the belief that said soaps have a retail value and price of 75 cents per carton.

Respondents sell Velvatex and Marie Martell packaged as stated either separately or in combination with other soaps such as laundry soap or cleaning powders. If purchased alone, the price of either of these brands is 4 to 5 cents per carton of three cakes. The price of 75 cents placed on cartons of the above soap grossly exaggerates and is far in excess of the retail value of such soaps and of the prices at which such soaps are customarily sold in the regular and normal course of business. Respondents' price marked products are sometimes resold in combination with other products and in such event respondents cannot, and do not, control the combinations offered and have no means of knowing what may be offered in such combinations or the retail value thereof. The aforesaid price marking places in the hands of medicine men, street men, or canvassers a means whereby they may, by offering the three-cake carton at the exaggerated price and adding to the offer a bar of laundry soap and a box of washing powder or various other items of insignificant cost, mislead and deceive prospective purchasers as to the value of the goods offered.

When questioned about this practice, respondent, Jesse M. Daily, testified that, "When people buy from peddlers they have to know what they are doing." He also testified that it would be difficult to sell these soaps if the price marks were not placed on the cartons to afford peddlers " * * * a unit price to work on * * *," and that the absence of such price marks would interfere with sales.

PAR. 4. Members of the purchasing public are familiar with and understand the custom of marking or stamping the retail price or value on various commodities, and generally place confidence in such price markings and the representations thus made as to the value and retail price of such products. By placing upon its products price markings which are fictitious and which grossly exaggerate the actual price at which such products are customarily sold to members of the purchasing public, respondents have placed in the hands of canvassers, peddlers, and others a means and instrumentality whereby such canvassers and peddlers have been, and are, enabled to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public.

PAR. 5. Respondents cause various representations with respect to the grade, quality, and ingredients of their soaps to be placed on such soaps and on the cartons in which such soaps are packed and sold. Among such representations are:

This soap is made from mineral and vegetable oils, nature's own products, compounded with other pure materials by the most improved methods of modern soap making. It is absolutely free from impure or rancid animal fats or greases, chemicals, strong alkalies or other harmful substances. It cleanses thoroughly, purifies and invigorates the skin, opens up the pores and gives nature the opportunity to function properly.

Nature's vegetable soap—vegetable compound—guaranteed purely vegetable—manufactured only by Nature's Products Company, Indianapolis, Indiana.

In fact, respondents' soaps are inferior in quality and are water-filled, in that they contain an excessively large proportion of water which increases the apparent size and weight of the soap without adding to the actual quantity. Such excessively water-filled soaps soon dry out, shrink and harden so as to become substantially unsuitable for the use intended. The representation that respondents' soaps, or any of them, "open up the pores of the skin and give nature the opportunity to function properly" is false and misleading in that this cannot be done by the external application of any soap.

PAR. 6. The acts and practices of respondents as set forth above have had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents' soaps have a value greatly in excess of their actual retail price and value and that said soaps possess qualities which they do not in fact possess, and said acts and practices place in the hands of others a means to so mislead and deceive. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief members of the purchasing public have been induced to purchase a substantial quantity of respondents' products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answers of respondents, certain stipulated facts read into the record, testimony and other evidence taken before examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and briefs filed herein in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondents, Indianapolis Soap Co., a corporation, Williams Soap Co., a corporation, their directors, officers, agents, and employees; Jesse M. Daily, an individual, Robert S. Daily, an individual, and Sidney F. Daily, Jr., an individual, and their agents, representatives, or employees; jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of soap or other products in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, by the use of fictitious price marks or in any other manner, that soaps or other products have retail values or prices in excess of the prices at which such products are regularly and customarily sold at retail.

2. Using, on or in connection with soap or other products, fictitious price representations or marks which import or imply, or placing in the hands of others such means of representing, that the retail value or price of any product, either alone or in combination with other products, is in excess of the price at which such product or combination of products is regularly and customarily sold at retail.

3. Representing that soaps which are water-filled or contain an excessive quantity of water are of superior quality.

4. Representing that respondents' soaps "open up the pores and give nature the opportunity to function properly," by the use of the words stated or by the use of any other words or terms of similar import or meaning.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall, within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That for the reason stated in the findings as to the facts in this proceeding the complaint herein be, and the same hereby is, dismissed, as to respondent, Maude S. Daily.

WOOL TRADING COMPANY, INC.

Docket 4267. Complaint, Aug. 26, 1940—Decision, Apr. 6, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of hand knitting yarn direct to the purchasing public, advertising in periodicals of wide circulation and forwarding to those replying thereto various advertising material such as catalogues, cards, and circulars containing samples—

- (a) Made use, in designating certain yarns in its said advertising and on labels and tags attached thereto, of names (1) "Cashmere," "Genuine Cashmere," and "Genuine Cashmere Sport," and "Genuine Imported Cashmere," and (2) "Glow Tweed," "Petite Zephyr Tweed," "Ascot Tweed," and "Shag Tweed"; notwithstanding the fact such yarns were not, respectively, composed entirely of wool made from the hair of the cashmere goat as understood by public from word "cashmere," but were composed wholly or largely of other materials nor composed entirely of wool as long understood from word "tweed," but contained substantial percentages of rayon or cotton;
- (b) Made use of word "wool" in describing certain yarns, such as "Luster Wool," "Wool Bouclé," and of word "Angora" to designate others as "Sport Angora"; notwithstanding the fact the former yarns were not composed wholly of wool, but were partly rayon; nor did the latter contain any hair of the Angora goat;
- (c) Make use, as aforesaid, of word "crepe" to designate certain yarns as "Sparkle Crepe," and of word "Shetland" to designate others as "Shetland Floss"; notwithstanding the fact yarns thus designated, respectively, contained no silk, product of the cocoon of the silk worm, as long understood by purchasing public from unqualified word "crepe," but were made of rayon or a mixture thereof; and were not made of wool from Shetland sheep grown on the Shetland Islands or on the contiguous mainland of Scotland, as understood from use of word "Shetland";
- (d) Made use of word "Scotch" to designate certain yarns as "Scotch Tweed" and "Scotch Heather," and of word "Saxony" to designate others as "Saxony Zephyr"; notwithstanding the fact such yarns or the wool from which they were made were neither made in nor imported from either Scotland or the Province of Saxony;
- (e) Falsely represented that certain domestic yarns were imported products through use of word "Imported" to describe them;
- (f) Advertised and sold various yarns which were composed in whole or in part of rayon, but had the appearance of wool and silk, without disclosing such content of rayon, which, when so manufactured, is practically indistinguishable from silk or wool by the purchasing public, with result that it purchased same as being composed entirely of silk or wool; and
- (g) Used on its letterheads the legend "Manufacturers of Peter Pan Yarns," notwithstanding the fact it was not a manufacturer, preferably dealt with directly by a substantial portion of the public as securing, in its belief lower prices and other advantages, but obtained its yarns from other sources;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to its products and business status, and to cause said public to purchase substantial quantities of its yarns as a result of the erroneous belief engendered, thereby diverting trade to it from its competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and its competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Mr. S. Robert Israel, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Wool Trading Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Wool Trading Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business at 361 Grand Street, in the city of New York, and State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing various grades and types of knitting yarn. Respondent sells its products to members of the purchasing public situated in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and causes said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent is engaged in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia with other corporations and with partnerships and persons likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing various grades and types of knitting yarn in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. The word "cashmere" has long been applied to a particular type of wool fiber that is made from the hair of the cashmere goat, and has for a long time been known well and favorably to the purchasing public. The word "cashmere" when used in connection with the designation and description of yarns or other products having the general appearance of wool fibers is considered by members of the purchasing public as describing a product composed entirely of the hair of the cashmere goat.

The word "tweed" is a word long and favorably known to a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public as descriptive of a product composed entirely of wool.

The word "crepe" is a word long and favorably known to a substantial portion of the purchasing public as descriptive of a certain type product made of unweighted silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm. Silk products for many years have held, and still hold, great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities.

The word "Angora" has long been known to the purchasing public as the designation of products made from the hair of the Angora goat.

The purchasing public has long considered products normally composed of wool, and having the appearance of wool, to be wool, and not to be cotton, cotton and rayon, or other material; and it has likewise long considered products normally composed of silk, and having the appearance of silk, to be silk and not rayon or other material, unless in each instance the presence of material other than wool, or other than silk, is clearly and conspicuously disclosed.

There has long been a preference on the part of the public for dealing with persons who are prominently and favorably known.

A substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public has long had a preference for dealing directly with the manufacturer, in the belief that lower prices, superior products, and other advantages can thereby be obtained.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of its business, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its products in commerce, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase thereof by the public, respondent has caused various statements and representations, purportedly descriptive of its business and of its products, their place of origin or their respective constituent fibers or materials, to be inserted in catalogs or sample books and price lists, on the labels attached to said products, and on its letter-heads, which it had distributed among customers and prospective customers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Many of the designations of the yarns and of their constituent fibers and materials used by the respondent are false and misleading. Among and typical of such false and misleading designations are the following:

“Cashmere sport” for yarn which contains none of the wool of the cashmere goat.

“Genuine cashmere feather tone” for yarn which is not composed wholly of the wool of the cashmere goat, but is composed largely of other wool.

“Ascot tweed,” “Zephyr tweed,” “Shag tweed,” for yarns that are not composed wholly of wool, but are composed of wool and rayon.

“Lustre Wool” for yarn that is not composed wholly of wool, but is composed of about equal parts of wool and rayon.

“Sparkle crepe” for yarn that is not composed wholly of silk, but is composed wholly of wool and rayon.

“Angora” for yarn that is not composed wholly of the wool of the Angora goat, but is composed partly of other wool.

“Frazee” and “Gimp” for yarns which have the appearance of being composed partly of silk, but which in fact are composed of wool and rayon or cotton and rayon.

Respondent has likewise misrepresented the place of origin of its yarns, or misrepresented domestic yarn to be imported. Among and typical of such misrepresentations are the following:

“Shetland floss,” “Scotch heather,” “Scotch tweed” for yarns that are not imported from the Shetland Islands or from Scotland.

“Imported cashmere (Feather tone)” for yarn that is not imported, but is of domestic origin.

Respondent has likewise made misrepresentations with respect to persons connected with its business, with the tendency and capacity of leading prospective purchasers to believe that prominent persons are connected with its business. Typical of such misrepresentations is the use of the name “Elsie Janice,” who is stated in respondent’s literature to be its “chief instructress”; whereas there is no such person, but said name so closely resembles the name of the famous actress “Elsie Janis” as to have the tendency and capacity to lead many persons to believe they are one and the same person.

Respondent has made further false and misleading statements with respect to its business status, as illustrated by the following: The letterheads employed by respondent in connection with its business as aforesaid carry the wording:

Wool Trading Co. Inc.
Manufacturers of Peter Pan Yarns

In truth and in fact respondent does not manufacture the yarns which it advertises and sells, but purchases the same from others.

The aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations used by respondent in connection with the conduct of its business as aforesaid are not all-inclusive, but are merely illustrative of the character and type of such false and misleading statements and representations made by respondent to induce the purchase of its merchandise.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid acts and practices has had, and now has, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that all of said representations are true. On account of this erroneous and mistaken belief, so induced by respondent, a number of the purchasing and consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products, with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from its competitors who are also engaged in the sale and distribution of various grades and types of knitting yarn in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. As a consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 26, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Wool Trading Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by the attorney for the respondent, before Charles A. Vilas, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and exceptions thereto, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Wool Trading Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business at 361 Grand Street, New York City, N. Y. Respondent is now, and for a number of years last past has been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing various grades and types of hand knitting yarn. At times respondent trades under the name Peter Pan Yarn Co., as well as under its corporate name, and certain of its yarns are designated by it as "Peter Pan" yarns.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business the respondent sells its yarns direct to members of the purchasing public, and causes its products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent is and has been engaged in substantial competition with other corporations, and with firms and individuals, engaged in the sale and distribution of hand knitting yarns in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business and for the purpose of promoting the sale of its products, respondent inserts advertisements in various periodicals having wide circulation throughout the United States. Upon receiving inquiries from members of the public in response to such advertisements, respondent forwards to such prospective purchasers various advertising material, such as catalogs, card and circulars, containing samples of the various types and grades of yarn offered for sale by respondent. The various yarns are designated and described in respondent's advertising material by certain name, and these names are also used by respondent on labels and tags attached to the yarns themselves when they are sold to the public.

Among the names used by respondent to designate and describe certain of its yarns are "Cashmere," "Genuine Cashmere," "Genuine Cashmere Sport," and "Genuine Imported Cashmere." The word "cashmere" has long been understood by a substantial portion of the purchasing public as denoting a particular type of wool which is made from the hair of the cashmere goat, and when the word is used to designate knitting yarns the public understands that such yarns are composed entirely of such wool. Respondent's yarns bearing the names set forth above are not in fact composed wholly of wool made from the hair of the cashmere goat, but are composed wholly or largely of other materials.

Other names used by respondent to designate certain of its yarns are "Glow Tweed," "Petite Zephyr Tweed," "Ascot Tweed" and "Shag Tweed." The word "tweed" has long been understood by a substantial portion of the purchasing public as denoting products composed entirely of wool. Respondent's yarns described in the above manner are not in fact composed entirely of wool, but contain substantial percentages of rayon or cotton. Respondent also uses the word "wool" in describing certain of its yarns, as "Luster Wool" and "Wool Boucle." The yarns so designated are not in fact composed wholly of wool but are composed in part of rayon.

Respondent also uses the word "Angora" to designate certain of its yarns, as "Sport Angora." The word Angora has long been understood by the purchasing public as denoting products made from the hair of the Angora goat. The yarn designated by respondent as "Sport Angora" does not in fact contain any hair of the Angora goat but is composed entirely of other materials.

Respondent has also used the word "Crepe" in describing certain of its yarns, as "Sparkle Crepe." The unqualified word "crepe" has long been known to a substantial portion of the purchasing public as denoting products made entirely of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm. The yarn designated by respondent as "Sparkle Crepe" did not in fact contain any silk but was composed of rayon or a mixture of rayon and other materials.

Respondent also uses the word "Shetland" to designate certain of its yarns, as "Shetland Floss." The word Shetland, when applied to knitting yarns, is understood by a substantial portion of the purchasing public as denoting yarns made of wool from Shetland sheep grown on the Shetland Islands or on the contiguous mainland of Scotland. The yarns so designated by respondent are not in fact made of such wool.

Respondent also uses the word "Scotch" to designate certain of its yarns, as "Scotch Tweed" and "Scotch Heather." To a substantial portion of the public such use of the word Scotch constitutes a representation that the yarns so designated, or the wool composing such yarns, is imported from Scotland. In fact neither these yarns nor the wool of which they are made is imported from Scotland. Respondent also uses the word "Saxony" to designate certain of its yarns, as "Saxony Zephyr." To a substantial portion of the purchasing public the word Saxony, when so used, denotes that such yarns, or the wool composing them, is imported from the Province of Saxony. In fact neither such yarns nor the wool used therein is imported from Saxony.

Respondent also makes use of the word "Imported" in designating and describing certain of its yarns, thus representing that such yarns are imported from foreign countries, when in fact the yarns so designated are not imported products but are domestic products.

Respondent has also engaged in the practice of advertising and selling various yarns composed in whole or in part of rayon, without disclosing such rayon content. Rayon is a chemically manufactured fiber or fabric which may be so manufactured as to simulate silk or wool. When manufactured to simulate silk, it has the appearance and feel of silk, and when manufactured to simulate wool, it has the appearance of wool. By reason of these qualities, rayon, when manufactured to simulate silk or wool and not designated as rayon, is practically indistinguishable by the purchasing public from silk or wool, as the case may be. Respondent's yarns have the appearance of wool or of wool and silk, and the failure of respondent to disclose the rayon content of such yarns has resulted in the purchase of such yarns by a substantial portion of the public under the erroneous impression that they were composed entirely of wool or of wool and silk.

PAR. 5. Respondent has also represented that it is the manufacturer of the yarns sold by it, such representation being made through the use on its letterheads of the legend, "Manufacturers of Peter Pan Yarns." Respondent does not own or operate any manufacturing plant and does not manufacture any of the yarns sold by it, but obtains its yarns from other sources. There is a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for dealing directly with manufacturers, such preference being due in part to the belief that by dealing with manufacturers lower prices and other advantages may be obtained.

PAR. 6. The Commission finds further that the acts and practices of the respondent as herein described have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the nature, character and origin of respondent's products, and with respect to respondent's business status, and the tendency and capacity to cause such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's products as a result of the erroneous beliefs so engendered. In consequence thereof, substantial trade has been diverted to the respondent from its competitors.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Charles A. Vilas, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and the exceptions to such report, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint (oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Wool Trading Co., Inc., a corporation, trading under its corporate name and under the name Peter Pan Yarn Company, or trading under any other name, and its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its knitting yarns in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word "Cashmere," or any other word of similar import, to designate or describe any product which is not composed entirely of the hair of the cashmere goat; provided, however, that in the case of a product composed in part of the hair of the cashmere goat and in part of other fibers or materials, such word may be used as descriptive of the cashmere fiber content if there are used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing such other constituent fibers or materials.

2. Using the words "wool" or "tweed," or any other word indicative of wool, to designate or describe any product which is not composed entirely of wool: Provided, however, That in the case of a product composed in part of wool and in part of other fibers or materials, such words may be used as descriptive of the wool content if there are used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing such other constituent fibers or materials.

3. Using the word "Angora," or any other word of similar import, to designate or describe any product which is not composed entirely of the hair of the Angora goat: Provided, however, That in the case of a product composed in part of the hair of the Angora goat and in part of other fibers or materials, such word may be used as descriptive of the Angora fiber content if there are used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing such other constituent fibers or materials.

4. Using the unqualified word "crepe," or any other descriptive term indicative of silk, to designate or describe any product which is not composed entirely of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm: Provided, however, That such word or descriptive term may be used truthfully to designate or describe the type of weave, construction, or finish, if such word is qualified by using in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words clearly and accurately naming the fibers or materials from which such product is made.

5. Using the word "Shetland," or any other word of similar import, to designate or describe any product which is not made from the wool of Shetland sheep grown on the Shetland Islands or the contiguous mainland of Scotland: Provided, however, That in the case of a product composed in part of such wool and in part of other fibers or materials, such word may be used as descriptive of the Shetland wool content if there are used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing such other constituent fibers or materials.

GOTTLIEB BROTHERS AND AS JACK FROST YARN
COMPANYCOMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 4268. Complaint, Aug. 26, 1940—Decision, Apr. 6, 1942*

Where two individuals, engaged as wholesalers in the interstate sale and distribution of hand knitting yarns, in designating and describing their yarns on labels and tags attached thereto, and on advertising color cards containing samples thereof distributed among prospective retail purchasers—

- (a) Made use of names (1) "Cashmere Sport" and "Imported Cashmere," (2) "Zephyr Tweed," (3) "Angora" and "Sport Angora," and (4) "Shetland Floss" to designate certain of their yarns; notwithstanding the fact the yarns designated "Cashmere" were not made from the hair of the Cashmere goat, but were composed wholly of other wool; the "Zephyr Tweed" was not composed entirely of wool as understood from word "tweed," but contained a large percentage of rayon; said "Angora" yarns contained no hair of the Angora goat, but were composed entirely of other material; and the "Shetland Floss" was not made of wool from Shetland sheep grown on the Shetland Islands or the contiguous mainland of Scotland, as understood from word "Shetland";
- (b) Made use of words "Scotch Tweed," "English Zephyr," and "Saxony Zephyr" to designate certain yarns, when neither the yarns nor the wool of which they were made were imported from Scotland, England, or the Province of Saxony; and
- (c) Advertised and sold various yarns with appearance of wool or wool and silk without disclosing their content of rayon which, when made to simulate silk or wool, is practically indistinguishable therefrom by the purchasing public; with result that substantial portion of such public purchased said yarns as entirely wool or wool and silk;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to their products, and to cause it to purchase substantial quantities thereof as a result of the erroneous belief so engendered:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Samuel Gottlieb and Peter Gottlieb, trading as Gottlieb Bros. and as Jack Frost Yarn Co., have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Samuel Gottlieb and Peter Gottlieb, are individuals, trading as Gottlieb Bros., and also as Jack Frost Yarn Co., with their principal place of business at 207 Avenue C, in the city and State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now and have been for a year or more last past engaged in the business of selling and distributing various grades and types of knitting yarns. Respondents are wholesale dealers and sell their products to retail dealers who in turn sell them to the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause said products, when sold by them, to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business respondents have engaged in the practice of falsely representing the constituent fiber or material of which the various products sold and distributed by them are made by means of false representations on labels attached to their products and on various sample cards and other advertising matter circulated among purchasers, and by failure to disclose the rayon content of certain of their products. In furtherance of the foregoing practices and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said product, respondents have caused false and misleading statements and representations purporting to be descriptive of such products and of their respective constituent fiber or material to be inserted in price lists, sample cards, and other advertising matter which is distributed by retailers who buy from respondents to prospective purchasers of said products situated in various States of the United States.

PAR. 4. Among and typical of the practice of falsely representing the constituent fiber or material of which the various products sold and distributed by respondents are made are the following: "Sport Angora," "Cashmere Sport," "Imported Cashmere," "Zephyr Tweed," "Persian Curl" and other similar words and terms, when in fact said products were not made of the fibers indicated by the use of these terms but were made from fibers other than those indicated.

Some of the aforesaid terms and others of similar import and meaning do not indicate the kind or type of material from which said products are made and are used on materials having the appearance and feel of either silk or wool. An example of this practice is the use of the words and phrases "Heatherstone," "Pompadour," "Paradise," "Duveen," "Magic Duveen," "Willow Down," "Supersheen," "Germantown," and "Persian Curl," when in truth and in fact said products are composed in whole or in part of rayon.

PAR. 5. Typical also of said acts and practices, respondents represent their said products as being of a finer grade, higher quality or of a different fiber than is actually the fact by the use of words and phrases indicative to the purchasing public of certain fiber, grade or quality. An example of this practice is the respondents' use of the words and phrases "Cashmere Sport" and "Imported Cashmere" in advertising material to designate and describe certain of their products which do not contain the hair of the Kashmir goat but instead are composed of other fibers.

PAR. 6. A further typical act and practice on the part of the respondents is the use of words which are associated in the minds of the purchasing and consuming public as being descriptive of wool exclusively to designate and describe certain yarn products as aforesaid which are composed in part of wool and in part of other materials. As an example of this practice, the respondents used the words "Tweed," "Worsted," "Angora," and "Cashmere" and other words of similar import and meaning indicative of wool in price lists, sample cards, and other advertising matter to designate the yarn products which are in fact composed of rayon and wool.

PAR. 7. The word "Angora" has long been applied to a particular type of wool that comes from the hair of the Angora goat and which product has for a long time been well and favorably known to the purchasing public. The word "Angora" when used in connection with the designation and description of yarns or other products having the general appearance of wool fibers is considered by members of the purchasing public as being a descriptive designation of an Angora wool product composed entirely of the hair of the Angora goat.

The word "Cashmere" has long been applied to a particular type of wool that comes from the hair of the Kashmir goat, and which product has for a long time been well and favorably known to the purchasing public. The word "Cashmere" when used in connection with the designation and description of the yarns or other products having the general appearance of wool fibers is considered by members of the purchasing public as being a descriptive designation of a Cashmere wool product composed entirely of the hair of the Kashmir goat.

The word "Persian" has long been associated in the minds of the purchasing public with wool and wool products produced in Persia.

The words "Worsted" and "Tweed" are words long and favorably known to a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public as descriptive of certain types of fabrics composed entirely of wool.

PAR. 8. The word "rayon" is the name of a chemically manufactured fiber or fabric which may be manufactured so as to stimulate either silk or wool, and when so manufactured it has the appearance and feel of either silk or wool, as the case may be, and is by the purchasing public practically indistinguishable from silk or wool. By reason of these qualities, rayon, when manufactured to simulate either silk or wool and not designated as rayon, is readily believed and accepted by the purchasing public as being either silk or wool, as the case may be. By the use of the acts and practices herein set forth, the respondents place in the hands of uninformed or unscrupulous retail dealers a means and instrumentality where said retail dealers may and do deceive or mislead members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that they are purchasing yarn or material manufactured from materials and fibers indicated by the use of the aforesaid terms or phrases.

PAR. 9. The use by the respondents of the foregoing acts and practices has had and now has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that all of said statements and representations are true and that respondents have truthfully represented the constituent fiber and material of which their products are made. On account of these erroneous beliefs, a number of the consuming and purchasing public purchases a substantial volume of respondents' products.

PAR. 10. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 26, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Samuel Gottlieb and Peter Gottlieb, individuals trading as Gottlieb Bros. and as Jack Frost Yarn Co., charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by the attorney for the respondents, before Charles A. Vilas, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and the exceptions to such report, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, Samuel Gottlieb and Peter Gottlieb, are individuals, trading as Gottlieb Bros., and also as Jack Frost Yarn Co., with their principal place of business at 207 Avenue C, New York City, N. Y. Respondents are now, and for more than 4 years last past have been, engaged in the business of selling and distributing various grades and types of hand knitting yard. Respondents are wholesale dealers, and sell their products to retail dealers who in turn resell such products to the purchasing public.

PAR. 2. Respondents cause and have caused their products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, and for the purpose of promoting the sale of their products, respondents distribute among prospective purchasers certain advertising material known as color cards, which contain samples of the various types and grades of yarn offered for sale by respondents. The various yarns are designated and described in such color cards by certain names, and these names are also used by respondents on labels and tags attached by the respondents to the yarns, and which remain on the yarns until after they are displayed and sold to the public.

Among the names which have been used by the respondents to designate and describe certain of their yarns are "Cashmere Sport" and "Imported Cashmere." The word "cashmere," when applied to wool products, has long been understood by a substantial portion of the purchasing public as denoting that the product so designated is made from the hair of the cashmere goat. Respondents' yarns bearing the names set forth above are not in fact made from the hair of the cashmere goat, but are composed wholly of other wool.

Another name used by respondents to designate certain of their yarns is "Zephyr Tweed." The word "tweed" has long been understood by a substantial portion of the purchasing public as denoting a product composed entirely of wool. Respondents' yarns described in the above manner are not in fact composed entirely of wool, but contain a large percentage of rayon.

Respondents have also used the word "Angora" to designate certain of their yarns, as "Sport Angora." The word "Angora" has long been understood by the purchasing public as denoting products made from the hair of the Angora goat. The yarns designated by respondents as "Sport Angora" do not in fact contain any hair of the Angora goat but are composed entirely of other materials.

Respondents also use the word "Shetland" to designate certain of their yarns, as "Shetland Floss." The word "Shetland" when applied to knitting yarns, is understood by a substantial portion of the purchasing public as denoting yarns made of wool from Shetland sheep grown on the Shetland Islands or on the contiguous mainland of Scotland. The yarns so designated by respondents are not in fact made of such wool.

Respondents also use the word "Scotch" to designate certain of their yarns, as "Scotch Tweed." To a substantial portion of the public such use of the word "Scotch" constitutes a representation that the yarns so designated, or the wool composing such yarns, is imported from Scotland. In fact neither these yarns nor the wool of which they are made is imported from Scotland.

Respondents also use the word "English" to designate certain of their yarns, as "English Zephyr." To a substantial portion of the purchasing public the word "English," when so used, denotes that such yarns, or the wool of which they are made, is imported from England. In fact neither the yarns so designated nor the wool used therein is imported from England.

Respondents also use the word "Saxony" to designate certain of their yarns, as "Saxony Zephyr." To a substantial portion of the purchasing public the words "Saxony," when so used, denotes that such yarns, or the wool composing them, is imported from the Province of Saxony. In fact neither such yarns nor the wool used therein is imported from Saxony.

Respondents have also engaged in the practice of advertising and selling various yarns composed in part of rayon, without disclosing such rayon content. Rayon is a chemically manufactured fiber or fabric which may be so manufactured as to simulate silk or wool. When manufactured to simulate silk, it has the appearance and feel of silk, and when manufactured to simulate wool, it has the appearance of wool. By reason of these qualities, rayon, when manufactured to simulate silk or wool and not designated as rayon, is practically indistinguishable by the purchasing public from silk or wool, as the case may be. Respondents' yarns have the appearance of wool or of wool and silk, and the failure of respondents to disclose the rayon content of such yarns has resulted in the purchase of such yarns by a substantial portion of the public under the erroneous impression that they were composed entirely of wool or of wool and silk.

PAR. 4. The Commission finds further that the acts and practices of the respondents as herein described have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the nature, character and origin of respondents' products, and the tendency and capacity to cause such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' products as a result of the erroneous belief so engendered.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony, and other evidence taken before Charles A. Vilas, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and the exceptions to such report, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint (oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Samuel Gottlieb and Peter Gottlieb, individually, and trading as Gottlieb Bros. and as Jack Frost Yarn Co., or trading under any other name, and their agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of their knitting yarns in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word "Cashmere," or any other word of similar import, to designate or describe any product which is not composed entirely of the hair of the cashmere goat: Provided, however, That in the case of a product composed in part of the hair of the cashmere goat and in part of other fibers or materials, such word may be used as descriptive of the cashmere fiber content if there are used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing such other constituent fibers or materials.

2. Using the word "tweed," or any other word indicative of wool, to designate or describe any product which is not composed entirely of wool: Provided, however, That in the case of a product composed in part of wool and in part of other fibers or materials, such word may be used as descriptive of the wool content if there are used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing such other constituent fibers or materials.

3. Using the word "Angora," or any other word of similar import, to designate or describe any product which is not composed entirely of the hair of the Angora goat: Provided, however, That in the case of a product composed in part of the hair of the Angora goat and in part of other fibers or materials, such word may be used as descriptive of the Angora fiber content if there are used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing such other constituent fibers or materials.

4. Using the word "Shetland," or any other word of similar import, to designate or describe any product which is not made from the wool of Shetland sheep grown on the Shetland Islands or the contiguous mainland of Scotland: Provided, however, That in the case of a product composed in part of such wool and in part of other fibers or materials, such word may be used as descriptive of the Shetland wool content if there are used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing such other constituent fibers or materials.

5. Using the word "Scotch" to designate or describe any product which is not imported from Scotland or made of materials imported from Scotland.

6. Using the word "English" to designate or describe any product which is not imported from England or made of materials imported from England.

7. Using the word "Saxony" to designate or describe any product which is not imported from the Province of Saxony or made of materials imported from the Province of Saxony.

8. Advertising, offering for sale, or selling products composed in whole or in part of rayon without clearly disclosing such rayon content, and when such products are composed in part of rayon and in part of other fibers or materials, all of such fibers or materials, including the rayon, shall be clearly and accurately disclosed.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That no provision in this order shall be construed as relieving respondents in any respect of the necessity of complying with the requirements of the Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939 and the authorized rules and regulations thereunder.

SUPERIOR FELT AND BEDDING COMPANY

Docket 4309. Complaint, Sept. 10, 1940—Decision, Apr. 6, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in the manufacture and competitive interstate sale and distribution of mattresses to retailers for resale to purchasing public—

- (a) Represented that certain of its mattresses were designed, sponsored, approved or recommended by physicians, and were in general use in hospitals, through use on labels attached thereto of such statements as "General Hospital Mattress," "Rx Just what the doctor ordered," together with outline of a red cross, and "Rx The Hospital Mattress" and picture of a doctor in uniform;

The facts being that its mattresses were not in general use in hospitals, or of a type peculiar to and generally used in hospitals, or "just what the doctor ordered," or endorsed, approved or recommended by doctors;

- (b) Represented that its said mattresses were so designed and constructed as to be capable of building a correct posture and correcting posture defects, through use of such statements on labels applied thereto as "Built Up Center—Posture Builder—Scientific Construction" and "Scientifically Posturized—Built up Center—Innerspring Construction";

The facts being there is no relationship between the positions assumed in sleep and a person's waking posture or carriage, nor any such relationship between such posture and the type of innerspring mattress on which one may sleep; and its said mattresses have no ability to, and will not, correct defects in the posture or carriage of the user, or "build" posture, either good or bad; and

- (c) Misrepresented retail price of its mattresses through placing on tags or labels attached thereto prices which were purely fictitious and greatly in excess of the retail value and customary prices at which said products were sold to the purchasing public, and thereby placed in the hands of department stores and other retailers means whereby they might mislead and deceive the purchasing public, a typical act consisting of selling a department store a 100-lot of mattresses of the same quality at $12.95 each, less discount, which it labeled with various names and price marks, including "Golden Rest," $39.50; "Cinderella," $39.50; "Dream Ship," $49.50; "Mammoth DeLuxe," $44.50; and "Splendor," $39.50; which were resold by said store, together with certain others purchased by it at $10.75 each, less cash discount, at $19.95, and in no case at the prices marked thereon by it; said store advertising in connection with said sale "It's your chance to save $9.80 to $19.55 and get the benefit of in-built comfort in Mattresses that are quality built * * *! Choose early";

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of purchasing public into the mistaken belief that said mattresses possessed qualities which they did not possess, and customarily sold for prices for which they did not sell, thereby inducing said public to purchase substantial quantities of said mattresses, with result that trade was unfairly diverted to it from its competitors, and injury done by it to competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Superior Felt and Bedding Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Superior Felt and Bedding Co., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, and having its principal office and place of business at 2447 Roosevelt Road, Chicago, Ill. Respondent also maintains branch factories or warehouses in New York; Dallas, Tex.; Kansas City, Mo.; Columbus, Ohio; Cleveland, Ohio; DeKalb, Ill.; Detroit, Mich.; and Pittsburgh, Pa.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and for more than 4 years last past has been engaged in manufacturing, selling and distributing mattresses. Respondent causes its said mattresses, when sold by it, to be transported from its place of business in Chicago, Ill., or from its other factories or warehouses, to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the points of origin of the shipments, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent's said mattresses are sold to retailers, who, in turn, resell the same to members of the purchasing public. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said mattresses in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, as aforesaid, respondent is now, and for more than 4 years last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said products, respondent, through its salesmen and by means of circulars, labels, and other advertising material distributed among prospective purchasers, has made many statements and representations to the purchasing public concerning certain of its products. Among and typical of said statements and representations so disseminated are the following, which appear on the labels attached to certain of said mattresses:

Through the use of the foregoing representations and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents and has represented that said mattresses are designed, sponsored, approved or recommended by physicians; that they are in general use in hospitals; that said mattress designated as "Posture Builder" is so designed and constructed that it is capable of building a correct posture and correcting defects in the posture. The symbol Ⓡ and the red cross have for many years been associated in the mind of the public with medical treatment and service, and the use by the respondent of these symbols as a part of its said labels has the effect of accentuating the other representations appearing on said labels.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading. In truth and in fact none of the respondent's mattresses have been designed, sponsored, approved or recommended by physicians, nor are they in general use in hospitals. The mattresses designated as "Posture Builder" is wholly incapable of building a correct posture or correcting any defects in the posture.

PAR. 6. In addition to the practices set forth above, the respondent has heretofore engaged in the practice of attaching to its mattresses tags or labels bearing price marks purporting to represent the customary resale or retail prices of such mattresses, when in fact such prices were fictitious and were far in excess of the prices at which such mattresses were regularly sold at retail. Among and typical of such price marks was the mark "$39.50" appearing on certain mattresses which were intended by the respondent to sell, and did sell, at retail in the usual and regular course of business for approximately $20.

Such practice on the part of respondent had the further effect of placing in the hands of uninformed or unscrupulous dealers a means and instrumentality whereby such dealers were enabled to mislead and deceive the purchasing public as to the quality of said mattresses, and as to the savings to be effected in the purchase thereof.

PAR. 7. The acts and practices of the respondent as herein set forth have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the respondent's products possess characteristics and qualities which they do not in fact possess, and that such products customarily sell for certain specified prices when such is not the fact. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief, engendered as herein set forth, the purchasing public has been induced to and has purchased substantial quantities of respondent's products. In consequence, trade has been diverted to the respondents from its competitors, and thereby substantial injury has been done and is being done by the respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on September 10, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Superior Felt and Bedding Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of and in opposition to the allegations of said complaint were introduced before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and oral arguments by counsel; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Superior Felt and Bedding Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business, under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware and having its principal office and place of business at 2447 Roosevelt Road, Chicago, Ill. Respondent maintains branch factories or warehouses in New York, N. Y.; Dallas, Tex.; Kansas City, Mo.; Columbus, Ohio; Cleveland, Ohio; DeKalb, Ill.; Detroit, Mich.; and Pittsburgh, Pa.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 4 years last past has been, engaged in manufacturing, selling, and distributing mattresses. Respondent causes its said mattresses, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in Chicago, Ill., or from its other factories or warehouses, to purchasers thereof in various States of the United States other than the points of origin of such shipments and in the District of Columbia. Respondent's said mattresses are sold to retailers who, in turn, resell the same to members of the purchasing public. Respondent maintains, and for a number of years last past has maintained, a course of trade in its said mattresses in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its said business respondent is, and has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its mattresses respondent, through its salesmen and by means of circulars, labels, and other advertising material distributed among purchasers and prospective purchasers, has made various statements and representations concerning certain of its mattresses. Among and typical of the statements and representations so made are the following, which appear on labels attached to certain of said mattresses:

Through the use of the foregoing statements respondent represents, and has represented, that its said mattresses are designed, sponsored, approved, or recommended by physicians and that they are in general use in hospitals; and, further, that the mattresses designated as "Posture Builder" are so designed and constructed as to be capable of building a correct posture and correcting defects in the posture of users.

PAR. 4. A number of years ago Dr. Norman D. Mattison advanced the idea of building a mattress with innerspring construction having varying degrees of spring resistance at the head, center section, and foot of the mattress proportioned to the approximate variations in weight between the head and shoulders, the torso and hips, and the feet and lower legs of an average individual. Doctor Mattison arranged with the Owen Silent Spring Co., Inc., to produce and offer such a spring for the use of bedding manufacturers in the construction of innerspring mattresses. Doctor Mattison was unable to secure a patent on this spring construction and other spring manufacturers began the manufacture of innersprings for mattresses based at least partially upon the general conception of the Mattison spring but varying in different features, including the degrees of resistance to spring deflection in various sections of the mattress.

The respondent purchased the springs used in its "Posture Builder" mattresses from the Nachman Spring Filled Corporation and from other spring manufacturers, including the Owen Silent Spring Co. The only innerspring construction endorsed, approved, or recommended by Doctor Mattison is that produced by the Owen Silent Spring Co., which bears the "Mattison" label. Respondent's mattresses do not comply with these requirements and are not endorsed, approved, or recommended by Doctor Mattison or any other physician.

The broad meaning of the term "posture" is any position assumed by a person, but the term is more generally used to indicate the carriage of a person in walking, standing, or sitting. In sleeping, a person assumes many different positions but seldom remains more than a few minutes in any one position. When asleep, a person's muscles are relaxed and generally the elbow, thigh, and knee joints slightly flexed. There is no relationship between the several positions assumed in sleep and the waking posture or carriage of an individual, nor is there any relationship between waking posture and the type of innerspring mattress on which an individual may sleep. Respondent's mattresses have no ability to, and will not, affect the waking posture or carriage of the user, correct defects in posture or carriage, or "build" posture, either good or bad. Bad posture may be due to physical defects, carelessness, laziness, and other causes, and is not subject to correction through the use of respondent's so-called "Posture Builder" mattresses.

Respondent's "Hospital" and "General Hospital" mattresses are not in general use in hospitals, nor are they of a type peculiar to and generally used in hospitals. They are not "Just what the doctor ordered," nor have they been, or are they, endorsed, approved, or recommended by hospitals, doctors, or the medical profession.

Findings

34 F. T. C.

PAR. 5. The respondent has attached to its mattresses tags or labels bearing price marks purporting to represent the retail value and price of such mattresses and the usual and customary retail prices thereof. The prices set forth on many of these tags and labels attached to respondent's mattresses have had no relation to the retail value thereof or usual and customary retail prices of such mattresses, and have been purely fictitious.

Respondent designates its mattresses by various names such as "King-O-Rest" and "Rest Queen." The designation "King-O-Rest" is used to identify a particular quality of mattress. On May 4, 1938, respondent sold 100 of its "King-O-Rest" quality mattresses to the Elder & Johnston Co., a department store in Dayton, Ohio, at a price of $12.95 each, less 2 percent for cash. These mattresses were labeled by respondent with various names and price marks, including "Golden Rest," $39.50; "Cinderella," $39.50; "Dream Ship," $49.50; "Mammoth Deluxe," $44.50; and "Splendor," $39.50. Subsequently, the Elder & Johnston Co. bought from respondent additional mattresses invoiced to it as "experimental" mattresses at a price of $10.75 each, less 2 percent for cash. The mattresses purchased from respondent were advertised by the Elder & Johnston Co. for sale at a price of $19.95 each. One such advertisement referred to respondent's price marks and stated in part:

It's a super special buy in high grade INNERSPRING MATTRESSES! It's your chance to save $9.80 to $19.55 and get the benefit of in-built comfort in Mattresses that are quality built to Elder's specifications! Choose early!

These mattresses were, in fact, sold by the Elder & Johnston Co. at $19.95 and none were sold at the prices marked on the labels affixed by respondent to such mattresses.

Late in 1937 respondent sold more than 100 mattresses of its "King-O-Rest" quality to Gimbel Brothers in Milwaukee, Wis., at a price of $13.36 each, less 5 percent for cash, which mattresses were price-marked by respondent at $39.50. These mattresses were advertised by Gimbel Brothers in part as follows:

Phenomenal Purchase!
"KING-O-REST"
$39.50 Innerspring
MATTRESSES

Covered with the Finest Imported Damask Ever Shown on a Mattress
No one would think it possible—but Gimbels did it! Every mattress carries the maker's price label, $39.50----- $22.95

Numbers of the mattresses in question were sold by Gimbel Bros. at $22.95, and as to those that may not have been sold pursuant to this advertisement it was not possible to determine whether they were also sold at $22.95 or at some other price.

Respondent's mattresses were also sold by Michaels Bros. of Brooklyn, N. Y., pursuant to an advertisement which was in part as follows:

The "King-O-Rest" Innerspring Mattress Covered in Imported Belgian Table Panel Damask

HALF-PRICE at..... $18.95

One that will assure you of perfect rest during the coming year. The manufacturer set the price of $39.50 for this mattress and that is the price on the label. As a feature of our Sale, we are presenting the FAMOUS KING-O-REST at less than HALF PRICE.....

The Commission concludes that many of the price markings placed on its mattresses by respondent are arbitrary and fictitious in that they are greatly in excess of the retail value and prices at which such mattresses are generally sold to the purchasing public, and that such fictitious price markings place in the hands of department stores and other retail dealers a means whereby they may mislead and deceive the purchasing public.

PAR. 6. The acts and practices of respondent as herein set forth have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent's mattresses possess characteristics and qualities which they do not in fact possess, and that such products customarily sell for certain specified prices when they do not in fact sell for such prices. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief the purchasing public has been induced to, and has, purchased substantial quantities of respondent's mattresses. In consequence, trade has been diverted to respondent from its competitors and thereby substantial injury has been done, and is being done, by the respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence in support of and in opposition to the complaint taken before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by counsel, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent Superior Felt and Bedding Company, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of mattresses and other products in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing by the use of fictitious price marks, or in any other manner, that mattresses or other products have retail values or prices in excess of the prices at which such products are regularly and customarily sold at retail.

2. Using on or in connection with mattresses or other products fictitious price representations or marks which represent or imply, or placing in the hands of others such means of representing, that the retail value or price of mattresses or other products is in excess of the price at which such mattresses or other products are regularly and customarily sold at retail.

3. Representing by the use of the words "Posture Builder," or any other word or words of similar import or meaning, or in any other manner, that respondent's mattresses affect the posture, correct or assist in correcting defects of posture, or improve the posture of the user of such mattresses.

4. Using the term "Hospital Mattress" or "General Hospital Mattress," either separately or accompanied by the symbol "H" or a red cross, to designate, describe, or refer to mattresses not in general use in hospitals; or otherwise representing in any manner that such mattresses are in general use in hospitals.

5. Using the term "Just what the doctor ordered," or the symbol "H," or a picture of a doctor, or a red cross, either separately or together, to designate, describe, or refer to mattresses not designed, sponsored, approved, or recommended by members of the medical profession; or otherwise representing in any manner that such mattresses have been designed, sponsored, approved, or recommended by members of the medical profession.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after the service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

PHILIP JABLON, TRADING AS BELL YARN COMPANY AND WONOCO YARN COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4326. Complaint, Oct. 2, 1940—Decision, Apr. 6, 1942

Where an individual, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of hand knitting yarn, to retail dealers and also direct to the purchasing public; on color cards containing samples of the various types and grades offered, distributed among prospective purchasers, and on labels and tags attached to the yarns themselves—

- (a) Made use of names (1) "Cashmere Sport" and "Imported Cashmere Blend," and (2) "Zephyr Tweed DeLuxe," "Mystic Tweed Crepe" and "Paisley Tweed" to describe certain of his products; notwithstanding the fact said yarns were, respectively, not made entirely from the hair of the cashmere goat, or composed entirely of wool as denoted by word "tweed," but said "Cashmere Sport" was composed wholly of other wool than cashmere, and "Cashmere Blend" contained substantial percentages of other materials; said "Paisley Tweed" was entirely rayon and the others, while composed principally of wool, contained substantial percentages of rayon;
- (b) Made use of word "wool" to designate certain of his yarns, as "Luster Wool" and "Wool Flake," and of word "Angora" and simulation thereof, "Angoray"; notwithstanding said "wool" yarns were not composed entirely of wool but contained large percentages of rayon, while neither of said "Angora" products contained hair of the Angora goat, but were composed entirely of other materials;
- (c) Made use of words "Luster Shetland" and "Shetland Floss," and "Genuine Camel Hair" to designate certain yarns; notwithstanding fact former yarns contained none of the wool—as understood by a substantial portion of the purchasing public—made from sheep grown on the Shetland Islands or on the contiguous mainland of Scotland; while others contained no Camel hair;
- (d) Made use of word "crepe" to designate certain products as "Pebble Crepe" and "Speckle Crepe"; notwithstanding fact said yarns were not, as long understood by public from such unqualified use of word "crepe," made entirely of silk, product of the cocoon of the silk worm, but were composed of a mixture of wool and rayon, or cotton and rayon, and contained no silk;
- (e) Made use of word "Saxony" to designate certain products; when neither yarns thus designated nor wool used therein were imported from the Province of Saxony, as implied;
- (f) Advertised and sold various yarns composed in whole or in part of rayon, but with appearance of wool or wool and silk without disclosing content of rayon which, when made to simulate silk or wool, is practically indistinguishable by purchasing public therefrom; with result that the public purchased such yarns as being entirely wool, or wool and silk; and

(g) Represented that he was an importer and imported certain of his yarns, through use on his letterheads of the legend "Importers of D. M. C.—French—Angora—Wool—Cottons"; the facts being that while at one time he did import a limited amount of goods from foreign countries, since 1928 or 1929 he had obtained all of his products in the United States;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public, which prefers to deal direct with importers and purchase imported products, and to cause it to purchase substantial quantities of his products as a result:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. S. Robert Israel, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Philip Jablon, individually and trading as Bell Yarn Co. and as Wonoco Yarn Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Philip Jablon is an individual trading as Bell Yarn Co. and as Wonoco Yarn Co., with his office and principal place of business located at 371 Grand St., in the city of New York, State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and for more than 2 years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of various grades and types of knitting yarn. Respondent causes his said products, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in his said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his said products, the respondent has engaged in the practice of falsely representing the constituent fiber or material of which his products are made, such false representations being made by means of statements and legends appearing in catalogs, sample books, display cards, price lists, and other printed and written material, and on tags and labels attached to such products.

Typical of the aforesaid practice is the use by the respondent of the words "Cashmere Sport" and "Imported Cashmere Blend" to designate and describe certain of his yarns which are not composed entirely of fiber made from the hair of the cashmere goat. The yarn designated "Cashmere Sport" does not contain any of such fiber but is composed entirely of other wool. The yarn designated "Imported Cashmere Blend," while containing some of such fiber, is composed principally of other wool or of a mixture of wool and other material.

The word "cashmere" has long been applied to a particular type of wool fiber which is made from the hair of the cashmere goat and which has for a long time been well and favorably known to the purchasing public. The word "cashmere," when used to designate or describe yarns having the general appearance of wool fibers, is understood by the purchasing public as denoting yarns composed entirely of fiber made from the hair of the cashmere goat.

A further example of respondent's practice is the use of the words "Sporting Angora" and "Angoray" to designate and describe yarns which are not composed of fiber made from the hair of the angora goat but are composed of fiber made from other wool.

The word "angora" has long been understood by the purchasing public as denoting fiber made entirely from the hair of the angora goat, and when such term or a simulation thereof is used to designate or describe a product having the appearance of wool fiber such term is understood by the purchasing public as denoting a product made entirely from the hair of the angora goat.

A further example of the respondent's practice is the use by respondent of the terms "Zephyr Tweed Deluxe" and "Bermuda Tweed" to designate and describe certain of its yarns which are not composed entirely of wool. The yarn designated "Zephyr Tweed Deluxe" is composed of equal parts of wool and rayon, and the yarn designated "Bermuda Tweed" contains no wool but is composed of a mixture of cotton and rayon.

The word "tweed" has for a long time been understood by the purchasing public as denoting a certain kind of fabric composed entirely of wool, and such fabric is well and favorably known to the purchasing public.

Complaint

34 F. T. C.

A further example of the respondent's practice is the use of the term "Genuine Camel Hair" to designate and describe a yarn which in fact contains practically no camel hair but is composed almost entirely of other materials.

A further example of the respondent's practice is the use of the term "Luster Wool" to designate and describe a yarn which is not composed entirely of wool but is composed of approximately equal quantities of wool and rayon.

PAR. 4. Another and typical act and practice on the part of the respondent is that of falsely representing that certain of his yarns are composed of silk or of a mixture of silk and wool, when such is not the fact. Among such representations are the legends "Crepe Velvette," and "Mystic Tweed Crepe," which are used by the respondent to designate and describe certain yarns which do not in fact contain any silk but are composed of a mixture of wool and rayon.

The word "silk" has had for many years and still has in the mind of the purchasing public a definite and specific meaning, to wit, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm. Silk products for many years have held and still hold the confidence and esteem of the public for their preeminent qualities. Silk fiber has long been woven into a variety of fabrics, and certain distinctive terms have been applied to the fabrics resulting from the different types of weaving of silk fiber. Among such terms is the term "crepe." Products described and referred to as "crepe" have been and are associated in the mind of the purchasing public with fabrics made from silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm. When the term "crepe" is used to designate knitting yarns, such term is understood by the purchasing public as denoting that such products are made from silk.

Rayon is a chemically manufactured fiber or fabric which may be so manufactured as to simulate silk or wool. When manufactured to simulate silk it has the appearance and feel of silk, and when manufactured to simulate wool it has the appearance of wool. By reason of these qualities, rayon, when manufactured to simulate silk or wool and not designated as rayon, is by the purchasing public practically indistinguishable from silk or wool, as the case may be. Products made of rayon are accepted by the purchasing public as silk or wool, even though such products may not be designated by terms representing or implying that they are silk or wool.

The respondent also sells and distributes other types of yarn containing rayon, without disclosing the rayon content of such products. Among such products are the yarns hereinbefore referred to as "Zephyr Tweed Deluxe," "Bermuda Tweed" and "Luster Wool", and certain other yarns designated by the respondents as "Pompadour Zephyr" and "Snow Flake." All of said yarns contain substantial percentages of rayon which has been manufactured so as to simulate wool or a mixture of silk and wool, and said products have the appearance of wool or a mixture of silk and wool and are understood and accepted by the purchasing public as such.

PAR. 5. The respondent also engages in the practice of falsely representing the place of origin of certain of his products. Among and typical of such false representations are the legends "Scotch Tweed," "Luster Shetland," "Bermuda Tweed," "French Zephyr" and "Imported Cashmere Blend," which the respondent uses to designate various yarns. Through the use of such legends the respondent represents that the yarn designated "Scotch Tweed" is made in Scotland; that the yarn designated "Luster Shetland" is made in the Shetland Islands; that the yarn designated "Bermuda Tweed" is made in Bermuda; that the yarn designated "French Zephyr" is made in France; and that the yarn designated "Imported Cashmere Blend" is not of domestic origin but is imported into the United States from some other country. In truth and in fact, none of said yarns are made in or imported from other countries but all of them are manufactured in the United States.

PAR. 6. The respondent also represents, through the use of the legend "Importers of D. M. C.—French—Angora—Wool—Cottons" in connection with his trade names, that he is an importer, when in fact respondent is not an importer but obtains all of his products from manufacturers or dealers in the United States.

There is a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for dealing direct with importers of yarns and for purchasing imported yarns, such preference being based in part upon a belief that thereby superior quality and other advantages may be obtained.

PAR. 7. The acts and practices of the respondent as herein set forth, including the failure to disclose that respondent's products contain rayon, have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the constituent fibers or materials of which respondent's products are made, the place of origin of such products, and respondent's business status. As a result, the purchasing public has been induced to, and has, purchased substantial quantities of respondent's products.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on October 2, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Philip Jablon, an individual trading as Bell Yarn Co. and as Wonoco Yarn Co., charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by the attorney for the respondent, before Charles A. Vilas, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and the exceptions to such report, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Philip Jablon, is an individual trading as Bell Yarn Co. and as Wonoco Yarn Co., with his office and principal place of business at 371 Grand Street, New York City, N. Y. Respondent is now, and for more than four years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various grades and types of hand-knitting yarn. Respondent sells his products at wholesale to retail dealers who in turn resell such products to the public, and respondent also sells direct to the purchasing public by means of orders obtained and filled through the mail.

PAR. 2. Respondent causes and has caused his products, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in his products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his business and for the purpose of promoting the sale of his products, respondent distributes among prospective purchasers certain advertising material known as color cards, which contain samples of the various types and grades of yarn offered for sale by respondent. The various yarns are designated and described in such color cards by certain names, and these names are also used by respondent on labels and tags attached by respondent to the yarns and which remain on the yarns until after they are displayed and sold to the public.

Among the names which have been used by the respondent to designate and describe certain of his yarns are "Cashmere Sport" and "Imported Cashmere Blend." The word "cashmere" when applied to wool products, has long been understood by a substantial portion of the purchasing public as denoting that the product so designated is made from the hair of the cashmere goat. The yarn designated by respondent as "Cashmere Sport" did not in fact contain any hair of the cashmere goat but was composed wholly of other wool. The yarn designated by respondent as "Imported Cashmere Blend" was not made entirely of the hair of the cashmere goat, but contained substantial percentages of other materials as well.

Other names used by respondent to designate certain of his yarns are "Zephyr Tweed Deluxe," "Mystic Tweed Crepe," and "Paisley Tweed." The word "tweed" has long been understood by a substantial portion of the purchasing public as denoting products composed entirely of wool. The yarn designated by respondent as "Paisley Tweed" does not in fact contain any wool but is composed entirely of rayon. The yarns designated by respondent as "Mystic Tweed Crepe" and "Zephyr Tweed Deluxe," while composed principally of wool, contain substantial percentages of rayon.

Respondent also uses the word "wool" to designate certain of his yarns as "Luster Wool" and "Wool Flake," thus representing that such yarns are composed entirely of wool. The yarns so designated are not in fact composed wholly of wool but both of such yarns contain large percentages of rayon.

Respondent has also used the word "Angora" and a simulation thereof, "Angoray," to designate certain of his yarns. The word angora has long been understood by the purchasing public as denoting products made from the hair of the angora goat. Neither of the yarns so designated by respondent contains any hair of the angora goat, but both of such yarns are composed entirely of other materials.

Respondent also uses the word "shetland" to designate certain of his yarns, as "Luster Shetland" and "Shetland Floss." The word shetland, when applied to knitting yarns, is understood by a substantial portion of the purchasing public as denoting yarns made of wool from shetland sheep grown on the Shetland Islands or on the contiguous mainland of Scotland. The yarns so designated by respondent do not in fact contain any of such wool. Respondent also represents, through the use of the words "Genuine Camel Hair" to designate certain of his yarns, that such yarns are composed entirely of camel hair. The yarns so designated do not in fact contain any camel hair but are composed entirely of other wool.

Respondent also uses the word "crepe" to designate certain of his yarns, as "Pebble Crepe" and "Speckle Crepe." The unqualified word "crepe" has long been understood by a substantial portion of the purchasing public as denoting products made entirely of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm. Neither of the yarns so designated by respondent contains any silk, but such yarns are composed of a mixture of wool and rayon or cotton and rayon.

Respondent also uses the word "Saxony" to designate certain of his yarns. To a substantial portion of the purchasing public the word saxony, when so used, denotes that such yarns, or the wool composing them, is imported from the Province of Saxony. In fact neither the yarns so designated by the respondent nor the wool used therein is imported from Saxony.

Respondent has also engaged in the practice of advertising and selling various yarns composed in whole or in part of rayon, without disclosing such rayon content. Rayon is a chemically manufactured fiber or fabric which may be so manufactured as to simulate silk or wool. When manufactured to simulate silk, it has the appearance and feel of silk, and when manufactured to simulate wool, it has the appearance of wool. By reason of these qualities, rayon, when manufactured to simulate silk or wool and not designated as rayon is practically indistinguishable by the purchasing public from silk or wool, as the case may be. Respondent's yarns have the appearance of wool or of wool and silk, and the failure of respondent to disclose the rayon content of such yarns has resulted in the purchase of such yarns by a substantial portion of the public under the erroneous impression that they were composed entirely of wool or of wool and silk.

PAR. 4. Respondent also represents, through the use on his letterheads of the legend "Importers of D. M. C.—French—Angora—Wool—Cottons," that he is an importer and that he imports certain of the yarns sold by him. While respondent did at one time import a limited amount of goods from foreign countries, he has not imported any goods since 1928 or 1929. Since that time he has obtained all of his products from manufacturers or dealers in the United States. There is a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for dealing direct with importers and for purchasing imported products.

PAR. 5. The Commission finds further that the acts and practices of the respondent as herein described have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the nature, character, and origin of respondent's products, and with respect to respondent's business status, and the tendency and capacity to cause such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's products as a result of the erroneous beliefs so engendered.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Charles A. Vilas, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and the exceptions to such report, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint (oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Philip Jablon, individually and trading as Bell Yarn Co. and as Wonoco Yarn Co., or trading under any other name, and his agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of his knitting yarns in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word "cashmere," or any other word of similar import to designate or describe any product which is not composed entirely of the hair of the cashmere goat: Provided, however, That in the case of a product composed in part of the hair of the cashmere goat and in part of other fibers or materials, such word may be used as descriptive of the cashmere fiber content if there are used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing such other constituent fibers or materials.

2. Using the words "wool" or "tweed," or any other word indicative of wool, to designate or describe any product which is not composed entirely of wool; provided, however, that in the case of a product composed in part of wool and in part of other fibers or materials, such words may be used as descriptive of the wool content if there are used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing such other constituent fibers or materials.

3. Using the words "angora" or "angoray," or any other word of similar import, to designate or describe any product which is not composed entirely of the hair of the angora goat; provided, however, that in the case of a product composed in part of the hair of the angora goat and in part of other fibers or materials, such word may be used as descriptive of the angora fiber content if there are used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing such other constituent fibers or materials.

4. Using the word "shetland," or any other word of similar import, to designate or describe any product which is not made from the wool of shetland sheep grown on the Shetland Islands or the contiguous mainland of Scotland; provided, however, that in the case of a product composed in part of such wool and in part of other fibers or materials, such word may be used as descriptive of the Shetland wool content if there are used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing such other constituent fibers or materials.

5. Using the words "camel hair," or any other words of similar import, to designate or describe any product which is not composed entirely of camel hair; provided, however, that in the case of a product composed in part of camel hair and in part of other fibers or materials, such words may be used as descriptive of the camel hair content if there are used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words truthfully describing such other constituent fibers or materials.

6. Using the unqualified word "crepe," or any other descriptive term indicative of silk, to designate or describe any product which is not composed entirely of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm; provided, however, that such word or descriptive term may be used truthfully to designate or describe the type of weave, construction, or finish, if such word is qualified by using in immediate connection or conjunction therewith, in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness, words clearly and accurately naming the fibers or materials from which such product is made.

7. Using the word "saxony" to designate or describe any product which is not imported from the Province of Saxony or made of materials imported from the Province of Saxony.

8. Advertising, offering for sale, or selling products composed in whole or in part of rayon without clearly disclosing such rayon content, and when such products are composed in part of rayon and in part of other fibers or materials, all of such fibers or materials, including the rayon, shall be clearly and accurately disclosed.

9. Using the word "importers," or any other word of similar import, to designate or describe respondent's business, or otherwise representing that respondent is an importer.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That no provision in this order shall be construed as relieving respondent in any respect of the necessity of complying with the requirements of the Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939 and the authorized rules and regulations thereunder.

IN THE MATTER OF

UNITED STATES RAW SKINS CORPORATION AND LIEBERSON NOVELTY COMPANY, INC.

Docket 4469. Complaint, Feb. 27, 1941—Decision, Apr. 9, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of domestic and imported leathers—

- (a) Represented that lambskin, sheepskin, or calfskin sueded and finished so as to simulate antelope skin was such, through use of description "Black French Antelope Suede" in its invoices to a concern manufacturing women's handbags, belts and other leather goods; and

Where said corporate purchaser—

- (b) Represented that the handbags made from such leather and offered for sale by it were made of antelope skin, through advertising in periodicals and trade journals "Newest French Antelope Suede Bags * * *," "Genuine French Antelope Suede Bag * * *," and "Illustrated are four of many of our attractive numbers in French Antelope Suede";

The facts being that while term "Antelope Suede" is understood by importers, tanners, and manufacturers of leather goods as denoting lambskin, sheepskin, or other leathers sueded and finished to resemble the very rare and expensive antelope skin rather than as denoting the genuine skin itself, a substantial portion of the purchasing public understands unqualified word "antelope," thus applied, to mean that the articles are made of genuine antelope skin, and understands "antelope suede" to mean such skin thus finished, and there is a preference on its part for leather goods made of genuine antelope skin over those made of other leathers sueded and processed so as to resemble antelope;

With the result that corporation first referred to, through describing and invoicing its products as above set forth, initiated, contributed to, and, in effect, participated in, the subsequent misrepresentations made by latter purchaser-concern, and with tendency and capacity, through aforesaid acts and practices of both corporations, to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that the products in question were made of genuine antelope skin and to cause it, as a result, to purchase substantial quantities of such products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that United States Raw Skins Corporation, a corporation, and Lieberston Novelty Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, United States Raw Skins Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business at 12 East Thirty-third Street, New York City, N. Y. Respondent, Lieberston Novelty Co., Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business at 325 South Market Street, Chicago, Ill.

PAR. 2. Respondent, United States Raw Skins Corporation, is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past engaged in the business of selling domestic and imported leathers to be manufactured into ladies' handbags, belts, and other articles. Respondent, Lieberston Novelty Co., Inc., is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of ladies' handbags, belts, and other articles.

In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, Lieberston Novelty Co., Inc., purchases and has purchased from United States Raw Skins Corporation, and United States Raw Skins Corporation sells and has sold to Lieberston Novelty Co., Inc., domestic and imported leathers to be manufactured into ladies' handbags, belts and other articles.

Respondents, in the course and conduct of their said businesses, cause and have caused their said products when sold to be transported from their respective places of business to the purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of origin of said shipments.

Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their said products, the respondents have disseminated false and misleading statements and representations with respect to the materials of which their said products are made, such statements and representations being inserted in magazines having a general circulation and in invoices and other advertising matter distributed among prospective purchasers and by other means. Among and typical of the false and misleading representations disseminated by respondent, United States Raw Skins Corporation is the following:

Complaint

French Imported Antelope Suede.

Among and typical of the false and misleading representations disseminated as aforesaid by respondent, Lieberston Novelty Co., Inc., are the following:

Newest French Antelope SUEDE BAGS, for Fall
21.35 dozen

Genuine French Antelope Suede Bag with grain handles and side gussets. Envelope effect with gild metal ornament. Top zipper.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the foregoing statements and representations and other of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondent, United States Raw Skins Corporation has represented, directly or by implication, that its said leather which was sold to the respondent, Lieberston Novelty Co., Inc., and to others, was leather produced by tanning antelope hide; and the respondent Lieberston Novelty Co., Inc., has represented that ladies' handbags and other articles made by it from leather purchased from respondent, United States Raw Skins Corporation were made from leather produced by tanning antelope hide.

Said statements and representations are false, misleading, and deceptive. In truth and in fact, the leather sold by respondent, United States Raw Skins Corporation and purchased by respondent, Lieberston Novelty Co., Inc., among others, was leather produced by tanning hides other than antelope hide. In truth and in fact, such ladies' handbags, belts, and other articles are not made from the hide of an antelope but are made from a leather material other than the hide of an antelope, which has been tanned in such a manner that it simulates antelope leather.

PAR. 5. There is a marked preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for ladies' handbags, belts, and other articles made from the hide of an antelope over ladies' handbags, belts, and other articles made from other leather materials.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of the acts and practices hereinbefore set forth has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents' products are made of antelope leather when such is not the fact. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief, the purchasing public has been induced to, and has, purchased a substantial quantity of respondents' said products.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on February 27, 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, United States Raw Skins Corporation, a corporation, and Lieberman Novelty Co., Inc., a corporation, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by the attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by attorneys for the respondents, before Andrew B. Duvall, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answers thereto, testimony and other evidence, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, United States Raw Skins Corporation, is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business located at 12 East Thirty-third Street, New York City, N. Y. Respondent, Lieberman Novelty Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business located at 325 South Market Street, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent, United States Raw Skins Corporation, is now, and for a number of years last past has been, engaged in the business of selling both domestic and imported leathers, which are used by the purchasers thereof in the manufacture of women's handbags, belts, and other leather articles. Respondent, Lieberston Novelty Co., Inc., is now, and for a number of years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of women's handbags, belts, and other leather goods.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, the respondents cause their products, when sold, to be transported from their places of business to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of origin of such shipments. At all times mentioned herein the respondents have maintained a course of trade in their respective products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business and for the purpose of promoting the sale of its products, respondent, Lieberston Novelty Co., Inc., advertises its products in various periodicals and trade journals. In certain of the advertisements disseminated by the company with respect to certain of its handbags, the following statements appeared:

Newest French Antelope SUEDE BAGS, for Fall

Genuine French Antelope Suede Bags with gros-grain handles and side gussets. Envelope effect with gild medal ornament. Top zipper.

Illustrated are four of our many attractive numbers in imported French Antelope Suede and Dull Finish Crushed Calf.

The leather used by respondent, Lieberston Novelty Co., Inc., in the manufacture of the handbags so advertised was purchased by it from respondent, United States Raw Skins Corporation. Certain shipments of such leather were described by United States Raw Skins Corporation in its invoices to the Lieberston Novelty Co., Inc., as "Black French Antelope Suede," while other shipments were invoiced as "Black French Antelope Finish Suede."

PAR. 4. Through the use of the description "Black French Antelope Suede" in its invoices, respondent, United States Raw Skins Corporation, represented that the leather in question was antelope skin, and respondent, Lieberston Novelty Co., Inc., through the use of the foregoing advertisements, represented that the handbags offered for sale by it were made of antelope skin. The leather from which such handbags were made was not in fact antelope skin, but was lambskin, sheepskin, or calfskin which had been sueded and finished in such manner that it simulated antelope skin.

PAR. 5. The record discloses that genuine antelope skin is very rare and very expensive, and that little of it is available in the market. The record further indicates that the term "Antelope Suede" is understood by importers, tanners and manufacturers of leather goods as denoting lambskin, sheepskin, or other leathers which have been sueded and finished to resemble antelope skin, rather than as denoting genuine antelope skin. It is further evident from the record, however, that a substantial portion of the purchasing public is not familiar with the technical meaning of the term as used in the trade, and that such portion of the public understands that the unqualified word "antelope," when applied to leather goods means that the articles to which the term is applied are in fact made of genuine antelope skin. Such portion of the public further understands that the unqualified words "Antelope Suede" mean antelope skin which has been finished as a suede. There is also a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the public for leather goods made of genuine antelope skin over goods made of other leathers which have been sueded and processed in such manner that they resemble antelope skin.

PAR. 6. While the representations made by the United States Raw Skins Corporation were made primarily to the Lieberston Novelty Co., Inc., rather than to retail dealers and the purchasing public, the Commission finds that by describing and invoicing its products in the manner set forth above, the corporation initiated, contributed to, and in effect participated in, the subsequent misrepresentations made by respondent, Lieberston Novelty Co., Inc.

PAR. 7. The Commission finds further that the acts and practices of the respondents as herein described have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the products sold by respondent, Lieberston Novelty Co., Inc., are made of genuine antelope skin, and the tendency and capacity to cause such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of such products as the result of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

ents, testimony and other evidence taken before a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint (oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act;

It is ordered, That respondent, United States Raw Skins Corporation, a corporation, and its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of said respondent's leathers in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Using the word "antelope," or any other word of similar import, to designate or describe leather which is not in fact made from the skin of an antelope, or otherwise representing that said respondent's products are made from the skin of an antelope when such products are in fact made from the skins of other animals.

It is further ordered, That respondent, Lieberston Novelty Co., Inc., a corporation, and its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of said respondent's handbags, belts or other leather products in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Using the word "antelope," or any other word of similar import, to designate or describe products which are not in fact made from the skin of an antelope, or otherwise representing that said respondent's products are made from the skin of an antelope when such products are in fact made from the skins of other animals.

Provided, however, That in the case of products not made of antelope skin but made of skin other than antelope skin which has been processed or finished to resemble antelope skin, this order shall not be construed to prohibit the use of the words "Antelope Finish" in describing such products, when such words are immediately accompanied by other words clearly designating the kind of skin used, and when such accompanying words and the word "Finish" are at least equal in size and conspicuousness with the word "Antelope."

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

PENN-LUB OIL PRODUCTS CO.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4524. Complaint, June 26, 1941—Decision, Apr. 13, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of reclaimed motor oils which had the appearance of new, unused oil, and which it sold in the same type of cans used in sale of the new, to wholesalers and retailers for resale—

- (a) Represented that said product was "Pennsylvania Oil" and "100% Pure Paraffin Base" through use of words "Penn-Lub" as part of its corporate name and as brand name on containers of its products, together with such statements thereon as "100% Pure Paraffin Base Motor Oil," "High Flash—High Fire," "Super Heat Resisting Quality," "Will Not Thin Out," "Winter Grades—Free Flowing—Low Cold Test," and "Motor Oil Specially Processed for High Speed Motors;"

The facts being its said product was not, as understood by trade and purchasing public from term "Pennsylvania Oil," made from crude oil produced in the Pennsylvania oil fields, long widely advertised, sold and distributed under various emblems, marks, and brand names in connection with or containing said word or abbreviations thereof, and preferred by a substantial part of public as superior to oil refined from crudes originating in other regions, and did not have a paraffin base, as also preferred by many, but was obtained from crankcase drainings and contained a mixture of oils from various fields in addition to the Pennsylvania region, including those not having a paraffin base; and reclaiming process employed by it did not completely segregate oils originating in other regions from Pennsylvania oils, nor completely separate oils having a paraffin base from those having a nonparaffin base; and

- (b) Advertised, invoiced and marketed its said reclaimed and processed new appearing oil, contained as aforesaid, with no label or marking on cans to indicate or disclose that product in question was old, used oil;

With the result of placing in the hands of unscrupulous or uninformed dealers a means whereby they might mislead and deceive the purchasing public, and with effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial number of wholesalers, retailers and members of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that aforesaid statements were true, thereby inducing them to purchase said product:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the injury and prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Penn-Lub Oil Products Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Penn-Lub Oil Products Co., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey with its principal office and place of business located at 85 Gotthart Street, Newark, N. J.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of reclaimed motor oils to wholesalers and retail distributors for resale to the public. Respondent causes said product when sold to be transported from its place of business in the State of New Jersey to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of New Jersey and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in said product so sold and distributed by it in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its product, in commerce as herein described, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase thereof, respondent has caused and now causes to be imprinted upon the containers in which its said product is displayed and sold, the following statements and representations:

PAR. 4. Respondent, through the use of the above statements and representations, represents and implies and causes to be represented and implied, to the purchasing public and to wholesalers and retailers purchasing said product for resale to the public, that said product is Pennsylvania oil with 100 percent paraffin base.

The use by the respondent of the brand name "Penn-Lub" and of the words "Penn-Lub" as a part of its corporate name, within themselves, serve as representations that respondent's said product is oil from the Pennsylvania grade oil field.

PAR. 5. Respondent's said statements and representations as aforesaid are false, misleading, deceptive and untrue. In truth and in fact, respondent's said product is not oil obtained from the Pennsylvania grade oil field, nor is it made wholly from oil with a 100 percent paraffin base obtained from the Pennsylvania grade crude oil region. The respondent's product is in fact obtained from the drainings of motor crank cases which said drainings contain a mixture of oils previously refined from crude oils coming from various oil fields other than and in addition to the Pennsylvania grade region, including regions producing oils not having a paraffin base. The process by which respondent's product is prepared does not completely segregate the reclaimed oils originating in oil regions other than the Pennsylvania grade region from the reclaimed oil originating in such region, nor does said process completely separate the reclaimed oils having a paraffin base from those having a nonparaffin base.

34 F. T. C.

The term "Pennsylvania Oil" as used in the petroleum industry and as understood by the trade and the purchasing public means oil made from crude oil produced in the geographical area known as the Pennsylvania oil field. For many years, Pennsylvania lubricating or motor oil has been widely advertised, sold, and distributed under various emblems; marks, and brand names in connection with or containing the word "Pennsylvania" or some abbreviation or derivation thereof calculated to show the quality and source of origin of such oil; and the purchasing public not only has become accustomed to recognizing and accepting such indications of the same, but further, a substantial portion of said public has come to regard such oil as a superior grade of oil to be preferred over oil refined from crude oil originating in other regions. Many members of the purchasing public also prefer motor oils having a paraffin base, irrespective of the place of origin of such oils, to motor oils not having such base.

PAR. 6. Respondent, through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth imports or implies that its said reclaimed and processed motor oil is new and unused oil made from virgin crude oil. The implication that respondent's product is new and unused oil refined from virgin crude oil is also created by the fact that respondent's product, when reclaimed and processed, has the appearance of new unused oil and by the further fact that it is sold in cans of the general size, kind and appearance of those used in the sale of new, unused oil. Said containers bear no label or marking indicating or disclosing that said product is old used oil which has been reclaimed and processed.

The general understanding and belief on the part of dealers and purchasing public, in the absence of information clearly disclosing the contrary, is that motor oil having the appearance of new and unused oil and sold in containers such as are used for new oil is in fact new and unused oil and not used oil which has been reclaimed and processed. There is a marked preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for new and unused oil over used oil which has been reclaimed and processed, such preference being due in part to a belief on the part of the public that new unused oil is superior in quality to oil which has been previously used.

In truth and in fact, respondent's said motor oil is not new and unused oil refined from virgin crude oil, but is composed entirely of old used oil from the drainings of motor crankcases which has been reclaimed and processed.

PAR. 7. The respondent's said acts and practices as herein set forth serve also to place in the hands of unscrupulous or uninformed wholesalers and retailers a means and instrumentality whereby in the sale of respondent's product, such parties may mislead and deceive the purchasing public in the manner and method as herein described.

PAR. 8. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and claims with respect to its product, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial number of wholesalers, retailers, and members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and claims are true and causes, and has caused, a substantial number of wholesalers, retailers, and the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's product.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices by the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on June 26, 1941, issued, and on June 27, 1941, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Penn-Lub Oil Products Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

PAR. 4. Respondent, through the use of the above statements and representations, represents and implies and causes to be represented and implied, to the purchasing public and to wholesalers and retailers purchasing said product for resale to the public, that said product is Pennsylvania Oil with 100-percent pure paraffin base.

The use by the respondent of the brand name "Penn-Lub" and of the words "Penn-Lub" as a part of its corporate name, within themselves, serve as representations that respondent's said product is oil from the Pennsylvania grade oil field.

PAR. 5. Respondent's said statements and representations as aforesaid are false, misleading, deceptive and untrue. In truth and in fact, respondent's said product is not oil obtained from the Pennsylvania grade oil field, nor is it made wholly from oil with a 100-percent paraffin base obtained from the Pennsylvania grade crude oil region. The respondent's product is in fact obtained from the drainings of motor crank cases which said drainings contain a mixture of oils previously refined from crude oils coming from various oil fields other than and in addition to the Pennsylvania grade region, including regions producing oils not having a paraffin base. The process by which respondent's product is prepared does not completely segregate the reclaimed oils originating in oil regions other than the Pennsylvania grade region from the reclaimed oil originating in such region, nor does said process completely separate the reclaimed oils having a paraffin base from those having a nonparaffin base.

The term "Pennsylvania Oil" as used in the petroleum industry and as understood by the trade and the purchasing public means oil made from crude oil produced in the geographical area known as the Pennsylvania oil field. For many years, Pennsylvania lubricating or motor oil has been widely advertised, sold and distributed under various emblems, marks, and brand names in connection with or containing the word "Pennsylvania" or some abbreviation or derivation thereof calculated to show the quality and source of origin of such oil; and the purchasing public not only has become accustomed to recognizing and accepting such indications of the same, but further, a substantial portion of said public has come to regard such oil as a superior grade of oil to be preferred over oil refined from crude oil originating in other regions. Many members of the purchasing public also prefer motor oils having a paraffin base, irrespective of the place of origin of such oils, to motor oils not having such base.

PAR. 6. Respondent, through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth imports or implies that its said reclaimed and processed motor oil is new and unused oil made from virgin crude oil. The implication that respondent's product is new and unused oil refined from virgin crude oil is also created by the fact that respondent's product, when reclaimed and processed, has the appearance of new unused oil and by the further fact that it is sold in cans of the general size, kind and appearance of those used in the sale of new, unused oil. Said containers bear no label or marking indicating or disclosing that said product is old used oil which has been reclaimed and processed.

The general understanding and belief on the part of dealers and purchasing public, in the absence of information clearly disclosing the contrary, is that motor oil having the appearance of new and unused oil and sold in containers such as are used for new oil is in fact new and unused oil and not used oil which has been reclaimed and processed. There is a marked preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for new and unused oil over used oil which has been reclaimed and processed, such preference being due in part to a belief on the part of the public that new unused oil is superior in quality to oil which has been previously used.

In truth and in fact, respondent's said motor oil is not new and unused oil refined from virgin crude oil, but is composed entirely of old used oil from the drainings of motor crankcases which has been reclaimed and processed.

PAR. 7. The respondent's said acts and practices as herein set forth serve also to place in the hands of unscrupulous or uninformed wholesalers and retailers a means and instrumentality whereby in the sale of respondent's product, such parties may mislead and deceive the purchasing public in the manner and method as herein described.

PAR. 8. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements, representations and claims with respect to its product, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial number of wholesalers, retailers and members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations and claims are true and causes, and has caused, a substantial number of wholesalers, retailers, and the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's product.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the substitute answer of respondent, in which substitute answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Penn-Lub Oil Products Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of oil or oil products in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

(1) Using the term "Penn-Lub," or the word "Pennsylvania," or any abbreviation or colorable simulation thereof, including an outline map or other symbol designating Pennsylvania, in or as a part of any trade name for, or to otherwise designate, describe, or refer to, any oil or oil product not composed wholly of oil from the Pennsylvania grade oil fields: Provided, this shall not prevent the use of such words, terms, or symbols to describe or refer to the proportion of oil in any such product derived from Pennsylvania grade oil fields if there are used in immediate connection and conjunction therewith words and figures of at least equal size and conspicuousness truthfully designating the percentage of oil in such product actually derived from Pennsylvania grade oil fields.

2. Using the words "Penn-Lub" in or as a part of any corporate name under which oil or oil products containing oil not derived from the Pennsylvania grade oil fields are advertised, offered for sale, and sold; or using the word "Pennsylvania" or any abbreviation or colorable simulation thereof in or as a part of any such corporate name.

3. Representing in any manner that oil or oil products, or any proportion thereof, not derived from paraffin base crude oil, are so derived, or are paraffin oil or oil products.

4. Advertising, invoicing, distributing, or marketing used oil which has been reclaimed, either with or without reprocessing or re-refining, without unequivocally disclosing in a clear, conspicuous, and legible manner in such invoices and advertising and upon the containers of such oil in a clear, conspicuous, and permanent manner that such product is, or has been, reclaimed from used oil; or representing in any manner, directly or indirectly, that used oil which has been reclaimed, with or without reprocessing or re-refining, is new or unused oil.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

ALBERT ROSE, TRADING AS PARKER-THOMPSON
COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4699. Complaint, Feb. 4, 1942—Decision, Apr. 13, 1942

Where an individual engaged in competitive sale and distribution of suits, overcoats, and other merchandise in the District of Columbia—
Sold and distributed his said products to the purchasing public through means of sales plans or methods involving operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, typical of which was his so-called "Club" plan, pursuant to which he supplied each participant with a contract of purchase for a suit or overcoat for $39, their normal retail value, to be paid at the rate of $1 per week, and subject to the provision that should the purchaser's "ledger" or contract number correspond with the last three numbers of the Treasury balance figures, such purchaser would receive the garment without payment of remaining weekly amounts due thereon; and thereby, in so selling and distributing his merchandise in accordance with such plan, involving game of chance or sale of chance to procure an article of merchandise at less than its normal retail price, conducted lotteries, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who do not use methods involving chance, or contrary to public policy;
With the result that many persons were attracted by said methods and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy his merchandise in preference to that of said competitors who do not use such methods, and with tendency and capacity to divert trade to him from them; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:
Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair acts and practices therein.

Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr., for the Commission.

Mr. Joseph B. Danzansky, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Albert Rose, an individual trading and doing business as Parker-Thompson Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Albert Rose, is an individual trading and doing business as Parker-Thompson Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 1205 I Street NW., Washington, D. C. Respondent is now and has been for more than one year last past engaged in the sale and distribution of suits, overcoats, and other articles of merchandise within the District of Columbia. Said respondent sold and has caused and still causes the said garments in which he deals to be sold and distributed from his place of business to purchasers located at various points in the said District of Columbia. There is now and has been a course of trade by respondent in said garments in commerce in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of his business, respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with corporations and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his said business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent is now and has been selling and distributing said merchandise to members of the purchasing public by means of sales plans or methods which involve the operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. One of said sales plans or methods is substantially as follows:

Members of the purchasing public are solicited by respondent or respondent's representatives to purchase a suit of clothes or overcoat under a so-called "club" plan. Respondent supplies each purchaser participating in said plan with a contract of purchase. Said contract provides for the sale by respondent to such purchaser of a suit of clothes or an overcoat for the sum of $39, which said amount is to be paid as follows: $1 when said contract is delivered and $1 in advance each week thereafter until the full amount of the contract has been paid. There is space provided on said contract for the recording of the weekly payments. Each of said contracts has printed thereon a "ledger" number. Purchasers are informed by respondent or respondent's representatives that should said number correspond with the last three numbers of the Treasury balance figures, provided all of said purchaser's weekly payments have been made up to date, then such purchaser would be entitled to and would receive a suit or overcoat without the payment of the remaining weekly payments. Purchasers whose contracts do not bear numbers corresponding with the daily Treasury balance, as above alleged, prior to the payment of the full amount of their contracts are required to pay $39 for their suits or overcoats. All of said suits and overcoats have a normal retail value of $39. The amount which the ultimate consumer pays for one of said suits or overcoats is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent uses and has used various sales plans which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes in connection with the sale and distribution of its merchandise to the consuming public, but said sales plans are similar to the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Respondent has sold and distributed his merchandise to members of the consuming public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans or methods. In so selling and distributing his merchandise, respondent has conducted lotteries in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plans or methods in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public, in the manner above alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, do not use said methods or any methods involving use of a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale of said merchandise in the manner above alleged and are thereby induced and persuaded to buy respondent's merchandise in preference to the merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by the respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to divert trade in commerce in the District of Columbia to respondents from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent sales plans or methods. As a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on February 4, 1942, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Albert Rose, trading as Parker-Thompson Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act. On February 23, 1942, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission, on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Albert Rose, is an individual trading and doing business as Parker-Thompson Co., with his principal office and place of business located at 1205 I Street NW., Washington, D. C. Respondent is now and has been for more than 1 year last past engaged in the sale and distribution of suits, overcoats, and other articles of merchandise within the District of Columbia. Said respondent sold and has caused and still causes the said garments in which he deals to be sold and distributed from his place of business to purchasers located at various points in the said District of Columbia. There is now and has been a course of trade by respondent in said garments in commerce in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of his business, respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with corporations and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his said business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent is now and has been selling and distributing said merchandise to members of the purchasing public by means of sales plans or methods which involve the operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. One of said sales plans or methods is substantially as follows:

Members of the purchasing public are solicited by respondent or respondent's representatives to purchase a suit of clothes or overcoat under a so-called "Club" plan. Respondent supplies each purchaser participating in said plan with a contract of purchase. Said contract provides for the sale by respondent to such purchaser of a suit of clothes or an overcoat for the sum of $39, which said amount is to be paid as follows: One dollar when said contract is delivered and $1 in advance each week thereafter until the full amount of the contract has been paid. There is space provided on said contract for the recording of the weekly payments. Each of said contracts has printed thereon a "ledger" number. Purchasers are informed by respondent or respondent's representatives that should said number correspond with the last three numbers of the Treasury balance figures, provided all of said purchaser's weekly payments have been made up to date, then such purchaser would be entitled to and would receive a suit or overcoat without the payment of the remaining weekly payments. Purchasers whose contracts do not bear numbers corresponding with the daily Treasury balance, as above found, prior to the payment of the full amount of their contracts are required to pay $39 for their suits or overcoats. All of said suits and overcoats have a normal retail value of $39. The amount which the ultimate consumer pays for one of said suits or overcoats is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent uses and has used various sales plans which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes in connection with the sale and distribution of its merchandise to the consuming public, but said sales plans are similar to the one hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Respondent has sold and distributed his merchandise to members of the consuming public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans or methods. In so selling and distributing his merchandise, respondent has conducted lotteries in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plans or methods in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public, in the manner above found, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above found, do not use said methods or any methods involving use of a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale of said merchandise in the manner above found and are thereby induced and persuaded to buy respondent's merchandise in preference to the merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by the respondent, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to divert trade in commerce in the District of Columbia to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent sales plans or methods. As a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Albert Rose, trading as Parker-Thompson Co., or under any other name, his representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of suits, overcoats, or any other merchandise, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise by means of any sales plan or method involving the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

Order

2. Supplying or placing in the hands of others any merchandise, together with a sales plan or method involving the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme by which said merchandise is to be, or may be, sold to the purchasing public.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

J. D. FINE, TRADING AS J. D. FINE CANDY COMPANY

Docket 4709. Complaint, Feb. 13, 1942—Decision, Apr. 13, 1942

Where an individual, engaged in the manufacture and competitive interstate sale and distribution of assortments of candy so packed or assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers, a typical assortment being composed of 72 uniform pieces of candy together with a push card for use in their sale under a plan by which purchaser of 1 for 5 cents became entitled to a push and, if he pushed one of certain numbers, was entitled to exchange his candy piece for from 2 to 4 of said pieces—

Sold such assortments to wholesalers, jobbers and retailers, by whom they were exposed and sold to the purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan involving game of chance or sale of chance to procure candy at prices much less than its normal retail price; and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who do not use any method involving chance or contrary to public policy;

With the result that many persons were attracted by such sales plan and thereby induced to buy and sell his products in preference to those of said competitors, with tendency and capacity thereby to unfairly divert trade to him from them:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and his competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr. for the Commission.

Mr. D. G. Johnson, of Oklahoma City, Okla., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that J. D. Fine, an individual trading as J. D. Fine Candy Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, J. D. Fine, is an individual trading and doing business under the name of J. D. Fine Candy Co., with his office and principal place of business located at 222 Northwest Fourth Street, Oklahoma City, Okla. Respondent is now, and for more than 6 months last past has been, engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said candy, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in Oklahoma City, Okla., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than Oklahoma and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for more than 6 months last past, a course of trade by respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers and retail dealers, certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment includes 72 pieces of candy of like size and shape and a push card. Appearing on the face or the push card is the following legend:

contains 60 pushes, each concealing a number. Said numbers are not therein arranged in numerical sequence. Each purchaser of a "Kremy Dip" candy is entitled to a push. If he pushes 1 of the numbers designated on the card, he receives 2 or more additional pieces of candy without the payment of any additional sum. If he pushes 1 of the other numbers, he receives only the 1 Kremy Dip. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a push selection has been made and a disk separated from the board. The fact as to whether a purchaser of the candy and push receives 1 or more than 1 piece of candy for his purchase price is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent furnishes and has furnished various push board and candy assortments for use in the sale and distribution of his candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such push boards or push cards and candy assortments are similar to the one herein described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's candy, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products, in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of his candy, and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure candy at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondent, as above alleged, do not use said method or any method involving a game of chance and the selling of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale or distribution of his candy and in the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on February 13, 1942, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, J. D. Fine, an individual, trading as J. D. Fine Candy Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On March 16, 1942, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waived all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, J. D. Fine, is an individual, trading and doing business under the name of J. D. Fine Candy Co., with his office and principal place of business located at 222 Northwest Fourth Street, Oklahoma City, Okla. Respondent is now, and for more than 6 months last past has been, engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said candy, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in Oklahoma City, Okla., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than Oklahoma and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for more than 6 months last past, a course of trade by respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Findings

34 F. T. C.

In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers, certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the method used by respondent, and is as follows:

This assortment includes 72 pieces of candy of like size and shape and a push card. Appearing on the face of the push card is the following legend:

--	--	-----------

If you push out One of the Following Numbers or Last Push you can exchange (without extra cost) The 5¢ KREMY DIP for the MERCHANDISE INDICATED.

No. 13, Four 5¢ Kremy Dips No. 23, Three 5¢ Kremy Dips
 Numbers 5, 10, 20, 25, 30, 40, 50, 60----- Two 5¢ Kremy Dips

LAST PUSH, LARGE BOX HAND ROLLED CHOCOLATES

Said candy is distributed to the purchasing public in accordance with the foregoing legend and in the following manner: Push card contains 60 pushes, each concealing a number. Said numbers are not therein arranged in numerical sequence. Each purchaser of a "Kremy Dip" candy is entitled to a push. If he pushes 1 of the numbers designated on the card, he receives 2 or more additional pieces of candy without the payment of any additional sum. If he pushes 1 of the other numbers, he receives only the 1 Kremy Dip. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a push selection has been made and a disk separated from the board. The fact as to whether a purchaser of the candy and push receives 1 or more than 1 piece of candy for his purchase price is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent furnishes and has furnished various push board and candy assortments for use in the sale and distribution of his candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such push boards or push cards and candy assortments are similar to the one herein described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's candy, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his products, in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of his candy, and the sale of said candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure candy at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondent, as above found, do not use said method or any method involving a game of chance and the selling of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale or distribution of his candy and in the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission on the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent

ent, in which answer respondent admits all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that he waives all intervening proceeding and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent, J. D. Fine, individually, and trading as J. D. Fine Candy Co., or trading under any other name or names, his representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing candy, or any other merchandise, so packed or assembled that sales of such candy or other merchandise to the general public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, either with assortments of candy or other merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing such candy or other merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

HOUBIGANT, INC., CHERAMY, INC., AND HOUBIGANT
SALES CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3343. Complaint, Mar. 2, 1933—Decision, Apr. 16, 1942

Where three corporations, with a common New York address, engaged in manufacture and competitive interstate sale and distribution of perfumes, colognes, cosmetics, and toilet preparations—

Represented that certain of their products were made or compounded in France and imported into the United States through use upon labels, markers, and containers of words "Houbigant—Paris—New York" and "Cheramy—Paris—New York—France," and on bottom of glass bottles of words "Houbigant—Paris—New York"; and made use also of trade names of French origin, such as "Quelques Fleurs," "Rose de France," and others, for their various products;

The facts being their said products were not made or compounded in France by La Parfumerie Houbigant, old and long and favorably known manufacturer of such products, as represented by use of trade name "Houbigant," but were made of imported ingredients to which was added domestic alcohol; and, excepting about 10 percent of the products of one, which did consist of imported perfumes brought in in finished condition in bulk and bottled in the United States, their said products were not the higher priced preferred perfumes, colognes, and toilet preparations made or compounded in France and imported into the United States;

With effect of misleading a substantial part of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that said products were manufactured or compounded in France and imported into the United States, thereby inducing it to purchase substantial quantities thereof, and with result of unfairly diverting trade to them from their competitors who truthfully represent the place of origin of their products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. Edward E. Reardon, trial examiner.

Mr. S. Brogdyne Tew, II, and Mr. Gerard A. Rault for the Commission.

Mock & Blum and Miller, Owen, Otis & Bailly, of New York City, for respondents.

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal

Complaint

34 F. T. C.

Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Houbigant, Inc., a corporation, Cheramy, Inc., a corporation, and Houbigant Sales Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Houbigant, Inc., Cheramy, Inc., and Houbigant Sales Corporation, are corporations organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with their principal place of business located at 539 West Forty-fifth Street, New York, N. Y. All respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged cooperatively in the business of manufacturing perfumes, colognes, cosmetics, and toilet preparations, which respondents sell and distribute throughout the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. Said respondents, being engaged in business as aforesaid, cause said products, when sold, to be transported from their office and principal place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located at various points in the various States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. Respondents now maintain, and for several years last past have maintained, a course of trade in said products manufactured, distributed, and sold by them in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents are now, and have been, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with individuals and firms likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing perfumes, colognes, cosmetics, and toilet preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. Perfumes, colognes, and toilet preparations of high quality enjoying general acceptance throughout the world have been manufactured, compounded, and distributed since 1775 by Parfumerie Houbigant of 19 Rue du Fauborg, St. Honore, Paris, under the name Houbigant. A substantial portion of the purchasing public in the United States has associated the word "Houbigant" with perfumes, colognes, and toilet preparations manufactured or compounded in France by the firm of Parfumerie Houbigant, and when buying perfumes, colognes, and toilet preparations designated "Houbigant" they believe that said products are manufactured or compounded in France by the firm of Parfumerie Houbigant.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, certain of respondents' perfume products so sold bear labels, tags, and markings purporting to describe and refer to the place of origin or manufacture of said products as follows:

Houbigant,
Houbigant—Paris—New York,
Cheramy—Paris—New York—France.

On the bottom of all the glass bottle containers of said products the words "Houbigant—Paris—New York" are blown into the glass. Invoices used by respondents in connection with the sale of Houbigant and Cheramy products bear the words "Distributors for Houbigant, Paris—Cheramy, Paris."

The use of such statements as herein set out, and the use of the name "Houbigant" by respondents in designating their products, serve as representations that said products are manufactured or compounded in France by the firm of Parfumerie Houbigant; that said products are manufactured or compounded in France and that respondents maintain an office in Paris, France. In truth and in fact, said products are not manufactured or compounded in France by Parfumerie Houbigant and are not made up or compounded into the finished or completed perfumes, colognes, or other toilet preparations in France, but are compounded into the finished product and bottled in the United States of America by respondents. Respondents do not maintain an office in Paris, France.

PAR. 6. There is a preference on the part of the buying public for goods, wares, and merchandise which are manufactured in foreign countries and imported into the United States; this is particularly true regarding perfumes, colognes, and toilet preparations manufactured or compounded in France, and such goods so manufactured or compounded and imported command and bring from the purchasing public a higher price in the markets of the United States than perfumes, colognes, and toilet preparations manufactured or compounded in the United States.

PAR. 7. The foregoing representations made by respondents in designating and describing their products and the source of origin and place of manufacture or compounding thereof are calculated to, and have a tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead a substantial part of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said products are manufactured or compounded in France and are manufactured or compounded by Parfumerie Houbigant of Paris, France, and are imported from France into the United States, and that respondents maintain an office in Paris, France. Further, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the misrepresentations of respondents, a number of the consuming public purchase a substantial volume of respondents' products.

As a result, trade has been unfairly diverted to respondents from their competitors who actually import into the United States from foreign countries perfumes and similar products compounded in foreign countries, or who compound perfumes and similar products in this country for sale to the buying public and who truthfully represent and advertise the place of origin and quality of their products. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been done, and is now being done, by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of section 5 of an act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on March 2 A. D. 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Houbigant, Inc., a corporation, Cheramy, Inc., a corporation, and Houbigant Sales Corporation, a corporation, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of said complaint were introduced by S. Brogdyne Teu, II, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Hugo Mock and Redmond F. Kernan, attorneys for the respondents, before Edward E. Reardon, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon said complaint, answer of the respondents, testimony, and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral argument of counsel; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Houbigant, Inc., Cheramy, Inc., and Houbigant Sales Corporation, are corporations organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with their principal place of business located at 539 West Forty-fifth Street, New York, N. Y. All of said respondents are now, and for some time last past have been engaged in the business of manufacturing perfumes, colognes, cosmetics, and toilet preparations, which respondents sell and distribute throughout the various States of the United States. Respondents cause said products when sold to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business the respondents are now, and have been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals and firms engaged in the sale and distribution of perfumes, colognes, cosmetics, and toilet preparations in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Perfumes, colognes, and toilet preparations of high quality enjoying general acceptance throughout the world have been manufactured, compounded, and distributed since 1775 by La Parfumerie Houbigant of 19 Rue du Faubourg, St. Honore, Paris, under the name "Houbigant." For many years La Parfumerie Houbigant of Paris, France, sold and distributed its various preparations in the United States through salesmen and local distributors.

Respondent Houbigant, Inc., has no corporate connection with La Parfumerie Houbigant. It does have, however, an agreement with La Parfumerie Houbigant whereby the respondent is exclusively authorized to reproduce and distribute in the United States, products compounded according to the secret formula of La Parfumerie Houbigant. In like manner respondent, Cheramy, Inc., is authorized to reproduce and distribute perfume products heretofore created and manufactured in Paris, France, by Parfums Cheramy S. A. of Paris, France.

PAR. 4. A substantial portion of the purchasing public in the United States has associated the word "Houbigant" with perfumes, colognes, and toilet preparations manufactured or compounded in France by the firm of La Parfumerie Houbigant, and when buying perfumes, colognes, and toilet preparations designated "Houbigant," they believe that said products are manufactured or compounded in France by the firm of La Parfumerie Houbigant. There is a preference on the part of the buying public for perfumes, colognes, and toilet preparations manufactured or compounded in France and imported into the United States, and such goods so manufactured or compounded and imported, command and bring from the purchasing public a higher price in the markets of the United States than perfumes, colognes, and toilet preparations manufactured or compounded in the United States.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their business, the respondents represent that certain of their perfume products are manufactured or compounded in France and imported into the United States by the use of words and statements upon labels, markers, and containers for said products as follows:

Houbigant,
Houbigant—Paris—New York,
Cheramy—Paris—New York—France,

and also by the use of glass bottle containers, on the bottom of which the words "Houbigant—Paris—New York" are blown into the glass. The use of the trade name "Houbigant" serves as a representation that products so designated are manufactured or compounded in France by the firm of La Parfumerie Houbigant and imported into the United States. In addition, the respondents designate and describe their various products by the use of trade names of French origin, such as "Quelques Fleurs," "Rose de France," and others.

PAR. 6. Respondents' products are not manufactured or compounded in France by La Parfumerie Houbigant and are not made up or compounded into the finished or completed perfumes, colognes, or other toilet preparations in France, but are compounded into the finished product and bottled in the United States of America by the respondents.

In connection with the manufacture of these various perfumes, colognes, and toilet preparations, respondent, Houbigant, Inc., imports its perfume products in the form of concentrates or compounds. When these concentrates arrive in this country, they are blended with certain imported fixatives or essential oils or synthetic materials, or combinations thereof, to which domestic alcohol is added to complete the perfume product. After such blending they are sold to the public as perfumes or colognes. In launching new perfume products, very often initial shipments are made of such products in finished condition, bottled and ready for sale. In some cases the respondent, 1073 .

Houbigant, Inc., imports perfume products in finished condition in bulk, which are bottled in the United States without the addition of alcohol or other substances. This constitutes approximately 10 per cent of said respondent's business.

The respondent, Cheramy, Inc., imports no perfume in finished condition, either in bulk or bottled form, and does not import concentrates for use in the manufacture of perfumes. Said corporation does import most of the ingredients used in the manufacture of its perfumes, to which ingredients is added domestic alcohol to complete said perfume products for sale to the purchasing public.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondents of the foregoing representations in designating and describing their products and the source of origin and place of manufacture or compounding thereof, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead a substantial part of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said products are manufactured or compounded in France and are imported into the United States, and to induce a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' products. As a result, trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors who actually import into the United States from foreign countries perfumes and similar products compounded in foreign countries, or who compound perfumes and similar products in this country for sale to the buying public and who truthfully represent and advertise the place of origin of their products.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, answer of the respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before Edward E. Reardon, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral argument of counsel; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act:

It is ordered, That the respondents, Houbigant, Inc., a corporation, Cheramy, Inc., a corporation, Houbigant Sales Corporation, a corporation, and their respective officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly, or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of perfumes, colognes, and other toilet preparations in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing through the use of the terms "Paris" or "Paris, France," or any other terms indicative of French or other foreign origin of such products, or in any manner, that perfumes, colognes, or other toilet preparations which are made or compounded in the United States are made or compounded in France or in any other foreign country, provided, however, that the country of origin of the various ingredients thereof may be stated when immediately accompanied by a statement that such products are made or compounded in the United States;

2. Using the terms "Houbigant," "Cheramy," or any other French or foreign words or terms as brand or trade names for perfumes, colognes, or other toilet preparations made or compounded in the United States without clearly and conspicuously stating in immediate connection and conjunction therewith that such products are made or compounded in the United States.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

AL MODEY LOUGHNEY, TRADING UNDER THE NAME OF
DR. A. M. LOUGHNEY, AND ROGER G. LOUGHNEYCOMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 4531. Complaint, July 7, 1941—Decision, Apr. 20, 1942*

Where two individuals, engaged under trade name Dr. A. M. Loughney, in interstate sale and distribution of a "Regimen" for the treatment of asthma, hay fever, constipation, and various other diseases and disorders, which consisted of a mimeographed brochure and supplemental inserts containing a regimen entitled "Dr. A. M. Loughney's Dependable Guide to Self-Help," and two medicinal preparations respectively designated "Dr. Loughney's Special Compound of Disinfectant Oils" (sometimes referred to as "Intra-Lung Medicant" and "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl"), and "Dr. Loughney's Natural Bowel and Intestinal Cleanser" (referred to also as "Tonic Normalizer," "Good Botanical Remedy," "Mother Nature's Own and Best Tonic Normalizer" and "Bowelkleen"); in advertisements through the mails, in newspapers, circulars, form letters, testimonials, pamphlets, and other advertising media, directly and by implication—

(a) Represented that said "Regimen" and the individual items thereof, separately or in combination, constituted a cure or remedy and safe and effective treatment for asthma, hay fever, neuritis, rheumatism, impaired circulation, catarrh, bronchitis, sinusitis, mucus colitis, stomach and bowel troubles, high blood pressure, weight control, acute diabetes and nephritis, and would eradicate and cause asthma and hay-fever symptoms lastingly to "disappear as if by Magic in 36 hours;"

The facts being said "Regimen" and items, used separately or in combination, were not a cure or remedy for aforesaid ailments and conditions, and would not eradicate or cause hay-fever symptoms to disappear;

(b) Falsely represented that their said "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl" was a cure and remedy for, and constituted a safe and effective treatment for, asthma, hay fever, bronchitis, sinusitis, pharyngitis, laryngitis, rhinitis, chest colds, head colds and pneumonia, and would protect the mucus membrane against such diseases, cleanse and disinfect the head cavities, and was an intralung medicant possessing sedative, healing, and disinfecting properties;

The facts being said preparation was nothing more than an emollient containing ineffectual amounts of volatile oils; and, whether used alone or in conjunction with said "Dependable Guide to Self-Help" and the preparation "Bowelkleen," was not a cure or remedy for the diseases listed;

(c) Falsely represented that their said medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" was a cure and remedy, and constituted a safe and effective treatment, for constipation; would eliminate gas, and act as a neutralizer and counteract gastric acidity; was a natural bowel and intestinal cleanser and eliminator; was a normalizer and natural blood remedy with tonic value; and would correct the cause of intestinal putrescence and aid digestion;

The facts being said preparation was nothing more than a laxative cathartic; and used alone or in conjunction with said "Dependable Guide to Self-Help" and "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl," had no therapeutic value in the treatment of constipation other than its temporary effect as a laxative-cathartic;

- (d) Represented that "sour breath, coated tongue, indigestion, nausea, gas and bloating, acne and unsightly skin eruptions, lack of energy, headaches, dizziness, upset stomach, loss of appetite or perverted appetite, catarrh, sinusitis, mucus colitis, and kindred ailments" are symptoms or manifestations of disease which may indicate constipation and intestinal putrescence, that the existence of one or more of such symptoms indicates constipation or intestinal putrescence as their basic cause, and that the preparation "Bowelkleen" would overcome or "clear up" constipation and intestinal putrescence;

The facts being that the disorders and conditions mentioned are not symptoms or manifestations of constipation or intestinal putrescence; catarrh, sinusitis, acne and unsightly skin eruptions and kindred ailments have no casual relationship to constipation, and said preparation would have no therapeutic effect in the treatment thereof; as respects mucus colitis, which may be caused by other conditions, a laxative would not be a safe or sufficient treatment, and said product might tend to aggravate same and prevent its successful treatment; when such disorders as nausea and upset stomach, which may and often do accompany appendicitis, are thus caused, a laxative is not a safe treatment, and use of "Bowelkleen" under such circumstances might be dangerous; when the disorders above mentioned, including coated tongue, indigestion, lack of energy, dizziness, and loss of or perverted appetite are due to other causes, "Bowelkleen" would have no therapeutic value in the treatment thereof, and, to the extent that constipation or intestinal putrescence was the cause of such disorders, it would have no value in the treatment thereof in excess of that furnished by a laxative-cathartic; and

- (e) Failed to reveal facts material in the light of representations in their said advertisements, and that use of their "Dependable Guide" or medicinal preparations, singly or in combination, might, under usual or prescribed conditions, result in serious injury to health in case of undernourished persons or those suffering from diabetes; frequent use of their "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl" may cause oil pneumonia; and use of "Bowelkleen" as a treatment for nausea and upset stomach might result in serious injury to health in the event of appendicitis;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that such statements were true, and that the contents of "Dr. A. M. Loughney's Dependable Guide to Self-Help" and supplemental mimeographed inserts and said medicinal preparations were safe for use and would accomplish the results claimed for them as above set forth, thereby inducing said public to purchase said "Regimen" and medicinal preparations because of such mistaken belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. John W. Carter, Jr. for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Al Modey Loughney, individually and trading under the name of Dr. A. M. Loughney, and Roger G. Loughney, an individual, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Al Modey Loughney, is an individual, trading under the name and style of Dr. A. M. Loughney, with his principal place of business located at 318-319 Henshaw Building, Fourteenth Street and Broadway, Oakland, Calif. Respondent, Roger G. Loughney, is an individual, and is secretary to the respondent, Al Modey Loughney, with the same place of business. Said respondents act in conjunction and in cooperation with each other with respect to the acts and practices hereinafter set forth.

PAR. 2. The respondents are now, and for more than one year last past, have been engaged in the advertising for sale, sale and distribution of a regimen for the treatment of asthma, hay fever, constipation, and various other diseases, disorders, and conditions, said treatment being variously designated as "Formula," "Treatment," "Home Self-Use Formula," "Technique," "Home Self-Help Treatment," "Asthma and Hay-Fever Technique" and "Mucus Membrane Formula," hereinafter referred to as "Regimen," consisting of the following items:

(a) A mimeographed brochure and supplement inserts containing, among other things, a detailed directional daily program and regimen entitled "Dr. A. M. Loughney's Dependable Guide to Self-Help."

(b) A medicinal preparation designated "Dr. Loughney's Special Compound of Disinfectant Oils" sometimes referred to as "Intra-Lung Medicant" and "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl," hereinafter referred to as "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl."

(c) a medicinal preparation designated "Dr. Loughney's Natural Bowel and Intestinal Cleanser" sometimes referred to as "Tonic Normalizer," "Good Botanical Remedy," "Mother Nature's Own and Best Tonic Normalizer," and "Bowelkleen," hereinafter referred to as "Bowelkleen."

Respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past, have been also engaged in the advertising, sale, and distribution of their two medicinal preparations "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl" and "Bowelkleen," as individual and separate items.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business the said respondents, individually, and trading under the name of Dr. A. M. Loughney, caused their said "Regimen" and their said medicinal preparations "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl" and "Bowelkleen" when sold to be transported from their place of business in the State of California to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their said "Regimen" and their said medicinal preparations, designated as aforesaid, in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their aforesaid "Regimen" and their said medicinal preparations, by the United States mails, and by various means in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their aforesaid "Regimen" and their aforesaid medicinal preparations, by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said medicinal preparations, in commerce, as commerce is defined by the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers, by circulars, form letters, testimonials, pamphlets, and other advertising media, as aforesaid, are the following:

I have proven in thousands of supposedly hopeless cases that I know how to eradicate all the fearsome wheezing, all labored breathing of wretched Asthma sufferers within 36 hours and what is more I have taught and am teaching such sufferers to do the same thing for themselves, through the mail.

Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and other similar statements and representations not specifically set out herein, which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic value of respondent's aforesaid "Regimen" including the medicinal preparations "Anti-Spasm-Oyl" and "Bowelkleen," disseminated as aforesaid, the respondents represent directly and by implication, that said "Regimen" including said medicinal preparations, either separately or in combination one with the other, is a cure or remedy, and constitutes a safe and effective treatment for asthma, hay fever, neuritis, rheumatism, impaired circulation, catarrh, bronchitis, sinusitis, mucus-colitis, stomach and bowel troubles, high blood pressure, weight control, acute diabetes and nephritis, and that said "Regimen" will eradicate and cause asthma and hay fever symptoms lastingly to "disappear as if by magic in thirty-six hours."

PAR. 6. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and other similar statements and representations not specifically set out herein, which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of respondents' medicinal preparation "Anti-Spasm-Oyl," respondents further represent, directly and by implication, that said preparation is a cure and remedy, and constitutes a safe and effective treatment for asthma, hay-fever, bronchitis, sinusitis, pharyngitis, laryngitis, rhinitis, chest colds, head colds, and pneumonia, and that it will protect the mucous membrane against such diseases; that it will cleanse and disinfect the head cavities; that it is an intra-lung medicant possessing sedative, healing and disinfecting properties.

PAR. 7. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and other similar statements and representations not specifically set out herein, which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of respondents' aforesaid medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen," respondents further represent, directly or by implication, that said preparation is a cure and remedy, and constitutes a safe and effective treatment for constipation; that it will eliminate gas, and act as a neutralizer and counteract gastric acidity; that it is a natural bowel and intestinal cleanser and eliminator; that it is a normalizer and natural blood remedy with tonic value; that it will correct the cause of intestinal putrescence and aid digestion.

PAR. 8. Respondents further represent by the means and in the manner aforesaid, that "sour breath, coated tongue, indigestion, nausea, gas and bloating, acne and unsightly skin eruptions, lack of energy, headaches, dizziness, upset stomach, loss of appetite or perverted appetite, catarrh, sinusitis, mucus-colitis and kindred ailments" are symptoms or manifestations of disease which may indicate constipation and intestinal putrescence, and that the existence of one or more of such symptoms indicates that constipation or intestinal putrescence is generally the basic cause of such symptoms, disorders or conditions, and that their medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" will overcome or "clear up" constipation and intestinal putrescence.

PAR. 9. The foregoing representations and advertisements and others similar thereto but not specifically set out herein, are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading.

Respondents' aforesaid "Regimen," including their medicinal preparation "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl," and their medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen," used separately, or in any combination of one with the other, is not a cure or remedy, and does not have sufficient therapeutic value to justify use for Asthma, Hay-Fever, Neuritis, Rheumatism, Impaired Circulation, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Sinusitis, Mucus-Colitis, Stomach and Bowel Troubles, High Blood Pressure, Weight Control, Acute Diabetes and Nephritis. They will not jointly, separately or in combination of any one with the other, eradicate and cause Asthma and Hay-Fever symptoms lastingly to disappear.

PAR. 10. The contents of respondents' "Dependable Guide to Self-Help and Supplemental Mimeographed Inserts" when used alone or in conjunction with either one or both of respondents' aforesaid medicinal preparations, is not a cure or remedy for, nor an effective treatment for any of the diseases, disorders or conditions set forth in paragraph 5 hereof.

PAR. 11. Respondents' preparation "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl" is nothing more than an emollient containing ineffectual amounts of certain volatile oils. Said medicinal preparation "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl" used alone, or in conjunction with respondents' "Dependable Guide to Self-Help and Supplemental Mimeographed Inserts" and the medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" separately, or in conjunction of one or both with the other, is not a cure or remedy for, and has no generally recognized therapeutic value in the treatment of asthma, hay fever, bronchitis, sinusitis, pharyngitis, laryngitis, rhinitis, chest colds, head colds, and pneumonia. It will not protect the mucous membrane against such diseases. It will not cleanse and disinfect the head cavities. It is not a safe and effective intralung medicant and it does not possess sedative, healing or disinfectant properties.

PAR. 12. Respondents' medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" is nothing more than a laxative-cathartic. This preparation used alone or in conjunction with respondents' items "Dependable Guide to Self-Help and Supplemental Mimeographed Inserts," and the medicinal preparation "Anti-Spasm-Oyl," separately, or in conjunction of one or both with the other, is not a cure or remedy for and has no generally recognized therapeutic value in the treatment of constipation other than the temporary effect it might have as a laxative-cathartic. It is not a competent and effective treatment for constipation. It will not eliminate gas. It will not act as a neutralizer and will not counteract gastric acidity. It is not a natural bowel and intestinal cleanser or eliminator. It is not a normalizer. It is not a natural blood remedy. It does not have any tonic value. It will not correct the cause of intestinal putrescence and it will not aid digestion.

PAR. 13. The disorders and conditions such as "sour breath, coated tongue, indigestion, nausea, gas and bloating, acne and unsightly skin eruptions, lack of energy, headaches, dizziness, upset stomach, loss of appetite or perverted appetite, catarrh, sinusitis, mucus-colitis and kindred ailments" are not symptoms or manifestations of constipation and intestinal putrescence, and the existence of one or more of such symptoms are not generally, as the respondents represent, symptoms or manifestations of constipation or intestinal putrescence or the basic cause of such symptoms, disorders or conditions.

Catarrh, sinusitis, acne, unsightly skin eruptions, and kindred ailments, are diseases having no causal relationship to constipation and respondents' medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" will have no generally recognized therapeutic effect in the treatment of any of these disorders and diseases.

The disease mucus-colitis may be caused by conditions other than constipation, but whatever the underlying factor causing this disease, a laxative is not a safe or sufficient treatment therefor. The use of respondents' medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" would have no generally recognized beneficial value in the treatment of this disease, but may tend to aggravate it and prevent the successful treatment thereof.

The disorders such as nausea and upset stomach may and often do accompany an attack of appendicitis. When such disorders are caused by such an attack, a laxative is not a safe treatment therefor and the use of respondents' medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" under such circumstances may be dangerous.

When the disorders such as sour breath, nausea, coated tongue, indigestion, upset stomach, gas and bloating, headaches, dizziness, loss of appetite or perverted appetite, are due to causes other than constipation or intestinal putrescence, the use of respondents' medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" in the treatment thereof, would have no therapeutic value. To the extent that constipation or intestinal putrescence is the contributing factor to, or the basic cause of, these disorders, respondents' medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" would have no generally accepted therapeutic value in the treatment thereof in excess of that furnished by a laxative-cathartic.

PAR. 14. The advertisements disseminated by the respondents as aforesaid, constitute false advertisements for the further reason that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained in such advertisements and fail to reveal that the use of their "Dependable Guide to Self-Help and Supplemental Mimeographed Inserts" under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, and the use of said medicinal preparation "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl" or "Bowelkleen" singly or in combination with the aforesaid "Dependable Guide to Self-Help and Supplemental Mimeographed Inserts," as directed, may result in serious injury to health.

The use of respondents' "Dependable Guide to Self-Help and Supplemental Mimeographed Inserts," alone or in combination with one or both of said medicinal preparations may, in case of undernourished persons or those suffering from "Acute Diabetes," result in injury to health.

The use of respondents' "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl" as prescribed by respondents may result in introducing and injecting small quantities of oil into the lower respiratory tract and its frequent use may cause oil pneumonia and injury to health.

Furthermore, the advertisements of respondents' medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" as a treatment for "Nausea" and "Upset Stomach" is false in that said advertisements fail to reveal that such disorders may, and often do, accompany an attack of appendicitis, and that its use under such conditions may result in serious injury to health.

PAR. 15. The use by said respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading representations and advertisements, and others of similar nature disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true, and that said "Dependable Guide to Self-Help" and said medicinal preparations are safe for use, and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' "Regimen" and to purchase their said medicinal preparations "Anti-Spasm-Oyl" and "Bowel-kleen."

PAR. 16. The aforesaid acts and practices of the said respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 7, 1941, issued, and on July 14, 1941, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Al Modey Loughney and Roger G. Loughney, charging them with unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of answer by respondent, Al Modey Loughney, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure, further hearing as to said facts, oral argument, and filing of brief, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Al Modey Loughney and Roger G. Loughney, are individuals, trading under the name of Dr. A. M. Loughney, with their principal place of business located at 318-319 Henshaw Building, Fourteenth Street and Broadway, Oakland, Calif.

These respondents acted in conjunction and in cooperation with each other with respect to the acts and practices hereinafter set forth.

PAR. 2. The respondents, are now, and for more than 1 year last past, have been engaged in the advertising, sale, and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States of a regimen for the treatment of asthma, hay fever, constipation, and various other diseases, disorders, and conditions, said treatment being variously designated as "Formula," "Treatment," "Home Self-Use Formula," "Technique Home Self-Help Treatment," "Asthma and Hay-Fever Technique," and "Mucous Membrane Formula," consisting of the following items:

(a) A mimeographed brochure and supplemental inserts containing, among other things, a detailed directional daily program and regimen entitled "Dr. A. M. Loughney's Dependable Guide to Self-Help."

(c) A medicinal preparation designated "Dr. Loughney's Natural Bowel and Intestinal Cleanser," sometimes referred to as "Tonic Normalizer," "Good Botanical Remedy," "Mother Nature's Own and Best Tonic Normalizer," and "Bowelkleen."

hereinafter referred to as "Regimen," and of the two medicinal preparations designated "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl" and "Bowelkleen," as individual and separate items.

Respondents cause their said "Regimen" and their said medicinal preparations "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl" and "Bowelkleen" when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of California to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States.

Respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a course of trade in their said "Regimen" and in their said medicinal preparations, designated as aforesaid, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their aforesaid "Regimen" and their said medicinal preparations, by the United States mail, and by various means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their aforesaid "Regimen" and their aforesaid medicinal preparations, by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said medicinal preparations in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

PAR. 4. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers, by circulars, form letters, testimonials, pamphlets and other advertising mediums, as aforesaid, are the following:

I have proven in thousands of supposedly hopeless cases that I know how to eradicate all the fearsome wheezing, all labored breathing of wretched Asthma sufferers within 36 hours and what is more I have taught and am teaching such sufferers to do the same thing for themselves, through the mail.

PAR. 6. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and other similar statements and representations not specifically set out herein, which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of respondents' medicinal preparation, "Anti-Spasm-Oyl," respondents further represent, directly and by implication, that said preparation is a cure and remedy and constitutes a safe and effective treatment for asthma, hay fever, bronchitis, sinusitis, pharyngitis, laryngitis, rhinitis, chest colds, head colds, and pneumonia, and that it will protect the mucus membrane against such diseases; that it will cleanse and disinfect the head cavities; that it is an intralung medicant possessing sedative, healing, and disinfecting properties.

PAR. 7. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and other similar statements and representations not specifically set out herein, which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of respondent's aforesaid medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen," respondents further represent, directly or by implication, that said preparation is a cure and remedy, and constitutes a safe and effective treatment for constipation; that it will eliminate gas, and act as a neutralizer and counteract gastric acidity; that it is a natural bowel and intestinal cleanser and eliminator; that it is a normalizer and natural blood remedy with tonic value; that it will correct the cause of intestinal putrescence and aid digestion.

PAR. 8. Respondents further represent, by the means and in the manner aforesaid, that "sour breath, coated tongue, indigestion, nausea, gas and bloating, acne, and unsightly skin eruptions, lack of energy, headaches, dizziness, upset stomach, loss of appetite or perverted appetite, catarrh, sinusitis, mucus colitis, and kindred ailments" are symptoms or manifestations of disease which may indicate constipation and intestinal putrescence, and that the existence of one or more of such symptoms indicates that constipation or intestinal putrescence is generally the basic cause of such symptoms, disorders, or conditions, and that their medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" will overcome or "clear up" constipation and intestinal putrescence.

PAR. 9. The foregoing representations and advertisements and others similar thereto, but not specifically set out herein, are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading.

Respondents' aforesaid "Regimen" or the individual items thereof, used separately or in any combination one with the other, is not a cure or remedy, and does not have sufficient therapeutic value to justify use for asthma, hay fever, neuritis, rheumatism, impaired circulation, catarrh, bronchitis, sinusitis, mucus colitis, stomach and bowel troubles, high blood pressure, weight control, diabetes, and nephritis. The items constituting the treatment will not separately, jointly or in combination of any one with the other, eradicate and cause asthma and hay fever symptoms to disappear.

PAR. 10. The contents of respondents' brochure "Dr. A. M. Loughney's Dependable Guide to Self-Help" and supplemental mimeographed inserts when used alone or in conjunction with either one or both of respondents' aforesaid medicinal preparations, is not a cure or remedy, nor an effective treatment for asthma, hay fever, neuritis, rheumatism, impaired circulation, catarrh, bronchitis, sinusitis, mucus colitis, stomach and bowel troubles, high blood pressure, weight control, diabetes, and nephritis, and will not eradicate and cause asthma and hay fever symptoms to disappear.

PAR. 11. Respondents' medicinal preparation "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl" is nothing more than an emollient containing ineffectual amounts of certain volatile oils. This medicinal preparation used alone or in conjunction with the contents of respondents' item "Dr. A. M. Loughney's Dependable Guide to Self-Help" and supplemental mimeographed inserts and the medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen," separately, or in conjunction of one or both with the other, is not a cure or remedy for, and has no generally recognized therapeutic value in the treatment of athma, hay fever, bronchitis, sinusitis, pharyngitis, laryngitis, rhinitis, chest cold, head cold, and pneumonia. It will not protect the mucous membrane against such diseases. It will not cleanse and disinfect the head cavities. It is not a safe and effective intralung medicant and it does not possess sedative, healing or disinfectant properties.

PAR. 12. Respondents' medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" is nothing more than a laxative-cathartic. This medicinal preparation used alone or in conjunction with the contents of respondents' item "Dr. A. M. Loughney's Dependable Guide to Self-Help" and the supplemental mimeographed inserts, and the medicinal preparation "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl," separately or in conjunction of one or both with the other, is not a cure or remedy for, and has no generally recognized therapeutic value in the treatment of, constipation other than the temporary effect it might have as a laxative-cathartic. It is not a competent and effective treatment for constipation. It will not eliminate gas. It will not act as a neutralizer and will not counteract gastric acidity. It is not a natural bowel and intestinal cleanser or eliminator. It is not a normalizer. It is not a natural blood remedy. It does not have any tonic value. It will not correct the cause of intestinal putrescence and it will not aid digestion.

PAR. 13. The disorders and conditions such as "sour breath, coated tongue, indigestion, nausea, gas and bloating, acne and unsightly skin eruptions, lack of energy, headaches, dizziness, upset stomach, loss of appetite or perverted appetite, catarrh, sinusitis, mucus colitis and kindred ailments" are not symptoms or manifestations of constipation or intestinal putrescence, and the existence of one or more of such disorders are not generally symptoms or manifestations that constipation or intestinal putrescence is the basic cause of such disorders or conditions.

Catarrh, sinusitis, acne and unsightly skin eruptions, and kindred ailments, are diseases having no casual relationship to constipation and respondents' medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" will have no generally recognized therapeutic effect in the treatment of any of these disorders and diseases.

The disease "mucus-colitis" may be caused by conditions other than constipation, but whatever the underlying factor causing this disease, a laxative is not a safe or sufficient treatment therefor. The use of respondents' medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" would have no generally recognized beneficial value in the treatment of this disease, but may tend to aggravate it and prevent the successful treatment thereof.

The disorders, such as nausea and upset stomach may, and often do, accompany an attack of appendicitis. When such disorders are caused by appendicitis, a laxative is not a safe treatment therefor, and the use of respondents' medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" under such circumstances, may be dangerous.

When the disorders, such as sour breath, nausea, coated tongue, indigestion, upset stomach, gas and bloating, headaches, lack of energy, dizziness, loss of appetite or perverted appetite, are due to causes other than constipation or intestinal putrescence, respondents' medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" would have no therapeutic value in the treatment thereof. To the extent that constipation or intestinal putrescence is the contributing factor to, or the basic cause of, these disorders, respondents' medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" would have no generally accepted therapeutic value in the treatment thereof in excess of that furnished by a laxative-cathartic.

PAR. 14. The advertisements disseminated by the respondents, as aforesaid, constitute false advertisements for the further reason that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representations therein contained and fail to reveal that the use of their "Dr. A. M. Loughney's Dependable Guide to Self-Help" and supplemental mimeographed inserts under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual, or the use of said medicinal preparations "Anti-Spasm-Oyl" or "Bowelkleen" singly or in combination with the aforesaid "Dr. A. M. Loughney's Dependable Guide to Self-Help" and supplemental mimeographed inserts may result in serious injury to health.

The use of respondents' "Dr. A. M. Loughney's Dependable Guide to Self-Help" and supplemental mimeographed inserts, alone or in combination with either or both of said medicinal preparations, may, in case of undernourished persons or those suffering from diabetes, result in injury to health.

The use of respondents' "Anti-Spasm-Oyl" as prescribed may result in introducing or injecting small quantities of oil into the lower respiratory tract, and its frequent use may cause oil pneumonia and injury to health.

Respondents' advertisements of the medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" as a treatment for nausea and upset stomach are false in that said advertisements fail to reveal that such disorders may, and often do, accompany an attack of appendicitis and that the use of said medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" under such conditions may result in serious injury to health.

PAR. 15. The use by said respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading representations and advertisements and others of similar nature, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true, and that the contents of "Dr. A. M. Loughney's Dependable Guide to Self-Help" and supplemental mimeographed inserts and said medicinal preparations are safe for use and will accomplish the results claimed for them as found in paragraphs 5, 6, 7, and 8 hereof, and to induce a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' "Regimen" and to purchase their said medicinal preparations "Anti-Spasm-Oyl" and "Bowelkleen."

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the said respondents as herein set forth are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of the respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondents, Al Modey Loughney and Roger G. Loughney, their agents, representatives and employees, individually or when trading under any trade name or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of a treatment for asthma, hay fever, constipation or various other diseases, disorders or conditions, consisting of the medicinal preparations "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl" and "Bowelkleen," or any other preparations, possessing substantially similar properties or substantially similar ingredients, to be used separately or in conjunction with the program set forth in the brochure and supplemental inserts entitled "Dr. A. M. Loughney's Dependable Guide to Self-Help," or in any other literature containing a substantially similar program, under whatever name or names designated, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mail or by any means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents directly, indirectly or through inference:

(A) That respondents' treatment, or the medicinal preparations "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl" or "Bowelkleen" used separately, jointly or in any combination with the program set out in "Dr. A. M. Loughney's Dependable Guide to Self-Help:"

(a) is a cure or remedy for, or has any therapeutic value in the treatment of, or constitutes a safe or effective treatment for, asthma, hay fever, neuritis, rheumatism, impaired circulation, catarrh, bronchitis, sinusitis, mucus-colitis, stomach trouble, bowel trouble, high blood pressure, weight control, diabetes, or nephritis.

(b) has any therapeutic value in the treatment of the symptoms of asthma or hay fever, or will cause such symptoms to disappear.

(B) That respondents' medicinal preparation "Anti-Spsthma-Oyl" used alone or in any combination with the medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" and the program set out in the brochure "Dr. A. M. Loughney's Dependable Guide to Self-Help:"

(a) is a cure or remedy for, or has any therapeutic value in the treatment of, or constitutes a safe or effective treatment for, pharyngitis, laryngitis, rhinitis, chest cold, head cold or pneumonia.

1081

Order

(b) will protect mucous membrane against asthma, hay fever, bronchitis, sinusitis, pharyngitis, laryngitis, rhinitis, chest cold, head cold or pneumonia.

(c) will cleanse or disinfect the head cavities; or,

(d) is a safe or effective intralung medicant, possessing sedative, healing or disinfectant properties.

(C) That respondents' medicinal preparation "Bowelkleen" used alone or in any combination with the medicinal preparation "Anti-Spasm-Oyl" and the program set out in the brochure "Dr. A. M. Loughney's Dependable Guide to Self-Help:"

(a) is a cure or remedy for or has any therapeutic value in the treatment of constipation or intestinal putrescence other than the temporary evacuation of the bowels.

(b) will eliminate gas, counteract gastric acidity, act as a normalizer, aid indigestion or correct the cause of intestinal putrescence.

(c) is a normalizer, a natural bowel or intestinal cleanser or eliminator, a natural bowel remedy or has any tonic value whatever.

(d) will have any therapeutic value whatever in the treatment of catarrh, sinusitis, acne and unsightly skin eruptions, mucus colitis or kindred ailments or that such conditions or ailments are symptoms or manifestations of constipation or intestinal putrescence.

(e) is a safe treatment for nausea or upset stomach.

(f) has any therapeutic value in the treatment of sour breath, coated tongue, indigestion, gas and bloating, headaches, lack of energy, dizziness, loss of appetite or perverted appetite except in those cases where constipation or intestinal putrescence is the basic cause of, or a contributing factor to, the disorder causing such symptoms in which event the therapeutic value must be limited to that furnished by a laxative-cathartic.

(D) That the existence of such symptoms as sour breath, coated tongue, indigestion, gas and bloating, nausea, lack of energy, headaches, dizziness, upset stomach, loss of appetite or perverted appetite are generally symptomatic of and indicate that constipation or intestinal putrescence is the basic cause of such symptoms.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated, by means of the United States mail or by any means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, any advertisement:

(A) of the preparation "Anti-Spasm-Oyl," which advertisement fails to reveal that the frequent use of such preparation may cause oil pneumonia, provided, however, that if the directions for use, wherever they appear on the label, in the labeling, or both on the label and in the labeling, contain a warning of the potential dangers in the use of said preparation as herein set forth, such advertisement need contain only the cautionary statement: "CAUTION, USE ONLY AS DIRECTED."

(B) of the preparation "Bowelkleen" which advertisement fails to reveal that such preparation should not be used by persons suffering from abdominal pains, nausea, vomiting, or other symptoms of appendicitis, provided, however, that if the directions for use, wherever they appear on the label, in the labeling, or both on the label and in the labeling, contain a warning of the potential dangers involved in the use of said preparation as herein set forth, such advertisement need contain only the cautionary statement: "CAUTION, USE ONLY AS DIRECTED."

(C) of the Brochure "Dr. A. M. Loughney's Dependable Guide to Self-Help" and the supplemental inserts for use in the treatment of any disease or as a system to be followed in restoring or regaining health, which advertisement fails to reveal that the program should not be used or followed by persons suffering from undernourishment or from diabetes.

3. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of respondents' "treatment" or the individual items or medicinal preparations of which said "treatment" is composed, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof, or fails to contain the affirmative warnings or cautionary statements required in paragraph 2 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall within 10 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing stating whether they intend to comply with this order, and, if so, the manner and form in which they intend to comply; and that within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, said respondents shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

MERRITT FREEMAN BUTLER, TRADING AS FREEMAN'S PRODUCTS

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4615. Complaint, Oct. 10, 1941—Decision, Apr. 20, 1942

Where an individual, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of his "Freeman's Pyletts"; through advertisements by the mails, and in newspapers and periodicals, and circulars and other advertising literature, including testimonial advertisements, and through use of said trade name, directly and by inference—

- (a) Falsely represented that his said "Pyletts" constituted an effective treatment and cure for all forms of piles, hemorrhoids, and swelling capillaries in the lower bowels, relieving blind, bleeding, itching, internal or protruding piles; that use thereof eased pain quickly and produced amazing results; that it was equally effective for mild or long-standing cases of piles; and that use thereof promoted general good health;

The facts being preparation in question was of no therapeutic value in excess of its laxative properties; and

- (b) Failed to reveal facts material in the light of such representations, or with respect to consequences which might result from use of said product under usual or prescribed conditions, in that preparation was a laxative and dangerous when taken by one suffering from symptoms of appendicitis; frequent or continued use thereof might result in dependence on laxatives; and product contained the drug phosphorus, continued use of which might result in phosphorus poisoning and deterioration of the bones;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that said representations were true, thereby inducing it, because of such mistaken belief, to purchase said preparation:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. John M. Russell for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Merritt Freeman Butler, an individual trading as Freeman's Products, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest; hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

• PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Merritt Freeman Butler, is an individual, trading as Freeman's Products, having his principal place of business located in Grand Rapids, Mich., his address being Post Office Box 274.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now and for more than two years last past has been engaged in the business of selling and distributing a medicinal preparation designated as "Freeman's Pyletts" and advertised as a treatment for piles.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning his said product by United States mails and by various other means in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning his said product by various means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said product in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, and by circulars and other advertising literature, are the following:

* * * Freeman's Pyletts are taken internally—going right to the seat of the trouble to relieve blind, bleeding, itching, internal or protruding piles. Pain eases quickly and the beneficial results will amaze you.

What Freeman's Pyletts have done for others is best proof of what they will do for you.

End piles without surgery.

For lasting and quick results, try "Pyletts".

Bleeding, pains, and swelling go quickly.

Equally effective for mild or long standing cases.

Recommended for all forms of piles, hemorrhoids, and swelling capillaries in the lower part of the bowel.

Freeman's Pyletts aid nature to remove the cause and thus banish piles.

They heal and promote general good health.

I have been a sufferer with piles many years. Tried many treatments, I also resorted to four operations in the past years without any success. A friend advised me to use Freeman's Pyletts; after taking a four weeks course my trouble is completely ended.

PAR 4. By the use of the trade name "Pyletts" and the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, including advertisements in the form of testimonials, all of which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of respondent's preparation, respondent represents directly and through inference that his preparation designated as "Freeman's Pyletts" or "Pyletts" is an effective treatment and cure for all forms of piles, hemorrhoids, and swelling capillaries in the lower part of the bowels; that it relieves blind, bleeding, itching, internal or protruding piles; that its use eases pain quickly and produces amazing results; that it is equally effective for mild or long-standing cases of piles; and that its use promotes general good health.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations and advertisements used and disseminated by the respondent, as hereinabove described, are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading.

In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation is not an effective treatment or cure for all forms or for any form of piles, hemorrhoids, and swelling capillaries in the lower part of the bowels; it is not an effective treatment for relieving blind, bleeding, itching, internal or protruding piles. The use of said preparation will not ease pain quickly or effectively or produce amazing results or any beneficial results in the treatment of the above-named ailments or conditions of the body. Said preparation is not an effective treatment for mild cases of piles or for long-standing cases of piles, and its use will not promote general good health. In fact, said preparation is of no substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of the above-named ailments and conditions, nor is it of any value in excess of its laxative properties.

PAR. 6. The respondent's advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, constitute false advertisements for the further reason that they failed to reveal facts material in the light of such representations or material with respect to consequences which may result from the use of the preparation to which the advertisements relate under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

In truth and in fact, respondent's said preparation is a laxative and is potentially dangerous when taken by one suffering from abdominal pains, stomach ache, cramps, cholera, nausea, vomiting or other symptoms of appendicitis. Its frequent or continued use may result in dependence on laxatives.

Furthermore, respondent's said preparation contains phosphorus, which is a potentially dangerous drug and the repeated or continued use of said preparation may result in phosphorus poisoning and deterioration of the bones of the body.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to the therapeutic properties of said preparation has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations are true and induce a substantial portion of the public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's preparation designated as Freeman's Pyletts.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on October 10, 1941, issued, and on October 16, 1941, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Merritt Freeman Butler, an individual, trading as Freeman's Products, charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute thereof an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Merritt Freeman Butler, is an individual, trading as Freeman's Products, his principal place of business being formerly located at Grand Rapids, Mich., and now located at Howard City, Mich., address Post Office Box 89.

PAR. 2. Respondent, is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been engaged in the business of selling and distributing a medicinal preparation designated as "Freeman's Pyletts" and advertised as a treatment for piles.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning his said product by United States mails and by various other means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning his said product by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said product in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, and by circulars and other advertising literature, are the following:

* * * Freeman's Pyletts are taken internally—going right to the seat of the trouble to relieve blind, bleeding, itching, internal or protruding piles. Pain eases quickly and the beneficial results will amaze you.

What Freeman's Pyletts have done for others is best proof of what they will do for you.

End piles without surgery.

For lasting and quick results, try "Pyletts".

Bleeding, pains, and swelling go quickly.

Equally effective for mild or long standing cases.

Recommended for all forms of piles, hemorrhoids, and swelling capillaries in the lower part of the bowel.

Freeman's Pyletts aid nature to remove the cause and thus banish piles.

They heal and promote general good health.

I have been a sufferer with piles many years. Tried many treatments, I also resorted to four operations in the past years without any success. A friend advised me to use Freeman's Pyletts; after taking a four weeks course my trouble is completely ended.

PAR. 4. By the use of the trade name "Pyletts" and the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, including advertisements in the form of testimonials, all of which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of respondent's preparations, respondent represents directly and through inference that his preparation designated as "Freeman's Pyletts" or "Pyletts" is an effective treatment and cure for all forms of piles, hemorrhoids, and swelling capillaries in the lower part of the bowels; that it relieves blind, bleeding, itching, internal or protruding piles; that its use eases pain quickly and produces amazing results; that it is equally effective for mild or long-standing cases of piles; and that its use promotes general good health.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations and advertisements used and disseminated by the respondent, as hereinabove described, are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading.

In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation is not an effective treatment or cure for all forms or for any forms of piles, hemorrhoids, and swelling capillaries in the lower part of the bowels; it is not an effective treatment for relieving blind, bleeding, itching, internal or protruding piles. The use of said preparation will not ease pain quickly or effectively or produce amazing results or any beneficial results in the treatment of the above-named ailments or conditions of the body. Said preparation is not an effective treatment for mild cases of piles or for long-standing cases of piles, and its use will not promote general good health. In fact, said preparation is of no substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of the above-named ailments and conditions, nor is it of any value in excess of its laxative properties.

PAR. 6. The respondent's advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, constitute false advertisements for the further reason that they failed to reveal facts material in the light of such representations or material with respect to consequences which may result from the use of the preparation to which the advertisements relate under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

In truth and in fact, respondent's said preparation is a laxative and is potentially dangerous when taken by one suffering from abdominal pains, stomach ache, cramps, nausea, vomiting, or other symptoms, of appendicitis. Its frequent or continued use may result in dependence on laxatives.

Furthermore, respondent's said preparation contains phosphorus, which is a potentially dangerous drug and the repeated or continued use of said preparation may result in phosphorus poisoning and deterioration of the bones of the body.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to the therapeutic properties of said preparation has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations are true and induce a substantial portion of the public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's preparation designated as Freeman's Pylets.

Order

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Merritt Freeman Butler, an individual, trading as Freeman's Products, or trading under any other name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of his medicinal preparation designated "Freeman's Pyletts" or any preparation of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails or (b) by any means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or by implication, that respondent's said preparation is a cure or remedy for, or constitutes a competent or effective treatment for piles, hemorrhoids or swelling capillaries in the lower part of the bowels, or that said preparation has any substantial therapeutic value in the treatment of said conditions; that said preparation will ease pain quickly or effectively, promote general good health, or that said preparation has any therapeutic value in the promotion of good health in excess of its laxative properties; or which advertisement fails to reveal that said preparation should not be used by persons suffering from nausea, vomiting, abdominal pains, or other symptoms of appendicitis, and further that the repeated and continued use may result in phosphorus poisoning and resulting deterioration of the bones of the body, provided, however, that if the directions for use, wherever they appear on the label, in the labeling or both on the label and in the labeling, contain a warning of the potential dangers in the use of said preparation as hereinabove set forth, such advertisement need contain only the cautionary statement: "CAUTION, USE ONLY AS DIRECTED."

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof, or which fails to comply with the affirmative requirements set forth in said paragraph 1.

It is further ordered, That respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
 NU-TONE LABORATORIES, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
 OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 28, 1914

Docket 4645. Complaint, Nov. 25, 1941—Decision, Apr. 20, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in the manufacture and competitive interstate distribution and sale of two devices to be attached to radio receiving sets which it described as "aerial eliminators" and "line noise eliminators"; through labels attached thereto and through counter cards which were conspicuously exhibited by retailers in connection with display of said devices, directly and by implication—

(a) Represented that said "aerial eliminator" constituted an indoor aerial for radio reception, use of which rendered perfect or improved the tone and selectivity of the radio to which attached, reducing noises due to static and other causes, enabling it to receive broadcasts from more distant stations than would otherwise be the case, and making it possible to dispense with any aerial without impairment of performance.

The facts being devices in question would not perform the functions of an aerial, reduce noises in question except at the expense of the incoming program, or accomplish results claimed above, but would, in a large majority of cases, result in less efficient reception and performance; and use thereof would not result in a radio performing without any aerial, but merely in the substitution of another instrumentality performing function of an aerial; and

(b) Represented that its "line noise eliminator," when attached to the power line of a radio receiving set, would reduce line noises or those due to static or electrical interference, and improve the tonal quality of the instrument;

The facts being that noises in question enter a set through the aerial and not the power line, so that such device used as directed would not be expected to accomplish results claimed therefor, though if used on some other electrical appliance causing interference, it would tend to reduce such static;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, and of causing it to purchase said devices, thereby unfairly diverting trade to respondent from its competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Nu-Tone Laboratories, Inc., a corporation hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Nu-Tone Laboratories, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, and having an office and principal place of business at 115 South Market Street, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 5 years last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling, among other things, two devices designed to be attached to radio receiving sets and described by respondent as "aerial eliminators" and "line noise eliminators." In the course and conduct of its business, respondent sells the two said devices to various retail dealers, and causes said devices, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said devices in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business respondent is now, and at all times mentioned herein has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms, partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of aerials and devices intended and sold for use in the reduction of "line noises" in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among such competitors are many who do not misrepresent the character, effectiveness, or utility of their devices or the method of their use which is necessary to accomplish their purpose.

PAR. 4. In the course of its business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said devices, respondent has made and caused to be made various representations and claims concerning the character, effectiveness and utility thereof. By means of labels attached to the said devices and counter cards furnished to dealers which respondent intended to be, and were, conspicuously exhibited by retail dealers in connection with displays of said devices for sale.

PAR. 5. Respondent's said aerial eliminator was at different times constructed in two different ways. As first constructed it consisted of a hollow cylinder, with closed ends. From one end protruded short red and green wires, and from the other a short brown wire. The red and brown wires were joined together inside the cylinder to form a single continuous wire running through the cylinder, but with different colored ends. The end of the green wire inside the cylinder was wrapped three or four times around the other wire.

As later constructed the ends of the red and brown wires inside the cylinder were connected by a small grid condenser, consisting of a piece of mica fiber wrapped in lead foil and paper. The end of the green wire inside the cylinder was simply connected to a bit of wood.

Respondent's directions for the use of this device, regardless of the method of construction, were to connect the brown wire to a good ground, such as a water pipe or radiator, and the green and red wires respectively to the ground and aerial posts on the set.

PAR. 6. Among and typical of said representations and claims so made as to the aerial eliminator are the following:

Aerial Eliminator; Greater Distance;
Perfect Selectivity; Less Static;
Perfect Tone; Eliminates All Outside Wires;
Reduces Static and Noise; Indoor Radio Aerial.

Respondent also designated some of said devices by the names "Nu-Tone" and "Perfectone" which appear upon said labels.

PAR. 7. Through the use of the foregoing statements and designations respondent has represented, directly and through implication, that said device in itself constitutes an indoor aerial for radio reception; that by its use the tone and selectivity of the radio to which it is attached will be rendered perfect, or improved; that noises, due to static and other causes, will be reduced; that the radio will be enabled to receive broadcasts from stations more distant than would otherwise be the case, and that the use of an outside aerial, or any aerial, may be dispensed with without impairment of the performance of the radio.

PAR. 8. The foregoing claims and representations so made and disseminated by respondent in the course of its aforesaid business are exaggerated, misleading, and untrue as to the device, regardless of which method of construction is employed. In truth and in fact respondent's said device is not, in and of itself, an instrumentality which will perform the function of a radio aerial. Its use will not render perfect nor improve the tonal quality or selectivity of radios to which it is attached. It will not reduce noises due to static or other causes, emanated from radios to which it is attached, except at the expense of the incoming program, nor will it render such radios capable of receiving broadcasts from stations more distant than would otherwise be the case. The use of the device in accordance with respondent's directions instead of an outside aerial, will, in the large majority of cases, result in less efficient reception and performance. The device, when used as directed, does not result in the radio set performing without any aerial, but merely in the substitution of another instrumentality for an outside aerial, or aerial of some other type, which performs to a greater or less degree, the function of such aerial.

PAR. 9. The said line noise eliminator consists of a closed cardboard cylinder containing a small condenser, consisting of a coil of lead foil and paper. At one end is a common knife connection, and at the other a receptacle for such a connection. The condenser is placed between and in contact with the two strips of metal which form the blades of the knife connection and which extend through the cylinder to enable contact to be made at the other end when another wire is plugged into the receptacle.

Respondent's directions for the use of this device both on radio sets and electric appliances were to plug the power wire of the set or appliance into the device and plug the device into the wall outlet.

PAR. 10. Among and typical of said representations and claims so made as to the "line noise eliminator" are the following:

Line Noise Eliminator
Reduces Static and Noise Due to Electrical Interference
For All Radio Sets

Respondent also designated some of said devices by the names "Clear-Tone," "Nu-Tone," and "Marvel."

PAR. 11. Through the use of the foregoing statements and designations respondent has represented, directly and through implication that said device will, when attached to a radio, eliminate noises entering the radio through the power line, improve the tone of the instrument, and reduce noises due to static and electrical interference.

PAR. 12. The foregoing claims and representations so made and disseminated by respondent in the course of its aforesaid business are exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, respondent's said device will not, when attached to a radio, eliminate noises entering through the power line. It will not improve the tone of the instrument, nor reduce noises due to static or electrical interference.

PAR. 13. The use by respondent of the designations and representations as set forth herein in connection with the offering for sale and sale of its said devices, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the false and erroneous belief that such representations and designations were true and correct, and to induce them to purchase said devices on account thereof. Respondent, further, has likewise supplied to and placed in the hands of dealers and distributors, a means or instrumentality whereby they may mislead and deceive the purchasing public with respect to the quality, character, and performances of respondent's said devices.

As a result of respondent's acts and practices, trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from its competitors engaged in the sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of radio aeriels and devices for the reduction of line noises, who truthfully represent their products as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 14. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on November 25, 1941, issued its complaint in this proceeding and caused same to be served upon respondent, Nu-Tone Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of answer thereto by respondent, a hearing was held on February 26, 1942, at Chicago, Ill., before James A. Purcell, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it. At the said hearing, the attorney for the Commission and counsel for the respondent stipulated and agreed that a certain statement of facts read into the transcript of hearing should constitute the record in the matter and be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the Commission may proceed upon said facts as stipulated to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts (including inferences which it may draw from the said stipulated facts), and its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Counsel for the respondent expressly waived the filing of a report upon the evidence by the trial examiner. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer and stipulation, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Nu-Tone Laboratories, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, and having an office and principal place of business at 115 South Market Street, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 5 years last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling, among other things, two devices designed to be attached to radio receiving sets and described by respondent as "aerial eliminators" and "line noise eliminators." In the course and conduct of its business, respondent sells the two said devices to various retail dealers, and causes said devices, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said devices in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business respondent is now, and at all times mentioned herein has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of aerials and devices intended and sold for use in the reduction of line noises in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among such competitors are many who do not misrepresent the character, effectiveness or utility of their devices or the method of their use which is necessary to accomplish their purpose.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said devices, respondent has made and caused to be made various representations and claims concerning the character, effectiveness, and utility thereof by means of labels attached to the said devices and counter cards furnished to dealers which respondent intended to be, and were, conspicuously exhibited by retail dealers in connection with displays of said devices for sale.

PAR. 5. Respondent's said aerial eliminator was at different times constructed in two different ways. As first constructed it consisted of a hollow cylinder, with closed ends. From one end protruded short red and green wires, and from the other a short brown wire. The red and brown wires were joined together inside the cylinder to form a single continuous wire running through the cylinder, but with different colored ends. The end of the green wire inside the cylinder was wrapped three or four times around the other wire.

As later constructed the ends of the red and brown wires inside the cylinder were connected by a small grid condenser, consisting of a piece of mica fiber wrapped in lead foil and paper. The end of the green wire inside the cylinder was simply connected to a bit of wood.

Respondent's directions for the use of this device, regardless of the method of construction, were to connect the brown wire to a good ground, such as a water pipe or radiator, and the green and red wires respectively to the ground and aerial posts on the set.

PAR. 6. Among and typical of said representations and claims so made as to the aerial eliminator are the following:

Aerial Eliminator; Greater Distance.

Perfect Selectivity; Less Static.

Perfect Tone; Eliminates all Outside Wires; Reduces Static and Noise.

Indoor Radio Aerial.

Respondent also designated some of said devices by the names "Nu-Tone" and "Perfectone" which appear upon said labels.

PAR. 7. Through the use of the foregoing statements and designations respondent has represented, directly and through implication, that said device in itself constitutes an indoor aerial for radio reception; that by its use the tone and selectivity of the radio to which it is attached will be rendered perfect or improved; that noises, due to static and other causes, will be reduced; that the radio will be enabled to receive broadcasts from stations more distant than would otherwise be the case, and that the use of an outside aerial, or any aerial, may be dispensed with without impairment of the performance of the radio.

PAR. 8. Respondent's said device, however constructed, is not, in and of itself, an instrumentality which will perform the function of a radio aerial. Its use will not render perfect nor improve the tonal quality or selectivity of radios to which it is attached. It will not reduce noises due to static or other causes, emanated from radios to which it is attached, except at the expense of the incoming program, nor will it render such radios capable of receiving broadcasts from stations more distant than would otherwise be the case.

The use of the device in accordance with respondent's directions instead of an outside aerial, will, in the large majority of cases, result in less efficient reception and performance. The device, when used as directed, does not result in the radio set performing without any aerial, but merely in the substitution of another instrumentality for an outside aerial, or aerial of some other type, which performs to a greater or less degree, the function of such aerial.

PAR. 9. The said line noise eliminator consists of a closed cardboard cylinder containing a small condenser, consisting of a coil of lead foil and paper. At one end is a common knife connection, and at the other a receptacle for such a connection. The condenser is placed between and in contact with the two strips of metal which form the blades of the knife connection and which extend through the cylinder to enable contact to be made at the other end when another wire is plugged into the receptacle.

Respondent's directions for the use of this device both on radio sets and electrical appliances were to plug the power wire of the set or appliance into the device and plug the device into the wall outlet.

PAR. 10. Among and typical of said representations and claims so made as to the "Line Noise Eliminator," are the following:

Line Noise Eliminator.

Reduces Static and Noise Due to Electrical Interference.

For All Radio Sets.

Respondent also designated some of said devices by the names "Clear-Tone," "Nu-Tone," and "Marvel."

Noises caused by static and the operation of other electrical appliances enter into a radio receiving set through the aerial, and not through the power line. In consequence, when the device is connected to the power line of a radio set, in accordance with respondent's directions, it will not be effective to eliminate line noises, will not improve the tone of the instrument or reduce noises due to static or electrical interference. When noises emitted from a radio set are caused by electrical interference due to the operation of some other electrical appliance, the use of the device on such other electrical appliance will tend to reduce the interference and static caused by its operation.

PAR. 11. The aforesaid representations have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the false and erroneous belief that said representations and implications are true and to cause a substantial number of members of the public to purchase respondent's devices, thereby diverting trade to respondent from its competitors.

Order

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondent herein and counsel for the Commission and read into the transcript of this proceeding at a hearing held on February 26, 1942, at Chicago, Ill., before James A. Purcell, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, which stipulation provides, among other things, that the Commission may proceed upon the facts as stipulated, without further evidence or other intervening procedure, to issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act;

It is ordered, That respondent, Nu-Tone Laboratories, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its devices designated "aerial eliminators" and "line noise eliminators" or any other devices of substantially similar construction or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or any other names, in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that said device designated "aerial eliminator" will improve the tonal quality or selectivity of radio receiving sets to which it is attached, render such sets capable of receiving broadcasts from stations more distant than would otherwise be the case, perform the function of a radio aerial, or reduce noises due to static or other causes except at the expense of the incoming program.

Order

34 F. T. C.

2. Representing that said device designated "line noise eliminator" when attached to the power line of a radio receiving set will reduce line noises, or noises due to static or electrical interference, or improve the tonal quality of the instrument.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF

MERVIN WINEHOLT, TRADING AS WINEHOLT COMPANY AND MERVIN WINEHOLT COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4691. Complaint, Jan. 30, 1942—Decision, Apr. 29, 1942

Where an individual, engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of watches and pistols, among other things; by advertisements in newspapers, magazines and trade journals, and by folders, pamphlets, circulars, and other advertising matter, directly or by implication—

- (a) Represented that the watch he sold at $1.98 was unconditionally guaranteed to have a useful life and to render satisfactory service under normal usage for 5 years, its movement finely tested, and that the case contained gold; and
- (b) Represented through use of words "Locomotive" and "R. R. Dial" that it was a "Railroad watch" or comparable thereto, and enhanced such implication by pictorial representations showing large hands and large, distinct hour numerals, and, through use of words "Railroad engraved back," that its back was engraved;

The facts being said watch did not have a useful life, but repairs of parts would be necessary long before expiration of 5 years; back thereof was not engraved, but design was stamped thereon mechanically; movement was not finely tested; case contained no gold whatever; and product did not possess the desirable characteristics and dependability of a "Railroad" watch as long understood by purchasing public as an especially accurate and dependable watch required for use by railroad employees, but was only a cheap imitation thereof; and

- (c) Falsely represented that the pistols he sold at $6.45 were regularly sold at retail at $12, and that his price of $6.45 was a special price available for a limited time only;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the public into the belief that such statements were true, thereby causing it, because of such mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of said products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Maurice C. Pearce for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Mervin Wineholt, an individual, trading as Wineholt Co., and Mervin Wineholt Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Complaint

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Mervin Wineholt, is an individual, trading and doing business as Wineholt Co. and Mervin Wineholt Co., with his office and principal place of business located in Woodbine, State of Pennsylvania.

PAR. 2. The respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various kinds of merchandise, including watches and pistols in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes his said products, when sold by him, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of the aforesaid watches and pistols, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false and misleading representations relative to his said products, such statements and representations being made by advertisements inserted in newspapers, magazines, and trade journals, and by means of folders, pamphlets, circulars, letters, and other advertising matter, circulated and distributed generally among prospective purchasers. Among and typical of such false and misleading representations relative to respondent's watches and pistols, respectively, are the following:

Watches:

$1.98.

5 years guarantee.

* * * railroad engraved back * * *.

Finely tested quick train lever movement.

* * * Solid gold effect case * * *.

Locomotive Gilt—R. R. Dial * * *.

Pistols:

Final sale RUSH!

Only $6.45.

* * * Cost $12 elsewhere.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the foregoing statements and representations and others of similar import, not specifically set out herein, the respondent has represented and now represents, directly or by implication, that the watch sold by him at the price of $1.98 is unconditionally guaranteed to have a useful life and to render satisfactory services under normal usage for a period of 5 years; that the back thereof is engraved; that the movement is finely tested and that the case contains gold.

Through the use of the words "Locomotive" and "R. R. Dial" in connection with and as descriptive of said watch respondent implies that said watch is a "Railroad Watch" or comparable to such grade of watch. "Railroad" watches are known and understood by the purchasing public to be watches possessing the accuracy and dependability required for use by railroad employees and are considered to be especially valuable and desirable. Respondent enhances the implication that said watches are "Railroad Watches" by pictorial representations showing large hands and large distinct hour numerals, which features are generally found in genuine "Railroad Watches." Through the use of the words "Railroad Engraved Back" respondent represents that the back of said watch is engraved. Engraving is understood by the public as describing a process whereby a design is cut or incised into the metal by hand.

Further, respondent represents that the pistols sold by him at the price of $6.45 are regularly sold at retail at $12 and that the price of $6.45 is a special price available for a limited time only.

PAR. 5. The foregoing statements and representations are false, misleading and deceptive. In truth and in fact the watches sold by respondent for $1.98 do not have a useful life and will not render satisfactory service for a period of 5 years, but on the contrary the parts will wear to the extent that repairs will be necessary long before the 5-year period has expired. The back of said watch is not engraved, as engraving is commonly understood, but the design thereon is stamped mechanically by a die. The movement of said watch is not finely tested, but on the contrary any tests that are made are superficial and of small extent and short duration. The case of said watch contains no gold whatsoever. Said watch does not possess the desirable characteristics and dependability of a "Railroad" watch, but on the contrary is only a cheap imitation thereof.

The pistols advertised and sold by respondent are not regularly sold at retail for $12 and $6.45 is not a special price for a limited time, but is, in fact, the regular retail selling price of said pistol.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true and causes the public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's products.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on January 30, 1942, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Mervin Wineholt, an individual trading as Wineholt Co. and Mervin Wineholt Co., charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission by order entered herein granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Mervin Wineholt, is an individual trading and doing business as Wineholt Co. and Mervin Wineholt Co., with his office and principal place of business located in Woodbine, State of Pennsylvania.

PAR. 2. The respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various kinds of merchandise, including watches and pistols, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes his products, when sold by him, to be transported from his aforesaid place of business in the State of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of the watches and pistols, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false and misleading representations relative to his products, such statements and representations being made by advertisements inserted in newspapers, magazines and trade journals, and by means of folders, pamphlets, circulars, letters and other advertising matter, circulated and distributed generally among prospective purchasers. Among and typical of such false and misleading representations relative to respondent's watches and pistols, respectively, are the following:

Watches:

$1.98

5 years guarantee.

Finely tested quick train lever movement

* * * Solid gold effect case * * *

Locomotive Gilt—R. R. Dial * * *

Pistols:

Final Sale Rush!

Only $6.45

* * * Cost $12 elsewhere.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the foregoing statements and representations and others of similar import, not specifically set out herein, the respondent has represented and now represents, directly or by implication, that the watch sold by him at the price of $1.98 is unconditionally guaranteed to have a useful life and to render satisfactory service under normal usage for a period of 5 years; that the back thereof is engraved; that the movement is finely tested and that the case contains gold.

Through the use of the words "Locomotive" and "R. R. Dial" in connection with and as descriptive of said watch respondent implies that said watch is a "Railroad Watch" or comparable to such grade of watch. "Railroad" watches are known and understood by the purchasing public to be watches possessing the accuracy and dependability required for use by railroad employees and are considered to be especially valuable and desirable. Respondent enhances the implication that watches are "Railroad Watches" by pictorial representations showing large hands and large distinct hour numerals, which features are generally found in genuine "Railroad Watches." Through the use of the words "Railroad Engraved Back" respondent represents that the back of said watch is engraved. Engraving is understood by the public as describing a process whereby a design is cut or incised into the metal by hand.

Further, respondent represents that the pistols sold by him at the price of $6.45 are regularly sold at retail at $12 and that the price of $6.45 is a special price available for a limited time only.

PAR. 5. The foregoing statements and representations are false, misleading and deceptive. In truth and in fact the watches sold by respondent for $1.98 do not have a useful life and will not render satisfactory service for a period of 5 years, but on the contrary the parts will wear to the extent that repairs will be necessary long before the 5-year period has expired. The back of said watch is not engraved, as engraving is commonly understood, but the design thereon is stamped mechanically by a die. The movement of said watch is not finely tested, but on the contrary any tests that are made are superficial and of small extent and short duration. The case of said watch contains no gold whatsoever. Said watch does not possess the desirable characteristics and dependability of a "Railroad" watch, but on the contrary is only a cheap imitation thereof.

The pistols advertised and sold by respondent are not regularly sold at retail for $12 and $6.45 is not a special price for a limited time, but is, in fact, the regular retail selling price of said pistol.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true and causes the public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that he waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Mervin Wineholt, individually and trading as Wineholt Co. and Mervin Wineholt Co., or trading under any other name or names, his representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale and distribution of his merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or by implication, that respondent's watches will render satisfactory service for a period of 5 years, or for any other specified period of time in excess of that during which such watches will in fact render satisfactory service.

2. Representing that the cases of respondent's watches are engraved, unless the design is cut or incised into the metal by hand.

3. Representing that the movements of respondent's watches are finely tested, when any tests given such movements are superficial and of short duration.

4. Representing that the cases of respondent's watches contain gold or that they have a solid gold effect.

5. Using the words "Locomotive" or "Railroad" or the abbreviation "R. R.," or any other words or abbreviations of similar import, to designate, describe or refer to respondent's watches, or representing in any manner that respondent's watches are railroad watches.

6. Representing, directly or by implication, that the prices at which respondent offers his merchandise for sale are special or reduced prices, or that such prices are applicable for a limited time only, when in fact such prices are the usual and customary prices at which respondent sells such merchandise in the normal and usual course of business.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

THE SEBRONE COMPANY, FEDERAL COSMETIC SALES CORPORATION, ET AL.

Docket 4230. Complaint, Aug. 9, 1940—Decision, May 1, 1942

Where two corporations and several officers and directors thereof, who controlled their advertising policies and business activities, engaged in the manufacture and interstate sale and distribution of two cosmetic and medicinal preparations know as "Sebrone" and "Waft"; by means of advertisements through the mails and in newspapers and periodicals, and by radio continuities, circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, directly and by inference—

(a) Falsely represented that their preparation "Sebrone" was a new scientific discovery and a cure or remedy for dandruff which would destroy the germ which allegedly causes it, and would remove scar tissue and prevent baldness, tending, through use without proper qualification of such words as "Stops dandruff," "Ends dandruff," "Defeats dandruff," to mislead and deceive the public into the belief that product in question would permanently cure dandruff or the underlying condition responsible therefor;

The facts being said product was not a new scientific discovery but its ingredients have long been used by physicians in various combinations, and while its use was beneficial in assisting in the temporary removal of dandruff scales and in clearing up superficial infections associated with dandruff, its therapeutic value was limited thereto; it would not act as a permanent cure or remedy for dandruff, generally thought by the medical profession to be symptomatic of some underlying cause and often associated with various diseased conditions of the skin; and it had absolutely no value in connection with scar tissue, which nothing will remove except surgery; and

(b) Falsely represented that their preparation "Waft" was a new scientific discovery which would reduce excessive sweating to normal and remove and kill odors from the feet and body;

The facts being that product in question, by reason of its content of formaldehyde, long used by the medical profession as an antiseptic and deodorant, had value as an antiseptic, but was not a new scientific discovery; and its effect as a deodorant was limited to masking odors, which, however, it did not destroy; its astringent properties could have but slight effect upon condition of excessive sweating due to many causes, such as endocrine disorders, general malnutrition, debilitating diseases, and heredity; and it would not reduce such sweating to normal;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that such statements were true, thereby inducing it, because of said mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of said preparations:

1126

Complaint

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Horsley, Manns & O'Brien, of Springfield, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Seboreen Laboratories, Inc., a corporation; Federal Cosmetic Sales Corporation, a corporation; Fred E. Schon, Henry M. Schoen, Virginia L. Cook, William Horsley, Lloyd M. Wendt, Ethel Cronson, and Evelyn Schon, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Seboreen Laboratories, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois and having an office and principal place of business at 6912 Ravenswood Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and is engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of certain medicinal and cosmetic preparations.

Respondent, Federal Cosmetic Sales Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois and having a principal place of business at 126 North Seventh Street, Springfield, Ill., and is engaged in the sale and distribution of medicinal and cosmetic preparations manufactured by the respondent, Seboreen Laboratories, Inc.

Respondent, Fred E. Schon, is a graduate medical doctor and is an agent and director of the respondent, Seboreen Laboratories, Inc., and resides and has a principal place of business at 618 Belmont Avenue, Arlington Heights, Chicago, Ill.

Respondents, Lloyd M. Wendt, Ethel Cronson, and Evelyn Schon, are officers of the respondent, Seboreen Laboratories, Inc., and have their office and principal place of business at 6912 Ravenswood Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Respondents, Henry M. Schoen, Virginia L. Cook, and William Horsley, are officers of the respondent, Federal Cosmetic Sales Corporation, and have their office and principal place of business at 126 North Seventh Street, Springfield, Ill.

Said individual respondents dominate and control the advertising policies and business activities of said corporate respondents, and all of said individual respondents and the corporate respondents have acted in conjunction and in cooperation with each other, in doing the acts and practices hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now and for more than 1 year last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of certain cosmetics and medicinal preparations known and designated as "Sebrone" and "Waft." In the course and conduct of their business the respondents cause said cosmetic and medicinal preparations when sold to be transported from their respective places of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a course of trade in said cosmetics and medicinal preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of the aforesaid business the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said products by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing or which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said products, and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning their said products, by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, by radio continuities and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

1. Representations made with reference to "Sebrone":

Sebrone is the modern, scientific way to stop dandruff. * * * With dandruff gone, scar tissue goes, infection halts. A healthy scalp means growing, luxuriant hair. Thousands of aggressive men use Sebrone to keep trim and well groomed and avoid the threat of baldness.

Save your hair with Sebrone.

Defeat dandruff with amazing new Sebrone.

Stop dandruff in one week with Sebrone.

Sebrone is a scientific preparation designed to end dandruff. * * * The antiseptic properties of Sebrone actually destroy the dandruff germ, ending inflammation. When inflammation is ended, the scar tissue caused by dandruff disappears and your scalp is again normal and healthy.

It is powerful, destroying the germs that infect your scalp.

Sebrone is a scientific preparation designed to end dandruff. It is made to do this job as simply and quickly as possible. The antiseptic properties of Sebrone actually destroy the dandruff germ.

2. Representations made with reference to "Waft":

Body and foot odors vanish. * * * This new scientific antiseptic deodorant stops odors immediately. * * * Waft is so powerful that it removes odors not only from the feet but from shoes and stockings as well. * * * Even the powerful odors of onions and garlic vanish when Waft is applied.

The perfect remedy for Athlete's Foot.

Kills strongest odors.

Room and closet odors, simply spray Waft into the air, odors will promptly disappear.

Waft reduces excessive sweating to normal.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of said products and the effectiveness of their use, respondents represent directly and by inference that their preparation "Sebrone" is a new, scientific discovery and is a cure or remedy for dandruff which will destroy the germ which allegedly causes dandruff, that said preparation will remove scar tissue, will prevent baldness, and will stimulate the growth of hair; that their preparation "Waft" is a new, scientific discovery and is a cure or remedy for Athlete's Foot, and will reduce excessive sweating to normal and remove and kill odors from the feet and body and will remove room and closet odors.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations and claims used and disseminated by the respondents, as hereinabove described, are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact the preparation designated as "Sebrone" is not a new discovery. It is not a cure or remedy for dandruff and will not destroy the germ which allegedly causes dandruff, as its therapeutic properties are limited to the temporary removal of dandruff scales and under conditions of use it would not kill a sufficient number of any germs which might be associated with dandruff to have any curative effect upon this condition. Said preparation will have no effect upon the removal of scar tissue, which when once formed never disappears. Said preparation "Sebrone" will have no effect in the prevention of baldness, and will not stimulate the growth of hair.

Respondents' preparation "Waft" is composed essentially of a solution of formaldehyde which has long been used as a deodorant. Said preparation is not a cure or remedy for athlete's foot and will have no effect upon such a condition in excess of temporarily alleviating the itching symptom because of its antiseptic and counterirritant properties. As a deodorant this preparation will temporarily mask body odors but will not be effective in removing or destroying such odors or their cause. In the same manner said preparation will do no more than temporarily mask foot odors and will not be effective in destroying the cause of such odors. This preparation will not reduce excessive sweating to normal, as abnormal sweating is caused by conditions for which this preparation has no therapeutic value. Said preparation does not act as a neutralizing agent and will not destroy or eliminate closet or room odors and will have no effect other than temporarily masking such odors.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to said preparations has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of said preparations.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 9 A. D. 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Seboreen Laboratories, Inc., a corporation; Federal Cosmetic Sales Corporation, a corporation, Fred E. Schon, Henry M. Schoen, Virginia L. Cook, William Horsley, Lloyd M. Wendt, Ethel Cronson, and Evelyn Schon, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Carrel F. Rhodes, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by G. W. Horsley, attorney for the respondents, before Andrew B. Duvall and Randolph Preston, trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiners upon the evidence and exceptions filed thereto, and brief in support of the complaint (no briefs having been filed by the respondents or oral argument requested); and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Seboreen Laboratories, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, having its office and principal place of business at 6912 Ravenswood Avenue, Chicago, Ill. On December 2, 1940, said respondent filed articles of amendment of its charter with the Secretary of State for the State of Illinois, changing the name of said respondent to "The Sebrone Company." Since the date of its incorporation March 16, 1937, said respondent has been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of certain medicinal and cosmetic preparations.

Respondent, Federal Cosmetic Sales Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, having its principal place of business at 126 North Seventh Street, Springfield, Ill. At the time of the filing of the complaint herein, said respondent was engaged in the sale and distribution of medicinal and cosmetic preparations manufactured by respondent, the Sebrone Company (formerly known as Seboreen Laboratories, Inc.).

Respondent, Fred E. Schon, is an individual engaged in the practice of medicine as a physician and surgeon, and resides at 10 Dunton Street, Arlington Heights, Ill. Said respondent is a stockholder and director of respondent, the Sebrone Co. (formerly known as Seboreen Laboratories, Inc.), is technical adviser to said respondent corporation, and has actively participated in the preparation of advertisements for the products sold and distributed by said corporation.

Respondent, Lloyd M. Wendt, is an individual and is president and director of the Sebrone Co. (formerly known as Seboreen Laboratories, Inc.), having his office and place of business at 6912 Ravenswood Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent, Evelyn Schon, is an individual and is the wife of respondent, Fred E. Schon, and secretary and treasurer of the Sebrone Co. (formerly known as Seboreen Laboratories, Inc.), residing at 10 Dunton Street, Arlington Heights, Ill., and having her place of business at 6912 Ravenswood Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent, Ethel Cronson, is an individual and at the time of the filing of the complaint herein was a director of the Sebrone Co. (formerly known as Seboreen Laboratories, Inc.), with her place of business at 6912 Ravenswood Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Respondent, Henry M. Schoen, is an individual and at the time of the filing of the complaint herein was the president and a director of the corporate respondent, Federal Cosmetic Sales Corporation. Said respondent died on or about June 15, 1941, subsequent to the issuance of the complaint herein.

Respondent, Virginia L. Cook, is an individual and at the time of the filing of the complaint herein, and for some time subsequent thereto, was secretary and treasurer and a director of the corporate respondent, Federal Cosmetic Sales Corporation.

Respondent, William Horsley, is an attorney and at the time of the filing of the complaint herein was a director of the corporate respondent, Federal Cosmetic Sales Corporation. Said individual respondent, in his capacity as attorney, organized said corporate respondent and acted as attorney for said corporate respondent but did not otherwise engage in the acts and practices of the respondents as hereinafter described.

Said individual respondents, Fred E. Schon, Lloyd M. Wendt, Evelyn Schon, and Ethel Cronson, dominated and controlled the advertising policies and business activities of said corporate respondent, The Sebrone Company (formerly known as Seboreen Laboratories, Inc.). Said individual respondent, Virginia L. Cook, together with Henry M. Schoen, dominated and controlled the advertising policies and business activities of said corporate respondent, Federal Cosmetic Sales Corporation. All of said individual respondents and the corporate respondents have acted in conjunction and cooperation with each other in doing the acts and practices hereinafter described.

PAR. 2. Respondents, for several years last past, have been engaged in the sale and distribution of certain cosmetic and medicinal preparations known and designated as "Sebrone" and "Waft." In the course and conduct of their business the respondents caused said cosmetic and medicinal preparations, when sold, to be transported from their respective places of business in the State of Illinois to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said cosmetic and medicinal preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated and have caused the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said preparations, by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondents have also disseminated, and have caused the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said preparations, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said preparations in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, by radio continuities, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

1. Representations made with reference to "Sebrone":

Sebrone is the modern, scientific way to stop dandruff.

With dandruff gone, scar tissue goes; infection halts.

Thousands of aggressive, successful men use Sebrone to keep trim and well groomed, and to avoid the threat of baldness.

Save your hair with Sebrone.

Defeat dandruff with amazing new Sebrone.

Stop dandruff in one week with Sebrone.

Science's new, convenient remedy for dandruff.

Sebrone—new treatment puts an end to dandruff.

Sebrone—new scientific, sure—does one job—defeats dandruff.

Sebrone is a scientific preparation designed to end dandruff. It is made to do this job as simply and quickly as possible. The antiseptic properties of Sebrone actually destroy the dandruff germ.

Don't let dandruff and dandruff scar tissue make you bald. Get rid of messy dandruff flakes and dandruff infection now before it is too late. Dandruff or baldness may seriously affect your happiness or your job.

2. Representations made with reference to "Waft":

Body and foot odors vanish. * * * This new scientific, antiseptic deodorant stops odors immediately. * * * Waft is so powerful that it removes odors not only from the feet, but from shoes and stockings as well. * * * Even the powerful odors of onion and garlic vanish when Waft is applied.

Kills strongest odors.

Waft reduces excessive sweating to normal.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of said preparations and the effectiveness of their use, respondents represent, directly and by inference, that their preparation "Sebrone" is a new scientific discovery and is a cure or remedy for dandruff and will destroy the germ which allegedly causes dandruff; that said preparation will remove scar tissue and will prevent baldness; that their preparation "Waft" is a new scientific discovery; and that it will reduce excessive sweating to normal and remove and kill odors from the feet and body.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations and claims used and disseminated by the respondents as hereinabove described are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue.

Respondents' preparation "Sebrone" is composed of the following ingredients:

	Percent
Monoacetate resorcinol.....	4
Acid Salicylic.....	2
Glycerine.....	4
Oil of rosemary.....	1½
Oil jasmine compound.....	1½
Alcohol	50
Water, Q. S.

The ingredients used in this preparation are not new but have been used in various combinations by physicians for a great number of years, and, consequently, this preparation is not a new scientific discovery. Monoacetate resorcinol, which is otherwise known as euresol, appears in many scalp preparations. This ingredient acts both as an antiseptic and as an irritant, which may help to increase circulation. Salicylic acid tends to dissolve the scales of dandruff and to increase the circulation of the scalp through irritation. Glycerine has the property of softening the skin. The alcohol contained in this preparation would act as an antiseptic agent. The oil of rosemary and oil of jasmine compound are perfumes only and have no additional value.

PAR. 6. Dandruff is a scaly condition of the scalp which is normally present in practically all individuals. Excessive scaling, however, is an abnormality, the most common form of which is pityriasis simplex capitis, the cause or origin of which is unknown. Dandruff is generally thought by the medical profession to be symptomatic or a manifestation of some underlying cause. It is often associated with various disease conditions of the skin, such as seborrhoeic dermatitis, dermatitis venenata, psoriasis, and other scaly conditions of the scalp and other portions of the body. Dandruff is sometimes accompanied by secondary infections caused from scratching. The use of the preparation "Sebrone" is beneficial in assisting in the temporary removal of dandruff scales, and its antiseptic properties are beneficial in clearing up superficial infections associated with dandruff. It will not act as a permanent cure for dandruff nor will it have any therapeutic value in reaching the underlying cause of the dandruff condition. The therapeutic value of this preparation is limited to the temporary removal of the dandruff scales and its antiseptic value where secondary superficial infections exist. It is not a cure or remedy for the condition of dandruff and has absolutely no value in connection with scar tissue, as nothing will remove scars or scar tissue except surgery. Respondent's preparation "Sebrone" has no value in the treatment of any disease or condition which causes baldness and is of no value in preventing baldness.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondents of such words as "stops dandruff," "ends dandruff," "defeats dandruff," and other words of similar import or meaning as appear in respondents' advertising hereinabove set forth, without proper qualification, has a tendency to mislead and deceive the public into the belief that the use of respondents' preparation will either permanently cure the condition of dandruff or the underlying condition which causes dandruff.

PAR. 8. Respondents' preparation "Waft" is composed of the following ingredients:

	Percent
Formaldehyde-----	1.5
Menthol-----	.01
Alcohol-----	2
Water-----	95

By reason of the existence of formaldehyde in this preparation, it has value as an antiseptic. Formaldehyde has long been used by the medical profession in varying percentages as an antiseptic and deodorant. Consequently this preparation is not a new scientific discovery. When used as a deodorant this preparation will not destroy odors, but its effect is limited to the masking of such odors as may be present.

Order

34 F. T. C.

The astringent properties of this preparation will have but slight effect upon the condition of excessive sweating, and its use will not reduce excessive sweating to normal. Excessive sweating is due to many causes, such as endocrine disorders, general malnutrition, debilitating diseases, and, in some cases, heredity. There is nothing in this preparation which will have any effect upon the causes of sweating, and its value is limited to the slight effect produced by its astringent qualities. Body odors caused by decomposition of excretions of perspiration might be masked by this preparation.

PAR. 9. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, with respect to said preparations has had, and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true, and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of said preparations.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, answer of the respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before Andrew B. Duvall and Randolph Preston, trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiners upon the evidence and exceptions filed thereto, and brief filed in support of the complaint; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondents, the Sebrone Company (formerly known as Seboreen Laboratories, Inc.), a corporation; Federal Cosmetic Sales Corporation, a corporation; Fred E. Schon, Virginia L. Cook, Lloyd M. Wendt, Ethel Cronson, and Evelyn Schon have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, the Sebrone Co. (formerly known as Seboreen Laboratories, Inc.), a corporation; and Federal Cosmetic Sales Corporation, a corporation; and their respective officers representatives, agents, and employees; and Fred E. Schon, Lloyd M. Wendt, Ethel Cronson, and Evelyn Schon, as individuals and as officers and directors of the Sebrone Co. (formerly known as Seboreen Laboratories, Inc.), a corporation; and their representatives, agents, and employees; and Virginia L. Cook, individually and as officers and director of Federal Cosmetic Sales Corporation, a corporation, and her representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of their preparations designated "Sebrone" and "Waft," or any other preparations of substantially similar composition or processing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other name or names, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference.

(a) That respondents' preparations are new discoveries or recent developments of scientific research.

(b) That respondents' preparation "Sebrone" is a cure or remedy for dandruff or that it has any therapeutic value in the treatment of dandruff in excess of assisting in the temporary removal of dandruff scales and beneficially affecting superficial infections of the scalp sometimes associated with the condition of dandruff.

(c) That the use of respondent's preparation "Sebrone" will have any beneficial effect upon scars or scar tissue or that it will remove scar tissue.

(d) Through the use of the words "stops dandruff," "ends dandruff," "defeats dandruff," or other words or phrases of similar import or meaning, that respondents' preparation "Sebrone" will permanently eliminate the condition of dandruff or constitute a cure or remedy for the underlying conditions which may cause dandruff.

(e) That respondents' preparation "Sebrone" has any therapeutic value in the treatment of any disease or condition which causes, baldness, or that its use will prevent baldness.

(f) That respondents' preparation "Waft" will destroy or have any effect upon unpleasant body and foot odors other than the temporary masking of such odors.

(g) That respondents' preparation "Waft" will have any therapeutic value in the treatment of any disease or condition causing excessive sweating, or that it will reduce excessive sweating to normal or have any effect upon the condition of sweating other than the temporary effect afforded by the use of an astringent.

2. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement, by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly, or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparations, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph (1) hereof and respective subdivisions thereof.

It is further ordered, That the complaint herein be, and the same hereby is, dismissed as to the respondents, Henry M. Schoen, deceased, and William Horsley.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

PERCE P. GREEN AND HOWARD RAND, TRADING AS GREEN SUPPLY COMPANY, NATIONAL MERCHANDIS-
ING COMPANY, AND NATIONAL SUPPLY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4480. Complaint, Apr. 3, 1941—Decision, May 5, 1942

Where two individuals, engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of fishing tackle, silverware, rifles, garments, blankets, radios, and other merchandise; in soliciting sale and distribution of their products—

Furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involved the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes in sale and distribution to ultimate consumers, a typical plan involving a scheme by which the person by chance pushing from a push card disk the girl's name corresponding with that concealed under card's master seal received a fishing tackle set or choice of items listed on back of card, as did also the operator, customers punching from the card three designated numbers and the last punch each received other articles, and amount paid by various customers was dependent upon the particular number punched out; and thereby—

Supplied to and placed in the hands of others a means of conducting games of chance, gift enterprises, or lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with aforesaid plan, under which fact as to whether the purchaser received an article of merchandise or nothing for his money, and also the amount he paid for a punch, were determined wholly by lot or chance, and there was involved a game of chance to procure an article at much less than its normal retail price; in competition with many who, unwilling to use any method involving chance or contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With the result that many persons were attracted by said sales plan and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell merchandise of said individuals in preference to that of their said competitors, and with tendency and capacity, by reason thereof, to unfairly divert substantial trade in commerce to such individuals from said competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were contrary to the established public policy of the United States Government, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

dising Co. and National Supply Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Perce P. Green and Howard Rand, are individuals, trading and doing business under the names of Green Supply Co., National Merchandising Co., and National Supply Co., with their office and principal place of business now located at 282 Sexton Building, Minneapolis, Minn. Respondents are now, and have been for several years last past, engaged in the sale and distribution of fishing tackle, silverware, rifles, garments, blankets, radios, and other merchandise. During the past several years, respondents have had places of business located at Minneapolis, Minn., Detroit, Mich., Pittsburgh, Pa., and Philadelphia, Pa., and they have caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from their places of business in the above said locations in the States of Minnesota, Michigan, and Pennsylvania, to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than Minnesota, Michigan, and Pennsylvania, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for several years last past, a course of trade by respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of their business, respondents are and have been in substantial competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing their merchandise, furnish and have furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumers thereof. The method or sales plan adopted and used by respondents is substantially as follows:

Respondents distribute and have distributed to operators and the purchasing public certain literature and instructions, including among other things, push cards, order blanks, illustrations of their said merchandise, and circulars explaining respondents' plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards, and to the purchasing and consuming public. One of respondents' push cards bears 54 feminine names with ruled columns on the face thereof for writing in the name of the customer opposite the feminine name selected. Said push card has 54 partly perforated disks, on the face of each of which is printed the word "push." Each of said disks is set over one of the aforesaid feminine names. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed only when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal and concealed within the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the face of said card. The person selecting the feminine name corresponding to the one under the master seal receives his choice of fishing tackle, silverware, a rifle, or a radio. The push card bears the following legend or instructions:

Sales of respondents' merchandise by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above-described legends or instructions. Said prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above-described legends or instructions. Whether a purchaser receives an article of merchandise or nothing for the amount of money paid, and the amount to be paid for any merchandise received, are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondents furnish and have furnished various other push cards accompanied by order blanks, instructions and other printed matter for use in the sale and distribution of their merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme. The sales plan or method involved in the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said other push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3 The persons to whom respondents furnish, and have furnished, the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling and distributing respondents' merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to, and place in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said sales plan or method in the sale of their merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure one of the said articles of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and thereby are induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert substantial trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on April 3, 1941, issued, and thereafter served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Perce P. Green and Howard Rand, individuals, trading as Green Supply Co., National Merchandising Co., and National Supply Co., charging them with unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondents' answers thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission, and testimony and other evidence in opposition to the allegations of the complaint were introduced by the respondents, before John W. Addison, a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding. The testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the complaint, the answers thereto, the testimony and other evidence, the report of the trial examiner and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto. And the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the public interest and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Perce P. Green and Howard Rand, are individuals, trading and doing business under the names Green Supply Co., National Merchandising Co., and National Supply Co. Their office and principal place of business is now located at 282 Sexton Building in Minneapolis, Minn.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and have been for several years last past, engaged in the sale and distribution of fishing tackle, silverware, rifles, garments, blankets, radios, and other merchandise. During the several years last past respondents had places of business located at Minneapolis, Minn.; Detroit, Mich., and Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, Pa., and have caused their said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from their said places of business to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of origin of the shipment.

Respondents, in the course and conduct of their business, have been in substantial competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Respondents, in soliciting the sale of and selling and distributing their merchandise, furnish and have furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes, when such merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumer thereof. The method or sales plan adopted and used by respondents is substantially as follows:

Respondents distribute and have distributed to their operators and the purchasing public certain literature and instructions, including among other things push cards, order blanks, illustrations of their merchandise, and circulars explaining their plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards and to the purchasing and consuming public. One of the push cards so distributed bears the following legend or instructions:

This push card has 54 disks so cut or stamped as to be readily pushed out; on the face of each disk is printed the word "Push," and below each disk is a feminine name, with a space in connection with the disk so indicated for the insertion of the name of the person pushing the disk. When pushed out, the disk is revealed as two layers of cardboard which separate and disclose a number which indicates the amount to be paid in cents for the chance to obtain the article or articles offered as a prize, except that if the number disclosed is over 29, the amount to be paid is limited to 29 cents. The numbers of the disk do not appear on the card consecutively, from 1 to 54, but are diversified and distributed throughout the group of disks. When all the punches have been sold, this seal is removed and one of the feminine names appearing under the disks is revealed. The person who punched the disk designated by this name receives the fishing tackle, or choice of the items listed on the back of the card, and the operator of the push card also receives a similar prize or award. The other prizes mentioned are awarded in accordance with the statement in the legend.

Sales of respondents' merchandise by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above-described legend or instructions. The said prizes or premiums are allotted to the customers or purchasers of punches in accordance with the above-described legend or instructions. Whether the purchaser receives an article of merchandise or receives nothing for the amount of money paid by him, and also the amount to be paid for the punch, are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondents furnish and have furnished various other push cards, accompanied by order blanks, instructions, and other printed matter, for use in the sale and distribution of their merchandise by means of games of chance, gift enterprises or lottery schemes. The sales plan or method involved in the sale of all of said merchandise by means of said other push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 4. The persons to whom respondents furnish and have furnished the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondents' merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting games of chance, gift enterprises, or lotteries in the sale of respondents' merchandise, in accordance with their sales plan.

PAR. 5. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public by the herein-described method involves a game of chance, or the sale of a chance to procure one of the said articles of merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with respondents are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their merchandise and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has the tendency and capacity to unfairly divert substantial trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents are contrary to the established public policy of the Government of the United States of America, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answers of the respondents, the testimony, and other evidence taken before a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, the report of the trial examiner and briefs filed in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents, Perce P. Green and Howard Rand, individuals trading as Green Supply Co., National Merchandising Co. and National Supply Co., have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Perce P. Green and Howard Rand, trading as Green Supply Co., National Merchandising Co. and National Supply Co., or trading under any other name or designation, jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of fishing tackle, silverware, rifles, garments, blankets, radios, or any other merchandise, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, shall forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of such merchandise to the public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

Order

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, push or pull cards, pull tabs, punchboards, or other lottery devices, either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, pull tabs, punchboards, or lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4598. Complaint, Sept. 29, 1941—Decision, May 5, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of its "Magnesia S. Pellegrino" medicinal preparation; by means of advertisements sent through the mails, by radio broadcasts, and otherwise, directly and by implication—

- (a) Falsely represented that said preparation acted as a disinfectant and would normalize the digestive system, and assure perfect digestion and health; that it would, regulate the intestines, was gentle and would not irritate the intestinal walls; and that a teaspoonful taken every morning and night was a sure and final remedy against constipation and stomach acidity;

The facts being it was not of any therapeutic value except as a laxative and cathartic which would temporarily evacuate the bowels and as an antacid which would temporarily reduce stomach acidity; and

- (b) Failed to reveal facts material in the light of such representations, or with respect to consequences which might result from use of preparation in question under prescribed or usual conditions, in that a laxative or cathartic, depending upon the dose, is potentially dangerous when taken by one suffering from abdominal pains, stomachache, cramps, nausea, vomiting, or other symptoms of appendicitis, while frequent or excessive use thereof may result in dependency on laxatives;

With capacity and tendency to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements were true, thereby inducing it to purchase said preparation:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. John W. Addison, trial examiner.

Mr. Joseph C. Fehr for the Commission.

Viault & Viault, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Codrin Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Codrin Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under, and by virtue of, the laws of the State of New York, and it has its principal office and place of business located at 333 Sixth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation designated as "Magnesia S. Pellegrino," in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said product, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in New York to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

The respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its medicinal preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said product, by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States; and by continuities broadcast from radio stations which have sufficient power to, and do, convey the programs emanating therefrom to listeners located in various States of the United States other than the State in which said broadcasts originate, and by other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product; and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations of and concerning said product contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Disinfectant.

In the morning normalize your digestive system by taking a teaspoon of Magnesia S. Pellegrino.

Complaint

34 F. T. C.

In the morning before coffee take a teaspoon of Magnesia S. Pellegrino and you will assure yourself of a perfect digestion and thus of perfect health.

It is a sovereign remedy against constipation and stomach acidity. * * * a teaspoonful, every morning and every evening, in half a tumblerful of water or milk, will rid you forever of constipation and stomach acidity.

A teaspoonful, every morning and every night in half a tumblerful of water or milk, is the sure, final, and sovereign remedy against constipation and stomach acidity.

Against constipation and against other intestinal disturbances you must use Magnesia San Pellegrino * * * the only purgative with efficient and sure action without irritating the intestines.

* * * only its gentleness to the intestine walls.

* * * only one tablespoonful is sufficient regulator of intestines * * *.

Infallible action against any form of constipation, * * *.

Is guaranteed to possess * * * efficiency unequalled by any other magnesia. * * * acts surely as purgative * * * acts as regulator of intestines.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and other statements and representations similar thereto, not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of respondent's said preparation, respondent represents, directly and by implication, that its preparation, Magnesia S. Pellegrino, acts as a disinfectant; that it will normalize the digestive system; that through its use one will be assured of perfect digestion and perfect health; that its use will regulate the intestines; that it is gentle to the intestines and that it will not irritate the intestinal walls; that it will rid one of constipation; that it will rid one of stomach acidity; and that a teaspoonful of said preparation taken every morning and every night is a sure and final remedy against constipation and stomach acidity.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations and advertisements used and disseminated by the respondent, as hereinabove described, are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading.

In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation does not act as a disinfectant; it will not normalize the digestive system; its use will not assure one of perfect digestion or of perfect health; its use will not regulate the intestines; it is not gentle to the intestines and it will irritate the intestinal walls; it will not rid one of constipation; it will not rid one of stomach acidity; the taking of a teaspoonful of said preparation every morning and every night, or the frequent or continued taking of any dosage of said preparation is not a sure, final, or effective remedy against constipation and stomach acidity; nor is said preparation of any therapeutic value except as a laxative or a cathartic which will temporarily evacuate the bowels and as an antacid which will temporarily reduce stomach acidity.

PAR. 6. The respondent's advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, constitute false advertisements for the further reason that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of such representations or material with respect to consequences which may result from use of the preparation to which the advertisements relate under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

In truth and in fact, respondent's said preparation is a laxative or a cathartic, depending upon the dose, and is potentially dangerous when taken by one suffering from abdominal pains, stomachache, cramps, cholera, nausea, vomiting, or other symptoms of appendicitis. Its frequent or continued use may result in dependency on laxatives.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and advertisements with respect to its said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and induces a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's said preparation.

PAR. 8. The acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on September 29, 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Codrin Corporation, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, at a hearing before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, a stipulation was entered into between counsel for the respondent and counsel for the Commission whereby it was stipulated and agreed that, subject to the approval of the Commission, a statement of facts read into the record might be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the Commission might proceed upon such statement of facts and the inferences drawn therefrom to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and issue its order disposing of this proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Respondent expressly waived the filing of the trial examiner's report upon the evidence. Thereafter, this proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation as to the facts, said stipulation having been approved by the Commission; and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

Findings

. FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Codrin Corporation, is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and has its principal office and place of business located at 333 Sixth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation designated as "Magnesia S. Pellegrino." Respondent causes and has caused said product, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in New York to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said medicinal preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, respondent has disseminated, and has caused to be disseminated, false advertisements concerning its said product by United States mails, by radio broadcasts, and by various other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product; and has disseminated, and has caused the dissemination of, advertisements concerning its said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the statements and representations concerning said product contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Disinfectant.

In the morning normalize your digestive system by taking a teaspoon of Magnesia S. Pellegrino.

In the morning before coffee take a teaspoon of Magnesia S. Pellegrino and you will assure yourself of a perfect digestion and thus perfect health.

It is a sovereign remedy against constipation and stomach acidity. * * * a teaspoonful, every morning and every evening, in half a tumblerful of water or milk, will rid you forever of constipation and stomach acidity.

A teaspoonful every morning and every night in a half tumblerful of water or milk, is the sure, final, and sovereign remedy against constipation and stomach acidity.

Against constipation and against other intestinal disturbances you must use Magnesia San Pellegrino * * * the only purgative with efficient and sure action without irritating the intestines.

* * * only its gentleness to the intestine walls.

* * * only one tablespoonful is sufficient regulator of intestines * * *.

Infallible action against any form of constipation, * * *.

Is guaranteed to possess * * * efficiency unequalled by any other Magnesia. * * * acts surely as purgative * * * acts as regulator of intestines.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements and representations hereinabove set forth, and other statements and representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the therapeutic properties of respondent's said preparation, respondent has represented directly and by implication that its preparation, Magnesia S. Pellegrino, acts as a disinfectant; that it will normalize the digestive system; that through its use one will be assured a perfect digestion and perfect health; that its use will regulate the intestines; that it is gentle to the intestines and that it will not irritate the intestinal walls; that it will rid one of constipation; that it will rid one of stomach acidity; and that a teaspoonful of said preparation taken every morning and every night is a sure and final remedy against constipation and stomach acidity.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations and advertisements used and disseminated by the respondent, as hereinabove described, are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation does not act as a disinfectant; it will not normalize the digestive system; its use will not assure one of perfect digestion or of perfect health; its use will not regulate the intestines; it is not gentle to the intestines and it will irritate the intestinal walls; it will not rid one of constipation; it will not rid one of stomach acidity; the taking of a teaspoonful of said preparation every morning and every night, or the frequent or continued taking of any dosage of said preparation, is not a sure, final, or effective remedy against constipation and stomach acidity; nor is said preparation of any therapeutic value except as a laxative or a cathartic which will temporarily evacuate the bowels and as an antacid which will temporarily reduce stomach acidity.

Order

34 F. T. C.

PAR. 6. The respondent's advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, constitute false advertisements for the further reason that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of such representations, or material with respect to consequences which may result from use of the preparation to which the advertisements relate under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual. In truth and in fact, respondent's said preparation is a laxative or a cathartic, depending upon the dose, and is potentially dangerous when taken by one suffering from abdominal pains, stomach ache, cramps, nausea, vomiting, or other symptoms of appendicitis. Its frequent or excessive use may result in dependency on laxatives.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and advertisements with respect to its said preparation, disseminated as aforesaid, has had the capacity and tendency to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and advertisements were true, and induced a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's said preparation.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between counsel for the respondent and counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent Codrin Corporation, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its medicinal preparation Magnesia S. Pelle-grino, or any other product containing the same or similar ingredients or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated, by means of the United States mails or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, any advertisement which

(a) Represents, directly or through inference, that said preparation is a disinfectant.

(b) Represents, directly or through inference, that the use of said preparation will normalize the digestive system, or assure perfect digestion or perfect health.

(c) Represents, directly or through inference, that said preparation will not irritate the intestines of the user, or that its use will regulate the intestines, or that it is a sure or final cure for constipation, or that said preparation is a cure or remedy or a competent or effective treatment for, or has any therapeutic value in the treatment of constipation in excess of affording temporary relief therefrom.

(d) Represents, directly or through inference, that said preparation is a cure or remedy or a competent or effective treatment for stomach acidity, or has any therapeutic value in the treatment of such condition in excess of temporarily reducing stomach acidity.

(e) Represents, directly or through inference, that said preparation has therapeutic value in the treatment of any disease or condition in excess of temporarily relieving constipation and temporarily reducing stomach acidity.

(f) Fails to reveal that said preparation should not be used in cases of abdominal pains, stomachache, cramps, nausea, vomiting, or other symptoms of appendicitis, and, further, that its frequent or continued use may result in dependence upon laxatives: Provided, however, That if the directions for use, wherever they appear on the label, in the labeling, or both, contain a warning of the potential dangers in the use of said preparation as above set forth, such advertisement need contain only the statement, "CAUTION: Use Only as Directed."

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated, by any means, any advertisement for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of respondent's preparation, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof or which fails to reveal, as required in paragraph 1 hereof, the dangerous consequences which may result from the use of said preparation or which does not in lieu of the statement of such consequences contain the affirmative cautionary statement as provided in said paragraph.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

GENERAL SURVEYS, INC., JOHN H. THIES, PRESIDENT
OF GENERAL SURVEYS, INC., AND G. J. DOUCETTE, DI-RECTOR OF GENERAL SURVEYS, INC.COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 4554. Complaint, Aug. 4, 1941—Decision, May 7, 1942*

Where a corporation, the president thereof who was its principal owner and controlled its policies and activities, and a second individual who was a director, stockholder, and salesman thereof, engaged in sale and interstate distribution of "The American Educator Encyclopedia," sold in sets of 10 or 20 volumes, and other books, and of a "quarterly loose-leaf extension service" and "research services" contemplating the answering of customers' questions, sold in various combinations with other books and a book case at prices ranging from $59.50 to $99.50;

In selling their said products under the practice by which all shipments were made on orders or contracts sent in by salesmen and canvassers, and all payments except initial payment to salesmen were remitted directly to their main office—

- (a) Represented to prospective purchasers that certain items were being given free to the particular customer for some special reason, through such statements, among others, as that books which were part of a regular combination offer were free and that purchaser paid for only the loose-leaf extension service, when in fact the price was that customarily and ordinarily charged for both books and service;
- (b) Represented to prospective purchasers, including teachers, clergymen, and students about to enter a profession, that for advertising purposes the books were given free or at an especially low price because of the purchaser's alleged prominence and in order to get his testimonial for later use in sales to the general public, or for some other reason appealing to him; the facts being said books were sold at their customary and ordinary price;
- (c) Failed to inform prospective purchasers that the securing of the loose-leaf extension service material included in said combination offer entailed an additional cost of 24 cents a copy in addition to the stated price, notwithstanding agent's representation that the price included cost of such material; and
- (d) Falsely represented to prospective purchasers generally that the usual price at which the extension service and books were being offered and sold was a special price, effective for a limited period only;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that aforesaid representations were true, and that it was securing some special advantage, and of thus inducing substantial number of members thereof to purchase their said books and services:

Complaint

34 F. T. C.

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. L. E. Creel, Jr. for the Commission.

Mr. Henry Junge, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that General Surveys, Inc., a corporation, John H. Thies, individually, and as president of General Surveys, Inc., and G. J. Doucette, individually, and as a director of General Surveys, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it with respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, General Surveys, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 203 North Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent, John H. Thies, is president of General Surveys, Inc., the principal owner of the common capital stock of said corporate respondent, and controls its policies and activities, including the conduct of sales and the character of advertising representations made in connection therewith. Respondent, G. J. Doucette, is a director and stockholder of General Surveys, Inc., and is a salesman of said corporate respondent.

PAR. 2. All of respondents are now, and for several years last past have been, engaged in the sale, transportation, and distribution in interstate commerce of sets of reference books known as The American Educator Encyclopedia and other books, and a so-called quarterly loose-leaf extension service for the encyclopedia, and certain so-called research services. The American Educator Encyclopedia is sold in sets of 10 or 20 volumes. Said encyclopedia, the loose-leaf extension service, and a 10-year membership in an organization known as General Research Foundation, which answers members' questions on general subjects within the scope of encyclopedic service, are sold in a combination with certain other designated books of general or special interest and a bookcase to house them at a combined total price of $59.50 to $99.50, depending on the number of volumes of the encyclopedia, the combination of other books selected, and whether a bookcase is included in the order.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, as hereinbefore described, respondents utilize the services of approximately eight salesmen and solicitors, including the respondent, G. J. Doucette, who canvass individual prospective customers located in various States of the United States. When signed orders or contracts are received by such solicitors, the orders or contracts are forwarded to the Chicago offices of respondents and the wares called for therein are shipped directly to the purchasers located at various points in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. All shipments of books are on orders or contracts sent in by such salesmen. All payments made for said books, except the initial payments made to the salesmen, are remitted directly to the respondents' offices in Chicago.

PAR. 4. Respondents' salesmen and solicitors, including the respondent, G. J. Doucette, have used the following means, methods, and practices in soliciting the sale of and in selling the said books to the purchasing public:

1. Said agents or solicitors have falsely represented to prospective purchasers that certain items, which were in fact a part of a regular combination offer and included in the price thereof, as above described, were being given free to the particular customer for some special reason, thereby influencing such customer to purchase said books. Among such representations was the representation that the books were free and that the prospective purchaser was to pay for and did pay for only the loose-leaf extension service, whereas, in truth and in fact, the price purported to be charged for the loose-leaf extension service was and is the customary and ordinary price charged for said books and the loose-leaf extension service.

2. Said agents or solicitors have falsely represented to prospective purchasers that, for advertising purposes and as a part of an advertising program, said books were given free, or at an especially low price, because of the alleged prominence of the prospective purchaser and in order to get his testimonial of their quality for later use in sales to the general public, or for some other reason appealing to such prospective purchaser, when in truth and in fact such books were not given free or at an especially low price to such prospective purchaser for any reason, but were sold at the price at which said books are customarily and ordinarily sold by the respondents. This representation was frequently made to teachers, to clergymen, and to students about to enter a profession, to whom it was represented that the said books were being given free or at an especially low price, the respondents representing that such special offer was being made to them in order that they might boost respondents' wares or give to the respondents a testimonial of value to respondents in a later sale of similar sets of books to the general public at a higher price.

3. Said agents or solicitors in many instances failed or neglected to inform prospective purchasers that the securing of the loose-leaf extension service material included in said combination offer entailed an additional cost of 24 cents a copy in addition to the price stated to such prospective purchasers, although said agents or solicitors represented that the stated price included such loose-leaf extension material.

4. Said agents or solicitors in many instances represented to prospective purchasers of said books generally that the price at which said loose-leaf extension service and said books were being offered for sale and sold was a special price effective for a limited period of time only, when in truth and in fact the price at which the said loose-leaf extension service and said books were offered for sale and sold was the usual and customary price at which they were generally and regularly sold.

PAR. 5. The effect of the use of the aforesaid means, methods and practices by the respondents is to lead the individual prospective purchaser to believe that he is securing some advantage in purchasing said books and services which is not available to members of the public generally, whereas, in truth and in fact, any member of the public can purchase said books and services on the identical terms and conditions at which they are offered such individual prospective purchasers.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid means, methods and practices in offering for sale and selling said books and services in said commerce has had, and now has, a capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations are true and into the erroneous and mistaken belief that they are securing some special advantage not available to all members of the purchasing public. As a result of this erroneous and mistaken belief, induced as aforesaid, a substantial number of members of the purchasing public have purchased respondents' said books and services.

PAR. 7. The foregoing acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 4, 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, General Surveys, Inc., a corporation, John H. Thies, individually, and as president of General Surveys, Inc., and G. J. Doucette, individually, and as a director of General Surveys, Inc., charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and filing of respondents' answers, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted the motion of respondents, General Surveys, Inc., and G. J. Doucette, for permission to withdraw their said answers and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Said motion calls the attention of the Commission to the physical and mental incapacity of respondent, John H. Thies, to participate in this proceeding and is accompanied by a statement of a physician indicating permanent incapacity. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, General Surveys, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 203 North Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Respondent, John H. Thies, is President of General Surveys, Inc., the principal owner of the common capital stock of said corporate respondent, and controls its policies and activities, including the conduct of sales and the character of advertising representations made in connection therewith. Respondent, G. J. Doucette, is a director and stockholder of General Surveys, Inc., and is a salesman of said corporate respondent.

PAR. 2. All of respondents are now, and for several years last past have been, engaged in the sale, transportation and distribution in interstate commerce of sets of reference books known as "The American Educator Encyclopedia" and other books, and a so-called quarterly loose-leaf extension service for the encyclopedia, and certain so-called research services. "The American Educator Encyclopedia" is sold in sets of ten or twenty volumes. Said encyclopedia, the loose-leaf extension service, and a 10-year membership in an organization known as General Research Foundation, which answers members' questions on general subjects within the scope of encyclopedic service, are sold in a combination with certain other designated books of general or special interest and a bookcase to house them at a combined total price of $59.50 to $99.50, depending on the number of volumes of the encyclopedia, the combination of other books selected, and whether a bookcase is included in the order.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, as hereinbefore described, respondents utilize the services of approximately eight salesmen and solicitors, including the respondent, G. J. Doucette, who canvass individual prospective customers located in various States of the United States. When signed orders or contracts are received by such solicitors, the orders or contracts are forwarded to the Chicago offices of respondents and the wares called for therein are shipped directly to the purchasers located at various points in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. All shipments of books are on orders or contracts sent in by such salesmen. All payments made for said books, except the initial payments made to the salesmen, are remitted directly to the respondents' offices in Chicago.

PAR. 4. Respondents' salesmen and solicitors, including the respondent, G. J. Doucette, have used numerous methods and practices in soliciting the sale of the said books to members of the purchasing public. Respondents' agents have falsely represented to prospective purchasers that certain items which were in fact a part of a regular combination offer and included in the price thereof, as above described, were being given free to the particular customer for some special reason, thereby influencing such customer to purchase said books. Among such representations made was the representation that the books were free and that the prospective purchaser was to pay for, and did pay for, only the loose-leaf extension service, whereas, in truth the price purported to be charged for the loose-leaf extension service was the customary and ordinary price charged for said books and the loose-leaf extension service.

Another method used by the agents of respondents in soliciting the sale of said books was the method of falsely representing to prospective purchasers that for advertising purposes and as a part of an advertising program said books were given free or at an especially low price, because of the alleged prominence of the prospective purchaser and in order to get his testimonial of their quality for later use in sales to the general public, or for some other reason appealing to such prospective purchaser, when in fact such books were not given free or at an especially low price to such prospective purchaser for any reason, but were sold at the price for which the books are customarily and ordinarily sold by the respondents. This representation was frequently made to teachers, clergymen, and to students about to enter a profession.

Another practice engaged in by the agents of respondents was the practice of failing or neglecting to inform prospective purchasers that the securing of the loose-leaf extension service material included in said combination offer entailed an additional cost of 24 cents a copy in addition to the price stated to such prospective purchasers, although said agents represented that the stated price included the cost of the loose-leaf extension material.

The agents of respondents in many instances represented to prospective purchasers of said books generally that the price at which said loose-leaf extension service and said books were being offered for sale and sold was a special price, effective only for a limited period of time, when in fact the price at which such extension service and books were offered for sale and sold was the usual and customary price at which they were generally and regularly sold.

PAR. 5. The effect of the use of the aforesaid means, methods and practices by the respondents is to lead the individual prospective purchaser to believe that he is securing some advantage in purchasing said books and services which is not available to members of the public generally, whereas, in truth and in fact, any member of the public can purchase said books and services on the identical terms and conditions at which they are offered such individual prospective purchasers.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid means, methods and practices in offering for sale and selling said books and services in said commerce has had, and now has, a capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations are true and into the erroneous and mistaken belief that they are securing some special advantage not available to all members of the purchasing public. As a result of this erroneous and mistaken belief, induced as aforesaid, a substantial number of members of the purchasing public have purchased respondents' said books and services.

Order

34 F. T. C.

CONCLUSION

The foregoing acts and practices of the respondents, General Surveys, Inc., and G. J. Doucette, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, General Surveys, Inc., and G. J. Doucette, in which answer said respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondents, General Surveys, Inc., and G. J. Doucette have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent, General Surveys, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and respondent, G. J. Doucette, individually and as a director of General Surveys, Inc., his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of books, loose-leaf material, or other merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or by implication:

1. That any books, loose-leaf material, or other merchandise the cost of which is included in the purchase price of articles in combination with which any such books, loose-leaf material, or other merchandise are offered, are "free," either by the use of the term stated or by any other word or words of similar import or meaning.

2. That the price at which any books, loose-leaf material, or other merchandise are customarily or regularly offered for sale or sold, separately or in combination, in the ordinary course of business, is lower than the customary or regular price, or is a special or reduced price to selected customers, or is a special or reduced price available only to particular groups or classes of persons, or is available only for a limited time.

3. That any books, loose-leaf material, or other merchandise or services for which payment is later demanded or collected will be furnished to purchasers of other articles or services without additional charge.

It is further ordered, That respondents, General Surveys, Inc., and G. J. Doucette, shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That in view of the showing made as to the probable permanent incapacity of respondent, John H. Thies, this proceeding be, and the same hereby is, closed as to said respondent without prejudice to the right of the Commission, should future facts so warrant, to reopen the same as to said respondent and resume trial in accordance with its regular procedure.

IN THE MATTER OF
STEVEN ANGELL AND ASIMO LIAMPOS, TRADING AS
S. ANGELL & COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4520. Complaint, June 12, 1941—Decision, May 11, 1942

Where two individuals, engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of furs and fur garments—

- (a) Furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involved the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes in sale and distribution thereof to the ultimate consumer; typical plan involving a push card and scheme, in accordance with which the person selecting from 100 feminine names displayed thereon that corresponding with name under card's master seal became entitled to one of their fur garments, and the amount of money paid for a chance was determined by the number pushed from the card; and thereby

Supplied to and placed in the hands of their agents and operators and members of the purchasing public the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their furs and fur garments in accordance with said plan involving sale of chance to procure such a product at much less than its normal retail price, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who, unwilling to use any such or other method contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With the result that many persons were attracted by said sales plan and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell their said furs and fur garments in preference to those offered by their said competitors, from whom substantial trade in commerce was unfairly diverted to them; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce; and

Where said individuals, by means of tags and labels attached to their products, advertisements in magazines and newspapers, and circulars, price lists, and other advertising material distributed among prospective purchasers—

- (b) Represented that certain of such products were made from mink or seal peltries, respectively, through use of such designations as "Minkolet," "Minkolene," and "Marmink;" and "Nubian Seal," "V Shape Seal," "Hud-seal," and "Sealine;"
- (c) Represented that certain of their products were made from beaver, or Silvertone muskrat peltries, respectively, through designations "Beaverette" and "Mendoza Beaver," and "Silvertone Muskrat;"
- (d) Represented that certain of their products were made from skunk or sable peltries through use of such terms as "Skunkette" and "Skunkolene" and "Sabellette" to designate them; and
- (e) Represented that certain of their products were made from squirrel or broadtail lamb peltries through use of such terms as "Squirrellette" and "Broadtail;"

1166

Complaint

The facts being peltries represented as "Silvertone Muskrat" were made from muskrat peltries dyed in silvertone; and others were made from rabbit or other peltries dressed and dyed to resemble, respectively, mink, seal, beaver, skunk, sable, squirrel, and broadtail;

- (f) Falsely represented through use of word "Norwegian" that certain of their said products were made from peltries imported from Norway; and
- (g) Failed to disclose the true nature and origin of their said fur products made of rabbit peltries which, when dyed and processed to resemble those of mink, seal, beaver, skunk, squirrel, and other more valuable fur-bearing animals, so closely resembled the genuine as to be indistinguishable therefrom insofar as members of the purchasing public were concerned;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial part of said public—which prefers fur products made from the peltries of seal, mink, beaver, muskrat, sable, squirrel, and broadtail lamb over those made from rabbit peltries so dressed, dyed and processed as to simulate the same, and prefers fur products made from the peltries of foxes obtained from Norway over those made from others—with respect to the nature and origin of their products, and with result of causing it thereby to purchase substantial quantities thereof:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and said individuals' competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Andrew B. Duvall, trial examiner.

Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr., for the Commission.

Mr. Harry A. Lieb, of New York City, for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Steven Angell and Asimo Liampos, individuals, trading as S. Angell & Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Steven Angell and Asimo Liampos, are individuals, trading and doing business under the name and style of S. Angell & Co., with their office and principal place of business located at 236 West Twenty-seventh Street in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondents are now, and have been for more than 1 year last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing furs and fur garments, and selling and distributing such products to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents cause and have caused said merchandise, when sold, to be shipped and transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than New York, and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 1 year last past a course of trade by respondents in such furs and fur garments in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of said business, respondents are now and have been in competition with other individuals and firms and with corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of furs and fur garments in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing their products, furnish and have furnished various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises or lottery schemes when said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumer thereof. The method or sales plan adopted and used by respondents was and is substantially as follows:

Respondents distribute and have distributed to their agents and operators and to members of the purchasing public certain literature and instructions, including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, illustrations of their said merchandise and circulars explaining respondents' plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards and to the purchasing public. One of respondents' push cards bears 100 feminine names, with ruled columns on the back of said card for writing in the name of the purchaser opposite the name selected. Said push card has 100 small partially perforated disks, on the face of which is printed the word "push." Each of said disks is set under one of the aforesaid feminine names. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed only when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal and concealed under the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the face of said card. The person selecting the feminine name corresponding to the one under the master seal receives his choice of a fur coat or a fur bolero. The push card bears a legend or instruction as follows:

Sales of respondents' merchandise by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above-described legend or instructions. Said prizes of furs are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legend or instructions. The amount of money paid by the purchaser, and the fact as to whether the purchaser receives a fur garment or nothing for the amount of money paid, are thus determined wholly by lot or chance. Respondents furnish and have furnished various push cards accompanied by said order blanks, instructions, and other printed matter for use in the sale and distribution of their garments by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan involved in the sale of all of said garments by means of said push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondents furnish the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondents' furs and fur garments in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to, and place in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their furs and fur garments in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said sales plan or method in the sale of their fur products and the sale of said fur products by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of furs and fur garments to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a fur or fur garment at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms and corporations who sell or distribute furs and fur garments in competition with the respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their furs and fur garments and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' furs and fur garments in preference to furs and fur garments offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert substantial trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, respondents have also engaged and are now engaged in the practice of failing to disclose the true nature and origin of their fur products, and of affirmatively misrepresenting the nature and origin of their products, such false representations being made by means of tags and labels attached to such products, by means of advertisements in magazines and newspapers, and by means of circulars, price lists, and other advertising material distributed among prospective purchasers of such products.

Among and typical of such acts and practices, the respondents have caused certain of their furs and fur garments to be designated or described by the terms "Minkolet," "Minkolene," and "Marmink," thereby representing that the products so designated are made from mink peltries. In truth and in fact, such products are not made from mink peltries, but are made from rabbit or other peltries which have been dressed and dyed in such manner that they resemble mink peltries.

Respondents also use the terms "Nubian Seal," "V Shape Seal," "Hudseal," and "Sealine" to designate certain of their products, thereby representing that such products are made from seal peltries. Such products are in fact made from rabbit peltries which have been so dressed and dyed as to resemble seal peltries.

Respondents also use the terms "Beaverette" and "Mendoza Beaver" to designate certain of their products, thereby representing that the products so designated are made from beaver peltries. Such products are in fact made from rabbit peltries which have been dressed and dyed in such manner as to resemble beaver peltries.

Respondents also use the term "Silvertone Muskrat" to designate certain of their products, thereby representing that such products are made from muskrat peltries. Such products are in fact made from rabbit peltries which have been so dressed and dyed as to resemble muskrat peltries.

Respondents also use the terms "Skunkette" and "Skunkolene" to designate certain of their products, thereby representing that such products are made from skunk peltries. Said products are in fact made from rabbit peltries which have been so dressed and dyed as to resemble skunk peltries.

Respondents also use the term "Sabellette" to designate certain of their products, thereby representing that such products are made from sable peltries. Such products are in fact made from rabbit peltries which have been so dressed and dyed as to resemble sable peltries.

Respondents also use the term "Squirrellette" to designate certain of their products, thereby representing that such products are made from squirrel peltries. Such products are in fact made from rabbit peltries, which have been so dressed and dyed as to resemble squirrel peltries.

Respondents have also used the term "Broadtail" to designate certain of their products, thus representing that the products so designated are made from the peltries of broadtail lambs. Such products are not in fact made from the peltries of broadtail lambs, but are made from other peltries which have been so dressed and dyed as to resemble broadtail peltries.

Respondents have also used the word "Norwegian" to designate certain of their products, thereby representing that such products are made from peltries imported from Norway. Such products are not in fact made from peltries imported from Norway, but are made from peltries obtained from other sources.

Respondents' products when dyed and processed as hereinabove described closely resemble in appearance garments made from the peltries of the respective fur-bearing animals above referred to and, insofar as the members of the purchasing public are concerned, are indistinguishable from garments actually made from the peltries of the various fur-bearing animals whose pelts have been simulated in the manner above described.

PAR. 6. There is a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for fur products made from the peltries of seal, mink, beaver, muskrat, skunk, sable, squirrel, and broadtail lamb, as compared to fur products made from the peltries of rabbits so dressed, dyed, and processed as to simulate in appearance the peltries of seal, mink, beaver, muskrat, skunk, sable, squirrel, and broadtail lamb. There is also a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for fur products made from the peltries of foxes obtained from Norway over fur products made from peltries obtained from other sources.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents in offering for sale and selling garments made from rabbit peltries which have been dyed and processed so as to resemble the peltries of mink, seal, squirrel, skunk, and other more valuable fur-bearing animals without disclosing or revealing the fact that such garments are made from rabbit peltries dyed and processed in the manner hereinabove described, have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that the furs and fur garments sold by the respondents are made from the peltries of seal, mink, beaver, muskrat, skunk, sable, squirrel, or broadtail lamb, when in fact they are made from dyed rabbit peltries.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents have the tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the nature and origin of respondents' products, and to cause such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' products as a result of the erroneous and mistaken belief so engendered.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on June 12, 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Steven Angell and Asimo Liampos, individuals, trading as S. Angell & Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence were introduced and certain stipulated facts were read into the record at a hearing before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said stipulated facts, testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, the stipulated facts, testimony and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (respondents not having filed brief and oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Steven Angell and Asimo Liampos, are individuals, trading and doing business under the name and style of S. Angell & Co. and having their office and principal place of business at 236 West Twenty-seventh Street, New York, N. Y. Respondents are now, and for several years last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of furs and fur garments.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, respondents cause, and have caused, furs and fur garments, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than New York and in the District of Columbia, and have maintained, and now maintain, a course of trade in such furs and fur garments in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the operation of said business respondents are now, and have been, in competition with other individuals, firms, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of furs and fur garments in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business respondents, in soliciting the sale of and in selling and distributing their products, furnish, and have furnished, various devices and plans of merchandising which involve the operation of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when said merchandise is sold and distributed to the ultimate consumer thereof. The method of sales plan adopted and used by respondents was, and is, substantially as follows:

Respondents distribute, and have distributed, to their agents and operators and to members of the purchasing public certain literature and instructions, including, among other things, push cards, order blanks, illustrations of their said merchandise, and circulars explaining respondents' plan of selling merchandise and of allotting it as premiums or prizes to the operators of said push cards and to the purchasing public. One of respondents' push cards bears 100 feminine names, with ruled columns on the back of said card for writing in the name of the purchaser opposite the name selected. Said push card has 100 small partially perforated disks on the face of which is printed the word "Push." Each of said disks is set under one of the aforesaid feminine names. Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed only when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The push card also has a large master seal and concealed under the master seal is one of the feminine names appearing on the face of said card. The person selecting the feminine name corresponding to the one under the master seal receives his choice of a fur coat or a fur bolero. The push card bears a legend or instructions as follows:

 All above 49 pay 49 cents.

Sales of respondents' merchandise by means of said push cards are made in accordance with the above-described legend or instructions. Said prizes of furs are allotted to the customers or purchasers in accordance with the above legend or instructions. The amount of money paid by the purchaser, and the fact as to whether the purchaser receives a fur garment or nothing for the amount of money paid, are thus determined wholly by lot or chance. Respondents furnish, and have furnished, various push cards accompanied by said order blanks, instructions, and other printed matter for use in the sale and distribution of their garments by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. The sales plan involved in the sale of all of said garments by means of said push cards is the same as that hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 4. The persons to whom respondents furnish the said push cards use the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondents' furs and fur garments in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to, and place in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their furs and fur garments in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said sales plan or method in the sale of their fur products, and the sale of said fur products by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 5. The sale of furs and fur garments to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a fur or fur garment at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute furs and fur garments in competition with the respondents, as above set forth, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondents in the sale and distribution of their furs and fur garments and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' furs and fur garments in preference to furs and fur garments offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert substantial trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being done, and has been done, by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, respondents have also engaged in and are now engaged, in the practice of failing to disclose the true nature and origin of their fur products, and of affirmatively misrepresenting the nature and origin of their products, such false representations being made by means of tags and labels attached to such products, by means of advertisements in magazines and newspapers, and by means of circulars, price lists, and other advertising material distributed among prospective purchasers of such products.

Findings

34 F. T. C.

Among and typical of such acts and practices, the respondents have caused certain of their furs and fur garments to be designated or described by the terms "Minkolet," "Minkolene," and "Marmink," thereby representing that the products so designated are made from mink peltries. In truth and in fact, such products are not made from mink peltries, but are made from rabbit or other peltries which have been dressed and dyed in such manner that they resemble mink peltries.

Respondents also use the terms "Nubian Seal," "V Shape Seal," "Hudseal," and "Sealine" to designate certain of their products, thereby representing that such products are made from seal peltries. Such products are in fact made from rabbit peltries which have been so dressed and dyed as to resemble seal peltries.

Respondents also use the terms "Beaverette" and "Mendoza Beaver" to designate certain of their products, thereby representing that the products so designated are made from beaver peltries. Such products are in fact made from rabbit peltries which have been dressed and dyed in such manner as to resemble beaver peltries.

Respondents also use the term "Silvertone Muskrat" to designate certain of their products, thereby representing that such products are made of "Silvertone Muskrats." Such products are in fact made from muskrat peltries which have been dyed and dressed in "Silver-tone."

Respondents also use the terms "Skunkette" and "Skunkolene" to designate certain of their products, thereby representing that such products are made from skunk peltries. Such products are in fact made from rabbit peltries which have been so dressed and dyed as to resemble skunk peltries.

Respondents also use the term "Sabellette" to designate certain of their products, thereby representing that such products are made from sable peltries. Such products are in fact made from rabbit peltries which have been so dressed and dyed as to resemble sable peltries.

Respondents also use the term "Squirrellette" to designate certain of their products, thereby representing that such products are made from squirrel peltries. Such products are in fact made from rabbit peltries which have been so dressed and dyed as to resemble squirrel peltries.

Respondents have also used the term "Broadtail" to designate certain of their products, thus representing that the products so designated are made from the peltries of broadtail lambs. Such products are not in fact made from the peltries of broadtail lambs, but are made from other peltries which have been so dressed and dyed as to resemble broadtail peltries.

Respondents have also used the word "Norwegian" to designate certain of their products, thereby representing that such products are made from peltries imported from Norway. Such products are not in fact made from peltries imported from Norway, but are made from peltries obtained from other sources.

Respondents' products, when dyed and processed as hereinabove described, closely resemble in appearance garments made from the peltries of the respective fur-bearing animals above referred to, and, insofar as the members of the purchasing public are concerned, are indistinguishable from garments actually made from the peltries of the various fur-bearing animals whose pelts have been simulated in the manner above described.

PAR. 7. There is a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for fur products made from the peltries of seal, mink, beaver, muskrat, skunk, sable, squirrel, and broadtail lamb as compared to fur products made from the peltries of rabbits so dressed, dyed, and processed as to simulate in appearance the peltries of seal, mink, beaver, muskrat, skunk, sable, squirrel, and broadtail lamb. There is also a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for fur products made from the peltries of foxes obtained from Norway over fur products made from peltries obtained from other sources.

PAR. 8. The acts and practices of respondents in offering for sale and selling garments made from rabbit peltries which have been dyed and processed so as to resemble the peltries of mink, seal, beaver, skunk, squirrel, and other more valuable fur-bearing animals without disclosing or revealing the fact that such garments are made from rabbit peltries dyed and processed in the manner described have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that the furs and fur garments sold by respondents are made from the peltries of seal, mink, beaver, muskrat, skunk, sable, squirrel, or broadtail lamb when in fact they are made from dyed rabbit peltries. The acts and practices of respondents further have the tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the nature and origin of respondents' products and to cause such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' products as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony and other evidence introduced before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and brief filed in support of the complaint, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That Steven Angell and Asimo Liampos, individuals, trading at S. Angell & Co., or trading under any other name, jointly or severally, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of furs, fur garments, or other merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of such merchandise to the public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others push or pull cards, punch boards, or other lottery devices, either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punch boards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

4. Using the words or terms "Hudseal," "Sealine," "Nubian Seal," or "V Shape Seal," or other words or terms of similar import or meaning, either alone or in connection, combination, or conjunction with any other word or words, to designate, describe, or refer to furs or fur garments made from rabbit peltries or from any peltries other than seal peltries, unless such words or terms are compounded with the word "dyed" or the word "processed" and when so compounded are immediately followed by the true name of the fur.

5. Using the words or terms "Minkolet," "Minkolene," or "Marmink," or any other words or terms of similar import or meaning, either alone or in connection, combination, or conjunction with any other word or words, to designate, describe, or refer to furs or fur garments made from rabbit peltries or from any peltries other than mink peltries, unless such words or terms are compounded with the word "dyed" or the word "processed" and when so compounded are immediately followed by the true name of the fur.

6. Using the words or terms "Beaverette" or "Mendoza Beaver," or any other words or terms of similar import or meaning, either alone or in connection, combination, or conjunction with any other word or words, to designate, describe, or refer to furs or fur garments made from rabbit peltries or any peltries other than beaver peltries, unless such words or terms are compounded with the word "dyed" or the word "processed" and when so compounded are immediately followed by the true name of the fur.

7. Using the words or terms "Skunkette" or "Skunkolene," or other words or terms of similar meaning, either alone or in connection, combination, or conjunction with any other word or words, to designate, describe, or refer to furs or fur garments made from rabbit peltries or any peltries other than skunk peltries, unless such words or terms are compounded with the word "dyed" or the word "processed" and when so compounded are immediately followed by the true name of the fur.

8. Using the word "Sabellette," or other word or term of similar import or meaning, either alone or in connection, combination or conjunction with any other word or words, to designate, describe, or refer to furs or fur garments made from rabbit peltries or any peltries other than sable peltries, unless such word or term is compounded with the word "dyed" or the word "processed" and when so compounded is immediately followed by the true name of the fur.

9. Using the word "Squirrellette," or other word or term of similar import or meaning either alone or in connection, combination, or conjunction with any other word or words, to designate, describe, or refer to furs or fur garments made from rabbit peltries or any peltries other than squirrel peltries, unless such word or term is compounded with the word "dyed" or the word "processed" and when so compounded is immediately followed by the true name of the fur.

10. Using the word "Broadtail," or other word or term of similar import or meaning, either alone or in connection, combination, or conjunction with any other word or words, to designate, describe, or refer to furs or fur garments made from rabbit peltries or any peltries other than peltries of the broadtail lamb, unless such word or term is compounded with the word "dyed" or the word "processed" and when so compounded is immediately followed by the true name of the fur.

11. Designating or describing furs or fur garments in any way other than by the use of the true name of the fur as the last word of the designation or description thereof.

12. Designating or describing furs or fur garments wherein the fur has been dyed or processed to simulate another fur without using the true name of the fur as the last word of the designation or description thereof immediately preceded by the word "dyed" or the word "processed" compounded with the name of the fur simulated.

13. Representing by the use of the word "Norwegian," or in any other manner, that furs or fur garments not made of peltries of Norwegian origin are made of peltries of such origin.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

CHARLES ROEHM, TRADING AS CHUMANIE MEDICINE
COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 28, 1914

Docket 4530. Complaint, July 7, 1941—Decision, May 11, 1942

Where an individual, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of his "Chumanie's Triple XXX Tablets," "Chumanie's Iron Tonic Pills," and various other medicinal preparations; by means of advertisements in newspapers, periodicals, circulars, and other advertising literature—

- (a) Represented, directly and by implication, that his said "Triple XXX Tablets" constituted an effective treatment for irregular and delayed menstruation, and aided functioning when there was delay due to cold feet, nutritional lack of iron, or functional inactivity;

The facts being it was not a competent treatment for said condition, and cold feet or lack of iron have no substantial influence in delaying or preventing menstruation;

- (b) Failed to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained in said advertisements, and with respect to consequences which might result from use of said tablets under usual or prescribed conditions, in that they contained extract of ergot and oil of savin in quantities sufficient, if used as aforesaid by nonpregnant women, to cause gastrointestinal disturbances, such as catharsis, enteritis, nausea, and vomiting with pelvic congestion, and lead to excessive uterine hemorrhages; while use thereof by pregnant women might result in abortion or miscarriage, which might be followed by local or systemic infection;

- (c) Represented that his said "Iron Tonic Pills" were an effective treatment for anemia which would build rich blood and afford relief to the person who felt old, played out, or who was nervous or looked anemic; and that his "Yellow Jacket Pills" were a "diuretic * * * stimulant to the kidneys" and an effective treatment for kidney and bladder disorders, nagging backache, leg pains, and eye puffing;

The facts being "Iron Tonic Pills" were not such a treatment except in the comparatively rare cases of anemia resulting from deficiency of iron in the diet, which symptoms of feeling tired, played out or nervous do not indicate; and except as a mild diuretic, said "Yellow Jacket" preparation was not such a stimulant or effective treatment for ailments mentioned; and, contrary to implication of his said advertisements, only in exceptional cases are backache, pains in the leg and swollen eyes caused by kidney and bladder disorders; and

- (d) Represented that his "Double RR Tablets" constituted an effective treatment for rheumatism and inflamed, painful joints, and would mitigate the distress and discomfort of rheumatism; and that his "Plantation C. M. Q. Capsules" were an effective treatment for the common cold;

The facts being said "Double RR Tablets" preparation would have no therapeutic effect in treatment of aforesaid conditions in excess of mitigating their distress and discomforts; stiff or painful joints may not be identified in all instances with a rheumatic condition, and not all of the great number of human ailments commonly embraced by use of term "rheumatism" may be safely or effectively treated alike; and aforesaid capsules were not a treatment for the common cold;

With effect of causing a substantial portion of the purchasing public to believe, contrary to fact, that preparations in question possessed certain therapeutic properties and values and that certain of them were safe for use; and inducing said public, as a result of such belief, to purchase substantial quantities thereof:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Charles Roehm, individually, and trading under the name Chumanie Medicine Co., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Charles Roehm, is an individual, trading under the name Chumanie Medicine Co., with his principal place of business located in New Richmond, Ohio. Said respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of various medicinal preparations. Among such preparations are the following: Chumanie's Triple XXX Tablets; Chumanie's Iron Tonic Pills; Chumanie's Yellow Jacket Pills; Chumanie's Double RR Tablets; and Chumanie's Plantation C. M. Q. Capsules.

PAR. 2. Respondent causes said preparations, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Ohio to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in his said preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said preparations by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said preparations, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said preparations in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and other periodicals, and by circulars and other advertising literature, are the following:

Women! Periods irregular? Delayed? Chumanie Triple XXX Aids Functioning, $2 (3 boxes $5).

PERIOD DELAY Try Chumanie's Triple XXX Capsules. The action of these capsules is such that they tend to increase menstruation when there is delay due to cold feet, nutritional lack of iron, or functional inactivity.

Feel Old? Played out, Nervous, Look anemic?—Iron Tonic Pills Relieve or Money Back. $2 (3 boxes $5).

Anemia? Rundown? Lack Vigor?—Iron Tonic Pills Build Rich Blood or Money Back. $2 (3 boxes $5).

Kidney & Bladder Disorder? Nagging Backache? Leg Pains? Eye Puffiness? Up nights?—Yellow Jacket Tab's relieve or money back. $2 (3 boxes $5).

KIDNEY & BLADDER DISORDER. Try Chumanie's Yellow Jacket Capsules. A Diuretic (increase renal secretion) Stimulant to the Kidneys. Order a box by mail today! Price $1 per box (3 boxes, $2.00).

Rheumatism! Inflamed, Painful Joints?—Get Double RR Tablets and Get Relief, 25¢ (6 boxes $1).

RHEUMATISM. Try Chumanie's Double RR Tablets for Mitigating the Distress and Discomfort of Rheumatism. Order a box by mail today! Price $1 per box (3 boxes, $2).

MALARIA AND COMMON COLD. Try Chumanie's Plantation C. M. Q. (Malaria and Common Cold) * * * Also for the Common Cold. Order a box by mail today! Price $1 per box (3 boxes, $2.00).

PAR. 4. Through the use of the foregoing statements and representations, and others similar thereto not specifically set forth herein, the respondent represents and has represented, directly and by implication:

That respondent's preparation Chumanie's Triple XXX Tablets is an effective treatment for irregular menstruation and delayed menstruation which aids functioning and a treatment which tends to increase menstruation when there is delay due to cold feet, nutritional lack of iron, or functional inactivity;

That Chumanie's Iron Tonic Pills is an effective treatment for anemia and that said treatment will build rich blood and afford relief to the person who feels old, played out, or who is nervous, or who looks anemic;

That respondent's preparation Chumanie's Yellow Jacket Pills is a "diuretic * * * stimulant to the kidneys" and an effective treatment for kidney and bladder disorders, nagging backache, leg pains, and eye puffing;

That respondent's preparation Chumanie's Double RR Tablets is an effective treatment for rheumatism and inflamed, painful joints which will mitigate the distress and discomfort of rheumatism; and

That respondent's preparation Chumanie's Plantation C. M. Q. Capsules is an effective treatment for the relief of the Common Cold.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations and advertisements are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading, and constitute false advertisements.

In truth and in fact respondent's preparation Chumanie's Triple XXX Tablets is not an effective treatment for irregular menstruation periods and delayed periods which aids functioning, and it is not a treatment which tends to increase menstruation which is delayed due to cold feet, nutritional lack of iron, or functional inactivity.

Furthermore, cold feet, nutritional lack of iron, or functional inactivity have little or no influence in delaying or preventing the onset of menstruation.

In truth and in fact respondent's preparation Chumanie's Iron Tonic Pills is not an effective treatment for anemia and said preparation will not build rich blood and will not afford relief to persons who feel old, played out, or who are nervous, or who look anemic.

In truth and in fact respondent's preparation Chumanie's Yellow Jacket Pills is not a diuretic * * * stimulant to the kidneys and is not a treatment for kidney and bladder disorders, nagging backache, leg pains, and eye puffing.

Respondent's advertisements with respect to said Yellow Jacket Pills are further false and misleading for the reason that they carry the implication that backache, pains in the legs, and swollen eyes are caused in all instances by kidney or bladder disorders, whereas in truth and in fact such conditions are often the result of diseases entirely dissociated from kidney and bladder disorders.

In truth and in fact respondent's preparation Chumanie's Double RR Tablets is not an effective treatment for rheumatism and inflamed, painful joints.

Respondent's advertisements with respect to said Double RR Tablets are false and misleading for the further reason that the term "rheumatism" is commonly used to designate a very great number of human ailments, all of which may not be safely or effectively treated alike, and because stiff or painful joints may not be identified in all instances with a rheumatic condition of the human body.

In truth and in fact respondent's preparation Chumanie's Plantation C. M. Q. Capsules is not a treatment for the relief of the common cold.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid advertisements and representations with respect to respondent's preparation Chumanie's Triple XXX Tablets constitute false advertisements for the further reason that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained in said advertisements and material with respect to consequences which may result from the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

The said preparation is not safe or harmless to take because it contains the drugs extract of black hellebore, aloes, extract of cotton-root bark, extract of ergot, and oil of savin in quantities sufficient to cause serious and irreparable injury to health if said preparation is used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual if used in connection with delayed menstruation.

The use of the aforesaid preparation by nonpregnant women as a treatment for delayed menstruation, as prescribed in the aforesaid advertisements, or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in gastrointestinal disturbances such as catharsis, enteritis, nausea and vomiting, with pelvic congestion and may lead to excessive uterine hemorrhages.

The use of the aforesaid preparation by pregnant women may result in abortion or miscarriage which may be followed by infection which may remain local to the pelvic organs or become systemic as in "blood poison."

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of said false advertisements has the tendency and capacity to, and does, cause a substantial portion of the purchasing public to believe that respondent's preparations possess therapeutic properties and values which they do not in fact possess, and that certain of said preparations are safe for use, when such is not the fact, and has the tendency and capacity to, and does, induce the purchasing public to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said preparations as a result of such mistaken and erroneous belief.

PAR. 8. The acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 7, 1941, issued and on July 11, 1941, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Charles Roehm, individually, and trading under the name Chumanie Medicine Co., charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On July 29, 1941, the respondent filed his answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into by and between counsel for the Commission and counsel for the respondent whereby it was stipulated and agreed that, subject to the approval of the Commission, a statement of facts stipulated into the record may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved and accepted, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Charles Roehm is an individual trading under the name "Chumanie Medicine Co.," with his principal place of business located in New Richmond, Ohio, and is the respondent in this case.

Said respondent is now, and for more than 1 year past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of various medicinal preparations. Among such preparations are the following: Chumanie's

Triple XXX Tablets; Chumanie's Iron Tonic Pills; Chumanie's Yellow Jacket Pills; Chumanie's Double RR Tablets.

Said respondent, until May 1, 1941, was also engaged in the sale and distribution of another medicinal preparation designated: Chumanie's Plantation C. M. Q. Capsules.

PAR. 2. Respondent causes said preparations, when sold, to be transported from his place of business, in the State of Ohio, to the purchasers thereof, located in various other States of the United States.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in the said preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and has caused the dissemination of certain advertisements, hereinafter referred to, concerning the said preparations, by the United States mails, and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. And respondent has also disseminated and has caused the dissemination of certain advertisements, hereinafter referred to, concerning his said preparations, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said preparations in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in said advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers, and other periodicals, and by circulars and other advertising literature, are the following:

WOMEN! Periods irregular? Delayed. Chumanie's Triple XXX aids functioning. ($2.) (3 boxes, $5.)

PERIOD DELAY? Try Chumanie's Triple XXX Capsules. The action of these capsules is such that they tend to increase menstruation when there is delay due to cold feet, nutritional lack of iron or functional inactivity.

FEEL OLD? Played out? Nervous, Look Anemic? Iron Tonic Pills relieve or money back. $2. (3 boxes $5.)

ANEMIA? Run down? Lack vigor? Iron Tonic Pills build rich blood or money back. $2. (3 boxes, $5.)

KIDNEY and Bladder Disorders? Nagging Backache? Leg Pains? Eye Puffiness? Up nights? Yellow Jacket Tablets, relieve or money back. $2. (3 boxes, $5.)

KIDNEY AND BLADDER DISORDER? Try Chumanie's Yellow Jacket Capsules: a diuretic (Increases renal secretion) stimulant to the kidneys. Order a box by mail today! Price, $1 per box; (3 boxes, $2).

RHEUMATISM? Inflamed, painful joints? Get Chumanie's Double RR Tablets and get relief. (25 cents; 6 boxes $1.)

RHEUMATISM? Try Chumanie's Double RR Tablets for mitigating the distress and discomfort of Rheumatism. Order a box by mail today! Price $1 per box. (3 boxes for $2.)

MALARIA AND COMMON COLD? Try Chumanie's Plantation C. M. Q. (Malaria and Common Cold) * * * Also for the Common Cold. Order a box by mail today! Price $1 per box, 3 boxes, $2.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the foregoing statements and representations, the respondent represents, and has represented, directly and by implication:

That respondent's preparation Chumanie's Triple XXX Tablets is effective treatment for irregular menstruation and delayed menstruation which aids functioning and treatment which tends to increase menstruation when there is delay due to cold feet, nutritional lack of iron or functional inactivity.

That Chumanie's Iron Tonic Pills, is an effective treatment for anemia and that said treatment will build rich blood and afford relief to the person who feels old, played out, or who is nervous or who looks anemic.

That respondent's preparation, Chumanie's Yellow Jacket Pills is a "diuretic * * * stimulant to the kidneys" and an effective treatment for kidney and bladder disorders, nagging backache, leg pains, and eye puffing.

That respondent's preparation Chumanie's Double RR Tablets is an effective treatment for Rheumatism and inflamed, painful joints, which will mitigate the distress and discomfort of Rheumatism.

That Respondent's preparation, Chumanie's Plantation C. M. Q. Capsules, is an effective treatment for the relief of Common Cold.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations, statements, and advertisements are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading.

In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation, Chumanie's Triple XXX Tablets, each of which contains the following:

Iron Sulphate Dried, 1 gr.
 Extract Black Hellebore, 1 gr.
 Aloes, 1 gr.
 Extract cotton-root bark, 1 gr.
 Extract Ergot, 1 gr.
 Oil of Savin, one-fourth min.

is not a competent treatment for irregular or delayed menstruation and is not a safe treatment for such condition. Cold feet or nutritional lack of iron has no substantial influence in delaying or preventing the onset of menstruation.

In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation, Chumanie's Iron Tonic Pills, is not an effective treatment for anemia or the condition of looking anemic, except in cases of anemia resulting from a deficiency of iron in the diet. Anemia, or a lack of rich blood resulting from a deficiency of iron in the diet, is a comparatively rare condition; and the symptoms of feeling old, played out, or nervousness do not indicate a deficiency of iron in the diet.

In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation, Chumanie's Yellow Jacket Pills, is not a stimulant to the kidneys, except as a mild diuretic, and is not an effective treatment for kidney or bladder disorders, nagging backache, leg pains, or eye puffing. Respondent's advertisements with respect to said Yellow Jacket Pills carry the implication that backache, pains in the legs, and swollen eyes are caused by kidney or bladder disorders, it is only in exceptional cases that such conditions are caused by kidney or bladder disorders.

In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation Chumanie's Double RR Tablets, is not an effective treatment for rheumatism and inflamed, painful joints, and will have no therapeutic effect in the treatment of said maladies, in excess of mitigating the distress and discomforts thereof.

Respondent's advertisements with respect to said Double RR Tablets are misleading for the further reason that the term "Rheumatism," used alone, is commonly employed to designate a very great number of human ailments, all of which may not be safely or effectively treated alike, and because stiff or painful joints may not be identified, in all instances, with a Rheumatic condition of the human body.

In truth and in fact, respondent's preparation, Chumanie's Plantation C. M. Q. Capsules, is not a treatment for the relief of the common cold.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid advertisements and representations with respect to respondent's preparation, Chumanie's Triple XXX Tablets, fail to reveal facts, hereinafter mentioned, material in the light of the representations contained in said advertisements, and material with respect to consequences which may result from the use of said preparation under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

The said preparation is not harmless to take because it contains the drug extract of ergot, and the drug oil of savin, in quantities sufficient to cause possible serious and irreparable injury to health if said preparation is used under the conditions prescribed in said advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual if used in connection with delayed menstruation.

The use of the aforesaid preparation by nonpregnant women as treatment for delayed menstruation as prescribed in the aforesaid

Order

34 F. T. C.

advertisements, or its use under such conditions as are customary or usual, may result in gastrointestinal disturbances, such as catharsis, enteritis, nausea, and vomiting with pelvic congestion, and may lead to excessive uterine hemorrhages.

The use of the aforesaid preparation by pregnant women may result in abortion or miscarriage, which may be followed by infection, which may remain local, to the pelvic organs, or become systemic, as in "blood poison."

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of said advertisements has the tendency and capacity to, and does, cause a substantial portion of the purchasing public to believe that respondent's preparations possess certain therapeutic properties and values which they do not in fact possess, and that certain of said preparations are safe for use in cases when such is not the fact, and has the tendency and capacity to, and does, induce the purchasing public to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said preparations as a result of such belief.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST¹

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into by and between counsel for the Commission, and counsel for the respondent,

¹ Above order was modified slightly in Commission order dated July 1, 1942, which granted in part and denied in part respondent's motion to modify said order, as follows:

This matter coming on to be heard by the Commission upon the respondent's motion to modify the order to cease and desist heretofore issued by the Commission on May 11, 1942, and the Commission having duly considered said motion and the record herein and being now fully advised in the premises;

It is ordered, That respondent's motion for an order modifying the order to cease and desist be, and the same hereby is, granted insofar as said motion moves the deletion of the words "or nutritional lack of iron" in lines 4 and 5 or printed line 3 of subsection (a) of paragraph 1 of the order to cease and desist issued on May 11, 1942.

It is further ordered, That respondent's motion be, and the same hereby is, denied insofar as it moves the deletion of the word "competent" from the second line of subsection (a) of paragraph 1 and the insertion of the clause "or that the nutritional lack of iron has any influence in delaying or preventing the onset of menstruation other than confined to certain well defined limits" immediately preceding the semicolon in line 7 of subsection (a) of paragraph 1.

It is still further ordered, That except as hereinabove modified the order to cease and desist issued by the Commission on May 11, 1942, remain in full force and effect.

which stipulation provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Charles Roehm, individually, and trading under the name Chumanie Medicine Co., or trading under any other name or names, his agents, representatives and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale or distribution of his medicinal preparation now known as Chumanie's Triple XXX Tablets, Chumanie's Iron Tonic Pills, Chumanie's Yellow Jacket Pills, Chumanie's Double RR Tablets, and Chumanie's Plantation C. M. Q. Capsules, or of any other preparations of substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent, directly or through inference:

(a) That the preparation, Chumanie's Triple XXX Tablets, is a safe or competent treatment for irregular or delayed menstruation; or that cold feet or nutritional lack of iron has any substantial influence in delaying or preventing the onset of menstruation; or which advertisement fails to reveal that the use of said preparation may cause gastrointestinal disturbances, pelvic congestion, excessive uterine hemorrhages and, in cases of pregnancy, infection of the pelvic organs and blood poisoning.

(b) That said preparation Chumanie's Iron Tonic Pills, is an effective treatment for anemia, except in cases of anemia resulting from a deficiency of iron in the diet; or that the symptoms of feeling old, played out, or nervousness indicate a deficiency of iron in the diet.

(c) That said preparation, Chumanie's Yellow Jacket Pills, is a stimulant to the kidneys, except as a mild diuretic, or is an effective treatment for kidney or bladder disorders, or for such symptoms as backache, leg pains, puffy or swollen eyes, or that such symptoms indicate kidney or bladder disorders.

(d) That said preparation Chumanie's Double RR Tablets is an effective treatment for rheumatism or inflamed, painful joints or that it will have any therapeutic effect in the treatment of said conditions in excess of mitigating the distress and discomforts thereof; or that stiff or painful joints are caused only by a rheumatic condition of the human body.

Order

34 F. T. C.

(e) That said preparation Chumanie's plantation C. M. Q. Capsules is a treatment for the relief of the common cold.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said preparation, or any of them, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof, or which advertisement with respect to the preparation Chumanie's Triple XXX Tablets fails to reveal the dangerous consequences which may result from the use of said preparation, as required in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 10 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission an interim report in writing, stating whether he intends to comply with this order, and, if so, the manner and form in which he intends to comply; and that within 60 days after the service upon him of this order, said respondent shall file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4537. Complaint, July 10, 1941—Decision, May 11, 1942

Where two individuals, successors to the corporate business which they theretofore owned and conducted, engaged in breeding and hatching and in the interstate sale and distribution of baby chicks; by means of advertisements in newspapers and trade journals, folders, pamphlets, circular letters, and other advertising matter, directly or by implication—

- (a) Falsely represented that they were "R. O. P." poultry breeders, and operated a poultry farm under the supervision of an official from the agency supervising "U. S. Record of Performance" work of the Department of Agriculture; and
- (b) Represented that the average production of hens grown from their chicks exceeded that of hens generally, by 94 eggs per annum; that each hen grown from their chicks could be depended upon to lay an egg daily and produced eggs at from one-third to one-half the cost of producing them from birds of ordinary breeding; and
- (c) Represented that they would fully indemnify purchasers of baby chicks against all losses for 4 weeks from date of shipment;

The facts being the average egg production of such hens did not exceed by 94 per annum, or by any appreciable number, the average production of hens generally; such hens would not lay for any considerable period of time, nor were their eggs produced at appreciably less cost than average cost of eggs laid by hens of so-called ordinary breeding; and said individuals did not replace, without charge, chicks which died after 3 days after shipment, but beyond that time and up to 4 weeks made replacement only if buyer paid half the purchase price;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that such advertisements were true, thereby inducing it, because of such belief, to purchase substantial quantities of said poultry products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the injury and prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

COMPLAINT¹

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Blue Ribbon Hatcheries Corporation, a corporation trading as Bockenstette's Blue Ribbon Farms, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Blue Ribbon Hatcheries Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Kansas with its office and principal place of business located at Sabetha, Kans. Respondent also trades under the name Bockenstette's Blue Ribbon Farms.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the business of hatching, breeding, and selling chickens, especially baby chicks. Respondent causes its said baby chicks and chickens when sold by it to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Kansas to purchasers thereof located in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

¹ The Commission by order of September 9, 1941, approved stipulation, substituting parties respondent and permitting withdrawal of answer and filing of substitute answer, as follows:

This matter coming on for consideration by the Commission upon the motion of J. A. Bockenstette and Rose M. Bockenstette, that they be substituted as parties respondent in this proceeding in lieu and instead of Blue Ribbon Hatcheries Corporation, a corporation, and a stipulation by and between counsel for the Commission and said individuals whereby it is agreed that they may be substituted as parties respondent in this proceeding, and the motion of said individuals that they be permitted to withdraw the answer heretofore filed and to file a substitute answer in lieu thereof, and it appearing to the Commission that said Blue Ribbon Hatcheries Corporation, a corporation, named as respondent in this proceeding, has been dissolved and is no longer in existence, and that said individuals were the principal stockholders in, and directed and controlled the business of, said corporation, and were served with a copy of the complaint in this proceeding, and that said individuals have conducted, since the dissolution of said corporation, and are now conducting the business formerly operated by said corporation, and the Commission having considered said motions and stipulation and the record herein, and being now fully advised in the premises.

It is ordered, That J. A. Bockenstette and Rose M. Bockenstette, individuals trading and doing business under the name Bockenstette's Blue Ribbon Farms, be, and they hereby are, substituted as parties respondent in this proceeding in lieu and instead of Blue Ribbon Hatcheries Corporation, the respondent named in the complaint in this proceeding.

It is further ordered, That the stipulation entered into by counsel for the Commission and counsel for said individuals on August 14, 1941, be, and the same hereby is, approved and made a part of the record herein.

It is further ordered, That the respondents be permitted to withdraw the answer filed herein on August 4, 1941, and file in lieu thereof answer submitted to the Commission on August 27, 1941.

It is further ordered, That the title of this proceeding be changed to reflect the change in parties respondent.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said baby chicks and chickens in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of the aforesaid business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its baby chicks and chickens, respondent has circulated and is now circulating among prospective purchasers throughout the United States, by United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and trade journals, and by advertising folders, pamphlets, circular letters, and other advertising matter, many false statements and representations concerning its said products.

Among and typical of such false statements and representations disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

Each female has made her egg record in a previous year in an egg-laying contest under the R. O. P. supervision, or has our home-trapped record.

They are a choice group of individually wing banded females from a select group of R. O. P. Rhode Island Whites and individually pedigreed hens produced by our Contest Pen Mating.

Individually pedigreed males from R. O. P. trap nested Dams head these matings.

Every Hen In These Flocks Lay An Egg Daily.

Based on Actual Unsolicited Letters, We Don't Believe There Is a Breeding Farm or Hatchery Anywhere That Can Duplicate Our Record For Customer Results. Figures taken from these customers' letters prove that Blue Ribbon Breeding is enabling our customers to produce eggs at from $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ the cost of producing them with birds of ordinary breeding. Our 1940 chicks will do even better.

4 Weeks Insurance Chick Buyers' Protection against Losses up to 4 weeks.

Through the statements and representations hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondent has represented directly or by implication that it is a United States record of performance poultry breeder and that it operates a poultry plant under the supervision of an official from the agency supervising United States record of performance work; that the average egg production from chicks sold by it exceeds an average egg production of hens generally by 94 eggs per annum; that each hen in flocks of hens grown from chicks sold by it can be depended upon to lay an egg daily; that eggs laid by hens grown from chicks sold by it generally have been or will be produced at a cost of from one-third to one-half the average cost of eggs laid by hens of ordinary breeding; and that respondent will fully indemnify purchasers of baby chicks against all losses up to and including a period of 4 weeks from date of purchase.

PAR. 4. A United States record of performance breeder is understood by members of the poultry industry to be one operating a poultry breeding plant under the official state agency cooperating with the Bureau of Animal Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture. United States record of performance embraces records of egg production and body weight made on the breeders' premises under official supervision and similar records made at officially conducted egg-laying contests, when such records are passed upon by the official state inspector or official state supervisor and when the individual birds meet other United States record of performance requirements.

PAR. 5. The foregoing representations are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading. In truth and in fact, the respondent is not a United States record of performance poultry breeder and does not operate a poultry breeding plant under the supervision of an official for the agency supervising United States record of performance work. The average egg production of hens grown from chicks sold by respondent does not exceed the average egg production of hens generally by 94 eggs per annum or by any appreciable number of eggs. Not all hens in flocks of hens grown from chicks sold by respondent will lay an egg daily for any considerable duration of time. Eggs laid by respondent's hens are not generally produced at a cost of from one-third to one-half or any appreciable less cost than the average cost of eggs laid by hens of so-called ordinary breeding. Respondent does not provide 4 weeks' insurance for the protection of chick-buyers. Respondent in fact replaces without charge those chicks which died within 3 days after being placed in the brooder, and if there is further loss after the 3-day period and up to 4 weeks, replacement is made only if the buyer pays half the purchase price for additional ones.

PAR. 6. The use by respondent of the foregoing false and misleading advertising disseminated as aforesaid has a tendency and capacity to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false advertisements are true and do induce the purchasing public to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' products as a result of such belief.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on July 10 A. D. 1941, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Blue Ribbon Hatcheries Corporation, a corporation, trading as Bockenstette's Blue Ribbon Farms, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

After the issuance and service of the complaint a stipulation was entered into between counsel for the Commission and counsel for J. A. Bockenstette and Rose M. Bockenstette. Said stipulation recites that respondent, Blue Ribbon Hatcheries Corporation, ceased to be a corporation in the latter part of 1940; that J. A. Bockenstette and Rose M. Bockenstette, were the owners of the stock of said corporation; that said individuals have been and now are operating the business conducted under the name "Bockenstette's Blue Ribbon Farms," and, by the terms of said stipulation it was agreed that the answer filed by respondent, Blue Ribbon Hatcheries Corporation, be withdrawn and a substitute answer be filed by J. A. Bockenstette and Rose M. Bockenstette, trading as Bockenstette's Blue Ribbon Farms, and that said individuals be substituted as parties respondent in this proceeding for all purposes, in lieu of the Blue Ribbon Hatcheries Corporation; and the said J. A. Bockenstette and Rose M. Bockenstette, waived issuance and service of an amended complaint naming them as individual respondents herein.

By order of the Commission issued on September 9, 1941, the said stipulation was approved and made part of the record herein, and J. A. Bockenstette and Rose M. Bockenstette, individuals, trading and doing business under the name Bockenstette's Blue Ribbon Farms, were substituted as parties respondent in this proceeding in lieu and stead of Blue Ribbon Hatcheries Corporation, and leave was granted to withdraw the answer filed herein by Blue Ribbon Hatcheries Corporation, and to file the answer submitted to the Commission on August 27, 1941, by J. A. Bockenstette and Rose M. Bockenstette.

After issuance of the Commission's said order, testimony and other evidence in support of and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint were introduced by the attorney for the Commission and the attorneys for respondents before W. W. Sheppard, a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission theretofore designated by it to serve in this proceeding, and the said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Findings

34 F. T. C.

Thereafter, the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the stipulation approved by the Commission on September 9, 1941, the joint answer of respondents, J. A. Bockenstette and Rose M. Bockenstette, individuals, trading and doing business under the name "Bockenstette's Blue Ribbon Farms," the testimony and other evidence, the report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and exceptions thereto, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto: And the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the public interest and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, J. A. Bockenstette and Rose M. Bockenstette, are individuals, trading and doing business under the name "Bockenstette's Blue Ribbon Farms"; their principal place of business adjoins the city of Sabetha, in the State of Kansas. For some time prior to December 1940 the business now conducted by respondents was conducted by Blue Ribbon Hatcheries Corporation, a corporation, trading as "Bockenstette's Blue Ribbon Farms." The stock of this corporation was owned by respondents, J. A. Bockenstette and Rose M. Bockenstette, who, since the dissolution of the corporation in December 1940 have continued the business under the name "Bockenstette's Blue Ribbon Farms." The original respondent was, and the substituted respondents, since December 1940 have been and are, engaged in the business of breeding, hatching and selling chickens, especially baby chicks. Respondents cause and have caused their baby chicks and chickens, when sold by them, to be transported from their principal place of business in the State of Kansas to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. The substituted respondents, who will hereafter be called the respondents, maintain and have maintained a course of trade in said baby chicks and chickens in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their baby chicks and chickens, have circulated and are now circulating among prospective purchasers throughout the United States, by means of the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and trade journals, and by advertising folders, pamphlets, circular letters, and other advertising matter, many false statements and representations concerning their said products. Among and typical of such false statements and representations disseminated as aforesaid, are the following:

Each female has made her egg record in a previous year in an egg-laying contest under the R.O.P. supervision, or has our home trapped record.

They are a choice group of individually wing banded females from a select group of R.O.P. Rhode Island Whites and individually pedigreed hens produced by our Contest Pen Mating.

Individually pedigreed males from R.O.P. trap nested dams head these matings.

9400 More Eggs Per Year from Each 100 Hens.

These Gratifying Results Are Being Obtained by Our Customers with Blue Ribbon Chicks.

Every Hen in These Flocks Lay An Egg Daily.

Based on Actual Unsolicited Letters, We Don't Believe There Is a Breeding Farm or Hatchery Anywhere That Can Duplicate Our Record for Customer Results. Figures Taken from These Customers' Letters Prove That Blue Ribbon Breeding Is Enabling Our Customers to Produce Eggs at from $\frac{1}{3}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ the Cost of Producing Them with Birds of Ordinary Breeding. Our 1940 Chicks Will Do Even Better.

4 Weeks' Insurance Chick Buyers' Protection against Losses Up to 4 Weeks.

PAR. 3. A plan for the administration of regulations for the improvement of poultry, poultry products and hatcheries, known as the "National Poultry Improvement Plan," has been administered by the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture for a number of years, in cooperation with State authorities. In Kansas this cooperation authority is known as Kansas Poultry Improvement Association. Included in this plan is what is known as "United States Record of Performance," which is usually referred to as "U.S. R.O.P.," or "R.O.P.," and such designations are known generally to those engaged in the business of hatching, breeding and selling chicks. R.O.P. breeders are understood by the poultry industry to be those operating a poultry breeding plant under the official State agency cooperating with the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture. The following are among the numerous requirements imposed upon an R.O.P. breeder.

The hens must be trap nested at regular intervals each day throughout the year.

R.O.P. Official State Inspectors make at least seven unannounced visits to R.O.P. Hatchery plants every year.

Poultry Plants are required to be kept open at all times, to permit such unannounced inspections.

During these inspections, the inspector takes charge of the trapping and checking, and records the individuals who have met the requirements of R.O.P. poultry breeders.

The hens are required to lay 200 or more eggs a year in a trap nest, the eggs to average 24 ounces or more to the dozen in weight throughout the year. Records of egg production, egg weight and body weight, under official supervision, must be kept, and must be open to inspection at all times. Except in 2 enumerated instances, R. O. P. eggs and chicks must be produced on R. O. P. breeder's premises. Any chicken not meeting the standards of the R. O. P. may be removed from the R. O. P. flock by the official State inspector at any time. The term "Record of Performance," or "R. O. P.," has an advertising value which is national in its scope.

PAR. 4. Respondents, by their statements set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, have represented, either directly or by implication, that they are R. O. P. poultry breeders, and that they operate a poultry plant under the supervision of an official from the agency supervising U. S. record of performance work; when, in truth, respondents are not R. O. P. poultry breeders and do not operate a poultry plant under such supervision. Respondents, by means of the statements set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, represent that the average production of hens grown from chicks sold by them exceeds an average production of hens generally, by 94 eggs per annum; that each hen in flocks of hens grown from chicks sold by them can be depended upon to lay an egg daily; that hens grown from chicks purchased from respondents enable respondents' customers to produce eggs at from one-third to one-half the cost of producing them from birds of ordinary breeding; and that respondents will fully indemnify purchasers of baby chicks against all losses, up to and including a period of four weeks from date of shipment.

The average egg production of hens grown from chicks sold by respondent does not exceed 94 eggs per annum, or by any appreciable number of eggs, the average egg production of hens generally; nor will all hens in flocks grown from chicks sold by respondents lay an egg daily for any considerable period of time. Eggs laid by respondents' hens are not generally produced at a cost of from one-third to one-half the cost, or at any appreciably less cost, than the average cost of eggs laid by hens of so-called ordinary breeding. Respondents do not provide four weeks' insurance for the protection of chick buyers; respondents, in fact, replace without charge those chicks which die within three days after being shipped, and if there is further loss after the three days period, and up to four weeks, replacement is made only if the buyer pay half the purchase price for the additional chicks.

PAR. 5. The use by respondents of the foregoing false and misleading advertising, disseminated as aforesaid, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false advertisements are true, and the purchasing public, because of such belief, has been induced to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's poultry products.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent, as set forth in the foregoing findings as to the facts, are to the injury and prejudice of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the joint answer of the substituted respondents, J. A. Bockenstette and Rose M. Bockenstette, trading as Bockenstette's Blue Ribbon Farms, the testimony and other evidence, the report of the trial examiner thereon and exceptions to said report, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the substituted respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the substituted respondents, J. A. Bockenstette and Rose M. Bockenstette, trading as Bockenstette's Blue Ribbon Farms, or trading under any other name or designation, their representatives, agents and employees, jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of chicks or chickens, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement, by means of the United States mails, or by any other means, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or by implication.

(a) That respondents are R. O. P. poultry breeders, or that they operate a poultry plant under the supervision of an official from the agency supervising United States Record of Performance work.

Order

34 F. T. C.

(b) That the average egg production of hens grown from chicks sold by respondents exceeds the average egg production from an equal number of hens generally, by 94 eggs each, per annum, or by any other appreciable amount.

(c) That hens in respondents' flocks lay an egg daily.

(d) That purchasers of respondents' products are enabled to produce eggs at from one-third to one-half the cost of producing them with birds of ordinary breeding.

(e) That respondents protect purchasers of their chicks against losses, up to 4 weeks.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of respondents' product, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the substituted respondents, J. A. Bockenstette and Rose M. Bockenstette, shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF

CHARLES OF THE RITZ DISTRIBUTORS CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3923. Complaint, Oct. 12, 1939—Decision, May 12, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of a cosmetic preparation which it designated "Charles of the Ritz Rejuvenescence Cream" or "Rejuvenescence Cream Ritz"—

Falsely represented, through use of term "Rejuvenescence Cream" and statements in advertisements, directly or by implication, that its said preparation would rejuvenate the skin and restore youth of the appearance thereof to skin to which applied, regardless of the condition thereof or user's age;

The facts being that a skin which has become dry or harsh because of external conditions can be improved by the application of an emollient or lubricant, but not skin conditions due to systemic causes; and there is no treatment known to medical science by which skin changes due to the passage of time can be erased or an aged skin rejuvenated or restored to youthful condition;

With capacity and tendency of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that such statements were true, thereby causing it to purchase said preparation because of such mistaken belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. John W. Addison, trial examiner.

Mr. S. Brogdyne Teu, II for the Commission.

Mock & Blum, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Charles of the Ritz Distributors Corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Charles of the Ritz Distributors Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware and having its principal office and place of business at 9 University Place, city of New York, State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a cosmetic preparation designated "Charles of the Ritz Rejuvenescence Cream." Respondent causes said cosmetic preparation, when sold, to be distributed from its place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said cosmetic preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, and has caused, and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning its said cosmetic preparation by United States mails by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are disseminated in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said cosmetic preparation, and has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing, the dissemination of false advertisements concerning said preparation by various means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said cosmetic preparation in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated by respondent as aforesaid, and which purport to describe the effectiveness in use of said preparation are the following:

Charles of the Ritz Rejuvenescence Cream.

Used again at night when you are relaxed, It is constantly active in keeping your skin clear, radiant and young looking.

Charles of the Ritz Rejuvenescence Cream aids your skin in retaining that fresh, dewy look.

Charles of the Ritz Rejuvenescence Cream contains a vital organic ingredient that preserves and restores natural moisture so necessary to healthy skin. It will improve the texture and quality of your skin and make it radiant and beautiful.

Through the use of the above statements and representations and through the use of the word "Rejuvenescence" in the aforesaid advertisements as part of the designation of the respondent's said cosmetic preparation, respondent has represented and now represents that said cosmetic preparation will rejuvenate the skin of the user thereof and will restore youth and the appearance of youth to skin to which it is applied regardless of the condition of the skin or the age of the user.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid statements and representations by respondent are misleading and untrue. In truth and in fact said cosmetic preparation will not rejuvenate the skin of the user thereof. Said preparation will not restore youth or the appearance of youth to the skin to which it is applied.

PAR. 5. The use by respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said statements and representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's said cosmetic preparation designated "Charles of the Ritz Rejuvenescence Cream" because of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on October 12, 1939, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Charles of the Ritz Distributors Corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence were introduced before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral arguments of counsel; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Charles of the Ritz Distributors Corporation, is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, having its principal office and place of business at 9 University Place, New York, N. Y.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for a number of years last past, has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a cosmetic preparation designated as "Charles of the Ritz Rejuvenescence Cream" or as "Rejuvenescence Cream Ritz." Respondent causes said cosmetic preparation, when sold, to be distributed from its place of business in New York, N. Y., to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and maintains, and has maintained, a course of trade in said preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, respondent, by means of the United States mails and by various means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said cosmetic preparation; and respondent, by various means, has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said cosmetic preparation in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false representations contained in the advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

* * *

Used again at night when you are relaxed, it is constantly active in keeping your skin clear, radiant and young looking.

* * *

Charles of the Ritz Rejuvenescence Cream aids your skin in retaining that fresh, dewy look.

* * *

Charles of the Ritz Rejuvenescence Cream contains a vital organic ingredient that preserves and restores natural moisture so necessary to a healthy skin. It will improve the texture and quality of your skin and make it radiant and beautiful.

* * *

Findings

Rejuvenescence Cream Ritz is a unique product * * * made of essences and compounds which restore the natural humidity to the skin, giving it a bloom which is wonderfully rejuvenating. A single application makes a noticeable difference.

* * *

Now, year after year, as you yourself grow lovelier, rich in charm, warm in understanding * * * you also can keep the freshness of your skin! Your face need know no drought years! Its bloom cannot wilt as long as you are wearing Rejuvenescence Cream Ritz.

PAR. 4. Respondent's "Rejuvenescence Cream" is a type of product generally known in the trade as a "powder base" or as foundation for make-up. It has been marketed by respondent under the aforesaid designation since 1933, and the sales of this product by respondent during the 6 years beginning with 1934 have totalled approximately $1,000,000.

In the conduct of said business, respondent, by the use of the term "Rejuvenescence Cream" to designate its said cosmetic preparation and by the use of statements such as those set forth in the preceding paragraph, has represented, directly and by implication, that its cosmetic preparation variously designated as "Charles of the Ritz Rejuvenescence Cream" and as "Rejuvenescence Cream Ritz" will rejuvenate the skin of the user thereof and will restore youth or the appearance of youth to the skin to which it is applied, regardless of the condition of the skin or the age of the user.

The passage of time brings about physiological changes in the skin of human beings, and there is no treatment known to medical science by which these changes in the skin of an individual can be arrested or by which an aged skin can be rejuvenated or restored to a youthful condition. In instances where the skin of an individual, because of external conditions, has become dry or harsh, its condition and appearance can be improved by the application of an emollient or lubricant. However, external applications of such preparations cannot overcome skin conditions which are due to system causes present in the individual. Respondent's said cosmetic product does not keep the skin of the user "clear, radiant and young looking" or "make it radiant and beautiful"; nor does the use of respondent's said cosmetic preparation arrest the effects of age or disease upon the skin of the user or restore the condition or appearance of youth to a skin from which, because of age, such condition and appearance have departed.

PAR. 5. The use by respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements, representations, and implications with respect to its said cosmetic preparation and the effects of the use thereof has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements, representations, and implications are true, and into the purchase of respondent's said preparation because of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices, as herein set forth, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission on the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and oral arguments of counsel, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent, Charles of the Ritz Distributors Corporation, a corporation, its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of a cosmetic preparation designated as "Charles of the Ritz Rejuvenescence Cream" or as "Rejuvenescence Cream Ritz," or any other cosmetic preparation or preparations which are substantially similar in composition or possess substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same names or any other name or names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated, by means of the United States mails or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, any advertisement

(a) in which the word "Rejuvenescence," or any other word or term of similar import or meaning, is used to designate, describe, or refer to respondent's said cosmetic preparation; or

(b) which represents, directly or by inference, that respondent's said cosmetic preparation will rejuvenate the skin of the user thereof or restore youth or the appearance of youth to the skin of the user.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated, by any means, any advertisement for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said cosmetic preparation in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

1203

It is further ordered, That respondent shall, within 60 days after the service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
DAVIDSON ENAMEL COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4001. Complaint, Jan 27, 1940—Decision, May 12, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in the manufacture and interstate sale and distribution of an interior wall covering which consisted of small unit metal plates covered with a vitreous enamel such as that commonly applied to bathtubs, kitchen sinks, etc., and which, when applied to a wall as contemplated, presented an appearance practically identical with that of glazed clay tile, and which it particularly recommended for modernizing bathrooms and kitchens in old buildings because it could be used where the greater weight of clay tile might impose undue strain; in advertisements, folders, and circulars, and in periodicals and newspapers of general circulation—

Represented and described its said product as "Veos Tile" and "Veos Porcelain Tile," "Veos Porcelain Wall Tile" and "Veos Porcelain on Steel Wall Tile"; the facts being that its said product was not a "porcelain tile" or one composed entirely of porcelain—a homogeneous clay product capable of being self-sustaining through the forming and firing process and matured at temperatures which would be destructive to the metal base to which said corporation applied its vitreous enamel—nor adequately and correctly described by word "tile," namely, a baked clay product and not a metal one, but was, as above set forth, a steel or metal shape to which had been applied a thin, opaque glass-like surface of vitreous enamel;

With effect of misleading a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that such statements were true, and thereby causing it to purchase substantial quantities of said product:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas and Mr. Randolph Preston, trial examiners.

Mr. Randolph W. Branch for the Commission.

Miller, McManus, Hagerty & Shoemaker, of Toledo, Ohio, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Davidson Enamel Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereto would be in the public interest,

1210

hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Davidson Enamel Co., is a corporation, organized under the laws of the State of Ohio, and having its principal office and place of business at Clyde, Ohio.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 1 year last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing and selling a certain interior wall covering described by respondent as "Tile" or "Porcelain Tile." Respondent causes and has caused its said product, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of Ohio and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said interior wall covering among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said interior wall covering, respondent has made, by means of advertising folders and circulars and by means of advertisements inserted in magazines and newspapers having a general circulation throughout the various States of the United States, claims and representations concerning the composition of its product. Among and typical of the claims and representations so made are the following:

"Veos Tile"

"VEOS PORCELAIN WALL TILE"

"Veos Porcelain Tile"

"The advantages of genuine porcelain are well known—but VEOS Porcelain Tile—is comparatively new."

"VEOS Porcelain on Steel WALL TILE"

PAR. 4. Through the use of the statements, representations, and designations hereinabove set forth, and others similar thereto not herein set out, all of which purport to be descriptive of the said interior wall covering and its composition, respondent directly and by implication has represented that the said interior wall covering is a "tile" or "porcelain tile," or is composed of porcelain on steel.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations made by respondent, directly and by implication, with respect to its product and the composition thereof, are misleading and untrue. The word "tile," standing alone and without descriptive words, is generally understood in various trades and by the general public to mean a hard, homogeneous clay product which has been baked in kilns and, in its final form, shaped into comparatively small sized units; "porcelain" is similarly understood to mean a fine, baked, homogeneous earthenware product. Respondent's product consists of a vitreous or glassy enamel applied to a steel base. Such enamels, when fused at high temperatures to metal bases, acquire a finish which has many qualities desirable where a hard, durable and easily cleaned surface is to be obtained. Articles such as refrigerators, bath tubs, lavatories, and kitchen sinks made of metal to which such enamels have been so fused, are understood and accepted by various trades and the general public as "porcelain enamel," where the surface, as does that of the respondent's product, possesses many of the qualities of porcelain. Such a surface, however, is not porcelain. Respondent's product is not "tile" as that word, in the absence of other descriptive words, is generally understood in various trades and by the general public, nor is it a "porcelain tile."

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false and misleading statements, representations and designations with respect to its interior wall covering, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false and misleading statements, representations and designations are true, and causes and has caused a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of the said product.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public, and constitute unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on January 27, 1940. issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Davidson Enamel Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of and in opposition to the allegations of said complaint were introduced before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and oral arguments of counsel; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Davidson Enamel Co., is a corporation, organized under the laws of the State of Ohio and having its principal office and place of business at Clyde, Ohio.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of an interior wall covering designated by it under various names, including "Veos Tile" and "Veos Porcelain Tile." Respondent causes, and has caused, said product, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Ohio to purchasers located in various States of the United States other than the State of Ohio and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and has maintained a course of trade in commerce in said interior wall covering among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said interior wall covering, respondent, by means of advertising folders and circulars and by means of advertisements inserted in magazines and newspapers having a general circulation throughout the various States of the United States, has made claims and representations concerning the composition of its product, among and typical of which are the following:

VEOS TILE
* * *
VEOS PORCELAIN TILE
* * *
* * *

The advantages of genuine porcelain are well known—but Veos Porcelain Tile * * * is comparatively new.

* * *
Veos Porcelain on Steel WALL TILE

PAR. 4. The wall covering sold and distributed by respondent consists of sheet metal surfaced with a vitreous enamel. In fact, the term "Veos," sometimes used by respondent in referring to its product, is made up of the initial letters of the words "Vitreous Enamel On Steel." This product is made in small units, standardized in size in multiples of $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches up to a maximum of 6 inches by 12 inches. These shapes are stamped from sheet steel of approximately 20 gage and are put through a pickling or cleaning process to prepare the surface for the application of vitreous enamel. The shapes are then dipped into a liquid containing principally feldspar, blended clays, borax, cryolite, tin oxide and other color oxides according to the color to be obtained, then dried at a temperature of 200° to 300° F., and then baked or fired in a furnace at a temperature of $1,580^{\circ}$ to $1,600^{\circ}$ F. for a few minutes, during which firing the material applied to the surface of the metal becomes fused to that surface. The shapes are then sprayed with a liquid consisting of substantially the same materials as contained in the first coat except for the addition of color oxides to obtain the color desired, again dried as in the case of the first coat, and fired for a few minutes in a furnace at a temperature of $1,540^{\circ}$ to $1,560^{\circ}$ F., which firing fuses the second coat. The result of this process is a metal plate covered with a vitreous enamel such as that commonly applied to bathtubs, kitchen sinks, and other articles in general domestic use, and frequently referred to as porcelain enamel. These shapes are applied by first attaching to the wall to be covered a special composition foundation board which is grooved to form a pattern of raised $1\frac{1}{2}$ -inch squares. The shapes are affixed to this foundation board by covering the back of the shapes with an adhesive and then fitting the curved edges of such shapes into the grooves in the foundation board, after which the joints between the shapes are grouted.

Findings

The product made in the manner described is used in the construction of new buildings and in the repair and modernization of old buildings. It is particularly recommended by respondent for modernizing bathrooms and kitchens in old buildings because it is much lighter in weight than clay tile and can be used where the greater weight of clay tile might impose an undue strain upon a building not designed to support heavy weights.

PAR. 5. The surface applied to respondent's product in the aforesaid manner is a ceramic glaze; it is not true porcelain. Porcelain is essentially a clay product which is capable of being self-sustaining through the forming and firing, or maturing process, and must be matured at temperatures above $2,000^{\circ}$ F., which temperatures would be destructive to the metal base to which respondent applies the vitreous enamel. In addition, true porcelain is a homogeneous product, whereas the base of respondent's product is sheet metal to which a vitreous enamel approximately 0.012 to 0.020 of an inch in thickness has been fused. However, for a number of years last past manufacturers of various products surfaced with a vitreous enamel similar to that used by respondent have advertised and represented their products as having a porcelain or porcelain enamel finish, and such surfaces have come to be widely accepted and understood by members of the consuming public as porcelain enamel.

PAR. 6. For some thousands of years tiles ordinarily and generally have been made from clay or mixtures of clay shaped into small units and fired so as to obtain a hard, durable, dense, and impervious mass. Tiles have also been made of marble, stone, and other products, but until relatively recent years the usual and principal type of tile has been that made from clay or mixtures of clay. The word "tile," when not accompanied by qualifying words indicating the composition thereof, has been, and is now, understood in the building trade, by architects, and by members of the purchasing public to mean tiles made from clay. When applied to tiles made of materials other than clay or mixtures of clay the term "tile" has been, and is, customarily accompanied by other words descriptive of the composition of the tile, such as "glass tile," "rubber tile," "cement tile," and "linoleum tile."

When applied to a wall in the manner heretofore described respondent's product presents a surface substantially identical in appearance to that presented by a wall finished with glazed clay tile and has the same characteristics of size of units and of grouted joints between units as does a wall finished with glazed clay tile. Respondent's product, however, is not "porcelain tile" because such description designates and describes tile composed entirely of porcelain, whereas respondent's product is in fact a steel or metal shape to which has been fused a thin opaque glasslike surface known as vitreous enamel. Neither does the term "tile" adequately and correctly describe said product because the word "tile," when used without qualifying words, connotes a baked clay product or clay tile and not a metal tile such as respondent's product.

PAR. 7. The use by respondent of the term "tile," without qualifying words descriptive of the base of said product, or of the term "porcelain tile," to designate and describe its interior wall covering has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false and misleading statements, representations, and designations are true, and causes, and has caused a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of said product.

Order

34 F. T. C.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by counsel, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Davidson Enamel Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its product designated as "Veos Tile" and by other names, or any substantially similar product under the same or any other name, in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word "tile," either separately or with any other word or words, to designate, describe, or refer to respondent's said product unless in immediate connection or conjunction with the word "tile" other word or words are used which disclose the metal or other base of respondent's said product.

2. Using the word "porcelain," either separately or with any other word or words, to designate, describe, or refer to respondent's said product except in a manner which clearly discloses that the word "porcelain" refers only to the vitreous enamel surface of such product.

It is further ordered, That respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

JAMES MACDONALD, LTD., ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4618. Complaint, Oct. 21, 1941—Decision, May 19, 1942

Where four corporations and three partners, with principal places of business in Scotland, producers of "Harris Tweed"—distinctive and favorably known cloth or fabric made from pure virgin wool produced in Scotland, spun, dyed and finished in the Outer Hebrides and hand woven by the inhabitants of said islands in their own homes—who had long sold and delivered a substantial part of the product in question in the United States, directly and through certain agents and representatives; and said agents and representatives, who, as competition in "Harris Tweed" developed in the United States, formed a voluntary association known as "Harris Tweed Agents Committee," membership of which always included agents and representatives of some or all of aforesaid producers; in competition, prior to and but for acts and practices below set forth, directly and through their said agents, with each other and with other members of the industry, and holding a dominant position in the substantial trade in said "Harris Tweed" between Great Britain and the United States—

- (a) Entered into and carried out understandings, agreements, combinations and conspiracies with intent and effect of monopolizing trade and suppressing competition in sale of the fabric in question in trade and commerce between Great Britain and the United States; and the several States and in the District of Columbia; and

Where aforesaid producers, with the active cooperation of said agents and representatives and others, and in pursuance of and to effectuate said understandings, etc.—

- (b) Fixed, established and maintained minimum prices, terms, and conditions of sale in connection with the marketing of "Harris Tweed" in the United States; and

Where three of said sales agents, with the active cooperation of producers aforesaid and others, and pursuant to and in order to effectuate said understandings, etc.—

- (c) Inaugurated a plan to fix and maintain prices by clothing manufacturers and resale prices by retailers selling garments made of "Harris Tweed" in the United States, and selected one of their number as their common agent in the United States to enter into agreements with the garment manufacturers and retailers, to the effect that such manufacturers would not sell garments made from "Harris Tweed" purchased from producers and agents involved at prices lower than those fixed by them, or sell to any retailer who would not bind himself similarly to respect the resale prices which they fixed; that the retailers themselves would respect such prices; and that each garment manufacturer and retailer would submit to said common selling agent list of prices at which sales were being made and customers; and

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said Act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the respondents named and referred to in the caption hereof have violated the provisions of section 5 of said Act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, James MacDonald, Ltd., is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under the laws of Great Britain with its office and principal place of business located in Stornoway, Scotland.

Respondent, Kenneth Mackenzie, Ltd., is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under the laws of Great Britain with its office and principal place of business located in Stornoway, Scotland.

Respondent, Kenneth Macleod, Ltd., is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under the laws of Great Britain with its office and principal place of business located in Shawbost, Scotland.

Respondent, S. A. Newall and Sons, Ltd., is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under the laws of Great Britain with its office and principal place of business located in Stornoway, Scotland.

Complaint

Respondents, W. A. Smith, John Smith, and A. P. C. Lawrence, are copartners, doing business under the firm name and style of Thomas Smith and Co., with their office and principal place of business located in Stornoway, Scotland.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Miles L. Finch, sales agent and representative of respondent, James MacDonald, Ltd., is an individual, doing business under the name and style of Associate British Manufacturers, with his office and principal place of business located at 200 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Respondent, Folkard and Lawrence, Inc., sales agent and representative of respondent, Kenneth Mackenzie, Ltd., is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business located at 51 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Respondent, Biddle-Bernstein, sales agent and representative of respondent, Kenneth Mackenzie, Ltd., is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its office and principal place of business located at 112 North Twelfth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Respondent, R. J. Beneville, sales agent and representative of respondent, Kenneth Macleod, Ltd., is an individual, with his office and principal place of business located at 23 East Twenty-sixth Street, New York, N. Y.

Respondent, E. Yorke Stroud, sales agent and representative of respondent, S. A. Newall and Sons, Ltd., is an individual, with his office and principal place of business located at 200 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Respondent, Walter Bradshaw, is an individual, doing business under the name and style of Bradshaw Linen Co., with his office and principal place of business located at 1182 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Respondent, M. Stanley Brown, general representative of said producer respondents, is an individual, with his office and principal place of business located at 103 Park Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Said respondent agents are generally informed in respect to the business matters of their principals and are fully acquainted with the conditions of the trade in the United States and keep their principals constantly informed as to trade conditions in the United States and advised as to their best interests in relation thereto and cooperate with them in promoting and effecting the same.

PAR. 3. The respondents named in paragraph 1 hereof are, and have been for many years, producers, among other things, of a woolen cloth or fabric known as "Harris Tweed," a material generally known for its durability and fine wearing quality, which has a distinctive place in the opinion of the general public for those qualities, and which is, therefore, preferred by the general public for many purposes.

The original "Harris Tweed" was for many years produced in the Islands of Lewis, Harris, Uist, Barra, all a part of the group of Islands known as the Outer Hebrides, lying about 60 miles west of the mainland of Scotland, in the North Atlantic Ocean. By reason of the relatively small area only a relatively small quantity of such material was produced. The said cloth or fabric, as originally introduced and generally known to the purchasing public was a cloth or fabric entirely the handiwork of the crofters of said islands in that the wool was sheared, carded, dyed, spun, woven, shrunken, and finished by hand and the dyes used were produced locally from various forms of vegetable matter. The wool used in the cloth or fabric was coarse but very strong, and the cloth or fabric made from it was also coarse and was of great durable wearing quality, as well as possessing water-repellent qualities to a remarkable degree. Furthermore, said cloth or fabric had a characteristic odor which it took from the crude manufacturing process and from the peat smoke which circulated freely throughout the cottages in which the wool was fabricated into cloth or fabric.

As said cloth or fabric became known to the general public there was developed a large demand for it in the United States and elsewhere for certain purposes, such as the making of coats, suits and sportswear for men and women, and for various other like purposes. The supply being limited as aforesaid, and the same being brought to the attention of the British Board of Trade, the definition of "Harris Tweed" was liberalized in 1934 so that now, in the British Isles, at least, "Harris Tweed" is defined as follows:

"HARRIS TWEED" means a Tweed made from pure virgin wool produced in Scotland, spun, dyed and finished in the Outer Hebrides and hand-woven by the Islanders at their own homes in the Islands of Lewis, Harris, Uist, Barra and their several appurtenances and all known as the Outer Hebrides.

As a result of such definition of "Harris Tweed" the wool from which the same is made need not now come from the said Outer Hebrides but may come from anywhere on the mainland of Scotland. Furthermore, the yarns are not necessarily any longer hand-spun nor are they necessarily dyed with the native dye nor, therefore, is the finishing any longer necessarily a process carried out by the community as a whole, but is, or may be done in finishing plants thereof, though the cloth or fabric carries the characteristic odor of peat smoke, as it appears that it is sufficient if the cloth or fabric is made from pure virgin wool produced in Scotland and spun, dyed and finished in said Outer Hebrides and hand-woven by the inhabitants of said islands in their own homes.

PAR. 4. The producers named in paragraph 1 as respondents herein sell and deliver, and have for many years sold and delivered, a substantial part of the said product, namely, "Harris Tweed" cloth or fabric, hereinafter referred to as "Harris Tweed," and maintained a constant course of trade and commerce in said product in the United States, directly and through the agents and representatives named as respondents in paragraph 2 hereof. "Harris Tweed," as the same has been redefined as above set forth, is also sold and delivered in the United States by other producers, and through other agents and representatives to various dealers and manufacturers, and others, for the purposes aforesaid. As competition developed in the sale and delivery of said "Harris Tweed" in the United States, a voluntary association was formed by the said agents and representatives known as Harris Tweed Agents' Committee (hereinafter referred to as "Agents Committee") for their mutual protection and the furtherance of the mutual interests of themselves and their principals (who constituted the Advisory Committee of the producers otherwise known as H. S. A. C.). The membership in said committee has changed from time to time but has always included the agents and representatives of said respondent producers.

Prior to the adoption of the practices hereinafter described, said respondent producers, directly and through said aforesaid agents, were in active and substantial competition with each other, and with other members of the industry, in making and seeking to make sales and deliveries of said "Harris Tweed" in trade and commerce between Great Britain and the United States and but for the practices hereinafter described, such active and substantial competition would have continued until the present, and said respondent producers, acting directly and through their aforesaid agents, would now be in active and substantial competition with each other and with other members of the industry.

The trade of respondent producers in the United States is substantial and respondent producers hold a dominant position in the sale of "Harris Tweed" in the United States or such a position as to enable them at least from time to time to effect and carry out the purpose hereinafter set forth.

PAR. 5. Within the past 5 years respondent producers, in cooperation with respondent agents and representatives, entered into understandings, agreements, combinations and conspiracies and carried out the same for the purpose and with the effect of restricting, restrain-ing and monopolizing, and suppressing and eliminating competition in, the sale of said "Harris Tweed" in trade and commerce between Great Britain and the United States and between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Complaint

PAR. 6. Pursuant to, in furtherance of, and to effectuate said understandings, agreements, combinations and conspiracies, said respondent producers with the active cooperation of respondent agents and representatives and with others have adopted, put into effect and carried out the following methods of competition, policies and practices:

(a) Fixed, established and maintained minimum prices, terms and conditions of sale in connection with the marketing of "Harris Tweed" in the United States.

(b) Prepared and inaugurated in the year 1939 a plan to fix and maintain prices by clothing manufacturers and resale prices by retailers selling garments made of said "Harris Tweed" in the United States whereby respondent agents and representatives agreed with the respondent producers as to what such prices and resale prices should be, and selected respondent Brown as a common agent in the United States to represent respondents, who in turn would enter into agreements with garment manufacturers and retail dealers as follows, to wit:

1. That the garment manufacturers would sell garments manufactured from "Harris Tweed" purchased from the respondents at prices lower than those fixed by the respondents; and
2. That the garment manufacturers would not sell "Harris Tweed" garments to any retailer who would not bind himself to sell garments manufactured from "Harris Tweed" at said fixed resale prices or at retail prices not less than the said fixed resale prices; and
3. That retail dealers would not sell such garments at prices less than the resale prices fixed by respondents as aforesaid; and
4. That each garment manufacturer and retail dealer should submit to the said common selling agent a list of prices at which sales were being made, together with the names of the customers being sold.

(c) Compiled and circulated among each other a list of clothing manufacturers which said respondents agreed should not be sold "Harris Tweed" because they were cutting the prices fixed by said respondents as aforesaid.

PAR. 7. Each of said respondents, within the time hereinabove mentioned, acted in concert with one or more of the other respondents in doing and performing the acts and things hereinabove alleged in furtherance of said understandings, agreements, combinations and conspiracies.

PAR. 8. The acts and practices of said respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public; have a dangerous tendency to hinder and prevent, and have actually hindered and prevented, competition in price and terms of sale between and among said respondent producers and between said respondent producers and other producers in the sale of their said products in commerce within the intent and meaning of section 4 of the Federal Trade Commission Act; and placed in said respondents power to control and enhance prices of their said products; have a dangerous tendency to create in respondents a monopoly in said products in such commerce; have unreasonably restrained such commerce in their said products, and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices, in said commerce, within the intent and meaning of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on October 21, 1941, issued, and on various dates from October 21, 1941, to November 26, 1941, served its complaint in this proceeding upon the following respondents, namely: James MacDonald, Ltd., a corporation; Kenneth MacKenzie, Ltd., a corporation; Kenneth MacLeod, Ltd., a corporation; S. A. Newall and Sons, Ltd., a corporation; W. A. Smith, John Smith, and A. P. C. Lawrence, copartners, doing business under the firm name and style of Thomas Smith and Co.; Miles L. Finch, individually and doing business under the name and style of Associate British Manufacturers; Folkard and Lawrence, Inc., a corporation; E. Yorke Stroud, an individual; Walter Bradshaw, individually, and doing business under the name and style of Bradshaw Linen Co.; M. Stanley Brown, an individual, and Biddle-Bernstein, a corporation, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts or practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing by respondents, E. Yorke Stroud, Walter Bradshaw, and Folkard & Lawrence, Inc., of their respective answers, the Commission, by orders herein, granted the motion of each of said respondents for permission to withdraw their respective answers, and to substitute therefor answers admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, except as hereinafter set forth, and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. The substitute answers were duly filed in the office of the Commission. Respondents, James MacDonald, Ltd., Kenneth MacKenzie, Ltd., S. A. Newall and Sons, Ltd., and W. A. Smith, John Smith, and A. P. C. Lawrence, copartners, doing business under the firm name and style of Thomas Smith and Co., filed a joint answer, and respondents, Kenneth MacLeod, Ltd., M. Stanley Brown, an individual, and Miles L. Finch, an individual, filed separate answers, admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, except as hereinafter set forth, and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts. Respondent, Biddle-Bernstein, a corporation, filed its answer denying the allegations of the complaint. Respondent, R. J. Beneville, an individual, having died prior to the service of the complaint, filed no answer. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answers, and substitute answers, and the Commission having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts, and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, James MacDonald, Ltd., is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under the laws of Great Britain with its office and principal place of business located in Stornoway, Scotland.

Respondent, Kenneth MacKenzie, Ltd., is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under the laws of Great Britain with its office and principal place of business located in Stornoway, Scotland.

Respondent, Kenneth MacLeod, Ltd., is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under the laws of Great Britain with its office and principal place of business located in Shawbost, Scotland.

Respondent, S. A. Newall and Sons, Ltd., is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under the laws of Great Britain with its office and principal place of business located in Stornoway, Scotland.

Respondents, W. A. Smith, John Smith, and A. P. C. Lawrence, are copartners, doing business under the firm name and style of Thomas Smith and Co., with their office and principal place of business located in Stornoway, Scotland.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Miles L. Finch, sales agent and representative of respondent, James MacDonald, Ltd., is an individual, doing business under the name and style of Associate British Manufacturers, with his office and principal place of business located at 200 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Respondent, Folkard and Lawrence, Inc., sales agent and representative of respondent, Kenneth MacKenzie, Ltd., is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business located at 51 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Respondent, E. Yorke Stroud, sales agent and representative of respondent, S. A. Newall and Sons, Ltd., is an individual, with his office and principal place of business located at 200 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Respondent, Walter Bradshaw, is an individual, doing business under the name and style of Bradshaw Linen Co., with his office and principal place of business located at 1182 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Respondent, M. Stanley Brown, general representative of said producer respondents, is an individual, with his office and principal place of business located at 103 Park Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Respondent, Biddle-Bernstein (Co.), a corporation, located at 112 North 12th Street, Philadelphia, Pa., was never in fact an agent or representative of any Harris Tweed producer in Scotland, but purchased outright all Harris Tweed products handled by it. Said respondent was not a party to any of the understandings, agreements, combinations, conspiracies, methods, or practices hereinafter mentioned, and none of the facts hereinafter set forth refers to said respondent.

PAR. 3. The answers of the various respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in the complaint with the following exceptions and qualifications, to wit:

Respondent, Folkard & Lawrence, Inc., states that on November 1, 1938, it resigned from membership in the Agents' Committee and did not thereafter act as member thereof.

Respondent, Walter Bradshaw, denied that he was at any time a member of the Harris Tweed Agents' Committee or had any connection whatsoever therewith.

Respondent, E. Yorke Stroud, stated "If it be material, * * * that at all times he acted under the direction of and instructions from his producer, the respondent, S. A. Newall & Sons, Ltd."

The joint answer of respondents, James MacDonald, Ltd., Kenneth Mackenzie, Ltd., S. A. Newall & Sons, Ltd., and W. A. Smith, John Smith and A. P. C. Lawrence, copartners, as aforesaid, stated that "if it be material, respondents deny that they have information or knowledge sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in the complaint regarding the Harris Tweed Agents'

Committee, except that they admit that they knew of the existence thereof, and that the committee was attempting to protect the good will of Harris Tweed in the United States.

Respondent, MacLeod, stated that "if it be material, respondent denies that it has any information or knowledge sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in the complaint regarding the Harris Tweed Agents' Committee."

Respondent, M. Stanley Brown, stated that "if it be material, respondent denies that he was at any time a member of the voluntary association known as the Harris Tweed Agents' Committee, or had any connection whatever therewith."

None of said answers admitted that any acts therein admitted were done with intention to violate the law.

PAR. 4. The respondents named in paragraph 1 hereof are, and have been for many years, producers, among other things, of a woolen cloth or fabric known as "Harris Tweed," a material generally known for its durability and fine wearing quality, which has a distinctive place in the opinion of the general public for those qualities, and which is, therefore, preferred by the general public for many purposes.

The original "Harris Tweed" was for many years produced in the Islands of Lewis, Harris, Uist, Barra, all a part of the group of islands known as the Outer Hebrides, lying about 60 miles west of the mainland of Scotland, in the North Atlantic Ocean. By reason of the relatively small area only a relatively small quantity of such material was produced. The said cloth or fabric, as originally introduced and generally known to the purchasing public, was a cloth or fabric entirely the handiwork of the crofters of said islands in that the wool was sheared, carded, dyed, spun, woven, shrunken, and finished by hand and the dyes were produced locally from various forms of vegetable matter. The wool used in the cloth or fabric was coarse but very strong, and the cloth or fabric made from it was also coarse and was of great durable wearing quality, as well as possessing water-repellent qualities to a remarkable degree. Furthermore, said cloth or fabric had a characteristic odor which it took from the crude manufacturing process and from the peat smoke which circulated freely throughout the cottages in which the wool was fabricated into cloth or fabric.

As said cloth or fabric became known to the general public there was developed a large demand for it in the United States and elsewhere for certain purposes, such as the making of coats, suits and sportswear for men and women, and for various other like purposes. The supply being limited as aforesaid, and the same being brought to the attention of the British Board of Trade, the definition of "Harris Tweed" was liberalized in 1934, so that now, in the British Isles, at least, "Harris Tweed" is defined as follows:

1217

Findings

"Harris Tweed" means a tweed made from pure virgin wool produced in Scotland, spun, dyed, and finished in the Outer Hebrides and hand-woven by the Islanders in their own homes in the Islands of Lewis, Harris, Uist, Barra, and their several appurtenances and all known as the Outer Hebrides.

As a result of such definition of "Harris Tweed" the wool from which the same is made need not now come from the said Outer Hebrides but may come from any where on the mainland of Scotland. Furthermore, the yarns are not necessarily any longer hand-spun nor are they necessarily dyed with the native dye nor, therefore, is the finishing any longer necessarily a process carried out by the community as a whole, but is, or may be done in finishing plants thereof, though the cloth or fabric carries the characteristic odor of peat smoke, as it appears that it is sufficient if the cloth or fabric is made from pure virgin wool produced in Scotland and spun, dyed, and finished in said Outer Hebrides and hand-woven by the inhabitants of said islands in their own homes.

PAR. 5. The producers named in paragraph 1 as respondents herein sell and deliver, and have for many years sold and delivered, a substantial part of the said product, namely, Harris Tweed cloth or fabric, hereinafter referred to as Harris Tweed, and maintained a constant course of trade and commerce in said product in the United States, directly and through the agents and representatives named as respondents in paragraph 2 hereof. Harris Tweed, as the same has been redefined as above set forth, is also sold and delivered in the United States by other producers, and through other agents and representatives to various dealers and manufacturers, and others, for the purposes aforesaid. As competition developed in the sale and delivery of said Harris Tweed in the United States, a voluntary association was formed by the said agents and representatives known as Harris Tweed Agents' Committee (hereinafter referred to as "Agents Committee") except respondent, Walter Bradshaw, for their mutual protection and the furtherance of the mutual interests of themselves and their principals (who constituted the advisory committee of the producers otherwise known as H. S. A. C.). The membership in said committee has changed from time to time but has always included agents and representatives of some or all of said respondent producers.

Prior to the adoption of the practices hereinafter described, said respondent producers, directly and through the aforesaid agents, were in active and substantial competition with each other, and with other members of the industry, in making and seeking to make sales and deliveries of said Harris Tweed in trade and commerce between Great Britain and the United States and but for the practices hereinafter described, such active and substantial competition would have continued until the present, and said respondent producers, acting directly and through their aforesaid agents, would now be in active and substantial competition with each other and with other members of the industry.

The trade of respondent producers in the United States is substantial, and respondent producers hold a dominant position in the sale of Harris Tweed in the United States or such a position as to enable them at least from time to time to effect and carry out the purpose hereinafter set forth.

PAR. 6. Within the past 5 years respondent producers, in cooperation with respondent agents and representatives, entered into understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies and carried out the same for the purpose and with the effect of restricting, restraining, and monopolizing, and suppressing and eliminating competition in, the sale of said Harris Tweed in trade and commerce between Great Britain and the United States and between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. Pursuant to, in furtherance of, and to effectuate said understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies, said respondent producers, with the active cooperation of respondent agents and representatives, and with others, fixed, established, and maintained, minimum prices, terms, and conditions of sale in connection with the marketing of Harris Tweed in the United States.

PAR. 8. Pursuant to, in furtherance of, and to effectuate said understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies, respondent sales agent and representative, Miles L. Finch, doing business under the name and style of Associate British Manufacturers, and respondent individuals, E. Yorke Stroud and M. Stanley Brown, with the active cooperation of respondent producers, and with others, have adopted and put into effect the following methods of competition, policies and practices:

(a) Prepared and inaugurated in the year 1939 a plan to fix and maintain prices by clothing manufacturers and resale prices by retailers selling garments made of said Harris Tweed in the United States, whereby respondent agents and representatives agreed with the respondent producers as to what such prices and resale prices should be, and selected respondent Brown as a common agent in the United States to represent respondents, who in turn would enter into agreements with garment manufacturers and retail dealers as follows, to wit:

1217

1. That the garment manufacturers would not sell garments manufactured from Harris Tweed purchased from the respondents at prices lower than those fixed by the respondents; and

2. That the garment manufacturers would not sell Harris Tweed garments to any retailer who would not bind himself to sell garments manufactured from Harris Tweed at said fixed resale prices or at retail prices not less than the said fixed resale prices; and

3. That retail dealers would not sell such garments at prices less than the resale prices fixed by respondents as aforesaid; and

4. That each garment manufacturer and retail dealer should submit to the said common selling agent a list of prices at which sales were being made, together with the names of the customers being sold.

(b) Compiled and circulated among each other a list of clothing manufacturers which said respondents agreed should not be sold Harris Tweed because they were cutting the prices fixed by said respondents as aforesaid.

PAR. 9. Each of said respondents, within the time hereinabove mentioned, acted in concert with one or more of the other respondents in doing and performing the acts and things hereinabove alleged in furtherance of said understandings, agreements, combinations and conspiracies.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of said respondents, as herein set forth, are all to the prejudice of the public; have a dangerous tendency to hinder and prevent, and have actually hindered and prevented, competition in price and terms of sale between and among said respondent producers and between said respondent producers and other producers in the sale of their said products in commerce within the intent and meaning of section 4 of the Federal Trade Commission Act; and placed in said respondents power to control and enhance prices of their said products; have a dangerous tendency to create in respondents a monopoly in said products in such commerce; have unreasonably restrained such commerce in their said products, and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices, in said commerce, within the intent and meaning of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the various answers of respondents, in which answers respondents (excepting respondent, Biddle-Bernstein, a corporation) admit all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, except as set forth in the findings as to the facts, and the answers of all of said respondents (excepting respondent, Biddle-Bernstein, a corporation) stating that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said fact, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents (excepting respondent Biddle-Bernstein, a corporation) have violated the provisions of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, James MacDonald, Ltd., a corporation; Kenneth MacKenzie, Ltd., a corporation; Kenneth MacLeod, Ltd., a corporation; S. A. Newall & Sons, Ltd., a corporation; W. A. Smith, John Smith, and A. P. C. Lawrence, copartners, doing business under the firm name and style of Thomas Smith & Co.; Miles L. Finch, individually, and doing business under the name and style of Associate British Manufacturers; Folkard & Lawrence, Inc., a corporation; E. Yorke Stroud, an individual; Walter Bradshaw, individually, and doing business under the name and style of Bradshaw Linen Co.; and M. Stanley Brown, an individual, their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of Harris Tweed in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, cease and desist by any form of cooperative, concerted or collective action, from fixing, establishing and maintaining minimum prices, and the terms and conditions of sale, in connection with the marketing of the cloth or fabric known as "Harris Tweed" in the United States.

It is further ordered, That the respondents, James MacDonald, Ltd., a corporation; Kenneth MacKenzie, Ltd., a corporation; Kenneth MacLeod, Ltd., a corporation; S. A. Newall & Sons, Ltd., a corporation; W. A. Smith, John Smith, and A. P. C. Lawrence, copartners, doing business under the firm name and style of Thomas Smith & Co.; Miles L. Finch, individually, and doing business under the name and style of Associate British Manufacturers; E. Yorke Stroud, an individual; and M. Stanley Brown, an individual, their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, cease and desist from agreeing or cooperating with each other or with others, in negotiating, arranging or carrying out a plan or policy to fix and maintain the prices of clothing manufacturers or the resale prices of retailers selling garments made of said Harris Tweed in said commerce in the United States and from engaging in any form of cooperative, concerted or collective action or entering into arrangements or agreements among themselves and with garment manufacturers and retail dealers to the following effect:

1. That garment manufacturers will not sell garments manufactured of Harris Tweed purchased from the respondents or any of them at prices lower than those fixed or indicated by the said respondents; or

2. That the garment manufacturers will not sell Harris Tweed garments to any retailer who does not bind himself to sell such garments at certain fixed resale prices or at retail prices not less than the same; or

3. That said retail dealers will not sell such garments at prices less than the resale prices fixed or indicated by said respondents; or

4. That each garment manufacturer and retail dealer will submit to the respondents or anyone designated by them a list of prices at which sales are made, together with the names of the customers sold; or

5. That respondents will compile and circulate among themselves a list or other information as to the identity of clothing manufacturers which cut the prices fixed or indicated by said respondents for the purpose of facilitating refusals by respondents to sell such manufacturers.

It is further ordered, That said respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That the said complaint be, and the same hereby is, dismissed as to respondents, Biddle-Bernstein, a corporation, and R. J. Beneville, an individual, deceased.

IN THE MATTER OF
ETABLISSEMENTS RIGAUD, INC., ET AL.

MODIFIED CEASE AND DESIST ORDER

. Docket 3337. Order, May 20, 1942

Modified order, pursuant to provisions of section 5 (i) of Federal Trade Commission Act, and in accordance with decree below referred to, in proceeding in question, in which original order issued on September 27, 1939, 29 F. T. C. 1032, and in which Circuit Court of Appeals for Second Circuit, on February 4, 1942, in Etablissements Rigaud, Inc., et al. v. Federal Trade Commission, 125 F. (2d) 590, rendered its opinion and on February 24, 1942 issued its final decree affirming aforesaid order of Commission by modifying same in certain particulars—

Requiring respondent, its officers, etc., in connection with offer, etc., in commerce, of perfumes, to cease and desist from (1) representing, through use of term "Paris" or "Paris, France," or any other terms, words, symbols, or picturizations indicative of French or other foreign origin of such products, or in any manner that perfumes that are made or compounded in the United States are made or compounded in France or in any other foreign country, subject to proviso in order set forth with respect to permitting statement of country of origin of the various ingredients; and (2) using the terms "Un Air Embaume," "Rigaud," "Igora," or any other French or other foreign words or terms as brand or trade names for perfumes made or compounded in the United States without clearly and conspicuously stating, as in order specified, said fact.

MODIFIED ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding coming on for further hearing before the Federal Trade Commission and it appearing that on September 27, 1939, the Commission made its findings as to the facts herein and concluded therefrom that the respondents, Etablissements Rigaud, Inc. and E. Fougera & Co., Inc., corporations, have violated the provisions of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and issued and subsequently served its order to cease and desist; and it further appearing that on February 4, 1942 the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit rendered its opinion, and on February 24, 1942, issued its final decree affirming the aforesaid order of the Commission by modifying said order in certain particulars.

Now, therefore, Pursuant to the provisions of subsection (i) of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Commission issues this its modified order to cease and desist in conformity with the said decree.

Order

It is ordered, That the respondents, Etablissements Rigaud, Inc. and E. Fougera & Co., Inc., their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of perfumes in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, through the use of the term "Paris," or "Paris, France" or any other terms, words, symbols, or picturization indicative of French or other foreign origin of such products, or in any manner that perfumes which are made or compounded in United States are made or compounded in France or in any other foreign country: Provided, however, That the country of origin of the various ingredients thereof may be stated when immediately accompanied by a statement that such products are made or compounded in the United States.

2. Using the terms "Un Air Embaume," "Rigaud," "Igora," or any other French or other foreign words or terms as brand on trade names for perfumes made or compounded in the United States without clearly and conspicuously stating in immediate connection and conjunction therewith that such products are made or compounded in the United States.

It is further ordered, That the respondents, Etablissements Rigaud, Inc. and E. Fougera & Co., Inc., shall within 30 days after service upon them of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

HYMAN LANGSAM AND ABRAHAM LANGSAM, TRADING
AS MODEL HOME SUPPLY COMPANYCOMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF
SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 3507. Complaint, July 22, 1938—Decision, May 25, 1942*

Where two individuals, engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of jewelry, cosmetics, clothing, bedding, and other merchandise—

- (a) Sold and distributed, under their sales plan, various assortments thereof together with pull cards, for use in their sale and distribution, which concealed the name and price of one of said articles beneath each of their tabs, so that which article purchaser received and price paid, and whether or not the value of the particular article was greater than the price designated therefor, were determined wholly by lot or chance; and compensated by a premium, after remission to said individuals of amounts collected, card's operator; and

Thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme in the sale of their merchandise; with the result that many persons were attracted by said sales method and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell their merchandise in preference to that offered and sold by competitors who are unwilling to and do not use such methods; whereby trade was unfairly diverted to them from their competitors aforesaid; and

- (b) Represented through circulars and advertising matter accompanying said pull cards that their so-called premiums or gifts were given away free through such statements as "Beautiful, useful household gifts at absolutely no cost," "How to get your gifts without cost to you"; and that they paid all shipping charges;

When in fact premiums were not given away, but were either purchased by the labor or services of their representatives, or price thereof was included in prices of the other articles which representative was required to sell or procure sale of before he could obtain premiums; and they did not pay all shipping charges, but required specific sums of money to be paid as such by representatives on a number of their articles;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true; as a result whereof it purchased substantial quantities of their products and trade was unfairly diverted to them from their competitors, including those who do not make such misrepresentations, to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such sales methods were contrary to the public policy of the Government, and that such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Hyman Langsam and Abraham Langsam, individually, and as copartners, trading under the firm name and style Model Home Supply Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Hyman Langsam and Abraham Langsam, are individuals, doing business as a copartnership under the firm name and style Model Home Supply Co., with their principal office and place of business located at 34 East Twelfth Street, New York, N. Y. The present address of respondent, Hyman Langsam, is 993 Mission Street, San Francisco, Calif. The present address of Abraham Langsam is 1370 East Eighteenth Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. Respondents are now, and for some time last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of jewelry, cosmetics, clothing, bedding, kitchenware, clocks, watches, electrical appliances, razors, chinaware, silverware, and other articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said products when sold to be shipped or transported from their said place of business to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondents are and have been in competition with other partnerships and individuals and with corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Complaint

34 F. T. C.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell and distribute and have sold and distributed said articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme. The respondents distribute or cause to be distributed to representatives and prospective representatives certain advertising literature, including a sales circular. Respondents' merchandise is distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner:

A portion of said sales circular consists of a list on which there are designated a number of items of merchandise and the prices thereof. Adjacent to the list is printed and set out a device commonly called a pull card. Said pull card consists of a number of tabs, under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached a tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them, but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise, as compared to the price the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles, induces members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid for same. The fact as to whether a purchaser of one of said pull card tabs receives an article which has greater value and a higher regular price than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said articles of merchandise a purchaser is to receive, and the amount of money which a purchaser is required to pay, are determined wholly by lot or chance.

When the person or representative operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all of the tabs or chances, collected the amounts called for and remitted the sums to the respondents, said respondents thereupon ship to said representative the merchandise designated on said card, together with a premium for the representative as compensation for operating the pull card and selling the said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchasers of tabs from said pull card in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.

Respondents sell and distribute and have sold and distributed various assortments of said merchandise and furnish and have furnished various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plan or method varies in detail but the above-described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondents furnish and have furnished the said pull cards use and have used the same in purchasing, selling and distributing respondents' merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said method in the sale of their merchandise and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the apparent normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method, or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondents' said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondents, because of said game of chance, has the capacity and tendency to, and does, unfairly divert trade and custom to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their business, as hereinabove related, respondents cause and have caused various false, deceptive, and misleading statements to appear in their advertising matter as aforesaid, of which the following are examples but are not all-inclusive:

Complaint

Beautiful useful Household Gifts at absolutely No Cost.

How To Get Your Gifts without cost to You.

Special Offer: 2 Extra Gifts Free.

All Shipping Charges Paid by Us.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact, none of respondents' so-called premiums or gifts are given away "free" or "without cost," but said premiums or gifts, which are represented as being "free" or "without cost," to said representatives, are either purchased with labor by them, or the price of said so-called premiums or gifts is included in the price of other articles of merchandise which the representatives must sell or procure the sale of before said so-called premiums or gifts can be procured by them. For a number of said so-called premiums or gifts certain sums of money must be paid by said representatives in addition to the labor performed or services rendered. Respondents do not pay all shipping charges on their said products, but said representatives are required to pay certain specified sums of money as shipping charges on a number of respondents' said articles of merchandise.

PAR. 7. The use by respondents of the false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations set forth herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements and representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of said respondents' products as a result of such erroneous belief. There are, among the competitors of respondents as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who do not make such false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations concerning the distribution of their products. By the statements and representations aforesaid, trade is unfairly diverted to respondents from such competitors, and, as a result thereof, substantial injury is being done, and has been done, by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

1234

Findings

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 22d day of July A. D. 1938, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Hyman Langsam and Abraham Langsam, individually, and as copartners, trading under the firm name and style, Model Home Supply Co., charging them with unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of Abraham Langsam's answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission, and testimony in opposition to the allegations of the complaint was introduced by the attorney for respondents, before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission, on the complaint, answer of respondent, Abraham Langsam, the testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiners and exceptions thereto, and brief in support of the complaint. And the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Hyman Langsam and Abraham Langsam, are individuals and copartners, trading under the firm name and style "Model Home Supply Co." with their principal place of business located at 34 East Twelfth Street, in the city and State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and since some time prior to the issuance of the complaint herein have been engaged in the business of selling and distributing jewelry, cosmetics, clothing, bedding, kitchenware, clocks, watches, electrical appliances, razors, china ware, silverware, and other articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents cause and have caused said products, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents, during all of the time mentioned herein have maintained a course of trade in such merchandise in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and during all of said time have been in competition with other individuals and partnerships, and with corporations, engaged in the sale and distribution of similar articles of merchandise between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondents, in the conduct of their business, distribute or cause to be distributed to representatives and prospective representatives certain advertising literature, including sales circulars describing their method of conducting business. The sales circulars contain a list of a number of items of merchandise and the prices thereof; adjacent to the list is printed and set out a device commonly called a "pull card," which consists of a number of tabs under each of which is the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof, so concealed that the purchaser or prospective purchaser of a tab, or the right to pull a tab, is unable to ascertain either the article he is to receive or the price to be paid therefor until the tab is separated from the card. After the tab has been separated from the card the purchaser's name is written on the list opposite the article of merchandise revealed when the tab has been pulled. Some of the articles of merchandise have a retail value greater than the price designated for them on the tabs, but are distributed to the pullers of the tabs for the prices disclosed when the respective tabs are pulled. Whether the purchaser of a pull tab receives an article of greater value than the price designated for same on such tab, and which of said articles of merchandise he is to receive and the amount of money he is required to pay, are determined wholly by lot or chance.

The person or representative operating a pull card, after selling all of the pull tabs or the right to pull the tabs, collects the amounts called for and remits same to the respondents, who thereupon ship to said representative the merchandise designated on the pull cards together with a premium to be retained by the representative as compensation for his services in disposing of respondents' merchandise. Respondents' representative delivers the merchandise to the pullers of the tabs, in accordance with the hereinbefore-described plan.

Respondents, by the use of the hereinbefore described sales method, sell and distribute and have sold and distributed various assortments of merchandise, and furnished and have furnished various pull cards which vary only in detail from the one herein described, for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

PAR. 4. The persons to whom respondents have furnished their pull cards have used the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondents' merchandise in accordance with the hereinbefore-mentioned sales plan. Respondents thus supply to and place in the hands of others the means of conducting a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme in the sale of their merchandise in accordance with the said sales plan.

PAR. 5. Many persons are attracted by respondents' sales method and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondents' merchandise in preference to that offered for sale and sold by competitors of respondents who are unwilling to use and do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result, trade is unfairly diverted to respondents from their said competitors.

PAR. 6. Respondents, in their circulars and advertising matter described in paragraph 3 hereof, make the following representations:

Beautiful, Useful Household Gifts at absolutely no cost;
How to get your gifts without cost to you;
Special Offer two extra gifts free;
All shipping charges paid by us.

The said representations, and each of them, are false, deceptive, and misleading. In truth and in fact, none of respondents' so-called premiums or gifts are given away free, or without cost; they are either purchased by the labor or services of respondents' representatives, or the price of the so-called "premiums" or "gifts" is included in the prices of the other articles of merchandise which the representative must sell or procure the sale of before the so-called premiums or gifts can be procured by him. A certain sum of money must be paid by respondents' representatives for a number of the so-called premiums or gifts, in addition to the labor performed or the service rendered.

Respondents do not pay all shipping charges on their products, their representatives being required to pay certain specific sums of money as shipping charges on a number of respondents' articles of merchandise.

PAR. 7. The use by respondents of the false, deceptive, and misleading representations set forth in paragraph 6 hereof has misled and deceived a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true, and as a result, they have purchased substantial quantities of respondents' products. Among the competitors of respondents mentioned in paragraph 2 hereof are those who do not make such false, deceptive, and misleading representations.

By reason of the said false, deceptive, and misleading representations trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from such competitors, and as a result substantial injury has been and is being done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents are to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and respondents' sales methods are contrary to the public policy of the Government of the United States.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent Abraham Langsam, testimony and other evidence taken before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, the reports of the trial examiners and exceptions thereto, and brief in support of the complaint. And the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Hyman Langsam and Abraham Langsam, individually and as copartners, trading under the firm name and style of Modern Home Supply Co., or under any other name or designation, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of jewelry, cosmetics, clothing, bedding, kitchenware, clocks, watches, electrical appliances, razors, china ware, silverware, or any other article of merchandise in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed and assembled that sales of such merchandise to the public are to be made or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme.
2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of others, push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices, either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing any merchandise to the public.
3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

1234

Order

4. Representing, by means of circulars, advertising matter, or by any other means, that merchandise is given by the respondents to their representatives free, or without cost.

5. Representing by means of circulars and advertising matter, or by any other means, that all shipping charges are paid by respondents.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

STERLING PRODUCTS AND VITA-RAY CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 4197. Complaint, July 26, 1940—Decision, May 25, 1942*

Where a corporation and its subsidiary, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of a line of cosmetic products made by latter; by means of advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, radio continuities, and circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature—

Represented that vitamins A and D constituted a basic need for the health of the skin which was satisfied through application of such vitamins locally by means of cold cream; and that a vitamin deficiency, of which dryness and coarse pores might be symptoms, would be relieved through the use of their cosmetic "Vita-Ray Vitamin Cream" containing said vitamins;

The facts being that the skin does not require vitamins A and D by means of local application, and while said vitamins may be absorbed to some extent through the skin under certain conditions of application, there is no scientific basis for the claim that there is any local or systemic effect whatever; dryness of skin due to vitamin deficiency constitutes a secondary symptom which becomes manifest only after serious deficiency has depleted the vitamin stores and presents a pathological condition requiring treatment by a physician; and their said cream has no beneficial or therapeutic effect because of the addition of such vitamins;

With effect of misleading and deceiving the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. William L. Pencke for the Commission.

Rogers, Hoge & Hills, of New York City, for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Sterling Products, a corporation, and Vita-Ray Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Sterling Products, is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business at 170 Varick Street in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondent, Vita-Ray Corporation, is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Massachusetts, with its principal office and place of business at 176 Middle Avenue in the city of Lowell, State of Massachusetts, and is a subsidiary of respondent, Sterling Products.

Respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a line of cosmetic products manufactured by respondent, Vita-Ray Corporation, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. They cause said products, when sold, to be shipped from respondent, Vita-Ray Corporation's place of business in the State of Massachusetts to purchasers thereof, located in States of the United States other than the State of Massachusetts and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a course of trade in said cosmetic products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said products by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said products; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said products, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of, the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, by radio continuities, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

PAR. 3. All of said statements, together with many similar statements appearing in respondents' advertising literature, purport to be descriptive of respondents' products and their efficacy in use. In all of their advertising literature respondents represent, through the statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect, that a basic need for the health of the skin is vitamins A and D and that by applying said vitamins locally by means of cold cream such need is satisfied, in that the skin will be stimulated and nourished; that dryness, lines, wrinkles, and coarse pores may be symptoms of vitamin deficiency and that such deficiency may be relieved through the use of respondents' cosmetic cream containing vitamins A and D.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact said statements and representations are false, misleading, and grossly exaggerated. Respondents' cosmetic cream will have no beneficial or therapeutic effect, either with or without the addition of vitamins A and D, beyond the soothing, emollient, and cleansing effects inherent in any cold cream. The skin does not require vitamins A and D by means of local application. Where dryness of the skin is due to vitamin deficiency it is a secondary symptom which becomes manifest only after serious deficiency has depleted the vitamin stores in the body and presents a pathological condition requiring treatment by a physician. In such cases the use of respondents' cream containing vitamins A and D applied topically will have no therapeutic effect, nor will it improve the appearance of the skin.

PAR. 5. While vitamins A and D may be absorbed to some extent through the skin if contained in a suitable vehicle and under certain conditions of application, there is no scientific basis for the claim that there is any local, direct, or selective action at the site of application, or that there is any local or systemic effect whatever unless a sufficient quantity of said vitamins is administered. Except in cases of burns, wounds, and other similar pathological conditions, vitamins A or D applied to the skin will have not local effect, but the action will be systemic because of the absorption through the skin into the blood stream. Lines and wrinkles are the result of advancing age due to the gradual breakdown of tissue, and will not be affected by any treatment with cosmetic creams containing vitamins.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations hereinabove set forth, made by the respondents in selling said cosmetic preparations, have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive the purchasing public into purchasing said cosmetic preparations in the erroneous belief that such representations are true, and that the use of said products will accomplish the results indicated in said advertisements.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ling Products, a corporation, and Vita-Ray Corporation, a corporation, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On September 24, 1940, the respondents filed their answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondents and their counsel, and Richard P. Whiteley, assistant chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in oppositon thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved, accepted and filed, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Sterling Products, is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business at 170 Varick Street in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondent, Vita-Ray Corporation, is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of Massachusetts, with its principal office and place of business at 176 Middle Avenue in the city of Lowell, State of Massachusetts, and is a subsidiary of respondent Sterling Products.

Respondent, Vita-Ray Corporation, is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a line of cosmetic products manufactured by respondent, Vita-Ray Corporation, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. It causes said products, when sold, to be shipped from respondent, Vita-Ray Corporation's place of business in the State of Massachusetts to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of Massachusetts and in the District of Columbia. Respondent, Vita-Ray Corporation maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said cosmetic products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said products by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said products; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said products, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, by radio continuities, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, is the following:

VITA-RAY VITAMIN CREAM * * *

All-purpose cream containing vitamins A and D which helps nourish and stimulate skin cells—relieves dryness and helps recede enlarged pores.

PAR. 3. All of said statements, together with many similar statements appearing in respondents' advertising literature, purport to be descriptive of respondents' products and their efficacy in use. In all of their advertising literature respondents represent, through the statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect, that a basic need for the health of the skin is vitamins A and D and that by applying said vitamins locally by means of cold cream such need is satisfied, in that the skin will be stimulated and nourished; that dryness and coarse pores may be symptoms of vitamin deficiency and that such deficiency may be relieved through the use of respondents' cosmetic cream containing vitamins A and D.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact said statements and representations are false and misleading and grossly exaggerated. Respondents' cosmetic cream will have no beneficial or therapeutic effect because of the addition of vitamins A and D. The skin does not require vitamins A and D by means of local application. Where dryness of the skin is due to vitamin deficiency it is a secondary symptom which becomes manifest only after serious deficiency has depleted the vitamin stores in the body and presents a pathological condition requiring treatment by a physician. In such cases the use of respondents' cream containing vitamins A and D applied locally has no therapeutic effect, nor will it improve the appearance of the skin.

PAR. 5. While vitamins A and D may be absorbed to some extent through the skin if contained in a suitable vehicle and under certain conditions of application, there is no scientific basis for the claim that there is any local, direct or selective action at the site of application, or that there is any local or systemic effect whatever.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations hereinabove set forth, made by the respondents in selling said cosmetic preparations, have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive the purchasing public into purchasing said cosmetic preparations in the erroneous belief that such representations are true, and that the use of said products will accomplish the results indicated in said advertisements.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondents, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the respondents herein and Richard P. Whiteley, assistant chief counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondents herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Sterling Products, a corporation, and Vita-Ray Corporation, a corporation, their officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of cosmetic creams and oils do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1244

Order

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement (a) by means of the United States mails, or (b) by any means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent, directly or through inference, that respondents' cosmetic creams and oils have any added beneficial value upon the skin by reason of their vitamin content.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said product, which advertisements contain any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

BIGELOW-SANFORD CARPET COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4207. Complaint, July 31, 1940—Decision, May 26, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in the manufacture and competitive interstate sale and distribution to wholesale and retail dealers of rugs and carpets—

(a) Made use of names "Persiamar" and "Kashamar" to designate certain lines of its domestic, machine-made rugs which had many points of resemblance to genuine Orientals, and thereby caused the purchasing public to believe that they were hand-made Orientals, some of which are known as "Kashmir," "Cashmere," or "Kashan," or simply as "Persian," and which—long made in certain parts of the Orient by hand, with pile of wool or silk and wool, and threads individually knotted in special manner—have long been held in great public esteem by virtue of their beauty, durability, and other qualities; and

(b) Represented that its said rugs were replicas or duplicates of original Orientals through use, in advertising copy furnished to dealer-buyers for their use in newspapers and other publications of general circulation, of such words as "true copies," "perfect copies," or "reproductions," and labels displaying, along with aforesaid designations, trade-mark employed by it on all its rugs and carpets, depicting two hands tying a knot in yarn, causing purchasing public to believe that its said rugs were hand-made or made in the same way as the genuine Orientals, of which they were not true or perfect copies or reproductions, though so closely simulating them as to be indistinguishable therefrom by a portion of the purchasing public;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that such representations were true, thereby inducing it to purchase said rugs because of such belief; and with effect of placing in the hands of dealer-purchasers means and instrumentality of misleading and deceiving the public as aforesaid, whereby trade was unfairly diverted to it from its competitors engaged in sale of rugs, including both the Oriental and domestic products, and who truthfully represent their products as aforesaid; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Randolph W. Branch for the Commission.

Wright, Gordon, Zachry, Parlin & Cahill, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal

Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, having an office and principal place of business at 140 Madison Avenue in the city and State of New York, and manufacturing plants at Thompsonville, Conn., and Amsterdam, N. Y.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and has been for more than 3 years last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling rugs and carpets. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent sells said rugs and carpets to various wholesale and retail dealers, and causes such rugs and carpets, when sold, to be transported from its aforesaid places of business in the States of New York and Connecticut to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said rugs and carpets in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with firms, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of rugs and carpets in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among such competitors are many who do not misrepresent either the place or method of manufacture of their products and who do not furnish their dealer-customers with means or instrumentalities for deceiving the public.

PAR. 4. A substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public understands, and for many years has understood, Oriental rugs to be rugs made in the Orient, or more particularly in certain parts of Southwestern Asia, by hand, of pleasing texture and original and beautiful design and having a pile of wool or silk and wool, the threads of which are individually knotted in a special manner. Such rugs are usually designated by names which are indicative of the Orient and Oriental origin and manufacture. Oriental rugs have been for many years, and still are, held in great public esteem because of their texture, beauty, durability, and other qualities, and by reason thereof there is a decided preference on the part of many of the purchasing public for such rugs.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of its business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said rugs, respondent has engaged in the practice of describing and designating certain of its rugs, which closely resemble true Oriental rugs in appearance, by the names of "Persiamar" and "Kashamar." Such names connote places in the Orient which are places of origin of true Oriental rugs, and have the tendency and capacity to create the mistaken and erroneous belief that the rugs so designated are made in such places, or in the Orient, by hand, and are in all respects true Oriental rugs. Respondent uses said designations in invoices and in otherwise referring to the same in the sale thereof to dealers, and also causes labels, bearing one or the other of said names, to be securely attached to said rugs so as to be plainly discernible to members of the purchasing public when such rugs are displayed for sale by retail dealers. Respondent also uses said names in advertising copy furnished to dealers buying the said rugs, in the manner and for the purposes hereinafter set forth.

In truth and in fact, respondent's rugs referred to herein are woven on power looms in its factories in the United States. They are not made by hand; the individual threads are not knotted in the distinctive manner of the true Oriental rug. They do not possess all the characteristics of the true Oriental rug, but do, in fact, so closely simulate true Oriental rugs in appearance as to be indistinguishable from them by a large portion of the purchasing public and are in consequence readily accepted as being true Oriental rugs.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent has engaged in the practice of furnishing to dealers buying certain of its rugs, made as aforesaid, advertising copy which is intended to be, and is, inserted by such dealers in newspapers and other publications of general circulation among the purchasing public. Such advertisements contain many misleading statements which represent and imply that said rugs are in all respects reproductions and copies of true Oriental rugs. Among and typical of such statements are the following:

- True copies of Sarouks, Kirmans and Persians.
- Perfect copies of collectors' Orientals.
- True copies of museum Orientals.
- Oriental rugs reproduced by those clever Bigelow weavers.
- Amazing reproductions from the original Orientals.

In truth and in fact, said rugs are not exact copies or reproductions of true Orientals in structure or method of manufacture, but merely simulate Orientals in appearance.

PAR. 7. The use by respondent of the designations and representations as set forth herein in connection with the offering for sale and sale of its said rugs has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations and designations are true and correct, and to induce them to purchase said rugs on account thereof. Respondent's said acts and practices have the effect of placing in the hands of retail dealers who purchase said rugs and resell the same to the purchasing public, means and instrumentalities of misleading and deceiving the public in the particulars aforesaid.

As a result of respondent's said acts and practices, trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from its competitors engaged in the sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of rugs of various kinds, including both genuine Oriental and domestic rugs, who truthfully represent their products as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof. In consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 31st day of July A. D. 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, a stipulation as to the facts was entered into between the attorney for the Commission and the attorneys for respondent, which was approved by the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer, stipulation, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto:

And the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, with its principal place of business at 140 Madison Avenue, in the city and State of New York, and manufacturing plants located at Thompsonville, Conn., and Amsterdam, N. Y.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing rugs and carpets. In the course and conduct of its business respondent sells rugs and carpets to various wholesale and retail dealers, and causes same, when sold, to be transported from its places of business in the States of New York and Connecticut to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in such rugs and carpets in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent, in the course and conduct of its business, is now and has been at all times mentioned herein, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with firms, partnerships, and individuals also engaged in the sale and distribution of rugs and carpets in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among such competitors are many who sell to wholesale and retail dealers and who do not misrepresent either the place or method of manufacture of their products.

PAR. 4. A substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public understands, and for many years have understood, Oriental rugs to be rugs made in the Orient, or more particularly, in certain parts of Asia from Turkey to the Yellow Sea, by hand, and having a pile of wool, or silk and wool, the threads of which are individually knotted in a special manner.

In general, Oriental rugs for many years have been, and still are, held in great public esteem, because of their beauty, durability, and other qualities, and by reason of this there is a demand on the part of many of the purchasing public for such rugs.

Oriental rugs are not woven, but are built, tied, or knotted, by hand, the knots being tied around the warp threads and the rows of knots held by weft threads. Oriental hand-made rugs are designated by names which are generally—but not always—geographical or tribal, and in noun and adjective form are indicative of actual geographic or tribal origin in the Orient.

PAR. 5. Respondent, between 1935 and 1938, used the name "Persiamar," and between 1935 and the present have used the name "Kashamar," to designate certain lines of rugs in various sizes, patterns, and colors. Said rugs are woven on power looms in respondent's factories in the United States. They are not made by hand and the individual threads are not knotted in the distinctive manner of the Oriental rugs; in pattern and design some are copies, so far as is possible when power looms are used, of genuine Oriental rugs, and others have patterns and designs adapted from genuine Oriental rugs which embody Oriental designs, motifs, color, and treatment.

Respondent's "Kashamar" rugs are so woven that the colors and patterns show through the back of the rug, a feature which, until about 1927, was found only in carpets and in genuine Oriental rugs. The name "Kashamar" is a coined word or name. The name "Persiamar" is made by the addition of the suffix "mar" to the word "Persia," the name of a country which for centuries has been identified with Oriental rugs, and is one of the places of origin thereof. Many Oriental rugs are described and known simply as "Persian." The respondent's rugs have many points of resemblance in design, color, and general appearance to genuine Oriental rugs.

PAR. 6. There are true Oriental rugs known as "Kashmir" or "Cashmere"; there are also true Oriental rugs known as "Kashan." Respondent, by the use of the words "Persiamar" and "Kashamar," in describing its rugs, has caused the purchasing public to believe that its rugs are hand-made Oriental rugs, when in fact they are machine-made and produced in the United States.

PAR. 7. Respondent causes a label to be firmly sewn on the rugs sold by it as "Persiamar" or "Kashamar." The label used on the "Persiamar" rugs up to 1938—the date when this name was last used—bore the following legend:

PERSIAMAR
BY BIGELOW-SANFORD
Guaranteed Pure Wool Face

Findings

34 F. T. C.

The label used in connection with respondent's "Kashamar" rugs, prior to March 1941, contained the legend:

KASHAMAR
by
Bigelow-Sanford
Guaranteed Pure Wool Face

and depicted two hands tying a knot in a piece of yarn; the label used on this rug since March 1941, bears the legend:

KASHAMAR
Woven on Power Looms in U. S. A. by
Bigelow-Sanford
Guaranteed Pure Wool Face

Respondent also attached to its rugs a label depicting two hands tying a knot and bearing the words:

Woven by the BIGELOW WEAVERS
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off,
Patents No. 1885031, 1885032,
1885033, 1885034, Re. 18783
Other Patents Pending
Made in U. S. A.

The depiction of two hands tying a knot in yarn is respondent's trade-mark, which has been used by it for the past 10 years on all its rugs and carpets.

PAR. 8. Respondent has used the names "Persiamar" and "Kashamar" in its invoices and in otherwise referring to said rugs in the sale thereof to dealers and in advertising copy furnished to dealers buying said rugs, and which was intended to be, and was, inserted by such dealers in newspapers and other publications of general circulation among the purchasing public.

PAR. 9. Respondent, by the application of the names "Persiamar" and "Kashamar" to its rugs, has caused the purchasing public to believe that such rugs are, in fact, Oriental rugs; and respondent, by the use of the labels hereinbefore referred to which depict two hands tying a knot on a piece of yarn, has caused the purchasing public to believe that the respondent's rugs were hand-made, or were made in the same way that genuine Oriental rugs are made.

PAR. 10. Respondent, prior to about May 1940, furnished to dealers buying its rugs, advertising copy which was intended to be, and was, inserted by such dealers in newspapers and other publications of general circulation among the purchasing public. Contained in certain of such advertising copy were one or more of the following statements, which referred to respondent's "Persiamar" and "Kashamar" rugs:

True copies of Sarouks, Kirmans and Persians. Perfect Copies of Collectors' Orientals.

Oriental rugs reproduced by those clever Bigelow weavers.

True copies of museum Orientals.

Amazing reproductions from the original Orientals.

PAR. 11. The rugs to which the statements appearing in paragraph 10 refer are woven on power looms. Some of them, in color and pattern, follow, as closely as is possible when respondent's method of power-loom weaving is used—but not exactly—the colors and patterns of original hand-made rugs from the Orient. Such rugs may be made in the same size as the original rug, or in sizes smaller or larger than the original. Others of such rugs are, in color and pattern, adaptations and combinations of colors, motifs and patterns found in genuine Oriental rugs. The manufacture of these rugs does not involve the copying of the color and design of any particular genuine Oriental rug, and the designs of these rugs, as a whole, are entirely new.

PAR. 12. The rugs manufactured by respondent are not true copies, perfect copies, or reproductions of Oriental rugs; but so closely simulate true Oriental rugs in appearance as to be indistinguishable from them by a portion of the purchasing public.

PAR. 13. The use by respondent of the designations and representations as set forth herein, in connection with the offering for sale and sale of its rugs, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations and designations are true and correct, and to induce them to purchase said rugs on account of such belief.

PAR. 14. Respondent's said acts and practices have the effect of placing in the hands of dealers who purchase respondent's rugs and resell them to the purchasing public, the means and instrumentality of misleading and deceiving the public as aforesaid, and as a result of respondent's acts and practices as herein set forth, trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from its competitors engaged in the sale of rugs, including both Oriental and domestic rugs, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, who truthfully represent their products as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof. In consequence thereof, injury has been and is now being done by the respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent, as set forth in the foregoing findings as to the facts, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST¹

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, a stipulation as to the facts entered into between the attorney for the Commission and attorneys for the respondent which was approved by the Commission, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, directors, representatives, agents, and employees, jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of rugs or carpets in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from—

(1) Using the word "Persiamar," or "Kashamar," or any other word or name indicative of the Orient, to mark, designate, describe, or refer to rugs not made in the Orient and which do not possess all the essential characteristics and structure of the type of Oriental rug which they purport to be.

(2) Representing by the use of the words "true copies," "perfect copies," or "reproductions," or by the use of any similar words which import that the rug to which such words are applied is a replica or duplicate of an original Oriental rug.

(3) Representing in any manner that the rugs manufactured and sold by it are true copies of museum Oriental rugs, or that they are reproductions of Oriental rugs.

¹The Commission, by order of September 4, 1942, modified as "indefinite and incomplete" paragraph (2) of order in question, so as to require respondent corporation, its officers, etc., to cease and desist from—

"(2) The use of the words 'true copies,' 'perfect copies,' 'reproductions,' or any other words of similar import, to designate or describe rugs which are not replicas or duplicates of original Oriental rugs in every respect."

1252

Order

(4) Furnishing dealers buying its rugs with advertising copy intended to be inserted by such dealers in newspapers and other publications of general circulation, which contain one or more of the following statements with reference to respondent's rugs:

True copies of Sarouks, Kirmans and Persians.

Perfect copies of collector's Orientals.

Oriental rugs reproduced by those clever Bigelow weavers.

True copies of museum Orientals.

Amazing reproductions from the original Orientals.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

GIBSON-THOMSEN CO., INC., AND S. H. KRESS CO.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3714. Complaint, Feb. 14, 1939—Decision, June 1, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in the manufacture and competitive interstate sale of tooth brushes; importing tooth brush handles from Japan—

- (a) Obliterated the word "Japan" on the bristle end thereof by boring holes therein and filling them with bristles in the process of manufacture, and, in compliance with instructions from the corporate operator of retail stores to whom it sold said products, imprinted on the handles the word "Kress" or "Kress, U. S. A.," and, until January 1938, printed on the ends of cartons enclosing such brushes the words "Made in U. S. A.";

Thereby placing in the hands of retailers a means of misleading and deceiving the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that its said brushes and all the parts thereof, lacking the original markings required by law, were wholly of domestic origin—substantially preferred thereby over those made from materials or parts imported from Japan, against the goods of which there is a substantial prejudice—with the result that said public purchased such products in the aforesaid erroneous belief and trade was thereby diverted to it from its competitors who do not so misrepresent their tooth brush products; and

Where said corporate operator, engaged in the competitive offer and sale of tooth brushes and other items direct to the purchasing public through its retail stores in the United States and the Territory of Hawaii, with full knowledge of the facts above set forth—

- (b) Sold and continued to sell such tooth brushes in its branch stores with no other marking, printing, or labeling thereon or in connection therewith to inform the purchasing public that said products were of Japanese and not of domestic origin;

With effect of deceiving the purchasing public as aforesaid, and of diverting trade unfairly thereby to it from its Hawaiian competitors who do not misrepresent the country of origin of the whole or part of their said products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal

Complaint

Trade Commission having reason to believe that Gibson-Thomsen Co., Inc., and S. H. Kress & Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Gibson-Thomsen Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 10 East Thirty-ninth Street, in the city of New York of said State, and with a manufacturing plant located in the city of Newark, in the State of New Jersey. For the past several years said respondent has been, and now is, engaged in the business of making, among other things, tooth brushes, and in offering for sale and selling the same in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and in causing the same, when sold or ordered, to be shipped and transported from its places of business in the States of New York and New Jersey to purchasers thereof located in States other than the States of New York and New Jersey, and to purchasers located in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of its said business, and at all times herein referred to, said respondent has been, and now is, in competition with other corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in offering for sale and selling tooth brushes in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, who do not use the methods and practices used by respondent and herein set forth and complained of.

PAR. 2. Respondent, S. H. Kress & Co., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 114 Fifth Avenue, in the city of New York of said State. For several years past said respondent has been, and now is, engaged in the business of offering for sale and selling, among other things, tooth brushes direct to the purchasing public through its retail stores located in various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia and in the Territory of Hawaii, and in causing said tooth brushes to be made, marked, labeled, and imprinted by the maker thereof, as hereinafter more fully set forth and complained of, and in causing said tooth brushes to be shipped and transported from the States of New York and New Jersey to its retail stores in and throughout the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and in the Territory of Hawaii.

Complaint

34 F. T. C.

PAR. 3. In the making of its aforesaid tooth brushes, respondent, Gibson-Thomsen Co., Inc., uses constituent parts and materials of foreign and domestic origin, the foreign parts of which, when imported and received by said respondent, are marked and imprinted in such manner as to indicate the country of origin thereof. Among such foreign-made parts used by said respondent are tooth brush handles which are made in, and imported from, the country of Japan.

In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, and in the process of making tooth brushes in which said Japanese-made handles are used, it has been, and is, the practice of respondent, Gibson-Thomsen Co., Inc., to conceal, obscure, and obliterate the word "Japan" and mark of origin on said handles, which word and marking appeared on said handles when imported and received by respondent, and thereafter to offer for sale, sell, and distribute the same to purchasers, in commerce as aforesaid, without any marking, printing, labeling, or other indication thereon, or in connection therewith, sufficient to inform members of the buying and consuming public that the handles, or a substantial part, of said brushes are of Japanese or foreign origin, and not of domestic origin.

PAR. 4. Respondents jointly caused and cause tooth brushes to be made in the manner aforesaid, and further caused and cause the same to be marked and imprinted with the word "Kress" and with the word and letters "Kress U. S. A." appearing on the handles of said brushes. Pursuant to the purchase of such brushes by respondent, S. H. Kress & Co., and to its order, respondents further caused and cause said brushes to be shipped and transported in commerce as aforesaid and to be offered for sale and sold to members of the buying and consuming public with the word "Japan" and mark of origin concealed, obscured and obliterated from the handles of said brushes, and with the word "Kress" and the words and letters "Kress U. S. A." appearing thereon, and without any other marking, printing, or labeling thereon or in connection therewith sufficient to inform members of the buying and consuming public that the said handles or a substantial part of said brushes were and are of Japanese or foreign origin and not of domestic origin.

PAR. 5. By virtue of the practice, heretofore and now established of imprinting or otherwise marking products of foreign origin, and their containers, with the name of the country of their origin, in legible English words in a conspicuous place, and as required by law, a substantial portion of the buying and consuming public has come to rely, and now relies, upon such imprinting or marking, and is influenced thereby, to distinguish and discriminate between products of foreign and domestic origin. When products composed in whole or substantial part of imported articles are offered for sale and sold in the channels of trade and commerce throughout the United States and its territorial possessions, and in the District of Columbia, they are purchased and accepted as and for, and taken to be, products wholly of domestic manufacture and origin unless the same are imprinted or marked in a manner which informs purchasers that the said products, or parts thereof, are of foreign origin, and not of domestic origin.

At all times material to this complaint there has been, and now is, among members of the buying and consuming public, including purchasers and users of tooth brushes in and throughout the United States and its territorial possessions, and in the District of Columbia, a substantial and subsisting preference for products which are wholly domestic in manufacture and origin, as distinguished from products of foreign manufacture or origin and from products which are in substantial part made of materials or parts of Japanese or foreign manufacture or origin.

PAR. 6. The practices of respondents, as aforesaid, in causing the word "Japan" and mark of origin to be concealed, obscured, and obliterated from the Japanese handles used in the making of the said tooth brushes, and in causing the word and letters "Kress U. S. A.", and the word "Kress," to appear on said handles, have had and have, and each of said practices has had and has, the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive purchasers and members of the buying and consuming public into the false and erroneous belief that the said tooth brushes, and all the parts thereof, are wholly of domestic manufacture and origin, and into the purchase thereof in reliance upon such erroneous belief, in consequence of which injury has been and is done to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in its territorial possessions, and in the District of Columbia, and in consequence of which trade in tooth brushes is unfairly diverted to respondents from their competitors who do not misrepresent the country of manufacture or origin of the whole or a substantial part of their said tooth brush products.

PAR. 7. The practices of respondent, Gibson-Thomsen Co., Inc., as alleged and set forth in paragraph 3 above, place in the hands of jobbers and retail sellers, who deal in the said products of respondent, a means wherewith to mislead and deceive purchasers and members of the buying and consuming public into the false and erroneous belief that the tooth brushes referred to, and all the parts thereof, are wholly of domestic origin, and thus into the purchase thereof in reliance upon such erroneous belief.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts or practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on February 14, A. D., 1939, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Gibson-Thomsen Co., Inc., and S. H. Kress & Co., corporations, charging them, with unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondents' answers, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by the attorneys for the Commission before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, and such testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, answers, testimony, and other evidence, the original and supplemental trial examiners' reports, exceptions to the supplemental report, and brief in support of the complaint. And the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Gibson-Thomsen Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located in the city and State of New York, and having manufacturing plant located in the city of Newark, State of New Jersey.

Respondent, S. H. Kress & Co., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located in the city and State of New York, and with branch stores located in various States of the United States and in the Territory of Hawaii.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Gibson-Thomsen Co., Inc., is now and for several years last past has been engaged in the business of making tooth brushes which it offers for sale and sells to purchasers located in various States of the United States, and when sold, causes the same to be shipped and transported from its places of business in the States of New York and New Jersey to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States. Said respondent, during all of the time herein mentioned, has been, and now is, in competition with other corporations and with firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in offering for sale and selling tooth brushes in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Respondent S. H. Kress & Co., is now, and has been for several years last past, engaged in the business of offering for sale and selling tooth brushes and other items, direct to the purchasing public, through its retail stores located in various States of the United States and in the Territory of Hawaii. Said respondent has been and now is in competition with other corporations and with firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in selling tooth brushes in the Territory of Hawaii.

PAR. 4. Respondent, Gibson-Thomsen Co., Inc., in connection with its manufacture and sale of tooth brushes, imports from Japan tooth brush handles which are made in said country and which, when received by said respondent, have stamped on the end where the bristles are to be inserted, the word "Japan"; but the respondent obliterates the word "Japan" by boring holes in the portion of the handle where the word appears and filling same with knots of bristles put in by automatic machines and held in place by a wire staple; and said respondent, in compliance with instructions of respondent, S. H. Kress & Co., has imprinted on the handles of said tooth brushes the word "Kress," or "Kress U. S. A.," and until January 1938, printed on the ends of the cartons in which the tooth brushes were packed and sold, the words, "Made in U. S. A."

PAR. 5. Respondent, S. H. Kress & Co., during the times herein mentioned, with full knowledge of the matters set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, has sold, and continues to sell, tooth brushes manufactured and sold to it by respondent, Gibson-Thomsen Co., Inc., in its branch stores located in various States of the United States and in the Territory of Hawaii, without any other marking, printing, or labeling thereon, or in connection therewith, sufficient to inform the consuming public that the handles of said tooth brushes were and are of Japanese origin and not of domestic origin.

PAR. 6. By virtue of the law requiring foreign products to be marked with the names of the country of their origin, a substantial portion of the purchasing public rely upon such markings, and are influenced thereby to distinguish and discriminate between products of foreign and of domestic origin, and products are accepted by the purchasing public to be of domestic manufacture unless the same are imprinted or marked in a manner which informs purchasers that such products are of foreign origin. There is a substantial and subsisting preference on the part of the purchasing public throughout the United States and its territorial possessions for products which are wholly domestic in manufacture and origin, as distinguished from products made from materials or parts imported from Japan, and there is a substantial prejudice on the part of the purchasing public against goods made in Japan.

PAR. 7. Respondent, Gibson-Thomsen Co., Inc., by its acts and practices herein set forth, places in the hands of retail dealers the means wherewith to mislead and deceive the purchasing public into the false and erroneous belief that said respondent's tooth brushes and all the parts thereof are wholly of domestic origin, thereby inducing the consuming public to purchase respondent's product under such erroneous belief; and as a result thereof, trade has been unfairly diverted to said respondent from its competitors who do not misrepresent the country of manufacture or origin, of the whole or a substantial part of their tooth brush products.

PAR. 8. Respondent, S. H. Kress & Co., by its acts and practices herein set forth, has misled and deceived the purchasing public into the false and erroneous belief that the tooth brushes purchased by it from respondent, Gibson-Thomsen Co., Inc., and all the parts thereof, are wholly of domestic origin, and the purchasing public, because of such erroneous belief, has purchased said respondent's tooth brushes; as a result, trade in tooth brushes has been unfairly diverted to respondent from its competitors located in the Territory of Hawaii who do not misrepresent the country of manufacture or origin of the whole, or a substantial part of their tooth brush products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answers of respondents, the testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint introduced by the attorneys for the Commission before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, the original and supplemental trial examiners' reports, exceptions to the supplemental report, and brief in support of the complaint; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Gibson-Thomsen Co., Inc., and S. H. Kress & Co., corporations, their officers, directors, agents, representatives, and employees, jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of tooth brushes in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, shall forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or by implication through the use of the word "Kress," or "Kress U. S. A.," or any other word or words of similar import or meaning stamped or imprinted on the handles of the brushes, that tooth brushes having imported handles are of domestic manufacture.

2. Using the words "Made in U. S. A.," or any other words of similar import or meaning, on cartons containing tooth brushes having imported handles.

3. Representing through the medium of labeling, stamping, or imprinting, upon the handles of brushes or on the cartons containing same, that the tooth brushes are made wholly in the United States, when in fact, the handles are imported.

4. Representing through the medium of labeling, stamping, or imprinting upon the handles of tooth brushes, or on the carton containing same, that such brushes are made in the United States, when in fact, the handles of such brushes have been imported and the name of the country of origin has been effectively obliterated or obscured.

5. Selling or distributing tooth brushes, the handles of which are imported, unless such fact is conspicuously stamped or imprinted on the tooth brush or its container.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

COMPANYCOMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 4665. Complaint, Jan. 7, 1942—Decision, June 1, 1942*

Where a corporation, engaged in buying old, worn, and previously used articles of clothing, including dresses, overcoats, men's suits, hats and shoes, and in interstate resale thereof by mail order; by means of statements in catalogues, letters, pamphlets, advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, and other printed and written material—

- (a) Represented, through such statements as "Silk dresses—10¢," that products advertised by it were made of silk, and that one or any other reasonable number thereof might be purchased for 10 cents; the facts being that many of such dresses were made in whole or in part from rayon, and could not be purchased at 10 cents except in lots of 25;
- (b) Represented that its products were obtained from companies or individuals in bankruptcy, and were in such condition and of such style and size as to be wearable by the purchaser; notwithstanding fact that most of its products were old and worn, only a small portion thereof had been obtained as aforesaid, and many of them were so out of style, of such improper sizes and in such condition as to be unsuitable for wear when received by purchaser;
- (c) Represented that in case of dissatisfaction refunds would be made without delay and without expense or inconvenience to dissatisfied customers, and that goods ordered would be delivered within a reasonable time without inconvenience or expense to purchaser; notwithstanding fact that customers were obliged to bear the expense of returning goods before receiving refunds, and, frequently, delivery was delayed for 2 months or longer, and in many instances customers were obliged to communicate repeatedly with said corporation and apply to Better Business Bureaus and other agencies for assistance in order to secure refunds or delivery; and
- (d) Further represented its products as silk through failure to disclose their content of rayon which, when made to simulate silk, is practically indistinguishable therefrom by the purchasing public, which accepted such products as silk in whole or part;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that said statements were true, thereby inducing it to purchase a substantial volume of the products in question:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Complaint

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, any by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that S. Reiffe & Sons, Inc., a corporation, individually, and doing business under the trade names, Fairmount Merchandise Co. and Crown Mail Order Co., hereinafter referred to as the respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, S. Reiffe & Sons, Inc., is a corporation, organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, doing business under the trade names, Fairmount Merchandise Co. and Crown Mail Order Co., and having its principal place of business at 160-166 Monroe Street in the city of New York, State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the business of buying and of reselling by mail order old, worn, and previously used articles of clothing, including dresses, overcoats, men's suits, hats, and shoes. Respondent causes said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business respondent has engaged in the practice of falsely representing the constituent fiber or material of which its products are made, as well as the newness, the sources of supply and physical condition of such products, the circumstances and conditions under which it makes refunds and the time within which it fills orders, such false representations being made by means of statements appearing in catalogues, letters, pamphlets, advertisements published in newspapers and magazines, and other printed and written material.

Among and typical of said false, misleading, and deceptive statements are the following:

BANKRUPT BARGAINS

Every time we succeed in capturing another big bankrupt stock, loaded with every variety of fine, clean, stylish apparel for men, women, boys and girls, we are happy in feeling that here's another joyous money-saving feast of sterling values for our many friends.

Just remember there's no possible chance for you to have any dissatisfaction with what you buy because of our guarantee to promptly return your money for anything that doesn't please you!

The word "silk" has been long and favorably known to the purchasing and consuming public as descriptive of goods made from the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

By means of the aforesaid representations and others of similar import or meaning not herein specifically set forth, the respondent represents that its products advertised as silk are made from silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, and that one or any other reasonable number of its dresses described as silk may be purchased for 10 cents; that its products are new and unused; that its products are obtained from companies or individuals in bankruptcy; that its products are in such condition and of such a style and size to be wearable by the purchaser; that in case of dissatisfaction refunds will be made to dissatisfied customers without delay and without expense or inconvenience to such dissatisfied purchasers, and that goods ordered will be delivered within a reasonable time without inconvenience or expense to the purchaser.

Such representations are false and misleading. In truth and in fact, many of the respondent's products advertised and represented as silk are made in whole or in part from rayon; dresses advertised as silk and as being for sale at 10 cents cannot be purchased except in lots of 25; although respondent sells some new clothing, most of its products are old, worn, and previously used; only a small portion of respondent's products are obtained from persons or concerns in bankruptcy; many of respondent's products are so out of style, of such improper sizes and in such physical condition as to be unsuitable for wear when received by the purchaser; dissatisfied customers before obtaining a refund are obliged to bear the expense of returning the goods, and in many instances are put to the inconvenience of repeatedly communicating with respondent and of applying to Better Business Bureaus and other agencies for assistance before receiving refunds; in many instances, goods ordered are not delivered within a reasonable time, but instead delivery is delayed for 2 months and longer, and in many instances customers are obliged to communicate repeatedly with respondent and to apply to Better Business Bureaus and other agencies for assistance in order to secure delivery.

Rayon is a chemically manufactured fiber or fabric which may be so manufactured as to simulate silk. When manufactured to simulate silk, it has the appearance and feel of silk. By reason of these qualities rayon, when manufactured to simulate silk and not designated as rayon, is by the purchasing public practically indistinguishable from silk. Products made from rayon resembling silk are accepted by the public as silk even though such products may not be designated by terms representing or implying that they are silk.

In addition to misrepresenting certain of its products by use of the word "silk" as heretofore alleged, the respondent by failing to disclose the rayon content of said products, which resemble silk, represents that said products are composed entirely of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, whereas in truth and in fact said products are in some cases composed entirely of rayon and in other cases partly of rayon.

PAR. 4. The acts and practices of the respondent as herein set forth have the tendency and capacity to, and do mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations are true. On account of these erroneous beliefs, a number of the consuming and purchasing public purchases a substantial volume of respondent's products.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on January 7, 1942, issued and on January 14, 1942, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, S. Reiffe & Sons, Inc., a corporation, individually, and doing business under the trade names, Fairmount Merchandise Co. and Crown Mail Order Co., charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission by order entered herein granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, S. Reiffe & Sons, Inc., is a corporation, organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, doing business under the trade names, Fairmount Merchandise Co. and Crown Mail Order Co., and having its principal place of business at 160-166 Monroe Street in the city of New York, State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the business of buying and of reselling by mail order, old, worn, and previously used articles of clothing, including dresses, overcoats, men's suits, hats, and shoes. Respondent causes said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business respondent has engaged in the practice of falsely representing the constituent fiber or material of which its products are made, as well as the newness, the sources of supply and physical condition of such products, the circumstances and conditions under which it makes refunds and the time within which it fills orders, such false representations being made by means of statements appearing in catalogs, letters, pamphlets, advertisements published in newspapers and magazines, and other printed and written material.

Among and typical of said false, misleading, and deceptive statements are the following:

The word "silk" has been long and favorably known to the purchasing and consuming public as descriptive of goods made from the product of the cocoon of the silkworm.

By means of the aforesaid representations and others of similar import or meaning not herein specifically set forth, the respondent represents that its products advertised as silk are made from silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm, and that one or any other reasonable number of its dresses described as silk may be purchased for 10 cents; that its products are new and unused; that its products are obtained from companies or individuals in bankruptcy; that its products are in such condition and of such a style and size as to be wearable by the purchaser; that in case of dissatisfaction refunds will be made to dissatisfied customers without delay and without expense or inconvenience to such dissatisfied purchasers, and that goods ordered will be delivered within a reasonable time without inconvenience or expense to the purchaser.

Such representations are false and misleading. In truth and in fact, many of the respondent's products advertised and represented as silk are made in whole or in part from rayon; dresses advertised as silk and as being for sale at 10 cents cannot be purchased except in lots of 25; although respondent sells some new clothing, most of its products are old, worn, and previously used; only a small portion of respondent's products are obtained from persons or concerns in bankruptcy; many of respondent's products are so out of style, of such improper sizes and in such physical condition as to be unsuitable for wear when received by the purchaser; dissatisfied customers before obtaining a refund are obliged to bear the expense of returning the goods and in many instances are put to the inconvenience of repeatedly communicating with respondent and of applying to Better Business Bureaus and other agencies for assistance before receiving refunds; in many instances, goods ordered are not delivered within a reasonable time, but instead delivery is delayed for 2 months or longer, and in many instances customers are obliged to communicate repeatedly with respondent and to apply to Better Business Bureaus and other agencies for assistance in order to secure delivery.

Rayon is a chemically manufactured fiber or fabric which may be so manufactured as to simulate silk. When manufactured to simulate silk, it has the appearance and feel of silk. By reason of these qualities rayon, when manufactured to simulate silk and not designated as rayon, is by the purchasing public practically indistinguishable from silk. Products made from rayon resembling silk are accepted by the public as silk even though such products may not be designated by terms representing or implying that they are silk.

In addition to misrepresenting certain of its products by use of the word "silk," as heretofore found, the respondent by failing to disclose the rayon content of said products, which resemble silk, represents that said products are composed entirely of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm; where in truth and in fact said products are in some cases composed entirely of rayon and in other cases partly of rayon.

PAR. 4. The acts and practices of the respondent as herein set forth have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations are true. On account of said erroneous belief, a number of the consuming and purchasing public purchases a substantial volume of respondent's products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, S. Reiffe & Sons, Inc., a corporation, individually, and doing business under the trade names, Fairmount Merchandise Co. and Crown Mail Order Co., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of clothing in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Order

1. Using the term "silk" or any other term or terms of similar import or meaning indicative of silk to describe or designate any garment which is not composed wholly of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm; Provided, however, That in the case of a garment composed in part of silk and in part of materials other than silk, such term or terms may be used as descriptive of the silk content if there are used in immediate connection or conjunction therewith in letters of at least equal size and conspicuousness words truthfully describing and designating each constituent fiber thereof.

2. Representing that any garment may be purchased for 10 cents or any other sum, when in fact such garment may be purchased at the price mentioned only in lots of more than one, without clearly disclosing the number of garments which must be purchased to obtain said garments for 10 cents or any other sum each.

3. Representing that old, used, worn, or secondhand garments are new.

4. Representing that garments secured from sources other than bankrupt estates have been obtained from companies or individuals in bankruptcy.

5. Representing that garments not in a wearable physical condition, not of a current mode for the type of article sold, or not of the size indicated by the purchaser are suitable for wear, and from including in the fulfilment of any order for garments represented as suitable for wear, any garment which is not in such condition and of such style as to be wearable by the purchaser without change or alteration or which is not of the size ordered by the purchaser.

6. Representing that refunds will be made to purchasers without delay, expense, or inconvenience to the purchaser unless and until respondent establishes and maintains the uniform practice of making all refunds in such manner, and from failing to make any refunds so represented, without expense and without unusual delay and without unusual inconvenience to the purchaser.

7. Representing that garments ordered will be delivered within a reasonable time or without inconvenience or expense to the purchaser unless and until respondent establishes and maintains the uniform practice of making all deliveries in such manner, and from failing to deliver garments so represented without expense, to the purchaser, within a reasonable time, and without unusual inconvenience to the purchaser.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF RADIO WIRE TELEVISION, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED, SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4491. Complaint, Apr. 19, 1941—Decision, June 2, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in the competitive interstate sale and distribution of radio receiving sets, accessories, and parts, and kits for use in home construction; by means of advertisements in catalogues, pamphlets, and other advertising matter—

Represented that its "One-tube battery operated all-wave set" had the power or capacity to "tune in the world"; and by the designations "Two-tube AC-DC kit" and "Two-tube AC-DC set" that such sets were two tube sets;

The facts being that such so-called "all-wave sets" did not have the power and capacity to bring in all-wave radio programs from wherever broadcast and it was not possible for the "one tube battery set," "to tune in the world," or bring in programs broadcast from stations located throughout the world; while so-called "two-tube" kits and sets were not equipped with two fully functioning tubes, but were equipped with one detecting, amplifying or receiving tube and one tuning or rectifying tube;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial number of members of the purchasing public—which believes that the greater number of actually functioning tubes there are in a set the better the performance, and buys radios in the belief that an all-wave set has power and capacity to and will bring in programs broadcast on all wave lengths from stations throughout the world—into the mistaken belief that aforesaid representations were true, with result that they purchased substantial volume of said products, thereby unfairly diverting trade to it from its competitors; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Baar, Bennett & Fullen, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Radio Wire Television, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Radio Wire Television, Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 100 Sixth Avenue, New York, N. Y. The respondent also maintains branch offices in Chicago, Ill., Boston, Mass., and Atlanta, Ga. The respondent is engaged in the sale and distribution of radio receiving sets, parts, kits for home construction of radio sets, and other radio accessories to the purchasing public located in the United States and in foreign countries.

PAR. 2. The respondent now maintains and for more than one year last past has maintained a course of trade in said products so sold and distributed by it in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries.

In the course and conduct of its said business the respondent is now and for more than one year last past has been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling and distributing radio receiving sets, radio parts and like products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its radio receiving sets, radio parts, and like products, respondent has circulated and distributed among prospective customers throughout the United States, in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries, by mail, advertisements, catalogues, pamphlets, and advertising broadsides containing many statements and representations concerning its said radio receiving sets and parts thereof. In said advertising material so disseminated said respondent has made various false and misleading statements and representations in describing said radio receiving sets and their power and capacity for reception and concerning the number of active functioning tubes in said radio sets. Among said statements and representations so made by respondent are the following:

One-tube battery operated all-wave set.

One-tube battery set, with this one tube battery set you can tune in the world.

Two-tube AC-DC kit.

Two-tube AC-DC set.

The aforesaid statements and representations, together with similar statements and representations not herein specifically set out, purport to be descriptive of said respondent's radio receiving sets, radio parts, and like products, the number of necessary functioning tubes with which they are equipped and the power and capacity for world wide reception of radio receiving sets. Said statements serve as representations on the part of the respondent to members of the purchasing public that said radio receiving sets are equipped with fully functioning tubes, and that said radio receiving sets have the power and capacity to bring in and will bring in programs broadcast from stations located throughout the world.

A substantial number of the purchasing public believe that the greater the number of actually functioning tubes in a radio receiving set, the better it performs and the greater and clearer its power of detecting, amplifying and receiving radio waves, and a substantial number of the purchasing public buy radio sets under that belief, and, further believe that an all-wave radio set has the power and capacity to and will bring in programs broadcast on all waves from stations located throughout the world.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact the respondent's "One-tube battery operated all-wave set" is not an all-wave radio set. It does not have the power and capacity to bring in all-wave radio programs from wherever broadcast. It is impossible with the respondent's one-tube battery set to tune in the world. Said set does not have the power and capacity to bring in radio programs broadcast from stations located throughout the world. Further, in truth and in fact the respondent's so-called "Two-tube AC-DC kit" and "Two-tube AC-DC set" are not two-tube radio sets. The said sets are not equipped with two fully functioning tubes, respectively, but are on the contrary, merely equipped with one detecting, amplifying or receiving tube and with one nonfunctioning or tuning beacon tube or rectifying tube. The said rectifier tubes do not serve as amplifying or detecting tubes and do not perform any recognized and customary function of a radio receiving tube in the detection, amplification and reception of radio signals or programs.

PAR. 5. Each and all of the foregoing false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent as aforesaid in describing its said radio receiving sets, radio parts and like products as hereinabove set out were and are calculated to and have had and now have a tendency and capacity to and do mislead and deceive a substantial number of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true. As a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief, so induced, a substantial portion of the purchasing public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's said products, with the result that trade has been diverted unfairly to respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing radio receiving sets and parts therefor. As a consequence thereof, injury has been done and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on April 19, 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Radio Wire Television, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, no answer thereto having been filed by respondent, a hearing was held before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and certain facts agreed upon by respondent and counsel for the Commission were read into the record and duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the agreed statement of facts, and brief in support of the complaint (respondent having waived the filing of brief and oral argument); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Radio Wire Television, Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and has its principal place of business at 100 Sixth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Respondent is engaged in the sale and distribution of radio receiving sets, radio accessories, and parts and kits for use in the home construction of radio sets. In the course of this business respondent maintains branch offices in Chicago, Ill., Boston, Mass., and Atlanta, Ga.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business respondent maintains, and for more than 1 year last past has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the conduct of this business respondent has been and is in competition with other corporations, and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of radio receiving sets, radio parts and like products in commerce throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. For the purpose of inducing the purchase of its radio receiving sets, radio parts, kits, and other radio accessories, respondent has circulated and distributed among prospective purchasers throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia, advertisements, catalogs, pamphlets, and other advertising material containing statements and representations concerning its said products. In such advertisements, catalogs, pamphlets, and other advertising material distributed as aforesaid, respondent has made various false and misleading statements and representations in describing radio receiving sets and their power and capacity for the reception of radio signals and broadcasts, and also concerning the number of active, functioning tubes in such radio sets. Typical of said statements and representations are the following:

One-tube battery operated all-wave set.

One-tube battery set, with this one tube battery set you can tune in the world.

Two-tube AC-DC kit.

Two-tube AC-DC set.

The foregoing statements and representations by respondent, together with similar statements and representations not specifically set out herein, purport to be descriptive of its radio receiving sets and parts, the number of necessary functioning tubes with which they are equipped, and the power and capacity of such sets for world-wide reception of radio broadcasts. These statements serve as representations by respondent to members of the purchasing public that its radio receiving sets are equipped with fully functioning tubes and have the power and capacity to bring in programs broadcast from stations located throughout the world.

PAR. 4. A substantial number of members of the purchasing public believes that the greater the number of the actually functioning tubes in a radio receiving set the better it performs, and the greater and clearer is its power of detecting, amplifying, and receiving radio waves, and such members of the purchasing public buy radios under the belief that an all-wave radio set has the power and capacity to and will bring in programs broadcast on all wave lengths from stations located throughout the world.

Conclusion

PAR. 5. Respondent's radio receiving set described as "One-tube battery operated all-wave set" is not an all-wave radio set. It does not have the power and capacity to bring in all-wave radio programs from wherever broadcast, and it is impossible with this one-tube battery set to "tune in the world." This set does not have the power and capacity to bring in radio programs broadcast from stations located throughout the world.

Respondent's radio receiving sets designated as "Two-tube AC-DC Kit" and "Two-tube AC-DC set" are not two-tube radio receiving sets. These sets are not equipped with two fully functioning tubes. They are in fact equipped with one detecting, amplifying, or receiving tube and with one tuning tube or rectifying tube. The tuning or rectifying tube does not serve as an amplifying or detecting tube, and does not perform any recognized and customary function in a radio set in the detection, amplification, and reception of radio signals or radio broadcasts.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations made by respondent in describing its radio receiving sets and radio parts were and are calculated to, and have had and now have the tendency and capacity to and do, mislead, and deceive a substantial number of members of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that such representations are true. As a result of such mistaken belief, such members of the purchasing public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from its competitors; and, as a consequence thereof, injury has been done and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Order

34 F. T. C.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, certain facts agreed upon by respondent and counsel for the Commission and read into the record at a hearing before an examiner of the Commission therefore duly designated by it, and brief filed in support of the complaint, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondent, Radio Wire Television, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in or in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of radio receiving sets, parts, or accessories in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or by implication:

1. That respondent's radio receiving set designated as "One-tube battery operated all-wave set" has the power or capacity to "tune in the world" or bring in radio programs from wherever broadcast; or that said set or any other receiving set has power or capacity to receive broadcast programs in excess of its actual power and capacity to receive such programs.

2. That respondent's radio receiving sets designated as "Two-tube AC-DC kit" and "Two-tube AC-DC set" are two-tube sets; or that said sets or any other receiving sets have a number of tubes in excess of the actual number of fully functioning tubes in such sets which perform recognized and customary functions in the detection, amplification and reception of radio signals or programs.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF

THE SEAMLESS RUBBER COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4509. Complaint, May 27, 1941—Decision, June 2, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in the manufacture and interstate sale and distribution of electrical heating pads composed principally of flat, flexible networks of fine wire embedded in asbestos or rubber with one or more built-in automatic heating thermostats, a four-position switch labeled "Off," "L," "M," and "H," extension cord and plug; by means of advertisements disseminated through the mails, circulars, and leaflets, and in catalogues and other advertising literature, directly or by inference—

Represented that its said heating pads were capable of generating three different sustained levels of temperature, and that temperature thereof might be controlled and the desired uniform heat obtained simply by setting the switches at points marked "L," "M," or "H";

The facts being that temperature of said pads could not be thus controlled, but if connected and turned on, the pads eventually attained the maximum temperature and were thermostatically controlled at said level, regardless of how the switches were set, sole function of which was to regulate the wattage of electric current used by the pads and thus control to some extent the speed with which the maximum temperature would be attained;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that said advertisements were true, thereby inducing it to purchase substantial quantities of said products:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. James M. Hammond for the Commission.

Mr. William F. Davis, Jr. and Mr. Benjamin H. Dorman, of Boston, Mass., and Mr. Richard A. Mahar, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that The Seamless Rubber Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be to the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, The Seamless Rubber Co., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Connecticut, with its office and principal place of business located in the city of New Haven and State of Connecticut.

Said respondent, is now, and for more than 1 year last past, has been, engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of electrical heating pads, which said pads are intended for use in the cure, mitigation, and treatment and prevention of diseases in man, and which constitute a "device" within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act. Said pads are composed principally of flat, flexible net-works of fine wire embedded in asbestos or rubber, with one or more built-in automatic heat regulating devices called thermostats connected thereto and a four position through switch labeled "Off," "L," "M," and "H" attached, and each pad is equipped with an extension cord and a plug.

PAR. 2. Respondent causes and has caused said products, when sold, to be transported from place of business in the State of Connecticut to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said heating pads in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said products by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said products, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among, and typical of, the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by circulars and leaflets and by advertisements in catalogs and other advertising literature, are the following:

Three heats with dual thermostatic control.

Turn the pointer to the desired heat, "L" meaning "low," "M" meaning "medium" and "H" meaning "high" heat.

By a mere flick of the thumb the user can set the switch, in a second, to "high," "medium," "low" or "off."

PAR. 4. Through the use of the foregoing representations and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents and has represented, directly or through inference, that its said heating pads are capable of generating and maintaining three different sustained levels of temperature, and that the temperature of said pads may be controlled and the desired uniform heat obtained by simply setting the switches at the points marked "L," "M," or "H."

PAR. 5. Such representations on the part of the respondent are confusing, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's said heating pads are not and have never been capable of generating and maintaining three different sustained levels of temperature. The temperature of said pads cannot be controlled, nor can the desired uniform heat be obtained, by setting the switches at the points marked "L," "M," or "H," or in any other manner, except by alternately attaching and detaching the connecting cords of said pads to the electric current outlets. Said pads, on the contrary, if connected to electric current and turned on, eventually attain their maximum levels of temperature and are thermostatically controlled at said levels regardless of whether the switches are set at "L," "M," or "H." The sole function of the switches attached to said pads is to regulate the input or wattage of electric current used by the pads and thus to some extent control the speed with which the maximum temperatures will be attained.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of said false advertisements with respect to its said products, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said advertisements are true, and has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, induce such portion of the public to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's said products because of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on May 27, 1941, issued and on May 29, 1941, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, The Seamless Rubber Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, The Seamless Rubber Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Connecticut, with its office and principal place of business located in the city of New Haven, State of Connecticut.

Said respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of electrical heating pads, which are intended for use in the cure, mitigation, treatment, and prevention of diseases in man, and which constitute a "device" within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act. Said pads are composed principally of flat, flexible networks of fine wire embedded in asbestos or rubber with one or more built-in automatic heat-regulating devices called thermostats connected thereto and a four-position switch labeled "Off," "L," "M," and "H" attached, and each pad is equipped with an extension cord and a plug.

PAR. 2. The respondent causes and has caused said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Connecticut to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said heating pads in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said products by the United States mails, and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said products, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among, and typical of, the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by circulars and leaflets and by advertisements in catalogs and other advertising literature, are the following:

Three heats with dual thermostatic control.

Turn the pointer to the desired heat, "L" meaning "Low," "M" meaning "Medium," and "H" meaning "High" heat.

By a mere flick of the thumb the user can set the switch, in a second, to "High," "Medium," "Low" or "Off."

PAR. 4. Through the use of the foregoing representations and others of similar import not specifically set out herein, the respondent represents and has represented, directly or through inference, that its said heating pads are capable of generating and maintaining three different sustained levels of temperature, and that the temperature of said pads may be controlled and the desired uniform heat obtained by simply setting the switches at the points marked "L," "M," or "H."

PAR. 5. Such representations on the part of the respondent are confusing, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact, respondent's said heating pads are not and have never been capable of generating and maintaining three different sustained levels of temperature. The temperature of said pads cannot be controlled, nor can the desired uniform heat be obtained by setting the switches at the points marked "L," "M," or "H" or in any other manner, except by alternately attaching and detaching the connecting cords of said pads to the electric current outlets. Said pads, on the contrary, if connected to electric current and turned on, eventually obtain the maximum level of temperature and are thermostatically controlled at said level regardless of whether the switches are set at "L," "M," or "H." The sole function of the switches attached to said pads is to regulate the input or wattage of electric current used by the pads and thus to some extent control the speed with which the maximum temperature will be attained.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of said false advertisements with respect to its said products, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said advertisements are true, and has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, induce the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's said products because of such erroneous and mistaken belief.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the substitute answer of the respondent, in which substitute answer the respondent admits all the material allegation of fact set forth in said complaint, and states that it waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, The Seamless Rubber Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of its electrical heating pads, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement:
 - (a) By means of the United States mails, or
 - (b) By any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisements represent, directly or through inference, that its electrical heating pads are each provided with a switch or other heat regulating apparatus which may be set in a manner which will provide for the maintenance of heat in said heating pads at more than one sustained level of temperature.
2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said electrical heating pads, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

1285

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

W. A. HOUSTON, TRADING AS HOUSTON'S MINERAL WELL

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4567. Complaint, Aug. 14, 1941—Decision, June 2, 1942

Where an individual, engaged in interstate sale and distribution of a mineral water; by means of advertisements in newspapers and other periodicals, and by circular letters, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, directly and by implication—

(a) Represented that his said "Houston's Mineral Water" constituted an effective treatment for and control of diabetes, use of which would enable person suffering therefrom to discontinue use of insulin;

The facts being his said water had no therapeutic value whatever in the treatment or control of said condition, and contained no ingredient which could in any way supply a deficiency of insulin, the only treatment for diabetes known to modern medicine; while use thereof by a sufferer would be exceedingly dangerous in that failure or delay in supplying insulin might increase the severity of the condition and result in diabetic coma or death;

(b) Represented falsely that his said mineral water was an effective treatment for disorders of the kidneys, kidney stones, and gall bladder disorders;

When, in fact, it had no therapeutic value in treatment thereof, and its use in the large quantities recommended might be definitely harmful where a dropsical condition existed, in aggravating it to the point where circulation was impeded, with possibly fatal results:

(c) Represented that its said water was an effective treatment for stomach disorders, indigestion, and ulcerated stomach;

The facts being it had no therapeutic value for such purposes and, as respects last named condition, lacked sufficient sodium, calcium, and magnesia to neutralize the acid of the stomach juices;

(d) Represented that said water was an effective treatment for high blood pressure, general run-down condition and ailments of the prostate gland, aided in building up the blood, and would restore health and supply most of the minerals required by the body to sustain good health;

The facts being it contained no minerals in quantities sufficient to build up the blood or benefit any general run-down condition, and no ingredient which would have any therapeutic effect upon the prostate gland; and use thereof would not restore health or supply needed minerals, and it had no greater therapeutic value than ordinary potable water; and

(e) Represented directly that his said water contained various minerals in quantities sufficient to be effective in the treatment of a large number of diseases, ailments, and conditions, listed with the minerals required therefor in parallel columns;

When in fact the minerals contained in said water were in too minute quantities to be of any therapeutic value;

With tendency and capacity of causing purchasing public to believe said water possessed therapeutic properties and values which it did not possess, thereby inducing it to purchase substantial quantities thereof because of such mistaken belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. James A. Purcell, trial examiner.

Mr. J. V. Buffington, Mr. D. C. Daniel and Mr. Carrel F. Rhodes for the Commission.

Mr. Forrest Andrews, of Knoxville, Tenn., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that W. A. Houston, individually and trading under the name Houston's Mineral Well, hereinafter referred to as respondent has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, W. A. Houston, is an individual, trading under the name Houston's Mineral Well, with his principal places of business located at New Market, Tenn. Said respondent is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a mineral water, so-called, intended for use in the treatment of certain ailments of the human body.

PAR. 2. Respondent has caused and now causes said water, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Tennessee to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein, has maintained a course of trade in his said products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among, and typical of, the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and other periodicals, and by circular letters, pamphlets, and other advertising literature distributed among purchasers and prospective purchasers, are the following:

REBUILD YOUR HEALTH WITH NATURE'S MINERAL WATER.

I have a Mineral Water that will stop Diabetes.

Houston's Mineral Water is a Natural Mineral Water. I know it will stop Sugar Diabetes.

DO YOU SUFFER FROM

DIABETES—Thousands of persons are suffering from this most dreaded disease. If you are one of the many, try drinking this wonderful water. We can furnish you copies of testimonials as to this water in the treatment of Diabetes.

KIDNEYS—The kidneys are one of the most important organs of the human system; they throw off and eliminate the impurities that have gathered in your system; they do their work with water. Houston's Mineral Water helps the kidneys do their work.

KIDNEY STONES—If you are one who suffers from kidney stones, give this water a trial. We feel that you, too, should be benefited as others have. Also GALL BLADDER.

STOMACH—In the case of stomach disorder, and ULCERED STOMACH, people who drink the water for these ailments report benefited in a short period of time.

BLOOD BUILDING—Houston's Mineral Water is an aid in building up the blood. It gives you the minerals needed to build the blood.

Indigestion—If you suffer from this common ailment, give this water a trial. You will notice improvement in a short period of time.

Prostate Trouble—We find that this water in the treatment of prostate trouble is wonderful. If you suffer from this ailment try the water a short period of time and notice improvement.

High Blood Pressure—If you suffer from this ailment we feel that it is caused from the kidneys and the condition of your blood. This water has benefited many who have suffered from this ailment.

General Run-Down Condition—That simply means down and out if you are in that state of health. Why not try this mineral water just as in all cases. Drink it instead of your regular drinking water.

So as to obtain the required minerals for the body, the easiest and most satisfactory way is to drink Houston's Mineral Water, which contains the majority of the minerals required by the human body to sustain good health.

PAR. 4. Through the use of the aforesaid representations, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent has represented, and now represents, directly and by implication, that his said water constitutes an effective treatment for the control of diabetes; that its use will enable a person suffering from diabetes to discontinue the use of insulin, and that it will stop sugar diabetes; that said water is an effective treatment for disorders of the kidney, kidney stones, indigestion, gall bladder, ailments of the prostate gland, high blood pressure, ulcered stomach, other stomach disorders and general run-down condition of the body; and that it aids in building up the blood and will rebuild health, and that it is a mineral water and contains a majority of the minerals required or needed by the body to sustain good health.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading, and constitute false advertisements.

In truth and in fact, respondent's said water is not an effective treatment for or control of diabetes. It will not enable a person suffering from diabetes to discontinue the use of insulin in the treatment of said disease, and will not stop sugar diabetes. Respondent's said water is not an effective treatment for disorders of the kidney, kidney stones, indigestion, gall bladder, ailments of the prostate gland, high blood pressure, ulcered stomach, or even any other stomach disorder or general run-down condition of the body. It will not aid in the building up of the blood, and it will not rebuild health. Said water contains minerals in such insignificant amounts that it may not properly be termed a mineral water. It does not contain a majority of the minerals required or needed for the sustaining of good health. Said water is of no therapeutic value in excess of ordinary potable water.

PAR. 6. Respondent's advertisements disseminated as aforesaid are false and misleading for the further reason that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of such representations, or material with respect to consequences which may result from the use of the preparation to which the advertisements, or under such conditions as are scribed in said advertisements, or under such conditions as are customary or usual.

In truth and in fact, respondent's advertisements fail to reveal that the only treatment for diabetes which has been accepted by the medical profession consists in the use of insulin and the regulation of diet. If the accepted treatment for insulin is carefully followed, a diabetic person may live out his normal life expectancy. On the other hand, if a diabetic person is induced by false and misleading advertisements, or otherwise, to abandon the accepted treatment, or fail to take advantage thereof, and to take in place of said accepted treatment respondent's so-called mineral water, he may expect to meet an untimely death.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading advertisements has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, cause a substantial portion of the purchasing public to believe the respondent's said water possesses therapeutic properties and values which it does not in fact possess, and has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, induce the purchasing public to purchase substantial quantities of said water as a result of such mistaken and erroneous belief.

PAR. 8. The acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on August 14, 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint upon the respondent, W. A. Houston, individually, and trading under the name of Houston's Mineral Well, charging him with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by D. C. Daniel, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Forrest Andrews, attorney for the respondent, before James A. Purcell, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, W. A. Houston, is an individual, trading under the name Houston's Mineral Well, with his principal place of business located at Newmarket in the State of Tennessee.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a mineral water designated "Houston's Mineral Water" among and between the various States of the United States. Respondent causes said mineral water, when sold, to be transported from his place of business in the State of Tennessee to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said mineral water in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his aforesaid business the respondent has disseminated, and has caused the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated, and has caused the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning his said product by various means for the purpose of inducing, and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of his said product in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and other periodicals, and by circular letters, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

REBUILD YOUR HEALTH WITH NATURE'S MINERAL WATER

PAR. 4. Through the use of the aforesaid representations, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, the respondent has represented, directly and by implication, that his said mineral water constitutes an effective treatment for, and control of, diabetes; that its use will enable a person suffering from diabetes to discontinue the use of insulin; that said mineral water is an effective treatment for disorders of the kidneys, kidney stones, gall bladder disorders, stomach disorders, ulcerated stomach, indigestion, ailments of the prostate gland, high blood pressure, and general run-down condition of the body; that said mineral water aids in building up the blood; and that its use will restore health and supply most of the minerals required by the human body to sustain good health.

1292

Findings

PAR. 5. Respondent's mineral water contains the following ingredients, as indicated by an analysis of said mineral water set out by respondent in his advertising circulars, copy of which has been received in evidence as Commission Exhibit No. 5:

	Parts per million	Grains per gallon		Parts per million	Grains per gallon
Turbidity.....	none	none	Sulphate.....	11.5	.66
Silica.....	9.0	0.52	Chlorine.....	3.0	.17
Iron and Aluminum.....	.5	.03	Lithium.....	trace	trace
Calcium.....	53.5	3.10	Strontium.....	trace	trace
Magnesium.....	25.2	1.46
Sodium and Potassium.....	5.4	.30	Total.....	260.0	15.8
Alkalinity.....	146.0	8.46

The minerals in respondent's mineral water are present in such insignificant amounts that it has no therapeutic value or any beneficial effect upon any condition of the human body in excess of that which might be supplied through the use of ordinary drinking water.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representations are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading, and constitute false advertisements.

Respondent's mineral water has no therapeutic value whatever in the treatment or control of diabetes. Diabetes is a disturbance of carbohydrate metabolism in which the blood sugar is elevated to abnormally high levels due to decrease in the internal secretion of the pancreas, among the most serious complications of which are acidosis, perforated ulcers of the bowel, and gangrene, often leading to diabetic coma and sometimes death.

The pancreas is a secreting gland which secretes insulin into the blood stream for the handling of carbohydrates through the body. This insulin is produced by certain small structures in the pancreas known as Islands of Langerhans, which are part of the endocrine system of the body. Failure of the pancreas to secrete a sufficient amount of insulin for the purposes of the body results in the condition known as diabetes; and where there has been deterioration in the pancreas by reason of destruction of all or a part of the Islands of Langerhans, it is necessary that needed insulin be supplied artificially.

There are various degrees of diabetes, depending upon the extent of the deterioration of the pancreas or its ability to function. In mild cases the condition can usually be controlled by diet. However, when the extent of the destruction of the Islands of Langerhans is such that sufficient insulin cannot be supplied for the needs of the body, there is only one treatment known to modern medicine, which is the artificial supplying of needed insulin. The treatment of diabetes with insulin does not affect the structure of the pancreas or restore the activity of the Islands of Langerhans. Respondent's mineral water preparation contains no ingredient which can in any way supply a deficiency of insulin or have any therapeutic value in the treatment of diabetes.

In addition to being valueless in the treatment of diabetes, the use of this mineral water preparation by a person suffering from diabetes is exceedingly dangerous in that the failure or delay in supplying needed insulin might increase the severity of the diabetic condition and result in diabetic coma or death.

PAR. 7. Respondent's said mineral water preparation has no therapeutic value in the treatment of disorders of the kidneys, kidney stones, or disorders of the gall bladder. In certain diseased conditions of the kidneys the water control of the body is interfered with and the water, instead of passing out through the kidneys, bowels, and skin, begins to pass out through the blood vessels into the tissues of the body, resulting in a dropsical condition. In such circumstances it is necessary to limit the intake of water. The use of respondent's mineral water in the large quantities recommended might be definitely harmful where a dropsical condition exists, resulting in aggravating such condition to the point where the circulation cannot carry on, with possible fatal results.

PAR. 8. Respondent's mineral water has no therapeutic value in the treatment of stomach disorders, indigestion, or ulcerated stomach. In the case of ulcerated stomach, neutralizing of the acid of the stomach juices is a treatment generally used to heal the ulcer. In order to obtain a sufficient amount of sodium, calcium, and magnesia to accomplish such results through the use of respondent's mineral water would require the intake of approximately a bathtub full daily.

PAR. 9. Respondent's mineral water has no value in the treatment of high blood pressure and contains no minerals in quantities sufficient to have any effect in building up the blood. In fact, the minerals in respondent's water which might have any beneficial action on the condition of the blood are present in such insignificant amounts that an ingestion of 50 gallons of this water a day would be necessary to secure the required amount of minerals.

For the same reason the use of this water will have no beneficial effect upon any general run-down condition of the body. There is no ingredient or property of this water which will have any therapeutic value or beneficial effect upon ailments of the prostate gland.

Findings

The use of respondent's mineral water will not restore health or supply the minerals required or needed for the sustaining of health. It has no greater therapeutic value than that of ordinary potable water.

PAR. 10. In connection with respondent's representation that his mineral water will supply most of the minerals required or needed by the body to restore and sustain good health, the respondent placed the following statement in his circular disseminated as above described:

MINERALS ARE REQUIRED TO TREAT AILMENTS OF THE HUMAN BODY

Through chemistry, the medical authorities have learned that in order to treat the various ailments, we must treat them with the different minerals which go to make up our body.

Below is a list of some of the various ailments, also a list containing the various minerals required in the treatment of these ailments; also a list of the minerals our water contains. In this list you will notice that HOUSTON'S MINERAL WATER is 100% in the various minerals required.

Tumors (Intestinal)-----	Chlorine, Sodium, Manganese, Silicon, Fluo- rine.

By means of the above statements the respondent represents that his mineral water contains various minerals in quantities sufficient to be effective in the treatment of the above-listed diseases and conditions, when in truth and in fact the minerals contained in respondent's mineral water are in such minute quantities that the use of said water has no value in supplying such minerals, and said mineral water has no therapeutic value in the treatment of any of the diseases and conditions above listed.

PAR. 11. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid false and misleading advertisements has the tendency and capacity to cause a substantial portion of the purchasing public to believe the respondent's said water possesses therapeutic properties and values which it does not in fact possess, and to induce the purchasing public to purchase substantial quantities of said water as a result of such mistaken and erroneous belief.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before James A. Purcell, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, and briefs filed in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, W. A. Houston, and individual trading as Houston's Mineral Well, or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of his mineral water known as Houston's Mineral Well, or any other preparation of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of the United States mails or by any means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference,

(a) That respondent's mineral water has any therapeutic value in the treatment or control of diabetes, or that said mineral water contains any ingredient which can in any way supply a deficiency of insulin or enable a person suffering from diabetes to discontinue the use of insulin.

(b) That respondent's mineral water has any therapeutic value in the treatment of disorders of the kidneys, kidney stones, disorders of the gall bladder, stomach disorders, indigestion, ulcerated stomach, or any general run-down condition of the body.

(c) That respondent's mineral water has any value in the treatment of high blood pressure or that its use will have any effect in building up the blood.

(d) That respondent's mineral water has any therapeutic value or beneficial effect in the treatment of ailments of the prostate gland.

(e) That the use of respondent's mineral water will restore health or supply any minerals needed for the sustaining of health.

(f) That respondent's mineral water contains any minerals in quantities sufficient to be of any value in the treatment of acidity, acne, apoplexy, anemia, bed wetting, bright's disease, colitis, constipation, cystitis, diarrhea, epilepsy, jaundice, jerking in limbs, enlarged liver, liver trouble, liver tumors, lumbago, low blood pressure, nerve nourishment, neuritis, bloody stools, acid stomach, inability to digest food, underweight, weakness, arthritis, bone building, bad complexion, eczema, gas and gastritis, goiter, heart trouble, insomnia, rheumatism, or intestinal tumors.

(g) That the respondent's mineral water has any therapeutic value in the treatment of any disease or condition of the human body in excess of that afforded through the use of ordinary drinking water.

2. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by any means, for the purpose of inducing or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of respondent's mineral water, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof and the respective subdivisions thereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

THE THOMAS MANAGEMENT CORPORATION, ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 23, 1914

Docket 4422. Complaint, Dec. 18, 1940—Decision, June 5, 1942

Where two organizations and six individuals, engaged in sale and distribution of hair preparations for external and internal use, to wit—

I. A corporation to which, in consideration of certain payments, a common law trust granted the exclusive right to manufacture and sell all chemicals, products, and supplies used in the administration of the so-called "The Thomas Hair and Scalp Treatment," and which, in turn, agreed to sell and deliver supplies to any one licensed or authorized by said trust to give such treatments, and to no other, excepting sales by mail to individuals for home treatment; and which, furthermore, prepared newspaper advertisements to be purchased and used by owners of the various hair treatment offices, and, when desired, for a fee also performed services of selecting advertising media, selecting advertisements to be run, preparing financial statements, and buying certain supplies for such owners;

II. Said common law trust, owner of all the stock of said corporation and holder also of certain trade names, copyrights, formulae, and secret processes used by its licensees in the treatment of the hair and scalp according to "The Thomas" system, and which, as above noted, granted said corporation exclusive right to manufacture and sell all chemicals, etc. used in administration of hair and scalp treatment in question, and which also granted to others the exclusive right in designated territories to use said formulae, etc., in the administration of the treatment to the purchasing public; and

III. Six individuals, namely, the president of said corporation and life beneficiary of said trust, and five others, i. e., his wife, two sons and two daughters-in-law, themselves engaged, either separately or with others, in operating hair treatment offices in various cities under the name "The Thomas," which offices bought from said corporation all their supplies and all the home treatment kits which they sold;

In advertisements purchased by said individuals and widely disseminated through the mails, in newspapers and periodicals, by radio continuities, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, directly and by implication—

(a) Represented that said preparations and treatments constituted a cure or remedy for dandruff or itching scalp and were effective in destroying the "fask bacillus of Unna," which was responsible for dandruff; would stop abnormal loss of hair, cause new hair to grow, and promote hair growth on thin and bald spots, preventing and curing baldness;

The facts being they had no therapeutic value in treatment of dandruff in excess of removal of dandruff scales, were not an effective treatment except in furnishing relief in cases which were not caused in systemic or constitutional conditions; would not destroy the germ in question, which, furthermore, had not been proven to be an etiological factor of dandruff; and had no therapeutic properties which would otherwise be effective in bringing about the results above set forth; and

- (b) Falsely represented that their preparation "Trichovita" for internal use supplied elements essential to healthful growth of hair, and that their other preparation for such use, "Trichotone," rejuvenated the formative cells from which the hair grows, and that both were effective in stimulating hair growth;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the belief that such statements were true, thereby inducing it, because of such mistaken belief, to purchase the treatments and products in question:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. C. A. Vilas, trial examiner.

Mr. Karl Stecher, for the Commission.

Pope, Ballard & Loos, of Washington, D. C., and Rogers, Woodson & Rogers and Eckert & Peterson, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that The Thomas Management Corporation, a corporation, and Paul A. Thomas, Sr., Catherine M. Thomas, Paul A. Thomas, Jr., and Norbert J. Thomas, as individuals, and as officers of said corporation; Paul A. Thomas Trust, and Paul A. Thomas, Sr., Catherine M. Thomas, and Norbert J. Thomas, as individuals, and as trustees of said trust; and Ruth Thomas and Madeline Thomas, as individuals, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The Thomas Management Corporation, is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business in the city of Chicago and State of Illinois. All of the stock of said corporation is owned by Paul A. Thomas Trust, hereinafter referred to. Paul A. Thomas, Sr., is president, Catherine M. Thomas is vice president, Paul A. Thomas, Jr., is treasurer, and Norbert J. Thomas is secretary of said corporation.

Paul A. Thomas Trust, is a common law trust, of which Paul A. Thomas, Sr., Catherine M. Thomas, and Norbert J. Thomas are trustees. Paul A. Thomas, Sr. is the sole beneficiary of said trust.

The principal office of said trust is in Chicago, Ill. Said trust owns all of the stock of The Thomas Management corporation, hereinabove referred to.

Paul A. Thomas, Sr., as an individual, operates places of business under the name "The Thomas" in the cities of Denver, Colo., Atlanta, Ga., Seattle, Wash., Minneapolis, Minn., Toledo, Ohio, and Portland, Oreg.

Paul A. Thomas, Jr. and Ruth Thomas, his wife, trading as copartners operate a place or places, of business under the name "The Thomas" in the city of Cleveland, Ohio.

Norbert J. Thomas, and Madeline Thomas, his wife, trading as copartners, operate a place, or places, of business under the name "The Thomas'" in the city of Detroit, Mich.

Catherine M. Thomas, as an individual, operates a place or places of business under the name "The Thomas'" in the city of Milwaukee, Wis.

Norbert J. Thomas and Paul A. Thomas, Jr., trading as copartners, operate places of business under the name "The Thomas'" in the cities of Chicago, Ill., New York, N. Y., Brooklyn, N. Y., Buffalo, N. Y., Rochester, N. Y., Los Angeles, Calif., Oakland, Calif., San Francisco, Calif., Baltimore, Md., Newark, N. J., Philadelphia, Pa., Pittsburgh, Pa., St. Louis, Mo., and Washington, D. C.

The respondent, The Thomas Management Corporation, also maintains and operates retail stores in the cities of Cincinnati, Ohio, Columbus, Ohio, Dayton, Ohio, Indianapolis, Ind., Louisville, Ky, Albany, N. Y., Boston, Mass., Milwaukee, Wis., New Orleans, La., Providence, R. I., and Syracuse, N. Y., which places of business are operated under the name "The Thomas'" and which deal exclusively in the products sold and distributed by the respondents.

The individual respondents, acting in conjunction and cooperation with the corporate respondent, direct and control all the business activities and policies of the various retail stores including the various stores operated by the individual respondents, either individually or as copartnerships. In connection with the control of the business activities of the various stores, the respondents prepare all advertising copy to be used by such stores which is forwarded by the corporate respondent to the various stores for insertion in newspapers and periodicals as directed by the respondents. Other and similar advertising is placed with newspapers and periodicals directly by the respondents.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business the respondents, for several years last past, have been engaged in the sale and distribution of various cosmetic and medicinal preparations for external and internal use in the treatment of conditions of the hair and scalp. Respondents cause said preparations, when sold, to be transported from the place of business of the corporate respondent in the State of Illinois to the various retail stores, owned and operated as hereinabove set forth and to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said cosmetic and medicinal preparations in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondents' methods of sale of their cosmetic preparations for the hair for external use fall into two classes. In the first class, respondents through extensive advertising to the effect that they can diagnose and cure scalp trouble, stop falling hair, and re-grow hair, induce persons to come to their places of business where the various cosmetic preparations for the hair are administered and sold to the purchaser. In the second class of cases, where it is not possible to have the purchaser come to their place of business at intervals to purchase their cosmetic preparations or have them administered by respondents, an assortment of products known as "Home Treatment Kits" are sold. These "Kits" contain the same cosmetic preparations for the hair as are sold and administered to the first class of customers herein referred to, and the purchaser of the Home Treatment Kit then administers the preparation himself. Respondents likewise sell to their customers medicinal preparations for internal use.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business the respondents have disseminated, and are now disseminating, and have caused, and are now causing, the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said products by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said products, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said products in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false, misleading and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, by radio continuities, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

SO YOU WILL NEVER BE BALD.

Eighteen years ago Paul A. Thomas devised the first accurate, reliable method of treating local scalp disorders. Then, as today, Thomas treatment ended dandruff, stopped abnormal hairfall and promoted hair growth on thin and bald spots. It consistently produces these results—and because of its success, The Thomas' have grown to an organization with 45 offices throughout the United States and Canada.

Today Thomas treatment is more effective than it has ever been. New methods are constantly being tested and when something is proved to be of definite value, Thomas clients are the first to receive benefit. Basically, however, Thomas treatment remains the same, because no method has ever been found which produces results as consistently as does the original Thomas method.

Call for a free scalp examination today and see for yourself just how Thomas treatment ends dandruff, stops falling hair and promotes hair growth. Examination and treatment are always in private.

WHY BE BALD?
SEE THOMAS TODAY

Modern science has made it unnecessary for any man to fear baldness. It is known that baldness results from one or more of 14 local scalp disorders. Thomas experts recognize each of these 14 conditions and adapt the reliable, proved Thomas treatment to overcome the ones which are specifically causing your loss of hair. * * *

Complaint

34 F. T. C.

Within a remarkably short time after you start Thomas treatment your dandruff disappears, hair-fall stops, and new hair starts to grow in the thin and bald spots.

 WHY BECOME BALD?

HEED THESE DANGER SIGNALS

BALDNESS can be prevented! When your scalp becomes sick, obvious danger signals such as (1) thinning hair, (2) itching scalp, and (3) dandruff, warn you that a baldness-producing condition exists. You can prevent baldness by heeding these positive warnings and ridding your scalp of the local causes of hair loss which are attacking your hair-growing structure.

More than a quarter-million persons have avoided baldness by permitting The Thomas' to rid their scalps of local scalp ills. The Thomas' 20 years of experience endows them with unusual knowledge, skill, and ability to overcome any of the 14 local conditions which cause 90% of all baldness.

Over one-quarter million persons had Thomas' treatment. Today they enjoy healthy heads of hair.

It has been clearly demonstrated for twenty years that THOMAS' can re-grow hair.

 BALDNESS FOLLOWS DANDRUFF

Eight of the next ten bald-headed persons you meet became bald because they failed to rid their scalps of dandruff infection.

 THOMAS ENDS DANDRUFF GROWS HAIR

Dandruff clogs the hair follicle, causes itchy scalp, falling hair, and keeps new hair from replacing hair which has dropped out. Because there are several types of dandruff, cure-all surface remedies usually do not correct the trouble. One of the most dangerous types of dandruff is caused by a germ deep in the scalp, known as flask bacillia of Unna!

Thomas treatment attacks this destructive germ by modern therapeutic agents and restores the scalp to a normal healthy condition. When your scalp is once rid of baldness producing germs, hairfall stops, and new hair starts to grow again.

 BALDNESS IS NOT INHERITED

Scientists who study the laws of inheritance have found that "acquired characteristics" are not inherited. Baldness is in all cases acquired many years after birth and it is therefore agreed that it is not inherited.

* * * * *

Forget the superstitious notion that hair can NEVER be regrown on thin or bald spots. Hair roots seldom die. Science tells us that more than 85% of all cases of hair loss are the "local" type—and consequently will respond to proper scalp treatment.

BALDNESS

WORRY YOU

SEE ME TODAY! I am a Thomas scalp expert. I know how to recognize and treat the 14 local scalp troubles which cause 90% of all baldness. I know how to end your dandruff; how to stop your abnormal hair-fall; and how to promote normal hair growth for you. My knowledge and skill in treating local scalp conditions is based on The Thomas' 20 years of success.

Quit worrying about baldness! Thomas treatment has helped a quarter-million other persons to end scalp troubles, and Thomas can help you, too.

With respect to respondents' medicinal preparations for internal use, respondents make the following representations:

TRICHOVITA

LIFE FOR THE HAIR

A scientifically prepared mineralization product. Taken as directed re-mineralizes the system, supplying those elements essential to the healthful growth of the hair.

TRICHOTONE

A scientifically prepared hair stimulant. Taken as directed rejuvenates the matrix (the mother of the hair) from which the hair of the scalp grows.

PAR. 5. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondents represent directly and by implication that said preparations constitute a cure or remedy for dandruff and constitute a competent and effective treatment for all forms of dandruff and itching scalp; that said preparations have therapeutic properties which are effective in destroying the germ causing dandruff; that the use of said preparations will stop abnormal loss of hair, and cause new hair to grow, and promote the normal growth of hair on thin or bald spots; and that the use of said preparations will revive the growth of hair, prevent baldness and constitutes a cure or remedy for baldness and a competent and effective treatment therefor. Respondents further represent that the internal use of their preparation "Trichovita" supplies elements essential to the healthful growth of hair and that the internal use of their preparation "Trichotone" stimulates the hair and rejuvenates the formative cells from which the hair grows; and that both of said preparations are effective in stimulating the growth of hair.

Complaint

34 F. T. C.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representations used and designated by the respondents as hereinbefore set out are grossly exaggerated, misleading and untrue. Respondents' preparations are composed of the following ingredients in various combinations:

Petrolatum,	Soft Soap,
Wool fat,	Resorcinol,
Mineral Oil,	Alcohol,
Castor Oil,	Phenolic material,
Glycerine,	Salicylic Acid,
Sulphur,	Boric Acid,
Calomel,	Quinine Bisulphate,
Oxyquinoline Sylphate,	Capsicum,
Pilocarpine,	Cantharides.

Respondents' preparations do not constitute a cure or remedy for dandruff or a competent or effective treatment for any form of dandruff or itching scalp in excess of furnishing temporary relief from the symptoms of itching and the temporary removing of dandruff scales. Said preparations, while having some therapeutic and germicidal qualities will not destroy the germ which allegedly causes dandruff. Said preparations have no therapeutic properties which would be effective in causing new hair to grow and their use will not stop the abnormal loss of hair or promote a normal growth of hair on thin and bald spots. Respondents' preparations will not revive the growth of hair and will not prevent baldness and are not a cure or remedy for baldness and have no therapeutic value in the treatment of baldness.

Respondents' preparations "Trichovita" and "Trichotone" do not supply elements essential to the growth of hair and have no therapeutic value whatsoever in stimulating the growth of hair and will not rejuvenate the formative cells from which hair grows.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that all such statements and representations are true, and induces a substantial portion of the purchasing public to purchase respondents' products hereinabove referred to because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, engendered as above set forth.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on December 18, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, The Thomas Management Corporation, a corporation, and Paul A. Thomas, Sr., Catherine M. Thomas, Paul A. Thomas, Jr., and Norbert J. Thomas, individually, and as officers of said corporation; Paul A. Thomas Trust, and Paul A. Thomas, Sr., Catherine M. Thomas, and Norbert J. Thomas, individually, and as trustees of said trust; and Ruth Thomas and Madeline Thomas, individuals, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answers thereto, testimony and other evidence were introduced before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was agreed that a statement of the facts signed and executed by counsel for respondents and Richard P. Whiteley, assistant chief counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as facts in this proceeding in lieu of the taking of additional testimony and evidence in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts and the record herein to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon (including inferences which it may draw from said stipulated facts and the evidence and record already made herein), and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Respondents expressly waived the filing of a report upon the evidence by the trial examiner. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, stipulation, and record, said stipulation having been approved, accepted, and filed; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, The Thomas Management Corporation, is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, having its principal place of business and office in Chicago, Ill.

Respondent, Paul A. Thomas, Sr., is president of The Thomas Management Corporation and a trustee of respondent, Paul A. Thomas Trust.

Respondent, Catherine M. Thomas is vice president of The Thomas Management Corporation, and a trustee of respondent, Paul A. Thomas Trust.

Respondent, Paul A. Thomas, Jr., is treasurer of The Thomas Management Corporation.

Respondent, Norbert J. Thomas is secretary of The Thomas Management Corporation, and a trustee of the respondent, Paul A. Thomas Trust.

Respondent, Paul A. Thomas Trust is a common law trust having its principal office in Chicago, Ill. Paul A. Thomas, Sr., Catherine M. Thomas, and Norbert J. Thomas are trustees of said respondent and Paul A. Thomas, Sr., is the beneficiary for life of said trust. Said trust owns all of the stock of respondent The Thomas Management Corporation, and controls and directs, and has controlled and directed the policies and operations of said corporation.

Respondent, Paul A. Thomas, Sr., is the father of Paul A. Thomas, Jr., and Norbert J. Thomas, and is the husband of respondent, Catherine M. Thomas. Madeline Thomas is the divorced wife of Norbert J. Thomas. Ruth Thomas is the wife of Paul A. Thomas, Jr.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Paul A. Thomas Trust, in addition to owning all of the stock of respondent The Thomas Management Corporation, is the holder of certain trade names, copyrights, formulae, and secret processes used by its licensees in the treatment of conditions of the hair and scalp according to a system usually designated as "The Thomas'." In consideration of certain payments, it has granted to respondent The Thomas Management Corporation the exclusive right to manufacture and sell all chemicals, products, and supplies used in the administration of The Thomas' hair and scalp treatment. The Thomas Management Corporation has agreed that it will sell and deliver the necessary chemicals and supplies to any person, firm, or corporation licensed or authorized by the Paul A. Thomas Trust to give Thomas treatments for hair and scalp and will not sell any of such chemicals or supplies to any person, firm, or corporation not so licensed or authorized by said trust, except that this does not prohibit The Thomas Management Corporation from selling chemicals or supplies by mail to individuals for home treatment.

In return for certain specified payments, the Paul A. Thomas Trust grants to others the exclusive right in designated territories to use the formulae, trade names, copyright names, and secret processes owned by the Trust in the conduct of the treatment offices for the administration of The Thomas' hair and scalp treatments to members of the public. Such agreements provide that the licensee shall use in such business only chemicals, products, and supplies furnished or authorized by said trust and that the licensee shall not charge less than certain minimum prices for various hair and scalp treatments offered to the public. The agreement contains provisions for securing payment of amounts which may be due under the terms thereof to the Paul A. Thomas Trust.

Pursuant to licenses from Paul A. Thomas Trust, the individual respondents in this proceeding, either separately or in conjunction with other respondents or in conjunction with others not respondents in this proceeding, operate hair treatment offices under the name The Thomas' in the following places:

- Paul A. Thomas, Sr.----- Atlanta, Georgia; Seattle, Washington; Minneapolis, Minnesota; Toledo, Ohio; and Portland, Oregon.
- Paul A. Thomas, Jr., and Ruth Thomas----- Cleveland, Ohio.
- Norbert J. Thomas and Madeline Thomas----- Detroit, Michigan.
- Norbert J. Thomas, Paul A. Thomas, Jr., and Paul A. Thomas, Sr.----- Chicago, Illinois.
- Norbert J. Thomas, Paul A. Thomas, Jr., and F. Mills----- Brooklyn, Rochester, Buffalo, and New York, New York.
- Norbert J. Thomas, Paul A. Thomas, Jr., and Ruth Thomas----- Los Angeles, Oakland, and San Francisco, California.
- Norbert J. Thomas, Paul A. Thomas, Jr., and C. R. Swinehart----- Baltimore, Maryland.
- Norbert J. Thomas, Paul A. Thomas, Jr., and Catherine M. Thomas----- Newark, New Jersey.
- Norbert J. Thomas, Paul A. Thomas, Jr., and L. Mills----- Pittsburgh, and Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.
- Norbert J. Thomas, Paul A. Thomas, Jr., and E. Meyer----- St. Louis, Missouri.
- Norbert J. Thomas, Paul A. Thomas, Jr., and J. Kroll----- Washington, D. C.

Findings

34 F. T. C.

Also pursuant to licenses from Paul A. Thomas Trust, the following parties conduct hair treatment offices under the name The Thomas' in the places designated:

G. L. McClellan-----	Cincinnati, Columbus, and Dayton, Ohio; Indianapolis, Indiana; and Louisville, Kentucky.
M. F. Gerrigaty-----	Albany, New York.
F. Mills-----	Boston, Massachusetts.
J. G. Stample-----	New Orleans, Louisiana.
W. T. Graham-----	Providence, Rhode Island.
H. P. Phares-----	Syracuse, New York.

Respondent, The Thomas Management Corporation, prepares advertisements relating to The Thomas' hair and scalp treatments and offers the same for sale to the owner or owners of the various hair treatment offices listed above, but does not itself advertise to the general public. Such of the advertisements so offered as may be desired by the owner or owners of the various treatment offices are purchased by them and run in newspapers of their selection. The owner or owners of some of the treatment offices employ The Thomas Management Corporation to select advertising media, select advertisements to be run, prepare financial statements, and buy certain supplies. For some offices the services performed by The Thomas Management Corporation include all those mentioned, and for other offices they are more limited. The services rendered to individual treatment offices are determined by the owner or owners thereof, and when The Thomas Management Corporation is employed it charges a fee for the services rendered.

Pursuant to the license from Paul A. Thomas Trust, the local treatment offices buy from The Thomas Management Corporation all of the products used by them in rendering hair and scalp treatments and also all of the "Home Treatment Kits" which they sell. The Thomas Management Corporation, pursuant to license from the Paul A. Thomas Trust, pays to said trust royalties on such sales for said license privileges.

Paul A. Thomas Trust does not control the business activities, policies, or advertising of the hair treatment offices owned by respondents, or by respondents and others not respondents except to maintain such inspection and supervision as may be necessary to insure that licensees conform to the terms of the license and pay the said trust such royalties as may be due it thereunder.

PAR. 3. Respondents who own and operate hair treatment offices have purchased from The Thomas Management Corporation advertisements prepared by that corporation, and the respondent purchasers have caused the advertisements so purchased to be run in newspapers circulated by the United States mails and in States other than the States in which such newspapers are published. As a result of such advertisements some persons have and do, come from States other than the State in which such treatment offices are located to respondents' treatment offices to purchase Thomas treatments, and after coming to such treatment offices some of them purchase Thomas "Home Treatment Kits."

PAR. 4. The persons rendering Thomas treatments for the respondents operating treatment offices at the places heretofore specified, and the individual respondents themselves, are not doctors, dermatologists, hair and scalp specialists, or experts in the medical sense; cannot diagnose scalp and hair diseases; do not of themselves know that fourteen local scalp conditions cause ninety percent of all baldness; and do not of themselves know how to recognize the etiological factors of hair loss.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent, The Thomas Management Corporation, for several years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of various cosmetic and medicinal preparations for external and internal use in the treatment of conditions of the hair and scalp. Said respondent, causes said preparations, when sold to be transported from the place of business of the said respondent in the State of Illinois to the various treatment offices located, owned, and operated as hereinabove set forth.

Said respondent, The Thomas Management Corporation, has also shipped direct from its place of business in Chicago, Ill., to the ultimate purchasers or consumers thereof some "Home Treatment Kits" to persons in the State of Illinois, and has also shipped a few "Home Treatment Kits" to the ultimate purchasers or consumers thereof in States other than the State of Illinois who had previously purchased treatments or products from some one of the aforesaid Thomas treatment offices.

PAR. 6. Through extensive advertising to the effect that they can diagnose and cure scalp trouble, stop falling hair, and re-grow hair, respondents who operate treatment offices induce persons to come to their treatment offices. This business falls into two classes: (a) The sale of a course of treatment to persons coming to the treatment offices, in the course of which treatment most of the various preparations for the hair and scalp are administered and a few cosmetic preparations are given to the persons to be self-administered at home between treatments; and (b) the sale of an assortment of products known as a "Home Treatment Kit" to persons who are unable to come to their place of business at intervals to have the cosmetic preparations administered by said respondents. These kits contain the same preparations for the hair and scalp as are sold and administered to the first class of customers herein referred to, and the purchaser of the "Home Treatment Kit" administers the preparations himself.

In addition to the preparations hereinabove referred to, respondents sell and deliver medicinal preparations for internal use known as "Trichotone" and "Trichovita."

PAR. 7. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, respondents who operate treatment offices have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, advertisements concerning their said treatments, as specified in paragraph 3; and said respondents, by the United States mails, and by various means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, advertisements concerning their said treatments for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said treatments and products.

Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in said advertisements prepared by respondent, The Thomas Management Corporation, and disseminated and cause to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, by radio continuities, and by circulars, leaflets, pamphlets, and other advertising literature, are the following:

BALD

(Picture of man in laboratory attire

Eighteen years ago Paul A. Thomas devised the first accurate, reliable method of treating local scalp disorders. Then, as today, Thomas treatment ended dandruff, stopped abnormal hairfall and promoted hair growth on thin and bald spots. It consistently produces these results—and because of its success, The Thomas' have grown to an organization with 45 offices throughout the United States and Canada.

Today Thomas treatment is more effective than it has ever been. New methods are constantly being tested and when something is proved to be of definite value, Thomas clients are the first to receive benefit.

Basically, however, Thomas treatment remains the same, because no method has ever been found which produces results as consistently as does the original Thomas method.

Call for a free scalp examination today and see for yourself just how Thomas treatment ends dandruff, stop falling hair and promotes hair growth. Examination and treatment are always in private.

WHY BE BALD?

SEE THOMAS TODAY

Modern science has made it unnecessary for any man to fear baldness. It is known that baldness results from one or more of 14 local scalp disorders. Thomas experts recognize each of these 14 conditions and adapt the reliable, proved Thomas treatment to overcome the ones which are specifically causing your loss of hair.

Within a remarkably short time after you start Thomas treatment your dandruff disappears, hair-fall stops, and new hair starts to grow on the thin and bald spots. * * *

WHY BECOME BALD?

Heed these Danger Signals—
Avoid the Road to Baldness

BALDNESS can be prevented! When your scalp becomes sick, obvious danger signals such as (1) thinning hair, (2) itching scalp, and (3) dandruff, warn you that a baldness-producing condition exists. You can prevent baldness by heeding these positive warnings and ridding your scalp of the local causes of hair loss which are attacking your hair-growing structure.

More than a quarter-million persons have avoided baldness by permitting The Thomas' to rid their scalps of local scalp ills. The Thomas' 20 years of experience endows them with unusual knowledge, skill, and ability to overcome any of the 14 local conditions which cause 90% of all baldness.

Over one-quarter million persons had THOMAS' treatment. Today they enjoy healthy heads of hair.

* * * * *

It has been clearly demonstrated for twenty years that THOMAS' can re-grow hair.

* * * * *

BALDNESS FOLLOWS DANDRUFF

Eight of the next ten bald-headed persons you meet became bald because they failed to rid their scalps of dandruff infection.

* * * * *

THOMAS ENDS DANDRUFF GROWS HAIR

Dandruff clogs the hair follicle, causes itchy scalp, falling hair, and keeps new hair from replacing hair which has dropped out. Because there are several types of dandruff, cure-all surface remedies usually do not correct the trouble. One of the most dangerous types of dandruff is caused by a germ deep in the scalp, known as flask bacilli of Unna.

Thomas treatment attacks this destructive germ by modern therapeutic agents and restores the scalp to a normal healthy condition. When your scalp is once rid of baldness producing germs, hair-fall stops, and new hair starts to grow again.

* * * * *

BALDNESS IS NOT INHERITED

Scientists who study the laws of inheritance have found that "acquired characteristics" are not inherited. Baldness is in all cases acquired many years after birth and it is therefore agreed that it is not inherited.

* * * * *

Forget the superstitious notion that hair can NEVER be regrown on thin or bald spots. Hair roots seldom die. Science tells us that more than 85% of all cases of hair loss are the "local" type—and consequently will respond to proper scalp treatment.

PAR. 8. The ingredients contained in various combinations in respondents' preparations for external application for the hair and scalp herein referred to are as follows:

Acid Boric	Coconut Oil Soap
Acid Lactic	Liquor Carbonis.
Acid Linoleic and Linolenic	Methyl Salicylate.
Acid Salicylic	Menthol.
Alcohol—Benzyl	Oil—Castor.
Alcohol—Cetyl	Oil—Sulphonated Castor.
Balsam Peru	Oil—Cadeberry.
Betanaphthol—Medicinal	Oil—Mineral
Calomel	Alcohol—Ethyl
Cantharides	Oil—Olive Edible
Capsicum	Oil—Olive Sulphonated
Ceresin	Oil—Pine Needles (Siberian)
Cholestrin	Oil—Theobroma
Ethyl Acetate	Osyquinoline Sulphate
Eucalyptol	Petrolatum
Glycerin	Pilocarpine Hydrochloride
Glycerin Monosterate	Quinine Sulphate

The ingredients contained in the preparations for internal use are as follows:

Trichotone:	Trichovita:
Calcarea Phos. 3x.	Calcium Phosphate.
Magnesia Phos. 3x.	Precipitated Sulphur.
Ferrum Phos. 3x.	Silica.
Natrum Phos. 3x.	Reduced Iron.
Kali Phos. 3x.	Calcium Fluoride.
	Magnesium Phosphate.
	Magnesium Peroxide.

PAR. 9. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations, and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, respondents represent directly and by implication, that said preparations and treatments constitute a cure or remedy for dandruff and constitute a competent and effective treatment for dandruff and itching scalp; that said preparations and treatments have therapeutic properties which are effective in destroying the germ allegedly causing dandruff (the flask bacillus of Unna); that the use of said preparations and treatments will stop abnormal loss of hair, cause new hair to grow, and promote the normal growth of hair on thin or bald spots; and that the use of said preparations and treatments will revive the growth of hair, prevent baldness, and constitute a cure or remedy for baldness and a competent and effective treatment therefor. Respondents further represent that the internal use of their preparation "Trichovita" supplies elements essential to the healthful growth of hair, and that the internal use of their preparation "Trichotone" stimulates the hair and rejuvenates the formative cells from which the hair grows; and that both of said preparations are effective in stimulating the growth of hair.

PAR. 10. Respondents' preparations do not constitute a cure or remedy for dandruff, or have therapeutic value in the treatment of dandruff in excess of the removal of the dandruff scales; nor are they an effective treatment for any form of itching scalp in excess of furnishing relief in cases which are not caused by systemic or constitutional conditions. Said preparations will not destroy the germ which allegedly causes dandruff (the flask bacillus of Unna), nor has it been proved that the flask bacillus of Unna is an etiological factor of dandruff. Said preparations have no therapeutic properties which would be effective in causing new hair to grow and their use will not prevent the abnormal loss of hair or promote a normal growth of hair on thin and bald spots. Respondents' preparations will not induce the growth of hair, will not prevent baldness, are not a cure or remedy for baldness, and have no effective therapeutic value in the treatment of baldness.

Respondents' preparations "Trichovita" and "Trichotone" do not supply elements essential to the growth of hair, have no therapeutic value whatsoever in stimulating the growth of hair, and will not rejuvenate the formative cells from which the hair grows.

PAR. 11. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the belief that all such statements and representations are true, and because of such mistaken and erroneous belief engendered as above set forth, induces a substantial portion of the purchasing public to purchase respondents' treatments and products hereinabove referred to.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answers of the respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and a stipulation as to the facts entered into between counsel for the respondents herein and Richard P. Whiteley, assistant chief counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondents findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, The Thomas Management Corporation, a corporation, and Paul A. Thomas, Sr., Catherine M. Thomas, Paul A. Thomas, Jr., and Norbert J. Thomas, individually, and as officers of said corporation; Paul A. Thomas Trust, and Paul A. Thomas, Sr., Catherine M. Thomas, and Norbert J. Thomas, individually, and as trustees of said trust; and Ruth Thomas and Madeline Thomas, individuals; jointly or severally, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of various cosmetic and medicinal preparations for external and internal use in the treatment of conditions of the hair and scalp, or any other preparations of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the names now used or any other name or names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated, by means of the United States mails, or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, any advertisement which represents, directly or through inferencé:

- (a) That respondents' preparations constitute a cure or remedy for dandruff, or have therapeutic value in the treatment of dandruff, in excess of the removal of dandruff scales; or are an effective treatment for any form of itching scalp in excess of affording temporary relief from the symptom of itching when such itching is not caused by systemic or constitutional conditions.

Order

(b) That dandruff is caused by the flask bacilli of Unna and that said preparations will destroy such germs.

(c) That said preparations have therapeutic properties which are effective in inducing the growth of hair or in causing new hair to grow.

(d) That the use of said preparations will prevent the abnormal loss of hair or induce a normal growth of hair on thin and bald spots.

(e) That said preparations will prevent baldness, or are a cure or remedy for baldness, or have any effective therapeutic value in the treatment of baldness.

(f) That respondents' preparations "Trichovita" and "Trichoton" supply elements essential to the growth of hair, or have any therapeutic value in stimulating the growth of hair.

(g) That said preparations "Trichovita" and "Trichotone" will rejuvenate the formative cells from which hair grows.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated, by any means, any advertisement for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said preparations in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

ULTRA-VIOLET PRODUCTS, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4407. Complaint, Dec. 7, 1940—Decision, June 8, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in the manufacture and interstate sale and distribution of its "Life Lite" ultraviolet lamp; by means of advertisements in newspaper and periodicals, and other media, directly and by implication—

(a) Represented that its said product was a sun lamp which would afford benefits to the skin and to the general health comparable to those afforded by natural sunlight;

The facts being that sun lamps, as known and designated by physicians and chemists, emit ultraviolet rays within the range of natural sunlight, of from 2,900 to 3,900 angstrom units, while the wave length of 89.2 percent of the rays emitted by said "Life Lite" lamp was approximately 2,540 angstroms, placing it within the category of therapeutic lamps, rays of which are more intense and consequently harsher and more irritating to the skin than those emitted by the sun lamp; and benefits afforded by its said lamp to skin and general health could not be compared with natural sunlight because of said wide variation between the rays emanating from the two sources;

(b) Represented that use of its said lamp constituted a cure or competent treatment for such conditions as barber's itch, ringworm, athlete's foot, acne, eczema, psoriasis, shingles and erysipelas, and for sores and ulcers;

The facts being that while ultraviolet rays of the wave length emitted by said lamp possess bactericidal properties, such properties are effective only where the infection is limited to the surface of the skin, and while the lamp might stimulate healing of sores and ulcers, it would do so only where infection causing the condition was confined to the surface; and the other ailments and conditions above mentioned were due to bacteria or fungi existing below the surface of the skin where said rays were incapable of penetrating;

(c) Represented that its said lamp constituted a cure or competent treatment for asthma, hay fever, bronchitis, colds, sinus trouble, discharges from the ears, and anemia; and that it stimulated the tissues of the skin, built up resistance to disease, produced chemical reaction which kept the blood stream in balance, aided in overcoming a deficiency of either white or red corpuscles, produced a tonic effect upon the blood, and stimulated the endocrine glands;

The facts being it was incapable of building up resistance to disease, produced no chemical reaction with respect to the blood stream, aside from its said irritating effect afforded no stimulation to the skin and other claims above set forth were false; and

(d) Represented that its said lamp quieted and soothed the nerves, particularly the nerve endings in the skin; acted as an antacid by its alkalinizing effect upon the body; improved metabolism, making the body strong, increasing vitality, and building new tissues; and improved general tone of the body and mental resistance, toning up the nervous system, inducing sleep, normalizing the chemistry of the body, and relieving pain;

Complaint

34 F. T. C.

The facts being such claims were false; said lamp was incapable of normalizing body chemistry or affecting metabolism except insofar as use thereof might activate cholesterol in the skin, resulting in production of Vitamin D and consequent absorption and deposition of calcium and phosphorus, particularly in the bone tissues; and any building of new tissues was limited to such effect as might result from the production of said vitamins; and

- (e) Failed to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained in said advertisements, and that use of its said lamp under usual or prescribed conditions might result in serious injury, in that while directions accompanying said products contained cautionary statements with respect to some of the potential dangers in the use thereof, its said advertisements made no reference to potentialities for injury in excessive exposure, need for care due to fact that persons with fair skin and young children are hypersensitive to such rays, nor to fact that certain types of skin disorders are aggravated rather than helped by ultraviolet rays, which are also contraindicated in cases of pellagra, or danger of resulting severe conjunctivitis from use thereof unless suitable goggles are worn;

With tendency and capacity of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that said lamp possessed therapeutic values which it did not, and was entirely safe for use in all cases, thereby inducing it to purchase lamp in question because of such mistaken beliefs:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Edward E. Reardon, trial examiner.

Mr. Merle P. Lyon for the Commission.

Mr. Ernest A. Tolin, of Los Angeles, Calif., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Ultra-Violet Products, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Ultra-Violet Products, Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California, with its principal office and place of business located at 6158 Santa Monica Boulevard, in the city of Los Angeles, State of California. It is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of a device designated as "Life Lite" and in the sale and distribution of such device in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Said device is a quartz lamp of the so-called "cold" type, whereby a mercury arc is burned in quartz. It is sold, designed, and intended for home use by the lay individual as an artificial means of obtaining the ultra-violet rays of natural sunlight, and for the alleged prevention, treatment and alleviation of various ailments, diseases, and abnormal conditions of the human body.

Complaint

PAR. 2. Respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes and has caused its said device, "Life Lite," when sold, to be transported from its said place of business in the State of California to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of California, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all the times herein mentioned has maintained, a course of trade in said device in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said product by the United States mails, and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among, and typical of, the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as hereinabove set forth, by the United States mails, by advertisements in newspapers and periodicals, and by other advertising literature, are the following:

Life Lite ultra-violet rays clear up many of the chronic skin disorders which have failed to respond to other methods of treatment * * * Most infections of the skin respond quickly to the germ killing effects of the rays. Furthermore, they stimulate the skin tissue to build a high degree of disease resistance.

Ultra-Violet helps to set up a chemical reaction that keeps the blood stream in balance. It aids in overcoming a deficiency of either white or red blood corpuscles * * * As well as deficiencies of the red coloring matter that is so important as an oxygen carrying agent. Thus, this tonic effect on the blood not only builds direct resistance to infection but also stimulates the endocrine glands that are so vital to health.

The chemical action of ultra-violet rays soothes the nerve endings in the skin and alleviates many internal conditions. The anti-acid or alkalizing effect of ultra-violet rays, plus their ability to increase the general resistance, help to correct many forms of illness.

Complaint

34 F. T. C.

Build Better Health with Life Lite * * * A full quota of sunlight whether obtained from natural or artificial sources means a better functioning of the human body. It helps build resistance against disease, improves metabolism and increases capacity for work or play.

Many disorders of the catarrhal type, such as asthma, hay-fever, bronchitis, colds, sinus trouble, and discharge from the ears, are corrected more rapidly if daily treatment is given with the cold ultra-violet ray lamp.

Many skin diseases, where fungi are present, such as barber's itch, ringworm, and impetigo, also disappear when the proper dosages of the rays are used * * *

Great improvement in cases of athlete's foot will quickly be noted. * * * In acne, eczema, psoriasis, shingles and erysipelas, ultra-violet can often be used with marked benefit. The ultra-violet rays destroy germs and also hasten the growth of new, clean tissue * * *

Life Lite is indispensable for the home treatment of a great many skin diseases and for relieving many types of illness. It is without doubt the finest means of building up the general resistance, overcoming low vitality, and quickening convalescence of any known natural treatment.

Patients with anemia should receive ultra-violet light treatments in addition to dietary changes. The light-ray applications have a tendency to increase both the hemoglobin and red corpuscles of the blood.

You will find our quartz ultra-violet lamps to be the safest and most efficient on the market. The intensity is correctly regulated so that there is no danger of serious over-exposure.

These rays are absolutely necessary to vigorous, normal existence as well as a powerful aid in healing disease. It has been shown that the ultra-violet rays are one of the main factors which produce improved tone, increased resistance and better mental reaction. They tone up the nervous system and induce restful sleep by a regulatory influence on the metabolism in all cases showing a calcium and phosphorus deficiency.

Quartz ultra-violet rays normalize body chemistry! Life Lite rebuilds your resistance to colds, increases vitality and heals most skin diseases.

Skin Diseases, acne, eczema, psoriasis, sores, ulcers, infections, etc. Life Lite quartz ultra-violet lamps heal most skin diseases safely, quickly and easily at home.

Get your quota of sunlight with Life Lite * * * clear up most of your chronic skin disorders * * * build resistance against disease * * * and relieve pain. Sufferers from psoriasis, acne, eczema, ulcers, and impetigo have obtained noticeable improvement after consistent use of Life Lite.

PAR. 4. By the use of the above and similar representations not set out herein respondent has directly and by implication represented to the general public that its said device designated "Life Lite" is a sun lamp; that it is safe for use in the home for self-treatment without the supervision of a qualified physician; and that it will give benefits to the skin and to the general health of the individual comparable to that given by natural sunlight. Respondent has further represented to the general public, as aforesaid, that the use of said device provides a cure, remedy, or competent and adequate treatment for chronic, infectious, and bacterial skin diseases and ailments, as well as those of fungus origin, asthma, hay-fever, bronchitis, colds, sinus trouble, discharges from the ears, barber's itch, ringworm, impetigo, athlete's foot, acne, eczema, psoriasis, shingles, erysipelas, anemia, sores and ulcers, and that it will give relief in all of such conditions, diseases, and ailments. Respondent has also represented to the general public, as aforesaid, that the use of said device stimulates the tissues of the skin; that it builds up in the body resistance to disease; that it produces a chemical reaction that keeps the blood stream in balance; that it aids in overcoming a deficiency of either white or red corpuscles; that it produces a tonic effect upon the blood; that it builds up the body's resistance to infection; that it stimulates the endocrine glands; that it quiets and soothes the nerves, especially the nerve endings in the skin; that it acts as an antacid and has an alkalizing effect upon the body; that it improves metabolism; that it makes the body strong, increases vitality, and builds new tissues; that it improves the general tone of the body and improves mental reactions; that it tones up the nervous system and induces sleep; that it normalizes body chemistry and that it relieves pain.

PAR. 5. Ultraviolet rays are measured in angstrom units. The ultraviolet rays emitted from natural sunlight range in wave lengths from 2,800 to 3,150 angstrom units. A lamp which emits ultraviolet rays within this range is properly understood and designated by members of the medical profession generally as a sun lamp. Lamps which emit ultraviolet rays of less than 2,800 angstrom units are considered by the medical profession generally as therapeutic lamps rather than as sun lamps for the reason that the rays emitted therefrom possess bactericidal properties and are not comparable to the rays emitted by natural sunlight. Such therapeutic lamps are not suitable for the same type of uses as are sun lamps and are not suitable for home use for therapeutic purposes without the supervision of a trained and skilled operator because of the danger of overexposure and severe burns. Respondent's lamp is in the category of therapeutic lamps by reason of its emission of ultraviolet rays of approximately 2,540 angstrom units.

Respondent's device will not give benefits to the skin and to the general health of the individual comparable to that given by natural sunlight for the reason that the ultraviolet rays emitted therefrom are not, in turn, comparable to the ultraviolet rays emitted by natural sunlight. The therapeutic value of respondent's device is limited to the possible destruction of bacteria when present on the surface of the skin and it would be of no value in the treatment of chronic infections, asthma, hay-fever, bronchitis, colds, sinus trouble, discharges from the ears, barber's itch, ringworm, impetigo, athlete's foot, acne, eczema, psoriasis, shingles, erysipelas, anemia, sores, or ulcers. Said device has little or no value in the treatment of bacterial skin diseases or those of fungus origin because of its inability to penetrate the layers of the skin to reach such germs or organisms which are not found generally on the surface of the skin. Furthermore, the use of said device will not stimulate the tissues in the skin or build up resistance in the body against disease. Said device will not produce a chemical reaction in the body, keep the blood stream in balance, or aid in overcoming a deficiency of the white or red blood corpuscles, nor does it produce a tonic effect on the blood. It does not build up the body's resistance against infection, stimulate the endocrine glands or quiet and soothe the nerves or the nerve endings in the skin. Said device does not act as an antacid or have an alkalizing effect upon the body. The use of said device does not result in an improvement in the process of metabolism nor does it make the body strong or increase vitality or build new tissue. It does not improve the general tone of the body or improve mental reactions. The use of said device does not tone up the nervous system, induce sleep, normalize the body chemistry, or relieve pain.

PAR. 6. In addition to the false and misleading statements hereinabove set forth, the respondent is also engaged in the dissemination of false advertisements as aforesaid in that said advertisements fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained therein and fail to reveal that the unsupervised use of respondent's device for therapeutic purposes by persons not trained in the operation of such device and not skilled in the diagnosis, analysis and methods of treatment of diseases may result in severe burns and other serious and irreparable injury to health.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements, representations and advertisements disseminated as aforesaid with respect to the therapeutic value of its said device has had and now has the capacity and tendency to and does mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements, representations and advertisements are true and induces a portion of the purchasing public because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase said device.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on December 7, 1940, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Ultra-Violet Products, Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of that act. After the filing of respondent's answer, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Merle P. Lyon, attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by Ernest A. Tolin, attorney for the respondent, before Edward E. Reardon, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and such testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer of the respondent, testimony, and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and oral argument, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Ultra-Violet Products, Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California, with its principal office and place of business located at 5205 Santa Monica Boulevard, Los Angeles, Calif. Respondent is now and for some 10 years last past has been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of a certain device known as a therapeutic lamp, used for the radiation of ultraviolet rays. The lamp is sold by respondent under the trade name "Life Lite," and is intended by respondent for use in the treatment of various ailments, diseases, and conditions of the human body.

PAR. 2. The respondent causes and has caused its lamps, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of California to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains and for some 10 years last past has maintained a course of trade in its lamps in commerce among and between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business and for the purpose of promoting the sale of its lamps, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, various advertisements concerning its lamps by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, advertisements concerning its lamps by various means for the purpose of inducing and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of its lamps in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among the representations appearing in respondent's advertisements, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as set forth above, by the United States mails, in newspapers and periodicals, and by other media, are the following:

Life Lite ultra-violet rays clear up many of the chronic skin disorders which have failed to respond to other methods of treatment * * * Most infections of the skin respond quickly to the germ killing effects of the rays. Furthermore, they stimulate the skin tissue to build a high degree of disease resistance.

Ultra-Violet helps to set up a chemical reaction that keeps the blood stream in balance. It aids in overcoming a deficiency of either white or red blood corpuscles. * * * As well as deficiencies of the red coloring matter that is so important as an oxygen carrying agent. Thus, this tonic effect on the blood not only builds direct resistance to infection but also stimulates the endocrine glands that are so vital to health.

The chemical action of ultra-violet rays soothes the nerve endings in the skin and alleviates many internal conditions. The anti-acid or alkalinizing effect of ultra-violet rays, plus their ability to increase the general resistance, help to correct many forms of illness.

Build Better Health with Life Lite. * * * A full quota of sunlight whether obtained from natural or artificial sources means a better functioning of the human body. It helps build resistance against disease, improve metabolism and increases capacity for work or play.

Many disorders of the catarrhal type, such as asthma, hay-fever, bronchitis, colds, sinus trouble, and discharge from the ears, are corrected more rapidly if daily treatment is given with the cold ultra-violet ray lamp.

Many skin diseases, where fungi are present, such as barber's itch, ringworm, and impetigo, also disappear when the proper dosages of the rays are used. * * * Great improvement in cases of athlete's foot will quickly be noted.

* * * In acne, eczema, psoriasis, shingles and erysipelas, ultra-violet can often be used with marked benefit. The ultra-violet rays destroy germs and also hasten the growth of new, clean tissue. * * *

Life Lite is indispensable for the home treatment of a great many skin diseases and for relieving many types of illness. It is without doubt the finest means of building up the general resistance, overcoming low vitality, and quickening convalescence of any known natural treatment.

Findings

Patients with anemia should receive ultra-violet light treatments in addition to dietary changes. The light-ray applications have a tendency to increase both the hemoglobin and red corpuscles of the blood.

You will find our quartz ultra-violet lamps to be the safest and most efficient on the market. The intensity is correctly regulated so that there is no danger of serious over-exposure.

These rays are absolutely necessary to vigorous, normal existence as well as a powerful aid in healing disease. It has been shown that the ultra-violet rays are one of the main factors which produce improved tone, increased resistance and better mental reaction. They tone up the nervous system and induce restful sleep by a regulatory influence on the metabolism in all cases showing a calcium and phosphorus deficiency.

Quartz ultra-violet rays normalize body chemistry! Life Lite rebuilds your resistance to colds, increases vitality and heals most skin diseases.

Skin Diseases, acne, eczema, psoriasis, sores, ulcers, infections, etc. Life Lite quartz ultra-violet lamps heal most skin diseases safely, quickly and easily at home.

"Get your quota of sunlight with Life Lite * * * clear up most of your chronic skin disorders * * * build resistance against disease * * * and relieve pain. Sufferers from psoriasis, acne, eczema, ulcers, and impetigo have obtained noticeable improvement after consistent use of Life Lite.

PAR. 4. Through the use of these representations and others of a similar nature the respondent has represented, directly or by implication, that its lamp is a sun lamp, and that the lamp will afford benefits to the skin and to the general health of the user comparable to those afforded by natural sunlight; that the use of the lamp constitutes a cure or remedy, or a competent and adequate treatment for asthma, hay fever, bronchitis, colds, sinus trouble, discharges from the ears, barber's itch, ringworm, athlete's foot, acne, eczema, psoriasis, shingles, erysipelas, anemia, sores, and ulcers; that it stimulates the tissues of the skin; that it builds up in the body resistance to disease; that it produces a chemical reaction which keeps the blood stream in balance; that it aids in overcoming a deficiency of either white or red corpuscles; that it produces a tonic effect upon the blood; that it builds up the resistance of the body to infection; that it stimulates the endocrine glands; that it quiets and smoothes the nerves, particularly the nerve endings in the skin; that it acts as an antacid and has an alkalizing effect upon the body; that it improves metabolism; that it makes the body strong, increases vitality, and builds new tissues; that it improves the general tone of the body and improves mental reactions; that it tones up the nervous system and induces sleep; that it normalizes the chemistry of the body; and that it relieves pain.

PAR. 5. Respondent's lamp is made in some seven different models, divided generally into hand lamps and stand lamps, that is, lamps which are mounted upon a stand. With the exception of one or two of the models which are intended for use by physicians exclusively, the lamps are designed primarily for use by the general public for self-application in the home. The lamps are sold principally through dealers, except in the trade area around Los Angeles, where respondent contacts the purchasing public direct by means of sales agents.

The lamp is of the type known as the cold quartz lamp. The essential part of the device is a quartz tube, which contains a mixture of certain gases, together with a small amount of mercury. The tube is hermetically sealed to prevent the escape of the gases, and to prevent the entrance into the tube of any air from the outside. When the tube is subjected to electric current the ionization of the mercury vapor results in the radiation from the tube of ultraviolet rays. Each lamp is equipped with a time clock for regulating the use of the lamp. This clock may be set for such period of time as the user may desire, and upon the lapse of the fixed period of time the lamp is shut off automatically. The maximum period of time permitted by the clock is 6 minutes.

Along with each lamp sold, respondent supplies to the purchaser a pair of goggles for use while the lamp is in operation. Printed instructions for the use of the lamp are also supplied by respondent to each purchaser, the pertinent portions of such instructions being, in the case of the hand lamp, as follows:

CAUTION: Goggles must be worn to protect the eyes from sunburn all the time the light is on.

* * *

DIRECTIONS FOR USE

Goggles are furnished with every lamp and it is vitally important to wear them as the ultra-violet rays will sunburn unprotected eyes which makes them inflamed and painful but which causes no other harm or injury.

Uncover the portion of the body to be exposed, as the passage of ultra-violet through clothing is very limited.

Best results may be expected if your physician is consulted concerning frequency and length of treatment. This particularly applies to infants and children. Your physician is the proper guardian of your health.

* * *

TREAT THE ABDOMEN

The ultra-violet rays have very slight penetration and for this reason it is desirable to treat that part of the body in which the blood stream is closest to the surface. Best results are obtained by treating the abdomen and chest areas because 70 percent of the blood that goes into the skin capillaries comes to the surface in these areas. It is advisable to take treatments in a warm room, as the blood will be closer to the surface of the body than when exposed to a chilly temperature. Under these conditions it is possible to receive a much better reaction than if the cold air is striking the skin and causing the blood to remain in the deeper tissues.

1325

Findings

TYPES OF PEOPLE

Blonds and brunettes react differently to the ultra-violet. A brunette will usually require longer exposures while the fair-skinned blonde generally reacts readily. Age must also be considered; the very old and the very young demanding greater caution. Children up to four or five should be given shorter treatments and it is best to give the treatments in the mornings. Some adults also find it preferable to take treatments in the morning rather than in the evening because of the stimulative effect of the rays.

TREATMENTS

For a general body sunbath: Turn the lamp on for one minute, hold the lamp about one-half inch from the skin and pass the lamp over the chest and stomach. One or two minutes distributed over the chest and stomach is enough for the first treatment. Infants, and young children, or very fair-skinned adults should be started at from one-quarter to one-half of the above exposure times. The time may be increased one minute each day until a light pinkish flush of the skin is obtained, which will show up about six hours after the treatment. Once the desired reaction is established, continue the daily treatments with this same length of time as long as the reddening continues. If the skin becomes accustomed to the rays the time may be increased until the desired effects are obtained.

KEEP THE LIGHT MOVING

Keep it moving slowly over the body all the time. This gives an even distribution of the rays and prevents spot sunburning. Never give a long enough treatment to get an extreme reaction; if you should, allow an interval of three or four days before the next treatment. One person may receive the beneficial effects of the ultra-violet rays in a two-minute or three-minute treatment, while another person will require a six-minute or seven-minute treatment over a selected area, such as the abdomen and chest. It is obvious that it is not the length of time that determines the treatments, but the required reaction through an amount sufficient to produce the slight reddening of the skin.

It is important to use the lamp always at the same distance from the skin; for the intensity is greatly affected by a change in distance because the intensity varies inversely as the square of the distance.

The directions for the use of the stand lamp are identical with those for the hand lamp, except that the portion captioned "Treatments" reads as follows:

For a general body sunbath use the lamp 20 to 24 inches from the body. The tube in this lamp is genuine quartz and the first treatment should be for not more than a one-minute exposure. The greater the distance, the longer the exposure, the ratio of distance and time being approximately proportional according to the inverse square law. Example: 2 minutes at 20 inches equals approximately 4 minutes at 30 inches.

If it is desired to treat small areas of the body the lamp may be placed closer and the treatment time reduced accordingly. Infants and young children, or very fair skinned adults should be started at from one-quarter to one-half of the above exposure time.

The time may be increased one minute each day until a light pinkish flush of the skin is obtained, which will show up about six hours after the treatment. It is important to use the lamp always at the same distance from the skin for the intensity is greatly affected by a change in distance.

There is attached to each lamp, when sold, a large red tag, which reads as follows:

CAUTION

To be used only by or on the prescription of a physician fully licensed and qualified by training and experience in the use of ultra-violet radiation.

A survey of accepted medical literature indicates that treatment of certain pathological conditions with ultra-violet radiation may be harmful.

In those conditions in which treatment is not contra-indicated, the physician will consider the type and extent of pathology present, and make such modifications of treatment as may be indicated.

Treatment may be contra-indicated in the following conditions:

Active and progressive pulmonary tuberculosis.

Advanced heart disease without compensation or myocarditis in the aged.

Advanced arteriosclerosis.

Gross renal or hepatic insufficiency.

Certain types of generalized dermatitis.

Acute or chronic nephritis.

Diabetes, hyperthyroidism and photosensitization.

DO NOT expose the eyes to the direct light from this lamp. Wear suitable goggles.

PAR. 6. The unit of measurement for the wave length of light rays is the angstrom. The wave lengths of ultra-violet rays emitted from natural sunlight range from 2,900 to 3,900 angstrom units. Lamps which emit ultra-violet rays within this range are known and designated by physicians and chemists as sun lamps, while lamps which emit ultra-violet rays of less than 2,900 angstroms are known and designated as therapeutic lamps. The wave length of 89.2 per cent of the rays emitted by respondent's lamp is approximately 2,540 angstroms, and the lamp therefore is not a sun lamp but falls within the category of therapeutic lamps. The principal difference between the effects produced by the two types of lamp is that the rays emitted by the therapeutic lamp are more intense and consequently harsher and more irritating to the skin than those emitted by the sun lamp.

The benefits afforded by respondent's lamp to the skin and to the general health cannot properly be compared with those afforded by natural sunlight because of the wide variation between the rays emanating from the two sources. Those emitted from natural sunlight range from 2,900 angstroms in the ultraviolet rays, as pointed out above, to approximately 50,000 angstroms in the infrared rays.

PAR. 7. While ultraviolet rays of the wave length emitted by respondent's lamp possess bactericidal properties, such properties are effective only in those cases where the infection sought to be attacked is limited to the surface of the skin. The rays are incapable of penetrating the surface of the skin and destroying bacteria or fungi present below the surface. The use of respondent's lamp therefore does not constitute a cure or remedy or a competent or adequate treatment for such conditions as barber's itch, ringworm, athlete's foot, acne, eczema, psoriasis, shingles, or erysipelas, all of which are due to causes existing below the surface of the skin. In the case of sores and ulcers, the lamp may possibly stimulate the healing process but only in those instances in which the infection causing the condition is confined to the surface of the skin.

The lamp possesses no therapeutic value in the treatment of asthma, hay fever, bronchitis, colds, sinus trouble, or discharges from the ears. It is likewise ineffectual in the treatment of anemia. It is incapable of building up in the body resistance to disease. It does not produce any chemical reaction with respect to the blood stream, nor is it of any assistance in overcoming a deficiency of either white or red corpuscles. It has no tonic effect upon the blood. It is incapable of building up the body's resistance to infection or stimulating the endocrine glands. Aside from its irritating effect, the lamp affords no stimulation to the tissue of the skin.

The lamp has no therapeutic effect upon the nerves or upon the nerve endings in the skin. It does not act as an antacid and has no alkalizing effect upon the body. It is incapable of improving the general tone of the body, making the body strong, increasing vitality, or improving mental reaction. It does not tone up the nervous system or induce sleep. It does not relieve pain. The lamp is incapable of normalizing body chemistry or affective metabolism, except insofar as its use may activate cholesterol in the skin, resulting in the production of vitamin D and the consequent absorption and disposition of calcium and phosphorus in the tissues, particularly in the bone tissues. Likewise, any effect which the lamp may have with respect to the building of new tissues is limited to such effect as may result from the production of vitamin D.

The Commission therefore finds that the representations made by respondent with respect to the therapeutic value of its lamp are erroneous and misleading, and constitute false advertisements.

PAR. 8. Unless used with due care, respondent's lamp possesses potentialities for injury to the user, in that excessive exposure to the lamp either with respect to proximity or length of time may result in severe erythema (sunburn). A further need for care in the use of the lamp arises by reason of the fact that certain types of persons are hypersensitive to ultraviolet rays, this being particularly true in the case of fair-skinned persons and young children. Moreover, certain types of skin disorders, particularly lupus erythematosus and some types of eczema, are aggravated rather than helped by ultraviolet rays. Such rays are also contraindicated in the case of pellagra.

Another of the principal dangers in the use of respondent's lamp is that unless suitable goggles are worn to protect the eyes from the ultraviolet rays the use of the lamp may result in severe conjunctivitis.

While the directions for use accompanying respondent's lamp contain certain precautionary statements with respect to some of the potential dangers in the use of the lamp, respondent's advertisements make no reference to any of such dangers, nor do they contain any reference to the cautionary statements appearing in the directions for use. The Commission therefore finds that respondent's advertisements are false for the further reason that they fail to reveal facts material in the light of the representations contained therein, and fail to reveal that the use of respondent's lamp under the conditions prescribed in the advertisements or under such conditions as are customary or usual may result in substantial injury to the user.

PAR. 9. The Commission further finds that the use by the respondent of the false advertisements herein referred to has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent's lamp possesses therapeutic values which it does not in fact possess, and that such lamp is entirely safe for use in all cases, when such is not the fact, and the tendency and capacity to cause such portion of the public to purchase such lamp as a result of the erroneous and mistaken belief so engendered.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence taken before a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence, briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and oral argument, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Ultra-Violet Products, Inc., a corporation, and its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of respondent's therapeutic lamp designated as "Life Lite," or any other lamp of substantially similar construction, whether sold under the same name or any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which represents, directly or by implication:

(a) That said lamp is a sun lamp, or that it affords benefits to the skin or to the general health of the user comparable to those afforded by natural sunlight.

(b) That said lamp constitutes a cure or remedy or a competent or adequate treatment for barber's itch, ringworm, athlete's foot, acne, eczema, psoriasis, shingles, or erysipelas.

(c) That said lamp constitutes a cure or remedy for sores or ulcers, or that it constitutes a competent treatment therefor except insofar as it may stimulate the healing process in those cases in which the infection causing such conditions is confined to the surface of the skin.

(d) That said lamp possesses any therapeutic value in the treatment of asthma, hay fever, bronchitis, colds, sinus trouble, or discharge from the ears.

(e) That said lamp possesses any therapeutic value in the treatment of anemia.

(f) That said lamp builds up in the body resistance to disease.

(g) That said lamp has any tonic effect upon the blood, that it produces any chemical reaction with respect to the blood stream, or that it is of any assistance in overcoming a deficiency of white or red corpuscles.

(h) That said lamp builds up the resistance of the body to infection, or that it stimulates the endocrine glands.

(i) That said lamp affords any stimulation to the tissues of the skin in excess of such stimulation as may result from its irritating effect.

(j) That said lamp quiets or soothes the nerves or the nerve endings in the skin.

(k) That said lamp acts as an antacid or has any alkalizing effect upon the body.

(l) That said lamp improves the general tone of the body, makes the body strong, increases vitality, or improves mental reaction.

(m) That said lamp tones up the nervous system, induces sleep, or relieves pain.

(n) That said lamp normalizes the chemistry of the body, improves metabolism, or builds new tissues, except insofar as its use may result in the production of vitamin D.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by means of the United States mails or by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which fails to reveal that excessive exposure to said lamp either with respect to proximity or length of time may result in injury to the user; that said lamp should not be used in the case of pellagra, lupus erythematosus, or certain types of eczema; and that said lamp should never be used unless goggles are worn to protect the eyes; provided, however, that such advertisement need contain only the statement, "Caution: Use only as directed," if and when the directions for use, wherever they appear on the label, in the labeling, or both on the label and in labeling, contain a warning to the above effect.

3. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said lamp, which contains any representation prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof, or which fails to comply with the affirmative requirements set forth in paragraph 2 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF WEBSTER ELECTRIC COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
 OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4456. Complaint, Feb. 1 1941—Decision, June 8, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in the manufacture and interstate sale and distribution to oil burner manufacturers of fuel units for oil burners—

Falsely represented, through letters and circulars and advertisements in periodicals of general circulation, that its fuel unit was the only device of its kind which had the outboard bearing outside of the seal, and that it had the largest capacity of any on the market;

With effect of misleading and deceiving the purchasing public in such respects and thereby inducing it to purchase, in preference to others, such fuel units and oil burners equipped therewith;

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. James A. Purcell, trial examiner.

Mr. D. E. Hoopingarner for the Commission.

Fischel, Kahn & Heart, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Webster Electric Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be to the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Webster Electric Co., is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office, factory, and place of business at DeKoven Avenue and Clark Street, Racine, Wis.

For more than 2 years last past respondent has been, and is now, engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of fuel units for oil burners. Fuel units are purchased by oil burner manufacturers who take such units and the various other units or parts making up an oil burner, and assemble them into oil burners, and thereupon sell the completed oil burners to dealers and consumers. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent has been and is now causing its said fuel units, when sold, to be transported from its said factory in the State of Wisconsin to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in its said fuel units in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent has made, published, and caused to be made and published, by means of letters and circulars transmitted by United States mails and otherwise into various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, and by means of advertisements in periodicals having a general circulation, statements, claims, and representations with reference to its said fuel units, among which are those following, for the purpose of inducing, and which were likely to induce, directly and indirectly, the purchase of its said fuel units:

(a) The Webster Electric Fuel Unit is the only device of its kind which has the outboard bearing outside of the seal.

(b) The Webster Electric has the largest capacity of any unit on the market.

(c) An Improved Two-Stage Fuel Unit embodying all the characteristic Webster Electric features plus, an exceptional ease of servicing that is not to be had in any similar device in the oil burner field.

(d) No other has proven itself so unfailingly dependable in performance.

(e) This year more oil burners will be equipped with the Webster Electric Two-Stage Fuel Unit than with any other.

Through said statements, claims and representations, made and published as aforesaid, and others of similar import and meaning not herein set out, respondent has represented and implied that its said fuel unit is the only device of its kind having the outboard bearing outside of the seal; that the capacity of its said unit is greater than that of any other fuel unit on the market; that its said fuel unit is more easily serviced than are all similar devices; that the dependability of its said fuel unit exceeds that of similar devices; and that, during the year that the last statement above was made by respondent, more oil burners would be equipped with its said fuel unit than would be equipped with the fuel unit of any competing manufacturer during such year.

PAR. 3. In truth and in fact, respondent's fuel unit is not the only device of its kind which has the outboard bearing outside of the seal. The capacity of respondent's fuel unit does not exceed that of any of a number of other units on the market, it is not easier to service than all similar devices, and it is not more dependable than all similar devices. The claim that more oil burners would be equipped, during the year that the claim was made, with its two-stage fuel unit than with the fuel unit of any competing manufacturers is deceptive and misleading insofar as it imports or implies that more oil burners would be equipped during such year with respondent's fuel unit than with the fuel unit of any competing manufacturer.

1341

Findings

The aforesaid representations and implications made and published by respondent as aforesaid are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and deceptive.

PAR. 4. The use by the respondent of the acts and practices hereinabove mentioned in connection with the sale and distribution of its said fuel units in commerce has the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations and implications are true, and cause many members of the purchasing public, because of said mistaken and erroneous belief, to purchase respondent's fuel units, and oil burners equipped with them.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on February 1 A. D. 1941, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Webster Electric Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of the complaint and filing of respondent's answer, testimony, and other evidence in support of and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint were introduced by the attorneys for the Commission and the attorneys for the respondent, before James A. Purcell, a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding. Said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission, on the complaint, the answer, the testimony, and other evidence, the trial examiner's report thereon, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto: And the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Webster Electric Co., is a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business at Racine, Wis. Respondent, for more than 2 years prior to February 1, 1941, has been and now is engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of fuel units for oil burners. Fuel units are purchased by oil burner manufacturers, who take such units and the various other units or parts making up an oil burner and assemble them into oil burners, and thereupon sell the completed oil burners to dealers and consumers.

Respondent, in the conduct of its business, has been and now is causing its said fuel units, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in Wisconsin to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained a course of trade in its said fuel units in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent, in order to promote the sale of its fuel units, represented that its fuel unit is the only device of its kind which has the outboard bearing outside of the seal, and that its unit has the largest capacity of any unit on the market. These representations were made by respondent up to the fall of 1938, in letters and circulars transmitted by means of the United States mails and otherwise, into various States of the United States, and in advertisements placed by it in periodicals having a general circulation.

PAR. 3. The representations and implications made and published by respondent, as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, are grossly exaggerated, false and misleading, and deceptive. Respondent's fuel unit, in fact is not the only device of its kind which has the outboard bearing outside of the seal; the capacity of respondent's fuel unit does not, in fact, exceed that of any other unit on the market.

PAR. 4. Respondent, by its acts and practices herein set forth, has misled and deceived a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondent's fuel unit is the only device of its kind which has the outboard bearing outside of the seal, and that its fuel unit has the largest capacity of any unit on the market; and as a result, many members of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief have purchased respondent's fuel units, and oil burners equipped with them in preference to other fuel units and oil burners equipped with other fuel units.

1341

Order

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as set forth in the foregoing findings as to the facts, are to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding, having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, the testimony and other evidence in support of and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint introduced by the attorney for the Commission and attorney for respondent before James A. Purcell, a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, the report of the trial examiner and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint. And the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act:

It is ordered, That the respondent, Webster Electric Co., a corporation, its officers, directors, agents, representatives, and employees, jointly or severally, or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of fuel units for oil burners, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing by means of letters, circulars, advertisements, or by any other means, directly or by implication—

(a) That respondent's product is the only device of its kind which has the outboard bearing outside of the seal.

(b) That respondent's product has the largest capacity of any unit on the market.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF SHEPHERD'S TAILORING COMPANY, INC., ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4716. Complaint, Feb. 26, 1942—Decision, June 8, 1942

Where a corporation and two individuals, its officers and directors, engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of men's wearing apparel and other merchandise—

- (a) Sold and distributed garments by means of sales plans which involved the operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, and included a so-called "Club Plan" under which they furnished each participating purchaser with a contract providing for the sale by them to him of a suit for the sum of $39, of which $1 was to be paid when the contract was delivered and $1 each week thereafter until the full sum had been paid, each contract being printed with a so-called "Ledger No." for use as a lottery number under an agreement by which those purchasers whose numbers, or last three digits thereof, corresponded with the last three digits of the Treasury report as published in a Philadelphia paper, would be entitled to a suit or overcoat without additional payment, all others paying the full $39 retail selling price;

With the result that many persons were attracted by the element of chance involved in their said sales plan, under which the amount paid by the ultimate consumer was determined wholly by lot or chance, and there was involved a game of chance to procure an article of merchandise at less than contract price, and trade was unfairly diverted from many competitors who do not use any such plan or method; and

- (b) Falsely represented price of their merchandise, nature of their business and merchandise itself through such statements as "One $39.00 price"; "Custom Tailors since 1907"; "Our stock consists of hundreds of patterns of fine imported and domestic suitings and overcoatings for $39.00"; facts being they did not always sell the garments in question for said sum, but in many instances required additional payments; they had been in business only since 1940; and they did not carry hundreds of patterns, or any large number from which their customers might select a suit or overcoat for said price;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that such representations were true, thereby inducing it to purchase said products, as a result whereof trade was unfairly diverted to them from their competitors:

Held, That said lottery sales plan violated the public policy of the United States Government, and that such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Shepherd's Tailoring Co., Inc., a corporation, formerly Small's, Inc., a corporation, and Louis Small, Walter H. Hahn, and William Trignani, individually, and as officers and directors of Shepherd's Tailoring Co., Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Shepherd's Tailoring Co., Inc., is a Corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania and until August 8, 1941, its corporate name was Small's, Inc., at that time its name being changed to the present designation. Its principal place of business is located at 1102 Walnut Street in the city of Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania. Respondents Louis Small, Walter H. Hahn, and William Trignani, are officers and directors of the corporate respondent, Shepherd's Tailoring Co., Inc., and formulate, control and direct the policies, acts and practices of said corporate respondent. The respondents have acted in concert and in cooperation and conjunction with each other in performing the acts and practices hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of men's wearing apparel and other merchandise from their said place of business, through the solicitation of orders for such merchandise from persons living in various States of the United States. Respondents fill such orders by transporting said merchandise or causing same to be transported from their said place of business in Philadelphia, Pa., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their said garments in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

In the course and conduct of their business, respondents are and have been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Complaint

34 F. T. C.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents are now and have been selling and distributing said garments to members of the purchasing public by means of sales plans or methods which involve the operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. One of said sales plans or methods is substantially as follows:

. Members of the purchasing public are solicited by respondents to purchase a suit of clothes or overcoat under a so-called "club" plan. Respondents supply each purchaser participating in said plan with a contract of purchase which contract provides for the sale by respondents to such purchaser of a suit of clothes for the sum of $39, which said amount is to be paid as follows:

$1 when said contract is delivered and $1 in advance each week thereafter until the full amount of the contract has been paid. There is space provided on said contract for the recording of the weekly payments. Each of said contracts has printed thereon a number designated as "Ledger No." but in reality a lottery number. Purchasers are informed by respondents that if at any time before their contracts are paid out should said number, or the last three digits thereof, correspond to the last three digits of the Treasury report, as published in a Philadelphia paper, provided all of said purchaser's weekly payments have been made up to date, then and in that event such purchaser would be entitled to and would receive a suit or overcoat without additional payments or cost. Purchasers whose contracts do not bear numbers corresponding with the Treasury report, prior to the payment of the full amount of their contracts, are required to pay the full $39 for their suits or overcoats. All of said suits and overcoats have a retail selling price of $39. The amount which the ultimate consumer pays for one of said suits or overcoats is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 4. Respondents have sold and distributed their merchandise to members of the consuming public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plans or methods. In so selling and distributing their merchandise, respondents have conducted lotteries in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove set forth. The use by respondents of said sales plans or methods in the sale of such garments by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said methods, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 5. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price less than the contracted retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with respondents, as above alleged, do not use said methods or any methods involving the use of a game of chance, or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or, any other method that is contrary to public policy. Many persons are attracted by respondents' said methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale of said merchandise in the manner above alleged and are thereby induced and persuaded to buy respondents' merchandise in preference to the merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

PAR. 6. The use of said methods by the respondents because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondents from their said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent sales plans or methods.

PAR. 7. In the furtherance and promotion of their aforesaid merchandising plan and in order to induce members of the purchasing public, to participate therein, the respondents have made false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations respecting the merchandise sold by them and the price thereof and the nature of their business, such statements and representations appearing on the contract and receipt card above referred to and described, which card is exhibited to prospective purchasers in soliciting sales of respondents' merchandise. Among such statements and representations, are the following:

One $39.00 price.

Custom tailors since 1907. and

Our stock consists of hundreds of patterns of fine imported and domestic suitings and overcoatings at $39.00.

PAR. 8. Through the use of the aforesaid statements and representations respondents represent that all of the suits sold by them are priced at $39; that respondents have been in the custom tailoring business since 1907, and that respondents carry in stock hundreds of patterns of suitings which are offered and sold at $39.

Said statements and representations are false, misleading, and deceptive. In truth and in fact, all of respondents' garments are not sold for $39 but, in many cases, additional payments or an additional sum is required in order to secure a suitable garment from respondents. Respondents have not been in the custom tailoring business since 1907 but only since 1940. Respondents do not carry any large or substantial number of patterns from which its customers may select a $39 suit or overcoat.

PAR. 9. The use by respondents of the foregoing false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations has had and now has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the members of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true and into the purchase of a substantial volume of respondents' merchandise on account of such belief so induced.

PAR. 10. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors' and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 26th day of February A. D. 1942, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Shepherd's Tailoring Co., Inc., a corporation, formerly Small's Inc., a corporation, and Louis Small, Walter H. Hahn, and William Trignani, individually, and as officers and directors of Shepherd's Tailoring Co., Inc., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act. On March 20, A. D. 1942, respondent William Trignani filed an answer admitting the allegations of the complaint, but denying that Louis Small had ever been an officer of respondent corporation. Thereafter on April 10, 1942, respondent Shepherd's Tailoring Co., Inc., a corporation, and respondents Walter H. Hahn and William Trignani, individually and as officers of the corporation, filed an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Shepherd's Tailoring Co., Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, and until August 8, 1941, its corporate name was Small's, Inc., its name being changed at that time to its present designation. Its principal place of business is located at 1102 Walnut Street, in the city of Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania. Respondents Walter H. Hahn and William Trignani, are officers and directors of the corporate respondent, Shepherd's Tailoring Co., Inc., and formulate, control and direct the policies, acts, and practices of said corporate respondent. These respondents have acted in concert and in cooperation and conjunction with each other in performing the acts and practices hereinafter set forth.

PAR. 2. Respondents, Shepherd's Tailoring Co., Inc., Walter H. Hahn and William Trignani are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of men's wearing apparel and other merchandise from their place of business, through the solicitation of orders for such merchandise from persons living in various States of the United States. These respondents fill such orders by transporting merchandise, or causing same to be transported, from their place of business in Philadelphia, Pa., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States. These respondents maintain, and at all times herein mentioned have maintained, a course of trade in their garments in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

In the course and conduct of their business, these respondents are and have been in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

(NOTE.—When reference is hereinafter made to "respondents," only those named in this paragraph are included.)

PAR. 3. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their business, are now, and have been, selling and distributing garments to members of the purchasing public by means of sales plans or methods which involve the operation of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. One of such sales plans and methods is substantially as follows:

Members of the purchasing public are solicited by respondents to purchase a suit of clothes or overcoat under a so-called "club plan"; respondents furnish each purchaser participating in the plan with a contract of purchase, which provides for the sale by respondents to such purchaser, of a suit of clothes for the sum of $39, which amount is to be paid as follows:

Findings

$1 when contract is delivered, and

$1 in advance each week thereafter until the full amount of the contract has been paid.

There is a space provided in the contract for recording the weekly payments. Each contract has printed thereon a number designated as "Ledger No.," but in reality this is a lottery number; purchasers are informed by respondents that if at any time before their contracts are paid out, such number, or the last three digits thereof, correspond with the last three digits of the Treasury report as published in a Philadelphia paper, and provided that all of purchaser's weekly payments have been made up to date, in such event the purchaser would be entitled to and would receive a suit of clothes or overcoat without additional payment or cost. Purchasers whose contracts do not bear numbers corresponding to the Treasury report prior to payment of the full amount of their contracts are required to pay respondents the full amount of $39 for their suits or overcoats. All of these suits and overcoats have a retail selling price of $39. The amount which the ultimate consumer pays for one of these suits or overcoats is thus wholly determined by lot or chance.

PAR. 4. Respondents have sold and distributed their merchandise to members of the consuming public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan or method, and in so doing, have conducted games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes.

PAR. 5. Respondents' sales of merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan, involve a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price less than the contracted price therefor. Many of respondents' competitors mentioned in paragraph 2 hereof do not use the sales plan employed by respondents, or any other method involving a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme. Many persons are attracted by the element of chance involved in respondents' sales plan, and as a result purchase respondents' merchandise in preference to that of respondents' said competitors, and trade has thereby been unfairly diverted to respondents from their said competitors.

PAR. 6. Respondents, in furtherance and promotion of their sales plan, and in order to induce the purchasing public to participate therein, have made statements and representations respecting the merchandise sold by them, and the price thereof, and the nature of their business, which statements and representations appear on the contract and receipt card used in connection with their sales plan. Among such statements and representations are the following:

Order

One $39.00 price;

Custom Tailors since 1907;

Our stock consists of hundreds of patterns of fine imported and domestic suitings and overcoatings for $39.00.

Said statements and representations are false, misleading and deceptive. In truth and in fact, respondents' garments are not always sold for $39, but in many instances additional payments, or an additional sum, is required in order to secure a suitable garment. Respondents have not been in the custom tailor business since 1907, but have only been in said business since 1940. Respondents do not carry hundreds of patterns or any large number of patterns from which their customers may select a $39 suit or overcoat.

PAR. 7. The use by respondents of the false, misleading, and deceptive statements set out in paragraph 6 hereof, has had and now has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true, and because of such belief, the public has been induced to purchase a substantial amount of respondents' products, and as a result, trade has been unfairly diverted to respondents from their competitors who do not make such false, misleading and deceptive statements concerning their products.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act; and the respondents' sales plan violates the public policy of the Government of the United States.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, Shepherd's Tailoring Co., Inc., a corporation, and Walter H. Hahn and William Trignani, individually, and as officers and directors of Shepherd's Tailoring Co., Inc., in which answer said respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Shepherd's Tailoring Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, directors, representatives, agents and employees, and respondents, Walter H. Hahn and William Trignani, individually, and as officers and directors of Shepherd's Tailoring Co., Inc., jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of men's suits or other garments in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others any merchandise together with a sales plan or method involving the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme by which said merchandise is to be or may be sold or distributed to the purchasing public.
2. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.
3. Representing that all the suits sold by them are priced at $39.
4. Representing that respondents have been in the custom tailoring business since 1907.
5. Representing that respondents carry in stock "hundreds" or any other large number of patterns of suiting which are sold at $39 or any, other fixed price, unless such is the fact.

It is further ordered, That the respondents, Shepherd's Tailoring Co., Inc., a corporation, and Walter Hahn and William Trignani, shall within 60 days after service upon them of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That the case be closed as to Louis Small, subject to the right of the Commission to reopen the same should further facts so warrant.

IN THE MATTER OF

MAURICE L. MYERS, TRADING AS CHARLES B. JOYCE
COMPANYCOMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 28, 1914*Docket 4476. Complaint, Mar. 26, 1941—Decision, June 9, 1942*

Where an individual, engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of radios, clocks, flashlights, and other novelty merchandise to dealers and other purchasers, including certain assortments thereof which were so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers, a typical one involving sale of a radio through use of a 1,500-hole punchboard, chances on which were 5 cents each, under a plan by which the customer selecting, by chance, the winning number secured a radio, 8 others received 50 cents in trade, and 20 received 25 cents in trade, the remaining receiving nothing for their money except the right to punch—

Sold such assortments to dealers and other purchasers by whom they were exhibited and sold to the purchasing public in accordance with sales plan above set forth, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting a game of chance or lottery in the sale of his said products;

With the result that many were attracted by said chance sales plan and the opportunity to procure merchandise at much less than its nominal retail price, and were thus induced to buy and sell his products in preference to those of his competitors who do not use any chance sales plan in the sale and distribution of their products, and with effect of unfairly diverting trade to him from them:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, were contrary to the public policy of the United States Government, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Morris L. Myers is an individual, trading and doing business as Charles P. Joyce Co., with his office and principal place of business at 2425 North Halstead Street, Chicago, Ill. Respondent is now and during the year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of radios, clocks, flashlights, clothing, and novelty merchandise to dealers and other purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from his said place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various other States of the United States other than Illinois and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been during the year last past a course of trade by respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of his business respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals and with corporations and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to dealers and other purchasers various assortments of merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof.

One of said assortments consists of a radio together with a device commonly called a punchboard. Said radio is distributed to the consuming public by means of said punchboard in the following manner:

On the face of said board appears a label bearing the following legend:

5¢ Fast Action	WIN THIS $_____	No Waiting 5¢
	No. 100 WINS RADIO

LAST PUNCH In Each SECTION gets 50¢ in Trade

The sales are 5 cents each, and when a punch is made from the board a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of purchases there are on the board (1,500), but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence. The board bears a statement or statements informing the respective purchasers as to which number entitles the purchasers thereof to receive a radio and which numbers entitle the purchasers to receive certain amounts of merchandise. A purchaser who does not qualify by obtaining the number calling for the radio or one of the designated numbers calling for awards of merchandise receives nothing for his money. The radio and the merchandise awards are worth more than 5 cents each, and the purchaser who obtains the number calling for the radio or one of the numbers calling for the merchandise receives the same for the price of 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the number punched or separated from the board. The radio and merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed various other assortments of merchandise involving a lot or chance feature but the sales plans or methods by which said merchandise is distributed are similar to the ones hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's merchandise directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plans aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others a means of conducting a lottery in the sale of his product in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of his merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public by the method or sales plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute products in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method which is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of his products and by the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's products in preference to products of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 26th day of March A. D. 1941, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Maurice L. Myers (named in the complaint as Morris L. Myers), an individual, trading as Charles B. Joyce & Co., charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of the complaint and filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission before John W. Addison, a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon the complaint, the answer thereto, the testimony and other evidence, the trial examiner's report and brief in support of the complaint: And the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion, drawn therefrom.

Findings

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Maurice L. Myers, is an individual, trading as Charles B. Joyce Co., with his principal place of business at 2425 North Halstead Street, in the city of Chicago and State of Illinois.

PAR. 2. Respondent for more than a year next preceding the issuance of the complaint herein has been, and now is, engaged in the sale and distribution of radios, clocks, flashlights, and other novelty merchandise to dealers and other purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States. Respondent causes said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from his place of business to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States, and during all of the time herein mentioned respondent has maintained a constant course of trade in commerce between and among various States of the United States, and has been, during such time, in competition with other individuals and with corporations and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Respondent, in the course and conduct of his business, sells and has sold to dealers and other purchasers various assortments of merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments consists of a radio, together with a device known as a "punchboard." The radio is distributed to the consuming public by means of the punchboard in the following manner:

On the face of said board appears a label bearing the following legend:

LAST PUNCH in Each SECTION gets 50¢ In Trade

Conclusion

34 F. T. C.

The punchboard has 1,500 holes, each containing a slip of paper bearing a number which is not disclosed until the slip of paper is pushed from the hole. These numbers range from 1 to 1,500 and are not consecutively distributed. Punches are sold at 5 cents each, and the prizes listed are distributed in accordance with the legend appearing on the punchboard. A person who does not punch a number entitling him to a prize receives nothing for his money except the right to punch.

The radio and other prizes are worth more than the price of the punch, but are distributed to the winners without additional payment. The radio and other merchandise are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes various other assortments of merchandise by means of games of chance, the sales plans differing only in detail from that hereinabove described.

PAR. 4. Persons who purchase respondent's merchandise, directly or indirectly, exhibit and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan described in paragraph 3 hereof. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting a game of chance or lottery in the sale of his products.

PAR. 5. Many of respondent's competitors are unwilling to and do not adopt and use any sales plan involving a game of chance or lottery scheme in the sale and distribution of their merchandise. Many persons are attracted by respondent's sales plan and by the element of chance involved therein and the opportunity to procure merchandise at a cost much less than its nominal retail price, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's products in preference to products of competitors of the respondent who do not use the same or similar methods.

Respondent's sales methods have the tendency and capacity to, and do, unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among various States of the United States to the respondent from his competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and are contrary to the public policy of the United States Government, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Order

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint taken before J. W. Addison, a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, the report of the trial examiner, and brief in support of the complaint; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Maurice L. Myers, trading as Charles B. Joyce Co., or trading under any other name, directly or indirectly, or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of radios, clocks, flashlights, or any other merchandise, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of such merchandise to the public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of others punchboards, push cards, or pull cards, or other lottery device, either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery device, are to be used, or may be used, in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

A. E. STALEY MANUFACTURING COMPANY AND THE STALEY SALES CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SUBSECTION (A) OF SEC. 2 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED OCT. 15, 1914, AS AMENDED BY ACT OF JUNE 19, 1936

Docket 3803. Complaint, June 1, 1939—Decision, June 10, 1942

Where a corporate processor and refiner of corn products, owning and operating in Decatur, Ill., a plant with capacity for processing about 50,000 bushels of corn daily, together with its subsidiary, engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of products of such processing;

In selling their glucose or corn sirup unmixed—a major raw material in many candies, constituting from 5 to 90 percent of the finished weight thereof, and about 85 percent of mixed table sirups—to candy manufacturers and mixers of such sirups, engaged in the competitive resale thereof to wholesalers, chain stores, retailers, and others, likewise in competition—

- (a) Discriminated in price unlawfully through sales of glucose of like grade and quality, fulfilled by shipments to purchasers from their Decatur, Ill. plant at differing delivered prices through a pricing system based upon their Chicago tank car prices, to which were added as differentials the amounts of the railroad tariff from Chicago to destination; and
- (b) Discriminated in price between different purchasers through preferential operation or application of their booking system—under which, following announcement of a new price increase, purchasers were granted a period of 5 to 10 days within which to purchase at the old and lower price provided shipment was made within 30 days—by use of practices under which favored buyers received price advantages varying from 5 cents to 55 cents per hundredweight of glucose; in that, among other things, they—
 - (1) Permitted large buyers with unused balances booked by them an extension of delivery time in response to threat of taking business elsewhere;
 - (2) Accepted statements of their brokers or salesmen as to orders booked without proper confirmation as to fact of such orders;
 - (3) Made offers to take business at the lower prices long after expiration of the time for so doing; and
 - (4) Made sales or offers at the lower tank car prices to buyers with no facilities for such purchasing, while making delivery in tank wagon quantities from their filling station stocks, and continuing such deliveries at the older and lower price for several months after the price advance;

With the result that—

- (1) Candy manufacturers who were obliged to pay higher prices for glucose than some of their competitors, might sell their candies—as to which, in the case of the low-priced product bearing no differentiating name or brand customers may be attracted by a difference of as little as one-eighth of a cent per pound, and especially so in the case of the large quantity purchasers to whom a small difference is determinative—only by absorbing the higher glucose costs or by attempting to recover such higher costs by increasing the price of their candies and selling them upon a nonprice basis, thereby reducing their profit either directly or through reduced volume, and diminishing their incentive or desire to compete with those paying the lower prices; and possibly deterring potential candy manufacturers from entering the industry in cities where they would be obliged to pay the higher glucose prices; and

(2) Producers of glucose table sirup located in cities other than Chicago had higher costs than Chicago mixers; and producers paying the higher prices had sales substantially reduced through ability of those favored to reduce their price, or, in the event of meeting the reduced price, had diminished profits and incentive to compete with producers paying the lower prices for such product, with respect to which customers may be attracted by as small a difference as 5 cents a case of six 10-pound cans; and potential sirup mixers might be deterred from entering the industry in cities where they would be obliged to pay the higher glucose prices:

Held, That aforesaid unlawful price discriminations resulted in substantial injury to competition among purchasers by affording material and unjustified price advantages to some and not to others, and constituted violation of section 2 (a) of the Clayton Act as amended.

Before Mr. John L. Hornor, trial examiner.

Mr. Frank Hier and Mr. P. R. Layton for the Commission.

Le Forgee, Samuels & Miller, of Decatur, Ill., and Mr. Louis A. Spiess, of Washington, D. C., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

The Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the parties respondent named in the caption hereof, and hereinafter more particularly designated and described, since June 19, 1936, have violated and are now violating the provisions of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges with respect thereto as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, A. E. Staley Manufacturing Co., is a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of Delaware with its principal office and place of business at 2200 East Eldorado Street in the city of Decatur and State of Illinois. Respondent, The Staley Sales Corporation, is a corporation, organized under the laws of the State of Illinois and has its principal office and place of business at 2200 East Eldorado Street, city of Decatur and State of Illinois. Respondent, The Staley Sales Corporation, is a wholly owned sales subsidiary of respondent, A. E. Staley Manufacturing Co., through which products manufactured by A. E. Staley Manufacturing Co., are sold and distributed. A. E. Staley Manufacturing Co., owns the entire capital stock of The Staley Sales Corporation and controls and directs The Staley Sales Corporation.

Complaint

34 F. T. C.

PAR. 2. Respondent, A. E. Staley Manufacturing Co., owns and operates a plant at Decatur, Ill. This plant has a corn grinding capacity in excess of 50,000 bushels per day, with complete facilities for the finished fabrication of all known corn products, both for household and industrial use.

PAR. 3. For many years respondents have been and are now engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing in interstate commerce products derived from corn. The principal products derived from corn are (1) starch, both for food and other purposes; (2) glucose or corn syrup; and (3) corn sugar. Starch is first manufactured from the corn, and glucose and grape sugar are made by treating the starch with certain acids, the resulting solid product being sugar and the resulting sirup being glucose. Glucose is largely used in the manufacture of candy, jellies, jams, preserves, and the like as well as in the mixing of sirups.

The principal byproducts of corn resulting in the corn products business are gluten feed, corn oil, corn-oil cake and corn-oil meal.

A. E. Staley Manufacturing Co., in addition to bulk products, produces branded products.

PAR. 4. For many years in the course and conduct of their business, the respondents have been and are now manufacturing the aforesaid commodities at the aforesaid plant and have sold and shipped and do now sell and ship such commodities in commerce between and among the various States of the United States from the State in which their factory is located across State lines to purchasers thereof located in States other than the State in which respondents' said plant is located in competition with other persons, firms and corporations engaged in similar lines of commerce.

PAR. 5. Since June 19, 1936 and while engaged as aforesaid in commerce among the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia, the respondents have been and are now, in the course of such commerce, discriminating in price between purchasers of said commodities of like grade and quality, which commodities are sold for use, consumption or resale within the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia in that the respondents have been and are now selling such commodities to some purchasers at a higher price than the price at which commodities of like grade and quality are sold by respondents to other purchasers generally competitively engaged with the first mentioned purchasers.

PAR. 6. The effect of said discriminations in price made by said respondents, as set forth in paragraph 5 herein, may be substantially to lessen competition in the sale and distribution of corn products between the said respondents and their competitors; tend to create a monopoly in the line of commerce in which the respondents are engaged; and to injure, destroy, and prevent competition in the sale and distribution of corn products between the said respondents and their competitors.

PAR. 7. The effect of said discriminations in price made by said respondents, as set forth in paragraph 5 herein, may be substantially to lessen competition between the buyers of said corn products from respondents receiving said lower discriminatory prices and other buyers from respondents competitively engaged with such favored buyers who do not receive such favorable prices; tend to create a monopoly in the lines of commerce in which buyers from respondents are engaged; and to injure, destroy, and prevent competition in the lines of commerce in which those who purchase from respondents are engaged between the said beneficiaries of said discriminatory prices and said buyers who do not and have not received such beneficial prices.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts of respondents constitute a violation of the provisions of subsection (a) of section 2 of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, approved June 19, 1936 (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13).

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress, entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (Clayton Act), as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936 (Robinson-Patman Act), the Federal Trade Commission on June 1, 1939, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding against respondents, A. E. Staley Manufacturing Co., a corporation, and The Staley Sales Corporation, a corporation, charging them with violation of the provisions of subsection (a) of section 2 of the said Clayton Act, as amended. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, certain stipulations as to the facts were read into the record and certain exhibits were introduced in evidence in support of and in opposition to the allegations of said complaint at hearings before an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said stipulations and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, answer, stipulation as to the facts, and other evidence, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, A. E. Staley Manufacturing Co., is a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, having its principal office and place of business on East Eldorado Street, Decatur, Ill. Respondent, The Staley Sales Corporation, is a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, having its office and principal place of business on East Eldorado Street, Decatur, Ill. All of the capital stock of the latter respondent, except for the qualifying shares necessarily held by its directors is owned by respondent A. E. Staley Manufacturing Co.

PAR. 2. Respondent, A. E. Staley Manufacturing Co., is a processor and refiner of corn products and owns and operates in Decatur, Ill., a plant which has a capacity for processing approximately 50,000 bushels of corn per day. Among the products derived from such processing and refining of corn is glucose or corn sirup unmixed. For many years last past and at all times since June 19, 1936, both respondents have been engaged in the business of selling and distributing glucose produced at said plant to purchasers located in the several States of the United States. As a result of such sales, glucose, or corn sirup unmixed and other products of such processing and refining of corn have been transported from Decatur, Ill., to purchasers located in the several States of the United States, and respondents have maintained a course of trade in such products in commerce among and between the several States of the United States.

In the sale and distribution of glucose or corn sirup unmixed, respondents are in competition with other concerns who sell and distribute similar sirup to purchasers in the several States of the United States. Among such competitors of respondents are Corn Products Refining Co. and Corn Products Sales Co., with plants at Chicago, Ill., and Kansas City, Mo.; Clinton Co. and Clinton Sales Co., with a plant at Clinton, Iowa; Penick & Ford, Limited, Inc., with a plant at Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Anheuser-Busch, Inc., with a plant at St. Louis, Mo.; Union Starch & Refining Co. and Union Sales Co., with a plant at Granite City, Ill.; and American Maize-Products Co., with a plant at Roby, Ind., in the Chicago switching area.

PAR. 3. Glucose or corn sirup unmixed is widely used in the manufacture of candy and in the mixing of table sirups. Among the purchasers of such glucose from respondents are customers located in Chicago, Decatur, and Centralia, Ill.; St. Joseph, St. Louis, and Kansas City, Mo.; Dallas and Farmersville, Tex.; Shreveport and Alexandria, La.; Little Rock, Ark.; Davenport, Ottumwa, and Sioux City, Iowa.

Findings

Respondents sell glucose or corn sirup unmixed strictly upon a delivered price basis. Their lowest price, or base price, for such glucose is f. o. b. Chicago in railroad tank car lots, and their prices to all other purchasers in such quantities, wherever located, are equivalent or approximately equivalent to their prices to purchasers in Chicago plus freight from Chicago to the purchaser's location.

As among customers located in the cities named, and on the dates shown in the following tabulation, respondents' prices per hundred-weight for 43° glucose in tank car lots were as follows:

Location of purchaser	Aug. 1, 1936	Aug. 1, 1937	Aug. 1, 1938	Aug. 1, 1939
Chicago, Ill.....	$2.94	$3.04	$2.29	$2.09

Farmersville, Texas.....	3.68	3.74	3.06	2.86
Dallas, Texas.....	3.72	3.77	3.09	2.89

At all times since June 19, 1936, substantially the same differentials in price as those shown above have existed between and among respondents' customers located in the cities named.

As heretofore stated respondents' prices on glucose or corn sirup unmixed vary as between purchasers in different cities according to the Chicago price plus the amount of the railroad freight rate on such glucose from Chicago to the purchaser's location. However, all sales of glucose made by respondents are fulfilled with glucose produced in and shipped from their plant in Decatur, Ill.; and, consequently, the price differences as among purchasers which result from respondents' pricing plan as set forth herein do not merely reflect differing transportation costs. This is illustrated in the following tabulation in which sales by respondents to purchasers in various cities are compared with substantially concurrent sales to purchasers in Chicago. In this tabulation the prices per hundred-weight charged purchasers and the price differences between such purchasers are shown, together with the freight rates from Decatur,

A comparison between the price differences per hundredweight and the freight rate differences per hundredweight illustrates the lack of justification for said price differences by reason of transportation costs incurred by respondents.

Respondents began the manufacture of glucose or corn sirup un-mixed in 1920, at which time two of their present competitors were producing similar glucose at plants located in the Chicago railroad switching district and were selling glucose at delivered prices based upon the Chicago price plus freight from Chicago to point of delivery. When respondents became established as sellers of glucose comparable to that of their competitors, respondents adopted the practice of selling at the same delivered prices as their competitors. Respondents have been, and now are, unable to secure higher prices for their glucose than competitors charge for similar glucose. Respondents have consistently followed the prices for glucose announced by their competitors according to the pricing formula stated; that is, Chicago base plus freight to destination, except in certain instances where respondents have been the first to announce a change in the price of glucose, and in such instances they have announced prices in accord with the pricing formula therefore in use by their competitors and themselves.

PAR. 4. When an increase in the price of glucose or corn sirup unmixed is announced by respondents, a period of from 5 to 10 days following the announcement of such increase is allowed in which a purchaser may place an order for his requirements during the next 30 days, for delivery within such period, at the price in effect before the announcement of the increase. This practice of "booking" is theoretically available to all purchasers on equal terms but in practice some buyers benefit more than others and are enabled to purchase glucose at substantially lower prices than other buyers are paying on purchases concurrently made. Discriminations in price resulting from the booking practice occur in various ways, including the following:

(a) A large buyer may place an order for his next 30 days' requirements of glucose with each of several manufacturers. During the first 30 days the buyer may take all the glucose ordered from one manufacturer, or part of what has been ordered from each manufacturer with whom orders have been placed. At the end of the 30-day period such buyer will frequently inform the manufacturers that they will have to extend the time of delivery or cancel the order which was "booked," and that if canceled, other manufacturers will take care of the buyer and receive the business. Fearful of losing the good will of the buyer, manufacturers may extend the delivery time with the result that the buyer continues to get the benefit of the older and lower price for 60, 90, or even 120 days. A large buyer is more successful in securing such extensions of time than a small buyer because of the greater buying power which he possesses. In many instances this results in a small buyer of glucose paying the new and higher price long before the large buyer is obliged to do so; and if there have been a series of price advances resulting from an actively advancing corn market, the price of glucose or corn sirup unmixed being concurrently delivered to two competing buyers may vary as much as 30 cents, 40 cents, or 50 cents per hundredweight.

(b) When an advance in the price of glucose or corn syrup un-mixed is announced, the brokers or salesmen representing the manufacturer seek to secure orders from all buyers at the price in effect prior to the price increase announced. Even though they fail to secure orders, in some instances these sales representatives may notify their home offices that they have obtained orders. The manufacturer does not require signed purchase orders from buyers and, therefore, cannot determine from the face of the orders submitted by brokers or salesmen which are bona fide orders and which are not. Some manufacturers send confirmation forms to reported purchasers, and respondents have occasionally been informed by such customers that they have received one or several such confirmations without any knowledge of having placed the order so confirmed. The broker or salesman reporting fictitious "bookings" may later endeavor to convert such "bookings" into actual orders, with the result that when he is successful sales are made at the older and lower price long after the announcement of the advance in price. A large buyer is more frequently the beneficiary of such transactions than a small buyer.

(c) Some manufacturers deliberately offer to take business at the lower prices in effect preceding an advance in the price of glucose long after the privilege of buying at the lower price has expired as to other buyers. In some instances respondents have encountered transactions of this nature as long as 3 months after a price advance.

(d) Some buyers are unable, by reason of lack of storage or delivery facilities, to purchase glucose in tank car lots. Upon the announcement of an advance in the price of glucose, manufacturers have sold or offered to sell tank car lots of glucose to purchasers having no facilities which would permit their purchasing in such quantities and have fulfilled such orders by delivery in tank wagon quantities from their filling station stocks at the usual price differential for such deliveries, and for several months after the price advance have continued such deliveries at the older and lower price in effect before the advance.

Price advantages received by favored buyers as a result of practices such as those outlined in this paragraph have varied from 5 to 55 cents per hundredweight of glucose. Respondents have engaged in these discriminatory practices, which they assert were in use by their competitors at the time they entered the industry but which have been more frequent and widespread in the last several years. Respondents further assert that they had no alternative except to meet the competition of others in order to retain their customers and business. However, in granting extensions of the delivery time as set out in sub-paragraph (a), respondents have relied upon the verbal statements of buyers to their salesmen or brokers in determining whether or not such action was required to meet competition. Respondents have engaged in the practices stated in subparagraph (b) when they suspected, but did not have actual knowledge, that the "bookings" in question were being made without the knowledge or authorization of the buyer for whom the glucose was "booked." Respondents have, upon unsupported verbal representations of purchasers as to the action of other manufacturers, made discriminatory sales of glucose in the manner set forth in subparagraph (c). Respondents have made discriminatory sales of glucose to tank wagon buyers in the manner set out in subparagraph (d) upon reports by their salesmen of verbal statements by buyers concerning similar offers said to have been made by respondents' competitors.

PAR. 5. Glucose or corn sirup unmixed is used to some extent in the manufacture of most kinds of candy and is one of the major raw materials used in the production of many varieties. In candy in which it is used, glucose constitutes from 5 to 90 percent of the finished weight of such candy. The price paid for glucose represents a substantial part of the total raw material cost and the total manufacturing cost of many candies having a wide range of glucose content, and constitutes a major portion of the raw material and total manufacturing costs of candies having a relatively high glucose content.

Some of those who purchase glucose of like grade and quality from respondents, including purchasers located in the cities heretofore enumerated, are candy manufacturers who purchase such glucose for use in the manufacture of candy and who are competitively engaged in the sale of candy so produced to wholesalers, chain stores, retailers, and others located in the several States of the United States and competitively engaged in the resale thereof. The higher prices paid for glucose by candy manufacturers located as aforesaid other than in the city of Chicago, Ill., contribute in a greater or lesser degree to their having higher raw material costs than those candy manufacturers located in Chicago, the degree in each instance depending upon the difference in the price paid for glucose and the proportion of glucose used in the candies manufactured. Generally, glucose is used in greater proportion in candies which are sold by the manufacturers at but a few cents per pound and at narrow margins of profit. In the case of such low-priced candies bearing no differentiating name or brand, manufacturers thereof may attract customers by selling at as little as one-eighth of a cent per pound lower than competitors, and this is especially true in selling such candies to chain stores and other purchasers buying in large quantities and to whom a small difference in price is determinative in the placing of their business.

Under these circumstances, candy manufacturers who are obliged to pay higher prices for glucose than some of their competitors may sell candies at competitive prices only by absorbing the higher glucose costs or by attempting to recover such higher glucose costs by increasing the price of their candies and selling them upon a non-price basis. The result is to reduce the profit of such candy manufacturers, either directly through the absorption of higher glucose costs or indirectly through selling at higher than competitive prices, which results in a reduced volume of sale of high glucose-content candies because volume purchasers will not buy such candies at higher than competitive prices. The lower profits of candy manufacturers who are obliged to pay higher prices for glucose diminish their incentive or desire to compete with candy manufacturers paying lower prices for glucose and may deter potential candy manufacturers from entering the industry in cities where they would be obliged to pay higher prices for glucose.

PAR. 6. Glucose or corn sirup unmixed is used in the production of sirups for table use. Among those who purchase glucose from respondents, including purchasers located in the cities heretofore enumerated, are customers engaged in the preparation of table sirups containing glucose for sale to wholesalers, chain stores, and other food product distributors. Such mixed table sirups contain approximately 85 percent of glucose or corn sirup and are usually sold packed in cases which contain six 10-pound cans, or 60 pounds net of mixed table sirup, of which approximately 50 pounds is glucose.

The higher prices paid for glucose or corn sirup unmixed by purchasers engaged in the production of table sirups and located as aforesaid other than in Chicago, Ill., contribute in a greater or lesser degree to higher raw material costs and total costs than the corresponding costs of table sirup mixers located in Chicago, Ill., the degree in such instance depending upon the price paid for glucose. Producers of table sirup may attract customers by selling such sirup at prices as little as 5 cents per case lower than the prices of competitors. The savings in the cost of such sirup resulting from lower glucose prices to some producers, when utilized by those producers to reduce the price of table sirup, substantially diminishes the sales of table sirup by producers thereof paying higher prices for glucose; or, in the alternative, the producers paying higher prices for glucose meet the table sirup prices of their competitors who purchase glucose at lower prices. In either case the profits of producers of table sirups paying higher prices for glucose are reduced, and the reduction of profit diminishes the incentive of sirup mixers paying higher glucose prices to compete with producers of table sirups paying lower glucose prices and may deter potential sirup mixers from entering the industry in cities where they would be obliged to pay higher prices for glucose.

PAR 7. The record does not show that the aforesaid price differences of respondents, as among their customers purchasing glucose of like grade and quality, are such differences as make only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such commodities are to such purchasers sold or delivered.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid discriminations in price by respondents in the sale of glucose or corn sirup unmixed, as herein set forth, have resulted, and do result, in substantial injury to competition among purchasers of glucose by affording material and unjustified price advantages to some purchasers and not to others, and violate subsection (a) of section 2 of an act of Congress entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (Clayton Act), as amended by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1936, (Robinson-Patman Act).

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, certain stipulations as to the facts read into the record, exhibits introduced in evidence, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondents have violated subsection (a) of section 2 of "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (Clayton Act), as amended by act of June 19, 1936 (Robinson-Patman Act).

It is ordered, That respondents, A. E. Staley Manufacturing Co., a corporation, and The Staley Sales Co., a corporation, and their officers, directors, representatives, agents, and employees, in or in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of glucose or corn sirup unmixed in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the aforesaid Clayton Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Directly or indirectly discriminating in price between different purchasers of glucose or corn sirup unmixed of like grade and quality in the manner and degree set forth in paragraph 3 of the findings as to the facts herein, or in any manner or degree substantially similar thereto, or from continuing or resuming any such discriminations in price.

Order

34 F. T. C.

2. Discriminating in price between different purchasers of glucose in the manner or degree set out in paragraph 4 of the findings as to the facts herein, or in any manner or degree substantially similar thereto, or otherwise discriminating in price between purchasers by means of the booking or entry of orders for glucose or corn sirup unmixed where the price differences between purchasers resulting therefrom substantially approximate or exceed those set out in paragraphs 3 and 4 of the findings as to the facts herein: Provided, That this shall not prohibit actual sales of glucose or corn sirup unmixed for future delivery which do not involve such discriminations in price at the time of actual sale.

3. Otherwise discriminating in price as between purchasers of glucose or corn sirup unmixed of like grade and quality where the effect may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in the line of commerce in which customers of respondents are engaged, or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with any person who either grants or receives the benefit of such discrimination: Provided, That this shall not prevent price differences which make only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from differing methods or quantities in which said glucose or corn sirup is to such purchasers sold or delivered: and provided further, That this shall not prevent respondents from showing that any lower price to any purchaser was made in good faith to meet an equally low price of a competitor of respondents.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall, within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

SEGAL LOCK & HARDWARE COMPANY, INC., NORWALK
LOCK COMPANY, AND LOUIS SEGAL, AND JACK KLEIN
TRADING AS TESTED APPLIANCES COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3896. Complaint, Sept. 16, 1939—Decision, June 12, 1942

Where a corporation and its subsidiary, and an individual who was their president and treasurer and directed and controlled both, engaged in the manufacture and competitive interstate sale and distribution of locks and lock cylinders—

(a) Displayed legend bearing words "Pick-Proof" on a certain lock cylinder designed for use in new locks and for substitution in locks already installed, and on carton containers thereof, and represented thereby and through extensive advertisements in newspapers, periodicals, trade journals, circulars, and other printed matter, and by radio broadcasts, that their said lock cylinder in fact afforded absolute security against picking and was the only lock which did so; and

(b) Unfairly disparaged products of competitors by representing through numerous sales agents—who called upon stores, hotels, apartment houses, and other business establishments, as well as private homes, equipped with a picking gun and a number of lock picks, and conducted demonstrations purporting to show how easily locks concerned could be picked—that the locks of those thus contacted could easily be opened by picking so that they afforded little or no protection against burglary, and that their own lock aforesaid was absolutely pick proof;

The facts being that while their own said lock was, as indicated by the evidence, reasonably secure against customary or conventional methods of picking, such methods fall far short of being the only ones employed in picking, locks; locksmiths seldom use so-called conventional instruments or methods, but make their own devices; evidence and tests showed that their said device could be and had been picked by locksmiths in periods of time ranging from a few minutes to considerably longer; and representations aforesaid, with respect to the purported invulnerability of their lock against picking were erroneous and misleading;

With the result that numerous members of the public were induced to and did have their own locks removed and those aforesaid substituted, and with tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the public into the erroneous belief that their own said locks were in fact pick proof and to disparage unfairly competitors' products; as a result whereof, public was induced to purchase said products, and trade was thereby diverted unfairly to them from their competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Segal Lock & Hardware Co., Inc., a corporation; Norwalk Lock Co., a corporation; Louis Segal, an individual; and Jack Klein, an individual, trading as Tested Appliances Co., hereinafter referred to as the respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Segal Lock & Hardware Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business at 261 Broadway, New York, N. Y. Said corporation is now and has been for some time engaged in the sale and distribution of locks and lock cylinders, including a lock or lock cylinder designated as "Segal Pick-Proof Lock," "Segal Pick-Proof Lock Cylinder," and "Segal Pick-Proof Cylinder," hereinafter referred to as the Segal lock cylinder. Said device is the mechanical locking part or cylinder of a lock and is designed to be used in new locks or interchangeably in locks already installed after the removal of the original cylinder.

Respondent, Norwalk Lock Co., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Connecticut, with its principal office and place of business at 261 Broadway, New York, N. Y. Said corporation is a manufacturing subsidiary or division of the Segal Lock & Hardware Co., Inc., and is now and has been for some time engaged in the manufacture of locks and lock cylinders, including the lock cylinder device described in the preceding paragraph.

Respondent, Louis Segal, is an individual, serving as president and treasurer of the Segal Lock & Hardware Co., Inc., and the Norwalk Lock Co., with his principal office and place of business at 261

Complaint

Broadway, New York, N. Y. Said respondent formulates, controls, and directs the acts, practices and policies of said respondents, Segal Lock & Hardware Co., Inc., and Norwalk Lock Co.

Respondent, Jack Klein, is an individual, trading, operating, and doing business as Tested Appliances Co., with his principal office and place of business at 261 Broadway, New York, N. Y. Said respondent is now and has been for some time engaged in the sale, distribution, and installation of the Segal lock cylinder previously described.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of the aforesaid business, the respondents have been, and now are, cooperating and confederating in promoting, advertising, selling, and installing said Segal lock cylinder and in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 3. Respondents sell said Segal lock cylinder to purchasers situated in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and cause said device, when sold, to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. Said respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, in said Segal lock cylinder.

PAR. 4. Respondents are now, and have been during all the times mentioned herein, in substantial competition in commerce with other corporations, firms, partnerships and individuals likewise engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, distributing, and installing lock cylinders in commerce among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, who do not engage in the unfair methods and unfair and deceptive acts and practices herein alleged.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused, and are now causing, the dissemination of false and misleading statements, claims, and representations concerning the mechanical perfection and "pick-proof" quality of said Segal lock cylinder and the absence of such qualities in the locks or lock cylinders sold and distributed by their competitors. Said false, misleading, and disparaging statements, claims, and representations have been, and are now being, disseminated by insertions in newspapers, trade journals, and periodicals having a general circulation, and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among the various States of the United States, and by continuities broadcast from radio stations, which have sufficient power to, and do, convey the program emanating therefrom to listeners located in the various States of the United States other than the State in which such broadcasts originate for the purpose of inducing, and which have induced and are inducing, directly or indirectly, the purchase of their said product.

. Among and typical of said false, misleading, and disparaging statements, representations, and claims, disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, are the following:

No lock is safe without a Segal Pick-Proof Cylinder.

The Segal Pick-Proof Cylinder contains a series of ingenious locking devices, a complete internal system of safeguards which positively prevents opening by picking.

Now * * * after many years of the most pains-taking research he (Samuel Segal) has perfected the only lock cylinder that is impossible to pick.

Experts have tried to pick it open. Our competitors have tried. Recently, in New York, the inventor of the lock-picking gun tried to pick open the New Segal Pick-Proof Cylinder. Newspaper reporters were there. So were leading representatives of the trade. That expert failed, too. See the clippings attached.

New Segal Pick-Proof Lock Cylinder.

Without it, there is no real security. Without it, any lock can be picked open by skeleton keys or other lock-picking devices with which burglars are so expert. Only the New Segal Pick-Proof Cylinder cannot be picked open. The only way to open the New Pick-Proof Cylinder is with its own keys.

It cannot be picked, or opened, by any skill, art or machine.

Impossible to Open By Any Method of Lock Picking.

Nothing But the Proper Key Will Open It.

A Sensational Engineering Achievement. — The First Absolute Guarantee of Complete Safety From The Lock-Picking Menace.

The New Segal Cylinder is absolute proof against lockpicking and is the only certain protection against the dangerous picking gun.

The only genuine pick-proof cylinder ever invented.

It will protect your home and possessions by making the lock on your door absolutely pick-proof.

Every pin-tumbler cylinder should be replaced with a Segal Pick-Proof Cylinder! That's the only way your customers can be absolutely sure that no burglar will be able to pick their locks open!

Bernard Zion, co-inventor of the lock-picking gun, challenged the Segal Lock Company to a contest by saying that he thought he could open the new "pick-proof" locks invented by Sam Segal. * * * The contest was staged in the Segal offices; Mr. Zion tried to pick the lock, failed, now admits that it cannot be picked. If he can't do it, it can't be done.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of their aforesaid business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase and installation of said Segal lock cylinder, the respondents have represented and are representing, through the medium of demonstrations made to prospective purchasers, that locks or lock cylinders sold and installed by their competitors can be easily picked or opened by the use of a "pick gun" or a lock-picking device, and that such locks or lock cylinders so picked or opened are inferior to their own Segal lock cylinder. Said "pick gun" is a gun-shaped device, the pick prongs of which may be inserted into the cylinder of a lock. When said "pick gun" is so inserted and operated by a person trained in its use the locking device or the lock may be released and the lock unfastened. By the use of the aforesaid "pick gun" or other lock-picking device, the respondents, their salesmen, representatives, or agents have been, and are, picking and opening locks or lock cylinders manufactured and installed by their competitors, and by such demonstrations, accompanied by statements and representations as to the superiority and "pick-proof" quality of said Segal lock cylinder, said respondents, their salesmen, representatives, or agents have been and are disparaging the locks or lock cylinders manufactured and installed by their competitors.

PAR. 7. Through the use of the aforesaid false, misleading and disparaging statements, representations and claims, and others of similar import and meaning not herein set forth, the respondents have represented, directly or by implication, that said Segal lock cylinder is absolutely "pick-proof" under any and all circumstances; that experts have tried and failed to pick it; that the inventor of the "lock-picking gun" failed in a public demonstration to pick it; that without the respondents' locking device any lock can be picked or opened by skeleton keys or other lock-picking devices; that only the Segal lock cylinder cannot be picked or opened; that said device is the first device which is an absolute guarantee of complete safety from the lock-picking menace and dangerous pick-gun; that Bernard Zion the co-inventor of the "lock-picking gun" challenged the Segal Lock Co. to a contest, and that in response thereto a contest was staged at which said Bernard Zion tried to pick the respondents' said Segal lock cylinder, and failed; that said Bernard Zion thereupon admitted that respondents' said device could not be picked or opened without a key; that competitors' locks or lock cylinders are inferior to respondents' said Segal lock cylinder and that such inferior lock cylinders may be picked open, whereas respondents' device is pick-proof and cannot be opened with such an instrument or instruments.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid statements, representations, and claims, including the representations and implications made by and in connection with the "pick-gun" demonstrations alleged in paragraph 6 herein, made and disseminated by the respondents in the manner described above are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue.

In truth and in fact, said Segal lock cylinder is not absolutely "pick-proof" under any and all circumstances; and expert locksmiths have not failed to open it. All locks or lock cylinders can be opened or picked by some lock-picking device in the hands of an expert. Said Segal lock cylinder is not safe from the "lock-pick" menace and the picking gun. Bernard Zion, co-inventor of the "pick-gun," did not on the occasion of a public demonstration or contest fail in an honest endeavor to open said lock cylinder, for in truth and in fact, Bernard Zion only pretended that he could not open or pick said Segal lock cylinder and he has opened or picked said Segal lock cylinder. The representations and implications made by the respondents in connection with the demonstrations in the picking and opening of locks or lock cylinders of respondents' competitors to the effect that such locks or lock cylinders are inferior to respondents' Segal lock cylinder and that such inferior locks or lock cylinders may be picked open, whereas respondents' locking device is "pick-proof" and cannot be opened with a lock-picking device, are misleading and untrue and falsely and unfairly defame and disparage competitors and their products.

PAR. 9. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid false, misleading and disparaging statements, representations, and claims, including the representations and implications made by and in connection with the "pick-gun" demonstrations alleged in paragraph 6 hereof, has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive and has misled and deceived a substantial number of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the aforesaid false, misleading and disparaging statements, representations, and claims, including the representations and implications made by and in connection with the "pick-gun" demonstrations, are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' said Segal lock cylinder because of such erroneous and mistaken belief. As a direct result thereof, trade in commerce among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia has been diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors in said commerce who do not misrepresent the "pick-proof" quality of their locks or lock cylinders and who do not disparage their competitors' products.

PAR. 10. The aforesaid methods, acts, or practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts or practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on September 16, 1939, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Segal Lock & Hardware Co., Inc., a corporation, Norwalk Lock Co., a corporation, Louis Segal, an individual, and Jack Klein, an individual, trading as Tested Appliances Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the filing of the respondents' answers, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by the attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by the attorneys for certain of the respondents, before John W. Addison, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it which testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answers of the respondents, testimony, and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and the exceptions to such report, brief in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and oral argument, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Segal Lock & Hardware Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 261 Broadway, New York City, N. Y.

Respondent, Norwalk Lock Co., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Connecticut, with its principal office and place of business located at 261 Broadway, New York City, N. Y. This respondent is a subsidiary of respondent, Segal Lock & Hardware Co., Inc., being wholly owned by the Segal Lock & Hardware Co., Inc.

Respondent, Louis Segal, an individual, is president and treasurer of both of the corporate respondents, having his principal office at 261 Broadway, New York City, N. Y. He formulates, directs, and controls the policies, acts, and practices of the corporate respondents.

The Commission having concluded, for the reasons hereinafter set forth, that the complaint should be dismissed as to respondent, Jack

Klein, the term "respondent," as used hereinafter, will not include this respondent unless the contrary is indicated.

PAR. 2. The respondents are engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of locks and lock cylinders, including a certain lock cylinder designated by respondents as "Segal Pick-Proof Lock," "Segal Pick-Proof Lock Cylinder," and Segal Pick-Proof Cylinder." This device is the mechanical locking part or cylinder of a lock, and is designed to be used both in new locks and for installation in locks which have already been installed, the cylinder being substituted for the original cylinder in such locks.

The respondents have acted in cooperation and concert with one another in carrying out the acts and practices hereinafter described.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business the respondents cause and have caused their locks and lock cylinders, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain and for a number of years last past have maintained a course of trade in their locks and lock cylinders in commerce among and between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. The respondents are now and at all times mentioned herein have been in active and substantial competition with other corporations and individuals, and with firms and partnerships, engaged in the sale and distribution of locks and lock cylinders in commerce among and between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The lock cylinder in question bears the legend "Segal Pick-Proof," and a similar legend appears also on the carton in which the cylinder is packed and displayed for sale. In the course and conduct of their business, respondents have also advertised the cylinder extensively by means of advertisements inserted in newspapers, periodicals, and trade journals having wide circulation, by means of circulars and other printed matter distributed among prospective purchasers, and by means of radio broadcasts. Among the statements and representations appearing in such advertisements were the following:

No lock is safe without a Segal Pick-Proof Cylinder.

The Segal Pick-Proof Cylinder contains a series of ingenious locking devices, a complete internal system of safeguards which positively prevents opening by picking.

Now * * * after many years of the most painstaking research he (Samuel Segal) has perfected the only lock cylinder that is impossible to pick.

Impossible to Open By Any Method of Lock Picking.

Nothing But the Proper Key Will Open It.

A Sensational Engineering Achievement. The First Absolute Guarantee of Complete Safety From The Lock-Picking Menace.

The New Segal Cylinder is absolute proof against lockpicking and is the only certain protection against the dangerous picking gun.

The only genuine pick-proof cylinder ever invented.

It will protect your home and possessions by making the lock on your door absolutely pick-proof.

Only Your Key will Unlock It.

Every pin-tumbler cylinder should be replaced with a Segal Pick-Proof Cylinder! That's the only way your customers can be absolutely sure that no burglar will be able to pick their locks open!

You know that you can open any lock with skeleton keys, lock-picking gun, or other devices. So can the professional burglar. Yet, no one can pick open the new Pick-Proof Cylinder. The only way you, or any expert, can open it is with its proper keys.

Keep the Burglar Out—Get the only lock cylinder that can't be picked open.

Bernard Zion, co-inventor of the lock-picking gun, challenged the Segal Lock Company to a contest by saying that he thought he could open the new "pick-proof" locks invented by Sam Segal. * * * The contest was staged in the Segal offices; Mr. Zion tried to pick the lock, failed, now admits that it cannot be picked. If he can't do it, it can't be done.

PAR. 6. Through the use of these statements and representations, including the legends appearing on the cylinder and carton, the respondents represent that their lock cylinder is in fact pick proof, that it affords absolute security against picking, and that it is the only lock which does afford such security.

PAR. 7. Picking a lock may be defined as the opening of the lock without the use of the original or duplicate keys and without damage to the lock. The lock or lock cylinder here involved was first placed on the market by respondents in 1938. In the construction of the lock certain mechanical principles and features are employed which respondents contend render it impossible to manipulate the lock tumblers sufficiently to open the lock by picking. Some six locksmiths testifying at the instance of respondents stated that they had been unable to pick the lock although they had made a number of attempts to do so. On the other hand, three locksmiths testifying at the instance of the Commission stated that they had picked the lock on numerous occasions, and two of these witnesses conducted a demonstration in the presence of the trial examiner, all other persons being excluded from the room in which the demonstration took place. The reason for the exclusion of all persons other than the trial examiner was that the witnesses giving the demonstration regarded their picking method as a trade secret and objected to divulging it.

For the purpose of the demonstration three of respondents' cylinders were purchased at random from hardware or locksmith supply dealers. The first of the cylinders was successfully picked by one of the witnesses within 30 minutes, while the third cylinder was picked by the same witness within 4 minutes. In the attempt of the other witness to pick the second cylinder the instruments used by the witness became caught in the cylinder and the attempt to pick this cylinder was therefore abandoned. The record indicates that possibly this cylinder was not in perfect condition when it was purchased. While the two witnesses are employed in the same locksmith shop and have at times worked together in picking respondents' lock, each worked alone on this occasion.

These two locksmiths testified that they had previously picked respondents' cylinder some 30 to 40 times, and that the average time required to pick the cylinder on these occasions was between 20 and 30 minutes. They further stated that they had not used the same cylinder in all of their attempts, but had used some 10 different cylinders and moreover had adjusted the 10 cylinders from time to time so as to cause them to have varying combinations. According to the testimony of these witnesses, the shortest period of time during which they had been able to pick the cylinder, prior to the demonstrations before the trial examiner, was 7 minutes, while the longest period of time required was 45 minutes.

PAR. 8. The evidence on behalf of respondents shows that the customary or conventional lock picks available at hardware and locksmith supply stores are restricted to a few types, there being only some 8 or 10 types of such picks, and respondents insist that their lock cannot be picked by the use of such devices. They also insist that their lock cannot be picked through the use of a certain instrument known as a "picking gun," which is a device somewhat resembling a pistol in appearance and having a pointed projection which may be inserted into the keyway of a lock and used to manipulate the lock tumblers. The record indicates that respondents' lock is reasonably secure against such customary or conventional methods of picking, and respondents contend that this fact warrants their claims that their lock is pick proof.

It is further evident from the record, however, that these customary or conventional lock picks and methods of picking fall far short of being the only devices and methods which may be and frequently are employed in the picking of locks. In fact, locksmiths seldom use the so-called conventional instruments or methods at all, but make their own devices and instruments, depending upon the particular lock which they are called upon to open. The fact that at least three locksmiths have been able to pick respondents' lock on numerous occasions, and the further fact that one of these locksmiths picked the lock twice in the demonstration before the trial examiner, show that the lock is not in fact pick proof. The Commission therefore finds that respondents' representations with respect to the purported invulnerability of their lock against picking are erroneous and misleading.

PAR. 9. In an effort to promote the sale of their lock direct to the purchasing public, the respondents early in 1939 organized a separate division or department of their business under the name of Tested Appliances Co., and placed respondent, Jack Klein, in charge of the operations of such division. While the complaint herein alleged, in substance, that Klein was the owner of the business known as Tested Appliances Co., the evidence discloses that Klein was in fact only an employee of the other respondents herein, and that while he was vested with a limited amount of authority in the operation of this phase of respondents' business, his actions were at all times subject to the general supervision and control of the other respondents. He was discharged by respondents in May 1939, and since that time has had no connection with the sale of respondents' products.

In conducting this phase of their business the practice of the respondents was to send out numerous sales agents, at times some two thousand in number who called upon stores, hotels, apartment houses, and other business establishments, as well as private homes, and represented to such prospective purchasers that the locks of such persons were insecure, could easily be opened by picking, and that such locks therefore afforded little or no protection against burglary. Each of these salesmen was provided by respondents with a picking gun and with a number of lock picks, and in connection with and as a part of their sales efforts the salesmen conducted certain demonstrations purporting to show how easily the locks of the prospective purchasers could be picked. Along with such purported demonstrations numerous representations were made to such prospective purchasers to the effect that respondents' lock was absolutely pick proof. As a result of such practices on the part of respondents through their agents, numerous members of the public were induced to and did have their locks removed and respondents' lock substituted therefor. The Commission finds that these practices on the part of respondents constituted an unfair disparagement of the products of respondents' competitors.

PAR. 10. The Commission further finds that the acts and practices of the respondents as herein described have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that respondents' locks are in fact pick proof, and the tendency and capacity to disparage unfairly the products of respondents' competitors. In consequence thereof such portion of the public has been induced to purchase and has purchased respondents' products, with the result that substantial trade has been diverted unfairly to the respondent from their competitors.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answers of respondents, testimony, and other evidence taken before John W. Addison, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and the exceptions to such report, briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and oral argument, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that certain of the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondents, Segal Lock & Hardware Co., Inc., a corporation, Norwalk Lock Co., a corporation, their officers, and Louis Segal, individually, and as an officer of said corporations, and respondents' representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of respondents' locks and lock cylinders in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the words "pick proof," or any other word or words of similar import, to designate or describe respondents' locks or lock cylinders, or otherwise representing, directly or by implication, that respondents' locks or lock cylinders cannot be picked.

2. Conducting demonstrations purporting to show that locks or lock cylinders sold by respondents' competitors can be picked, unless in connection with such demonstrations disclosure is made that respondents' locks and lock cylinders can also be picked.

It is further ordered, That said respondents shall, within 60 days after the service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That the complaint herein be, and it hereby is, dismissed as to respondent, Jack Klein.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
 OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3898. Complaint, Sept. 20, 1939—Decision, June 16, 1942

Where three corporations and two individuals, general officers of two of said concerns and in control of their activities and policies, the third having become inactive; engaged in interstate sale of photographs to members of the purchasing public—

In soliciting business under a plan by which their agents, supplied with a letter from a local newspaper—in consideration of furnishing the paper a glossy print of photographs taken in its community—introducing the agent as a photographer of the "National Press Photo Bureau" (one of corporate names employed), engaged in taking pictures of leading citizens for the paper's files—

- (a) Represented that the photograph was desired for their files or "photographic morgue" and for use by newspapers or other publications, and, following approval of proof by the subject, endeavored, with frequent success, to solicit purchase of one or more copies of the photograph selected; and
- (b) Represented, through use of words "National Press" as part of one of their corporate names and through their aforesaid practices, that they conducted a news or press photographic agency engaged in taking photographs intended for release to newspapers and other publications; when in fact they did not conduct such an agency, had no connection with any newspaper except as above set forth in regard to letters of introduction, but, as aforesaid, were engaged in selling photographs, and their said method was merely a scheme or device to secure sittings and sell photographs to prospective customers;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that such representations were true, thereby causing it to purchase substantial quantities of photographs because of such mistaken belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices.

Reese, individually, and as officers of National Press Photo Bureau, Inc., a corporation, and Kay Hart Studios, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, National Press Photo Bureau, Inc., Kay Hart Studios, Inc., Bolivar Studios, Inc., are corporations, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, having their offices and principal places of business at 509 Fifth Avenue, in the city of New York, in said State.

Samuel F. Reese, is president, and Clara L. Reese, is secretary-treasurer, of National Press Photo Bureau, Inc., and Kay Hart Studios, Inc., respectively, and are individuals, having their offices and principal places of business at 509 Fifth Avenue, in the city of New York, in said State, and they direct and control the sales activities and policies of all of said corporate respondents with respect to the acts and practices herein set forth. All of said respondents act in concert in doing the acts and things hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 2. The respondents are now and have been for more than 2 years last past engaged in the business of photographing persons, and in the sale and distribution of said photographs. Respondents sell said photographs to members of the purchasing public situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia and cause the said photographs, when sold by them, to be transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in commerce in said photographs among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business, and for the purpose of securing permission to take said photographs and of inducing the purchase thereof, respondents have caused false and misleading statements and representations with respect to the identity, nature, and character of their business to be disseminated among prospective purchasers of said photographs situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents or their agents call on prominent men situated in various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and display business cards bearing the statement, "National Press Photo Bureau, Inc., Purveyors of Photographs to Leading Trade, Financial and Professional Publications," letters of introduction, and letters transmitting proofs and invoices with similar representations therein, to prospects, stating they desire a photograph of such person for the press, that is, for newspapers, magazines, and other periodicals published throughout the United States, and for publication therein; that National Press Photo Bureau, Inc., is directly or indirectly connected with the leading newspapers of the United States; that National Press Photo Bureau, Inc. represents the local newspapers and has a following throughout the country; that prospects' pictures are wanted by the local and other newspapers; that respondents are taking pictures of prominent men for use in trade publications, newspapers, and other publications; that they are obtaining said photographs for the files of National Press, which furnishes said photographs to the press and that National Press is likely to get calls for their pictures; and otherwise, directly or by implication, represent that they are representatives of or connected with one of the recognized news or photographic news services, desiring to procure photographs of such person for the purpose of publishing the same.

By means of the use of such statements and representations disseminated as aforesaid, the respondents or their agents procure permission from such persons to take their photographs. Respondents or their agents cause photographs of such persons to be taken and thereafter request such persons to select and approve one of the negatives, which respondents or their agents represent is to be released to the press. After such selection is made by the prospective purchasers, respondents, or their agents attempt to sell, and sell to such persons quantities of the finished photographs.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid statements and representations used and disseminated by the respondents in the manner above described are deceptive, false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact none of the respondent corporations is a news or press photographic agency. None of the respondents nor their agents or representatives have any connection, direct or indirect, with any newspaper or other publication. The respondents do not take the photographs of the aforesaid members of the purchasing public for the purpose of distributing such photographs to newspapers or any other publication or for the press library of any of the corporate respondents, the respondents take such photographs for the purpose of selling the same to such members of the purchasing public. The said corporate respondents receive very few, if any, calls for any of their said photographs from newspapers or other publications, and none of them has or maintains a press library.

Through the use by the respondents of the name National Press Photo Bureau, Inc., respondents represent and imply, that the respondent, National Press Photo Bureau, Inc., was organized by, is a part of, or has some direct and substantial connection with the press of the United States to a Nation-wide extent, when in truth and in fact, said respondent, National Press Photo Bureau, Inc., was not organized by, is not a part of, and has no direct or indirect connection with the press of the United States to a Nation-wide extent, or any other extent, or on any other basis, except that occasional sales are made of photographs to individual publications.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to the identity, nature, and character of the business of the corporate respondents has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such false statements and representations are true, and causes a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of said erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' photographs.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on September 20, A. D., 1939, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, National Press Photo Bureau, Inc., a corporation; Kay Hart Studios, Inc., a corporation; Bolivar Studios, Inc., a corporation; and Samuel F. Reese and Clara L. Reese, individually, and as officers, of National Press Photo Bureau, Inc., a corporation, and Kay Hart Studios, Inc., a corporation, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto were introduced by attorneys for the Commission and for the respondents before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer thereto, the testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiners and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and oral argument by counsel for the Commission and counsel for respondents. And the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom :

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, National Press Photo Bureau, Inc., and Kay Hart Studios, Inc., are corporations, organized under the laws of the State of New York, with their offices and principal place of business at 509 Fifth Avenue, in the city and State of New York.

Respondent, Bolivar Studios, Inc., was a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York, and until some time in the early part of the year 1939, when it ceased to function, its principal place of business was the same as that of the other respondents.

Respondents, Samuel F. Reese and Clara L. Reese, are respectively the president and the secretary and treasurer of respondents, National Press Photo Bureau, Inc., and Kay Hart Studios, Inc ; they direct and control the activities and policies of these corporations and act in concert with them in doing the acts and things hereinafter mentioned.

PAR. 2. The corporate respondents, National Press Photo Bureau, Inc., and Kay Hart Studios, Inc., are now, and for more than 2 years prior to the issuance of the complaint herein have been, engaged in the business of photographing prominent men and in selling and distributing such photographs.

Respondent, Bolivar Studios, Inc., was similarly engaged until the early part of the year 1939.

Respondents, during the periods mentioned, sold said photographs to members of the purchasing public and caused the same, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States. During all of the periods herein mentioned respondents maintained a course of trade in said photographs in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Findings

PAR. 3. Respondents' agents, for the purpose of obtaining permission to take photographs and of inducing the purchase thereof, call upon prominent men throughout the United States and present a business card bearing the statement "National Press Photo Bureau, Inc., Purveyors of Photographs to Leading Trade, Financial and Professional Publications," and at the same time exhibit a letter of introduction obtained from a local newspaper in consideration of furnishing the paper a glossy print of photographs taken in its community. The following are typical of such letters:

This will introduce Mr. Delacrioux, photographer of the National Press Photo Bureau, who is making pictures of a number of Wichita Falls citizens.

It is understood that your sitting for this picture does not obligate you or the Times Publishing Company in any way.

It is our intention to use the prints we will be furnished by the Bureau for our files, for use as the occasion may arise.

We will appreciate your sitting for Mr. Delacrioux.

TIMES PUBLISHING COMPANY.

The agent represents that the photograph is desired for the files or photographic "morgue" of one of the respondents and for use by newspapers or other publications. The person so contacted frequently sit for their photographs, the negatives of which, after they are taken by respondents' agents, are forwarded to respondents in New York, where they are developed and proofs are printed and transmitted to the agent, who delivers them to the respective subjects, with the request in each case that one be approved for use by the press. After the selection has been made by the subject, the agent solicits him to purchase one or more copies of the photograph selected, and in many cases such solicitation is successful.

PAR. 4. Respondents, by their acts and practices as set forth in Paragraph 3 hereof, and by use of the words "National Press" as part of one of their corporate names, represent that they conduct a news or press photographic agency, engaged in the taking of photographs intended for release to newspapers or other publications, which representations are false and misleading. Respondents, in truth and, in fact, are not engaged in conducting a news or press photographic agency, nor have they any connection with any newspaper except, as hereinbefore stated, in regard to letters of introduction but, on the contrary, respondents are engaged in the business of selling photographs, and their method of doing business is merely a scheme or device for the purpose of securing sittings and selling photographs to prospective customers.

PAR. 5. The use by respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has mislead and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and has caused a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such mistaken and erroneous belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' photographs.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents are to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, the testimony, and other evidence in support of and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint taken before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, the report of the trial examiners thereon and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint, and oral argument of counsel. And the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act:

It is ordered, That respondents, National Press Photo Bureau, Inc., a corporation; Kay Hart Studios, Inc., a corporation, and Bolivar Studios, Inc., a corporation—their officers, directors, representatives, agents, and employees; and respondents, Samuel F. Reese and Clara L. Reese, individually, and as officers of corporate respondents, National Press Photo Bureau, Inc., and Kay Hart Studios, Inc., jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the solicitation of permission to make photographs, or the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of photographs, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the words "National Press," or any other word or words of similar import or meaning, in the corporate name of respondent, National Press Photo Bureau, Inc., or as a part of any other trade or corporate name, to designate or describe a business which is principally for the purpose of making and selling photographs to the individuals photographed.

2. Representing or implying in any manner to a prospective customer, that respondents, or either of them, are news or press photographers, or that they conduct a news or press photographic agency; or that any photograph taken by them is for press or publicity purposes, unless such photograph is actually for immediate press or publicity use.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

SIMON ARON, MORRIS ARON AND LOUIS BROUDO,
TRADING AS NOVELTY SALES COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4039. Complaint, Feb. 24, 1940—Decision, June 16, 1942

Where three partners; engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of clocks, knives, flashlights, trays, jewelry, and other merchandise to dealers—

Sold and distributed assortments thereof which were so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumer, a typical assortment consisting of a number of articles of merchandise, together with a punchboard—in manufacture and sale of which two of the partners were also engaged—
• under a plan by which persons securing certain numbers for the 5 cents usually paid for a punch secured the articles, others receiving nothing; and thereby

Supplied to and placed in the hands of purchasers, who exposed their assortments to the purchasing public and distributed merchandise in accordance with plan described, a means of conducting games of chance, gift enterprises, or lotteries in the sale of said products in accordance with such plan;

With the result that many persons purchased said merchandise in preference to that offered by competitors who did not use similar sales methods, whereby competition was hindered and trade unfairly diverted from such competitors to them:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, were contrary to the public policy of the United States Government, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. John W. Addison, Mr. Arthur F. Thomas, and Mr. Andrew B. Duvall, trial examiners.

Mr. D. C. Daniel and Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr. for the Commission.

Mr. Arthur S. Salus and Mr. David S. Molod, of Philadelphia, Pa., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Simon Aron, Morris Aron, and Louis Broudo, individually and as copartners, trading under the name of Novelty Sales Co., have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in

7396

respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Simon Aron, Morris Aron, and Louis Broudo, are individuals, trading as copartners, under the name of Novelty Sales Co., with their principal office and place of business located at 806 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Respondents are now, and for more than 1 year last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of clocks, knives, flashlights, trays, jewelry, and various other articles of merchandise to dealers located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. They cause, and have caused, their said merchandise, when sold, to be shipped or transported from their aforesaid place of business in the State of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now, and for more than 1 year last past has been, a course of trade by said respondents in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of their business, respondents are, and have been, in competition with other partnerships and individuals, and with corporations, engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents sell, and have sold, to dealers certain assortments of said merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when said merchandise is sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

Respondents' said merchandise is sold and distributed to the consuming public by means of devices commonly known as punchboards, in substantially the following manner: Assortments of said merchandise consist of a number of articles of merchandise, together with one of said punchboards. Said punchboards have printed on the tops thereof various instructions or legends showing the method or sales plan by which said merchandise is to be sold or distributed to the purchasing or consuming public. Sales are generally .5 or 10 cents each, and said punchboard has a number of sealed tubes in which have been inserted slips of paper with numbers appearing thereon. Each purchaser is entitled to punch one of said slips from said board. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the slip of paper punched or removed from said board. Persons punching certain specified numbers are entitled to and receive specified articles of merchandise. Persons obtaining numbers not so specified receive nothing for their money. Said articles of merchandise are thus sold and distributed to the consuming or purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

Others of said punchboards have no instructions or legends printed thereon but have blank spaces provided therefor. On those punchboards the purchasers thereof place instructions or legends which have the same import or meaning as the instructions or legends placed by respondents on said punchboard devices first hereinabove described.

Respondents sell and distribute various assortments of their said merchandise and furnish various devices for use in the sale and distribution of said merchandise, but the sales plan or method employed with each of said devices is substantially the same as the sales plan or method hereinabove described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase or procure respondents' said merchandise and said punchboards and other devices, either directly or indirectly, from respondents, expose said devices and the said merchandise accompanying same to the purchasing public, and sell or distribute such articles of merchandise in accordance with the above described sales plans or methods. Respondents thus supply to, and place in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries, gift enterprises, or games of chance in the sale of said merchandise in accordance with the sales plans or methods hereinabove set forth. Such sales plans or methods have the tendency and capacity to induce the consuming or purchasing public to purchase respondents' merchandise in preference to similar merchandise offered for sale and sold by their competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above described involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise at prices less than the normal retail prices thereof. The use by respondents of said methods in the sale of their merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said methods is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws. The use by respondents of said sales plans or methods has the tendency to unfairly hinder competition. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute merchandise in competition with the respondents, as above described, are unwilling to adopt and use said methods or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in, and ultimate purchasers of, merchandise similar to that distributed by respondents are attracted by respondents' said sales plans or methods and by the element of chance involved in the sale of said merchandise in the manner above described and are thereby induced to purchase said merchandise from respondents in preference to similar merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondents who do not use the same or similar methods. The use of said methods by respondents has the capacity and tendency, because of said game of chance, lottery scheme, or gift enterprise, unfairly to divert trade to respondents from their competitors who do not use the same or equivalent or similar methods, and has the capacity to deprive the purchasing public of free competition in said merchandise.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 24th day of February A. D. 1940, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Simon Aron, Morris Aron, and Louis Broudo, individually, and as copartners, trading under the name, "Novelty Sales Company," charging them with unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of the complaint and filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, said proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral argument and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the public interest and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, Simon Aron, Morris Aron, and Louis Broudo, from 1927, A. D., to December 31, 1939, were co-partners trading under the name Novelty Sales Co. On the latter date the partnership was discontinued and respondent Simon Aron became sole owner and operator of the business until June 29, 1940, when he died. Since that time his widow, Jennie Aron has conducted the business. Respondents' principal place of business was located at 806 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and Jennie Aron now conducts the business at this place.

PAR. 2. Respondents, during the existence of the partnership, and respondent, Simon Aron, from the time of the dissolution of the partnership until the time of his death, were engaged in the sale and distribution of clocks, knives, flashlights, trays, jewelry, and other articles of merchandise to dealers located in various States of the United States. Respondents caused their merchandise, when sold, to be shipped from their place of business in Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States.

Respondents, during the periods herein stated, were in competition with other individuals and partnerships, and with corporations, engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar merchandise in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

Respondents, Morris Aron and Louis Broudo, are also engaged in the business of manufacturing punchboards which were sold to the respondents.

PAR. 3. Respondents sold and distributed assortments of their merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Such assortments consisted of a number of articles of merchandise together with a punchboard. Such punchboards had printed on the top thereof various instructions explaining the method or sales plan by which the merchandise was to be sold or distributed to the consuming public. The punchboards had a number of tubes containing slips of paper bearing numbers. These numbers were effectively concealed within the tube until it had been punched and the paper withdrawn. Five cents was the usual price charged for the privilege of punching one of these tubes.

1396

Order

Persons who punched tubes bearing certain numbers received the article of merchandise stated in the legend; nothing was received by the persons punching other numbers. The merchandise was thus sold and distributed to the consuming public wholly by lot or chance.

Respondents sold and distributed various assortments of merchandise and furnished various devices for use in the sale and distribution thereof, but the sales plan or method was the same as that herein described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 4. The purchasers of respondents' assortments exposed the same and said device to the purchasing public, and sold and distributed the merchandise in accordance with the herein described plan or sales method. Respondents thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting games of chance, gift enterprises, or lotteries in the sale of their said merchandise, in accordance with their said sales plan.

PAR. 5. Respondents' sales plan involved a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure articles of merchandise at a price less than the normal retail price thereof, and because of this, many persons purchased respondents' merchandise in preference to similar merchandise offered for sale by competitors of respondents who were unwilling to use and did not use the same or similar methods in disposing of their merchandise. As a result, competition has been hindered and trade unfairly diverted to respondents from their competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondents' competitors, are contrary to the public policy of the Government of the United States of America, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint taken before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, report of the trial examiner, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and oral argument: And the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Order

It is ordered, That respondents, Morris Aron and Louis Broudo, individually, and as copartners, trading under the name of Novelty Sales Co., or trading under any other name, jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of clocks, knives, flashlights, trays, jewelry, or any other merchandise, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of same to the public are to be made or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery device, either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said punchboards, push or pull cards, or other lottery device, are to be used or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the complaint, insofar as it relates to respondent, Simon Aron, be and the same hereby is dismissed.

It is further ordered, That respondents, Morris Aron and Louis Broudo shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

BLANK & STOLLER CORPORATION, HARRY H. LONG,
GEORGE STOLLER, MAURICE SCHULTZ, AND RAN-DOLPH FAJEN

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4523. Complaint, June 24, 1941—Decision, June 16, 1942

Where a corporation previously engaged in making and selling photographs, in the course of which it acquired a large number of negatives, together with the three officers in control of its business activities and a fourth individual, engaged in making and selling photographic miniatures from said negatives; by means of circular letters to prospective purchasers, whose names and addresses they obtained from the corporate files along with corresponding negatives—

Represented that the miniatures they offered from negatives of photographs of the prospect had been displayed at public exhibition, were regularly or frequently sold for as much as $75 or $50, and that the quoted price of $12.50 was greatly reduced and a special offer; and that such miniatures were prepared by a new and unusual method;

The facts being that while their place of business had a show case containing a number of miniatures—many of which had been rejected—which could be seen by persons entering, none of the miniatures had in fact been displayed in any public exhibition within the real meaning of the term; none of them had ever sold for any such amounts; quoted price was neither special nor reduced but the regular and customary one which they sought and which they even made no serious effort to maintain, selling at the best price obtainable and sometimes for as low as $5; and methods used were not new or unusual, but commonly known and employed in the trade generally;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to said products, causing thereby its purchase thereof:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Blank & Stoller Corporation, a corporation, and Harry J. Long, George Stoller, Maurice Schultz, and Randolph Fajen, individually, and doing business as Blank & Stoller Studios, hereinafter designated and referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Blank & Stoller Corporation, is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York and having its office and principal place of business at 227 East Forty-fifth Street, New York, N. Y. The respondents Harry J. Long, George Stoller, and Maurice Schultz are, and at all times hereinafter mentioned, have been, officers of said Blank & Stoller Corporation in charge and control of its business and activities. The said respondents, Harry J. Long, George Stoller, and Maurice Schultz, and the respondent, Randolph Fajen, are individuals, and have at all times hereinafter mentioned done business at Blank & Stoller Studios with their office and principal place of business at 227 East Forty-fifth Street, New York, N. Y., said office and principal place of business being the same as that of respondent, Blank & Stoller Corporation.

PAR. 2. The respondents are now and for more than 1 year last past have been engaged in the production, sale, and distribution of photographic miniatures, sometimes known as gold-tone miniatures. The respondents sell, and at all times mentioned herein have sold, said product to members of the purchasing public situated in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, causing said product when sold to be transported from their said place of business in the State of New York, or other point of origin of shipment, to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. The respondents for more than 1 year last past have entered into and carried out various understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies for the purpose of selling said photographic miniatures to the purchasing public, and of obtaining photographs and negatives from which to produce said miniatures, by the use of false, misleading, and deceptive representations concerning said product, and concerning the purpose for which certain photographs and negatives were obtained as hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 4. Pursuant to said understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies, and in furtherance thereof the respondents for more than 1 year last past, acting in concert and cooperation with each other, for the purpose of promoting the sale of said product, and for the purpose of obtaining certain photographs from which to produce some of said miniatures, have engaged in the practice of making false representations as to the merits of their said miniatures, and as to the purposes for which certain photographs and negatives were desired as hereinafter alleged. Said false representations are and have been made by means of letters and other printed and written matter distributed among customers and prospective customers, and by oral statements made to customers and prospective customers.

PAR. 5. Among the false and misleading representations so made and distributed concerning respondents' said product, and in furtherance of said understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies are the following:

Recently we made a goldtone miniature from one of your negatives for display at an exhibition of miniatures, as we considered it admirably adapted for the purpose.

The Exhibition has been concluded and we are taking this occasion to offer you the opportunity of acquiring for yourself this fine reproduction at the greatly reduced price of $12.50. Our regular price is $75.00.

Recently we took occasion to offer you a very fine miniature of yourself which we have on hand. Our special offer to you of $12.50 for the miniature was a fraction of our regular price for this type of work.

The miniatures are selling for as high as $50.00, according to the type of workmanship. However, due to our new method of preparation, we are able to furnish a goldtone miniature for you, that will be as fine in every respect as the miniatures selling for higher prices.

By the use of said representations and others of similar import and meaning not herein specifically set forth, the respondents have represented and do represent that said miniatures so offered for sale have been displayed at a legitimate exhibition of the kind ordinarily conducted by photographers to which the public was invited and which were largely attended; that the sum of $12.50 is a greatly reduced price for said miniatures, and constitutes a special offer; that the regular price at which respondents sell said miniatures is in some instances

34 F. T. C.

$75, and in other instances $50; and that said miniatures are prepared by a new and novel method heretofore unknown to persons engaged in the production of similar miniatures.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representations are false and misleading. In truth and in fact said miniatures are not and have not been displayed at a legitimate exhibition of the kind ordinarily conducted by photographers to which the public was invited and which were largely attended, or at any other exhibition; the sum of $12.50 is not a reduced price for said miniatures, but is the price at which they are usually offered for sale by said respondents, and does not constitute a special offer; the regular price at which said miniatures are sold is not $50 or $75 or any sum approaching either of these amounts; said miniatures are not prepared by a new or novel method heretofore unknown to persons engaged in the business of producing miniatures.

PAR. 7. Many of the miniatures sold by respondents, as heretofore alleged, have been made from photographs or negatives supplied by the respondent, Blank & Stoller Corporation. In order to obtain additional and other photographs and negatives from which to produce miniatures, respondents in the course and conduct of their said business and in furtherance of said understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies have falsely represented to numerous members of the purchasing public located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia that they were connected with one or more newspapers or press associations, and were desirous of taking photographs of said members of the purchasing public for use by said newspapers or press associations at some future date. In truth and in fact none of said respondents is, or at any time herein mentioned has been, in any way connected with any newspaper or press association, and said photographs and negatives were in fact wanted only for the purposes of preparing miniatures to be offered for sale to the various persons to whom said representations were made.

PAR. 8. The use by the respondents of the aforesaid acts, practices, and methods has the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' said product.

PAR. 9. The aforesaid methods and practices of the respondents, including said understandings, agreements, combinations, and conspiracies, and the things done thereunder and pursuant thereto and in furtherance thereof, as hereinabove alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on June 24, 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Blank & Stoller Corporation, a corporation, and Harry H. Long (referred to in the complaint as Harry J. Long), George Stoller, Maurice Schultz, and Randolph Fajen, individually, and doing business as Blank & Stoller Studios, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the filing of answers by the respondents (except respondent, Stoller, who filed no answer), testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by the attorneys for certain of the respondents, before John W. Addison, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and such testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the answers of the respondents, testimony, and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and the exceptions to such report, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint (oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Blank & Stoller Corporation, is a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, its office and principal place of business having formerly been located at 227 East Forty-fifth Street, New York, N. Y. While the corporation has not been dissolved, it has been adjudicated a bankrupt and is no longer engaged in business operations.

Respondents, Harry H. Long, George Stoller, and Maurice Schultz, are officers of the corporate respondent, and at all times referred to herein, were in full charge of its business activities. They formulated the policies and directed and controlled all of the acts and practices of the corporation. The present address of respondent, Long, is 33 West Forty-second Street, New York, N. Y., that of respondent, Schultz, is 91 East Fifty-ninth Street, New York, N. Y., and the last known address of respondent, Stoller, is 227 East Forty-fifth Street, New York, N. Y.

The present address of respondent, Fajen, is 45 West Fifty-seventh Street, New York, N. Y.

PAR. 2. During the period of its active business operations respondent, Blank & Stoller Corporation, was engaged in the business of making and selling photographs, and in the course of its operations it acquired a large number of photograph negatives. In March 1940, an agreement was entered into among all of the respondents herein under which the respondents engaged in the joint business of making and selling photographic miniatures, sometimes referred to as gold-tone miniatures. The miniatures were made from the negatives in the files of the Blank & Stoller Corporation. This business, which was operated under the name of Blank & Stoller Studios, was continued by all of the respondents until about April 1, 1941. At that time a controversy arose between respondent, Fajen, and the other respondents, and Fajen severed his connection with the business. The other respondents continued to operate the business for some 2 months thereafter, when it was discontinued entirely. The corporation was adjudicated a bankrupt on August 14, 1941.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business the respondents sold their miniatures to numerous members of the purchasing public situated throughout the United States, and caused the miniatures, when sold, to be transported from respondents' place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintained a course of trade in their products in commerce among and between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In promoting the sale of their miniatures the respondents addressed numerous circular letters to prospective purchasers, the names and addresses of such persons being obtained from the files of the corporation, along with the corresponding negatives. One form of letter in common use by the respondents read in part as follows:

You will probably recollect that a few years ago we finished some very fine photographs of you.

Recently we made a goldtone miniature from one of your negatives for display at an exhibition of miniatures, as we considered it admirably adapted for the purpose.

The exhibition has been concluded and we are taking this occasion to offer you the opportunity of acquiring for yourself this fine reproduction at the greatly reduced price of $12.50. Our regular price is $75.00.

If no response was received to this letter, a second letter was usually addressed to the prospect which read in part as follows:

Recently we took occasion to offer you a very fine miniature of yourself which we have on hand from our recent exhibition of miniatures. Our special offer to you of $12.50 for the miniature was a fraction of our regular price for this type of work.

Inasmuch as we have no further exhibitions planned at this time, we believe the miniature would be of far greater value to you, than to us. Accordingly, we are bringing the matter to your attention once more.

Another letter used by respondents read in part as follows:

Have you any of our photographs that we made of you? If not, perhaps you will recall that we made some large portraits for you some time ago?

Many of our customers have found that besides a large portrait, they would like to have a miniature. Something compact to have on a desk or dressing table, perhaps a gift to their children or relatives. They wanted something that would look expensive yet would not cost too much. We experimented with a few miniatures and our best to date is our goldtone miniature.

Your negative is very adaptable and would make a beautiful goldtone miniature. These miniatures are selling for as high as $50,000, according to the type of workmanship. However, due to our new method of preparation, we are able to finish a goldtone miniature for you for $12.50, that will be as fine in every respect as the miniatures selling for higher prices.

PAR. 5. Through the use of these representations and others of a similar nature, the respondents represented to prospective purchasers that the miniatures offered for sale had been displayed at public exhibitions; that the miniatures regularly or frequently sold for prices as high as $75 and $50, and that the quoted price of $12.50 was a greatly reduced price and constituted a special offer; and that the miniatures were prepared by a new and unusual method theretofore unknown to persons engaged in the production of miniatures.

PAR. 6. The evidence shows and the Commission finds that none of the miniatures offered for sale by respondents had in fact been displayed at any public exhibition. There was in respondents' place of business a showcase containing a number of miniatures, many of which had been rejected by purchasers, and these miniatures could be seen by persons entering respondents' place of business, but there had never been any exhibition of any of the miniatures within the real meaning of the term. None of respondents' miniatures had ever sold for $75 or $50, or for any amount approaching such figures. The quoted price of $12.50 was in no sense a special or reduced price and did not constitute a special offer, but was the regular and customary price sought by respondents for the miniatures. In fact, respondents made no serious effort to maintain even the price of $12.50 but sold the miniatures at the best price obtainable, sometimes as low as $5. The method used in the preparation of the miniatures was in no sense new or unusual but was a method commonly known and used in the trade generally.

34 F. T. C.

The Commission therefore finds that the representations made by the respondents were false, misleading, and deceptive.

PAR. 7. The Commission further finds that the use by the respondents of these false, misleading, and deceptive representations had the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public with respect to the qualities, characteristics, and value of respondents' products, and the tendency and capacity to cause such portion of the public to purchase respondents' products as a result of the erroneous and mistaken beliefs so engendered.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answers of certain of the respondents, testimony, and other evidence taken before John W. Addison, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and the exceptions to such report, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint (oral argument not having been requested), and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Blank & Stoller Corporation, a corporation, its officers, and Harry H. Long, George Stoller, Maurice Schultz, and Randolph Fajen, individually, and doing business as Blank & Stoller Studios, or doing business under any other name, and respondents' representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of respondents' miniatures in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Order

1. Representing that respondents' miniatures have been displayed at public exhibitions.

2. Representing that respondents' miniatures have ever sold for $75 or $50, or for any amount in excess of that for which such miniatures have actually been sold by respondents.

3. Representing as the customary or regular price of respondents' miniatures, any price which is in excess of the price at which such miniatures have been customarily or regularly sold by respondents in the usual course of business.

4. Representing that the price at which respondents' miniatures are offered for sale constitutes a special or reduced price, when in fact such price is the usual or customary price at which such miniatures are offered for sale by respondents in the usual course of business.

5. Representing that respondents' miniatures are prepared by a new or unusual method.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF LINCOLN ACADEMY, INC., ALSO TRADING AS PREPARATORY SERVICE BUREAU, ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4703. Complaint, Feb. 5, 1942—Decision, June 16, 1942

Where a corporation and two individuals who were president and secretary thereof and controlled its activities, engaged in the interstate sale and distribution, through their agents, of correspondence courses intended to prepare students for civil service positions—

- (a) Represented that said corporation was an agency or representative of, or connected with, the United States Government or Civil Service Commission, and that a Government job was assured or guaranteed to students taking the courses offered; the facts being that neither such agents nor aforesaid individuals had any such connection and could not thus guarantee such jobs;
- (b) Represented that civil service examinations would be held at definite times and places or within a specified time at or near the home of the prospective student, and that their students would be notified of the time and place and would not be required to leave their homes in order to obtain Government jobs; the facts being neither they or anyone connected with the school had any advance knowledge of such examinations or any information to enable them to say that students would not be required to leave their homes to obtain such jobs;
- (c) Represented that the number of students who were permitted to take their courses was limited, as was the number enrolled in a certain locality and the time within which they might enroll; when in fact there were no such limitations;
- (d) Falsely represented that prospective students had been appointed to civil service jobs, that unpaid balances due on tuition at time of students' appointments to Government positions would be deducted from their pay checks by the Government; and that cards of inquiry signed by prospective students had been returned from Washington, and that such students had been selected by the Government for employment; and
- (e) Made use of words "Service Bureau" as a part of their corporate or trade name, thereby creating an erroneous impression of Government connection, and encouraging misrepresentations by their salesmen as aforesaid;

With effect of misleading and deceiving members of the public into the mistaken belief that the aforesaid representations were true, and thereby inducing them to purchase substantial quantities of said courses:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. S. F. Rose for the Commission.

Mr. William Furst, of Newark, N. J., for respondents.

Complaint

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Lincoln Academy, Inc., a corporation, doing business under its corporate name and also under the name of Preparatory Service Bureau, K. Arnold Freedman and Mrs. K. Arnold Freedman, also known as Miss R. E. Sims, individually, and as officers of Lincoln Academy, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect theretof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Lincoln Academy, Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, and does business under its corporate name and also under the name of Preparatory Service Bureau, with its principal office and place of business located at 43 Lincoln Park, Newark, N. J. Said business was originally operated as a partnership under the name of Metropolitan Training Academy, later being incorporated under such name and in 1940 the corporate name was changed to Lincoln Academy, Inc.

Respondents, K. Arnold Freedman and Mrs. K. Arnold Freedman, are individuals, and are president and secretary, respectively, of respondent, Lincoln Academy, Inc., and as such manage, direct, and control its affairs and activities. The respondent, Mrs. K. Arnold Freedman, now the wife of respondent, K. Arnold Freedman, was formerly Miss R. E. Sims, and in carrying out the acts and practices herein alleged sometimes used her said former name. Each of the individual respondents have their address and place of business located at 43 Lincoln Park, Newark, N. J.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and have been for more than a year last past, engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States of courses of study and instruction intended for preparing students thereof for examinations for various civil service positions under the United States Government, which said courses are pursued principally by correspondence through the medium of the United States mails. Respondents cause and have caused their said courses of study and instruction to be transported from their said place of business in the State of New Jersey to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Complaint

34 F. T. C.

Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained a course of trade in said courses of study and instruction in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. The respondents make use of agents in soliciting and selling their courses of instruction. In the course and conduct of respondents' business, and for the purpose of selling such courses of instruction, respondents, through their agents, have made many false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations to prospective purchasers with respect to said courses of instruction, and matters and things appertaining thereto. Among such statements and representations are the following:

1. That respondent corporation, in conducting said business aforesaid, is an agency or representative of or connected with the United States Government or the United States Civil Service Commission.

2. That a Government job is assured or guaranteed to students taking the courses offered.

3. That civil service examinations will be held at definite times and places or within a specified time at or near the home of the prospective student.

4. That students of the school conducted by respondents will be notified of the time and place civil service examinations are to be held.

5. That such representatives represent or are connected with or under the supervision of the United States Government or the United States Civil Service Commission.

6. That students of the school conducted by respondents will be able to obtain positions at or near their respective places of residence and will not be required to leave their homes in order to obtain Government jobs.

7. That respondents limit the number of students who take their courses of study.

8. That respondents limit the number of students to be enrolled in a certain locality.

9. That the time within which prospective students may enroll for respondents' courses of study is limited, and unless such student enrolled at once there would be no opportunity to do so again.

10. That the prospect interviewed has been appointed to a civil service job.

11. That any unpaid balance on the contract at the time of a student's appointment to a Government position would be deducted from the student's pay check by the Government.

12. That the card of inquiry signed by the prospective student and sent to respondents had been returned from Washington and that the prospective student's name was picked by the Government.

PAR. 4. All of said representations are false, misleading, and deceptive. In truth and in fact, neither the corporate or individual respondents, nor anyone connected with said school, have had or now have any connection whatever with the United States Government or with the United States Civil Service Commission. Respondents cannot and do not guarantee Government jobs to students taking the courses offered by respondents. Neither respondents nor anyone connected with said school had any advance knowledge in regard to the time or place of examinations conducted by the United States Civil Service Commission. Respondents have never had information or knowledge that enabled them to make statements that prospective students who took their said courses of study would not be required to leave their homes to obtain Government jobs. Respondents did not limit and do not now limit the number of students enrolled in any certain locality or otherwise, nor was the time within which a prospective student might enroll in respondents' school limited. Prospective students interviewed have not been appointed to Government positions as represented to them by respondents, nor could the respondents or their agents make any agreement binding on the Federal Government or any of its agencies in respect to a deduction from the salary of a prospective employee of the Government. The cards of inquiry signed by prospective students are not and never have been returned from Washington and no prospective student's name has been picked or selected by the Government or any department thereof.

PAR. 5. The use by the respondents of the words "Service Bureau" as a part of the trade name "Preparatory Service Bureau," when used in connection with the sale of correspondence courses intended for preparing students thereof for positions in the classified civil service under the United States Government are in themselves misleading and deceptive in that they serve to create an erroneous impression of Government connection and encourages misrepresentations by salesmen as aforesaid.

PAR. 6. The representations of respondents, as aforesaid, have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to and do, confuse, mislead, and deceive members of the public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true and to induce them to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' courses of study and instruction and pursue the same on account thereof.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on the 5th day of February A. D. 1942, issued, and on February 6 A. D. 1942, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Lincoln Academy, Inc., a corporation trading under its corporate name and also as Preparatory Service Bureau; K. Arnold Freedman and Mrs. K. Arnold Freedman, also known as Miss R. E. Sims, individually, and as officers of Lincoln Academy, Inc., a corporation, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, solely for the purpose of this proceeding, and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Lincoln Academy, Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, and does business under its corporate name and also under the name of Preparatory Service Bureau, with its principal office and place of business located at 43 Lincoln Park, Newark, N. J. Said business was originally operated as a partnership under the name of Metropolitan Training Academy, later being incorporated under such name and in 1940 the corporate name was changed to Lincoln Academy, Inc.

Respondents, K. Arnold Freedman and Mrs. K. Arnold Freedman, are individuals, and are president and secretary, respectively, of respondent, Lincoln Academy, Inc., and as such manager, direct and control its affairs and activities. The respondent, Mrs. K. Arnold Freedman, now the wife of respondent, K. Arnold Freedman, was formerly Miss R. E. Sims, and in carrying out the acts and practices herein alleged sometimes uses her said former name. Each of the individual respondents have their address and place of business located at 43 Lincoln Park, Newark, N. J.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and have been for more than a year last past, engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States of courses of study and instruction intended for preparing students thereof for examinations for various civil service positions under the United States Government which said courses are pursued principally by correspondence through the medium of the United States mails. Respondents cause and have caused their said courses of study and instruction to be transported from their said place of business in the State of New Jersey to the purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said courses of study and instruction in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. The respondents make use of agents in soliciting and selling their courses of instruction. In the course and conduct of respondents' business, and for the purpose of selling such courses of instruction, respondents, through their agents, have made many false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations to prospective purchasers with respect to said courses of instruction, and matters and things appertaining thereto. Among such statements and representations are the following:

1. That respondent corporation, in conducting said business aforesaid, is an agency or representative of or connected with the United States Government or the United States Civil Service Commission.

2. That a Government job is assured or guaranteed to students taking the courses offered.

3. That civil service examinations will be held at definite times and places or within a specified time at or near the home of the prospective student.

4. That students of the school conducted by respondents will be notified of the time and place civil service examinations are to be held.

5. That such representatives represent or are connected with or under the supervision of the United States Government or the United States Civil Service Commission.

Findings

34 F. T. C.

6. That students of the school conducted by respondents will be able to obtain positions at or near their respective places of residence and will not be required to leave their homes in order to obtain Government jobs.

7. That respondents limit the number of students who take their courses of study.

8. That respondents limit the number of students to be enrolled in a certain locality.

9. That the time within which prospective students may enroll for respondents' courses of study is limited, and unless such student enrolled at once there would be no opportunity to do so again.

10. That the prospect interviewed has been appointed to a civil service job.

11. That any unpaid balance on the contract at the time of a student's appointment to a Government position would be deducted from the student's pay check by the Government.

12. That the card of inquiry signed by the prospective student and sent to respondents had been returned from Washington and that the prospective student's name was picked by the Government.

PAR. 4. All of said representations are false, misleading, and deceptive. In truth and in fact, neither the corporate or individual respondents, nor anyone connected with said school, have had or now have any connection whatever with the United States Government or with the United States Civil Service Commission. Respondents cannot and do not guarantee Government jobs to students taking the courses offered by respondents. Neither respondents nor anyone connected with said school had any advance knowledge in regard to the time or place of examinations conducted by the United States Civil Service Commission. Respondents have never had information or knowledge that enabled them to make statements that prospective students who took their said courses of study would not be required to leave their homes to obtain Government jobs. Respondents did not limit and do not now limit the number of students enrolled in any certain locality or otherwise, nor was the time within which a prospective student might enroll in respondents' school limited. Prospective students interviewed have not been appointed to Government positions as represented to them by respondents, nor could the respondents or their agents make any agreement binding on the Federal Government or any of its agencies in respect to a deduction from the salary of a prospective employee of the Government. The cards of inquiry signed by prospective students are not and never have been returned from Washington and no prospective student's name has been picked or selected by the Government or any department thereof.

Order

PAR. 5. The use by the respondents of the words "Service Bureau" as a part of the trade name, "Preparatory Service Bureau," when used in connection with the sale of correspondence courses intended for preparing students thereof for positions in the classified civil service under the United States Government are in themselves misleading and deceptive in that they serve to create an erroneous impression of Government connection and encourages misrepresentations by salesmen as aforesaid.

PAR. 6. The representations of respondents, as aforesaid, have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to and do, confuse, mislead, and deceive members of the public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such representations are true and to induce them to purchase substantial quantities of respondents' courses of study and instruction and pursue the same on account thereof.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint, and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to the said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Lincoln Academy, Inc., a corporation, when doing business under its own or any other name, its officers, agents, and employees; K. Arnold Freedman and Mrs. K. Arnold Freedman, individually, under such names or any other names, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of correspondence courses of study for civil service positions under the United States Government, in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from, directly or by implication:

1. Representing that respondent corporation is an agency or representative of or connected with the United States Government or the United States Civil Service Commission.

Order

34 F. T. C.

2. Representing that a Government job is assured or guaranteed to students taking the courses offered.

3. Representing that civil service examinations will be held at definite times and places or within a specified time at or near the homes of prospective students.

4. Representing that students will be notified of the time and place civil service examinations are to be held.

5. Representing that respondents' salesmen or representatives represent or are connected with or are under the supervision of the United States Government or the United States Civil Service Commission.

6. Representing that students will be able to obtain positions at or near their respective places of residence and will not be required to leave their homes in order to obtain Government jobs.

7. Representing that the number of students who are permitted to take courses of study are limited.

8. Representing that the number of students enrolled in a certain locality are limited.

9. Representing that the time within which prospective students may enroll is limited, and unless such students enroll at once there will be no opportunity to do so again.

10. Representing that prospective students have been appointed to a civil service job.

11. Representing that unpaid balances due on tuition at the time a student is appointed to a Government position will be deducted from the student's pay check by the Government.

12. Representing that cards of inquiry signed by prospective students and sent to respondents have been returned from Washington and that such prospective student has been selected by the Government for employment.

13. Using the words "Service Bureau" or any other words of similar import as a corporate or trade name, or a part thereof, or in any manner representing that respondents' business is a part of, is connected with, or is a branch, bureau or agency of the Government of the United States or the United States Civil Service Commission.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

PLANT PRODUCTS COMPANY, INC., ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3794. Complaint, Nov. 15, 1940—Decision, June 19, 1942

Where an individual, a corporation which she organized to carry on the business theretofore conducted by her, and her two children, officers of said corporation, engaged in the interstate sale and distribution of a medicinal preparation designated "Cravex"; by means of advertisements through the mails and otherwise, directly and indirectly—

Represented that their said "Cravex" was a competent and effective treatment for alcoholism, use of which would remove a craving for whiskey, beer, wine, or other alcoholic liquors and enable a person addicted to excessive drinking to discontinue use of such liquors, and made use of the word "relieve" to designate or describe the effect of their preparation upon an alcoholic;

The facts being that use of their said preparation does not constitute such treatment for alcoholism and will not accomplish results claimed therefor, its value lying only in the after-care or building treatment, following the obtaining of an aversion or stoppage of the use of such liquors, and an elimination of the toxins produced in the system by alcohol, and then only as part of a general tonic treatment; and psychological factor, regarded as more important than the physiological by physicians, was necessarily eliminated by use of said preparation secretly, as suggested;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that said representations were true, and thereby inducing it to purchase their said preparation:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Miles J. Furnas and Mr. Edward E. Reardon, trial examiners.

Mr. Lynn C. Paulson, Mr. D. E. Hoopingarner, Mr. William L. Pencke, and Mr. Merle P. Lyon for the Commission.

Rosen, Francis & Cleveland, of Chicago, Ill., and Mr. J. P. Cain, of Santa Monica, Calif., for respondents.

AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Sara B. Plant, an individual, trading as Cravex Co., and Plant Products Co., Inc., a corporation, and its officers, James Plant and Sara B. Plant, named in

Complaint

the caption of this amended and supplemental complaint, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated, the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its amended and supplemental complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Sara B. Plant, is an individual, who, until September 28, 1939, operated under the trade name of Cravex Co., and had an office and place of business at Burbank, Calif. On September 28, 1939, respondent, Sara B. Plant, together with their son, James Robert Plant, and her daughter, Marion Alice Plant, caused the business of respondent, Sara B. Plant, to be incorporated under the laws of the State of California under the name of Plant Products Co., Inc. Respondent, Plant Products Co., Inc., has its office and principal place of business at Burbank, Calif., post office box 766.

Respondent, James Plant, an individual, is secretary and treasurer and business manager of respondent, Plant Products Co., Inc., and has his office in Burbank, Calif., with respondent, Plant Products Co., Inc., aforesaid. Respondent, Sara B. Plant, is an officer of respondent, Plant Products Co., Inc., and has her office in Burbank, Calif., with the said Plant Products Co., Inc.

PAR. 2. For more than 1 year prior to September 28, 1939, respondent, Sara B. Plant, was engaged in the business of selling and distributing a medicinal preparation known as "Cravex." This respondent caused said preparation, when sold, to be transported from her place of business in the State of California to the purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States, and at all times mentioned herein prior to September 28, 1939, maintained a course of trade in said medicinal preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of her aforesaid business, Sara B. Plant, disseminated, and caused to be disseminated, false advertisements concerning her said product, by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which were distributed in commerce among and between the various States of the United States; and by other means in commerce as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of her said product, and has disseminated, and has caused the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning her said product, by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which were likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of her said product in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among, and typical of, the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid, are the following:

Stop Drink Habit.

Just put tasteless CRAVEX in his coffee, tea, liquor or food. His craving for whiskey, beer or wine should be relieved. New Proven treatment—physician's prescription. Tones nerves—aids nature. Safe, doesn't upset stomach. Thousands benefited. May be given secretly if desired. Satisfaction guaranteed.

Tones nerves—aids nature stop habit.

He won't know and soon his craving for whiskey, beer or wine should disappear.

Through the use of the statements hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of remedial, curative, or therapeutic properties of respondent's product, the individual respondent, Sara B. Plant, has represented, directly and indirectly, that her preparation "Cravex" is a cure or remedy for alcoholism and that it is a competent and effective treatment therefor and will remove a craving for whiskey, beer, or wine.

PAR. 4. Respondent, Plant Products Co., Inc., has at all times since its incorporation, been, and is now, engaged in the business of selling and distributing a medicinal preparation under the trade name of "Cravex" to purchasers located in the various States of the United States. Respondent, Plant Products Co., Inc., has caused, and causes, said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of California to the purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, and now maintains, a course of trade in said medicinal preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents, James Plant and Sara B. Plant, have acted as officers of respondents, Plant Product Co., Inc., and participated in the conduct of its aforesaid business and are continuing to act in that capacity, and have sold and distributed the said preparation "Cravex" to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of California and in the District of Columbia, and when sales have been made, have caused said preparation to be transported from the State of California to the purchasers thereof located in the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and have at all times maintained, and are now maintaining, a course of trade in said medicinal preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business respondent, Plant Products Co., Inc., and its officers, have disseminated, and are now disseminating, and have caused, and are now causing, the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning its said product "Cravex," by United States mails, by insertion in newspapers and periodicals having a general circulation and also in circulars and other printed or written matter, all of which are distributed in commerce among and between various States of the United States; and by other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of the said product "Cravex"; and have disseminated, and are now disseminating, and have caused, and are now causing the dissemination of false advertisements concerning the said product "Cravex," by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of the said product "Cravex" in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act. Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated, as aforesaid, are the following:

Should you have a problem of excessive drinking in your home, just put tasteless CRAVEX in his coffee, tea, liquor, beer, wine or food. New proven method—physician's prescription.

DRINK HABIT

Just put tasteless CRAVEX in his coffee, tea, liquor or food. His craving for whiskey, Beer, or Wine should be relieved, New, proven treatment—physician's prescription. Tones nerves, aids nature. Safe, doesn't upset stomach. Thousands benefited. May be given secretly if desired. Satisfaction guaranteed.

Through the use of the statements hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the remedial, curative or therapeutic properties of respondent's product, respondents have represented and do now represent directly and indirectly, that their preparation, "Cravex," is a cure or remedy for alcoholism and that it is a competent and effective treatment therefor and will remove a craving for whiskey, beer, or wine.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representations and claims used and disseminated by the respondents as hereinabove described are grossly exaggerated, misleading and untrue. In truth and in fact, respondents' preparation "Cravex" is not a cure or remedy for alcoholism. Said preparation is not a competent and effective treatment for alcoholism and will not remove a craving for whiskey, beer, or wine.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to the product "Cravex," disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements and representations are true, and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondents' preparation containing drugs.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on November 15 A. D. 1940, issued and subsequently served its amended complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Sara B. Plant, an individual, trading as Cravex Co., Plant Products Co., Inc., a corporation, and James Plant and Sara B. Plant, individually, and as officers, of said corporation, charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of said amended complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of said amended complaint were introduced by W. L. Pencke and Merle P. Lyon, attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the amended complaint by J. P. Cain, attorney for the respondents, before Miles J. Furnas and Edward E. Rear-don, trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission upon said amended complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiners upon the evidence, and brief in support of the amended complaint (no brief having been filed by the respondents or oral argument requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Sara B. Plant, is an individual, who, until September 28, 1939, operated under the trade name of "Cravex Co." and had an office and place of business at Burbank, Calif. On September 28, 1939, respondent, Sara B. Plant, together with her son James Robert Plant, and her daughter Marian Alice Plant, caused the business of the respondent, Sara B. Plant, to be incorporated under the laws of the State of California under the name of "Plant Products Company, Inc." Respondent, Plant Products Co., Inc., has its office and principal place of business at No. 1 Toluca State Drive, North Hollywood, Calif., the place of residence of the individual respondents, Sara B. Plant, and James Robert Plant, and also has a mailing address of post office box 766, Burbank, Calif.

Respondent, James Robert Plant, is an individual, and is secretary, treasurer, and business manager of respondent, Plant Products Co., Inc., and prior to September 28, 1939, was actively engaged with Sara B. Plant in the operation of the business under the trade name "Cravex Company." Respondent, Sara B. Plant, is an officer of respondent, Plant Products Co., Inc.

PAR. 2. For several years prior to September 28, 1939, respondent, Sara B. Plant, was engaged in the business of selling and distributing a medicinal preparation known as "Cravex." This respondent caused said preparation, when sold, to be transported from her place of business in the State of California to the purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States, and at all times mentioned herein prior to September 28, 1939, said respondent has maintained a course of trade in said medicinal preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent, Plant Products Co., Inc., has, at all times since its incorporation, been, and is now, engaged in the business of selling and distributing said medicinal preparaton designated "Cravex" to purchasers located in various States of the United States. Respondent, Plant Products Co., Inc., has caused, and causes, said preparation, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of California to purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, and now maintains, a course of trade in said medicinal preparation in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

The individual respondents, James Robert Plant, and Sara B. Plant, have participated in and have controlled the advertising policies and business activities of said corporate respondent, Plant Products Co., Inc. Said individual respondents and the corporate respondent have acted in conjunction and cooperation with each other in doing the acts and practices hereinafter described.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business the respondents have disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said product "Cravex," by United States mails and by various other means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondents have also disseminated and are now disseminating, and have caused and are now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning their said product "Cravex" by various means for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of said product "Cravex" in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Among and typical of the false statements and representations contained in said advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as aforesaid are the following:

1. Advertisements disseminated prior to September 28, 1939:

STOP DRINK HABIT

Just put tasteless CRAVEX in his coffee, tea, liquor or food. He won't know, and soon his craving for whiskey, beer, or wine should disappear. New, proven treatment—physician's prescription. Tones nerves—aids natural stop habit. Safe—doesn't upset stomach. Thousands benefited. Satisfaction guaranteed.

DRINK HABIT

Just put tasteless CRAVEX in his coffee, tea, liquor or food. His craving for Whiskey, Beer or Wine should be relieved. New, proven treatment—physician's prescription. Tones nerves—aids nature. Safe, doesn't upset stomach. Thousands benefited. May be given secretly if desired. Satisfaction guaranteed.

2. Advertisements disseminated subsequent to September 28, 1939:

FOR DRINK HABIT

Excessive drinking often tends to cause jangled nerves, nervous irritability, fatigue, loss of efficiency, and weakened faculty of judgment. Should you have a problem of excess drinking in your home just put tasteless Cravex, in coffee, tea, liquor, beer, wine, or food. New, proven method—physician's prescription.

Findings

34 F. T. C.

The ingredients of Cravex are an aid in helping to build up the nerves and appetite, thereby aiding to kill the excessive craving for liquor. Cravex is safe and doesn't upset the stomach.

Through the use of the statements hereinabove set forth and others similar thereto not specifically set out herein, all of which purport to be descriptive of the remedial, curative, or therapeutic properties of respondents' product, respondents have represented, and do now represent, directly and indirectly, that their preparation "Cravex" is a competent and effective treatment for alcoholism and that its use will remove a craving for whiskey, beer, wine, or other alcoholic liquors and enable a person addicted to excessive drinking to discontinue the use of alcoholic liquors.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations and claims used and disseminated by the respondents as hereinabove described, are grossly exaggerated, misleading, and untrue.

Respondents' preparation is composed of the following ingredients: calcium glycerophosphate, $1\frac{1}{2}$ grains; manganese glycerophosphate, 1 grain; caffein alkaloid, $\frac{1}{2}$ grain; with sufficient milk sugar to make each powder weigh approximately 2.21 grams. The advertising and the directions provide for the administration of one powder twice daily in the patient's coffee or other beverage.

The calcium glycerophosphate contained in respondents' preparation is a chemical compound which serves as a nerve nutriment and which is ordinarily found in the average diet. In fact, as much calcium could be obtained by drinking a glass of milk as by use of this powder. The use of manganese glycerophosphate, another ingredient of respondents' preparation, is not definitely known to the medical profession. It is sometimes believed that this ingredient serves as a nerve nutriment, but this is not the general, recognized medical opinion with reference to this ingredient. Caffein alkaloid is a derivative obtained from plants, such as coffee and tea, and is ordinarily used as a nerve and heart stimulant. The amount contained in each powder is very low, and the same reaction or result could be obtained from one cup of ordinary coffee. Milk sugar has a certain nutrient value. None of the ingredients in respondents' preparation, used either alone or in combination, would have any effect upon the craving for alcohol.

The treatment of an alcoholic patient is generally considered to be along psychological, rather than physiological, lines, and the treatment varies with the individual. Respondents' advertising generally is directed not to the alcohol addict but rather to some member of his family, with the further indication that said preparation can be administered secretly. The use of this preparation secretly in an effort to treat an alcoholic, eliminates the psychological factor, which is held by physicians to be the more important in any course of treatment. No cooperation can be extended by a patient who does not know that he is undergoing treatment.

The extent to which this preparation might be of value in the treatment of an alcoholic is in the after-care or building treatment after an aversion or stoppage of the use of alcoholic liquors has been obtained and the toxins produced in the system by alcohol eliminated, and then only as an adjunct or part of a general tonic treatment.

The use of respondents' preparation under the conditions prescribed by them does not constitute a competent or effective treatment for alcoholism, and its use will not remove a craving for whiskey, beer, wine, or other alcoholic liquors, or enable a person addicted to excessive drinking to discontinue the use of alcoholic liquors.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondents of the word "relieve" to designate or describe the effect of this preparation upon an alcoholic, has a tendency to mislead and deceive the public into the belief that the use of respondents' preparation will either permanently remove the craving for alcoholic liquors or eliminate such craving for substantial periods of time, so that eventually the liquor habit can be entirely cured or removed, when, in fact, this preparation has no therapeutic value in connection with the craving for alcoholic liquors, and its stimulating effect is of such short duration as to make this preparation of no value in the treatment of alcoholism.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondents of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements and representations with respect to the product "Cravex" disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations are true, and induces a portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief to purchase respondents' preparation containing drugs.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission on the amended complaint of the Commission, answer of the respondents, testimony, and other evidence taken before Miles J. Furnas and Edward E. Reardon, trial examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said amended complaint and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiners upon the evidence, and brief filed in support of the amended complaint; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act:

It is ordered, That the respondent, Plant Products Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and Sara B. Plant, an individual, trading as Cravex Co., and as officer and director of the corporate respondent, Plant Products Co., Inc., and James Robert Plant, individually, and as officer of said corporate respondent, and their respective representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device in connection with the offering for sale, sale, or distribution of the medicinal preparation known as "Cravex," or any other preparation of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly:

1. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by means of the United States mails or by any means in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents directly or through inference that respondents' preparation is a competent or effective treatment for alcoholism or that its use will relieve or remove the craving for alcoholic liquors or enable a person addicted to excessive drinking to discontinue the use of alcoholic liquors;

2. Disseminating, or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act of respondents' preparation "Cravex," which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

WESTERN CONFECTIONERS ASSOCIATION, INC., ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914.

Docket 4132. Complaint, June 14, 1940¹—Decision, June 22, 1942

Where a nonprofit Association, composed of manufacturers of candies and other confections in California, Washington, Oregon, Montana, Nevada, Utah, Wyoming, Colorado, Arizona, and New Mexico, with its principal office and place of business in San Francisco; officers, directors, and trustees thereof; and various manufacturer-members who constituted a large and influential portion of the candy manufacturers in California, Washington, Utah, and Colorado, able to control or substantially influence the flow of trade in candies in their area, and prices of such products, in substantial interstate competition with others and, but for combination and conspiracy below described, with one another—

- (a) Entered into an agreement, combination or conspiracy to maintain minimum prices for their products and uniform discounts to purchasers thereof through the medium of the Association, and making use of the California Unfair Practices Act which, among other things, prohibits sale below seller's cost, as the basis of price agreements which would cover all of the sales transactions of all Association members; and in furtherance of said plan—
 - (1) Undertook, through the Association, the making of certain "Cost Surveys" which involved the submission to a commercial reporting concern by members of data pertaining to items entering into the cost of manufacture for use in compiling unidentified averages; and distribution thereof by the Association to the members;
 - (2) Provided in a new constitution, among other things, that no member should sell below cost—having in mind, apparently, above statute—providing, however, that a member might meet the lower prices of a competitor if not in violation "of the established cost survey"; and
 - (3) Adopted said "Survey's" figures as representing the correct cost on hard mixed candy and chocolate drops, shortly after the completion of said "cost survey" on hard mixed candy, chocolate drops and pan goods (for which alone said surveys were completed), at a meeting called, at their instance apparently, by the Los Angeles city attorney, and advised Association members of such action;
 - (b) Threatened with legal action manufacturers who, according to reports, were not maintaining the minimum prices thus arrived at, taking action in some cases with a view thereto, and also caused threats to be circulated generally among manufacturers that those who sold their candies at less than the cost figure adopted would be prosecuted under the said Unfair Practices Act; and
 - (c) Concertedly classified purchasers as syndicates, wholesalers, jobbers, and retailers, on the basis of information supplied by manufacturers relative to their discounts; and adhered to such classification in granting discounts;

Syllabus

34 F. T. C.

With result that minimum prices not only on hard mixed candy and chocolate drops, but on other candies as well, were increased, and with effect of substantially restraining competition in the sale of candies and other confections in commerce, and with tendency and capacity so to do, and to increase price of said products to the purchasers and ultimately to the general public:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

All of the above-named respondents are members of the respondent Association. Each of said respondents, individually and as members of said respondent Association have taken, and do now take, an active part in all the activities herein described.

PAR. 3. The individual respondents, named in paragraph 1 hereof, direct and control the policies of the respondent Association and have taken an active part in all of the unfair methods of competition and the unfair acts and practices as herein set out.

PAR. 4. The respondent corporations, firms, individuals, and partnerships, named in paragraph 2 hereof, have been for several years last past and are now engaged in the business of manufacturing candies and other confections and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia. Respondents cause their respective products, when sold, to be shipped and transported in commerce from their respective places of business through and into States of the United States other than the States in which respondents maintain their respective places of business, and there has been for more than 3 years last past and now is a constant and recurring current of trade in commerce between and among the several States of the western portion of the United States in candies and other confections.

PAR. 5. There are corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals located in the States of California, Washington, Oregon, Montana, Nevada, Utah, Wyoming, Colorado, Arizona, and New Mexico, who are engaged in manufacturing candy and other confections, and who sell and distribute their respective products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and who do not engage in wrongful and unlawful acts and practices herein described as engaged in by respondents, and with these corporations, firms, individuals, and partnerships, the respondents are and have been in direct and substantial competition.

PAR. 6. Respondent manufacturers, named in paragraph 2 hereof, constitute a large and influential part of the candy manufacturers in the States of California, Washington, Oregon, Montana, Nevada, Utah, Wyoming, Colorado, Arizona, and New Mexico, and constitute a group so large and influential in said business as to be able to control and influence the flow of trade and commerce in said products between and among said States and to control the prices thereof and discounts to be allowed on the sales of said products. Said respondents, but for the wrongful conspiracy, combination, understanding, and agreement and wrongful and unlawful acts and practices herein set out, would be in free and active competition with one another and are in such competition with other manufacturers of candies and confections in said States.

PAR. 7. Some time prior to December 1937, respondent manufacturers, acting in combination with one another, and respondent Association, and its officers and members, and through respondent Association, for the purpose and intent of eliminating or restraining price competition among themselves, and in order to stabilize and make uniform the prices of the products by them and each of them sold and to stabilize and make uniform discounts allowed thereon, adopted, established and have since maintained and carried out a system or policy of merchandising whereby they, through agreements and understandings between and among one another, fix specified standard and uniform prices and discounts at which their products should be and are sold in said States.

Pursuant to such agreements and understandings, respondent Association, and respondent candy manufacturers, each and every member of said Association, and every officer of said Association, has endeavored, and now endeavors, to enforce and has enforced, and is now enforcing, said merchandising policy, and to this end, among other things, has done and is now doing the following acts and things:

1431

(a) Respondent Association, through questionnaires sent to the different manufacturers, obtained figures representing production costs and from the figures so obtained has struck an average figure and respondent manufacturers have adopted the figure thus obtained as a price below which no member of respondent Association would sell.

(b) Respondent manufacturers, while pretending to act under the "Fair Trade Act" and the "Unfair Practice Act" of the State of California, adopted cost figures arrived at in an arbitrary manner, as aforesaid, and have agreed to be, and have been, governed and controlled by said figures in the sale of their respective products both in the States of their respective locations and in other States into which they sell and ship their products.

(c) Respondent Association has arbitrarily classified purchasers of said products into classes, such as "wholesalers," "jobbers," and other dealers, and has fixed specified standard and uniform discounts to be allowed to purchasers of each classification, and respondent manufacturers have adopted said classifications and have allowed discounts in conformity therewith.

(d) Respondent manufacturers have directly and through "clearing houses" and respondent Association submitted price lists to other members of said Association and to other candy manufacturers and have, after demand being made by the said Association, revised said price lists to make them uniform.

(e) Respondent manufacturers have agreed to file, and have filed, with the respondent Association advance notice of contemplated price changes, and have preceded all price changes with such advance notice.

(f) Respondent Association, through its officers and respondent manufacturers have made threats to institute court proceedings and have aided and abetted in instituting court proceedings against manufacturers selling at prices below the costs arbitrarily arrived at as hereinbefore set out.

(g) Respondent Association through its officers and respondent manufacturers have disseminated threats among the members of said Association and other manufacturers that any manufacturer who sold below the cost figures adopted would be prosecuted under the California "Fair Trade Act" or "Unfair Practice Act."

PAR. 8. Each and every corporation, partnership, firm, and individual, named herein, directly and through the agency of the respondent Association, has taken an active part in all of the activities herein set out.

PAR. 9. The acts and practices of the respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors and have a dangerous tendency to, and have actually hindered and prevented price competition between and among respondents in the sale of candies and other confections in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act; have placed in respondents the power to control and enhance prices; increased the prices of candies and confections paid by the purchasers thereof, and consequently, the prices paid by the public; and have unreasonably restrained such commerce in candies and other confections, and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair acts and practices within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on June 14, 1940, issued and subsequently served upon the respondents named in the caption hereof its amended and supplemental complaint in this proceeding, charging the respondents with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act (on May 9, 1940, the Commission had previously issued its original complaint in this proceeding, which was identical with the amended and supplemental complaint except that it failed to name certain parties as respondents therein). After the filing of the respondents' answers, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the amended and supplemental complaint were introduced by the attorney for the Commission, and in opposition thereto by attorneys for certain of the respondents, before Randolph Preston, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, which testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the amended and supplemental complaint, the answers of the respondents, testimony and other evidence, report of the trial examiner upon the evidence and the exceptions to such report, briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and oral argument, and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

PAR. 4. The respondent corporations, firms, individuals, and partnerships, named in paragraph 2 hereof (except those excluded in paragraph 3 hereof) are now, and for several years last past have been, engaged in the business of manufacturing candies and other confections, and in the sale and distribution of such products. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses the respondents cause, and have caused, their products, when sold, to be shipped and transported from their respective places of business through and into States of the United States other than those in which such shipments originate. Respondents maintain and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in their respective products in commerce among and between the several States of the United States.

All of the respondent manufacturers are members of respondent Association, and have participated actively in formulating the policies and carrying on the activities of the Association.

The respondent manufacturers constitute a large and influential portion of the candy manufacturers in the States of California, Washington, Utah, and Colorado. They are able to control or substantially influence the flow of trade and commerce in candies and confections among and between those States and to control or substantially influence the prices of such products.

PAR. 5. There are in the States named above other corporations, firms, individuals, and partnerships, engaged in the manufacture of candies and other confections, and in the sale and distribution of such products in commerce among and between these States and various other States of the United States. The respondent manufacturers are and have been in direct and substantial competition with such other manufacturers. But for the combination and conspiracy hereinafter described, the respondent manufacturers would also be in direct and active competition with one another in the sale and distribution of their products in commerce among and between these States and among and between other States of the United States.

PAR. 6. While the Western Confectioners Association was organized some 25 years ago, it was not until about 1936 that it became particularly active or attempted to serve as anything more than a social organization. In 1937 a new constitution and bylaws was adopted, and in January 1938 the Association was incorporated. The ostensible purposes of the Association, as set forth in the constitution, were:

(1) To establish and maintain fair and equitable standards of labor; to cultivate friendly relations within the industry; to eliminate evils and abuses with the view of promoting the common welfare of the Industry, its employees, and the public good.

(2) To analyze and investigate the many problems affecting this industry, including the problem of production and the abatement of the evils of child labor, unfair competition, and manufacturing under sub-standard conditions.

(3) To secure freedom from unjust or unlawful exactions and enactments, establish and maintain uniformity and equity in the customs and commercial usages of the industry, and recognize and deal with any unfair or discriminating conditions that may exist or arise within the Industry.

(4) To determine means of improvement, standardization and methods of manufacturing, costing and marketing of candy and closely allied competitive products, and of increasing the efficiency of management.

(5) To make such statistical and fact-finding investigations as may seem desirable and to build up information about the Industry which will make possible intelligent treatment of local and national problems.

(6) To develop friendly and cooperative relations with similar groups in other sections of the United States which shall have for its primary purpose the welfare of this industry. And such other purposes as will be of general benefit to the industry.

For the purpose of the carrying on of its various activities the area covered by the Association was divided into four zones, as follows:

Southern California Zone.....	South of San Luis Obispo and Bakersfield, by a line drawn East and West.
Northern California Zone.....	North of and including San Luis Obispo and Bakersfield, by a line drawn East and West.
Northern Zone.....	States of Washington and Oregon.
Eastern Zone.....	States of Utah, Colorado, etc.

Under the caption, "Fair Trade Practice Rules" the constitution contained the following provisions, among others:

SELLING BELOW COST. No member shall sell any candy at a price below cost; except that a member may meet the lower prices of a competitor, whose prices are not in violation of the established Cost Survey (The Association will endeavor with the least delay to establish this Cost Survey for our Industry); Provided, however, That such member shall report immediately to the Manager of the Association the name of such competitor, the sales price of the article or articles of candy involved.

Findings

34 F. T. C.

A member may merchandise a new product below cost, provided the member's estimated cost based on potential production and based on the established Cost Survey for the Industry, shall have been filed in the Manager's Office.

This provision shall not apply to distressed candy which may be sold below the member's cost, provided due notice of said proposed sale has been filed in the Manager's Office, giving description, quantity price, and to whom offered or sold.

* * * * *

DISCOUNTS. No member shall allow to Jobbers discount for cash to exceed two (2) percent in any case, and the time in which said cash discount shall be allowed shall not exceed fifteen (15) days from date of shipment, and all bills paid after expiration of such member's discount period shall be net. However, on water freight shipments from the Pacific Coast to the Atlantic Coast, Alaska, Hawaii, Philippines, or foreign territory, an additional fifteen (15) days may be allowed, but provided further that the invoice shall clearly state the date of the invoice and the actual date of the shipment and include the words "Via Water Freight."

For sales direct to the Retail Trade, the above terms shall apply unless application is made to the Board of Directors by any Zone desiring a change in the terms applicable to the specific Zone.

A statute of the State of California known as the "Unfair Practices Act" provides, in part, that it shall be unlawful for any person engaged in business within the State to sell any article or product at less than the cost thereof to such vendor. The act further provides for the bringing of injunction proceedings to prevent the violation of the act, and for the imposition of certain penalties for the violation of the act. Apparently the provision of the Association's constitution with respect to "Selling Below Cost" was framed with the State statute in mind.

While the constitution provided for the payment of such membership dues or fees as might be fixed by the Association's board of directors, and for the forfeiture of all of the rights and privileges of membership in the event of the failure to pay such dues, there apparently has been no serious effort made during the last several years to enforce these provisions. The record discloses numerous instances in which members who were in default in the payment of dues have attended the conventions of the Association and meetings held in the various zones, and have participated actively in the formulation of the Association's policies and in carrying out the various activities and practices of the Association and the various zone groups.

Not only was the membership of the Association divided into groups based upon geographic lines, but the membership also divided into groups determined by the particular kinds and varieties of candies manufactured by the members. For example, some of the members manufactured principally "hard mixed candy," others "bar candy," others "pan goods," others "chocolate drops," others "box goods," etc. The various members naturally had little interest in lines of candies which they themselves did not manufacture, and confined their activities in the main to the group or groups representing their own particular line of products. At the annual conventions of the Association it was the custom and practice of the members, after certain general discussions in the convention as a whole, to separate into the various groups, and it was principally through these groups that the real activities of the Association were conducted.

PAR. 7. Some 5 or 6 years ago certain members and officers of the Association conceived the idea of using the Association as a medium whereby agreements might be reached among the members with respect to the minimum prices at which the products of the respective members would be offered for sale, and also with respect to discounts which would be allowed purchasers. The exact time at which this plan had its inception is not disclosed by the record, but the plan was the subject of discussion in the Association and among certain of the members as early as 1936. As a part of and in furtherance of the plan, the Association undertook in the early part of 1937 the making of certain surveys among its members, these surveys being designated by the Association as "Cost Surveys." Letters explaining the nature of the surveys were addressed by the Association to all of the members, and in these letters were enclosed certain questionnaires to be answered by the members. These questionnaires called for various data pertaining to the various items entering into the cost of the manufacture of candy, including such items as labor, factory and packing overhead, shipping expense, selling expense, administrative expense, etc. It was contemplated by the Association that cost surveys would eventually be made on all of the various kinds of candy manufactured and sold by the members, but so far as the record discloses only three of the surveys were completed, these covering hard mixed candy, pan goods and chocolate drops.

Arrangements were made by the Association with a prominent commercial reporting concern under which the members were to return the executed questionnaires to this concern rather than to the Association, and this concern in turn was to advise the Association of the results of the survey. Averages only were to be supplied rather than the actual survey sheets. The members were identified by code numbers only and were requested not to sign the questionnaires. Assurance was given in the Association's letter that the data submitted by the members in response to the questionnaire would be strictly confidential and would be known only to the commercial agency's accountant.

Findings

34 F. T. C.

The questionnaires were sent by the Association not only to members whose places of business were located within the State of California, but were sent to all of members of the Association located in all of the States comprising the Association's territory. Nor was the data requested in the questionnaires restricted to the cost of goods sold within the State of California, but the information requested was of a general nature and was intended to cover the cost of all products sold by the members, regardless of the territory in which the sales were made and irrespective of whether such sales were intrastate or interstate. Obviously it was the intention of the Association to use the California Unfair Practices Act as the basis of price agreements which would cover all of the sales transactions of all of the members of the Association.

While it appears that the major portion of the members of the Association did not answer and return the cost survey questionnaires, a substantial number did supply the data as requested, and in due course the results of the surveys were communicated by the commercial reporting agency to the Association. In arriving at the cost figures submitted to the Association the agency computed the total of all of the answers made by the members, and then obtained an average figure by dividing this total by the number of members reporting. Upon receipt of this information from the agency the Association made known to the members the average figures arrived at, and these figures were through common understanding accepted by the respondent manufacturers as governing the minimum prices in all sales of their products.

Shortly after the completion of the cost surveys, on hard mixed candy and chocolate drops the city attorney of Los Angeles, California, proceeding under the California Unfair Practices Act and apparently acting at the instance of the Association, called a meeting of the members of the Association in the Los Angeles area. The purpose of the meeting was to arrive at and publish figures representing the cost of hard mixed candy and chocolate drops. At this meeting the cost figures on hard mixed candy and chocolate drops resulting from the Association's surveys were adopted as the correct figures representing the cost of such candy, and the members of the Association were in the course advised by the Association of the action taken at the meeting. The record is replete with correspondence between the various respondent manufacturers and between the respondent manufacturers and the Association, showing that these figures were by common understanding and agreement among the members adopted and accepted as the minimum prices on hard mixed candy and chocolate drops, and that there was concerted effort on the part of the members manufacturing these types of candy to maintain these minimum prices on their products.

1431

That the respondents were successful, through concerted and cooperative action, in increasing and maintaining minimum prices not only on hard mixed candy and chocolate drops but on other candies as well, is evidenced by numerous pieces of documentary evidence in the record. For example, the minutes of the annual convention of the Association held in Los Angeles in February 1938 recite that the chairman of the group representing the bulk candy manufacturers reported to the convention that:

Higher prices were obtained in 1937 as a result of cooperation among firms producing this type of merchandise.

A letter addressed to a number of members of the Association by the secretary in August 1937 stated in part that:

Much has already been accomplished. Through concerted effort the price for hard candy was raised 1¢ above last year.

And a letter addressed by one of the respondents, to another of the respondents, in July 1937, read in part as follows:

We felt that it is not very much to ask to support the Association $10. to $20. per month. It would not take much of an increase in the price to pay this back a thousand fold. As Leon Sweet stated at the time of the recent convention—by just coming there and getting Jelly Beans up ½¢, he had paid for several trips to the convention. This same would true [sic] if we can get the price of hard candy up ½¢ to 1¢ per pound this Fall. The additional profits derived from that alone would support the association for many years to come. As you know, we are just now starting on general comparative expenses. Believe that this survey on hard candy will help us to maintain prices this Fall season, especially here in California.

In certain instances reports reached the respondents that certain manufacturers were not maintaining the minimum prices which had been arrived at as shown above, and such manufacturers were threatened by respondents with legal action for such departures. In at least two instances cases of alleged price-cutting were referred by the Association to its attorney for investigation and possible legal action. Respondents also caused threats to be circulated generally among manufacturers that those who sold their products at prices less than the cost figures adopted would be prosecuted under the Unfair Practices Act.

PAR. 8. In addition to establishing and maintaining a system of minimum prices governing the sale of their products, the respondents have by concerted action classified purchasers of their products into various classes, such as syndicates, wholesalers, jobbers, and retailers, and have agreed upon and fixed certain specified standard and uniform discounts to be allowed purchasers within such classifications. The respondent manufacturers were requested by the Association to supply detailed information relative to the discounts allowed various purchasers of their products, and from this information, as well as from other information gathered by the Association, the respondents made up an arbitrary classification of the purchasers of candy in the trade area served by respondents. The respondents, pursuant to agreement among themselves, adopted such classification and adhered to it in allowing or declining to allow discounts to purchasers.

Order

PAR. 9. Each of the respondent members has acted in concert and in cooperation with one or more of the other respondent members and with the respondent Association in doing the foregoing acts in furtherance of the understanding, combination, and conspiracy herein described.

PAR. 10. The Commission further finds that the understanding, agreement, combination, and conspiracy entered into by the respondents, and the acts done pursuant thereto and in furtherance thereof, as herein described, have the tendency and capacity to hinder, restrain, lessen, and prevent competition, and did substantially hinder, restrain, and lessen competition, in the sale of candies and other confections in commerce among and between various States of the United States. Such understanding, agreement, combination and conspiracy, and the acts done pursuant thereto and in furtherance thereof, also have the tendency and capacity to increase the price of candy and other confections to the purchasers thereof and ultimately to the general public, and unreasonably to restrict and restrain trade in candies and other confections in commerce among and between various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended and supplemental complaint of the Commission, the answers of respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before Randolph Preston, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint, and in opposition thereto, report of the trial examiner upon

IN THE MATTER OF

HARRY FROMAN, TRADING AS SUPREME SALES
COMPANY AND RELIABLE PREMIUM HOUSE

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3559. Complaint, Aug. 29, 1938—Decision, June 23, 1942

Where an individual, engaged in competitive interstate sale and distribution of watches, clocks, dolls, doll carriages, men's and boys' jackets, and numerous other articles of merchandise—

(a) Sold them through use of sales circular and a pull card device, under a plan by which the particular article received and the price paid therefor were dependent upon the legend disclosed under tab of card selected by chance by purchaser, and operator of card, after sale of all chances thereon and remission of money, was compensated by choice of a premium or cash; and thereby

Supplied to and placed in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise, notwithstanding subterfuge "Notice to Purchasers" offering right to refuse purchase of article; contrary to an established public policy of the Government and in violation of the criminal laws, and in competition with many who are unwilling to use such, or any method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom;

With the result that many persons were attracted by said sales method and the element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell his merchandise in preference to that of his said competitors, from whom trade was thereby unfairly diverted to him; and

Where said individual, engaged as aforesaid—

(b) Made such statements and representations in his advertising circulars as "Gifts for all," "How to get your Gifts without any cost to you," "Special Offer: 2 Extra Valuable Surprise Gifts Free"; when none of his articles designated as premiums or gifts were free but were in fact delivered as compensation for services, and price thereof was included in price of other articles which representative had to sell or procure sale of, and, in case of at least one, having to pay money in addition to service;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that such statements were true, thereby inducing it to purchase substantial quantities of said products because of such mistaken belief, and unfairly diverting trade to him from his competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce.

Before Mr. Randolph Preston and Mr. Andrew B. Duval, trial examiners.

Mr. D. C. Daniel, and Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr. for the Commission.

Mr. Arthur D. Herrick, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Harry Froman, individually, and trading as Supreme Sales Co. and Reliable Premium House, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Harry Froman, is an individual, trading as Supreme Sales Co. and Reliable Premium House. Respondent first operated under the name of Reliable Premium House at 171 Broome Street, New York, N. Y., but discontinued business at that address and now has his principal office and place of business located at 34 East Twelfth Street, New York, N. Y. Respondent is now, and for some time last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of watches, clocks, dolls, doll carriages, men's and boys' jackets, electric lamps, carving sets and pie servers, bedding, cameras, dresser sets, salt and pepper sets with trays, cosmetics, tooth brushes, jewelry, rain-coats, cigarette cases and lighters, kitchenware, tableware, suitcases, dinner sets, pipes, comb and brush sets, beauty sets, carpet sweepers, and other articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products when sold to be shipped or transported from his places of business aforesaid to purchasers thereof in the various States of the United States other than New York and in the District of Columbia at their respective points of location. There is now, and has been for some time last past, a course of trade by said respondent in such merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is, and has been, in competition with other individuals and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, said articles of merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme. The respondent distributes certain advertising literature, including a sales circular, to rep-representatives and prospective representatives. Respondent's merchandise is distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner:

A portion of said sales circular consists of a list on which there are designated a number of items of merchandise and the prices thereof. Adjacent to the list is printed and set out a device commonly called a pull card. Said pull card consists of a number of tabs, under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. The name of the article of merchandise and the price thereof are so concealed that purchasers or prospective purchasers of the tabs or chances are unable to ascertain which article of merchandise they are to receive, or the price which they are to pay until after the tab is separated from the card. When a purchaser has detached a tab and learned what article of merchandise he is to receive and the price thereof, his name is written on the list opposite the named articles of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have purported and represented retail values and regular prices greater than the prices designated for them, but are distributed to the consumer for the price designated on the tab which he pulls. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of said articles of merchandise, as compared to the price the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures one of said articles, induces members of the purchasing public to purchase the tabs or chances in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid for same. The facts as to whether a purchaser of one of said pull card tabs receives an article which has apparent greater value and higher regular price than the price designated for same on such tab, which of said articles of merchandise a purchaser is to receive, and the amount of money which a purchaser is required to pay, are determined wholly by lot or chance.

When the person or representative operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all of the tabs or chances, collected the amounts called for, and remitted the said sums to the respondent, said respondent thereupon ships to said representative the merchandise designated on said card, together with a premium for the representative as compensation for operating the pull card and selling the said merchandise. Said operator delivers the merchandise to the purchasers of tabs from said pull card in accordance with the list filled out when the tabs were detached from the pull card.

Respondent sells and distributes, and has sold and distributed, various assortments of said merchandise, and furnishes and has furnished various pull cards for use in the sale and distribution of such merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such plan or method varies in detail but the above described plan or method is illustrative of the principle involved.

PAR. 3. The persons to whom respondent furnishes and has furnished the said pull cards, use and have used the same in purchasing, selling and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of his merchandise in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said method in the sale of his merchandise, and the sale of such merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method is a practice of the sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and in violation of criminal laws.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure an article of merchandise at a price much less than the apparent normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method, or any method involving a game of chance, or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or an equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has the capacity and tendency to, and does, unfairly divert trade and custom to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method, and as a result thereof substantial injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various states of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of his business as herein-above related, respondent causes, and has caused, various false, deceptive, and misleading statements or representations to appear in his advertising matter as aforesaid, of which the following are examples but are not all inclusive:

Gifts For All.

How To Get Your Gifts Without Any Cost To You.

Beautiful Gifts Or Cash To Be Had At Absolutely No Cost.

Special Offer: Extra Valuable Surprise Gifts Free.

We Pay All Shipping Charges.

The effect of the foregoing false, deceptive, and misleading statements or representations of respondent in selling and offering for sale such articles of merchandise as hereinabove referred to is to mislead and deceive a substantial part of the purchasing public in the several states of the United States and in the District of Columbia by inducing them to mistakenly believe that respondent gives away certain of his said articles of merchandise without cost to his representatives, and that said respondent pays all shipping charges on all of his said articles of merchandise.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact none of respondent's so-called premiums or gifts are given away "free" or without cost, but said so-called premiums or gifts, which are represented as being "free" or without cost to said representatives, are either purchased with labor by said representatives, or the prices thereof are included in the prices of other articles of merchandise which said representatives must sell or procure the sale of before said so-called premiums or gifts can be procured by them. For a number of said so-called premiums or gifts certain sums of money must be paid by said representatives in addition to the labor performed or services rendered. Respondent does not pay the shipping charges on all of his said products, but said representatives are required to pay certain specified sums of money as shipping charges on a number of respondent's said articles of merchandise.

PAR. 7. The use by respondent of the false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations set forth herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such statements or representations are true, and into the purchase of substantial quantities of said respondent's products as a result of such erroneous belief. There are, among the competitors of respondent as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, manufacturers and distributors of like and similar products who do not make such false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations concerning their products. By the statements and representations aforesaid, trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from such competitors, and, as a result thereof, substantial injury is being done, and has been done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in com-

REPORTS, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on August 29, 1938, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Harry Froman, individually, and trading as Supreme Sales Co., and Reliable Premium House, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of and provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by the attorney for the respondent, before Randolph Preston and Andrew B. Duvall, trial examiners, of the Commission, theretofore designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint (oral argument not having been requested); and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Harry Froman, is an individual, trading as Reliable Premium House, with his principal place of business located at 34 East Twelfth Street, in the city and State of New York. During the year 1936 respondent traded also under the name Supreme Sales Co., but has not used that name since said date. Respondent is now, and since the year 1935 has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of watches, clocks, dolls, doll carriages, men's and boys' jackets, and numerous other articles of merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes, and has caused, said products, when sold, to be shipped or transported from his place of business in the State of New York to purchasers located in various other States of the United States. Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Findings

34 F. T. C.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his said business the respondent is engaged in competition with other individuals, and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In promoting the sale of his products, the respondent, distributes advertising or sales circulars by the United States mails to prospective customers or representatives located in various States of the United States. These circulars contain pictorial representations and descriptive matter with reference to merchandise offered as compensation for the sale of certain of respondent's merchandise, and pictorial representations and descriptive matter of certain of the articles of merchandise offered for sale. Each of said circulars contains also what is commonly known as a pull card device.

Said pull card device consists of a number of tabs under each of which is concealed the name of an article of merchandise and the price thereof. Neither the name of the article of merchandise nor the price thereof, is disclosed to a purchaser or prospective purchaser until after the tab has been separated or removed from the card. Adjacent to said device there is a list of the articles of merchandise and the prices thereof corresponding to the various articles of merchandise and the prices thereof as concealed under said tabs. When a purchaser has detached a tab and learned what article he is to receive and the price he is to pay for it, his name is written on the list opposite the named article of merchandise. Some of said articles of merchandise have retail values and regular prices greater than the prices so designated for them, but all of the articles are distributed to the purchasers for the prices on the tabs which they pull or remove from said device. The apparent greater values and regular prices of some of such articles of merchandise as compared with the prices the prospective purchaser will be required to pay in the event he secures the privilege of purchasing one of said articles of merchandise induces members of the purchasing or consuming public to select and pull the tabs in the hope that they will receive articles of merchandise of far greater value than the designated prices to be paid therefor. The specific article which the purchaser receives, the amount of money he will be required to pay for it, and the obtaining of an article of greater value than the price designated therefor, are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

When the person or representative operating the pull card has succeeded in selling all of the articles of merchandise listed under said tabs and has collected the amounts charged therefor, the sum of these amounts is remitted to the respondent. The respondent, upon receipt of such amounts, ships to said representative, the merchandise sold by means of said device, together with a premium for the representative as compensation for operating the device and selling and distributing the merchandise. The premium is selected by said representative from articles of merchandise pictured in the sales or advertising circular. If the representative so desires, he may deduct a cash premium in lieu of the merchandise premium. Upon receipt of the merchandise from respondent, the representative delivers each article thereof to the purchaser in accordance with the list prepared when the tabs were removed or detached from the device as above-described.

Findings

Immediately above the pull tab device on the circular, there appears the following:

NOTICE TO PURCHASERS—On the back of each slip is printed the price of an article. If after deliberation you decide that you want to buy the article, pay the holder of this book the price shown on slip. If you do not want the article you need not buy it.

The Commission finds that regardless of said notice, the said articles of merchandise have been, and are, in fact sold and distributed by means of said pull card device in accordance with the sales plan or method hereinabove described. The successful operation of respondent's sales plan is dependent upon the ability of the operator to sell all the articles listed so as to permit remittance of the required amount to the respondent in order to obtain the merchandise purchased. The purchaser knows the articles listed, and the prices to be paid therefor before he selects and removes the tab from the pull card device. The element of chance is the specific article to be purchased and the amount of money to be paid for it. The operation of the plan strictly in accordance with the so-called "Notice to Purchasers" would not tend to net the operator a return sufficient to warrant completion of the plan and would thereby make the plan inoperative, and to this extent such notice is merely a subterfuge.

It does not appear that any person who pulled a tab from one of respondent's pull card devices ever refused to take and pay for the merchandise designated on the tab. The record shows that at least one representative, by the use of said sales plan, disposed of several assortments of respondent's merchandise without having anyone refuse to take and pay for the merchandise indicated on the tab he pulled. Moreover, from aught that appears in the record all the instructions received by the representative or operator for the operation of said sales plan are contained in the advertising circular forwarded by the respondent. It is significant that in these instructions there is no direction as to what should be done in the event all of the articles of merchandise are not sold. The circular likewise fails to contain any information as to the premium or compensation which can be obtained by the representative or operator in the event one or more of the purchasers refuse to accept the article listed on the tab he removes from the pull tab device. It is clearly apparent from the circulars, on the other hand, that all of the articles listed thereon are to be sold. The following is typical of the instructions appearing on each of said circulars:

Ask your friends and neighbors to pull one of the advertising slips ON THE NEXT PAGE. On the back of each slip you will find the name of the article and its price plainly marked. You collect from the purchaser the price stated on the slip for which he will receive the article mentioned on it.

The prices start at 9c and NO ARTICLE COSTS MORE THAN 39c. When all the articles have been sold you will have collected $7.65. Then fill out the attached order blank and check the premium you want for your prize. As soon as we receive your order and money order we will mail you the 22 articles, as well as your premium.

The order blank referred to in these instructions reads in part as follows:

After you have sold the 22 articles of merchandise and collected $7.65, fill out this blank, stating the correct number of premiums you have selected. Also write your name and address plain, and mail it to us in the enclosed envelope.

Gentlemen:

Please ship at once all charges prepaid the 22 articles of merchandise as sold amounting to $7.65 and one of the valuable premiums.

REWARD PREMIUM NO. ----- COLOR -----

PAR. 4. The Commission finds that the persons or representatives to whom respondent has furnished or distributed said sales or advertising circulars, containing said pull card device, use and have used the same in purchasing, selling, and distributing respondent's merchandise in accordance with the sales plan or method hereinabove described. Respondent has thus supplied to and placed in the hands of others a means of conducting lotteries in the sale and distribution of his said merchandise in accordance with said sales plan or method. Such merchandise has thus been sold or distributed by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme, and respondent has reaped the benefits therefrom. The use by the respondent of said sales plan or method in the sales of his merchandise, and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method, is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States and is in violation of the criminal laws.

PAR. 5. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell or distribute merchandise in competition with respondent in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or a sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by respondent's said method and by the element of chance involved in the sale of such merchandise in the manner above-described, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's merchandise in preference to merchandise offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or any equivalent method. The use of said method by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a capacity and tendency to, and does, unfairly divert trade to respondent from his said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method.

PAR. 6. In addition to the acts and practices hereinabove described, the respondent also causes, and has caused, various statements to appear in his advertising circulars, of which the following are typical examples:

Gifts for All;

How to Get Your Gifts Without Any Cost To You;

Beautiful Gifts Or Cash To Be Had At Absolutely No Cost;

Special Offer: 2 Extra Valuable Surprise Gifts Free.

Each and all of said statements and representations are false, deceptive and misleading. None of respondent's articles of merchandise designated as premiums or gifts are given away "free," but, instead, said articles are in fact delivered as compensation for services rendered, and the price thereof is included in the price of other articles of merchandise which the representatives must sell, or procure the sale of, before they may obtain said premiums or gifts. For at least one of the premiums or gifts described in respondent's circulars a certain sum of money must be paid by the representative in addition to the labor performed or services rendered.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the false, deceptive and misleading statements and representations as set forth herein has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's products as a result of such erroneous and mistaken belief. As a result thereof trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from his competitors who are likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar or like articles of merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Order

34 F. T. C.

CONCLUSION

The acts and practices of the respondent as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Randolph Preston and Andrew B. Duvall, trial examiners of the Commission therefore designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Harry Froman, individually, and trading as Supreme Sales Co., and Reliable Premium House, or under any other trade name, and his agents, representatives, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of watches, clocks, dolls, doll carriages, men's and boys' jackets, and other articles of merchandise in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others pull cards or other devices which are to be used, or may be used, in the sale or distribution of said merchandise to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Shipping, mailing, or transporting to agents or distributors, or to members of the public pull cards or other devices which are to be used, or may be used, in the sale or distribution of said merchandise to the public by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

4. Using the term "free" or any other term of similar import or meaning to describe or refer to goods, wares, or merchandise which are given as compensation for services rendered.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

MONTGOMERY WARD & COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4447. Complaint, Jan. 15, 1941—Decision, June 23, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in interstate sale and distribution by mail order of merchandise, including certain devices for feminine use described by it as "Ward's Posture-Aid Health Belts," "Diab Reducers," and "DuPont Velutex Perforated Reducers"—

- (a) Made such statements, in its catalogs, along with illustrations of such devices, as "Reduce Excess Flesh," "Correct Figure Faults," "Reduce your diaphragm and abdomen," "Mold your abdomen gently," "Correct pendulous abdomens," "Take 2 to 3 inches from abdomen and diaphragm," and "Make reducing easy";

The facts being that, while such devices would afford artificial support, lessen the prominence of pendulous abdomens, and change the physical appearance by compressing that portion of the body about which they were placed, they would not cause a reduction of local body tissue, or effectively remove fat; and

- (b) Represented, through use of terms "Health" and "Reducers" as part of the name of said devices, that the use thereof promoted health and reduced wearer's weight; when in fact such results were not thus obtainable;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that said statements were true, thereby inducing it to purchase said devices, because of such mistaken belief:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Mr. Eldon P. Schrup for the Commission.

Mr. Francis D. Roth and Mr. L. E. Oliphant, of Chicago, Ill., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., a corporation hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois with its principal office and place of business located in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

Respondent, Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., is now and for a number of years last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of articles of general merchandise. In the course and conduct of said business respondent maintains and operates various so-called mail order houses located in Chicago, Ill.; Baltimore, Md.; Albany, N. Y.; Kansas City, Mo.; St. Paul, Minn.; Denver, Colo.; Portland, Oreg.; Oakland, Calif., and Fort Worth, Tex., together with a large number of retail stores, and many so-called catalog order offices situated in numerous cities and towns throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia.

For the purpose of inducing the purchase of its various articles of merchandise, respondent from time to time issues and distributes catalogs to the purchasing public by means of the United States mails and by various other means in commerce. Said catalogs contain illustrations, drawings, and descriptive matter concerning the various articles of merchandise offered for sale and the prices at which said articles can be purchased. Respondent also supplies its various retail stores and so-called catalog order offices with copies of said catalog for inspection by the general public, and from which the public can make purchases of articles of merchandise not carried in stock by the retail store.

Respondent causes said merchandise when sold to be transported, by means of the United States mails and otherwise, from its places of business located in the State of Illinois and in various other States to the purchasers thereof located in a State or States other than the State or States wherein such shipments of merchandise from respondent originate.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said articles of general merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Among the articles of general merchandise so offered for sale, sold, and distributed by respondent are certain devices for feminine use advertised and described by respondent in respondent's said mail order catalogs as "Ward's Posture-Aid Health Belts," "Diab Reducers," and "Du Pont Velutex Perforated Reducers."

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, the respondent has disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning said devices by the United States mails and by various other means in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act; and respondent has also disseminated and is now disseminating, and has caused and is now causing the dissemination of, false advertisements concerning said products by various means, for the purpose of inducing, and which are likely to induce directly or indirectly, the purchase of said devices in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

1471

Among, and typical of, the false, misleading, and deceptive statements and representations contained in said false advertisements disseminated and caused to be disseminated as hereinabove set forth, by means of catalogs and other advertising material, are the claims by respondent that the wearing of the aforementioned devices, "Ward's Posture-Aid Health Belts," "Diab Reducers," and "Du Pont Velutex Perforated Reducers" will accomplish the following:

- Reduce excess flesh;
- Correct figure faults;
- Reduce your diaphragm and abdomen;
- Mold your abdomen gently;
- Correct pendulous abdomens;
- Take 2 to 3 inches from abdomen and diaphragm;
- Make reducing easy.

PAR. 4. By the use of the representations hereinabove set forth, and other representations similar thereto not specifically set out herein, and by use of the terms "Health" and "Reducers" in the trade names of such devices, and also by means of illustrations and drawings contained in said catalogs, respondent represents that the aforementioned devices when worn will reduce excess flesh, correct figure faults, reduce the wearer's diaphragm and abdomen, mold the abdomen gently, correct pendulous abdomens, take 2 to 3 inches from abdomen and diaphragm, and make reducing easy.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid representations and claims used and disseminated by the respondent, as hereinabove described, are grossly exaggerated, misleading and untrue. In truth and in fact, the wearing of such devices will not reduce flesh, make reducing easy, reduce the diaphragm and abdomen, or take 2 to 3 inches from the abdomen and diaphragm. The wearing of these devices will afford artificial support and lessen the prominence of pendulous abdomens, and by compressing that portion of the body about which they are placed change the wearer's physical appearance. They will not correct this condition, but instead will cause further loss of the functioning of the abdominal muscles. The use of said devices will not cause a reduction of local or body tissue or effectively remove fat or overcome or lessen a condition of excess weight. Said devices have no value in maintaining or restoring bodily health.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the foregoing false, deceptive and misleading statements, representations and advertisements, disseminated as aforesaid, has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements, representations, and advertisements are true and induces a substantial portion of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase said devices.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent as herein alleged are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 15th day of January A. D. 1941, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, charging it with unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

After the issuance of the complaint and filing of respondent's answer, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by Eldon P. Schrup, attorney for the Commission, and testimony in opposition to the allegations of the complaint was introduced by F. D. Roth, attorney for the respondent, before duly appointed trial examiners of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding. Said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, answer, testimony, and other evidence, the trial examiners' report and exceptions thereto, briefs in support of, and in opposition to the complaint, and oral argument: And the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., a corporation, is a corporation, organized under the laws of the State of

Findings

Illinois, with its principal office and place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, and branch stores located in numerous States.

PAR. 2. Respondent is now, and for a number of years last past has been, engaged in conducting a mail order business, and in this connection has sold and now sells and distributes merchandise, including certain devices for feminine use described by respondent as "Ward's Posture-Aid Health Belts," "Diab Reducers," and "DuPont Velutex Perforated Reducers." Respondent causes said merchandise, when sold, to be transported by means of the United States mail, and otherwise, from its various places of business to purchasers thereof located in States other than the States wherein such shipments originate, and maintains and has maintained during all of the time mentioned herein, a course of trade in said articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondent, for the purpose of inducing the purchase of the devices referred to in paragraph 2 hereof, issues and distributes its catalogs to the purchasing public by means of the United States mail and by various other means. Among and typical of the statements and representations contained in respondent's advertisements appearing in its catalogs are the claims that the wearing of respondent's said devices will accomplish the following:

- Reduce Excess Flesh;
- Correct Figure Faults;
- Reduce your diaphragm and abdomen;
- Mold your abdomen gently;
- Correct pendulous abdomens;
- Take 2 to 3 inches from abdomen and diaphragm;
- Make reducing easy.

PAR. 4. Respondent, by use of the representations set forth in paragraph 3 hereof, and by means of illustrations and drawings contained in its catalogs, represents that its said devices, when worn, will reduce excess flesh, correct figure faults, reduce the wearer's diaphragm and abdomen, mold the abdomen gently, correct pendulous abdomens, take 2 to 3 inches from abdomen and diaphragm, and make reducing easy.

PAR. 5. The representations and claims of respondent, as set forth in paragraphs 3 and 4 hereof, are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. The wearing of said devices will afford artificial support and lessen the prominence of pendulous abdomens; will change the physical appearance by compressing that portion of the body about which they are placed; but will not cause a reduction of local body tissue, or effectively remove fat, or overcome or lessen the condition of excess weight; nor have such devices any value in retaining or restoring bodily health. In truth and in fact, the wearing of respondent's said devices will not reduce excess flesh, correct figure faults, reduce the wearer's diaphragm and abdomen, take 2 to 3 inches from abdomen and diaphragm, or make reducing easy.

PAR. 6. Respondent, by use of the terms "Health" and "Reducers," as part of the name of said devices, represents and causes the purchasing public to believe, that the use of its devices promotes health and reduces the weight of the wearer, when in truth and in fact, such results are not obtainable by the use of said devices.

PAR. 7. The said exaggerated, false and misleading statements, representations, and advertisements disseminated by respondent have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said statements, representations, and advertisements are true, and have the capacity and tendency to induce, and have induced, the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase respondent's devices.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony and other evidence introduced before William C. Reeves, John W. Addison, and John J. Keenan, trial examiners of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, directors, agents, representatives, and employees, jointly or severally, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with offering for sale, sale and distribution of devices for feminine use designated by the respondent as "Ward's Posture-Aid Health Belts," "Diab Reducers," and "Du Pont's Velutex Perforated Reducers," or otherwise designated, or any device of substantially similar composition or possessing substantially similar properties, whether sold under the same name or under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated, any advertisement (a) by means of United States mails, or (b) by any means in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, which advertisement represents, directly or through inference,

(1) That the wearing of any of said devices will remove excess flesh from the human body, or from the diaphragm or abdomen or any particular part or area of the body.

(2) That the wearing of any of said devices will mold the abdomen gently or correct figure faults in excess of compressing that portion of the body about which said devices are placed, and to that extent only improve the appearance of the wearer while the devices are actually being worn.

(3) That the wearing of said devices, or any of them, will correct pendulous abdomens, or take 2 or 3 inches, or any certain number of inches, from the wearer's diaphragm and abdomen.

(4) That said devices, or any of them, will make it easy for the wearer to reduce.

2. Disseminating or causing to be disseminated any advertisement by any means for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, of said devices, or any of them, which advertisement contains any of the representations prohibited in paragraph 1 hereof;

3. Using as a part of the designation or trade name of said devices the words "Health" or "Reducers," when such devices are offered for sale, sold or distributed in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

LASHER'S SILK MANUFACTURING COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4612. Complaint, Oct. 9, 1941—Decision, June 23, 1942

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture and interstate sale and distribution of ribbon seam binding material and other products—

Offered and sold its ribbon seam binding wound on spools, cardboard rolls or cards upon which was imprinted, in conspicuous type and plainly visible to purchasers, along with said corporation's brand name and other descriptive matter, the legend "100 yds."; when in fact, due to shrinkage in dyeing, said spools or cards contained less than said amount;

With result of placing in the hands of dealers purchasing its products for resale a means whereby they were enabled to mislead and deceive the purchasing public, and of misleading and deceiving a substantial portion of such dealers into the false belief that said spools, cardboard rolls and cards contained said quantity, and of thereby inducing their purchase of substantial quantities of its said product; to their loss and injury and that of the purchasing public:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce.

Before Mr. Clyde M. Hadley, trial examiner.

Mr. B. G. Wilson for the Commission.

Mr. George J. Beldock, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Lasher's Silk Manufacturing Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Lasher's Silk Manufacturing Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business located at 545 Eighth Avenue, in the city of New York, State of New York, and a manufacturing plant in the city of Bethlehem, State of Pennsylvania.

Complaint

PAR. 2. The respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture, at its plant in Bethlehem, Pa., of ribbon seam binding material and other products, and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent causes its said products, when sold, to be shipped from said place of business in Pennsylvania to jobbers and other purchasers thereof located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its said business, as aforesaid, the respondent has offered for sale and sold, and now offers for sale and sells, its said ribbon seam binding under its brand name "Lasher's," wound or rolled on spools, cardboard rolls or cards. Imprinted and labeled on the visible surface of said spools, cardboard rolls, or cards, among other printed statements, in conspicuous type and visible to the eye of jobbers and other members of the purchasing public, appear the following statements:

SEAM BINDING
100 YARDS
RAYON AND SILK
SEAM BINDING
100 YARDS

The foregoing statements and representations are false, misleading, and deceptive in that the said spools, cardboard rolls, or cards did not, and do not, contain 100 yards of ribbon seam binding.

In truth and in fact, the said spools, cardboard rolls, or card contain substantially less than 100 yards of ribbon seam binding to the container.

PAR. 4. The acts and practices of the respondent place in the hands of the dealers purchasing for resale a means or instrumentality whereby such dealers are enabled to mislead and deceive the purchasing public.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent have had, and now have, the capacity and tendency to, and do mislead and deceive a substantial portion of purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said spools, cardboard rolls, or cards contain 100 yards of ribbon seam binding and cause jobbers and other members of the purchasing public, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's products, to their injury and to the injury of the public.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 9th day of October A. D. 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Lasher's Silk Manufacturing Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of the complaint, testimony, and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by the attorney for the Commission, and evidence in opposition to the allegations of the complaint was introduced by the attorney for the respondent, before a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, and a stipulation of facts was entered into on the record by the attorney for the Commission and the attorney for the respondent. The testimony and other evidence and the stipulation of facts were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. The attorney for respondent waived the filing of the trial examiner's report, filing of briefs and oral argument.

Thereafter, the proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission, upon the complaint, the testimony and other evidence, and the stipulation as to the facts. And the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Lasher's Silk Manufacturing Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business located at 545 Eighth Avenue, in the city and State of New York, and having a manufacturing plant in the city of Bethlehem, Pa.

1478

Order

PAR. 2. The respondent, for more than 2 years last past has been, and now is, engaged in the manufacture, in its plant at Bethlehem, Pa., of ribbon seam binding material and other products, and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

The respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said product in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent has offered for sale and sold its ribbon seam binding, wound or rolled on spools, cardboard rolls, or cards, under its brand name, "Lasher's." Among other statements imprinted and labeled on the visible surface of such spools, cardboard rolls or cards, in conspicuous type and plainly visible to purchasers, are the following:

Seam Binding	100 yards	Rayon and silk;
Seam Binding	100 yards.

The foregoing statements are misleading in that, due to shrinkage in dyeing, the spools, cardboard rolls, or cards did not and do not contain 100 yards of ribbon seam binding, each, but contain less than 100 yards.

PAR. 4. The acts and practices of the respondent place in the hands of dealers purchasing its product for resale, means and instrumentalities whereby they are enabled to mislead and deceive the purchasing public.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent had and have the capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the false and erroneous belief that such spools, cardboard rolls, or cards contain 100 yards of ribbon seam binding, and have induced the purchase by such dealers, because of such belief, of substantial quantities of respondent's product, to the loss and injury of such dealers and the purchasing public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

dence in support of the allegations of the complaint introduced by the attorney for the Commission, and evidence in opposition to the allegations of the complaint introduced by the attorney for the respondent, before a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission designated by it to serve in this proceeding, and a stipulation of facts entered into on the record by the attorneys for the Commission and for the respondent—the filing of the trial examiner's report, briefs, oral argument, and all intervening procedure being waived, and it being agreed between the attorneys for the Commission and for the respondent that the Commission may make its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and issue its order disposing of the proceeding: And the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act:

It is ordered, That the respondent, Lasher's Silk Manufacturing Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, directors, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its product, ribbon seam binding material, whether sold under the brand name "Lasher's" or under any other name, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from Representing, directly or indirectly, that the number of yards or quantity of ribbon seam binding wound, contained or rolled on spools, cardboard rolls, or cards, or on any container in which said product is offered for sale or sold, is greater than the number of yards or quantity of such product actually contained thereon.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after the service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF

DANIEL HECHTMAN AND STEVE MOORE, TRADING AS H & H HAT COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF THE FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ACT AND THE WOOL PRODUCTS
LABELING ACT OF 1939

Docket 4633. Complaint, Jan. 15, 1942¹—Decision, June 23, 1942

Where two individuals, engaged in the manufacture of women's hats from felt and other materials including old, worn or previously used felt hat bodies purchased by them, which, after being cleaned, shaped and fitted with new trimming, had the appearance of new hats made from new felt; and in the interstate sale and distribution of said products—

- (a) Sold their said hats with no labeling, markings, or designation to indicate that they were in fact made from old, used hat bodies, to jobbers, wholesalers, and retailers by whom they were resold to the purchasing public without disclosure of aforesaid fact;

With result that a substantial portion of said public was misled into believing that products in question were made entirely from new materials, and in consequence, into purchase of substantial quantities thereof; and with further result of thereby placing in the hands of dealers a means of deceiving or misleading members of the public into the mistaken belief that they were, contrary to the fact, purchasing new hats; and

Where said individuals, engaged as aforesaid in manufacture and sale of hats, including many which were wool products within the meaning of the Wool Products Labeling Act in that they were composed in part of wool, reprocessed wool, or reused wool, and other fibers—

- (b) Sold said products misbranded in violation of act in question in that they did not have on or affixed thereto a stamp, tag, label, or other means of identification showing the percentages of the total fiber weight required by the statute with respect to wool, reprocessed wool, reused wool, nonwool fibers, and aggregates thereof, addition of nonfibrous loading, and proper identification of the manufacturer or seller, under act in question:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and constituted unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act and the Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939.

Mr. L. E. Creel, Jr., for the Commission.

Mr. Irving Block, of Chicago, Ill., for respondents.

AMENDED COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Daniel Hechtman

and Steve Moore, individually, and trading as H & H Hat Co., have violated the provisions of said act and the provisions of the Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939, and the rules and regulations promulgated thereunder, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its amended complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Daniel Hechtman and Steve Moore, are individuals, trading as H & H Hat Co., and have their principal office and place of business at 1351 Milwaukee Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for several years last past have been, engaged in the business of manufacturing women's hats from felt and other materials. Some of said hats have been manufactured from felt obtained from old, worn, or previously used hats and others are made from felt not previously used as felt. Respondents sell said hats to retailers, jobbers, and wholesale dealers located in the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia. Respondents cause said hats, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Illinois to the aforesaid purchasers located in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said hats in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, prior to July 15, 1941, respondents bought old, worn, or previously used felt hats. The old, worn, or previously used felt hat bodies were cleaned and shaped and fitted with new trimmings and sold by respondents to dealers who in turn sold said hats to the purchasing public.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid hats manufactured from old, worn, or previously used hat bodies as hereinabove described had the appearance of new hats manufactured from new felts. When articles manufactured from old, worn, or previously used materials and having the appearance of being manufactured from new materials are offered to the purchasing public and are not clearly and conspicuously labeled as being manufactured from old, worn, or previously used materials, such articles are readily accepted by members of the purchasing public as being manufactured entirely from new materials.

Said hats were sold to retailers and other dealers without any label, marking, or designation stamped thereon, or attached thereto, to indicate to the purchasing public or to the dealers that said hats were, in fact, manufactured from old, worn, or previously used hat bodies. Said hats were resold to the purchasing public without the fact being disclosed that they were manufactured from old, worn, or previously used hat bodies, and a substantial portion of the purchasing public was thereby misled to believe that they were, in fact, new hats manufactured entirely from new materials. As a result of this erroneous and mistaken understanding and belief, substantial quantities of respondent's hats were purchased by members of the public.

PAR. 5. Through the use of the aforesaid acts and practices, the respondents placed in the hands of dealers the means and instrumentalities whereby said dealers may have deceived or misled members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that they were purchasing hats manufactured from new materials when, in fact, said hats were composed entirely or in part of old, worn, or previously used hat bodies.

PAR. 6. Among the hats manufactured by the respondent from felt not previously used as felt, and which have been sold and distributed by respondents since July 15, 1941, are many which are wool products within the intent and meaning of the Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939, in that such hats are composed in part of wool, reprocessed wool, or reused wool, as those terms are defined in said act. Many of said wool products contain fibers other than wool, reprocessed wool, or reused wool.

Each of said wool products, when sold and distributed by the respondents in said commerce as aforesaid, was misbranded in violation of the Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939, in that said wool product did not have on or affixed thereto a stamp, tag, label, or any other means of identification, or a substitute in lieu thereof as provided by said act, showing (a) the percentage of the total fiber weight of the wool product, exclusive of ornamentation not exceeding 5 percentum of said total fiber weight, of (1) wool, (2) reprocessed wool, (3) reused wool, (4) each fiber other than wool where said percentage by weight of such fiber was 5 percentum or more, and (5) the aggregate of all other fibers; (b) the maximum percentage of the total weight of the wool product of nonfibrous loading, filling, or adulterating matter; (c) the name of the manufacturer of the wool product, or a registered number in lieu thereof under the conditions provided in the rules and regulations promulgated under such act, or the name of one or more persons subject to section 3 of the said act with respect to such wool product.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts, practices, and methods of respondents, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 14th day of November 1941, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Daniel Hechtman and Steve Moore, individually; and trading as H & H Hat Co., charging them with the use of unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act and the provisions of the Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939. Subsequently, on the 15th day of January 1942, the Commission issued and thereafter served upon the respondents its amended complaint in this proceeding. After the issuance of said amended complaint, the Commission by order entered herein granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw their answer filed to the original complaint and to file an answer admitting all of the material allegations of fact set forth in said amended complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said amended complaint and respondents' answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Daniel Hechtman and Steve Moore, are individuals, trading as H & H Hat Co., and have their principal office and place of business at 1351 Milwaukee Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

PAR. 2. Respondents are now, and for several years last past have been, engaged in the business of manufacturing women's hats from felt and other materials. Some of said hats have been manufactured from felt obtained from old, worn, or previously used hats and others are made from felt not previously used as felt. Respondents sell said hats to retailers, jobbers, and wholesale dealers located in the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia. Respondents cause said hats, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Illinois to the aforesaid purchasers located in various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. Respondents maintain, and at all times mentioned herein have maintained, a course of trade in said hats in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, prior to July 15, 1941, respondents bought old, worn, or previously used felt hats. The old, worn, or previously used felt hat bodies were cleaned and shaped and fitted with new trimmings and sold by respondents to dealers who in turn sold said hats to the purchasing public.

PAR. 4. The aforesaid hats manufactured from old, worn, or previously used hat bodies as hereinabove described had the appearance of new hats manufactured from new felt. When articles manufactured from old, worn, or previously used materials and having the appearance of being manufactured from new materials are offered to the purchasing public and are not clearly and conspicuously labeled, as being manufactured from old, worn, or previously used materials, such articles are readily accepted by members of the purchasing public as being manufactured entirely from new materials.

Said hats were sold to retailers and other dealers without any label, marking, or designation stamped thereon, or attached thereto, to indicate to the purchasing public or to the dealers that said hats were, in fact, manufactured from old, worn, or previously used hat bodies. Said hats were resold to the purchasing public without the fact being disclosed that they were manufactured from old, worn, or previously used hat bodies, and a substantial portion of the purchasing public was thereby misled to believe that they were, in fact, new hats manufactured entirely from new materials. As a result of this erroneous and mistaken understanding and belief, substantial quantities of respondents' hats were purchased by members of the public.

PAR. 5. Through the use of the aforesaid acts and practices, the respondents placed in the hands of dealers the means and instrumentalities whereby said dealers may have deceived or misled members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that they were purchasing hats manufactured from new materials when, in fact, said hats were composed entirely or in part of old, worn, or previously used hat bodies.

PAR. 6. Among the hats manufactured by the respondents from felt not previously used as felt, and which have been sold and distributed by respondents since July 15, 1941, are many which are wool products within the intent and meaning of the Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939, in that such hats are composed in part of wool, reprocessed wool, or reused wool, as those terms are defined in said act. Many of said wool products also contain fibers other than wool, reprocessed wool, or reused wool.

Each of said wool products, when sold and distributed by the respondents in said commerce as aforesaid, was misbranded in violation of the Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939, in that said wool product did not have on or affixed thereto a stamp, tag, label, or any other means of identification, or a substitute in lieu thereof as provided by said act, showing (a) the percentage of the total fiber weight of the wool product, exclusive of ornamentation not exceeding 5 per centum of said total fiber weight, or (1) wool, (2) reprocessed wool, (3) reused wool, (4) each fiber other than wool where said percentage by weight of such fiber was 5 per centum or more, and (5) the aggregate of all other fibers; (b) the maximum percentage of the total weight of the wool product of nonfibrous loading, filling, or adulterating matter; (c) the name of the manufacturer of the wool product, or a registered number in lieu thereof under the conditions provided in the rules and regulations promulgated under such act, or the name of one or more persons manufacturing for introduction, introducing said wool product into, or engaged in the sale, transportation, or distribution of said wool product in, commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act and in the Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act and the Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondents, in which answer respondents admit all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and state that they waive all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and the provisions of the Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939.

It is ordered, That the respondents, Daniel Hechtman and Steve Moore, individually, and trading as H & H Hat Co., or trading under any other name, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of hats in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that hats composed in whole or in part of used or second-hand materials are new, or are composed of new materials, by failure to stamp in some conspicuous place on the exposed surface of the inside of the hat, in conspicuous and legible terms which cannot be removed or obliterated without mutilating the hat itself, a statement that said hats are composed of second-hand or used materials: Provided, That if substantial bands, placed similarly to sweat bands in men's hats, are attached to said hats, then and in that event such statement may be stamped upon the exposed surface of such bands; Provided further, That said stampings are of such nature that they cannot be removed or obliterated without mutilating the band and the band itself cannot be removed without rendering the hat un-serviceable.

2. Representing in any manner that hats made in whole or in part from old, used or second-hand materials are new or are composed of new materials.

It is further ordered, That the respondents, Daniel Hechtman and Steve Moore, individually, and trading as H & H Hat Co., or trading under any other name, their representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the introduction or manufacture for introduction of hats into commerce, or the sale, transportation, or distribution of hats in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act and the Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939, do forthwith cease and desist from misbranding hats which contain, purport to contain or in any way are represented as containing wool, reprocessed wool or reused wool, as those terms are defined in the Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939, by failing to place on or affix to each hat a stamp, tag, label, or other means of identification showing:

(a) The percentage of the total fiber weight of the hat, exclusive of ornamentation not exceeding 5 percentum of said total fiber weight, of (1) wool, (2) reprocessed wool, (3) reused wool, (4) each fiber other than wool where said percentage by weight of such fiber is 5 per centum or more, and (5) the aggregate of all other fibers.

(b) The maximum percentage of the total weight of the hat of nonfibrous loading, filling, or adulterating matter.

Order

34 F. T. C.

(c) The name of the manufacturer of the hat; or the manufacturer's registered identification number and the name of a subsequent seller of the hat; or the name of one or more persons introducing said hat into, or engaged in the sale, transportation, or distribution of said hat in, commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act and the Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939.

Subsections (a), (b), and (c) of this order are subject to the provisions of the Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939 and the rules and regulations promulgated thereunder and are not to be construed as limiting any applicable provision of said act or said rules and regulations.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF
ROBERT W. IRWIN COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4701. Complaint, Feb. 5, 1942—Decision, June 23, 1942

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture of household furniture, and in the competitive interstate sale and distribution thereof—

Represented and implied that certain of its furniture was made in its entirety from walnut through use of words "Wood: Walnut" and other statements containing the word "Walnut" in catalogs, price lists, photogravure sheets, invoices, and labels distributed among prospective purchasers, and by other means; when in fact it used a walnut wood veneer on a portion of the flat surface of said furniture and pecan wood for some of the exposed structural parts, such as the legs and framing for cabinet doors;

With tendency and capacity to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the mistaken belief that such furniture was made entirely from walnut, for which it has a marked preference over that made from a combination of woods such as pecan and walnut, and thereby to induce its purchase of said product, to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and its competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. Clyde M. Hadley, trial examiner.

Mr. B. G. Wilson for the Commission.

Travis, Merrick, Varnum & Riddering, of Grand Rapids, Mich., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Robert W. Irwin Co., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Robert W. Irwin Co., is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Michigan, with its office and principal place of business at 23 Summer Avenue, Grand Rapids, Mich.

The respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of household furniture, such as dining room, bedroom, and living room furniture and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said furniture in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its said business, the respondent is in substantial competition with other corporations, and with partnerships, firms and individuals engaged in the manufacture of household furniture, and in the sale and distribution thereof in said commerce.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said furniture, the respondent has disseminated, and is now disseminating, false and misleading statements and representations with respect to the kind of wood from which certain of its furniture is made. Such statements and representations are made by means of catalogs, price lists, photogravure sheets, invoices and labels distributed among prospective purchasers and by other means. Among the statements so disseminated by the respondent is the statement "Wood: Walnut" to designate, describe, and refer to certain of its furniture which is not composed wholly of the wood known as walnut, but which is made from a combination of the wood commonly known as walnut and the wood commonly known as pecan. Respondent, in the manufacture of said furniture, so designated and described, uses what is commonly known as a walnut wood veneer for a portion of the flat surface of said furniture but uses the wood commonly known as pecan for all of the exposed structural parts, such as the legs and framing for cabinet doors.

Through the use of the statement "Wood: Walnut" and other statements containing the word "walnut" to designate, describe and refer to said furniture manufactured from a combination of the woods commonly known as walnut and pecan, as aforesaid, respondent represents and implies, and the purchasing public is thereby led to believe, that said furniture is manufactured in its entirety from the wood commonly known as walnut.

PAR. 4. There is a marked preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for furniture manufactured wholly from walnut wood over furniture manufactured from a combination of woods such as pecan and walnut.

The wood commonly known as pecan is similar in appearance to, and resembles the wood commonly known as walnut when finished to be used in furniture with walnut. Under such conditions the greater portion of the public and many dealers in furniture are unable to distinguish the wood commonly known as pecan from the wood commonly known as walnut.

PAR. 5. There are among the competitors of respondent, as mentioned in paragraph 2 hereof, many who manufacture, sell and distribute the same character of furniture, who do not in any manner misrepresent the material or kind of wood from which such furniture is manufactured or matters pertaining thereto.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the false and misleading statements and representations referred to herein has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to, and does, mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that such statements and representations are true, and, because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, a substantial portion of the purchasing public is induced to, and does, purchase respondent's said furniture. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been done, and is being done, by respondent to competition in commerce between, and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public, and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 5th day of February 1942, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Robert W. Irwin Co., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On February 26, 1942, the respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, at a hearing held in Grand Rapids, Mich., on May 4, 1942, before Clyde M. Hadley, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts read into the record may be taken as the facts in this proceeding, and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto, and that the Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and issue its order disposing of this proceeding without the presentation or arguments or the filing of briefs. The respondent expressly waived the filing of a report upon the evidence by the trial examiner. Thereafter, this proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer, and stipulation as to the facts, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

Findings

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Robert W. Irwin Co., is a corporation, organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Michigan, with its office and principal place of business at 23 Summer Avenue, Grand Rapids, Mich.

The respondent is now, and for more than 2 years last past has been engaged in the manufacture of household furniture, such as dining room, bedroom, and living room furniture, and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent maintains, and at all times mentioned herein has maintained, a course of trade in said furniture in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its said business, the respondent is in substantial competition with other corporations, and with partnerships, firms and individuals engaged in the manufacture of household furniture, and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its furniture, the respondent has disseminated statements and representations with respect to the kind of wood from which certain of its furniture is made. Such statements and representatives have been made by means of catalogs, price lists, photogravure sheets, invoices, and labels distributed among prospective purchasers, and by other means. Among the statements so disseminated by the respondent was the statement "Wood: Walnut" to designate, describe, and refer to certain of its furniture not composed wholly of the wood known as walnut, but made from a combination of the wood commonly known as walnut and wood commonly known as pecan. Respondent, in the manufacture of said furniture so designated and described, has used what is commonly known as a walnut wood veneer for a portion of the flat surface of said furniture, but has used the wood commonly known as pecan for some of the exposed structural parts, such as the legs and framing for cabinet doors.

Through the use of the statement "Wood: Walnut" and other statements containing the word "Walnut" to designate, describe, and refer to said furniture manufactured from a combination of the woods commonly known as walnut and pecan, as aforesaid, respondent has represented and implied, and the purchasing public has been thereby led to believe, that said furniture was manufactured in its entirety from the wood commonly known as walnut.

PAR. 4. There is a marked preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for furniture manufactured wholly from walnut wood over furniture manufactured from a combination of woods such as pecan and walnut.

The wood commonly known as pecan is similar in appearance to, and resembles the wood commonly known as walnut when finished to be used in furniture with walnut. Under such conditions the greater portion of the public and many dealers in furniture are unable to distinguish the wood commonly known as pecan from the wood commonly known as walnut.

PAR. 5. There are among the competitors of respondent, as mentioned in paragraph 2 hereof, many who manufacture, sell, and distribute the same character of furniture, who do not in any manner misrepresent the material or kind of wood from which such furniture is manufactured or matters pertaining thereto.

PAR. 6. The use by the respondent of the statements and representations referred to herein has had a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said furniture was, in fact, manufactured in its entirety from the wood commonly known as walnut; and because of such erroneous and mistaken belief, a substantial portion of the purchasing public has been induced to purchase respondent's said furniture. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

On or about November 1, 1941, respondent discontinued the practice of designating, describing and referring to furniture manufactured from a combination of the woods commonly known as walnut and pecan as "Wood: Walnut" or "Walnut" and has since designated, described and referred to such furniture as "Wood: Walnut and Pecan."

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, and a stipulation as to the facts made a part of the record herein, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon, and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Robert W. Irwin Co., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of furniture in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or by implication, that furniture made from a combination of the wood commonly known as walnut and the wood commonly known as pecan is manufactured from the wood commonly known as walnut.

2. Using the words "Wood: Walnut" or the word "Walnut" to describe, designate, and refer to furniture which is not composed wholly of the wood commonly known as walnut.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF

SIERRA CANDY COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4758. Complaint, May 7, 1942—Decision, June 23, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in the manufacture and competitive interstate sale and distribution of candy, including certain assortments which were so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises and lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers, typical assortments including, as illustrative, one of 24 one-pound boxes of uniform size and shape, together with a push card for use in sale and distribution thereof under a plan by which amount paid by customers for said boxes was determined by number secured by chance from card, and another of 19 boxes with punchboard, for use under a plan by which customer, for 5 cents, by chance selection of certain designated numbers received one of said boxes, as did also the customer making the last punch in each of the first two sections into which the board was divided, or the last punch on the board, others receiving nothing for their money—

Sold such assortments to wholesalers, to jobbers, and to retailers, by whom they were sold to the purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid plan, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products under plan in question, involving game of chance to procure candy at much less than normal retail price, in competition with many who do not use any such method;

With the result that many persons were attracted by its said sales method and element of chance involved therein, and were thereby induced to buy and sell its candy in preference to that of competitors aforesaid, whereby trade was unfairly diverted to it from them; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, were contrary to the public policy of the United States Government, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr. for the Commission.

Mr. David Rubenstein, of San Francisco, Calif., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Sierra Candy Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Sierra Candy Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized and doing business under the laws of the State of California with its office and principal place of business located at 2203 Third Street, San Francisco, Calif. Respondent, is now, and for more than 6 months last past, has been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said candy, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of San Francisco, Calif., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than California and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 6 months last past a course of trade by respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retailer dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift, enterprises and lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Two of said assortments are hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the methods used by the respondent and are as follows:

One assortment includes 24 one-pound boxes of candy of uniform size and shape together with a device commonly called a push card. The said push card has 24 partially perforated disks on the faces of which is printed the word "Push." Concealed within the said disks are numbers ranging from 1 to 39 inclusive. When the disks are pushed or separated from the card, a number is disclosed. Purchasers pushing No. 1 pay 1 cent; those pushing Nos. 2, 8, or 39 pay 2 cents, 8 cents, or 39 cents, respectively, each purchaser paying the amount revealed by the punch which he has selected. The numbers are effectively concealed from the purchasers and prospective purchasers until the disks are pushed or separated from the card. The prices of said boxes of candy are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Complaint

Another of said assortments consist of 19 boxes of candy and a punchboard. Appearing on the face of the punchboard is the following inscription.

5¢ A SALE 5¢
 -20-40-60-80-100-120-140-Wins
 ½ # Picture Top Box
 160-180-200-220-240-260-280-300-210-Wins
 1 # Picture Top Box
 Last Punch in 1st 2 sections gone Wins
 1½ # Picture Top Box
 Last Punch on Board Wins 3 # Picture Top Box

Said candy is distributed to the purchasing public by means of said punchboard in the following manner:

Sales are 5 cents each, and when a punch is made, a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence and said numbers are arranged in three sections. The board bears a statement informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a box of candy, and the purchaser of the last sale in each of the first two sections completely sold is also entitled to receive a box of candy, and the last punch on the board entitles the purchaser to receive a box of candy. A customer who does not qualify by obtaining one of the specified numbers or the last punch in the first two sections of the last punch on the board, receives nothing for his money. The boxes of candy are worth more than 5 cents each, and the purchaser who obtains a number calling for one of the boxes of candy receives the same for 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers or prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The candy is thus distributed to the purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent furnishes and has furnished various push cards and punchboards for use in the sale and distribution of its candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such push cards or punchboards are similar to the ones herein described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's candy, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of its candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the method or plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure candy at prices much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute candy in competition with respondent, as above alleged, do not use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method contrary to public policy. Many persons are attracted by said sales plan or method employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its candy and in the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to candy of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on May 7, 1942, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Sierra Candy Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On May 25, 1942, the respondent filed its original answer in this proceeding. In its answer the respondent admitted all the material allegations charged in the complaint to be true and, in accordance with rule IX of the Commission's Rules of Practice, by such an answer the respondent is deemed to have waived a hearing on the allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and to have authorized the Commission, without further evidence, or other intervening procedure, to find such facts to be true. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and answer thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Sierra Candy Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized and doing business under the laws of the State of California with its office and principal place of business located at 2203 Third Street, San Francisco, Calif. Respondent is now and for more than 6 months last past has been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said candy, when sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of San Francisco, Calif., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in various States of the United States other than California and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 6 months last past a course of trade by respondent in such candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is and has been in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of games of chance, gift enterprises, and lottery schemes when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Two of said assortments are hereinafter described for the purpose of showing the methods used by the respondent and are as follows:

One assortment includes 24 one-pound boxes of candy of uniform size and shape together with a device commonly called a push card. The said push card has 24 partially perforated disks on the faces of which is printed the word "Push." Concealed within the said disks are numbers ranging from 1 to 39 inclusive. numbers are effectively concealed from the purchasers and prospective purchasers until the disks are pushed or separated from the card. The prices of said boxes of candy are thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Another of said assortments consists of 19 boxes of candy and a punchboard. Appearing on the face of the punchboard is the following inscription:

 Last Punch on Board Wins 3# Picture Top Box

Said candy is distributed to the purchasing public by means of said punchboard in the following manner:

Sales are 5 cents each, and when a punch is made, a number is disclosed. The numbers begin with 1 and continue to the number of punches there are on the board, but the numbers are not arranged in numerical sequence and said numbers are arranged in three sections. The board bears a statement informing purchasers and prospective purchasers that certain specified numbers entitle the purchaser thereof to receive a box of candy, and the purchaser of the last sale in each of the first two sections completely sold is also entitled to receive a box of candy, and the last punch on the board entitles the purchaser to receive a box of candy. A customer who does not qualify by obtaining one of the specified numbers or the last punch in the first two sections of the last punch on the board, receives nothing for his money. The boxes of candy are worth more than 5 cents each, and the purchaser who obtains a number calling for one of the boxes of candy receives the same for 5 cents. The numbers are effectively concealed from purchasers or prospective purchasers until a punch or selection has been made and the particular punch separated from the board. The candy is thus distributed to the purchasers of punches from the board wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent furnishes and has furnished various push cards and punchboards for use in the sale and distribution of its candy by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme. Such push cards or punchboards are similar to the one herein described and vary only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's candy directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its product in accordance with the sales plan hereinbefore set forth.

PAR. 4. The respondent's sales plan involves a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme to procure candy at prices much less than the normal retail prices thereof. Many of respondent's competitors mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof do not use said method, or any method involving a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

Many persons are attracted by respondent's sales method and the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's candy in preference to the candy of said competitors, and the use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity to, and does, unfairly divert trade, in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, to respondent from its said competitors. As a result thereof injury is being and has been done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, are contrary to the public policy of the Government of the United States of America, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and answer of the respondent, in which answer respondent admitted all the material allegations of the Commission's complaint to be true, and by which answer, in accordance with rule IX of the Commission's Rules of Practice, respondent was deemed to have waived a hearing on all the allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and to have authorized the Commission, without further evidence or other intervening procedure to find such facts to be true; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Order

34 F. T. C.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Sierra Candy Co., Inc., its officers, directors, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy, or any other merchandise, in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing candy or any other merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of such candy or other merchandise are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to and placing in the hands of others, push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery device, either with assortments of candy or other merchandise, or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery device are to be or may be used in selling or distributing said candy or other merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after the service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF

MATHEW W. M. DEVITT, ROY D. SCHLEGEL AND ROBERT
E. SARGENT, TRADING AS AUTOGROOM COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3702. Complaint, Feb. 7, 1939—Decision, June 24, 1942

Where three individuals, engaged in manufacture and competitive interstate sale and distribution of their "Auto-Groom" for cleaning and polishing automobiles, and previously in the employ of a concern which made and sold its similar "Karsmetik" product; in soliciting sales from garages, service stations, and distributors, upon many of whom they had formerly called as salesmen for said "Karsmetik"—

Represented to such former purchasers that the company which formerly made "Karsmetik" was no longer in business, and that such product was no longer being offered; that the chemist who was formerly employed by it and developed the formula was in their employ, and that "Auto-Groom" was the same product as the other, differing therefrom only in trade name and color;

The facts being that said older concern was then manufacturing and offering its said product in active competition with them; formula for the new product was not developed as claimed, but obtained from a collection of formulae distributed by a chemical manufacturer, and while similar to that for the older product, was not in all respects the same; and they did not have any such chemist in their employ;

With effect of causing former purchasers of said competitive "Karsmetik" mistakenly to believe that aforesaid representations were true, and with consequence that many of them, particularly those formerly making their purchases from one of said individuals, discontinued purchasing it, and they and others purchased "Auto-Groom" instead of "Karsmetik"; whereby trade was diverted to them from said competitor;

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice of the public and said competitor, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. John W. Addison, trial examiner.

Mr. S. Brogdyne Teu, II for the Commission.

Mr. Joseph A. Kaufmann, of Washington, D. C., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Mathew W. M. Devitt, Roy D. Schlegel, and Robert E. Sargent, trading as Autogroom

Co., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have violated the provisions of the said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Mathew W. M. Devitt, Roy D. Schlegel, and Robert E. Sargent, are individuals, doing business under the firm name and style of Autogroom Co., with their principal office and place of business located at 11 East Forty-Fourth Street, in the city of New York, State of New York, and 5013 Georgia Avenue NW., city of Washington, D. C. Their manufacturing plant is located at 2416 Forty-seventh Street, city of Long Island City, State of New York. For more than 1 year last past said respondents have been, and are now, engaged in the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of a product, under the trade name "Auto-Groom," used for cleaning and polishing automobiles. In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents have caused, and now cause, said product, when sold or ordered, to be shipped and transported from their aforesaid places of business to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid respondents have been, and are now, in competition with other corporations, and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the business of offering for sale, selling, and distributing products used or useful for the cleaning and polishing of automobiles in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Among said competitors are many who do not disparage their competitors' products and who do not misrepresent the efficacy of their products or pass their products off as that of a competitor. Among said competitors is one offering for sale and selling in said commerce an automobile cleaner and polisher under the trade name "Karsmetik." The product Karsmetik has been on the market for several years in the trade territory in which the respondents offer for sale and sell their said product Auto-Groom. The product Karsmetik has been on the market for a much greater period of time than has respondents' said product. Said product Karsmetik has long been recognized by the purchasers and users of automobile cleaners and polishers as a product of merit and excellence and there has been created, as a result of the reputation established because of the merit of said product, a good will among purchasers and users thereof of substantial value to the sellers of said product.

All of said respondents were connected with the seller of the product Karsmetik, at one time or another prior to the time they began the distribution of the product Auto-Groom, and through such connection they had occasion to and did become acquainted and familiar with the purchasers and users of the product Karsmetik located in the trade territory in which respondents now offer for sale and sell the product "Auto-Groom."

PAR. 3. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their said business in said commerce as aforesaid, have defamed and disparaged, and do defame and disparage, their competitor and its product by representing to former purchasers and prospective purchasers of the product Karsmetik that the company manufacturing and distributing said product is no longer in business and that said product is not being offered for sale and sold. Respondents further represent that the chemist who discovered the formula for, and supervised the preparation of, the product Karsmetik is now in the employ of the respondents and that the product "Auto-Groom" is in all respects the same as the product Karsmetik. In some instances, the respondents represent that the product Karsmetik is, in all respects, inferior to the product Auto-Groom.

In truth and in fact the company manufacturing the product Karsmetik has not discontinued business but has been and is now manufacturing said product and offering for sale and selling the same in the trade territory in which respondents operate. Respondents do not have in their employ the chemist who discovered the formula for the product Karsmetik, and the product Auto-Groom is not made from the formula used to make Karsmetik, nor is the product Auto-Groom in all respects the same as Karsmetik. The product Karsmetik is in no wise inferior to, but is in many respects superior to, the product Auto-Groom.

PAR. 4. The acts and practices of the respondents in making and using the representations aforesaid in connection with the sale and distribution of said product Auto-Groom in said commerce have the tendency and capacity to and do cause former purchasers and prospective purchasers of the product Karsmetik erroneously and mistakenly to believe that said representations are true and that the manufacturer of said product Karsmetik is no longer engaged in business and that such product is no longer obtainable under its original trade name Karsmetik; that the product Auto-Groom is made from the formula for Karsmetik and under the supervision of the chemist who formerly supervised the manufacture of Karsmetik; and that the product Auto-Groom is the same as, or superior to, the product Karsmetik.

Because of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs engendered as aforesaid many former purchasers, more particularly those formerly making their purchases of the product Karsmetik through one of the respondents while in the employment of the manufacturer of said product, and prospective purchasers of the product Karsmetik have discontinued purchasing or declined to purchase said product and have purchased respondents' product in lieu and instead of the product Karsmetik which they would have purchased but for the false and misleading representations so made and used by the respondents.

As a consequence thereof, trade in said commerce has been and is diverted unfairly to the respondents from their competitors who do not defame and disparage competitors or their products and who truthfully represent their products, to the injury of said competitors and to the injury of the public.

The aforesaid acts and practices are all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission on February 7, 1939, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Mathew W. M. Devitt, Roy D. Schlegel, and Robert E. Sargent, individuals, trading as Autogroom Co., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of a joint answer thereto by the respondents, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by attorneys for the Commission, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by the attorney for the respondents, before John W. Addison, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, the joint answer thereto, testimony, and other evidence, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint and oral argument; and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

1505

Findings

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, Mathew W. M. Devitt, Roy D. Schlegel, and Robert E. Sargent, are individuals, trading as Auto-groom Co., with their principal office and place of business located in the city of New York, State of New York, and with a place of business in the District of Columbia and a manufacturing plant located in Long Island City, Long Island, in the State of New York.

PAR. 2. The respondents since sometime in the year 1938 have been engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of a product for use in the cleaning and polishing of automobiles. Said product is sold under the trade name "Auto-Groom," and sales are made directly to operators of automobile garages and service stations and to distributors who buy the product from the respondents and resell to their own customers. In filling all of their orders respondents ship the cleaner and polish from their factory in the State of New York direct to the purchasers, many of whom are located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents maintain and have maintained a course of trade in their products in commerce among and between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business respondents are and have been in substantial competition with other individuals and with firms and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of similar merchandise in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. Among such competitors of respondents is the Karsmetik Co., Incorporated, a New York corporation, with its factory and principal place of business located in New York, N. Y. This corporation manufactures and sells under the trade name "Karsmetik" a cleaner and polish similar to the product sold by respondents. The company was incorporated in the year 1937, but it appears from the testimony of George H. Deters, president and general manager of said corporation, that the business was organized in 1934 and that the product "Karsmetik" has been manufactured and sold continuously since that time.

PAR. 5. All of the respondents, prior to the time they began the distribution of their product "Auto-Groom" were engaged in one way or another in the business of selling and distributing the product "Karsmetik." Respondent, Devitt purchased the product direct from the manufacturer and resold it to his own customers in the State of New York; respondent, Schlegel carried on business in a similar manner under the name K. & M. Products Corporation in the States of Maryland and Virginia and in the District of Columbia; while respondent, Sargent was employed directly by the "Karsmetik" manufacturer and worked in the factory, in the office, or solicited sales, as directed by Deters. The connection of each of the respondents with the Karsmetik Corporation, was severed in the latter part of 1937 or early part of 1938, however, and as above stated, it was about this time that the respondents began the manufacture and sale of the product "Auto-Groom."

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of their business, and the purpose of furthering the sale of their product, the respondents have solicited sales from various automobile garages, service stations, and other establishments and individuals whose businesses involve the use and resale of products such as respondents sell. These solicitations are made in part through personal visits by respondents, and among those they have called on have been many former purchasers of the product "Karsmetik" While the evidence is conflicting to some extent, there is substantial testimony to the effect and the Commission finds that respondents have made the following representations to these former purchasers of "Karsmetik": that the company formerly manufacturing "Karsmetik" was no longer in business and that said product was no longer being offered for sale; that the chemist who was formerly employed by the Karsmetik Corporation and who developed the formula for "Karsmetik" was in the employ of the respondents; and that "Auto-Groom" was the same product as "Karsmetik," differing only in trade-name and color. Numerous operators of garages and service stations testified that one or another of the respondents made these or substantially similar representations to them, and that they had purchased respondents' product in the belief that the manufacturer of "Karsmetik" was out of business, or at least that the product "Karsmetik" was no longer obtainable. This testimony was corroborated by the fact that in 1937 the volume of sales of the Karsmetik Corporation amounted to something over $15,000 and that in 1938 the volume dropped to approximately $8,000. In 1939 the sales of said corporation dropped still lower to $3,435.92.

PAR. 7. The evidence shows that the company manufacturing the product "Karsmetik" has not discontinued business. Said company has been and is now manufacturing its product and offering the same for sale and has been and is now in active competition with the respondents. The evidence shows further that the respondents do not have in their employ the chemist who developed the formula for "Karsmetik." Said formula in fact was not developed by any chemist connected with the Karsmetik Corporation, but was obtained by Deters, president of the corporation, from a collection of formula for cleaners and polishes distributed by a certain chemical manufacturer. While this formula and the formula for the respondents' product "Auto-Groom," are substantially similar, they are not in all respects the same.

The Commission, therefore, finds that the representations made by the respondents were false, misleading, and deceptive.

PAR. 8. The Commission further finds that the acts and practices of the respondents as herein described have the tendency and capacity to and do cause former purchasers of the product "Karsmetik" erroneously and mistakenly to believe that the aforesaid representations are true and that the manufacturer of said product is no longer engaged in business and said product is no longer obtainable under its regular trade name "Karsmetik"; that "Auto-Groom" is made of the formula for "Karsmetik" and under the supervision of the chemist who developed the formula for "Karsmetik," and that the product "Auto-Groom" is the same as the product "Karsmetik."

Because of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs so engendered many former purchasers of "Karsmetik," particularly those formerly making their purchases from one of the respondents while engaged in selling said product, and prospective purchasers, have discontinued purchasing or have declined to purchase said product, and have purchased respondents' product in lieu of and instead of "Karsmetik." As a consequence thereof, substantial trade has been diverted to the respondents from their said competitor.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents as herein found are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitor, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, and joint answer of respondents, the testimony and other evidence introduced before John W. Addison, a duly appointed trial examiner of the Commission theretofore designated to serve in this proceeding, the report of the trial examiner and exceptions thereto, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondents have violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That respondents, Mathew W. M. Devitt, Roy D. Schlegel, and Robert E. Sargent, individuals, trading as Autogroom Co., or trading or doing business under any other name or designation, their representatives, agents and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of a cleaner and polish for automobiles in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing that a competitor who manufactures and sells a cleaner and polish for automobiles known as "Karsmetik" has discontinued business.
2. Representing that the product known as "Karsmetik" is no longer being offered for sale or sold.
3. Representing that the chemist who developed the formula for the product known as "Karsmetik" is in the employ of respondents.
4. Representing that respondents' product "Auto-Groom" is in all respects the same as the product known as "Karsmetik."

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

JAMES J. REISS COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4502. Complaint, May 13, 1941—Decision, June 30, 1942

Where a corporation, engaged in the competitive interstate sale and distribution of candy, including certain assortments which were so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers, typical assortments consisting of a number of uniform small, individually wrapped pieces, together with a number of larger pieces or bars, secured without further charge by those purchasers of the small penny candies who obtained by chance a piece of different color from the majority; and of 150 uniform pieces of penny candy, together with some 18 to 35 larger candy bars, with a push card for use in sale thereof under a plan by which purchasers of the penny candy who punched from said card one of several numbers listed thereon received, in addition, his choice of one of the larger bars;

Sold such assortments to wholesalers, jobbers and retailers by whom, as direct or indirect purchasers, they were exposed and sold to the purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid plan, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its product, in competition with those who do not use any such plan or method;

With the result that many persons were attracted by its said sales plan because of element of chance involved, and purchased its candy in preference to that of its aforesaid competitors, whereby trade was unfairly diverted to it from them:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, were contrary to the public policy of the United States Government, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Before Mr. William C. Reeves, trial examiner.

Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr. for the Commission.

Henican, Carriere & Cleveland, of New Orleans, La., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that James J. Reiss Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission, that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, James J. Reiss Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Louisiana, with its principal office and place of business located at 417-423 Decatur Street, New Orleans, La. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retailers located at points in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said products, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the City of New Orleans, La., to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various States of the United States other than Louisiana, and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than 1 year last past, a course of trade by respondent in such products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is, and has been, in competition with other corporations, and with individuals and firms engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers certain assortments of said candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme when said candy is sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments is sold and distributed to the purchasing public in the following manner. This assortment consists of a number of small pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, and a number of larger pieces of candy or candy bars. The said larger pieces of candy are to be given as prizes to purchasers of certain of said small pieces of candy as follows; the majority of said small pieces of candy of uniform size and shape are of a certain color, but a small minority of said pieces of candy, of uniform size and shape and otherwise similar to the others, are of a different color. All of said pieces of candy retail at 1-cent each and are similarly wrapped so that the purchaser is unable to determine which color candy is secured by his purchase until the same has been unwrapped. Purchasers procuring one of said minority pieces of candy are entitled to and receive without additional charge one of the said larger pieces of candy as prizes. The said larger pieces of candy are thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

The respondent sells and distributes various assortments of candy involving lot or chance features when said assortments are sold to the consuming public, and such assortments and the methods of sale and distribution thereof, while varying as to detail, all involve lottery or chance features.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers who purchase respondent's candy, directly or indirectly, expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plans aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to, and places in the hands of, others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plans hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plans or methods in the sale of its products, and the sale of said products by and through the use thereof, and by the aid of said sales plans or methods is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sale of candy to the purchasing public by the methods or sales plans hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance, or the sale of a chance to procure candy without cost or at prices less than the retail regular prices of said candy. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute products in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance, or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method which is contrary to public policy, and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of its products and by the element of chance involved therein, and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's products in preference to products of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent because of said game of chance has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on the 13th day of May A. D. 1941, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, James J. Reiss Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair and deceptive acts and practices in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of the complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, a stipulation of facts was entered into on the record between attorneys for the Commission and for the respondent, which stipulation was approved by the Commission. The attorney for respondent waived filing of the trial examiner's report and oral argument.

Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the complaint, answer, stipulation, and briefs in support of, and in opposition to the complaint. And the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, James J. Reiss Co., Inc., is a corporation, organized under the laws of the State of Louisiana, with its principal place of business located in New Orleans, La.

PAR. 2. Respondent, since some time prior to the year 1935 has been, and now is, engaged in the sale and distribution of candy to wholesale dealers, jobbers and retailers, and causes its products, when sold, to be shipped from its principal place of business to purchasers thereof located in the States of Louisiana and Mississippi. For more than 7 months preceding the issuance of the complaint herein, respondent has maintained and now maintains a course of trade in its product in commerce between the States of Louisiana and Mississippi, and during all of said time has been, and now is, in competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of candy in commerce between the States of Louisiana and Mississippi.

PAR. 3. Respondent, in the sale and distribution of its candy, until about the year 1935, but not since that date, sold and distributed to purchasers in the State of Mississippi certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. One of said assortments consisted of a number of small pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, and a number of larger pieces of candy, or candy bars. The majority of the small pieces of candy were all of one certain color, but a small minority were of a different color. All the small pieces of candy were similarly wrapped, and were retailed at 1 cent each, and the purchaser was unable to determine the color of the candy until it was unwrapped. A purchaser procuring one of the minority pieces of candy was entitled to and did receive without additional charge, one of the larger pieces of candy as a prize. These larger pieces of candy were thus distributed to the purchasing public wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 4. Respondent, since some time prior to the issuance of the complaint herein, has sold and distributed to retail dealers in the State of Mississippi, an assortment of candy consisting of 150 small pieces of candy of uniform size and color, and from 18 to 35 larger pieces of candy or candy bars, together with a push card. This push card has 150 disks bearing upon their faces the word "Push." The small pieces of candy are sold for 1 cent each, which also entitles the purchaser to punch or push out one of the disks on the push card. If the number appearing on the disk, which is revealed only after the punch has been made, is the same as one of the several numbers listed on the heading of the card, the purchaser receives his choice of one of the larger pieces or bars of candy; said larger pieces or bars of candy are thus distributed to the purchasers wholly by lot or chance.

The retail dealers who purchase respondent's candy expose and sell same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plan herein mentioned. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its product, in accordance with the sales plan herein set forth.

PAR. 5. Many persons are attracted by respondent's sales plan because of the element of chance involved, and purchase respondent's candy in preference to that of its competitors who do not use such sales plan or any other sales method involving a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme, and, as a result, trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from such competitors.

PAR. 6. Respondent's total sales in the State of Mississippi during the year ending June 30, 1941, amounted to $6,352, or approximately 1½ percent of its total sales for that period. Of this amount only $28.30 was for the assortment described in paragraph 4 hereof, and $100. was for the sale in Mississippi of other punchboard assortments. The figures are approximately the same for each of the years mentioned herein.

Order

34 F. T. C.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors, are contrary to the public policy of the Government of the United States of America, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce, within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, the stipulation of facts entered into between attorneys for the Commission and for the respondent, and approved by the Commission, and briefs in support of and in opposition to the complaint: And the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, James J. Reiss Co., Inc., a corporation, its officers, directors, representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of candy or any other merchandise in commerce as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing candy or any other merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of such candy or other merchandise to the public are to be made, or may be made by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of others, push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery device, either with assortments of candy or other merchandise, or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards or other device, are to be used, or may be used in selling or distributing said candy or other merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days from the service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 4723. Complaint, Mar. 6, 1942—Decision, June 30, 1942

Where an individual, engaged in the competitive interstate sale and distribution of drug sundries, notions, novelties, and premium merchandise, including certain assortments which were so packed or assembled as to involve use of games of chance, gift enterprises, or lottery schemes when sold and distributed, a typical one including 12 pocket knives of equal value and a push card with 12 feminine names thereon for use in sale and distribution of said knives under a plan by which number concealed under particular name selected determined what amount, from 1 to 30 cents, purchaser should pay;

Sold such assortments to retailers and others, by whom they were exposed and sold to the purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid plan involving a game of chance to procure merchandise at much less than its normal retail price, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting a lottery, contrary to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who are unwilling to use a method contrary to public policy and refrain therefrom; With the result that many persons were attracted by her said sales plan because of the element of chance involved, and purchased her products in preference to those of said competitors, whereby trade was diverted unfairly to her from them, to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were all to the prejudice and injury of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices therein.

Mr. J. W. Brookfield, Jr. for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said act, the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Mrs. Ann B. Goldstein, individually, and trading as Champion Specialty Co., herein-after referred to as respondent, has violated the provisions of said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPHS 1. Respondent, Mrs. Ann B. Goldstein, is an individual, trading and doing business as Champion Specialty Co., with her office and principal place of business located at 814-16 Central Street, Kansas City, Mo. Respondent is now and for more than 1 year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution of drug sundries, notions, novelties, and premium merchandise to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from her said place of business in the State of Missouri to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of her business, respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals, firms, and corporations, engaged in the sale of like or similar articles of merchandise, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of her business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to retail dealers and others, certain assortments of merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme or game of chance when sold and distributed to the purchasers thereof. One of said assortments consists of 12 pocket knives of equal value and a device commonly known as a push card. The push card bears on its face 12 feminine names. Over each feminine name appears a small, partially perforated disk, on the face of which is printed the word "Push." Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The numbers which are concealed within each disk are between the limits of number 1 and number 39. A person selecting number 1 would pay 1 cent; and, a person selecting number 12 would pay 12 cents; and, a person selecting number 39 would pay 39 cents and so forth. Every person who pushes out one of the partially perforated disks receives one of the aforesaid pocket knives. The push card bears the following legend or instructions:

1¢ to 39¢

EVERYBODY WINS

PAY WHAT YOU PUNCH

FROM 1¢ TO 39¢—NO HIGHER

EVERY PUNCH WINS

Sales of the respondent's pocket knives by means of the said push card are made in accordance with the above-described legend or instructions. The fact as to whether a purchaser pays 1 cent or 39 cents or any intermediate amount of money for a pocket knife is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed various other assortments of merchandise involving a lot or chance feature but the sales plans or methods by which said merchandise is distributed are similar to the ones above described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers and others who purchase respondent's merchandise directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plans aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others a means of conducting a lottery in the sale of her products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of her merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

PAR. 4. The sales of merchandise to the purchasing public by the method or sales plan hereinabove set forth involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute products in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method which is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of her products and by the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's products in preference to products of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from her said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods.

PAR. 5. The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein alleged, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Federal Trade Commission, on March 6, 1942, issued and thereafter served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Mrs. Ann B. Goldstein, an individual, doing business as Champion Specialty Co., charging her with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of fact set forth in said complaint and waiving all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Mrs. Ann B. Goldstein, is an individual, trading and doing business as Champion Specialty Co., with her office and principal place of business located at 814-816 Central Street, Kansas City, Mo. Respondent, is now, and for more than 1 year last past, has been engaged in the sale and distribution of drug sundries, notions, novelties, and premium merchandise to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent causes and has caused said merchandise, when sold, to be transported from her said place of business in the State of Missouri to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in the various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of her business, respondent is and has been in competition with other individuals, firms, and corporations engaged in the sale of like or similar articles of merchandise in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of her business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to retail dealers and others, certain assortments of merchandise so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme or game of chance when sold and distributed to the purchasers thereof. One of said assortments consists of 12 pocket knives of equal value and a device commonly known as a push card. The push card bears on its face 12 feminine names. Over each feminine name appears a small, partially perforated disk, on the face of which is printed the word "Push." Concealed within each disk is a number which is disclosed when the disk is pushed or separated from the card. The numbers which are concealed within each disk are between the limits of number 1 and number 39. A person selecting number 1 would pay 1 cent; and, a person selecting number 12 would pay 12 cents; and, a person selecting number 39 would pay 39 cents, and so forth. Every person who pushes out one of the partially perforated disks receives one of the aforesaid pocket knives. The push card bears the following legend or instructions:

TRY YOUR LUCK
1c to 39c
EVERYBODY WINS
PAY WHAT YOU PUNCH
FROM 1c to 39c—NO HIGHER
EVERY PUNCH WINS

Sales of the respondent's pocket knives by means of the said push card are made in accordance with the above-described legend or instructions. The fact as to whether a purchaser pays 1 cent or 39 cents or any intermediate amount of money for a pocket knife is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

Respondent sells and distributes and has sold and distributed various other assortments of merchandise involving a lot or chance feature but the sales plans or methods by which said merchandise is distributed are similar to the one above described, varying only in detail.

PAR. 3. Retail dealers and others who purchase respondent's merchandise directly or indirectly expose and sell the same to the purchasing public in accordance with the sales plans aforesaid. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others a means of conducting a lottery in the sale of her products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. The use by respondent of said sales plan or method in the sale of her merchandise and the sale of said merchandise by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said sales plan or method is a practice of a sort which is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States.

Order

34 F. T. C.

PAR. 4. The sale of merchandise to the purchasing public by the method or sales plan hereinabove found involves a game of chance, the sale of a chance to procure merchandise at a price much less than the normal retail price thereof. Many persons, firms, and corporations who sell and distribute products in competition with respondent, as above found, are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method which is contrary to public policy and such competitors refrain therefrom. Many persons are attracted by said sales plans or methods employed by respondent in the sale and distribution of her products and by the element of chance involved therein and are thereby induced to buy and sell respondent's products in preference to products of said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent method. The use of said methods by respondent, because of said game of chance, has a tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia to respondent from her said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods. As a result thereof, injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, as herein found, are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of facts set forth in said complaint, and states that she waives all intervening procedure and further hearing as to said facts, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Mrs. Ann B. Goldstein, individually, and trading as Champion Specialty Co., or trading under any other name, her representatives, agents, and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of drug sundries, notions, novelties, premium merchandise, or any other merchandise in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Selling or distributing any merchandise so packed or assembled that sales of such merchandise to the public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, others push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices, either with assortments of merchandise or separately, which said push or pull cards, punchboards, or other lottery devices are to be used, or may be used in selling or distributing said merchandise to the public.

3. Selling or otherwise disposing of any merchandise by means of a game of chance, gift enterprise, or lottery scheme.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon her of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which she has complied with this order.

ORDERS OF DISMISSAL, OR CLOSING CASE, ETC.

FINE-CRAHAN CANDY Co. Complaint, October 12, 1939. Order, November 13, 1941. (Docket 3925.)

Charge: Using lottery scheme in merchandising; in connection with the sale of candy.
