Case Highlight: Southeastern Region

CRS works with educational institutions experiencing racial conflict and tensions by facilitating Know Your Rights forums and Student Problem Identification & Resolution of Issues Together (School-SPIRIT) programs.

Supporting the school district in Terry, MS following perceived racial discrimination at a school

- CRS’s services were requested by the Hinds County School District after a student-planned Black History Month celebration was cancelled and racial tension ensued
- CRS facilitated an educational forum for two student assemblies, allowing students to voice concerns, and school leaders to confirm belief in diversity and support for the students’ right to free expression
In the aftermath of violence, CRS works with law enforcement, city officials, clergy, and community members to facilitate open dialogues and encourage parties to find sustainable solutions to productive relationships moving forward.

Convening parties in Baton Rouge, LA to find sustainable solutions to racial tension

- Police and community relations are strained following violence in the community
- CRS facilitated dialogue among the police chief, his command staff, and the local U.S. Attorney; it resulted in the “Prayer Patrol:” a partnership between law enforcement and faith leaders to develop healthy and sustainable relationships between law enforcement and young men, ages 17 to 33, within the parish
Case Highlight: Central Region

CRS supports communities experiencing heightened fear following hate crimes through its various programs and services: Protecting Places of Worship, and Hate Crimes forums, trainings, dialogues, and consultations to educate, develop relationships, and improve communications and information sharing.

Building relationships, and developing capacity in Kansas City, MO to address safety concerns

- Following a hate crime, CRS facilitated dialogues, coordinated active shooter training, and facilitated a Protecting Places of Worship forum, and Engaging and Building Partnerships with Muslim and Sikh Americans programs
- CRS’s services helped the community build relationships, connect with government resources, improve information sharing, and develop greater capacity to address safety concerns
Case Highlight: Rocky Mountain Region

CRS supports communities, tribal communities, and educational institutions facing increased tensions following hate crimes or bias incidents based on national origin. CRS convenes parties and facilitates dialogue, and provides resources to build trust, increase communication, and diffuse tension.

Facilitating dialogue and providing resources in Sheridan, WY to address increasing tensions

- Community tensions increased after three incidents against Native American female college students were not investigated by campus law enforcement
- CRS facilitated dialogue between parties, worked with tribal leadership to make trauma counseling services available, convened a parental briefing, and provided hate crimes resources to guide future responses by campus law enforcement
