In its complaint, the FTC alleged that the company used the defendants in the National Landmark Logistics case (above) to place deceptive robocalls alleging that consumers owed debt and faced legal action if they did not reply. Once consumers called the defendants after receiving the message, the defendants would often falsely claim to be representing a law firm or threaten consumers with arrest if they did not immediately pay the debt. According to the complaint, the defendants would use consumers' personal information (provided by the National Landmark defendants) as a way to convince consumers that the debt was legitimate, among numerous other illegal tactics.	Restraining Orders issued. 9/14/2020: Stipulated preliminary injunction entered. Mark Anthony Smith and Deborah Ann Butler, d/b/a CMS Financial Group, John Lee Group & Associates, and TD Financial Solutions Group AZ CV2020-011728 Superior Court of Arizona in the County of Maricopa (Phoenix, Arizona)	Civil lawsuit, seeking restitution, civil penalties, attorneys' fees and costs, and injunctive relief, filed under the Arizona Consumer Fraud Act and alleging that the debt collectors call consumers nationwide from Phoenix, Arizona using false claims and threats to induce consumers to pay debts, including debts that the defendants have no authority to collect. The Defendants allegedly impersonate law enforcement officers and process servers during calls to consumers and claim that they are attempting to serve a summons and complaint. In voicemails left for consumers, defendants represent that consumers must immediately respond or be subject to court action. Defendants allegedly frequently use call spoofing software for their collection calls, which makes it appear as though calls originated from court houses, sheriffs' offices, jails, or other public offices. When consumers return defendants' voicemails, defendants are alleged to falsely represent that they are lawyers or associated with lawyers or a law firm and make false or misleading statements, including that a civil or criminal action is imminent and would result in adverse consequences unless consumers promptly pay or otherwise cooperate with Defendants' collection efforts. Defendants' alleged false threats include: that defendants will garnish wages and tax returns; place liens on house and car titles; freeze bank accounts; file to have consumers' drivers licenses suspended; send out law enforcement to consumers' houses, their relatives' houses, and/or place of employment; and have consumers arrested.	Date of action: 9/23/2020: Complaint filed.	Arizona Attorney General's Office	Katie Conner 602-542-8019 Katie.Conner@azag.gov

Engle’s companies are registered in Texas; he failed to file the appropriate registrations with the North Carolina Secretary of State to operate in North Carolina and also failed to obtain the necessary permits from the North Carolina Department of Insurance to operate as a collection agency. Engle’s companies sent consumers collection notices telling them they had committed a criminal violation by failing to return rented property. The notices appeared to be, but were not, official court notices. Some of the letters even included unsigned criminal summonses that appeared to be real, but did not have any legal effect, and were delivered by Engle’s hired private police officers. In addition to sending these unsigned summonses, Engle and his companies also filed hundreds of criminal complaints with misleading language in several North Carolina counties that resulted in actual criminal summonses being issued against customers.	7/24/2019: Preliminary injunction entered (still in effect). Status of action: Pending – case currently stayed due to Gordon Scott Engle’s criminal cases for felony debt collecting without a license.
