2/14/2022	FOIA-2022-00610	(b)(6)	Other	Hello, I am correcting a request that went out ~ to the wrong email and phone number due to auto fill. This request is in regard to love/romance scammer activity or any other activity, impersonations and the like on Facebook and Google and Instagram. I myself have reported many imposters, swindlers, and attempted romance scammers. Everyone knows all of these companies track each user, their location, and each message sent. I am looking for the information they have when something like this is reported to them. It seems that these profiles are allowed to stay online and sketchy individuals are allowed to use their platforms to continuously scam and cheat others. I am asking for the information regarding their use, how many reports they get, And why even after multiple requests from other users they allow these scammers to remain active? Everyone knows they keep all of the records meticulously and knows where everyone is on the planet. They seem to punish other users having different opinions, but nonetheless the impersonators and scammers are still allowed to use their platforms to conduct their business with no issue. I am looking for the records which I'm sure they have, regarding reports of fakes, scammers, stolen pictures, and whatever else there may be. For the year of 2021, 2020, and 2019.	-

3/4/2022	FOIA-2022-00639	Choi, Woohyun	Educational/Non-Scientific	I am an Assistant Professor at the Rutgers Business School, conducting research on the impact of fraud - in particular, fake ad impressions generated by bots - on the online advertising ecosystem. The research aims to advance our understanding of advertising fraud and to provide policy guidance for regulating the online ad space. I am interested in obtaining the following information: - Date/time/price information of fake ad transactions generated by bots in US websites - Identity of the ad exchanges through which the transactions occurred - The identity of the buyers of fake impressions. The industry the buyers associated with (e.g., tech, retail, finance) Thank you for your consideration, and please do not hesitate to contact me for questions. Regards, Woohyun	Rutgers Business School
